535 members of the Commission were members and that is where they made the recommendation. But how confused and confusing that you want the Commission to follow the public's view on this subject, and yet on the other subject, where the Members opposite represented in the GSD take a contrary view, the public said this, which is the issue of backbenchers. On page 13 of the Commission Report the last sentence:

The majority of the responders are also opposed to any increase in the size of the Parliament, as the electorate is well served by 17 elected Members and the additional expenditure is unwarranted.

540 So they want you, Mr Speaker, to follow the view of the public when it accords to them and they say that they really cannot understand why you do not take the view; and yet, when you do

545 follow the views of the public, which is to say the public do not want backbenchers and the Commission reports that there should not be backbenchers, there they want you to go against the views of the public. Confused and confusing, Mr Speaker. Sorry that that might sound like the sixth form, but I think the whole community is going to be in the sixth form trying to work out what it is that the hon. Members want. They position themselves with the public when they think it suits them, and they position themselves against the public when they think it suits them. Confused and confusing, Mr Speaker. Confused and confusing.

550 Anyway, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman, Mr Feetham, when he gets up as the current Leader of the Opposition, says that I said that you represented, with Mr Mascarenhas and with Mr Vinet, 40 years of experience. Well, Mr Speaker, I think actually he misquotes me even in that respect, and the arithmetic I think I referred to was 44. The experience represented by members of the Commission who had been parliamentarians was 44 years. In fact, that is the experience contained in – no ordinary Joe – Joe Bossano, who has had, himself, 44 years, on his own, of experience of this Parliament. Of course, Mr Speaker, as I often tell the House, I can never forget that, because he got in in 1972 and I got out in 1972. Namely, I got out – I was born – in 1972, (Laughter) so I always remember how many years he has been here. (Interjection) Listen, I cannot refer to what I got out of, Mr Speaker, because it would be unparliamentary, I suppose, but it is really, frankly, important for the House to reflect on the fact that a Member with 20 years' experience yourself, a Member with 16 years' experience, Mr Mascarenhas, both of them Members at the time that the House had a Public Accounts Committee and had nothing to hide, and Mr Vinet who was a Member of this House for eight years, and Mr Bossano who is a Member of the House for 44 years and counting – (Hon. J J Bossano: Absolutely.) por muchos años, Mr Speaker, as they say in El Calpe, where I am from – all are against the establishment of a Public Accounts Committee, (Hon. J J Bossano: Yes.) and the hon. Member brings us what he says is a quote from Mr Dellipiani about what Mr Dellipiani says the Hon. Sir Joshua Hassan, who is no longer with us, said. Well, Mr Speaker, I know he is an accountant and he is not a lawyer, but that statement offends the rule against double hearsay. So, if he does not mind, I am going to rely on the statements put in black upon white by the Independent Commission and the advice of Joe Bossano.

575 Mr Speaker, then Mr Feetham says that the Select Committee was established to report to the Parliament and it has not yet reported to the Parliament, and that the Commission had reported to the Parliament and all the rest of it, and that we had debated in the Parliament. Well, look, when the Commission reported to the Parliament, the Commission did not envisage that we were going to set up a Select Committee to consider its report. It cannot have, because nobody envisaged it, and in fact it was in the ante-Chamber that the greatest Gibraltarian of his, of all time approached me and suggested that we should have a Select Committee. We considered it, and, in that moment of conviviality, decided to do it, and we could have just dealt with the reports to Parliament in Parliament, we could have just dealt with it then, and then there would be no need for a Select Committee to meet. Of course, Mr Speaker, it is difficult for a Select Committee to meet, because we need to find time for it, etc. Well, it will meet, Mr Speaker, because we have now determined to go down that road, but I remind the hon. Gentleman that on occasion it was not possible to meet because of his diary commitments, and we went ahead without him on one occasion. On one occasion we went ahead without him, but on other occasions we were unable to meet because of his diary commitments.

585 The hon. Gentleman says, of course ... as you would expect them to, because another confused and confusing aspect of what Members opposite, except the hon. Lady, do is that they say, 'We don't want to talk about history; we just want to look forward. Why are you looking at history?' But then they refer us to history when it suits them, and so the hon. Gentleman's reference to history is to say that the GSD has always been in favour of a Public Accounts Committee. Well, an ex-Member of the GSD in this Parliament, Mr Vinet, is no longer in favour. He might have been in favour before, but that was before he heard all the evidence and considered it in Commission. And a current Member of the GSD executive was against – in fact, I

595 think it may be the Chairman of the GSD Mr Vasquez may be the Chairman of the GSD, as I understand it, and a candidate at the election – he was against a Public Accounts Committee when the recommendation was made. The hon. Gentleman says that is no volte-face. Mr 600 Speaker, I am not going to talk about people who are not here to defend themselves; I am just expressing the position that they expressed. Whether it is a volte-face or not is another matter. I am not going to express a view in respect of people who are not here to defend themselves or to put their view. Nobody needs to defend themselves. But hon. Members were in Government between 1996 and 2011. Mr Speaker, there was a lot of whipping then – I still have the scars on my back! (Laughter) There could have been parliamentary reform in a moment in the way things were done then. There was no collegiate conviviality in this Parliament and Select Committees established; there was then the rule of the rod from St Peter's chair. (Laughter)

605 Mr Speaker, where is the Select Committee that we were able to attend meetings of between 1996 and 2011? Where is that fulsome and constant support? Or is it that we are to judge the absence of a Select Committee between 1996 and 2011 as something to hide? Or is it that hon.
Members apply a measure to themselves and a measure to others? So, if there is not a volteface, there must at least have been a difference of opinion – which I suppose is the posher way 610 of explaining it, Mr Speaker – because when they were in Government they did one thing, and the minute they are out of Government they start recommending another.

And then we had this attempt to turn the debate to this question of the curtain of secrecy and the debate of debt. Mr Speaker, on that issue you rightly say this is not what this motion is about, but hon. Members are from Mars and we are from Venus. As far as we are concerned, 615 Gibraltar's public finances are stronger than ever. We have already explained our position on the debt. Hon. Members just want to pretend to the public that we are not being transparent. They are going to find it very difficult, Mr Speaker, because what we are saying is we will continue to give you everything you have always had, we will continue to give you everything you gave when you were in Government. What we will not give you – because we cannot be sure of the 620 accuracy, and then if we give it and it is not accurate you are then going to come back at us – is the management accounts on a day-to-day basis more accelerated than ever before. That is what is not going to happen. This is not an attempt at secrecy; this is an attempt at accuracy and at then transmitting information further than just in this Parliament, to the whole community. I know that the hon. Members think that they should be privileged to have information here, laid 625 in this House just for them. Even things which are public, they want us to go and fetch them for them and bring them and put them at their feet here. Look, it is not going to happen, Mr Speaker. We believe in openness and transparency to the whole community. That is why we are going to give more information than they gave on debt, net debt and gross debt, but we are going to give it online.

Mr Speaker: May I also ask the Chief Minister to limit himself now on the question of public debt.

635 Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely, Mr Speaker. I will not argue with you, as the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition does every time that you rule against him.

And so, Mr Speaker, that issue which I have no doubt we will be able to debate in respect of some of the other motions that are on the Order Paper, or when the time comes, is irrelevant to this, but of course it is an attempt to hijack this debate for that purpose – which you, if I may say so, with respect, Mr Speaker, rightly spotted and brought us both back onto the straight and 640 narrow.

But, Mr Speaker, the one thing the hon. Gentleman did say, which I have to reply to him on, is that he said, 'Of course, the recommendation of the Commission was before Credit Finance;
now we need this because Credit Finance has been set up.' Well, look, Mr Speaker, Credit Finance has been set up. It has got nothing to do with the public accounts of Gibraltar; it has got 645 to do with the Savings Bank. This is even more off tangent than the hon. Gentleman was going before, but he just wants to make it all about that, despite having suffered a crushing electoral defeat, having staked all his eggs in that basket before. Credit Finance would not come within the purview of a Public Accounts Committee; it is a subsidiary of the Savings Bank.

650 Hon. D A Feetham: No, it's not.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, it is not a company (Interjection) that would come within the purview of the Public Accounts Committee, which is their complaint. It is their complaint, so how can they pretend to fix the malaise that they say is there with something that is aimed in a completely different direction? It does not make absolutely any sense. But they, Members opposite, say that all of that attempt to row contrary to the conclusions of the Commission on Parliamentary and Democratic Reform, is not to disrespect its findings. Well, Mr Speaker, to recommend the complete opposite of what the Commission has proposed but to try and side with some members of the public – we do not know how many – on that, and to also try and go completely contrary to the view expressed by the Commission, absent the minority report on the other issue, despite the public being on the same side as the Commission, is to do a volte-face on where the Commission should be, whether it should just be with the public or not, is to disrespect the Commission, and is, frankly, Mr Speaker, an attempt to just bring to this Parliament issues to try and raise the spectre of a lack of transparency in respect of a Government which is more transparent than any Government in history has ever been – because technology avails us of opportunities to do so – that puts more information of the sort that would be before the Public Accounts Committee online every day – for example, travel expenses and any other expense, where before hundreds of questions had to be asked orally in this House to get that information and which information is now there for every member of the public to see, not just Members opposite.

For all of those reasons, Mr Speaker, I commend the motion to the House as it stands on the Order Paper and I do not mind telling the hon. Gentleman that of course that means that we will not be supporting the motion which he brings later. And I suggest to him that he should consider that this is the debate that we would have had in respect of that motion and that he may wish simply to save parliamentary time and proceed now to seek to garner sufficient votes. Now that the debate is over, we will see how people vote, and if he sees that he has not managed to persuade any of the Members on this side of the House, who will vote their consciences freely on the subject that he has referred to in the context of this debate and on the subject of this motion, he may want to abandon his motion when it comes later on, because we are just going to be arguing exactly the same thing over and over again and reaching the same conclusion.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question in the terms of the motion proposed by the Hon. the Chief Minister, and the Clerk will now call a division as requested.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion 695 standing in my name, which reads as follows:

This House regrets that the outcome of the Referendum on 23rd June 2016, on whether the United Kingdom and Gibraltar should remain in the European Union or should leave, resulted in an overall decision to leave; notes the statement made by the United Kingdom Government that Gibraltar will be fully involved in the formulation of the United Kingdom's policy in relation to a potential withdrawal from the European Union, known as a 'Brexit'; welcomes the declared intention of the Government and Opposition to co-operate in determining both the impact on Gibraltar of a potential withdrawal from the European Union and Gibraltar's future relationship with the European Union; considers that the formal structure to take this co-operation forward should be a select committee of the House, which will be known as the Select Committee on the European Union; believes that the composition of the Select Committee should reflect the composition of the House; and hereby resolves the establishment of a select committee to report to the House on these matters, consisting of four Members nominated by the Chief Minister and two Members nominated by the Leader of the Opposition and the Independent Member of Parliament.

Mr Speaker, it is now over a hundred days since the morning of 24th June when Gibraltar and the rest of the United Kingdom, Europe and the world heard the result of the view of the British people that the United Kingdom should leave the European Union. In that time, hon. Members will know that the Government has been engaged in a lot of work of lobbying and in a lot of 700 work of preparing the Gibraltar public sector and private sector for the purposes of providing all of the information necessary to the United Kingdom in the context of the negotiation that will take place when Article 50 of the Lisbon Agreement or Treaty is triggered. The Prime Minister, hon. Members will know, has indicated in a speech to her party, not to the Parliament, that it is her intention to trigger Article 50 by the end of March at the latest.

705 Mr Speaker, it is also true that in the United Kingdom Parliament a similar mechanism for the understanding by Parliament of the work being done by the executive on Brexit is to be adopted and a select committee is to be established to deal with Brexit issues. I am delighted to say that I shared a platform with Hilary Benn of the Labour Party, who is seeking to be appointed – as he confirmed at that New Statesman fringe event around the Labour Party Conference events in 710 Liverpool some weeks ago – he is seeking to be appointed the chairman of that select committee. It is not clear yet, Mr Speaker, which of the parties will have the chairmanship of the committee, but Mr Benn is seeking it should be Labour and that it should be him. It is also true that similar committees have been set up in other parliaments, including the Scottish Parliament, as the mechanism for co-operation between the parliamentarians represented there and with the executive. The Scottish Parliament's Brexit Committee, I understand, has already 715 been set up; the Westminster Parliament Brexit Committee is to be set up.

Mr Speaker, in the moments after the Referendum result I had an opportunity of meeting with the Leader of the Opposition. On one occasion when I was briefing him on the meetings we had had in the United Kingdom he, in fact, in writing, had proposed a select committee, which I

720 reflected to him in the context of our discussion was actually the position that had been proposed to me already by the Deputy Chief Minister and was therefore agreeable to the Government. This is a motion that, as a result, I put before the Parliament some time ago. This is the first opportunity for taking motions, and therefore, Mr Speaker, I look forward to having the full support of the House for the establishment of this committee, which will, I hope, give us the 725 opportunity of working together at a parliamentary level and reflecting there the work that we as a Government and as an executive will have done and will be dealing with now going forward in respect of Brexit.

Mr Speaker, there has been an exchange of press releases on the subject of Brexit in the past few days. I would rather leave those issues outside of this debate, because what we are doing 730 here is establishing a committee for the purposes of being able to work together. If there have been disagreements in that respect, I think it is important that we start this work and we start to do it together in the context of the select committee, and perhaps in the select committee the hon. Members may wish to put some of their concerns about how the committee should work.
But we have to be clear that Gibraltar does not have and does not need a Government of 735 national unity. Therefore, the Government is governing, the Government continues to control the executive, and will continue therefore to lead on the Brexit strategy, although it wishes to be able to work with the Opposition in the context of the select committee.

The Government will take the blame for anything that goes wrong as a result of the Brexit negotiations that we lead and we will shoulder the responsibility of where that leads Gibraltar 740 to, because we are in Government. Similarly, Mr Speaker, we will take the credit of anything that we do in the context of that process which takes Gibraltar to a better place. Mr Speaker, let us be clear. That is not to say that we are confident that Gibraltar is going to do extraordinarily well out of Brexit. Brexit is going to present a lot of challenges for a lot of areas of this community.
We have to do our best to achieve the best for each of those sectors, as will be the case for the 745 United Kingdom and its many industrial sectors, and the case for most Member States of the European Union that have a relationship with the United Kingdom.

If I may say so, Mr Speaker, I think the best way to paraphrase what the Prime Minister has been saying in the context of her party's annual conference in Birmingham, which I was privileged to attend to represent the Government last Sunday and had massive support from 750 Members of the Conservative Party, as we had in the Labour Party, in the Liberal Party, and no doubt will have also at the SNP, where the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister will lead a delegation next week ... What she has been saying there in respect of Brexit, and what she has been saying there in respect of her party's policies for the country, I think can be synthesised into a phrase that should represent both those aspects of the Prime Minister's policies and which should 755 reflect our policies going forward and those of all the devolved parliaments and the Crown Dependencies, namely that we need to find a Brexit that works for everybody. Mr Speaker, that is the work which on which we are engaged and will continue to be engaged. It is true to say that it is taking a lot of Government time and, as a result, the Deputy Chief Minister and I have been unable to give the full attention that we might have wished to give to other areas of 760 Government, but we expect to be able to continue to turn our attention to those. The hon.
Gentlemen will be disappointed to know that we expect to be able to comply entirely with all our manifesto commitments and deal with Brexit.

Mr Speaker, the one thing that I think is important is that I explain why the composition would be four, two and one. In the context of select committees the Government will have 765 always an inbuilt majority, and, in order to ensure that the committee stays nimble and small enough, the only way that we would be able to have an inbuilt majority if it were bigger would be to have five Members of the Government, three Members of the Opposition, and the hon.
Lady, because we think the hon. Lady, as an independent parliamentarian, should be represented in the select committee. That would mean that the Parliament would be meeting 770 with almost half its Members in select committee – there would be eight of us – so, in order to keep it nimble and try and reflect the numbers opposite, the only way we can do it is to do three and therefore four on our side, if the hon. Lady is going to be one on the other side. Of course, the other way to do it is to keep it three on our side, the hon. Lady, and just one of the Members representing the party opposite. We thought that would be less representative, so that is why we are proposing four, two and one, to keep it nimble in that way.

Mr Speaker, I would propose that this select committee should meet with regularity in order to ensure that we are able to give Members opposite the sort of information and to have the exchanges that we think we should have, and we think it should meet in camera. In other words, we do not think it should be a select committee that should meet in public, although it should be a select committee that should be able to make public such information as the committee considers appropriate.

780

Mr Speaker, I think that with those remarks I have dealt with also a communication which we received from the Deputy Leader of the GSD, Mr Hammond, in respect of this committee and I hope that that will enable Members opposite to better understand how we propose that the committee should work.

785

As I say, Mr Speaker, I could simply now deal with all of the remarks that have been contained in the press releases from Members opposite which have been the subject of exchanges between the Government and the Opposition, but I call on Members opposite to leave the public exchanges outside of the consideration of the establishment of this important committee of this House, where we will be able to co-operate and work together as a Parliament to deal with the parliamentary aspects of what Brexit may mean for our community. I encourage them to do that and to work with us on the subject and not to allow this debate to simply descend into an exchange of – to use the words that the hon. Lady of the Opposition used a few moments ago – press release barbs, and I invite the hon. Gentlemen to support the motion establishing the Select Committee. So that we can meet in the composition that I have proposed as soon as possible during the course of this month and then continue to have regular monthly meetings and such other meetings as we may consider may be appropriate, and even to invite members of the public to provide information to the committee in the context of such consultation as the committee may agree at its first meeting we should do.

800

I also invite the hon. Lady to support the establishment of the committee for the purpose that I proposed. I think I detected in her earlier speech in respect of the other committee proposed, that she thought there should be more committees, so this is an opportunity to see that part of her stated wish come true, because I think without the need for flagellation all 10 Members on this side are likely to be supporting this motion.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in terms of the motion moved by the Hon. the Chief Minister. Does any hon. Member wish to contribute to the motion? The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, it is indeed over a hundred days since the Referendum that saw the United Kingdom propose to leave the European Union and it is regrettable that this motion is only now being heard, because I believe there has been ample opportunity and sufficient meetings of Parliament to have suspended orders and have heard this motion.

The trigger of Article 50, as the Chief Minister has said, will occur, according to the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, next March, which means we have already lost a third of the time that would have been available to us to deal with these matters, and I think that is regrettable. We nevertheless do welcome that this motion has now been tabled, and it is the intention of those in this House representing Her Majesty's Opposition, to do all that we can to work with Government to assist Government in navigating the challenges ahead brought about by the decision made by the people of the United Kingdom to leave the European Union.

We fully recognise how significant – indeed existential, as the Chief Minister has put it – this process will be for the economy of this community as it presently exists and we stand willing to play a part, whatever part we are permitted to play by Government.

825 There are elements within this motion that we fully endorse. We share Government's regret that the outcome of the referendum on whether the United Kingdom and Gibraltar should remain in the European Union or should leave resulted in an overall decision to leave. We welcome that the United Kingdom government has stated that Gibraltar will be fully involved in the formulation of the United Kingdom's policy in relation to a potential withdrawal from Europe, a policy which seems increasingly inevitable.

830 Of course, a note of caution here is necessary, as 'fully involved' does not mean that Gibraltar will be influential in the outcome of that policy, and indeed could be interpreted in many ways. Just as Her Majesty's Opposition here in Gibraltar, through the formation of this select committee, might be considered to be 'fully involved' in determining both the impact of a withdrawal by Gibraltar from the European Union and our future relationship with the European Union, as stated in this motion, our actual influence, when the composition of the committee is considered, will be negligible. We might be 'fully involved', but it does not mean that we can necessarily influence the outcome of any decisions taken by the committee or effect Government policy in this regard should Government choose to follow its own path, in the same way that Gibraltar will not be able to influence the United Kingdom Government should it choose to follow its own path, despite being 'fully involved' in the process. Let us maintain a sense of reality and not hang our hats on such phrases.

840 The motion fails to set out terms of reference for the select committee in anything but the vaguest terms. It sets out that the Select Committee is to report to this House on matters involving both the impact of a withdrawal by Gibraltar from the European Union and our future relationship with the European Union. Implicit in this wording is that the select committee will play a passive role, reporting on events rather than being actively involved in those events. Time will tell how effective and influential the role of this select committee will be, or is allowed to be by Government.

850 The length of time that it has taken to bring this matter to the House is a disappointment, as I said earlier. The matter is one of some urgency, even considering that the declaration of Article 50 by the United Kingdom has not yet been made, though will be made next March, according the Prime Minister, and, of course, as I said earlier, it means we have effectively lost one third of the time that would have been available to us in order to deal with this issue. The urgency is clear from the fact that Government, and in particular the Chief Minister, has rightly been working to develop the strategy to try and navigate the inevitable challenges that will be faced. Some of this work has been public and we have become aware of it through local and international press announcements. That this Select Committee has not been established with the same degree of urgency reaffirms the view that Government does not intend to be steered by the committee but to report to the committee. It is yet to be seen how such reporting will function, but those on the committee, including Members of the Opposition, will certainly not be providing direction to Government. Had that been the purpose, this committee would surely have been established some months ago and in time to do so.

860 The Chief Minister has, to some extent, explained further the functioning of the committee and certainly the fact that it will meet in camera, but I do welcome the fact that those meetings, despite being in camera ... information that is made available will be subsequently made available to the public, as I understand it.

870 Ultimately, the absence of clear terms of reference within the motion and the potential lack of influence that the select committee will have, and certainly that Members of Her Majesty's Opposition will have, over determining policy in this area does not and will not deter us from doing our duty, as we see it, to the people of Gibraltar. Despite being invited to participate in a process about which we have been told relatively little – rather like being invited to play a game but not being told what the rules are, or even indeed what game is being played – we will be voting in favour of this motion. We will continue to strive to work with Government through this select committee as the mechanism chosen by this House to permit that co-operation and demonstrate to the governments of both the United Kingdom and the Kingdom of Spain that

875 when Gibraltar is presented with an existential threat there is no question of division either among its political classes or its people.

Mr Speaker: Any other hon. Member? The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

880 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, very briefly. As my hon. Friend, Mr Hammond, has just said, the Opposition certainly welcomes the creation of the select committee. The select committee was suggested by the Opposition in a letter that I wrote to the Chief Minister several months ago. It would have been our preference for the select committee to have been the vehicle 885 whereby the Government and the Opposition make joint decisions and develop a joint strategy in relation to how we deal with the question of Brexit. That is what my friend, Mr Hammond, means when he talks about terms of reference.

Our understanding of the situation ... and I am not criticising the hon. Gentleman for it, because at the end of the day he is quite right, the Government governs, the Opposition opposes, and he is perfectly entitled to come to this House to seek the creation of a select 890 committee whereby the select committee would be the vehicle whereby the Government effectively keeps the Select Committee and Members on this side of the House informed of decisions that the Government has already taken. It is up to the Government, and I certainly do not criticise it. Our preference, of course, would have been for the Select Committee to have been that vehicle for the Government and the Opposition to be working towards that joint 895 strategy and that joint response. That does not appear to be what the Government is going to be using the select committee for, and I think that it is important, Mr Speaker, in the absence of those terms of reference, that that ought to be emphasised in this House, so that we are all clear exactly what it is that this select committee is being used for.

Mr Speaker, certainly the Opposition is not going to be found wanting. Every time that the 900 Government comes to the Opposition and seeks the Opposition's assistance, or the Opposition's advice, or the Opposition's counsel in relation to any initiative that the Government is bringing to bear in relation to Brexit we will be providing that counsel and that advice – in confidence, obviously, because that is the way that the select committee is going to be operating, in camera – to the Government in good faith always if we can support any initiative, and indeed we will 905 attempt to bend over backwards to support initiatives from the Government.

Obviously, we hope that it will never become necessary for us to take a strong different view to the Government. At the end of the day, that cannot be ruled out, because that is how politics operate, and to use the Chief Minister's phrase again and quote him, governments govern and the oppositions oppose, but everything that we do we will do in good faith, and certainly the 910 community will not find the Opposition wanting in its participation in relation to the select committee, to whatever degree the Chief Minister wants us to participate. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Does the Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon wish to contribute to the debate? I call on her.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I think, with respect, the Hon. Member, Mr Trevor Hammond and the Leader of the Opposition have at times shown some level of pettiness towards their perception of the committee and the management of Government in handling the issue of Brexit. The fact is that the Government has done well to set up a committee at this 920 delicate time, while working right now on all we have, which is speculation. I do accept and respect that in the last few months and over the sleepy summer break the Chief Minister has had bigger fish to fry, and on this one I have to say to the GSD Opposition and the House in general that Brexit is too important to make this a partisan battleground in the press or beyond.
This issue is just way too precious and delicate. We have to do Brexit together, so I welcome the 925 select committee and I am grateful for my inclusion.

Thank you.

Mr Speaker: Any other Member wishing to debate? I will, then, call upon the Chief Minister to reply.

930 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I intend to try and deal with the issues that have been raised in a way that is as constructive as possible, but I must say that I do not think that we are dealing with the establishment of this select committee late in the day and having lost a third of the time available, because the time available is not the time between now and the triggering of Article 50 – which may or may not be by the end of March, it may be earlier, it could have been 935 already. Hon. Members know that the position of the former Prime Minister, Mr Cameron, was that Article 50 would have to be triggered immediately after a result. He took the view that he should resign the morning after the result because he could not steer the United Kingdom through a Brexit with which he did not agree, and therefore that did not happen. The position of some members of the Conservative Party continues to believe that the Article 50 notice should 940 be given as soon as possible and the Prime Minister has now given an indication, not in Parliament but in a party context, of when she thinks it is likely that Article 50 would be triggered.

All that happens under Article 50 is that a letter is sent from the United Kingdom to the President of the Council and the President of the Commission, indicating that trigger is pressed 945 and it will contain the issues for negotiation. But of course it will not be exhaustive, and so can I just please persuade hon. Members to view the process as one that is going to continue. This is not a select committee that will have to do its work by 31st March or earlier, by the time that the Article 50 letter goes. This work will endure and it will endure likely even beyond the two-year initial period if the negotiation is extended beyond that, or potentially even further whilst Brexit continues. And I dare say, Mr Speaker, it is very likely that whoever is entrusted with the administration of Gibraltar's affairs after the next election and whoever sits where I sit today as Leader of the House – and I sincerely hope it will be me and the colleagues that I have around me today and the parties that we represent, but that is a matter for the electorate – will have to reconstitute the select committee for the lifetime of the next Parliament, because Brexit is 950 something that is going to have consequences over a considerable period of time, not just between now and April.

So can I please disabuse hon. Members of the idea that this is a race to the Article 50 letter. The Article 50 letter is almost the beginning of the action, not the end of it. Can I also remind hon. Members that the Parliament that will trigger the Article 50 notice, or which is the 960 Parliament of which the executive of which will trigger the Article 50 notice, has not yet had its select committee on Brexit established, so I do not think we are doing so badly.

The Hon. Mr Hammond said something in the course of his intervention which I think I should correct in parliamentary terms. He said, 'speaking for those who represent Her Majesty's Opposition'. I think, with respect, that is an incorrect way of phrasing his position in this 965 Parliament and the position of all those who sit on the GSD benches, if I can call them that. All Members opposite are Her Majesty's Opposition. There may be an official Opposition and there may be others who are not an official Opposition, but the hon. Lady insists on sitting over there instead of over here and therefore is, as far as the Government is concerned, a Member of the Opposition. And so hon. Members who speak not for her speak for the official Opposition, but it is not as if they are the only Opposition. I think it is important to keep that in mind.

I have said that Brexit represents an existential threat to the current economic model of Gibraltar, and it is important that we always insist on that, that this is an existential threat to the current economic model and not an existential threat to Gibraltar. I took great issue and great umbrage with one headline writer who took that and turned it into a headline: 'Brexit will 975 destroy Gibraltar'. As I have said before and I will say again, nothing will destroy Gibraltar. It may be that we have to reposition parts of our economy – of course we will. So will the United Kingdom and so will large parts of the European Union where some industries depend on the United Kingdom.

980 Let me give hon. Members one example. This year, Spain has published statistics which show it has had a record year in the number of tourists reaching Spain. The largest numbers of tourists have come from the United Kingdom; the second largest number of tourists from Germany. Of course, German and English or UK citizens have the right of free movement today into Spain and are therefore able to holiday there without the need for visas, etc. So, to take a terminology 985 which is falling into disrepute even as we speak, but a 'hard Brexit' – because we all think we know what that means; a Brexit without any of the fundamental freedoms attached to it continuing, so a Brexit where there is no freedom of movement between the United Kingdom and the rest of Europe, also Spain – is an existential threat therefore also to the Spanish tourist industry, and the Spanish tourist industry is credited also as being the industry that has pulled Spain out of recession. That does not mean that Brexit is an existential threat to Spain, but we 990 need to understand that a lot of the cogs in the economy of the European Union and the United Kingdom depend on the exercise of the four freedoms that make up the European Union and that those industries therefore now place potential difficulties and existential threats.

Because the United Kingdom government recognises how relevant all of those areas are to Gibraltar – in particular, of course, access to the single European market in financial services and 995 freedom of movement – we are being fully involved in the process of the United Kingdom making decisions about how it represents the case for itself and for Gibraltar in the context of the negotiation. I do not want to comment on things that have been said outside here, but telling Scotland that it will not be able to have a veto on Brexit is not to say that Scotland is not going to be fully involved in helping to shape what Brexit might look like in relation to Scotland.
1000 Telling Scotland that it is not going to be able to stay in the European Union in the context of what is also a negotiation between the United Kingdom represented by Mrs May and the Scottish First Minister of the Scottish National Party – it is not as if Mrs Sturgeon hides what she represents – is also a part of the internal politics of the United Kingdom. But Members opposite should also, in the same way as they advise us not to hang our hat on those words, realise that 1005 in politics it is words that are important, and those words which have been extended to Gibraltar in the context of how we will influence how the United Kingdom begins its negotiations are not just words. They are, as hon. Members will have seen from some of the things we have said publicly and as they will know from some of the things we have told them not publicly, actually the way in which we are being treated. We are being fully involved in the context of shaping the 1010 negotiation as we go forward, but that is not to say when Mrs May sits at the table with the other 26 members of the European Union, who are represented by the heads of state, that for the United Kingdom there will be Mrs May, Mr Carwyn Jones, Ms Arlene Phillips, Mr Fabian Picardo for Gibraltar, Mrs Sturgeon and the other representatives as Heads of Government of the Crown Dependencies. There will be one person doing the negotiation in each potential area.
1015 But that is the position today, so when there are meetings of the Council today Gibraltar influences any aspect which relates to Gibraltar and which is relevant to Gibraltar. The Hon. the Minister for the Environment will be asked for details for a negotiation that is ongoing on Brussels relating to environmental matters.

We only hear of things when they go wrong, so when there is a disagreement and something 1020 comes out, it may be that there has been a failure of a request of information here and therefore that information is not provided to the UK because they do not seek it and the UK then negotiates something which the UK usually does not realise is bad for Gibraltar but Spain does, and that is why it has got into the text. The last time that happened, hon. Members will recall, was in relation to the sites of community interest which happened, I think, in 2007-08. It 1025 is not happening now. The very strong relationship we have with the United Kingdom I think helps in that respect. The Constitution is very clear that we have to be involved and that EU matters are not external relations matters simply because they are EU matters. If they are EU matters relating to areas which are not the special reserved matters which the Governor has responsibility for, then they are matters which Gibraltar drives, but Gibraltar does not sit at the 1030 negotiating table with the other 27. And so I would counsel against suggesting that we are not being fully involved because of things that Members opposite may see in the politics of the United Kingdom, because we are very pleased to be very fully involved.

That is not to say, Mr Speaker, that either in the select committee the tail is going to wag the dog, nor in the context of the negotiations between the United Kingdom and the European Union. So people who have garnered just over 4,000 votes are not going to determine what the executive – well, on average it is about 4,000 if you work it out – which has been elected with an average of 10,000 votes, is going to determine, because there is not a Government of national unity. There is a Government led by the executive, which is going to continue to make decisions, but the select committee can be an important part of where we work with Members opposite. And in the same way, Mr Speaker, 30,000 people are not going to determine what is going to be done for 60 million people, but there is a political commitment that what is in the interest of the 30,000 people is not going to be disregarded and we are going to be fully involved in negotiating the aspects that matter to us.

The hon. Gentleman says ‘the vague terms on which the select committee has been established’. Well, I think this is one of the longest motions establishing a select committee ever brought to this House. Select committees have a way in which they operate, and that is dealt with in the Standing Orders and Rules and in the practice of this House. A select committee has a passive role. Therefore, Mr Speaker, only if you are thinking that a select committee can actually be an instrument of the executive taking executive decisions and executive action and you are disappointed because you are not, but there is no select committee that I have ever seen operating in this House or in any other House which is a part of the executive. A select committee is not a place from which you govern a nation; it is a place from which you debate how a nation is being governed. You can make recommendations which may lead to a Parliament seeking to do things in a particular way, which will then bind the executive, but it is not more than that, and in the context of where we are, the way that a select committee has been used in issues as important as Brexit, like namely, the Select Committee on the Constitution, it is because you use the select committee to be able to take a barometer of public opinion, to consult with the public, you are able to use the select committee to consider that consultation process together and to then represent together to the Parliament, insofar as may be appropriate, a joint view. Of course hon. Members have the opportunity of doing a minority report on issues which the select committee thinks the Parliament should have a recommendation on. It is nothing else, and therefore, in that context, it is far from passive. It is going to do the work that the select committee in the United Kingdom and in Scotland and everywhere else is going to do and the work that the select committees of this House have traditionally done. And, if I may say so, Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman has repeated himself, it is what they proposed. So, unless they proposed a select committee not knowing what it is that a select committee does, they are not getting anything more passive or more active than they proposed.

Mr Speaker, the length of time between the publishing of the select committee motion and taking it I do not think is extraordinary. This is the first opportunity for motions to be taken, unless we had suspended Standing Orders. The suspension of Standing Orders has not seemed necessary to us, because in the context of what is happening in September ... And hon. Members may recall; I do not know whether they do. I sometimes appear to impute to them corporate knowledge that they do not have, but the position of the GSD, as far as we have always understood it, is that they do not want parliamentary meetings in August. We could have had a parliamentary meeting in August, but their position is not to have parliamentary meetings in August. Mr Speaker, hon. Members actually voted down – because on that particular day they had a majority of one – a proposal to adjourn the Parliament to August in 2012. They said, ‘No, we should never have meetings of the Parliament in August,’ so we did not have a meeting of the Parliament in August, although I cancelled part of my family holiday and continued working – I would have happily come here to have a meeting in August if they had wished. In September we have been doing the work that we have to do. As hon. Members will know, September and October are very busy months. They will learn from their time in Parliament, Mr Speaker, that June, July, September and October are examination months in Government executive terms, especially for anybody who wishes to occupy this chair, because there are the party conferences, etc. and there is, of course, the session in New York of the Fourth Committee, as hon. Gentlemen will have seen. Therefore, Mr Speaker, there is a need to continue with the executive action that is going to produce the results for Gibraltar on Brexit and other areas which we have been pursuing, and I am grateful that the hon. Gentleman has said, rightly, in the context of what they have seen publicly already and some of which they would have also had comment on from us not publicly.

In particular, hon. Gentlemen will know that the past week has been very active indeed in respect of the sovereignty of Gibraltar, which is an issue that Brexit opens, as far as some are concerned in the Kingdom of Spain. The hon. Gentleman introduced that aspect into the discussion, in my view correctly, because this is one of the issues we will be dealing with in the context of Brexit ... that there was political unity in Gibraltar on the subject leading up to the Referendum, all of the former Chief Ministers of Gibraltar joined me, as the current Chief Minister, in saying to the general public, 'The big issue is that Spain is likely to want to exploit a potential Brexit for its own purposes, and therefore tangentially this is a vote about whether joint sovereignty should be put back on the table or not.' Hon. Members have seen that played out from the morning of the 24th, but with growing intensity in the past 72 hours since the Tuesday afternoon in New York, and there is even today a further interview by the current caretaker Foreign Minister of Spain in ABC newspaper, responding to a Government press conference of yesterday at five o'clock. So hon. Gentlemen must not think that these things happen just when they pop up. There is a lot of build up to what eventually emerges and a lot needed to prepare to be able to respond in a strategic and tactical manner to some of the things that we are dealing with.

Mr Speaker, I think it is important to speak on behalf of the whole House to say that, on the subject of Brexit, if somebody thinks that the sovereignty of Gibraltar is somehow on the table for discussion or negotiation, what they will get from the select committee – whether it is passive or less passive from the executive and, I hope, also and no doubt from the Opposition and the whole of it represented by the seven Members opposite – is a very clear statement that Gibraltar will never be Spanish, whether in the context of Brexit negotiations or not in the context of Brexit negotiations; that never means never, that no means no – all the things I have said in the last 72 hours, that I have been saying since the 24th, and that nobody should begin to believe that any door opens on the issue of sovereignty. I have seen some suggestions that the issue is the economy. Well, of course the issue is the economy, but there is no back door into sovereignty, either through Brexit or through the economy. Sovereignty, as far as the Government of Gibraltar is concerned – and, I am sure, Members opposite – is an issue which will never be on the table, and to have heard, as one has in the past 24 hours, that not just does Mr Margallo think he will get his hands on the Rock but that he will raise the Spanish flag in the next four years, is really to see the diplomacy of a great European kingdom like Spain descend into utter farce. Nothing that we have heard in the past 72 hours is going to change the opinion of the Gibraltarians on the issue of the sovereignty of Gibraltar and there is no argument that can be put to us, because we are determined that the sovereignty of Gibraltar shall continue to be entirely British.

As I said yesterday, Mr Speaker, this is not about threats and it is not about benefits; this is about respect. Fifty years ago, the United Kingdom suggested to Spain that if you have an issue with the sovereignty of Gibraltar you should go to the International Court of Justice. Spain refused and wished to pursue a political attempt to take over Gibraltar's sovereignty, and hon. Members will have heard what I told the United Nations in that respect. What we need to do and to be united on is to ensure that everything that we do in dealing with Brexit maintains that very clear position and that Spain does not see an opportunity to somehow put her foot in the door. Indeed, Mr Speaker, it is true that some of Gibraltar's best friends in the British Parliament

1135 said that actually one of the reasons they supported Brexit, contrary to our own views in Gibraltar, was because they saw the European institutions and the 26 other Member States getting their foot in the door of British sovereignty over the United Kingdom, let alone Gibraltar, and some of our friends said, 'Therefore, you see, Spain has  $\frac{1}{27}$ th of her foot in already the sovereignty of Gibraltar. So those of us who did not support Brexit now have the comfort of at 1140 least taking the view that if those who did support Brexit were right, then we are kicking that Spanish toe, or  $\frac{1}{27}$ th of the Spanish foot, out of the door with Brexit. So, if Señor Margallo might care to reconsider, he might find that Brexit is actually not an advantage towards Spanish sovereignty; it is actually the withdrawal of  $\frac{1}{27}$ th of the Spanish sovereignty attained over Gibraltar in the lexicon of those who backed Brexit, because that is how they saw it in respect of 1145 the United Kingdom, which we did not.

So, Mr Speaker, the reason that we will meet in camera is because we may need to discuss things which are sensitive in order to be able to take a common position on them and we do not want those who wish to get not just  $\frac{1}{27}$ th of their toe in but the whole of their big feet into our sovereignty ... but that does not mean that we should not also meet in public when it is 1150 appropriate for us to do so and call in those members of the public who may wish to come in to give us the evidence.

It is also true, Mr Speaker, that the select committee, as I have said, and the Government cannot deal with this negotiation on the basis of giving a blow by blow account publicly of what is going on. We can have such debates as hon. Members wish in respect of transparency and 1155 debt and all the rest of it, and no doubt this will continue, because it appears that my skills in advocacy persuade 10,500 people but they do not persuade six or seven. So be it, I am quite happy to persuade 10,500 and not six or seven. But in relation to this matter, this is not an issue of transparency. If we are going to simply look at what happens in the Westminster Parliament, the Prime Minister herself has said, and so have the Foreign Minister and the Minister for DExEU 1160 – the Department for Exiting the European Union – that they will not be giving a blow by blow account of negotiations, and that means I think negotiations inter-UK and extra-UK. It would not make sense to do so.

But hon. Members should know that we do intend to advise them, even outwith the select committee, of such aspects of the discussion and negotiation – I am going to come to you in a 1165 second; I will give way in a second – where we believe that they should be informed of any particular issue, and we will do that, Mr Speaker, where the things that we are discussing with the United Kingdom are not things that we can say publicly and they are things which hon.
Members should know. I think it is important that I should complete this point before I give way to the hon. Member. One of the things that the Deputy Chief Minister was very clear on in the 1170 context of the discussions we had in the days after Brexit is that, of course, many meetings that we hold with Ministers and others outside of Gibraltar, in the United Kingdom in particular, deal with matters of government business at the same time as they deal with related Brexit matters of government business. Government business is something that has to remain confidential government to government and it is not something that we can give hon. Members a blow by 1175 blow account of anyway, but where there are areas where it is clear to us that we cannot say something publicly, but that the hon. Members should be briefed, they will be, select committee or no select committee. It will be a conversation either between the Deputy Chief Minister and the Deputy Leader of the Opposition or between myself and the Leader of the Opposition where appropriate – although he is very difficult to catch, he is often in court, so it is easier usually for 1180 the Deputy Chief Minister to get in touch with the Deputy Leader of the Opposition.

I think the hon. Gentleman wanted to say something.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. I do not know where the hon. Gentleman gets the fact that I am very busy. I am very busy in court, but never has the hon. Gentleman attempted to contact me and I 1185 have not been there at the end of the telephone in order to answer his call, or indeed your call whenever you have asked to see me.

Let me remind him, before I get to the point that I was going to make, that I make the decisions as to who is Deputy and who is not Deputy within my ranks, but thank you very much for appearing to endorse Mr Hammond. He is probably very appreciative of it, but I make those decisions and I will make an announcement, if I do, when and if I am ready to do so.

But, Mr Speaker, one of the issues that concerns me about Article 50, and hence from our side the concern about time and whether we have made use of all the time available in order for us to impart to the hon. Gentleman what are our concerns, is that we have seen how the Prime Minister, Theresa May, has now said that the Article 50 notice is going to be triggered by the end of March. It could be earlier, it does not necessarily have to be the end of March, but there is a date, end of March, to trigger Article 50. Now, this is my understanding and this is what I would ask the hon. Gentleman to comment on, if he has an answer in relation to this. My understanding of the position is that once the Article 50 notice is triggered, what there will then be is a list of issues that is produced on the United Kingdom side. So the United Kingdom will say, 'These are the points that we would wish included within any deal,' and then on the EU side there is a list of points the EU would like to discuss and include within any deal. What then happens is that there is then an agreement. Usually, it is ... Well, we are in uncharted territory, but normally in these things there would be a consensus, and it is a point that the hon. Gentleman made, and perhaps the hon. Gentleman therefore has considered this particular point – that is why I am rising – that it would be dealt with by way of consensus about what are the issues, what are the parameters of this particular deal.

The danger for Gibraltar, as far as I can see, is that the Spanish government, through its lobbying – and it already commenced its very hard lobbying some months ago and sent diplomats to every single EU country – manages to then persuade effectively the United Kingdom and the EU to leave Gibraltar out. So, what we are then faced with is a situation, at a very early juncture, where the issue of Gibraltar is excluded from that parameter and those issues for discussion. I just wonder whether the hon. Gentleman can comment in relation to that and whether he thinks that that is a possibility and whether the Government has considered that, because that is something that does concern me and would, of course, then mean that the timetable, in terms of for us, is not two years from the exercise of the Article 50 notice – it is within a few months of the Article 50 notice that we would be faced with considerable difficulties.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I have tried to be in touch with him on some occasions and not been able to reach him. The hon. Gentleman may not recall, but that has happened on a number of occasions. He has called me much later, I have been unavailable and he has had to speak to the Deputy Chief Minister. I am not saying there is anything wrong with that, it is normal, but he cannot pretend that he is always there to pick up my phone. He is sometimes before a judge, and he cannot pick up a phone when he is in front of a judge.

Hon. D A Feetham: He does not phone me very often.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, I do not phone him very often, Mr Speaker, because we have diametrically opposed views on just about everything; and when we do not, when we seem to have the same view about something, there is no better way of ensuring that we have a different view than for us to discuss it, so it is usually better to remain of the same view, absent discussion, than to find a way to disagree. But, look, Mr Speaker, maybe that can change.

I did not know that the Hon. Mr Hammond was not the Deputy Leader of the Opposition, otherwise I would not have called him that. I sincerely thought that that was the case. Perhaps I have also got it wrong that Mr Vasquez is the Chairman of the Party, but I was simply reflecting what I thought had been the announcement that he had made, but it is clear that he makes those decisions, as he has told us today. I am constitutionally empowered to make decisions in relation to constitutional portfolios, but in my party I am slightly more constrained by a little 1240 thing called democracy – but never mind. It is a live issue in the Labour Party how members of the Shadow Cabinet are going to be appointed ... but anyway, never mind. It reminds me of that idea, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Gentleman had of something called ‘annual’ general meetings that happen once every three or four years! Anyway, leaving all those issues aside, because I do not want to go into partisan ...

1245 Mr Speaker, the Article 50 notice will set out some of the issues that the United Kingdom wants to deal with. It will be general, it will not be specific; it will be about the exit deal, it will not be about the new deal that the United Kingdom has with the European Union. This is an area where there is a large measure of disagreement – between the Council and the Commission and the Commission and the Council in the United Kingdom, and the United Kingdom, the 1250 Commission and the Council and the remaining 26 Member States – whether the exit deal is also the deal going forward, or whether there is an exit deal and then a negotiation of a deal going forward. And that is very likely to be the case. There is very likely to be an exit deal first and then a new trade deal between the United Kingdom and the European Union. That has been repeated by Cecilia Malmström, who is the Commissioner for International Trade, and it is also repeated 1255 by some of the relevant British Ministers, and that has been said to be potentially very dangerous for the United Kingdom. It is dangerous also for Germany, it is dangerous for other EU nations and it will be, of course, as dangerous for Gibraltar and for Spain, and navigating these issues is complex.

The Council leads the negotiation for the European Union. The Council acts either by consensus or qualified majority voting. What is clear, Mr Speaker, is that the Council and 1260 therefore the President of the Council, who will represent the EU in its negotiations with the United Kingdom, will represent the position of the 26, not the position of the 27, so our work with the United Kingdom is not going to be reflected in what comes from the EU to the United Kingdom. That is our work with the EU, and the hon. Gentleman will see that we have done a lot of work already, not just with the United Kingdom but also with the EU, and we are continuing 1265 to do that work in partnership with the United Kingdom in respect of the recent lobbying campaign that we have seen from Señor Margallo in respect of other EU foreign ministers, which the hon. Gentleman should not for one moment think is just happening now. This is constant and it does not just happen in respect of the European Union; it happens in Washington, it happens in New York, it happens everywhere we go or might go. During the time of the creation 1270 of the magnificent artificial reef just in the north of Gibraltar’s territorial sea, the Spanish government was lobbying everywhere it had an embassy – and it has got almost 200 of them – and we were counter lobbying in 200 places where we had an embassy through the United Kingdom. We will be doing that in European capitals, of course, as well, but that does not mean that we will be able to influence what comes from the Council in the context of the negotiation.
1275 (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Of what? Out of what? At the risk of staying out of what? Of the negotiation? Mr Speaker, I do not mean to get partisan, but the hon. Gentleman needs to understand that one of the issues here is whether the United Kingdom stays in the Common Customs Union or not – the common market in goods, the single market in goods – right? We are out of it. We cannot have a hard Brexit of the single market in goods, because we are not in 1280 it, and it has gone very well for us, right? We are in the single market in services. The United Kingdom may not be seeking access to the single market in services. It may be seeking a hard Brexit, so there will be nothing to negotiate, other than potentially those areas of the United Kingdom that might wish to have access to the single market.

There is potentially only one part of the Member State United Kingdom – because we are not 1285 part of the United Kingdom, but we are part of the Member State United Kingdom for EU purposes under Article 355; and I do not think we should be having this discussion in public, but given that he has opened it – that would be seeking access to the single market and would be prepared to accept what the UK has told us is the price of access to the single market, which is freedom of movement of persons. Northern Ireland cannot do that, Scotland cannot do that, 1290 because they have not got a border with the rest of England and Wales; but we can, because we 1295 have got a border with England and Wales and we want to have less of a border with the rest of Europe. But if the 26 come back to the United Kingdom and say, 'Right, here's the price for access to the single market in goods, here is the price for access to the single market in services,' and all of that includes freedom of movement of people, and if the United Kingdom has already 1300 made the decision that it does not want access to the single market in good, it does not want access to the single market in services and it does not want access to the freedom of movement of people, good luck to Margallo if he thinks he is going to use that as a negotiating ploy for Gibraltar. That which he and I would not agree is the right position to take, I am sure, for the United Kingdom but is increasingly looking likely actually disarms the person who thinks he has got a good negotiating position with Gibraltar, because it takes what he thinks are his three acs out of his pocket, completely. He has got nothing left to negotiate with.

1305 Where are we left? Where everybody in this community understands that we are left. We are left with a free market with the United Kingdom that hon. Members know I have said we are doing a lot of work on already. We are left with freedom of movement not enshrined in the European Treaty, because by leaving we are accepting that that is gone – and the UK is leaving the European Union largely, political commentators will say and the Prime Minister herself has said, because they do not want freedom of movement of people. And so the question is: do you have to have access to the fundamental freedom of movement of people in order to have an open frontier with people moving in one direction and the other, or do you not need that? And 1310 the answer is you do not need that, because we had an open Frontier before 1969, when neither Spain nor the United Kingdom were part of the European Union.

1315 Mr Speaker, all of those things are the issues that are live, but this is not just about the Article 50 letter, it is about what deal the United Kingdom seeks, and those are the issues that we are dealing with and seeking to address. That is why part of the process has to be to work with the United Kingdom in the process of the exit deal as much as in the process of the new deal, if I can put it in that way.

1320 So, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman, when he was dealing with the issue of the fact that he had suggested this, I think evinced the suggestion that he had proposed a select committee thinking a select committee might be something else, as if a select committee were a place where Government and Opposition together run the executive; and as I said to his hon.
colleague not the Deputy Leader of the Opposition, that is not what a select committee is about.
This was not a process which we proposed also and which he wrote about, where we were creating a committee for joint decisions to be taken. Some joint decisions may have to be taken there about some issues which are appropriate for Parliament, but we have to continue to run 1325 the process of the Executive negotiating on these issues. This is not to create the joint sovereignty of the decision-making process in respect of Brexit.

1330 Although I was grateful that he got up and said 'what Mr Hammond means', almost as if he had to explain what Mr Hammond had meant. I thought Mr Hammond had explained himself very eloquently today. When he is not talking gas he speaks very clearly, (Laughter) and I thought there was no need for him to be traduced by his leader. I had perfectly understood what the hon. Gentleman had said.

1335 Mr Speaker, there may be areas where we do need a joint strategy, and although his advice, his assistance and his counsel are not something we will often seek, on this issue we will often seek to inform him of things that we cannot inform the general public and take his view on. He has said he will give us that view in good faith; I sincerely hope that that is the case. I would not expect anything else, but I am grateful that, given that he felt it necessary to tell us that he would give us his view in good faith, we will accept it in good faith.

1340 The hon. Lady does not often praise the Government; I am grateful that she did on this occasion for the work that we have done. This was a period in our history where we had to act, and quickly, to deal with a lot of the issues that were coming up. Hon. Members will have seen, as I have said, just in the last 72 hours how aggressive, belligerent and predatory Spain has become, for reasons which I am clear relate more to Mr Margallo's own very clear existential view of where he is going and wanting to act quickly and get his claws into a joint sovereignty negotiation quickly, and nothing to do with where Gibraltar is going, what risks Gibraltar may be at and what potential likelihood there is that Gibraltar might in some way be prepared to agree anything to do with joint sovereignty.

And so, Mr Speaker, I detect that there is support, whipped or otherwise, for six on one side and from the hon. Lady for this motion, for which I am grateful, and I commend the motion to the House. (Banging on desks)

1350

Mr Speaker: I now put the question in terms of the motion proposed by the Hon. the Chief Minister. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Public debt – Definition

Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name which reads as follows:

That this House notes that section 73(1) of the Gibraltar Constitution Order 2006 defines public debt as all debt charges for which Gibraltar is liable. The House further notes that the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers Act) Public Debt is defined as any borrowing of money by the Government, and this House thus endorses the practice established under the former GSD administration under both the 1969 and 2006 Constitutions that borrowings by Government-owned and controlled companies are not considered and included in the measure of public debt.

Mr Speaker, the origin of this motion is much like the origin of the earlier motion in respect of a motion that the Hon. Mr Clinton has put, again without contacting the Government, in an attempt to change the way that the Parliament interprets public debt.

You would have thought that if Mr Clinton were of the view that this is something that he wanted to genuinely achieve, again he would have picked up the phone and said, 'Look, Fabian, you are the Minister for Public Finance – I want to change the way that Public Finance is dealt with. I think with my accounting qualification I am better able to determine what should or should not be public debt and I propose this wholesale change to the way in which the Government works and the interpretation of section 73(1) of the Constitution and the way that you interpret the Public Finance Borrowing Powers Act. And not just you Fabian, by the way – I want to change the way that it was interpreted under the GSD and I would like to restate the accounts of Gibraltar for 1996 to 2011, and before then, before 1996,' to which I would have said, 'Well, Roy, don't worry, because there was not any Government company borrowing before 1996 whatsoever. We had nothing to hide before 1996, neither did the Government before 1988, and therefore if you want to do this and you want to restate the accounts of the GSD in Government ... we take the view that this is established and therefore it must be that you have a serious division in your ranks because you want to change the way that the GSD worked for 16 successful, if I may say so – electorally successful – years in Government and accounted successfully again to the electorate, although we did not agree with much of what they did for this issue to the electorate.' And he would have also have met with my view that he was trying to take Gibraltar in a direction that the Principal Auditor, who would have an accounting qualification, does not think it needs to go, and therefore that we think that the public accounts of Gibraltar, the definition of public debt, should continue to be as it was calculated in respect of 1380 the division between the Government accounts and the Government company accounts in the way that the GSD did between 1996 and 2011 and indeed in the way that the GSD defended in the 2011 General Election, because they did not propose to change it, and frankly it would have seemed, I think, facetious for the hon. Member therefore to have sought to persuade me to change that.

1385 But he might have then realised, if he had made that call, that what he was going to do was going to pit the current GSD head on against the former GSD. And I have not detected a change of name – they are not calling themselves the New GSD or anything Blairite like that. There is not a Mandelsonian text message in the morning, is there, telling them what to think and to be on message. But this appears to be a complete change in the position of the GSD, the current 1390 official Opposition, in respect of the way in which debt is calculated.

I am sorry to have to raise this issue again, but in the context of a party that has considered, stated and repeated that the trajectory of Sir Peter Caruana, when he was Chief Minister of this House, is best referred to as that of the greatest Gibraltarian of his or all time, you would have thought that something so fundamentally opposed to the way that the GSD did business 1395 between 1996 and 2011 would have been a source of huge embarrassment to them. But it may be, I assume, that the hon. Gentleman does not have the benefit of a corporate memory that reminds him of these issues; or it may be that he is going to get up and tell us that he thinks that things were not done right between 1996 and 2011. That would at least avail him of the defence that he is being no hypocrite. It would, of course, create a huge potential problem for the Leader
1400 of the Opposition, who sometimes, not always, likes to remind us that he was a member of the Government between 2007 and 2011 when they won the election by a whisker, which was 400 votes, although Sir Peter then had the ability to remind me between 2011 and 2015 that we won by half a whisker, when we won by 200 votes – without the need for any accounting qualification.

1405 Mr Speaker, as a result, when I see the motion that the hon. Member moves I think that it is actually quite dangerous that we should be changing a constitutional interpretation and a legal interpretation based on the view of somebody who has been, at the time he moves the motion, in the House for six months, and that we should act contrary to the view of Sir Peter, who spent 24-25 years in this House.

1410 The GSD took a company structure established by the GSLP, which had no borrowing in it, and turned it into a trading structure of Government companies, which included a lot of borrowing in it, and in doing so and establishing that practice did so without changing the interpretations under section 73 of the Constitution or the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act. So, what is it that has changed in our Constitution, or indeed in the Act, which changes the way in which we must interpret it on this basis? Well, absolutely nothing, Mr Speaker, because 1415 none of the changes that have been made to the Act – and there have been no changes made to the Constitution – change that. And indeed, what changed in 2006 under the new Constitution? Well, in relation to this matter, nothing, Mr Speaker, because none of the changes that we saw swept in after 2006, with the amendments to the General Interpretation and Clauses Act, with the other legal amendments, with the changes in practice, none of them meant that after 2006
1420 we were accounting in a different way for the Government companies than we were between 1996 and 2006 in that 10-year period when they created the borrowing from Government companies and they accounted for the Government companies in the same way that we do, except for one important difference that hon. Members must not forget and will not be allowed 1425 to forget, Mr Speaker, and it is an important point that the hon. Member should make a note of. Government companies did not file accounts under the GSD and they will file accounts under the GSLP Liberals, except that it is sometimes difficult to file those accounts when you are reconstructing the accounts of the companies between the period 1996 and 2011. But we are closer to doing so and we will be able to give them the benefit of the publication of the accounts 1430 of the companies that they ran and they brought into trading and they brought into debt, in the context of company accounts – which will be public and they will be filed and subject to the Companies Act. But they did not do any of that.

1435 Now, I know we are now going to go into the territory of one of those debates where they do not want to look back. This is the ‘don’t look back’ mantra. They will get the Mandelsonian SMS
 1440 now: ‘This is the don’t look back debate.’ This is not the ‘history shows you that we were the best Government ever’; this is the ‘forget we were ever in Government’ debate. But because they were in Government and because they behaved in a particular way, straddling old Constitution and new Constitution, 1969 Constitution and 2006 Constitution and the same Borrowing Powers Act, they cannot, absent getting up and saying it was done wrong by the GSD
 1445 between 1996 and 2011, and that includes Daniel Feetham because he was a Minister in that Government between 2007 and 2011 ... they have absolutely no moral authority to put a motion that says the opposite of what this one does. Therefore, it is absolutely essential, in order to have clarity in respect of how the accounts of Gibraltar are going to be handled going forward, that we continue, by resolution of this House, to affirm what has been the case until now and approved, not just by Fabian Picardo but by Peter Caruana, successive Financial Secretaries – Tim Bristow, appointed by the United Kingdom; Dilip Dayaram, appointed by the former Chief Minister, Sir Peter Caruana – and successive auditors, because if this had been an improper practice, the auditor would have been the first one to point it out.

1450 In the context of a debate that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition and I had some time in December 2014 – I think it was the one involving the infamous close personal contact and arms going around each other’s bodies at the end; I think we hugged each other at the end of that one, for reasons that both of us probably cannot work out even now, but you hugged me first (Laughter) – the hon. Gentleman suggested that what Gibraltar needed was an auditor to audit its accounts independently. I was delighted when he said this, because I was able to say, ‘For goodness’ sake, where have you been operating?’ Gibraltar has an audit ‘el chivatito’ the transcript is available, if the hon. Gentleman likes. We have a Principal Auditor who audits the accounts of Gibraltar already, and that Auditor would immediately have said that the practice that the GSD had started, and we had simply continued under the same Financial Secretary that we inherited etc., was contrary to section 73 of the Constitution and the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act, if it were.

So, Mr Speaker, this motion deals with that attempted change of interpretation, which would be contrary to the clear interpretation given between 1996 and 2011 under the 1969 Constitution and the 2006 Constitution, under the old Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act and the new Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act as amended by the GSD, and nothing has 1465 changed. Therefore, Mr Speaker, I never thought I would say these words: I commend to the House that we continue the practice established by Sir Peter Caruana and the GSD and continued by Sir Peter Caruana and Daniel Feetham when he was in Government with him, as set out in this motion, and that we do not accept the opposite, which is the motion that the Member opposite moved to suggest the contrary. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Hon. the Chief Minister. Does any hon. Member wish to contribute to the debate on the motion? The Hon. Roy Clinton.

1475 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I must confess to feeling déjà vu. To have one motion hijacked is perhaps unfortunate; to have two motions hijacked is perhaps complete misfortune. Yet, on the other hand, I should be flattered, because I had to take a double take when I read the Chief Minister’s motion, because not only is he hijacking my motions quite deliberately, but now he is not even bothering to change the wording in my motions. He has, in fact, copied two thirds of 1480 my motion and only changed the last paragraph. Well, of course, as he himself has said, no he is not lazy – but that looks lazy to me.

1485 Mr Speaker, I do not propose to give a great speech on this motion because, frankly, I have my own prepared speech for the Chief Minister's delight and consumption. If I were to call the Chief Minister every time I proposed to bring an idea, a motion or question to this House, I might be rightly accused of wanting to be subject to his whip. Do I have to go to No. 6 every time I want something debated in this House? (Laughter) Perhaps it would be easier if I just crossed the floor and joined him on that side of the House, but obviously I have no intention of doing that.

1490 But I really do appreciate his increasing 'fondness' – dare I use the word – for accountants, because thankfully accountants are now figuring more in this House than they ever have before, whereas before it would appear that this was a finishing school for lawyers.

So, Mr Speaker, the substance of my motion I will debate when I come to my motion. And, again, I have subject matter which I think I will attempt to persuade the Members opposite as to the merits of my motion.

1495 He did say at one point, 'Well, Mr Speaker, this has been the rule for years, nothing has changed – what has changed?' Well, I can think of two things that have changed, Mr Speaker: (1) Credit Finance, £400 million; and (2) Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd, £300 million. But, of course, the Principal Auditor cannot comment on these areas because they are not within his remit, and therefore of course the Principal Auditor has nothing to say on the matter because they are not within his remit. But my motion is exactly the point: they should be within his remit. He should be reporting on these companies and reporting to Parliament and including them in his report. So I do not see what the Chief Minister finds at fault in my motion.

1500 Of course I am happy to keep on calling the Chief Minister every time I have an idea – morning, noon or night – but he may find that objectionable. In fact, as he said, I have three letters that I have written to him: one prior to the Budget, which he never responded to; one subsequent to the Budget, which I am still waiting for; and one in which I am requesting a technical meeting on the £300 million, which I appreciate the Chief Minister has been travelling and may not have had time to respond to.

1510 And so, Mr Speaker, I do not propose to debate with the Chief Minister at this point in time. I have my own views which I will express in my own motion and perhaps ... I do not know how we can get round this, Mr Speaker, in this idea of somehow wasting the House's time in debating duplicate motions, but it may assist the House if the Chief Minister stopped attempting to hijack my own motions and debate the merits of the subject.

Again, Mr Speaker, I will be calling for a division. Thank you.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the motion? The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

1520 Hon. Ms. M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, given that I am in the privileged position to not contradict any stance or history of any party position, and that I have the benefit of representing from this chair what is truly in the best interests of this community, which is maximum transparency and accountability, and then of course taking into account this Government's mantra of implementing a new dawn, where it is the Government's duty to look forward and not backward, I oppose this Government's motion to not incorporate or include borrowing by Government-owned and controlled companies.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1530 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am very grateful to the hon. Lady for the stance that she has taken. Of course she could not have taken a different stance, because when she stood for the by-election in 2013 with the GSD and defending GSD policy – and indeed when she also stood in 2015 defending GSD policy, of which this issue loomed very large, but particularly in 2013 – one of the points that she made in the by-election, which is a point that is extremely

1535 important in this debate and is the distinguishing feature of what was happening between 1996 and subsequent to 2008-09 is that what has happened in the world is that we have had Greece and we have had the consequences of Greece. Indeed, if you look at the consequences of Greece and the effect that it had on the financial system, not only as a response to the effect that it had on the financial system and the contagion and the depression that that led, not only 1540 in Europe but also worldwide, Governments within Europe reacted, and indeed the United Kingdom, not during the time that we were in Government but actually subsequent to that, analysing what had happened subsequent to 2008 and between 2008 and 2011-12, what they did, as indeed the Governments in other parts of Europe and the world, was that they changed the definition of public debt. And the United Kingdom in particular – yes, absolutely, the United Kingdom in particular – which had a policy of not including the debts of Government-owned 1545 companies, of not including, for example, certain aspects of PFI arrangements within the calculation of public debt and how public debt was computed, then started to include, for the sake of transparency because Greece led Governments to be more transparent, because part of the problem with Greece was that lack of transparency ... it led to more transparency and the inclusion of the debts of Government-owned companies as part of the computation of public 1550 debt.

We fought the election last time round on the basis of those arguments, but we lost.
Absolutely, we lost the election. But the reality is that the situations then and now are markedly different. And, of course, as my hon. Friend, Mr Clinton, also correctly points out, the situation then and the situation now are, in our view, materially and significantly different, because what 1555 the Government is seeking to do and what the Government has sought to do since 2012 when it amended the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act in March of 2012, and in 2013 when it created Credit Finance Company Ltd and decided to invest £400 million of savers' money into that particular company, is to have the bulk of its public debt off balance sheet. In other words, not directly the debt of the Government but the debt of Government-owned companies. And what that has 1560 allowed the Government to do is to effectively come to this House, or to the public, and say our public debt in gross terms is four hundred and –

Mr Speaker: May I interrupt just a moment? I want to give some guidance for the rest of this motion and Mr Clinton's motion as well.

1565 The motion is about definition of debt; it is not about the amounts. Whether the public debt is £400 million or whether it is £1 has got nothing to do with it. Therefore, I am laying down a marker with the Leader of the Opposition, which I will carry over when anybody else takes part in the debate, including the Chief Minister's right to reply and to Mr Roy Clinton's motion.
Because, you see, the Government and the Opposition have for months been going at each 1570 other hammer and tongs in exchanges outside this Parliament about the question of public debt and the amounts involved, and what we are not going to do ... If you want to bring this debate to the House you are perfectly entitled to do so, but you cannot do that under a motion which has got nothing to do with the amount of public debt but just has to do with the definition of debt. I want to make that abundantly clear, because the moment that hon. Members begin to throw 1575 sums of money across the floor of the House I will call them to account. I hope that that is clear.

Now the Hon. Mr Clinton, yes.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I must bring to your attention that of course my motion is specifically directed at bringing in Government companies into the definition of public debt, so I cannot but mention them. So if you have a problem with me mentioning a number ... but I will 1580 have to mention them, although I will exclude the number if you so wish.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that is the second time that Mr Speaker has interrupted me during the course of my –

Mr Speaker: That is indeed the second time, and let me tell the Leader of the Opposition that if I have to interrupt him 10 times, or anybody else in this House, (Banging on desks) I will do so because that is my job. That is what I have been appointed Speaker for. The moment that hon. Members are not happy with that, all they have to do is to bring a motion of censure against me and then I will be quite happy to go home, having done my duty to the best of my ability. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

I thought for months that the Leader of the Opposition and I were getting on very much better since the last election. The moment that earlier today I had to call his attention to a very small matter he immediately challenged me, and now he is doing it again. If he wants to continue to do that, let me tell you that for as long as I am Speaker there is only going to be one winner, unless he does bring a motion of censure against me and is successful. I would like to get on with him as we have been doing since the last General Election, and therefore I am giving general guidance, which I am doing now because I know that the moment that he sits down the Chief Minister will stand up and then the debate will become one about the level of public debt and not about the definition – and it can happen again later this afternoon under Mr Roy Clinton’s motion. That is all I am doing – I am laying a marker. I think I am very liberal. When hon. Members are debating in a motion I am very liberal and hardly ever call any of them to attention.

1605 Hon. D A Feetham: May I now continue?

Mr Speaker: Yes, you may.

1610 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, thank you very much, Mr Speaker, but of course we live in a democracy and this is the heart of our democracy, and I am as entitled to express my view in the heart of the democracy as Mr Speaker is entitled to express his. And let me tell Mr Speaker he has got it hopelessly wrong. Twice he has got it hopelessly wrong, (A Member: Oh!) and I am entitled to express that view to this House and to Mr Speaker.

1615 What we are debating is the definition of public debt, and the reason why we are debating that is because the Government says the definition of public debt ... The Government debt, the debt that the Government owns, on the current definition they say is £446 million gross, and what we are saying is, ‘Well, actually, you should be taking the debts of Government-owned companies, and if you did then it would take the debt of this community to over £1.1 million.’

How an earth am I expected to debate, Mr Speaker? How can we debate the –

1620 Mr Speaker: Very simply –

Hon. D A Feetham: ... without actually...

1625 Mr Speaker: Very Simple.

Hon. D A Feetham: May I finish, please?

1630 Mr Speaker: Very simple: by saying that if the Government’s definition is the issue, then the level of debt is a certain figure.

Hon. D A Feetham: But I was about to do that.

1635 Mr Speaker: If it is something else, it is another figure. But what I am doing is laying down a marker that I am not going to allow a debate about the actual debt as seen by the Government or as seen by the Opposition.

1640 Of course this is a democracy, but in this democracy the hon. Members have handed me this, the Standing Rules and Orders, and it is for me to apply these rules, not for the Leader of the Opposition, not for the Chief Minister, not for Mr Bossano, who has been here for as long as long as I have, or anybody else. It is for me, and I said, when I was appointed Speaker last time, I would do it without fear or favour. I do it to the best of my ability. I am impartial. I do not belong to any political party. I ceased doing that many years ago, and in the intervening period I have been totally aparty political. Therefore, I think I am entitled to say that I have a duty to apply the rules of this House as to the best of my ability and as I think fit. (Banging on desks)

1645 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, and nobody is disputing whether Mr Speaker whether Mr Speaker is applying the rules impartially or not. What I am saying is that it is wrong – that you have applied the rules wrongly and that your view on this particular intervention is wrong, and indeed it is easily tested that it is wrong. The hon. Gentleman has spent, during the course of his speech, three-quarters of his speech talking about the practice under the GSD and talking about how the GSD use to – (Interjection) May I, Mr Speaker, please –

1655 Mr Speaker: But he did not mention a single figure once. Not once did he bring in any of the exchanges that hon. Members have been having for months.

1660 Hon. D A Feetham: But Mr Speaker... Okay, I see that what Mr Speaker finds objectionable is my mentioning the fact that Government gross debt is £446 million and if we took the debts of Government owned companies into account it is £1.1 million. Quite frankly, I do think that Mr Speaker – (Interjection) Mr Speaker, can I – 1665 Mr Speaker: Leader of the Opposition, please sit down.

You do not seem to understand what I am telling you. You do not seem to understand. I said that I was laying a marker, I was issuing a warning that I did not want those figures that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has been mentioning to become the subject of debate. I am laying down a marker in anticipation. That is all I am doing, but you are taking it much further.

1670 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, okay, so Mr Speaker is laying a marker for the House in general. Perhaps I would invite Mr Speaker, that maybe if he is laying a marker next time round, that perhaps rather than interrupt Members of the House in the middle of a speech to lay a marker, that perhaps one could wait until after the speech.

1675 May I say, Mr Speaker, that the point is very simple. The point made by the hon. Gentleman, Mr Clinton, is absolutely right. What has changed, apart from the fact that we had Greece in 2008 and that countries have responded to that in terms of their additional transparency, is that what has happened over the last five years is that the Government is increasingly borrowing off balance sheet. In other words, it is not borrowing directly itself in order so that it does not appear on the Government accounts, but it is borrowing off balance sheet via the accounts of Government-owned companies so that then it can come to this House – and I am not going to mention any figures, because I do not want to incur the wrath of Mr Speaker, but in order to say to this House there is £x million owed by the Government, and that is the end of the matter.

1680 That, we believe, is fundamentally wrong, because it does not give an adequate or accurate picture of the indebtedness of this community because, at the end of the day, if a Government-owned company cannot repay, for example, the £300 million that has been borrowed, mortgaged and secured on a mortgage of six housing estates, it is the Government that is going to have to pay it. It is the Government, effectively. These are Government-owned companies, and therefore what we are certainly saying is that whatever has happened in the past, let us be more transparent. Let us be transparent with the people of Gibraltar, let us be realistic about what the levels of public debt are, by taking into account not only the direct debt of the Government but also the debt of Government-owned companies.

1690 Mr Speaker will be glad to hear that I am concluding, and there is an additional... and I hope that I am not straying into territory that Mr Speaker does not want me to stray into, but there is an additional reason, of course, why the situation is different even today than it was seven months ago. We have had a vote for Brexit at the Referendum. The responsibility now on all of us is to be more transparent about where we are as a community in relation to our public finances, where we are as a community in terms of the borrowing of this community. And you 1695 cannot judge, Mr Speaker, how the public finances of Gibraltar are performing by undertaking an ostrich exercise and sticking your head in the sand about all that money, the £400 million. I apologise for mentioning £400 million, but the money in Credit Finance (Interjection) – no, £400 million in Credit Finance – and indeed the figure that should not be named, the other figures in relation to the mortgage on the six housing estates, because combined that is substantially more 1700 than what the Government directly owes in debt.

That is really what divides us. We want to be more transparent and give an accurate picture; they want to be less transparent and give a picture that is completely and utterly skewered.
(Banging on desks)

1705 Mr Speaker: Any other contributor to the debate? I call on the mover to reply.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I want to start by saying that, under the provisions of sections 50 and 51 of the Standing Orders and Rules of this House, when you speak you must be heard in silence and that you have responsibility for order and that those of us who represent 1710 the Government on this side of the House entirely accept that. Given where the exchanges have gone with the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition – who I think should take a healthy dose of respect medicine – I want to thank you for your service in this House as a Member of it between 1972 and 1992 and for your service as Speaker in this House since you were called upon to serve again. I thank you in particular, Mr Speaker, for every time you have spoken out against me, for 1715 every time you have interrupted me and for every time that you have interrupted a Member on this side and you have felt it necessary to call us to order, because that is what we, on behalf of our community, all of us together, have asked you to do. Therefore, I think it is important that you know that you enjoy the confidence of everyone who sits on this side of the House and that you enjoy that confidence even when we disagree with you, because we know that you are 1720 making rulings based on your experience and your interpretation of the rules.

Moving on now to the speeches we have heard from hon. Members, the Hon. Mr Clinton says that he feels déjà vu in having another motion hijacked. Well, Mr Speaker, I feel déjà vu in being called lazy twice in one day. It has never happened to me before. Of all the characterisations which are less than attractive of me, laziness is not one that has often been 1725 put to me. The reason I have copied the first two paragraphs of his motion is to demonstrate to him in the context of my motion that he is condemning that which his party was responsible for when it was in Government and his Leader was responsible for as a Minister when he was in Government. This is not an exercise in laziness; this is an exercise in demonstration of how wrong his motion is.

1730 Mr Speaker, again, if he wants to change the way that the accounts of Gibraltar are determined and the interpretation given under a Constitution, under a Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act, the least he should do – if he really wants to succeed and is not trying just to create a show to try and pretend that he might somehow be now a new GSD that will do things in a different way, which is clearly all he is doing – then he would call No. 6, not to be 1735 whipped, because I have told him I do not whip my own people, so the last thing I would do is whip him. Mr Speaker, what he would do is determine whether his motion is likely to succeed or not. It is not to seek permission. It is that we work in a parliamentary democracy, and if he wants to get 10 votes, or if he wants to get nine votes so that I get eight and he does not prosper, he should ask me whether I would back a motion he is going to put or whether I should think of 1740 putting a motion in the same way.

1745 If he has many ideas and he does not want to disturb me at three o'clock in the morning – and I daresay, Mr Speaker, that although I think the public service gives an excellent service, there would be no one to pick up at three o'clock in the morning; and I am not going to be giving him my mobile given that he has evinced an intention to call me at that hour, although he will 1750 find that despite being called lazy, I am usually working at that time but on matters more important than whatever motion he might want to be setting up the Parliament for – then he would know from me whether he stands any prospect of success, or whether all that is going to happen is that he is going to put a motion to give a speech on to try and persuade people of something, which is fine. That can also be something that motions are for, but they do not then result in changes in the way that things are calculated.

1755 The hon. Gentleman has said that there are accountants here at last. Well, there may be an accountant here, Mr Speaker – I do not know whether it is at last or not, but there has been an economist here for 44 years and that economist, by working with people, has been able to change the way that Gibraltar's economy is run and actually put it on a much better footing. Not because I say so. I would say that, wouldn't I, Mr Speaker, of Joe Bossano, but even the greatest 1760 Gibraltarian of all time said it in his valedictory speech here when he spoke in the last Budget that he spoke on in 2015. In fact, Mr Bossano was not here to hear him say that Gibraltar owed Joe Bossano a huge debt of gratitude for the repositioning of the Gibraltar economy after the closure in 1984 of the dockyard and the work that he had done thereafter.

1765 I do not think this is a finishing school for lawyers; it should not be. Lawyers should come here ready and finished, ready to do political work, to be architects – like accountants, like journalists, like mothers, like fathers – of our future, of our society, because that is what we are as lawmakers. We are not here to look at the price of PG Tips and of Brooke Bond; we are here to become architects of the future of our community.

1770 There is one element of the architecture of the way our community is run which we accept and which I will say to the hon. Lady does not go to transparency in the way that hon. Members are painting it, with the very greatest of respect. The hon. Gentleman referred to Gibraltar Capital Assets having happened and this was one of the reasons why he brought his motion. Well, he is getting his chronology wrong. Gibraltar Capital Assets had not been announced at the 1775 time that he put his motion. He found out about Gibraltar Capital Assets because I told him. The community found out about the great secret that is Gibraltar Capital Assets because I talked about it during my Budget speech and I informed the community of the structure of that. I told them about the amounts involved. I told them – the person who he alleges is trying to secretly avoid the company's accounts being talked about. I brought it here, Mr Speaker, so it does not make any sense for him to say that he needs to bring this motion for this purpose. Indeed, doesn't he know that we publish, from Credit Finance Company Ltd, statements online every month? Doesn't he know, Mr Speaker? Of course he does, because when he makes his arguments, which in my respectful submission are nonsensical, about what the level of debt is ...
1780 He says during a General Election campaign that he is going to take the amounts there – and he takes the full amount of £400 million and all the rest of it, and we will talk about later about those amounts, if you like – and he is going to increase the level of debt to £900 million – he said that during his election campaign – in order to ensure that what they say are the amounts involved are covered. That is what they say.

1785 Mr Speaker, how can he say that he needs this change in order to know what is going on in Credit Finance and GCA? He may want to say – no doubt he will in his motion, and as he has indicated today – that he just wants all of the companies to be under the scrutiny of the Principal Auditor. Well, that is his position, but it is nonsensical to say that Credit Finance and GCA are the ones that in particular make that relevant and are relevant after the GSD, because Credit Finance and the GCA, which are the two he says we are responsible for – of course we 1790 are, we created them – are the ones on which he has most information. Most information. What information does he have about the accounts of the Bus Company, which they created, or any of the other companies that they created and operated as trading companies, and which borrowed? And he says that the change is Credit Finance and GCA. Well, look, Mr Speaker, it is utter nonsense.

1795 And of course the Auditor does not say anything about these accounts, because they are not in his remit. Exactly, Mr Speaker – they are not in his remit, and that is where the Hon. Mr Clinton is entirely wrong, for a simple reason: section 73 of the Constitution and the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act mean what they mean, not what I say they mean, and if the Auditor thought that therefore they cover the companies, he would say so and he would ask for 1800 the accounts and he would put it in his report.

It is not up to this Parliament to say section 73 of the Constitution means this or the Borrowing Powers Act means that, because neither the Chief Justice in our courts or any other judge, nor the Principal Auditor, nor any other party that interprets our laws asks the Chief Minister what it means. That is why we create laws and Constitutions. They are objective 1805 standards that go out into the community and others interpret. And he is coming here to tell us what he says they must mean in the future. He is not saying ‘amend’ it to say this; he says ‘interpret’ it to say this. And so it is not that these companies are not within the remit and can be brought within the remit of the Auditor by something we say here; it is that the Constitution and the law do not put them within the remit under the GSD, under the GSLP, under the 1810 independent Member leading a party informing Government, or anybody else. That is the nonsense of the motion that he has brought.

He says he has three letters waiting for reply; I thought he had two. He will get replies to his letters as soon as I am able to attend to them, but he has to understand that, in the context of what I deal with as Chief Minister, replying to his letters is not a priority. That does not mean 1815 that he should not approach me in writing to deal with things. I commend to him an advance called e-mail, which now enables me to read correspondence wherever I am. It involves small devices or large devices onto which people type and uses the phone lines. I do not know whether he has moved on from letters to e-mail, but if he sends me e-mails I usually try and reply more quickly – I have the opportunity of replying when I am on aircraft, etc. but I do 1820 commend that to him. Others will be able to tell him that I tend to be able to reply quite quickly to queries to which I have the answer when I receive an electronic communication which is mobile.

Then he told us he does not propose to deal with my motion now and he will speak on his motion in respect of the things that he would have dealt with in response to my motion. Very 1825 well, Mr Speaker, he is going to disjoint the debate. I am quite happy for it to be disjointed, we can do it in that way, but I can tell him now that if he continues to put motions that I think are nonsensical he will continue to receive motions from the Government affirming practices even under the GSD, as he has in respect of this one.

Mr Speaker, I cannot agree with the interpretation of Ms Hassan Nahon in relation to 1830 transparency, because, as I have said to her, the issue that we are dealing with – and in fact the Leader of the Opposition then usefully got up and demonstrated it for me, this question that he said, which is the post-Greek issue and Gibraltar Capital Assets and Credit Finance Company Limited. That information is out there, and they have got it because I give it to them. So can they at least please acknowledge in the context of what they are saying that this Government is 1835 giving more information than any Government in the history of Gibraltar in respect of the Government companies – two of them in particular, Gibraltar Capital Assets and Credit Finance Company Ltd? And the information that we do not give in respect of Credit Finance Company Ltd – the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, who is often the one up asking for it, knows that it is impossible for us to give, because it is who is Credit Finance lending to, how much have you lent 1840 to them, what is the interest rate you are charging. It is nonsensical for him to ask for that information, and he must not get away with using our inability to reply to that, because of confidentiality of the borrower, as an attempt to suggest that something is not transparent.

The best alternative example is the Royal Bank of Scotland and Lloyds Bank – which is owned primarily by the British taxpayer in the same way as Credit Finance is owned primarily by the 1845 Government of Gibraltar – not being able to tell you what they are lending to whom. So the nonsense that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is perpetuating by that argument, and which the hon. Lady should not fall for and neither should anybody else in this community, is that he gets up and says, if he were in another Parliament, ‘Theresa, I have seen the accounts of the Royal Bank of Scotland – what is the amount of lending in Gibraltar, who has it been lent to 1850 and how much is the interest?’ He would get exactly the same answer from Theresa May that he gets from Fabian Picardo. It may be a Government-owned company, but I cannot give him the information because of covenants of confidentiality. But you have online a lot of information about Credit Finance Company Ltd and you have in your possession already a lot of information 1855 in relation to Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd and you have been invited to a meeting on that. But I will tell you what you do not have and what you did not defend in the General Election or in the by-election when you stood with the GSD, and what you have not sought is the information in relation to the companies that they established – because they did not even file the accounts.

They did not even comply with the law to file accounts. So the hon. Lady will find me not able to agree with her in respect of this amount of transparency, because if she were at least to say, in 1860 the context of the way she puts her argument, ‘I accept that you are giving more than they gave, but I would like you to give more,’ fair enough. That is an argument which then I would meet by saying, ‘We invite you to a meeting on one, and the information we are not giving on the other is the confidential information.’ (Interjection by Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon) Fair enough. But it is different, in my respectful submission, to simply say, ‘I believe in transparency – you should give 1865 more.’

The hon. Gentleman then got up and told us that the hon. Lady had spoken because she had no alternative than to defend the record that she had defended at the General Election and the by-election and the position she had put. I think he is trying to somehow cast the net wide enough that she is stuck with all of the historical baggage that she has now unstuck herself from, 1870 so that at least there is not a rising star on the Opposition benches who can speak freely without historical baggage and he is stuck with the excess luggage of 16 years of GSD Government, which is really enough baggage that he would not be accepted on a British Airways flight. But he says this is an issue that loomed large at the General Election. It loomed large because Credit Finance, of course, had been created by the time of the General Election and was one of the central 1875 pillars of what we were told was a coming GSD return to Government. ‘We lost,’ he said, but he did not lose, Mr Speaker – he lost with, on average, less than half the votes. If he wants transparency on figures, we are talking about over 10,000 and an average of about four. People believed the Government was right, therefore, in many of the things that we were doing, and in particular this, because he said it was a central tenet of the thing. Well, it was a central tenet 1880 and we won. Don’t tell me that we won because of our designs for a new Commonwealth Park on the Upper Rock. If it was a central tenet, then the people are with us on that issue.

Then he started to refer to Greece, Mr Speaker, and I thought for one moment that he was going to do a Travolta-like turn on something. (Laughter) He has done so many U-turns in his political career, I thought we were in for a Strictly Come Dancing style spin on his toes. It is 1885 nonsense to say that Greece is what changes everything. Knowing, as I do, how his brain functions, he must have spent hours trying to work out how to try to draw a distinction between 2011 and everything that was done then being done right, and exactly the same thing being done thereafter, with more transparency and more information given out, and still not demonstrate what a political hypocrite he is to pretend that we should now do things 1890 differently. And he thought ‘Greece!’ Mr Speaker, he needs to watch that movie again, because he really was not able to sound persuasive in any material respect in any of the arguments that he made.

The figures that he quoted – and in my view, Mr Speaker, you rightly have tried to prevent us from having a debate on the level of public debt; I will only say this – are wrong. They have now 1895 spent quite a considerable period of time, as you have detected, trying to pretend that the gross debt of Gibraltar is £1.1 billion. It is utter nonsense. I have enough of a high regard for him as a 1900 professional – not as a politician, and I always try and divide the two – that even he cannot, as a politician, believe that the numbers that he is giving are true. I have to accept that he therefore thinks that he can pull the wool over people’s eyes and pretend to somehow persuade some people that that is true, but we are not going to fall into the trap of being ostriches and allowing him to do that. We are going to challenge him every time he tries to pretend that that is the case, and we will demonstrate that that is not true.

1905 Because he would like to forget, Mr Speaker, in the analysis that he is doing and does, the amounts – it was about two hundred, let’s not get into it – of the Savings Bank bonds that they had when they were in Government, because when they do their calculations they try to ignore all of those things, and the company debt that they had when they were in Government. Or doesn’t he remember the debate that we had about fitness to govern when I was Leader of the Opposition? (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Mr Speaker, the Hon. Gentleman is saying the figure of £24 million in bonds in the Savings Bank. Okay, I am delighted that he has given that figure. Given that we are going to have another debate on this subject later, where it appears that figures may be more of an amenable issue and they may be mentioned, I will leave it to then, but we are going to have a lot of fun with £24 million, Mr Speaker.

1915 It is absolutely right that the Government should come to this House not just to deal with the motion put by the Hon. Mr Clinton, which we will deal with later, but to actually put a positive motion asserting the position that has been accepted for the past 21 years in the interpretation of the Constitution and the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act and continue to assert that that is the correct position to take. It is absolute nonsense to pretend by motion to change the meaning of a principal and overriding enactment like a Constitution or to think that by motion one can change the meaning of a law. Therefore, Mr Speaker, the Government was not just hijacking a motion, the Government was acting entirely properly in bringing a motion affirming the interpretation actions and accounting of this nation from 1996 onwards under its former Chief Minister, my predecessor – for whom I have a lot of respect but I had very little regard for much of what he did in Government – and every Financial Secretary and Accountant General since, and to deprecate an attempt to do the opposite by somebody who has been in this Parliament for months.

1925 And therefore, Mr Speaker, pleased that there will be a division on this vote. I commend this motion to the House. (Banging on desks)

1930 Mr Speaker: I now put the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Chief Minister. Do you want the Clerk to call a division?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, I mean, Mr Speaker, as I understand it, the division has been called for by Mr Clinton but it is seconded by me.

1935 Mr Speaker: Very well.

Order of the Day

GOVERNMENT MOTIONS

Old age pensions and survivor's benefits – Uprating from 1st August 2015 approved

Minister for Business and Employment (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

That this House approve by resolution, pursuant to section 46 of the Social Security (Open Long-Term Benefits Scheme) Act 1997, the making of the Social Security (Open Long-Term Benefits Scheme) (Amendment of Benefits) (No. 2) Order 2016.

Mr Speaker, this Order seeks to amend the Social Security (Open Long-Term Benefits Scheme) Act 1997 by increasing the rate of old age pensions and survivor's benefit by 1.6% with effect from 1st August 2015, which represents the annual increase for that year.

10 In previous years, old age pensions and survivor's benefits have been uprated in line with the annual increase in the general index of retail prices. The year prior, the rise in the index of retail prices was 0.1% over the year and would therefore have represented a very low increase. Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar therefore decided to apply the same pensions increase of 1.6% as was implemented in August 2014.

15 Accordingly, the full monthly pension for a single person will rise from £431.87 to £438.78, and for a married couple from £647.85 to £658.22.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in terms of the motion moved by the Hon. the Minister for Business and Employment. Does anybody want to speak on the motion?

20 I now put the question in the terms of the motion proposed by the Hon. the Minister for Business and Employment. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Old age pensions and survivor's benefits –
Uprating from 1st August 2016 approved

Clerk: The Hon. the Minister for Business and Employment.

Minister for Business and Employment (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

That this House approve by resolution, pursuant to section 46 of the Social Security (Open Long-Term Benefits Scheme) Act 1997, the making of the Social Security (Open Long-Term Benefits Scheme) (Amendment of Benefits) (No. 2) Order 2016.

25 Mr Speaker, this Order seeks to amend the Social Security (Open Long-Term Benefits Scheme) Act 1997 by increasing the rate of old age pensions and survivor's benefit by 0.4% with effect from 1st August 2016, which represents the annual increase for this year.

Accordingly, the full monthly pension for a single person will rise from £438.78 to £440.54, and for a couple from £658.22 to £660.85.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the motion?

I will put the motion in the terms moved by the Hon. the Minister for Business and Employment. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Magistrates' Poor Fund (Repeal) Bill 2016 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: Bills – First and Second Reading.

35 A Bill for an Act to repeal the Magistrates' Poor Fund Act and make provisions for the dissolution of the charitable trust constituted by such Act.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

40 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to repeal the Magistrates' Poor Fund Act and make provision for the dissolution of the charitable trust constituted by such Act be now read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now propose that an Act to repeal the Magistrates' Poor Fund Act and make provision for the dissolution of the charitable trust constituted by such Act, be read a first time.

45 Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Magistrates Poor Fund (Repeal) Act 2016.

Magistrates' Poor Fund (Repeal) Bill 2016 –
Second Reading approved

50 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill for the Magistrates' Poor Fund Repeal Act now be read a second time.

This Bill repeals the Magistrates' Poor Fund Act and transfers the funding held by that fund to the John Mackintosh Trust, which is the sole contributor to the fund in any event.

55 This Bill is presented to Parliament by the Government, as the members of the board of trustees of the Magistrates' Poor Fund are of the opinion that the fund has outlived its original purpose and that the current costs of its administration outweigh the benefits that the fund is able to provide as a separate legal entity.

As the fund is a statutory body, this change may only be effected by means of an Act of Parliament. I therefore commend the Bill to the House.

60 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to repeal the Magistrates' Poor Fund Act and make provision for the dissolution of the charitable trust constituted by such Act be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Magistrates' Poor Fund (Repeal) Act 2016.

Magistrates' Poor Fund (Repeal) Bill 2016 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken later today, if all hon. Members agree.

70 Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Mental Health Bill 2016 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to make provision with respect to the reception, care and treatment of mentally disordered persons; the management of the personal welfare, property and affairs of persons who lack capacity; and for connected purposes.

75 The Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to make provision with respect to the reception, care and treatment of mentally disordered persons, the management of the personal welfare, property and affairs of persons who lack capacity, and for connected purposes, be read a first time.

Mr Speaker, I sent a letter to you dated 12th September and I will be moving an amendment to a clause at Committee Stage.

85 Mr Speaker: I now propose the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision with respect to the reception, care and treatment of mentally disordered persons, the management of the personal welfare, property and affairs of persons who lack capacity, and for connected purposes, be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Mental Health Act 2016.

Mental Health Bill 2016 –
Second Reading approved

90 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

In apologising for the length of my contribution, I justify it by saying that this is a landmark Bill which will change the direction of the way we treat fellow citizens with mental health problems in several fundamental ways.

95 The Bill is primarily concerned with the circumstances in which a person with a mental disorder can be detained for treatment for that disorder. It sets out the processes which must be followed and the safeguards for patients to ensure that they are not inappropriately detained or treated. The Bill ensures that people with serious mental disorders which threaten their health or safety, or the safety of the public, can be treated where it is necessary to prevent them from harming themselves or others.

100 The Bill is divided into 10 parts, which I will deal with in turn.

Part 1 of the Bill contains two important new definitions, which are ‘mental disorder’ and ‘approved clinicians’. Mental disorder is defined in the Bill as any disorder or disability of the mind. This single definition applies throughout the Act and it abolishes the four categories of mental disorder currently found in the old Mental Health Act, which are, namely, mental illness, 105 arrested or incomplete development of mind, psychopathic disorder, and any other disorder or disability of the mind. The single definition of mental disorder will also mean that a patient’s risk and needs should determine when and what action is taken and not the label that happens to be applied to a person’s mental disorder. Furthermore, clause 1(7) now has a single exclusion, stating that dependence on alcohol or drugs is not considered to be a disorder or disability of the mind for the purposes of the definition of mental disorder. Furthermore, you will also find a 110 new definition of the responsible medical officer, which is that of the approved or responsible clinician. This change potentially opens up the role of the responsible medical officer to a wider range of professionals, which has until now been restricted to psychiatrists. The approved or responsible clinician need not be restricted to medical practitioners and may be extended to practitioners from other professions, such as nursing, psychology, occupational therapy and social work. 115

Moving on to Part 2 of the Bill, one of the fundamental powers of the Act is the admission for treatment of a person suffering from mental disorder. While being a fundamental power, it is also a significant incursion into private life and liberty. The criteria for admission contained in 120 clause 3 of the Bill have been revised and tightened so that, in addition to what are the current criteria, the application for detention now has to prove that the treatment can only be provided if the patient is detained, so that if it can be given by an informal admission that option should be exercised instead. Furthermore, there is the additional test of appropriate medical treatment, which emphasises the fundamental principle that detention must always be for a clinical 125 purpose. It is designed to ensure that no one will be brought or kept under compulsion unless suitable treatment is available. Admission for treatment is for up to six months in the first place and can be renewed periodically thereafter. An application for treatment under this clause can be made by the patient’s nearest relative or an approved mental health professional. Clause 5

130 deals with applications for compulsory detention under clauses 2 or 3 to be made in respect of patients who are already receiving treatment in hospital as informal patients. It contains a necessary holding power to the nurse in charge of the ward to detain an informal patient for up to six hours if it is considered that the patient might leave before there is time to complete an application under clause 2 or 3. This part also deals with a new power of guardianship. Clauses 7 135 to 10 of the Bill deal with guardianship. The Bill introduces a new alternative to applying for admission to hospital for treatment, and that is the power to make a guardianship application.
The application can be made by the patient's nearest relative or an approved mental health professional, and the person named as guardian may be the Care Agency or another person approved by the Care Agency. Guardianship is appropriate for a small number of mentally 140 disordered people who do not require treatment in hospital either formally or informally but who nevertheless need close supervision and some control in the community as a consequence of their mental disorder. In the UK, where guardianship has existed for some time, it is invoked predominantly for mentally ill people who are over 65 years of age.

Mr Speaker, please note that, as commented in my letter to you of 12th September, I will be moving an amendment to clause 14 of the Bill at Committee Stage following discussion with the 145 Care Agency. Clause 14 specifically places a duty on the approved mental health professional to make an application for admission to hospital or guardianship. Since guardianship falls within the ambit of the Care Agency, the amendment provides that, where necessary, the Care Agency shall prompt the approved mental health professional to make arrangements to consider the patient's case on their behalf.

150 The Bill also introduces for the first time the power to make community treatment orders. At present, most patients detained under the Mental Health Act are detained in hospital, but there has been, for some time, a desire to bring more community-based mental health services. There is scope for some patients to be treated under compulsory powers but to live in the community, not in hospital. For suitable patients, the community treatment order meets the need for a 155 framework to their treatment and safe management in the community. To be eligible for a community treatment order, patients must have had an initial period of detention and treatment in hospital. This means their medical condition and treatment would be well established before they go into the community. It would be for the clinicians, working closely with the approved mental health professionals, to determine if a patient meets the necessary 160 criteria to be put into a community treatment order. Under community treatment orders, patients can be recalled to hospital for treatment if they need to be. Clause 18 sets out the conditions to which a community treatment patient will be subject and clause 21 sets out when the power to recall can be exercised. A patient will be admitted to hospital in pursuance of an application for admission for treatment and will only now be detained for an initial period of six 165 months. The period can be renewed for another six months and thereafter for a period of one year at a time. Currently, the initial period of detention is for one year with renewal for another year and two years thereafter. The new periods of detention allow patients to be examined more often before detention is renewed. The test for renewing detention is also more stringent now, in line with the renewed criteria for admission to treatment.

170 Another significant change introduced by this Bill is Part 3, regarding consent to treatment.
There are currently no provisions in the Mental Health Act on whether a detained patient can be treated without his consent. The purpose of this part is to clarify the extent to which treatment for mental disorder can be imposed on detained patients in hospitals. It sets out three main categories of treatment, where, due to the seriousness of the treatment, consent and/or a 175 second independent opinion must be obtained before treatment can be provided. Clause 45 deals with the surgical operation for destroying brain tissue or for destroying the functioning of brain tissue, and any other treatment specified by regulations. This form of treatment is extremely rare and the most serious form of treatment. Clause 46 deals with the administration of medicine to an in-patient in hospital where three months or more have elapsed since he was 180 first administered medicine during the current period of detention. Clause 47 deals with 185 electroconvulsive therapy and medicine administered as part of that therapy. All these ensure strict criteria under clinical direction. Where a patient needs to be treated urgently in order to save his life or prevent a serious deterioration of his condition, clause 51 allows the safeguards provided by clauses 45, 46 and 47 to be overridden, but only in the very limited circumstances prescribed. In respect of any other form of treatment not being a form of treatment to which 185 clauses 45, 46 or 47 apply, clause 53 sets out how and when such treatment can be administered and the consent required.

Part 4 of the Bill regulates the treatment of a community patient. It is the equivalent of Part 3 on consent to treatment, but for community patients. Such patients can only be given treatment 190 if they consent, or, if they lack the capacity to consent, do not actively object. Treatment can only be given in emergencies to a mentally incapacitated patient who resists it. This part therefore provides authority to treat a community patient, sets out the conditions that need to be satisfied before relevant treatment can be provided to a community patient who lacks capacity to consent, and the criteria that must be satisfied before relevant treatment can be 195 given in an emergency.

Part 5 of the Bill deals mainly with the management of property and affairs of patients and the personal welfare of the patient. The core jurisdiction of the Court of Protection has been expanded to include the power to make substitute decisions or to appoint a deputy, if this is in their best interest, for persons lacking the required mental capacity to make decisions for 200 themselves about their personal welfare. Formerly, it was limited to just their property and affairs. This part applies in relation to a person who lacks capacity as defined in clauses 86 to 89.
Clause 65 contains the core jurisdiction of the Court of Protection. It gives the court power to make decisions for persons lacking the required mental capacity to make decisions for themselves about either their personal welfare or their property and affairs, or to appoint a 205 deputy to do so if this is in their best interest. There are, however, restrictions as to what a deputy can and cannot do under clause 70. Clause 66 gives the court the power to make declarations as to whether a person has mental capacity and whether an Act or proposed Act was or would be lawful. Clauses 67 and 68 set out a non-exhaustive but indicative list of matters, relating to the personal welfare and property of a person who lacks capacity, that come within 210 the jurisdiction of the court. The powers of the court to make an order in relation to the personal welfare of a person who lacks capacity includes, but is not limited to, matters such as deciding where a person who lacks the capacity is to live, making an order prohibiting a person from having contact with that person, giving or refusing consent for treatment, and directing that a different person take over the responsibility for that person's healthcare. Finally clause 78 215 sets out a list of matters that are excluded for the purposes of this part – that is decisions that cannot be made on behalf of a person, such as consenting to a marriage or civil partnership.

Part 6 of the Bill identifies the occasions on which a patient or his nearest relative may make an application to the Mental Health Review Tribunal. It also represents a fundamental change in the mental health regime, in particular as regards safeguarding the rights of patients, as the 220 circumstances in which a patient can apply to the tribunal are increased. There is also now a duty on the authority to refer patients to the tribunal where they have not exercised their right to apply to the tribunal and the period of six months since their first admission to hospital has expired. With regard to patients whose authority for detention has been renewed, there is a duty to refer patients if three years have passed and the tribunal has not reviewed the case in 225 that time. This part also makes provision for the first time for applications to the tribunal concerning restricted patients and the powers of the tribunals with regard to these types of patients in the light with the European Convention on Human Rights requirements. The tribunal has the power to discharge patients from hospital, guardianship or community treatment orders. Under clause 96, the tribunal must direct the discharge of a patient if there are not 230 satisfied as to any one or more of the criteria as set out in the various sub-clauses. This is a significant change from the current test, whereby the tribunal may direct that the patient be discharged if they are satisfied that he is not suffering from mental illness, etc. The burden is 235 currently placed on the patient to prove that the criteria justifying his detention in hospital for treatment no longer exists. UK case law held that this was incompatible with Articles 5(1) and 5(4) of the European Convention on Human Rights, since these Articles require the tribunal to be positively satisfied that all the criteria justifying the patient's detention continue to exist before refusing to order a patient's discharge. As a result, the law in England and Wales was amended and the test there is the same as in this Bill, which is that the tribunal shall direct the discharge if not satisfied that the criteria for detention in hospital continue to exist.

240 Part 7 of the Bill deals with the various functions and powers of the approved mental health professional, the Care Agency and the Minister. Clause 106 allows the Minister to issue a code of practice for the guidance of practitioners, managers and the staff of the hospital. We are currently finalising the code of practice and will be issuing it when the Act is brought into force.
Clause 107 deals with the approval of persons to act, for the purpose of the Bill, as approved 245 mental health professionals and approved clinicians.

Part 8 of the Bill sets out the offences under the Act, which are those of forging a document or making a false statement, ill treatment of a patient, assisting patients to absent themselves without leave and obstructing a person from performing his or her functions under the Act.

250 Part 9 replaces the current system of visitors as contained in sections 69 to 72 of the Mental Health Act. It creates a Mental Health Board, which is an independent body whose role is to satisfy itself as to the treatment of patients and to report any ill treatment or improper detention, similar to the Prison Board and separate from the Mental Health Appeal Tribunal. The board must meet at least once a month and each member must take it in turn to visit the hospital and hear requests and complaints made by patients. It also has to provide an annual 255 report to the Minister of its activities and findings. It shall consist of at least five members and must include a lawyer and a doctor. The functions, as outlined in clause 115, include satisfying themselves as to the state of the hospital and treatment of patients; making enquiries into the care, treatment and detention in hospital of a patient; and bringing matters to the attention of the Minister. The board also has the power, under clause 115, to refer a patient to the tribunal 260 and require the production of any documents relating to the detention or treatment of a patient.

Part 10 is the final part of the Bill, which deals with various matters, including imposing a duty on the authority under the Act to give information to detained patients, community patients and the nearest relatives of patients. This information includes the rights of the applicant to apply to 265 the tribunal, the effect of certain provisions of the Act, and of providing the nearest relative with a copy of such information.

Mr Speaker, this Bill has been the result of many hours of hard work by a committee of professionals, mainly from the GHA, with Care Agency involvement and discussion also with the Ministry for Justice. I have had the pleasure to chair that committee. I also have to acknowledge 270 the work of the Gibraltar Law Officers, whose work too has shown extraordinary dedication and incredible insight to the issues relating to mental health. I thank them all for this work, and all in Gibraltar who are affected by mental health, which is probably all of us, are indebted to them.

With that, Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

275 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill? The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, thank you.

280 This Bill which comes before us today was the subject of a Command Paper issued on 19th February 2015, and I for one congratulate the Minister for bringing it onto the agenda today. It is an important piece of legislation, without doubt, which will affect the most vulnerable in our society.

Yesterday, I had the opportunity to meet, with my colleague the Hon. Mr Llamas, members of Clubhouse, and of course they deal, at the front line, with many individuals who are affected one 285 way or another by mental health issues. This legislation will go a long way to helping, and is obviously a modernising piece of legislation. One thing I noticed the Minister mention is that there is a code of practice in development for, I imagine, the health professionals and people in agencies, etc. I would make perhaps a suggestion, from our conversation with Clubhouse, not to forget the NGOs and the voluntary organisation. Also, I note that the code of practice is going to 290 come in or be finalised more or less at the same time when the Bill comes into force. Again, purely a suggestion, but I think it might be helpful if there was some thought given to perhaps a training session, not just internally but obviously for NGOs, in terms of the practical effect of what is a very complex piece of legislation, as we can all see, running to 206 pages, and I think they will probably be well received.

295 Also, a final thought on this is that perhaps, given that we are dealing with the most vulnerable in our society – and I know, for example, for things like the Data Protection Act we have produced little leaflets for people to read and understand what their rights are under Data Protection – whether the Government will give some consideration to some kind of information booklet – I am sure they would in due course – in advance of the legislation coming into force, so 300 that people will have access in a very simple way, without perhaps having to seek the aid of a lawyer, to understand what their rights are in a simple booklet.

Again, I thank the Minister. I think on this side of the House we will not have a problem with this Bill. Obviously, we have not had sight of the feedback you had on the Command Paper; but, as I have discussed with the Minister, we obviously take it in good faith that he has taken on 305 board any concerns that any body that made representations had in the drafting of this Bill.

I hope the Minister will take that as just some constructive suggestions that he may or may not take on board. Overall, I think this is an important piece of legislation which will protect the most vulnerable in our society.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

315 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can I ask the hon. Gentleman what he said at the beginning, regarding drugs and the connection with the Mental Health Act with drugs, please?

Mr Speaker: I call on the mover to reply.

320 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Mr Clinton for supporting the Bill, which has been a long time coming. I am very pleased to have been able to have brought it here, because I know that some of the mental health professionals, before this Government came into office, were struggling with convincing the Government at the time regarding certain provisions. So I am very pleased that the ‘official Opposition’, to coin the phrase that the Chief Minister used this morning, supports it.

325 In answer, first of all, to the hon. Lady, what this is saying is that being under the influence of drugs and alcohol is not considered a mental disorder. That is the distinction. There may be similarities in symptoms and behaviour, but is not de facto a mental illness. That is the difference that is being made.

330 If I may just answer some of the points that the hon. Member made, which I take as constructive, some of them are, in fact, things that we are already envisaging and I will explain.
The Command Paper had considerable interest and we had responses from some of the NGOs that the hon. Member has mentioned, and these were taken on board. There was also a delegation from the Council of Europe, who coincidentally came to Gibraltar just as we were preparing the Bill, and some of their recommendations have also been taken on board; and 335 some retired psychiatrists, including Dr Cecil Montegriffo, who was for many years the psychiatrist for Gibraltar, also made his contribution, as did members of the Mental Health Appeals Tribunal. So the feedback was good, it was all positive, and most of the matters were incorporated in the drafts.

340 Regarding the code of practice, this is now being circulated in near final draft form. There are a number of meetings being held with the mental health team that prepared the Act, and I find it a very useful way of interpreting all these hundreds of pages so that practitioners can use it. I explained that once that is approved there will be a period of induction, which has already been prepared, of mental health professionals and there will be sharing with those charities – he mentioned Clubhouse, there is also Mental Health Society and Psychological Support Group who 345 work in this – so that they are also aware of the benefits that will be forthcoming from it. So, very much so.

The code of practice itself is probably too complex a document to give out as a leaflet – although it will not be hidden, it will be publicly available – but the point of having a leaflet which will explain some of the basic tenets of the code of practice I think is a worthwhile 350 suggestion, which I will certainly take up.

I think, Mr Speaker, that that answers all the points that have been made and I genuinely welcome what I feel is widespread support from both sides of the House for something which will no doubt benefit all those of us who at some time in our lives will have ourselves, family or 355 friends affected by mental health issues.

A Member: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision with respect of the reception, care and treatment of mentally disordered persons, the management 360 of the personal welfare, property and affairs of persons who lack capacity, and for connected purposes, be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Mental Health Act 2016.

Mental Health Bill 2016 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
365 Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Animals and Birds (Amendment) (No.2) Bill 2016 –

370 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Animal and Birds Act.
The Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
375 Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Animals and Birds Act be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Animals and Birds Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

380 Clerk: The Animals and Birds (Amendment) (No. 2) Act 2016.

Animals and Birds (Amendment) (No.2) Bill 2016 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

In March of this year the Government announced that we would be bringing in legislation making dog DNA profiling compulsory in order to combat dog fouling. This Bill, together with the amendments that will subsequently be made to the Animals and Birds Rules 2004, will allow us to carry this out.

The Environmental Agency has been working in schools together with other parts of the public service, including the Royal Gibraltar Police, on increasing awareness of the dangers of dog fouling and has been conducting joint patrols with the RGP in dog fouling hot spots. CCTV cameras have also been deployed to deal with this problem. These measures have sometimes resulted in less dog fouling in the areas where such patrols or cameras have been introduced, but irresponsible pet owners then just move elsewhere. DNA profiling will allow us to follow them and allow us to overcome this problem by letting us identify the registered owner of the dog responsible for the dog fouling.

395 Clause 2(2) of the Bill updates an out-of-date reference to the Order designating the Gibraltar Nature Reserve which was recently published.

Clause 2(3) increases the penalty to level 3 if there is a contravention of subsection (1) – that is the dog is not registered or does not hold a valid and subsisting licence, or has not been vaccinated within the last 12 months.

400 Clause 2(4) makes it compulsory, prior to registration or licensing, for a dog to have a blood sample taken by a competent person. This will enable us to build up a database of all dogs registered and licensed, and such a database is fundamental to the operation of the scheme. Since all licences must be renewed yearly by 1st January, we should have a DNA record of all dogs registered and licensed soon after that date next year. It is against this database that a sample of dog faeces collected by the authorised officers will be matched against the registered owner of a dog. The offence of failing to pick up after your dog is contained in rule 12 of the Animals and Birds Rules 2004. Amendments are to be made to that rule so that a first offence will attract a penalty at level 3 and any subsequent offence will make the offender liable to a fine up to level 4. However, if a match is made against a registered owner, he or she will be issued with a fixed penalty notice of £250 in the first instance. Failure to pay may result in proceedings being instituted.

410 Clause 2(5) sets out who is qualified to take a blood sample and, once obtained, the sample shall be entered in the dog register, which is the database that holds the information relating to a dog, which contains the name and address of the owner or keeper of the dog.

415 Clause 2(6) contains some housekeeping provisions.

Clause 2(7) amends the schedule which contains the list of persons who are authorised officers for the purposes of the Act to include officers of the Department of the Environment. This will allow environmental protection officers to enforce the provisions of the Act.

Finally, Mr Speaker, I commend this Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill? The Hon. Lawrence Llamas.

425 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, first I must thank the Hon. Minister Cortes for sending me a copy of the draft Bill before actually gazetting it, in order to ensure that any recommendations that I wanted to include or recommend to him were dealt with before we published the actual draft.

430 Earlier this year, the Government also gazetted the increase of dog registration and licence fees by 300% and 400% respectively, coming into effect as from 1st November 2016. We understand that this has been done in anticipation of the DNA profiling policy being brought to the House today. In the amendment today it is welcoming to see the summary conviction level fine for dog owners who keep unlicensed dogs being increased from level 2 to level 3 of the standard scale. Nevertheless, it would be equally justifiable to increase in tandem the levels of fines imposed to those successfully convicted of dog fouling on our streets, which currently stands at level 1 on first conviction and level 2 or three months in imprisonment for second and subsequent convictions. This side of the House supports initiatives and policies to curtail antisocial behaviour. Other jurisdictions which have implemented this policy have reported that this behaviour has decreased by the mere fact that the policy exists. But, above all, we would expect to see an offenders-led policy and moneys received in relation to fines being brought into the initial cost of DNA profiling, thus allowing moneys paid by the responsible dog owners to be invested back into the dog-owning community once the DNA profiling has been satisfied.

440 Thank you.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on this Bill?

I call the mover to reply.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I thank the Hon. Mr Llamas for supporting this Bill. I note his desire to see fines increase further. We have discussed this before at Question Time. I am not rejecting the suggestion, and what I said at the time is that I think we are going to see how this works to see if there is a need to do so; but that is still there and has not been discarded.

450

I would like to say that certainly the increase in licence fees has been carried out just to give us a few months lead in for newly registered dogs before we implement the profiling on 1st January; and, as I think I have also said before, the new licence fees will, in fact, cover all the costs that we expect to have in relation to the DNA testing. So it will not be a burden on the general taxpayer but on dog owners, and we must consider that.

455

As a former dog owner – and not ‘former’ because I do not like dogs any more, but former because my time does not allow me to look after them properly and it would be irresponsible to just have them locked away – I feel that it is important that we should assume responsibility for our actions. Therefore, I think that this will not only be welcomed by both sides of this House but also by the community at large. Even the irresponsible dog owners who are currently not perhaps behaving as they should will ultimately welcome it, because, after all, they too walk our streets and they too will benefit from it becoming free from dog fouling.

460

I think, Mr Speaker, I have covered all the points, and I have nothing further to add. (Banging on desks)

465

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Animals and Birds Act be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Animals and Birds (Amendment) (No. 2) Act 2016.

Animals and Birds (Amendment) (No.2) Bill 2016 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
470 Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Employment (Amendment) Bill 2016 –
First Reading approved

475 Clerk: We move now to Bill number 8 on the Order Paper. This is a Bill for an Act to amend the Employment Act.
The Hon. the Minister for Business and Employment.

Minister for Business and Employment (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to 480 move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Employment Act be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Employment Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

485 Clerk: The Employment Amendment Act 2016.

Employment (Amendment) Bill 2016 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Business and Employment (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

The Bill amends the Employment Act by introducing a new statutory framework for the industrial tribunal that will now be known as the Employment Tribunal.

490 The full extent of the reform can only be appreciated by review of the supporting Rules, Regulations and Order that supplement these enabling amendments to the Employment Act.

As the House may be aware, copies of the final drafts of the supporting legislation were circulated to the various stakeholders that were extensively consulted throughout all drafting stages of the reform process. I would like to take this opportunity, therefore, to thank the Bar Council, in particular Mr Kenneth Navas and Mr Andrew Cardona, who have made a tremendous 495 contribution in assisting us to reach a legislative architecture that is fair and that works for employers and employees. I want to place on the record as well my thanks to Gabrielle O'Hagan of Triay Stagnetto Neish, the Gibraltar Chamber of Commerce, the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses, Unite the Union, the Gibraltar General and Clerical Association and the Gibraltar 500 Teachers Union, for their valuable contributions. I also wish to thank the Hon. the Chief Justice for his views and advice and for unstintingly giving of his time to discuss the various aspects of our wide-ranging and substantive reforms.

Mr Speaker, in debating the general principles and merits of the Bill, I highlight the main clauses that will usher this very important review of the administration of justice in relation to 505 employment matters. The amendment to section 12 of the Employment Act in essence widens the enabling provisions of the Act to create the supporting Rules, Regulations and Order. There are consequential amendments that have been made to sections 13 and 14 of the Act so that references to 'Industrial Tribunal' are replaced with 'Employment Tribunal'.

510 Clauses 14A and 14B introduce new terminology for originating applications, now known as claim forms, and for complaints, which will be known as claims.

515 Clause 14C introduces a new mechanism for the appointment of chairpersons. This has been substantively revised. Chairpersons will still be appointed with the Minister with responsibility for employment acting on the advice of the Judicial Services Commission (JSC). The JSC will take into account a prospective chairperson's relevant experience, qualifications and background to serve as a chairperson to the Employment Tribunal. Once elected, the Minister with responsibility for Employment will formalise their appointments by notice in the Gazette, and thereafter it is the secretary to the Employment Tribunal that will allocate a chairperson for each case from the panel of appointed chairpersons available to preside over cases. This now means that the Minister will no longer select chairpersons to preside over a specific case and codifies the practice instituted to ensure allocation of cases by the Industrial Tribunal secretary by strict rota.

520 Clause 14F is the enabling provision that allows the Employment Tribunal (Remuneration Regulations) 2016 to be created.

525 Clause 14G affirms that litigants in person may appear before an Employment Tribunal themselves, or that they may choose to have a lawyer, a family member or even a friend to make representations to the Employment Tribunal on their behalf.

Clause 71 has been amended so that the basic and compensatory awards are prescribed by regulation, namely the Employment Tribunal (Calculation of Compensation Regulations) 2016.

530 Clause 91 repeals the Industrial Tribunal (Calculation of Compensation Regulations) 1992.

Clause 92 prescribes the savings and transitional provisions that apply to ongoing disputes, which will continue to be governed under the jurisdiction of the previous rules and regulations.

Mr Speaker, having set out the main principles of the Bill, I turn to the subsidiary legislation that forms an integral part of the Government's reforms.

535 The Employment Tribunal (Constitution and Procedure) Rules 2016 set out how an Employment Tribunal operates and how a claim is managed through the process. The rules implement changes to procedures in relation to costs; prescribed forms; determinations without a hearing; preliminary hearings; final hearings; claims; conciliation by mediators; dismissal and rejection of a claim or response; case management orders, including striking out claims and unless orders; withdrawing claims; decisions and reasons. Further, new rules have been introduced for the evidence to be given by witnesses in person, as well as timetabling, non-attendance and privacy and restrictions on disclosure. The rules empower chairpersons to issue cost orders, preparation time orders and waste of cost orders. I am confident that the rules will make the operation and decision making of the tribunal much more efficient and effective by ensuring consistency and fairness in the decisions of the Employment Tribunal. Furthermore, the rules have been drafted in plain English to assist litigants in person.

545 The Employment Tribunal (Forms) Regulations prescribe the claim form and response form that a party in dispute needs to file with the Employment Tribunal prior to the dispute being processed. The forms will be accompanied by an extensive set of guidelines for employees and employers and will be made available at the Employment Tribunal offices and online as soon as the rules come into effect. The guidance will also be placed on the website.

555 The Employment Tribunal (Calculation of Compensation) Regulations prescribe the method of calculation and calculating the awards that may be made by the Employment Tribunal. The regulations retain the basic and compensatory awards but there is greater guidance available to chairpersons on how to calculate these awards. The feature allows the parties in dispute to accurately assess the financial exposure or potential awards.

The Employment Tribunal (Remuneration) Regulations prescribe the amounts to be paid to chairpersons of an Employment Tribunal for sessions and judgments and the amount to be paid to mediators for hosting a mediation session between the parties in dispute.

560 Finally, the Employment Tribunal (Extension of Jurisdiction) Order enables an employee to bring a claim for damages for breach of the contract of employment or for a sum due under the contract before an Employment Tribunal if the claim arises or is outstanding on the termination of their employment.

565 Mr Speaker, the House will be pleased that the Government will not introduce fees to commence or defend proceedings. Such fees are, in the Government's view, an unreasonable and unnecessary tax on justice.

570 Further, the Ministry of Employment, in partnership with the University of Gibraltar, will offer a tailor-made course for lawyers who may be eligible for selection as chairpersons of the tribunal. This is the first time that training for Employment Tribunal chairpersons will be offered in Gibraltar. This will provide chairpersons who preside over employment tribunals with an opportunity to develop the knowledge and understanding of the new laws, procedures and rules. The training will include topics on managing and solving the problems commonly encountered in assessing evidence, structuring decisions, formulating reasons, and, of course, importantly, addressing litigants who appear in person.

575 This root and branch legislative review was commenced immediately upon my appointment as Employment Minister. I consider myself to have been fortunate in that appointment, given that in my previous inclination as an employment lawyer I had the benefit of appearing before industrial tribunals as counsel. In my view, this first-hand experience served me in good stead to lead and oversee the reform – a reform that, like with everything else in the administration of the affairs of our great nation, I could not, of course, have achieved alone.

580 Although I have already thanked our stakeholders for their views and assistance, I wish to highlight that their respective contributions have produced what I consider to be a working balance between the rights of employees and employers; a balance that enables the Employment Tribunal to deal with cases fairly and justly, which is the overriding objective that underpins the Employment Tribunal Rules.

585 All in all, and in view of the Government, these much needed reforms will provide a clear adjudication process to the benefit of the parties before the tribunal. The wholesale review also modernises the legal process and provides chairpersons with robust and efficient case management powers. In accordance with our electoral pledge, compulsory mediation is introduced at no cost to the parties in dispute, with the hope that some parties will settle their disputes without the need for a full hearing.

590 I also wish to thank my Ministry's legal counsel, here present, John Paul Fa, for his excellent work in preparing the different pieces of legislation. I am proud to have led in this extensive reform which will make access to justice easier, expeditious and fairer.

595 Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill? The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

600 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, this Bill will be met with the support of this side of the House and I too would like to congratulate the team who have been working with the Minister in relation to this matter, and Mr Fa, personally. It is clearly something that needed to be done and is being done.

605 In relation to the wider point that we would like to make in respect of access to justice that was made by the Minister, obviously our views are that there should be a combined courts and tribunal service under one head, but I just simply make that point in relation to a combined courts and tribunal service. But this Bill will receive and the regulations thereto will receive support from this side of the House.

Mr Speaker: Does the hon mover wish to reply?

610 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I?

Mr Speaker: Sorry, yes, fine.

615 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just to make the point that, yes, as my hon. Friend Mr Phillips has said, it will be supported from this side of the House, and I congratulate as well the Hon. the Minister for what is a very good piece of legislation. But in terms of our policy, something that I would hope the hon. Gentleman does consider perhaps in due course is the establishment of a permanent chairman of the Industrial Tribunal. That is something that would improve the flow and the efficiency of the system and it is something that I commend, certainly 620 we commend on this side of the House, to the hon. Gentleman.

Of course, another policy that we advocate, and again we commend in the context of these reforms, is that there ought to be one area, we say – in fact, ideally it would be the central police station, for example – one building where you could house not only the Employment Tribunal but also all the other tribunals that we have in Gibraltar, so that they can all come within one 625 umbrella and effectively one backroom administration. We think that would certainly improve the functioning of all those tribunals.

But apart from that, commending what are our longstanding policies in relation to this and asking the hon. Gentleman to consider those, we certainly support this Bill and will be voting in favour.

630 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Gilbert Licudi.

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I just rise to deal not with the general principles of the Bill itself but with a 635 more general point on courts and tribunal service and bringing all under one umbrella. This was, in fact, the subject of a recent question that was asked in this House by Mr Phillips and in which I gave the Government's view on that. And for the reasons given by me at the time, which are clearly reflected already in Hansard, I would just repeat that the Government is not currently minded to go down the route of a general courts and tribunal service or having all the tribunals 640 under the same administrative roof. But I did give my reasons at the time and it will be recorded in Hansard. Given that the point has been raised again, I thought it was important to restate the Government's position.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr 645 Speaker, I am astonished at the interpretation of the performance of the GSD Government by the hon. Member who now leads them, because in their 15 years the only thing they did about the law was to change it against the interest of the workers by putting a cap on the amount that could be given in the basic compensation, which we were committed to removing, and the only thing they did next, when we removed it, was to express fears which were not justified and have 650 not had the effect that they thought it would have in ruining all the businesses in Gibraltar. So, if they had great interest in modernising the system it was a very tightly held secret by the GSD Government; and therefore, if they had a curtain of secrecy it was almost an iron curtain.
(Laughter)

655 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place, to thank the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition and the Hon. Mr Phillips for pointing out that they will be supporting the Bill. I am grateful to them.

In respect of the point that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition raises as to having a full-time chairperson, when we first started looking at this with a blank canvas – and of course the 660 Minister for Employment previously, Mr Bossano, and I had held discussions on it – we did approach the project with a completely open mind. After several discussions, and even after having discussed the matter with the Hon. the Chief Justice, the conclusion was arrived at that the current number of cases presently before the tribunal do not warrant a full-time 665 chairperson. The powers that are provided for in the Constitution Rules do specifically cater for deadlines in delivering judgments, by when parties need to submit statements and skeleton arguments and so on, and therefore we do not envisage that there would be any delay of backlog – as used to happen, or as does currently happen, because of the antiquated rules we have had since, I believe, 1972, where there were no deadlines by which a Chairperson had to submit the judgment or by which written decisions had to be given. These are now firmly 670 stipulated, so a case would have to be finished by a certain point, definitely. So there is no chance of a case being prolonged indefinitely. In addition, because we wanted to make sure that a person who truly did not have the means to appear before a tribunal with a lawyer, or did not feel the need to do so because in his or her mind the issue was quite clear cut ... we bend backwards to enable that to happen, so the rules specifically empower a chairperson to be able 675 to deal with a case by way of oral evidence, if it is that simple. The parties can be called in, they can give evidence and then they can be cross-examined thereafter, which, as I understand it from speaking with the Hon. Minister Bossano and indeed the Hon. Minister for Justice, used to be the case, where employment tribunals were prior seen as, if not entirely complicated, easier to deal with, and therefore you could call people in, have evidence in chief being given, then 680 lawyers being able to cross examine. That is specifically catered for, so that in simple cases you can do that without the need for skeleton arguments, disclosures, witness statements and all the panoply of documents that we are used to dealing with in the Supreme Court but may not necessarily be appropriate in an industrial tribunal.

But, sorry, to answer the issue raised by the hon. Gentleman, on wide consultation with the 685 Hon. Minister Bossano, with the Hon. the Chief Justice and with the Bar Council, all the stakeholders who have a real stake in the proper functioning of this process were all of the view that a permanent chairperson, certainly at this point in time and given the provisions of the current regulations that should make delays a thing of the past ... did not feel that a permanent Chairperson was necessary.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Employment Act be read a second time.

Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Employment Amendment Act 2016.

Employment (Amendment) Bill 2016 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for Business and Employment (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Traffic (Amendment) Bill 2016 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: We now move to Bill 10 on the Order Paper. This is a Bill for an Act to amend the Traffic Act 2005 to make further provision in respect of certain driving offences: to further provide for the use of certain devices in the prosecution of offences; amend the provisions relating to fixed penalty notices; confer powers for the issue of penalty points; make further provision in relation to driving under the influence of drink or drugs, including preliminary testing; and for connected purposes.

The Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Traffic Act 2005 to make further provision in respect of certain driving offences, to further provide for the use of certain devices in the prosecution of offences, amend the provisions relating to fixed penalty notices, confer powers for the issue of penalty points, make further provision in relation to driving under the influence of drink or drugs, including preliminary testing, and for connected purposes be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Traffic Act 2005 to make further provision in respect of certain driving offences, to further provide for the use of certain devices in the prosecution of offences, amend the provisions relating to fixed penalty notices, confer powers for the issue of penalty points, make further provision in relation to driving under the influence of drink or drugs, including preliminary testing, and for connected purposes be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Traffic Amendment Act 2016.

Traffic (Amendment) Bill 2016 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

This Bill amends the Traffic Act 2005 in order to achieve a number of purposes, which I will now set out.

In the first instance, the Bill will enable the prosecution of speeding through the use of fixed cameras, which have been installed at various locations throughout Gibraltar and which would be capable of being processed through the issue of fixed penalty notices. The speed cameras have been placed in consultation with the RGP, who are the experts on the ground when it comes to recognising speeding hotspots.

Another objective of the Bill is to amend the provisions for drinking under the influence, and this Bill introduces the power to conduct roadside testing of drivers who are suspected of being under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

The Bill also makes provision for new offences that have led to a fatality due to the driver's carelessness, including where the driver has been under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

Lastly, the Bill confirms the powers for the introduction of a penalty points regime through regulations.

With respect to the offence of speeding, section 44 has been recast in order to accommodate the possibility of being prosecuted on the basis of a prescribed device, namely a speed camera. Currently, handheld devices have been deployed by the RGP, but in principle any device may be 745 used as long as it has been prescribed. Additionally, sections 44A and 44B insert new provisions relating to the identity of the driver, and in particular the duty to provide information as to the identity of the driver, when requested to do so. Failure to provide such information is an offence in its own right.

750 In the case of fixed cameras, there is no certainty that the identity of the driver will be apparent. It is therefore necessary to have a mechanism whereby there is an element of compulsion in order to establish the facts. Section 44A makes provision for businesses that may have a fleet of vehicles and a number of drivers capable of driving these vehicles. Essentially, businesses and companies need to keep records of drivers who have been assigned specific vehicles, but if they cannot identify the driver and can prove to the court that it was reasonable 755 not to maintain records, they may avoid liability themselves as an entity.

Clause 7 effects an amendment to section 45 and clause 8 adds sections 45A and 45B and relate to instances where the use of a motor vehicle has resulted in death. The penalty for death caused by reckless or dangerous driving is increased from a maximum of five to 14 years imprisonment. Section 45A provides a separate offence where a person causes death through 760 careless or inconsiderate driving, and Section 45B where there has been careless driving and the driver was under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

Clause 10 inserts a new Part 3A and provides the Minister with powers to make regulations for the introduction and administration of a penalty points regime. The powers therein include the ability to designate what offences will attract penalty points and will allow for 765 disqualification of drivers who accumulate a certain number of points.

Clause 11 inserts sections 63A to 63F and are provisions that confer added powers to deal with breath and drugs tests for drivers. Additionally, section 63A creates an offence of driving when the amount of specified drugs exceeds a prescribed limit. The drugs and limits will be prescribed in subsidiary legislation. The amendments also confer new powers to require a 770 preliminary drugs and breath test other than in a police station, and in certain circumstances, including where there is a reasonable suspicion that a person has been driving under the influence.

There are also attendant powers of arrest and entry. In essence, these will enable the Police to require that a person undergoes a breath test or a drugs test by sweat or saliva and thereafter 775 to arrest a person who either refuses to undergo the test or fails the test itself.

Finally, Mr Speaker, at the Committee Stage I will be moving an amendment to clause 2 to provide for separate provisions of the Act to be commenced at separate times.

I commend this Bill to Parliament. (Banging on desks)

780 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill? The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I stand simply to say that Members of Her Majesty's Opposition will be voting to support this Bill, particularly the measures which will allow the 785 introduction of the fixed cameras; they are very welcome. I think particularly in Gibraltar we will see an improvement in road safety. The hot spots have been identified by the Royal Gibraltar Police, people will know where the cameras are and they will know there is no escaping a penalty if they speed in those areas. So that has to be an improvement to road safety, which is something that everyone in this House will clearly wish to support. I think the introduction of a 790 points regime is also welcome. It will hopefully curb repeat offences.

And so, overall, I congratulate the Minister on a good piece of legislation. I know I have been critical in the past about the speed with which the legislation, in particular with respect to the speed cameras, has come about, but it is very welcome at this point in time.

795 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Traffic Act 2005 to make further provision in respect of certain driving offences, to further provide for the 800 use of certain devices in the prosecution of offences, amend the provisions relating to fixed penalty notices, confer powers for the issue of penalty points, make further provision in relation to driving under the influence of drink or drugs, including preliminary testing, and for connected purposes be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Traffic Amendment Act 2016.

Traffic (Amendment) Bill 2016 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting 805 Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

810 Clerk: Committee Stage and Third Reading.
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

815 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should resolve itself into Committee to consider the following Bills clause by clause: the Magistrates' Poor Fund (Repeal) Bill 2016, the Mental Health Bill 2016, the Animals and Birds (Amendment) (No.2) Bill 2016, the Employment (Amendment) Bill 2016 and the Traffic (Amendment) Bill 2016.

In Committee of the whole Parliament

Magistrates' Poor Fund (Repeal) Bill 2016 –
Clauses considered and approved

820 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to repeal the Magistrates' Poor Fund Act and make provision for the dissolution of the charitable trust constituted by such Act.
Clauses 1 and 2.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: The long title.

825 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Mental Health Bill 2016 –
Clauses considered and approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to make provision with respect of the reception, care and treatment of mentally disordered persons, the management of the personal welfare, property and affairs of persons who lack capacity and for connected purposes.

Part 1, clause A.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 2, clauses 2 to 13.

835

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 14 as amended.

840

Mr Chairman: An amendment was circulated on 12th September. Unless any hon. Members have any objection, I take it that it is approved and be incorporated into the Bill. So, clause 14, as amended, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clauses 15 to 43.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 3, clauses 44 to 54.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 4, clauses 55 to 63.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 5, clauses 64 to 89.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.
The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Just in relation to section 89, in relation to ‘best interests’ and ‘life-sustaining treatment’, is it envisaged that there would be provision for an application to the court in relation to the withdrawal of life-sustaining treatment? I am talking about those circumstances where a patient lacks capacity and therefore the GHA would have to make, for example, an application to the court in relation to the withdrawal of life-sustaining treatment. That will follow on from the ‘best interest’ section, section 89. Is that what is envisaged by that section?

865

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Chairman, I do believe so. I would not disagree with what the Member has said; I think that is the right interpretation.

Hon. E J Phillips: The only concern I had in relation to applications that are made for the withdrawal of life-sustaining treatment, was that quite clearly that would result in death. So, insofar as that section is concerned, it would be motivated by the desire to bring about a 875 patient's death. Quite clearly, if nourishing tubes are removed from a patient, where the best interests of the patient are to remove them in relation to the life-sustaining treatment, that will bring about and cause the death of the patient. That is the only question I had in relation to this legislation. I really could not find it anywhere else within the section. That is why I have asked it at the Committee Stage, rather than at the Second Reading.

Dr J E Cortes: Was there a question in that?

Hon. E J Phillips: Just to clarify what I was asking.

Clerk: Part 6, clauses 90 to 103.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 7, clauses 104 to 108.

890

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 8, clauses 109 to 112.

895

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 9, clauses 113 to 116.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 10, clauses 117 to 135.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Schedules 1 to 3.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: The long title.

910

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Animal and Birds (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2016 –
Clauses considered and approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Animals and Birds Act.
Clauses 1 to 3.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Employment (Amendment) Bill 2016 –
Clauses considered and approved

920 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Employment Act.
Clause 1.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

925 Clerk: Clause 2, as amended.

Mr Chairman: A number of amendments were circulated from hon. Members of the Opposition on 5th July. They amend clause 2, paragraph 4, and clause 2, paragraph 5 – a number of them, in the case of the latter. I take it that unless hon. Members have any comments, they 930 are agreed to and therefore incorporated into the Bill, and they will stand part of the Bill.
So, clause 2, as amended, stand part of the Bill.

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licuidi): Mr Chairman, just for clarification, I understand that you referred to amendments which 935 were being proposed by Members of the Opposition.

Mr Chairman: Did I?

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Dr J E Cortes): I 940 understood that. Just for the record and for the sake of clarity.

Mr Chairman: I amend what I said by deleting the word ‘Opposition’ and inserting, therefore, ‘Government’.

945 Clerk: Clause 2, as amended.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: The long title.

950

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Traffic (Amendment) Bill 2016 –
Clauses considered and approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Traffic Act 2005 to make further provision in respect of certain driving offences, to further provide for the use of certain devices in the prosecution of offences, amend the provisions relating to fixed penalty notices, confer powers for the issue of 955 penalty points, make further provision in relation to driving under the influence of drink or drugs, including preliminary testing, and for connected purposes be read a first time.

Clerk: Clause 1.

960 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 2, as amended.

965 Mr Chairman: The amendment here is with respect to the day of operation into the Act by notice in the Gazette and that different dates may be appointed for different provisions. That was circulated a couple of days ago. Are all hon. Members happy with that?

970 Hon T N Hammond: If I may, Mr Chairman, simply in terms of the amendment, clearly the effect of the amendment, I presume, could be to cause further delay to the implementation of certain aspects of the legislation. Having congratulated the Minister earlier on bringing the legislation to this stage, I wonder if he has any idea in terms of..., particularly for the fixed cameras, whether or not he envisages any significant delay from this point going forward as to the introduction of those cameras.

975 Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Chairman, the purpose is precisely to avoid particular delays in relation specifically to the fixed speed cameras. There have to be administrative arrangements made, there have to be infrastructural arrangements made, particularly from an IT side in relation to the penalty points system, which are not ready yet. Therefore, as of today we are not ready to press the button and implement the penalty points system; but we may be ready, as soon as all administrative 980 arrangements are made, to issue and process the fixed penalty notices in respect of the speed cameras, to implement that part of the legislation as well as the other parts in relation to offences of causing death, certain driving offences causing death and also the introduction of devices and prescribing devices for drugs testing in particular.

985 At the moment we have a general offence of driving under the influence of drink or drugs. We have a prescribed limit for drink but not for drugs, and therefore we are creating the legislation to be able to prescribe limits for drugs and the type of drugs that would be prescribed. What we do not want is to have to have everything that this Bill caters for absolutely ready before we can press any button at all. Therefore, to the extent that we can start implementing the pieces of legislation that we can immediately, or as soon as possible, then that 990 is the purpose of the amendment, so as not to delay the parts that can be implemented straight away, and in particular the part that the hon. Member is speaking about.

Hon. T N Hammond: Thank you. I am reassured.

995 Clerk: Clause 2, as amended.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clauses 3 to 24.

1000

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: The long title.

1005

Mr Chairman: A fairly long title, stands part of the Bill.

Magistrates' Poor Fund (Repeal) Bill 2016,
Mental Health Bill 2016,
Animals and Birds (Amendment) No. 2) Bill 2016,
Employment (Amendment) Bill 2016,
Traffic (Amendment) Bill 2016 –
Third Reading approved: Bills passed

1010 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the Magistrates' Poor Fund (Repeal) Bill 2016, the Mental Health Bill 2016, the Animals and Birds (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2016, the Employment (Amendment) Bill 2016 and the Traffic (Amendment) Bill 2016 have been considered in Committee and agreed to, some with and some without amendments, and I now move that they be read a third time and passed.

1015 Mr Speaker: Since the Opposition have indicated that they support these five Bills, I am going to take them all together. So I now put the question, which is that the Magistrates' Poor Fund (Repeal) Bill 2016, the Mental Health Bill 2016, the Animals and Birds (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2016, the Employment (Amendment) Bill 2016 and the Traffic (Amendment) Bill 2016 be read a third time and passed. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

1020 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, can I suggest to the House this may be a convenient moment to recess for 10 to 15 minutes for light refreshment before we carry on?

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess for 15 minutes. We will be back at five.

The House recessed at 4.45 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.09 p.m.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Public Accounts Committee – Amended motion carried

Clerk: We now proceed with Private Member's motions. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1025 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

This House notes the contents of the Principal Auditor's Report on the Audit to the Public Accounts of Gibraltar for the year 31st March 2014 and calls on the Government to address his findings. This House furthermore resolves that a Standing Committee be created designated as the Public Accounts Committee for the examination of the accounts showing the appropriation of sums granted by Parliament to meet the public expenditure, to consist of four Members, two Government Ministers and two Opposition Members, who shall be nominated at the commencement of every session and of whom two shall be a quorum, with the Chair to be held by the Opposition.

1030 Mr Speaker, every year the Principal Auditor is required to submit a report on his audit of the Public Accounts of Gibraltar and attach his certificate. This annual report is then submitted to the Speaker to be laid before Parliament, pursuant to section 74(2) of the Constitution of Gibraltar. This year, the report for 31st March 2014 was presented to you on 26th August 2015 and laid before Parliament on 20th January this year.

1035 The Principal Auditor's Report and Associated Accounts for 31st March 2014 amounts to what is a very hefty report, running to 363 pages, and I can tell you it weighs in at over 1.5 kilos. Whereas I am sure that all of us in this House have actually read the report from cover to cover, I would ask them when was the last time the Principal Auditor's Report was actually debated in this Parliament – perhaps the Father of the House might know.

1040 The report of the Principal Auditor, although laid before Parliament, serves, unfortunately, merely as a doorstop if no one in this House actively considers and debates its contents. I trust Members have brought their copies with them today, because I want to refer to one particular matter which the Principal Auditor makes reference to on page 107 in respect of the revision of audit legislation as follows, and I quote:

As I commented in last year's report, I am hopeful that the audit draft legislation, which provides an improved legal basis to secure a more modern and efficient public audit service and adequately addresses key issues of audit independence, will be taken to the Gibraltar Parliament during the coming year.

I examined the report for 31st March 2013, and under the same heading, on page 95, the Principal Auditor had the following to say:

In my report on the Public Accounts for the financial year 2008-09 I explained proposals made to Government over a number of years to revise the audit legislation contained in Parts 8 and 9 of the Public Finance Control and Audit Act, as no significant modifications have been made since its enactment in 1977. The prime aim of these proposals was to provide an improved legal basis to secure a more modern and efficient public audit service that is fully independent of the Government of Gibraltar.

1045 I went back to the report for 2008-09 and found that this has been a recurrent theme, going back to 17th March 1998 when the proposals were first submitted by the Principal Auditor's predecessor. The Principal Auditor's frustration with Parliament is palpable. I trust this Government will consider the Principal Auditor's request so that if necessary legislation can be brought into place in the lifetime of this Parliament, that it be done.

1050 There are, of course, many other detailed elements of the Principal Auditor's report that could be usefully debated if we had unlimited parliamentary time. For example, why is it that the Gibraltar Development Corporation has not submitted any accounts for audit for the last 18 years? Presumably if this Parliament passed a law requiring them to be audited by the Principal Auditor, then why on earth have they not been?

1055 This is not a partisan issue, but goes to the heart of the management and scrutiny of our public finances, and it is scrutiny that is the key theme to my motion and the purpose of bringing this motion to the House. There are numerous reports and documents laid in Parliament, and yet these perhaps do not receive the attention and scrutiny that they should.

1060 Mr Speaker, let me give you an example of why these documents need scrutiny. Only last month, on 9th September, the audited accounts for the Gibraltar Electricity Authority for the years ended 31st March 2012, 2013, 2014 and 2015 were laid before Parliament. For the year 2015, on page 9, of which I have a copy here, was the following comment in respect of the fuel hedge contract – and I know Mr Bossano will find this interesting – and I quote:

At the latest available fuel price it is expected that the fuel hedge contract cost will be approximately ...

– and again I am quoting –

£312.7 million in the financial year 2015-16.

1065 Needless to say, I almost fell off my chair when I read this. It would mean that Gibraltar would be almost bankrupt, if it was true. Thankfully, I was able to deal with this matter bilaterally, on a non-partisan basis, with the Hon. Minister Dr John Cortes, who kindly investigated and wrote to me on 20th September to confirm that, and I quote:

The figure should have read £12.7 million and not £312.7 million. It appears that the pound sign became a three somewhere in the process. Thank you for pointing this out. I am sure we are both relieved.

Which indeed we are.

1070 Mr Speaker, with this illustration it goes to show how important it is to read the documents that are laid before this Parliament; and yet, giving our limited parliamentary time, how are we going to scrutinise financial reports and public finance audit reports as a Parliament in an effective and efficient manner?

1075 Thankfully, we do not have to reinvent the wheel, as the mother of all Parliaments faced the same problem in 1857 and addressed the problem by the creation of a standing select committee tasked solely with the scrutiny of public finances. In 2007, the committee celebrated its 150th anniversary and produced a booklet outlining its work and history. I have placed a copy of that booklet in the antechamber for Members' information, and it makes interesting reading. Let me read from its introduction. I quote:

Expectations about the proper stewardship and accountability for public money go back many centuries. Generations of politicians and public officials have recognised the significance of the proper handling of public funds, the need to combat fraud and corruption and the importance of getting the most from tax revenue. Such themes have been at the heart of relations between the Crown and Parliament, and then subsequently have featured in numerous Parliamentary debates.

The Committee of Public Accounts is a key part of our accountability arrangements to safeguard public money ... in 1857 – a select committee of the House of Commons recommended the creation of a committee to oversee government accounts. This was a crucial step in the already long running efforts to secure proper stewardship. In 1861, the Committee came into being and continues to this day to examine the use Government makes of public money. Over time, the role of the Committee has changed in line with the needs of the day – for example, widening the type of subjects considered from purely financial matters to broader concerns about the effectiveness of public programmes; increasing the number of hearings held and reports produced; and taking evidence from a wider range of witnesses, including from outside the public sector.

At times, there has been resistance to the expansion of the focus of the Committee's enquiries: in the late nineteenth century, for example, to the consideration of more than just the regularity of expenditure; in the 1940s to the desire for access to public corporations; and in the 1990s to its desire to examine public sector companies. Nevertheless, the mutual interest in the effective use of public money between Government and Parliament is clear ... 'The Committee has thus helped the Government to secure financial savings, raise the standards of public services and improve the quality of delivery.'

1080 And so, Mr Speaker, need I say more to convince Members of this House that we need a Scrutiny Committee, we need a Public Accounts Committee?

There may be some who think that in a Parliament of our size such a committee may not be practical, as was the view of the Commission on Democratic and Parliamentary Reform in January 2013. My views on this report have already been ventilated this morning.

1085 Mr Speaker, let me point out to this House that times have changed and continue to change, and we really risk falling behind with best parliamentary practice. In his report for 31st March 2013, again page 95, the Principal Auditor made the following remarks, and I quote:

The Assistant Principal Auditor and I were invited to participate in an Overseas Territories Auditor Generals conference and workshop organised by the United Kingdom's National Audit Office (NAO) and held at the NAO's offices in London at the end of January 2014. The theme of the conference or workshop was 'Strengthening Audits and Parliamentary Oversight in the Overseas Territories' and was sponsored by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The objectives of the conference workshop were to (1) provide an opportunity for Overseas Territories representatives to be updated on recent developments in public audit and parliamentary oversight; (2) develop a shared understanding of what makes a Public Accounts Committee effective; (3) examine current approaches to auditing major risk areas; and, finally, (4) develop ways to enhance the effectiveness of oversight systems in the Overseas Territories.

It is perhaps no coincidence that this conference was organised after the November 2013 communiqué of the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting, which in paragraphs 45 and 46 stated, and I quote:

Heads of government recognise the contribution that strong, properly resourced and independent supreme audit institutions play in improving transparency, accountability and value for money to ensure that public funds are appropriately spent.

1090 And paragraph 46:

Heads of government further reaffirmed that strong and independent parliamentary oversight plays an important role in preserving the trust of citizens in the integrity of government through public account committees that are effective, independent and transparent.

1095 The topic of public accounts committees or scrutiny committees was the subject of a workshop in the 46th Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, British Islands and Mediterranean Region Annual Conference, which I attended in May earlier this year. I was taken aback to discover that Gibraltar was the only participant at that conference not to have a public accounts committee; and not only that but in fact the CPA had, following the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in November, actually created a parallel group just for public accounts committees. Let me quote from their dedicated website as follows:

In June 2014, Chairs and Members of Public Accounts and equivalent Committees of Commonwealth parliaments attending the 4th Westminster Workshop on Parliamentary Financial Scrutiny of Public Expenditure at Westminster constituted the Commonwealth Association of Public Accounts Committees (CAPAC) ... CAPAC is designed to support the work of Commonwealth Public Accounts Committees in promoting good governance, implementing the declaration on these committees contained in the communiqué of the November 2013 Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting ...

The aims of CAPAC are as follows:

- making the case for the independence of Commonwealth PACs, and for implementation of all appropriate PAC recommendations, as key components of good governance
- defining, publishing and promoting standards of good practice, in line with Commonwealth principles, to assist CAPAC Member Committees in being effective, transparent and independent
- providing training ...
- acting as a clearing house of ... information ...
- carrying out peer reviews ...
- engaging ... stakeholders ...
- strengthening the capacity of small states' PACs.

1100 In November 2015 the CAPAC initiative was endorsed by the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting, where their communiqué noted the establishment of the Commonwealth Association of Public Accounts Committees as a network for strengthening public financial management and accountability, these being vital in maintaining the trust of citizens and the integrity of governments and legislatures.

1105 The current members of CAPAC are Bangladesh, Barbados, Cameroon, Fiji, Ghana, Jamaica, Kenya, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Malta, Mauritius, Namibia, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, Sri Lanka, Swaziland, Tanzania, Uganda and the United Kingdom. Associate members are Anguilla, Jersey and Northern Island.

1110 Mr Speaker, as you can see, the concept of having a public accounts committee is now seen as best practice in the Commonwealth, and we now have an opportunity to leverage on this new institution, being CAPAC, which would not be too late to join perhaps as an associate.

1115 And, Mr Speaker, finally, despite what has been said this morning, I would like to emphasise that I presented this motion with Gibraltar's best interests at heart and on a non-partisan basis, and I hope that Members will consider my motion in that light, which I now commend to the House. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question, in terms of the motion moved by the Hon. Roy Clinton. Does anybody wish to contribute to the debate? The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, I have a feeling of déjà vu. I thought we had debated a very similar motion this morning; in fact, of course, we have.

1125

It is very clear to me that the hon. Gentleman comes to this issue relatively green – green in the context of how there has been debate on the Auditor’s Report. In the time that I have been here since 2003, there has been a lot of debate on the Auditor’s Report on specific issues. The Auditor’s Report gives rise to questions that are asked and then it gives rise to motions that are brought; it gives rise to questions that are asked at the Committee Stage and at the Second Reading of the Bill on the Appropriation when looking back at how things have been done in other years – a lot of debate, in fact, based around the Principal Auditor’s Report.

1130

He seems to think that he is the only person who has had regard to it; I did not realise he had such a high regard for himself. As I told him today, there has been an economist in this House for quite some time and he taught those of us who have had the benefit of political tutelage, something which I know hon. political partisan virgins opposite are not having the benefit of in respect of someone who has had the longevity of Joe Bossano or even Peter Caruana in Parliament, but he taught us the importance of this document and the importance of being able to ask questions as a result of this document.

1135

Of course, the difficulty that hon. Members have is that a lot of the issues that this document raises it raises about the time when the party that most of them still represent were in office, as I will demonstrate in a few moments.

The hon. Gentleman gets up and says, ‘Of course, I am not doing this on a partisan basis.’ He cannot do it on a partisan basis, because when he wants to ask about why the GDC has not filed accounts for 18 years in respect of 2014 he knows that he is asking questions of himself in political terms. He is asking questions of the GSD. I will give him the answer. Perhaps Mr Bossano later might agree to become involved in this debate and give us the benefit of his experience of these matters.

1145

The GDC used to file accounts. The last accounts filed were (Hon. J J Bossano: 1996.) 1996. The practice of stopping the filing of the accounts of the GDC was initiated by the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, as the current Leader of what is left of the Opposition used to describe him. So it is quite something to hear a representative of the GSD get up and make those sorts of statements about the GDC.

1150

He knows, Mr Speaker, that our position is that they will be filed. We agree with the Principal Auditor. The hon. Gentleman might have known that if he had been following the proceedings of this House for the 16 years between 1996 and 2011 when we were making those points. He might have recalled reading that in that magnificent weekly publication the New People, because those were issues that we constantly might read in that publication.

So the answer to how are we going to have a debate when this is such a fulsome report ... He has even taken the liberty of weighing it and telling us the weight in grams. Well, I will tell him how we are going to have the debate: in the way that we always do, because he can ask questions about what is in the report, those questions can lead to motions, those motions and questions can even lead to press releases, and we can have exchanges outside of this place if necessary, as we have often had in the past. But what is not going to be possible is to have a system like Westminster where you have 650 parliamentarians, when you have 17 here; because the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who is the Minister for Finance, is not a Member of the Public Accounts Committee of the United Kingdom. For many years it was chaired by Margaret Hodge, until recently. So, of course, if you have got 650 MPs and some of them are not Ministers – and this goes for the argument about whether you have backbenchers or not – then you can have 10 of them beavering away on that subject and asking civil servants questions, but if you only have Ministers and you do not have backbenchers, then what you are saying, if you are suggesting that you do not have time to debate the Principal Auditor’s Report in this 1170 Chamber, is that you are going to have a reduced meeting of this Chamber and have that lengthy debate.

For a retired banker with all the time in the world and nothing to do, that might be lovely; it might actually float his boat. But for actively engaged, not lazy, very hardworking Members of Parliament who are Ministers, this is to have a Budget debate every day that the hon. Member 1175 wants to have a Public Accounts Committee. So, for all the reasons, therefore, that I gave this morning, it cannot happen and he cannot make a comparison with the Westminster Parliament for the reasons that I have illustrated to him.

When he says there should be two Members of the Government involved in the committee, he is calling for two Ministers to stop work on whatever it is they are doing to come here to look 1180 with him at the price of Brooke Bond tea. It does not make any sense. If he does have the best interests of Gibraltar at heart, doesn't he realise that it is in Gibraltar's best interest that Ministers should be working on the subjects which deliver for Gibraltar?

And so, therefore, the history lesson is really quite irrelevant. The hon. Gentleman says we have to look after public money. Well, he has an opportunity a month – we will get back into the 1185 rhythm of it from now – to ask us whatever question he likes about public money, and we will give him those answers that we think are appropriate, the same answers we would give him in the Public Accounts Committee. So changing the mechanism is not going to avail him of any assistance, and to suggest a committee that is two and two is to go against the practice of committees in this House as they have been in the past – and chaired by him.

When we look at history, Mr Speaker, I prefer the history of Joshua Hassan in 1972, of Joshua 1190 Hassan in 1976, of Joshua Hassan in 1984, of Joe Bossano in 1988, of Joe Bossano in 1992, of Peter Caruana in 1996, 2000, 2003 – does he get my rhythm? – and 2007, and of Fabian Picardo in 2011, which is a robust parliamentary system where there is absolute freedom to ask any question an hon. Member wants, to get the information that the Government is prepared to 1195 give and to debate on it or to say that it has not been given, and to have that argument which we are having in the most robust manner.

We have not really argued about anything else in the past four and a half years, almost five. The debate has been about public finance at every Question Time, at every meeting, in every 1200 husting. All they want to talk about is public finance. How can they suggest that they do not have a forum to debate the public finances of Gibraltar? What they do not like is the conclusion that the public finances of Gibraltar are stronger than they ever have been.

But they cannot say that they have not got a forum for debate of the public finances; that we do not have a strong and properly resourced audit institution, which he says is one of the indicia
1205 of good governance – of course we do, we have a Principal Auditor's office that has regularly and independently produced reports which have been debated in this House, even though he might not have been a retired banker then and not have had the time to note that we were debating issues which arise from the report in Question Time and in motions etc; that we should have a strong parliamentary oversight – well, strong parliamentary oversight does not have to happen
1210 in a committee, it can happen in a place like this, where we have the toughest and strictest parliamentary oversight, and quite unlike other Chief Ministers I come here every month for that parliamentary oversight.

And to hear a Member of the Gibraltar Social Democrats say that we should be copying 1215 Westminster, when I spent 12 years in this House hearing, even when he was in opposition to me, the former Chief Minister, the Leader of the GSD – the most successful Leader of the GSD – tell us that Westminster do not do everything right and that we should be doing things our way, to now be told 'this is the history of Westminster, this is what we should be doing' is really quite incredible.

The good governance I prefer is the good governance of Gibraltar as we have been doing it, as it was done in this respect by the Gibraltar Social Democrats and as it was done in this respect 1220 by the first GSLP administration and by the AACR, except for one term when they had the Public Accounts Committee and they themselves decided not to have one.

1225 And so, Mr Speaker, when he tells us that he has moved this motion in a non-partisan manner, proposing himself in effect as the Chairman of a Public Accounts Committee with two Members of the Opposition and two Members of the Government, forgetting the Independent Member, it really is quite incredible to hear, especially when he gets up and he makes speeches which are clearly partisan.

1230 I am going to give notice that I intend to move an amendment to the motion, and I will give written notice in a moment, Mr Speaker, of the amendment that I intend to move, where I also intend to highlight other parts of this report. For example, the content of paragraph 2.12.2 – I hope the hon. Member has brought his with him. Paragraph 2.12.2 of the Principal Auditor's Report of 2014 says this:

I must once again report that no decision has yet been taken on how the outstanding amount owed by the defaulter of a loan ...

– these are the Public Accounts of Gibraltar – issued on 16th January 2003, amounting to £48,000 plus interest, is to be treated. The total debt as at 31st May 2015 was £78,000, made up of £48,000 in respect of capital, £12,907 relating to the loan agreement interest and £17,133 in connection with default interest.

1235 So, Mr Speaker, when I am asked by a motion to comment on and debate the Principal Auditor's accounts, surely if I am acting in a non-partisan manner with Gibraltar's best interests at heart, that is the issue that I want to highlight. That is the issue that I want to highlight, especially given everything that has been said in the context of the past four years in the past Parliament about Credit Finance Company Ltd granting loans. These are the Principal Auditor's accounts for 2014. These accounts are talking about a loan. This is a loan given with public money, with taxpayers' money, of £48,000. I have taken an interest in that, because the hon. Gentleman is not the only one who reads these accounts, and I found out a little bit more about it. It is a loan and a grant to a company, and I understand that a Minister in the former administration had an interest in that company, and I am continuing to research that.

1240 And so the amendment that I intend to move is as follows, and I have written notice of it here ready to go. I will read it to the House and then circulate it. What I propose to do, Mr Speaker, is delete every word after the words 'This House' when they appear in the motion and replace them with the following:

This House notes the contents of paragraph 2.12.2 of the Principal Auditor's Report on the Audit of the Public Accounts of Gibraltar for 31st March 2014; notes the information already provided to the House by the Chief Minister ...

– what I have just said –

in respect of the loan in question, which was granted by the former GSD administration and which appears to have been lost; commends the Chief Minister for bringing to the attention of this House the information on this loan granted by the former GSD and which appears to have been lost; seeks that the Government should ascertain greater information in respect of said loan and to make public such details as may be possible of the said impaired loan granted by the former GSD administration; and further notes and agrees with the findings of the Commission on Democratic and Parliamentary Reform which reported to Parliament in January 2013, which, as provided for in the motion standing in the name of the Chief Minister and approved this morning by the Parliament, unanimously expressed the view of the Commission that there is no need to establish a General Purpose Standing Committee nor a Public Accounts Committee given that the Opposition Members have every opportunity to examine Government expenditure in detail as well as debating the report from the Principal Auditor on the Government's accounts for every financial year.

I pass it now, Mr Speaker, so it can be copied and provided and written notice can be provided to you and to every Member. I will pause there whilst it is circulated.

1250 Mr Speaker: Is the Chief Minister proposing to say something further in support of the amendment?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker.

1255 Mr Speaker: Very well.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think hon. Members have now received the written notice of amendment.

1260 The hon. Gentleman cannot get away with suggesting, as he does, that we do not have the opportunities for strong and properly resourced auditors to review the Government accounts, that we do not have strong parliamentary oversight and that we should copy Westminster, because I am reminded in the amendment that I have put of the actual words of the Commission which we debated this morning. The words of the Commission were that there is no need to establish a General Purpose Standing Committee nor a Public Accounts Committee, given that 1265 Opposition Members have every opportunity to examine Government expenditure in detail as well as debating the report from the Principal Auditor on the Government's accounts for every financial year. It is clear that is the position of the Commission; we were referring to it this morning.

1275 paragraph 2.12.2, then he is either highly partisan and wants to hide away this very concerning note about an impaired loan granted by the party that he represents, or he is very lazy and had not picked it up. What we need to be careful of is that when we are told that he is the one reading material, he is not either reading it through partisan spectacles or not reading it at all and just pretending to do so.

1280 So, Mr Speaker, on that basis I move the amendment as set out in writing, as required by the rules, and I commend the Bill as amended to the House. (Banging on desks)

A Member: Hear, hear.

1285 Mr Speaker: What is now before the House is the Chief Minister's amendment, and the mover of the original motion, apart from any other Member of the Opposition, including Mr Roy Clinton, are able to speak on the amendment.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1290 I must say I am quite impressed with the Chief Minister's performance this afternoon in completely overturning my motion.

I note that he has not addressed the concern of the Principal Auditor in respect of modernising legislation – which he has obviously conveniently forgotten to take notes on – which, of course, the Principal Auditor himself has been chasing for years, regardless of the administration.

1295 I just find it incredible that the Chief Minister picks on one section of this 300-odd page report to support his own partisan issues. Perhaps I may ask the Chief Minister, while he is looking at that paragraph, could he also do me the favour of investigating, in section 2.14.5, on arrears of import duties, a significant decrease of £391,236 compared against previous years' arrears position decrease related to a company having paid all amounts due. Perhaps he could 1300 investigate that for me as well.

Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister's approach to my motion is what it is. It lacks any form of consideration for what is best parliamentary practice. The Public Accounts Committee may have originated in Westminster, but the fact of the matter is Members of the Commonwealth have also adopted it, and I know for a fact the Falkland Islands have a Public Accounts Committee and 1305 they manage quite well to survive with one. I cannot understand the Chief Minister's reluctance to add this additional level of transparency and checks and balances to this Parliament. It really will not cause him any offence.

And what he fails to tell this House is that the select committee is not just about questions and answers – and I note his rather guarded response when he said 'appropriate answers to 1310 questions', which means he will be the arbiter of what he answers.

Mr Speaker, a select committee on public accounts will cover everything that concerns this Parliament in terms of public funds. It is not necessarily going to be a rod for the Government's back. It may be a mechanism to investigate areas in which Parliament wants some clarity. It may be independent contractors to Government. Who knows? But it is not something that the 1315 Government should feel is going to be used to attack them. In fact, in Westminster it is used to great effect on a cross-party basis to get the best results for the taxpayer – and that is where I am coming from, Mr Speaker: the best result for the taxpayer.

The Chief Minister's amendment shows quite clearly he does not care about the taxpayer. All he cares about is a soundbite. There is no substance to this motion amending my motion. It is 1320 utter nonsense. (Hon. D A Feetham: Hear, hear.)

Mr Speaker, I have made a perfectly cogent argument as to what is good parliamentary practice in the 21st century. If other countries round the world have Public Accounts Committees, if other territories in the Overseas Territories have Public Accounts Committees, why do we not? That is what I would like to know from the Chief Minister. If the Falkland Islands 1325 can have one, if Jersey can have one, if Guernsey can have one, and they are much smaller than we are, why can't we have one? What is it that the Chief Minister finds so offensive about public accounts committees?

And no, I am not doing it because I am bored; I am doing it because I am here, and I am here because ... okay, we did not win the election, but I was still elected to sit here and hold the 1330 Government to account, (Banging on desks) and for as long as I am on this side of this House I will do that – and of course he will have to accept that, whether he likes it or not. I am not here to create work for myself; I am here to work for the taxpayer and I will continue to do so. I have not heard a single comment from the Chief Minister as to why public accounts committees are of no value to Parliament.

And so, Mr Speaker, I will once again ask for a division of the House on this vote, because I would not want the Hon. Mr Costa to lose out on his buckets of transparency, to add to them with the Chief Minister kicking it over immediately. No more buckets of transparency, because the Chief Minister, frankly, is not interested in transparency. This Chief Minister wants to go and do whatever the hell he pleases.

Mr Speaker, I have actually researched the subject. I have put the evidence before this House. If I cannot convince the Members of this House as to the utility of a public accounts committee, then alas I have failed, but I will continue to put the case.

And so, Mr Speaker, as I sit down I will ask for a division of the House. Thank you. (Banging on 1345 desks)

Mr Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak on the Chief Minister's amendment?

I call upon the Chief Minister to reply.

1350 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has not dealt with the subject of the amendment; he has replied as if he were replying on the main motion. But I have never seen in the time I have been in this Parliament, even when I was in Opposition and I had some Members opposite me who had such little ability that one of them was once seen to be reading The ABC of Thinking – you would have thought that somebody who would be a Minister would have worked out the ABC of thinking – I have never, even then, seen somebody squirm on a hook that they 1355 have created for themselves like I have seen the hon. Gentleman squirm today. To have come here proud to have read the Auditor’s report, ready to deal with it and present it to us as something that only he reads, and not to have realised what a hook he was creating for himself and his party because of this impaired loan that they granted – which I have already given details of, and more to come – and not to address it in the context of his reply, demonstrates that the 1360 the only person in this room who is now squirming and seeking to avoid transparency and clarity is the hon. Gentleman.

How can he not have said, ‘Oh my goodness, that’s true, it’s a loan granted and money lost,’ in the same breath as he says ‘I only care about the taxpayer’? Well, where is your caring for the taxpayer and his loss, her loss, our loss of £78,000? Where is the care for the taxpayer? It is 1365 utterly ridiculous to get up and say that in the context of this debate without addressing the substance of the amendment, which talks about the loss that his party has put the taxpayer to of £78,000.

I am not surprised that when he sat down they all banged the table and he banged himself – he is the only artist I have ever seen clap his own performance. Because that is that it must be, a 1370 performance, to call a division on an amendment like this – which is absolutely his right – and not address, in the context of replying to it, the very serious matter that I have brought before the public today, the very serious issue of a loan granted by them and impaired and apparently involving a Minister in the Government that granted that very loan, and to say that they are somehow the champions of the taxpayer.

1375 Mr Speaker, they are the losers for the taxpayer. Not only have they lost money on the estates that they developed, not only have we been left with that rotten legacy, we will be left with the rotten legacy of a GSD loan, lost, of £78,000. And he gets up and he pretends that he can talk about best parliamentary practice and that he cares about the interest of the taxpayer. Well, he cares so much about the interest of the taxpayer that the paragraph he wants me to 1380 read and comment on is 2.14.5, which is the one that says that arrears are down. That is the bit that he should have been banging the table on. Arrears are down. He should at least have said, ‘Congratulations, arrears are down.’ No, the bit he does not want to talk about is the loss of £78,000.

How can I take seriously a man who, in 10 months of being in this Parliament, thinks that he 1385 can tell us what is best parliamentary practice? Is there no element of humility about the man at all? Zero element of humility that he comes here and he goes against the Commission with a cumulative 44 years of experience. He comes here to speak against the Government, all of whom have more parliamentary experience than him, and says, ‘I am speaking from the chair of best parliamentary practice.’ Doesn’t he realise that if between them they had one ounce of 1390 shame, he would be putting his leader to shame because his leader was a Member of Government for four years which did not have a public accounts committee? Well, maybe he does not think of him as his leader either; I do not know how bad things are on that side. For 16 years they were in Government and they did not do it, and now they are the arbiters of best parliamentary practice.

1395 He says I have not dealt with the issue of why it cannot operate here. Of course I have. I told him. The other Parliaments he is talking about all have backbenchers. It is likely the backbenchers are the ones who make up the parliamentary public accounts committee.

1400 Mr Speaker, there is no way that he is going to persuade us that we should spend our time ... apart from coming to Parliament once a month to answer all their questions, also to be here, in addition, in the public accounts committee, because what we are going to do is run Gibraltar and 1405 deliver our manifesto. That is what we have been elected Ministers to do, and to provide the accountability and transparency which is the pride of this Government, which is greater than any accountability and transparency provided by any Government, in particular the stitched up Government of the GSD between 1996 and 2011 that almost gave zero information and met in 1410 Parliament twice a year in an election year and three times a year when there was not an election. Does he understand that? Does he know that he is representing the political insignia of a party that came to Parliament to answer questions three times a year at most, two times a year when there was an election? And he pretends to be the champion of transparency! Mr Speaker, he should be banging the table when I sit down to thank this Government for having 1415 implemented the monthly meetings of the Parliament, despite the fact that in this particular session we agreed we would not meet every month because of the Referendum until now.

That is transparency and accountability, not deciding that he is going to go off on a bookwormish exploration of the history of public accounts committees and pretend in that way to be able to give people a lecture on what parliamentary best practice is, having been here for 1420 10 months. That is utterly ridiculous. It is evidence of somebody with nothing to do during the day; and frankly, given that we spend our time delivering for Gibraltar, he should stop wasting our time.

He should ask his party to make a public statement about the loan they granted in 2003 and he should have realised that he should have addressed that in the context of the amendment to 1425 the motion that I have moved.

As for the legislation, I will have him know I have had a number of meetings with the Principal Auditor to fair that legislation in order to be able to bring it to the House, Mr Speaker, and I trust it will be possible to bring it soon and I trust that I will be the Chief Minister to bring it, 1430 despite the fact that the former Chief Minister, the one that they all used to adulate when he was around to hear them, did not do so.

To have heard a Member of Parliament – forget a GSD Member of Parliament, a Member of Parliament – be confronted with an amendment to a motion that raises this issue and not to have heard a word from him in response, betrays the reality of what he is trying to do in this House, betrays what his motivation was in respect of bringing this motion and betrays the huge 1435 embarrassment to which he has subjected himself by asking the Parliament to debate the Principal Auditor's Report that highlights the loss of money by the GSD, the utterly shameful loss of taxpayer's money by the GSD to such an extent that they should never be able to call themselves champion of the taxpayer at all. They are the losers for the Taxpayer, and the motion will stand with Government votes after a division to demonstrate that on Hansard for ever.
(Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I will now put the Chief Minister's amendment to the vote. Is there a division required? Yes.

1445

A division was called for and voting resulted as follows:

FOR

The Hon. P J Balban
 The Hon. J J Bossano
 The Hon. Dr J E Cortes
 The Hon. N F Costa
 The Hon. Dr J J Garcia
 The Hon. G H Licudi
 The Hon. F R Picardo
 The Hon. Miss S J Sacramento

AGAINST

The Hon. R M Clinton
 The Hon. D A Feetham
 The Hon. T N Hammond
 The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon
 The Hon. L F Llamas
 The Hon. E J Phillips
 The Hon. E J Reyes

ABSENT

The Hon. A J Isola
 The Hon. S E Linares

1450 The amendment is now carried – my apologies – by 8 votes to 7, with two Members on the Government side absent.

Now before the House is the Chief Minister’s amended motion. All Members may speak to it except Mr Clinton, who has already done so, and the Chief Minister himself. All the other Members may speak to the motion. (Interjection) The original motion, as amended, is what is now before the House. The Hon. Mr Clinton will be able to exercise his right to reply, but he cannot contribute now in the body of the debate.

Hon. D A Feetham: He has the last word.

1460 Mr Speaker: Absolutely, but not in the body of the debate.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just to say this in relation to the amended motion: I invite the Hon. the Chief Minister to make a full public statement about the loan that he alleges has been made to a company, and I think he used the words, which was apparently had a connection with a Government Minister’. I think that it is a matter that the Chief Minister has got to make a full public statement, and I would also invite him to keep the House informed about the recovery of the loan, because certainly on this side of the House we have absolutely no information in relation to any loan that has been provided to a Minister or a company with which a GSD Minister had a connection, and quite frankly we are absolutely baffled as to why a loan, which at the end of the day is a debt, cannot be recovered. Certainly from our point of view we would invite the Government to take every single measure possible and leave no stone unturned in the recovery of a loan, if a loan exists, because that is what a situation such as that calls for. If there is a debt it ought to be recovered, and it is as simple as that. (Interjection) But I think that the Hon. the Chief Minister should not approach this, with almost pussyfooting around as to the identity of the GSD Minister, as to whether there is something that is possibly underhand. If there is a loan, he should say there is a loan. He should say why it is impaired, he should say who is the – (Interjection) No, he should say who is the Minister he says apparently was connected with the company and he should put all the facts in the public whom domain so that the public, who have an absolute right to know – because certainly we are not, on this side of the House, going to do a Chief Minister with Credit Finance and say, ‘It is commercially sensitive, we are not providing you with the information.’ That is the view that the hon. Gentleman takes. We ask the questions on Credit Finance and the hon. Gentleman says, ‘It is commercially sensitive, we are not going to be providing you with any information.’

I am telling him, on behalf of the GSD Opposition: tell us what the loan is about, provide the public with as much information as possible and absolutely bring all the machinery of Government to bear on the recovery of that particular loan, because certainly on this side of the House we have absolutely nothing to hide – contrary, it has to be said, to the attitude that the hon. Gentleman takes in relation to Credit Finance. So that is my invitation to him, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, is he giving way?

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I am not giving way.

1495 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, he has invited me to do something – can I just respond to the invitation?

Hon. D A Feetham: No.

1500 Hon. Chief Minister: Oh, he wants to make an invitation and not give way – okay.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Gilbert Licudi.

1505 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, will the hon. Gentleman give way?

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): I will indeed. (Laughter)

1510 Hon. Chief Minister: That is the sort of ridiculous activity to which one is put by the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition – the current Leader of the current Opposition.

Mr Speaker, I accept the invitation, but it is not an invitation that I have had to accept; it is what I have been telling the House for the past 15 minutes I am going to do. It is what the motion from Mr Clinton as amended requires me to do. So I hope he will vote in favour of it, because he has voted against the amendment but now that it is before the House and it requires me to do all of that, I will do so.

1515 Mr Speaker, what he does not seem to understand is that this book is the Auditor's Report in respect of the accounts of the Government, taxpayers' money. Credit Finance Company Ltd, when he puts his brain back in between his ears, he will remember is the company that has savers' money from the Gibraltar Savings Bank; it is not taxpayers' money. His own argument, is that it is saver's money –

1520 Hon. D A Feetham: He is wrong.

1525 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not going to engage in a shouting match across the floor with him. I am telling him the position, and when he thinks about it he will realise that it is right.

This is different: this is taxpayers' money lent by his party when they were in office, and I am telling him I have an indication to a company involving a GSD Minister. I will make a public statement when I have the full information, and I will remind him that it is a loan granted in 2003 and that the limitation period – which I think we may have now been able to do away with, as a result of the exchanges that we dealt with – expired when he was a Minister, six years later in 2009. But if this money is recoverable, I will very much make sure it is recovered and that everybody knows how it was lent by the GSD, to whom it was lent by the GSD out of taxpayers' money, how the GSD were able to lend to companies involving themselves when they were here, and why we think that is not right and why we think that a debate about the Principal Auditor's Report of 2014 and the comment on it is not a comment on a debate on it unless you zero in on that matter and you identify that issue and you deal with it.

1535 And so, being the completely and utterly transparent lot that we are, we will do everything that I said we would do, which is exactly what he then foolishly got up and invited me to do as well. But now that he has done that inviting he may want to go back and read the amendment and support the motion as now amended; because, if he does not, he will be voting against the principle of the invitation that he has just put. So perhaps, Mr Speaker, he should engage brain before tongue on all matters, not just Credit Finance.

1545 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, having given way to the Chief Minister and the Chief Minister having made the point that I was going to make (Laughter) – and he has done so very eloquently indeed – I will limit myself just to reiterate one of the points. (A Member: Sit down.) I was going to sit down, but having got up originally I will make the point that the Hon. the Chief Minister 1550 has already, to an extent, dealt with. And that is that the hon. Member opposite, the Leader of the Opposition, has said – and he used these words – ‘the debt ought to be recovered’ and he has used very strong words urging the Government to do so. As the Chief Minister has pointed out, this is a 2003 debt, a debt which arose when the GSD was in Government. So, rather than urging us to take steps to recover this debt, he ought to be asking himself, ‘Why is it that my 1555 party never did anything to recover this particular debt?’ and ‘Why is it that my party allowed the limitation period to elapse in 2009 without having done anything to recover that debt?’ and ‘Why is it that I’ – I am speaking for the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition – ‘in 2009, being Minister for Justice and realising that limitation periods come to an end after six years for the recovery of debt, did absolutely nothing, knowing that Government debt was being 1560 accumulated?’ And not just this, but other types of Government debt were being accumulated.
As Minister for Justice he did absolutely nothing to change the limitation period to allow Government debt to be recovered going back as much time as was necessary. It fell to us to do that. Not only was he Minister for Justice in 2009 at the time that this limitation period expired for this particular debt; he continued to be so until December 2011, for a further two years, and 1565 still he did absolutely nothing to do this. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Well, if it was a 2003 debt – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham)

Hon. Chief Minister: We are not 100% clear, but we almost are clear –

Hon. G H Licudi: Well, we almost are clear –

Hon. Chief Minister: – that there was no payment from the date the loan was granted, and that therefore the limitation period would have run from the date of the signature of the document.

1575 Hon. G H Licudi: Well, all things being equal – (*Interjections by Hon. D A Feetham and Hon.
Chief Minister*)

Mr Speaker, subject to the investigation that the Hon. the Chief Minister is going to make, and subject to the public statement which the Hon. Minister said he was going to do before being challenged and asked to do so and the Chief Minister again confirming that that was the 1580 original intention of what he was going to do, it is our belief at the moment that the limitation period would have expired in 2009. But even if it did not, if it had expired in 2010 or 2011, still the hon. Member was Minister for Justice and did absolutely nothing, and it did fall to us.

The reason that it can be recovered now, to the extent that it is recoverable – we do not know; we have to check the precise circumstances. The company, for all we know, might not 1585 exist, might have become insolvent. We just do not know. That is something that needs to be looked at in terms of practical recoverability, quite apart from the issue of the legal right to recover. The reason we can do it now is because, as the Chief Minister has said, this is Government debt, this is pure taxpayers’ money, and the amendment that we have made to the limitation period allows the Government now to recover Government debt such as this is.

1590 Therefore, for all those reasons, the hon. Member should do what the Chief Minister has invited him to do and to vote in favour of the original motion as amended, because if he believes that this paragraph in the Principal Auditor’s Report raises a serious issue of recoverability and everything possible should be done to recover that debt, then he should be supporting this motion together with the rest of his colleagues. (Banging on desks)

1595

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak before I call upon the mover to reply? The Hon. Joe Bossano.

Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, fond as I am of the hon. Member, I find it incredible that he comes here and tells us all the research that he has done because we are not keeping up with the times of what happened in 1857 – that is to say we are now in 1856 in Gibraltar and the rest of the Commonwealth is in 2016. Does he really think that, until he told us today, we did not know what is happening in the rest of the Commonwealth, or we do not know what is happening in Westminster, and that until he arrived here nobody knew? Everybody in this Parliament has known what the rest were doing from the day I arrived in 1972. Indeed, my particular involvement in the CPA has been such that I spoke first at a CPA conference before I spoke in this Chamber in 1972. So the research that he has brought to the House is hardly likely to impress me or make me change my mind, because everything that he has told us I have known since 1972. And certainly in 1972 when I was here it was not the view of the Government of the day or the view of the Opposition of the day that we necessarily had to do what was being done elsewhere simply because it was being done elsewhere.

1615

To suggest that it is essential to have a public accounts committee, otherwise the transparency and the control of the public finances is in danger, and then tell us all the people from Malawi to Swaziland that have a public accounts committee, when everybody knows they are in total chaos in their public finances and the public accounts committees in those countries have not moved one iota in improving the situation ... He must live in the real world, and in the real world there is a logical reason for this.

I have been against the Public Accounts Committee in Government and in Opposition. I think that perhaps is something that he may feel is strange because he happens to be in a party that has got an Opposition view when they are in Opposition and a Government view when they are in Government. But in our case in the GSLP we said we would not support a public accounts committee in opposition and we said it in Government.

1625

No, I am not giving way, because bad habits catch on. (Laughter)

Hon. D A Feetham: You give way and I always give way. He never gives way to me.

Hon Chief Minister: Como que no! I gave way to you before!

Hon. J J Bossano: I think my hon. colleague Mr Picardo gives too much way to you. (Laughter)

So the answer is that it is a conscious policy decision, as far as I am concerned. I can tell him to the extent that if we had had a free vote on the public accounts committee, the most that would have been voting for a public accounts committee would have been 16, because in that free vote I would have voted no. So I want him to be clear.

And I can tell him that the logic of the Public Accounts Committee in the United Kingdom may be that it is not possible for a document ... If this weighs one kilo, theirs must weigh one tonne, because their budget is billions. Their deficit is billions, never mind anything else. So of course it may require a year to go through that.

1640

But of course the hon. Member can do what I did when I was there. When I arrived in this House, Mr Speaker, as you know, the finances of Gibraltar were de facto run by the Financial Secretary. The Financial Secretary, before the Constitution was changed and certainly in 1972, was the man who presented and defended the estimates, and because he was an official 1645 appointed by London there was no shadow – nobody ever questioned the figure. So the politicians argued about the policies but they did not argue about the numbers. The numbers were what the emissary of the colonial power told the colonials they were allowed to spend, and the Financial Secretary's role was not to allow the politicians elected by the people to spend 1650 money that the United Kingdom might think might be something that would create a continued liability for them. That was their role, and the first time somebody actually stood up and questioned the finances of Gibraltar and challenged the approach of the Financial Secretary was when I arrived in 1972 – and I kept on doing it for 32 years from the Opposition and defending it for eight years from Government.

When I used to get the book, I used to use the book as my source of information to seek 1655 further clarification. But let us be clear: if we have a public accounts committee to go through the book, that is not going to do what he wants, which is to get answers to the things that are not in the book. So, in fact, if he thinks that he can come to the Public Accounts Committee and say, 'Ah, well, yes, there is a situation here where the Government has, from the Consolidated Fund, the money in two banks – I want to know why you chose those two banks and I want to 1660 know what day you put it in and I want to know what day you took it out,' which is the kind of information that he thinks is legitimate to question ... Well, look, the Principal Auditor is entitled to do that, because if the Principal Auditor does that he does not do it simply because he feels he wants more information but he might say, 'Why have you put the money ...?' For example, I can imagine that it would have been possible for a Principal Auditor to question – but it was not 1665 questioned; it was a policy decision – what was the logic of borrowing from Barclays Bank, for example, at 5% and then depositing the money back with them at 1% and losing 4% to the benefit of ... It was not questioned for a very simple reason, because the Government said, 'It is a policy decision because we want to be able to give more interest to pensioners, and therefore we want to give more interest to pensioners but we want to have the money readily accessible.' 1670 Well, that is the explanation that was given. It was an explanation that certainly politically I was not happy with, but it was an explanation which, as far as the Principal Auditor was concerned, was sufficient for him not to question it further, because it is not for the Principal Auditor to question the policies of Governments that have been elected by the people.

If the hon. Member cares to analyse the way this book is written, he will realise that he does 1675 what he can do and what he should do, which is to ask the controlling officers, who are the people accountable for the expenditure. So, if we say in this Parliament we want to provide money to a particular institution, it might not be the most sensible thing to do from a fiscal point of view, it might not be the most sensible thing to do from the point of economic growth, but if it is the decision of the Parliament to put a sum of money for a particular institution, then that 1680 cannot be questioned. And if the policy of the Government of the day which was brought here and which was voted here and was included in the estimate ... So what the Principal Auditor does is he gets the report of the Accountant General and goes through every head of expenditure, and if he finds that, for example, there is a policy to collect the arrears of rent, then every year he says, 'What are you doing about the policy of collecting arrears of rent, which is 1685 not happening?' If there was a policy not to collect arrears of rent, then the answer to the Principal Auditor would be that the Government has taken a policy decision that people can live rent free. But as long as the policy is, in theory at least, to collect the arrears, then every year that policy is picked up by the Principal Auditor.

In 1972, when I came in, I took the opportunity that this book gave me to do what I told him 1690 the last time he was doing already, a one man public accounts committee, which ... they all thought I was bestowing an honour by recognising that that was what he was doing. Well, look, I used to do the same when I was sitting there, and this book is in fact an opportunity that the hon. Member has and he will be doing a public service by doing that, because maybe we have not had the time to look at all the things that the Principal Auditor is telling the controlling 1695 officers to do, not the Ministers, but if the controlling officer has his attention drawn to something, then the Minister, if he has got any common sense, will look at it, because it is better 1700 for him to look at it than have to be reminded from the Opposition benches. But if the hon.

Member picks things up and then puts questions on it, which I used to do ... I felt, when I was doing it, that I was helping to improve the quality of the Government on the basis that it was 1705 very probable that the Ministers had not gone through the whole book because they had many other things to do. And therefore, from the Opposition I raised a lot of questions, and this is one way in which, in effect, we are adding in Parliament to the usefulness of the things that the Principal Auditor draws attention to. But I can tell him that he has drawn attention to things years after years after years, and certainly one of the fundamental flaws in what the hon.
1710 Member puts to us ... I know that he, having entered recently into politics and having recently been elected, may feel 'I cannot be held accountable for what has been done by the party that I have joined before I joined it and when that party was in Government' – except that the party that he has joined used to do it to us. The party that he has joined spent 15 years telling people who had not been there 15 years ago that they were responsible for everything that was being 1715 done by the GSLP. So, as far as they were concerned, the present Leader of the GSD was responsible for everything that the GSLP had done when he was in the GSLP. And then, in 2003 when they made this loan, he stopped being responsible for the GSLP because he was only responsible then for the so-called Gibraltar Labour Party, which had a very short life. And then, of course, he joined the other side, and when he joined the other side, by definition, applying the criteria that they introduced of political responsibility, he acquired responsibility in 2007 for all the things that he had criticised before 2007, which he defended subsequently.

1720 So the situation, Mr Speaker, is that we know the history of the Public Accounts Committee, but he has to know the history of the Parliament of Gibraltar and of the decisions that have been taken. And for 15 years that the GSD was in Government, bringing the audited accounts to the House, I think there was only one occasion when there was actually a motion note in the audited accounts – not even a motion saying let's have a vote on approving, because the accounts do not need approval, the accounts are submitted to Parliament for their information and to provide an insight into what the Auditor thinks requires being looked at. Also, in the case, for 1725 example, of the clause that he mentioned, if the Auditor is saying £391,000 of arrears have been paid, you can argue, 'I want to know why the arrears existed in the first place; I am more interested in knowing why only £391,000 has been paid and there is still £130,000 that has not been paid.'

1730 But the point, of course, is that the motion that was brought on the one occasion that it was brought motion, noting – with no vote, because by noting it all that we were seeking was that in fact we should have a debate about the book as a whole. But in practice it was something that only happened once because it was far more useful, given the level of detail that there is, to focus on something and then bring either as a particular motion or a series of questions on a particular area that was thought worth highlighting.

1735 I can tell the hon. Members that another reason why I have always been against is because I believe, frankly, that people elect us either on that side or on this one to accept political responsibility for what happens because the Parliament is suffering, and therefore I do not think it is right that the onus of satisfying the Members of the Opposition or the public should fall on the civil servants. Certainly it may happen in the United Kingdom, but there is a level of anonymity in the United Kingdom because of its size, but I think that if a civil servant is doing his 1740 job and the Department is not working well, then the answer is not to grill the civil servant – you grill me, because it is my job to make sure that the public service is delivering the results. And if, therefore, there is evidence that the service can be improved and it is not being improved, that is the political responsibility that I have acquired when I stood for election and I promised the people that we would deliver a service and that I would deliver it with a prudential control of 1745 public finances. We have been elected to do that. If we do not do that, we have to answer to the Members opposite. If we do not do that because the machinery of the Government is not delivering it, then it is our responsibility to make that machinery deliver. If we tell the people in the machinery to do it and they do not do it because they do not want to do it, then it is a different issue and there are disciplinary measures to be taken.

1750 So, really, I do not think it is in anybody's benefit – either the taxpayer, or the Parliament or the Civil Service – to go down a route which would simply create more aggravation and, in my view, no savings for anybody. But I certainly welcome anything that is in this book that the hon.
Member wants to bring to the attention of the Government either in the Parliament or directly, 1755 and if we have not looked at it ourselves and we have not produced answers and it is brought to the Parliament then we have got the obligation to do it. But I would be opposed, because I was in Government and in a position to say the civil servant who is in the office is the one who has got to come here. We are the ones who have got to sit down and defend it, and we are the ones who have decided to take a job where we can be sacked every four years. And look, they have not sacked me in the last 44 – I do not expect I am at risk.

Hon. Chief Minister: Will the hon. Gentleman give way?

Hon. J J Bossano: I will give way.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am grateful, Mr Speaker, just as the hon. Gentleman sits down, to advise the House that I have now had an opportunity of reviewing, with the assistance of the Clerk of the House and the hon. Gentleman, Mr Costa, the annual accounts of the Principal Auditor with the report of the Principal Auditor for the years 2007-08. I am going to limit myself to those years which are the years when the Hon. the current Leader of the current Opposition 1770 was elected into the Parliament: 2007-08, 2008-09, 2009-10, 2010-11. All of them refer to the impaired loan, so I am afraid he is fixed with knowledge of the impaired loan for the period that he was a Minister – the loan given by the Government of which he became a Member.

Hon. J J Bossano: And so, Mr Speaker, having dealt with that side of it, I just want to put the 1775 hon. Member in the picture on what happened to the GDC and the accounts of the GDC and the auditor of the GDC.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I ask him a question before he moves, and then he can answer?

1780

Hon. J J Bossano: I will give way.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker, I am very grateful to the Hon.
Mr Bossano.

He has said during the course of his intervention – which I found extremely interesting, I have to say – that he has always been against the Public Accounts Committee. I have not looked at Hansard, but I have a recollection that Peter Caruana, as he then was, had on occasion stood up in this House when he was talking about ... and the recollection goes back to 2011, the debate that we had on parliamentary reform, where he I think said that he had offered or suggested a Public Accounts Committee to the hon. Gentleman but the hon. Gentleman had, in fact, never 1790 been in favour, which is something that he has confirmed during the course of today. Is my recollection correct that between 1996 and 2000 – I was not here in Gibraltar at the time – there was a suggestion for the setup of a Public Accounts Committee by the then Government and the hon. Gentleman was not in favour of it?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not think there was a formal suggestion; I think there was a sounding out of whether the position of the GSLP had changed, and the answer was it had not changed post 1996, and it has not changed in 2016. He knows that in the GSLP we tend not to change, having been there himself.

1800 I can tell him something that was suggested to us, given that my colleague the Chief Minister mentioned the frequency of questions that we have today. One of the things that was suggested at one stage by the Chief Minister which we rejected was that we should have a Prime Minister's Question Time equivalent with the caveat that there would be a limit to the time that we could 1805 spend on each question, and to the time that the whole session would last and to the number of questions. That is to say he was prepared to come and answer questions from the Opposition on condition that he said, 'Well, you can spend between ...' I do not know how familiar he was with what used to be before, or whether he ever took the trouble to listen, but the tendency was that the answers were frequently very, very long in respect to the questions. So he actually suggested that there should be a 15-minute limit to each question, which meant, in effect, that you would 1810 spend one minute asking the question and he would spend 14 minutes giving you the answer – and then it would be the next question. And there would be something like a three or four-hour session and there would be a limit to the number of questions. So, in fact, the price for being able to ask questions more frequently was a constraint on time. (A Member: A guillotine.) We said we would rather stay with the system we had, and that system meant that, okay, we were only able to ask questions once a year, or twice a year, or three times a year, and we just put 1815 3,000 questions in at one time.

So that is an indication of the concept of transparency and of the rights of the Opposition to ask questions and of the obligations to him. I am not suggesting that he would behave like that if he was here, but he needs to understand, that when in Government, the party that he has joined felt that it was perfectly proper to have those views and to hold them. And why should 1820 we or the public or the electorate believe that what they say in Opposition is what they would do in Government, when the practice of the past 15 years shows the opposite – shows that they were saying certain things before they came in?

For example, in 1996 they came in and they said they were going to publish audited accounts of all the companies, and they did – of all the companies of the time of the GSLP. They came in 1825 and the companies of the GSLP were audited. The position of the GSLP was if a company is trading, why should we put a company, because it is state owned, in a position that a private company is not, and when we legislate so that everybody has to do it, then all the Government companies would have to do it and we had a commitment to do it for everybody and there would have been a level playing field. He came in and he then informed the House that he would 1830 bring in audited accounts, and he did – up to 1996, and then after 1996 nothing happened. So when he was saying 'I will make sure that the companies are audited' he should have said 'for the period before I was there, but I will stop doing it when I am there.' And when he came to the GDC he was critical of the fact that we tabled in this House audited accounts of the GDC, audited by an auditing firm from the private sector – the area where the hon. Member has come from – 1835 because we felt it was perfectly okay for the audit to be done by private auditors and we did not want to invest in making the Government Audit Department bigger and spend more money in order to get the accounts of the GDC Gibraltar Development Corporation, which was set up ... If he reads its constitution, it was set up not for what it was subsequently used for, which was to employ people and put them in Government Departments, but in order to effectively bring 1840 about the regeneration of the economy of Gibraltar, which needed regenerating because of the problem that we had with the MOD run down. In fact, when I was in Malta recently I was talking to a colleague of ours who is the chairman of what they now call Malta Enterprise, which was previously the Malta Development Corporation, which, like ours, was copied by them from the Welsh Development Corporation. So we took the Welsh Development Corporation as a model in 1845 1988 and they had done the same thing 20 years before us. One of the things is that we are now going to be working very closely with them because we have got similar interests and the synergy between the two of us I think will be of benefit to their economy and to ours. And that corporation that had that function, which was really acting as the agency to promote inward investment, was audited by private auditors and brought to the House.

1850 This was a big crime, we were told by the GSD, this is a big crime. The greatest living Gibraltarian said, 'Oh, something has got to be done about this!' and he brought an amendment to the legislation, to the Act, and removed the clause about the auditing and put in there that it should be audited by the Principal Auditor 'when the Government so decides'. I voted against it – we voted against it from that side of the House. We opposed it. We said, 'Look, there is 1855 nothing to stop you using the Principal Auditor if you want to use it.' We chose not to use the Principal Auditor; we chose to have a private auditor. We said they had to be audited every year.
You say you are going to be more transparent – presumably because he thinks you cannot trust the auditors in the private sector. But we said, 'Well, look, if you want to do that, then that is fine, but you should not make it mandatory – it should be left to the Government of the day 1860 whether they want to use a private auditor or whether you want to use a Government auditor.'

The reality of it is that the last accounts brought to the House audited were the 1996 accounts. They were brought here in 1997, audited by the private sector, and the change that removed the private sector audit was not replaced by a public sector audit, it was replaced by zero audit – no audit. Clearly, I can only suppose, knowing the greatest living Gibraltarian like I 1865 did, that he probably realised that it was not such a good idea, but rather than come back and recognise that maybe I was right and maybe he was wrong and that perhaps it was not such a good idea, rather than do that he just spent 15 years without doing an audit. I do not see how it could be an improvement on what we had that there has been no audit since, and every year the Principal Auditor has been saying, since it changed, 'When is it going to happen?' Well, the 1870 answer is we told him from the beginning it is not going to happen because we do not want you to do it. We want any of the main principal audit firms that audit banks and audit gaming companies. If they are good enough to audit those, they are good enough to audit the accounts of the GDC.

That is the background. That is the research that the hon. Member should be doing, and then 1875 he would realise that he must not fall into the trap of thinking that everything that everybody does on one side of the House must by definition be bad because you are on the other side of the House. There may be things that are mistaken policies, but there is usually a logic and a reason for doing those things, and frankly I think that with the best of intentions that he might be doing it, as he claims, the reality of it is that it is not productive, and I agree with the Chief 1880 Minister that it is not a productive way to bring it about. But certainly if he wants to achieve a contribution to the efficiency of the public sector, using this book to bring questions would be a way of helping us.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

1885 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton, exercising his right to reply.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, thank you. Marlene, do you want to?

Hon. Mr Speaker: Did you want to speak first?

Hon. R M Clinton: No, I have got to be last.

Mr Speaker: Yes, certainly, the Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

1895 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am very concerned by the information that I have just heard this afternoon and I would like to take some time to better understand the information that has been disclosed. Until then I will abstain, but I do wish that Members on both sides would be more constructive to their approach.

1900 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, thank you.

I am always indebted to the Hon. Mr Joe Bossano for his contribution, which I always find instructive, (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) especially when it comes to the history lessons on this House, on which I am sure nobody can compete with him – other than you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: I found it instructive many years ago. (Laughter)

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if my motion today has achieved anything at all, it is perhaps in two or three areas.

Firstly, at last perhaps one of the Principal Auditor's wishes to have the audit legislation amended will now become part of the parliamentary agenda, and that I think at least I may have succeeded in convincing the Members opposite is something they may wish to consider doing.

The second thing is, it is remarkable we spent ... I was not keeping track of the time, but it certainly must have been at least an hour debating –

Mr Speaker: And a half.

Hon. R M Clinton: An hour and a half debating one particular clause of a 300-page report. I am sure if we all went through the report clause by clause we would have lots of things to say about what the Principal Auditor has or has not found. (Interjection) But, Mr Speaker, it goes to prove my point that if we spent an hour and a half on one clause, can you imagine how long we would be here if we had to go through the entire document clause by clause? This is why I have suggested constructively that a public accounts committee would be the best forum to do that. But the Hon. Mr Bossano has at least had the decency to lay out his thoughts and rational thinking behind why he is opposed to a public accounts committee, as opposed to just completely deleting my motion and asserting his own motion, as the Chief Minister has done. And for that I thank the Hon. Mr Bossano, because he has at least had the honesty and clarity of thought to set out what his position is.

Finally, Mr Speaker, I still stand by what I said when I stood up and presented my original motion, and that is I do not see there is any harm to Gibraltar – in fact, I see it as a benefit – to have a public accounts committee. It does not have to be exactly the same model as Westminster; we can come up with our own version. I am sure if other countries have managed to do so, we can do so as well.

1930

With that, Mr Speaker, I cannot really commend the Chief Minister's motion but I will stand down. (Laughter)

1935

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I call for a division in the vote.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the motion and a division will be called.

1940

A division was called and voting resulted as follows:

FOR

The Hon. P J Balban
The Hon. J J Bossano
The Hon. Dr J E Cortes
The Hon. N F Costa
The Hon. Dr J J Garcia

The Hon. F R Picardo
The Hon. Miss S J Sacramento

AGAINST

The Hon. E J Phillips
The Hon. E J Reyes

ABSTAINED

The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon

ABSENT

The Hon. A J Isola
The Hon. S E Linares

The motion as amended is carried by 8 votes to 6, with one abstention and two Members absent.

Definition of public debt –
Amended motion carried

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

1945 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

This House notes that section 73(1) of the Gibraltar Constitution Order 2006 defines public debt as all debt charges for which Gibraltar is liable. This House further notes that under the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act, public debt is further defined as any borrowings of money by the Government. This House thus considers and resolves that borrowings by Government owned and controlled companies for Government purposes, whether secured on public assets or unsecured, should thus be considered and included in the measure of public debt and audited by the Principal Auditor, as ultimately Gibraltar is liable in the event of any default.

And so, Mr Speaker, another déjà vu moment for the Chief Minister.

1950 I brought this motion to the House because I truly believe that the people of Gibraltar deserve to know once and for all what the true debt position of this nation is. The GSLP fought an election in 2011 on the basis that the then Government was addicted to debt, and now of course it really cannot bring itself to tell the people the truth of its financial position. It should be a matter of legal certainty and not a political football what the true state of our finances are.

1955 The Government, I note, has accepted the legal grounding for the first part of my motion, namely that public debt is, and I quote, ‘all debt charges for which Gibraltar is liable’. You would think that that is sufficient for the Government to accept the logic of the rest of my motion, in that you cannot then hide public debt behind public companies.

Mr Speaker, I rehearsed part of this argument when debating the increase in the public debt limit earlier this year when I gave an example of what had happened in the Cayman Islands, and I shall repeat what I said as follows, for the benefit of Members.

1960 In the Cayman Islands the finances became so dire that in November 2011 the Cayman Islands had to agree a so-called framework for fiscal responsibility with the United Kingdom government. This required the Cayman government to pass into law the Public Management of Finance (Amendment) Law 2012. As part of that law, they had to define what public borrowing was deemed to include, and in that Act the following was deemed to be included: conventional 1965 borrowing from commercial and concessional institutions; the capitalised value of all alternative financing transactions, including PFI/PPP arrangements that would place future financial obligations in terms of increased expenditure or reduced revenue on the Cayman Island government; the risk-weighted debts and PPP/PFI arrangements of statutory authorities, government’s corporations and companies; borrowing that was contracted by the Cayman
1970 Island government but then not lent; and any other debts guaranteed by the Cayman Islands government. That was pretty much a very tight definition that was handed to the Cayman Islands government by the United Kingdom, but there can be no doubt from that definition what is to be included in the definition of public borrowing. At the time I challenged the Government to adopt such a definition of public debt, as it would once and for all finish this discussion.

1975 Mr Speaker, all this is before the Chief Minister in his Budget address revealed a £300 million borrowing secured on public housing estates that, in the Government’s words, and I quote:

To clarify, the £300 million did not become part of the Government’s useable cash reserves but of the cash pool of the Government companies ... It has nothing to do with the Government’s direct borrowing or spending ...

I quote again: 'It has nothing to do with the Government's direct borrowing or spending'. Mr Speaker, I am baffled. If the Government did not borrow that money, then who did? Was it the Government's fairy godmother perhaps?

1980 Mr Speaker, I would like to quote from the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act under the heading Section 12 'Loan agreements and interest rate swap agreements to be tabled', which states as follows:

12. Every agreement specified in section 11

– loans and interest rate swaps –

shall be laid on the table of the Parliament at the next meeting of the Parliament commencing after the date on which the agreement is made.

1985 Mr Speaker, we have learnt in this House that the agreement was finalised on 31st May 2016. In his Budget reply on 8th July 2016, the Chief Minister protested as regards its disclosure, and I quote:

In respect of the £300 million financing, we have disclosed that in a speech by the Chief Minister at the first sitting at Parliament after the transaction was closed.

Mr Speaker, is it me, or does the Chief Minister's language reflect that action required by the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act, other than he has not tabled any agreements? Is this, then, not public debt?

1990 I am, as usual, grateful to the Editor of the New People, the Chief Minister's favourite publication, and indeed mine, who wrote the following on 29th September 2016 in his editorial, and I quote:

The Government has always argued that the main reason for raising a £300 million loan is that there was an opportunity to raise a public loan

– I repeat, public loan –

at a very reasonable rate and payable long term.

1995 The editor of the New People is therefore of the view that the £300 million is a public loan and thus a public debt. The editor of the New People then goes on to say:

Whether the Government then uses this loan to eliminate more expensive loan agreements or for capital projects is a different matter.

And then he goes on:

If a loan is not repaid, this would not happen in any circumstances given that should there be difficulties in meeting the repayments, which of course is a totally hypothetical situation because the Government has other assets and recourse to its rainy day funds, it can divert funds from other sources to pay this particular loan.

2000 Mr Speaker, a loan is a loan is a loan, as recognised by the New People, and a public loan at that. It is not a miraculous investment and it is a loan secured on public housing estate buildings, as the Chief Minister himself has admitted. I truly fear for the state of our public finances if the Government can pull off a stunt like mortgaging public assets and yet not increasing public debt. It is a magic trick worthy of Houdini. This is a public loan, pure and simple. As an accountant and former auditor, I was taught to consider the substance of a transaction over its legal form. The Government is trying to hide behind a strict legal interpretation of a loan and not call it public debt, when in substance there is no doubt it is a debt of Gibraltar and not a debt of the

Mr Speaker, the Government has delighted in an official press release to call me sanctimonious. Well, let me illustrate my point by considering what would be their interpretation of a 10th commandment, which, for those who forget, starts off saying 'thou shall not covet thy neighbour's house'. The Government are, in effect, acting like commercial lawyers and saying, 'Okay, we understand the 10th, but if it's not your immediate neighbour that's okay, it's fine, because, strictly speaking, the law allows that – and besides, other people have done it before.'

Mr Speaker, the Government are missing the point. We are not sitting in this House as commercial lawyers trying to find clever ways of exploiting legal loopholes to suit political agendas, but as lawmakers. He himself said it earlier today. We are in this House here as lawmakers who are meant to set down the principles that govern us and bind us together as a nation.

Mr Speaker, the people of Gibraltar deserve to know where we, as a nation, stand financially, and thus I commend my motion to the House. Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in terms of the motion moved by the Hon. Mr Clinton. Does anyone wish to ...? The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker déjà vu indeed, but actually, I am pleased to say, now I am presented with a slightly different argument than the ones that we were this morning, although a much less effective argument and one which is so considerably flawed that it will be easy even for my children – if they are watching, because it is obviously I am not going to make it for their bedtime – to understand.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman starts by saying we need to have legal certainty on what Gibraltar's debt is. Well, we have legal certainty on what Gibraltar's debt is. We had legal certainty between 1972 ... Well, let me start in 1969 under the old Constitution and the initial Borrowing Powers Act. We had legal certainty between 1988 and 1996, we had legal certainty between 1996 and 2011, and we have had legal certainty since 2011. Of course we have.

Mr Speaker, it is one thing to say 'I think that this is, in effect, public debt and if you add them together you would be exceeding ...' You can say that if you like, but you cannot say it is not certain. Of course it is certain, it is entirely certain; and if it were not certain, the Principal Auditor should have said so, because if the Principal Auditor were looking at substance above form and said, 'That should be captured', then it would be captured, because he is not the only person who is an accountant who has been told to look at substance over form.

Now his argument is going to be 'But this is in the company structure and the Auditor has no jurisdiction over that.' No no, it is that their argument is that this is not the company structure, because they start from the premise that this is a debt of Gibraltar. Mr Speaker, this is not trying to be an artful lawyer; it is that Gibraltar is the Exchequer of Gibraltar and if something is in a company, even if the shareholder is Gibraltar, then it is not a liability of Gibraltar. And this is not Picardo talking; this is everybody who has been dealing with the public finances of Gibraltar since 1969. AACR, IWBP, GSLP, GSD, all of them and all of the correspondent Principal Auditors and all of the correspondent Financial Secretaries that between 1969 and 2006 were appointed by the United Kingdom out of the National Audit Office and they all thought that this was the way to define Gibraltar, and between 1996 and 2006 in particular, where we had UK-appointed Financial Secretaries and we had the invention of company borrowing by the GSD.

And so the hon. Gentleman needs to understand. He might not, from what I detect of him, like lawyers. It is up to him whether he likes lawyers or not. I do not dislike accountants. I do not judge people based on what their profession is. I know there are some who do, (Laughter) but this is not just lawyers. This is auditors and accountants and Financial Secretaries who are accountants, who have all understood that there is clear certainty – until, in the past four or five years, even before he arrived, it is clear that somebody thought that the argument that they thought they could make to salvage an unsalvageable political career, was to try and pretend that there was an issue with liability.

2060 It is clear that there is legal certainty as to what the debt of Gibraltar is, and the best demonstration of it came in the course of his own speech, because in his motion he quotes the position under the Gibraltar Constitution and the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act and then goes on to refer to the amendment in the Cayman Islands which actually specifically by law imposed by the UK – they came very close to direct rule for issues unrelated to any of the sort of thing that we are debating here, very close to direct rule – they have a specific law that provides 2065 the things that the hon. Gentleman provided for. We do not. So he cannot, by a motion, say to us ... impute that that definition adopted in the Cayman Islands is how we must read the different definition which has existed in our law. It is utter nonsense, and one does not have to be a lawyer, an accountant or more than a four-year-old to understand it. There is a specific provision in the Cayman Islands.

2070 Let's be very clear: we consider that in this area we will continue to act as the Gibraltar Social Democrats did when they invented the concept of company borrowing not being a liability of Gibraltar and therefore not being part of the public debt – and they sit as Members of the GSD absent the hon. Lady. One of the things that they say to the public is judge them on their record and how well they did. Well, look, on this we agree they did well and we are continuing what 2075 they did. So what he is trying to persuade us to do, as I told him this morning, is to upend their practice, and he is trying to do it not even by an amendment to a law. He is trying to do it by a motion that the law should be interpreted in a particular way, which would be valueless even if we were to agree. Even if we were to agree, the Financial Secretary, the Principal Auditor and the Chief Justice, if something was challenged before them, would say, 'Look, this is nonsense – 2080 you have all had a spanking good time, you spent three hours debating it, you told us what you think it means, but you were not making law, you were having a debate on a motion.'

Hansard cannot be referred to when interpreting legislation because of something we debate in a motion. The rule is that you can look – I think it is Pepper v Hart – at Hansard when the Parliament that is making the law is debating the law if there is uncertainty in the law. There is 2085 no uncertainty. The only persons creating uncertainty as to the public debt of Gibraltar are the people who have now been elected for the GSD, because the people who were previously elected for the GSD are very clear as to what is public debt and what is company debt. It is the new GSD that is trying to undo the old GSD's certainties and is proposing that there is no certainty. But debating it in a motion would never change any of that.

2090 The hon. Gentleman can bring an amendment to the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act, and if it is not one that he has cleared with the Government he knows what the result is going to be; and if it is one that tries to overturn what we are saying now, that we support the way they used to do it, he knows what the result is going to be. We are going to stick with Peter Caruana's way of doing things. We want to be like the greatest Gibraltarian of all time.

2095 So how can he be baffled when I told him that the £300 million that we borrowed was not public debt? It is very simple: it is borrowed through Government companies, therefore it is not a debt of Gibraltar even though the shareholder may be the Government of Gibraltar – because there is a very big difference between a company borrowing and the Government borrowing. He needs to understand it. The Government has not entered into an agreement. They themselves
2100 have produced documents, as if they were producing something secret out of a treasure trove, that demonstrate that the estates were in companies – and we will come back to that issue when we have the meeting. In companies. They were not held by the Crown. The Crown divested itself of ownership – we say in their time; for some reason they say in our time – in their time. Therefore, the borrower is the company, not the Government, and there is no
2105 Government guarantee. I do not know if the hon. Gentleman has understood that: there is no Government guarantee for Government company borrowing, because if there is the Government has to come here and by resolution of the House the guarantee has to be approved. So the Government companies trade without a guarantee.

2110 But, of course, as the hon. Gentleman said during the course of the debate, it is unlikely that the Government is ever going to go bankrupt – I do not know whether they are going to row back from that – and the Government will stand behind its companies, because that is the way it does business. But it does not have to, because there is no Government guarantee. This is an issue of legal liability. Public finance works on the basis of legal liabilities.

2115 He knows that there is a company called Credit Finance established with money from the Savings Bank, owned by the Government, etc. He knows that there is a Government company called Gibraltar Capital Assets. It does not come here immediately that it has to be tabled in that way; it comes here in the first debate, because it does not have to be tabled. It is not caught by the rules the hon. Gentleman is talking about. I am telling him because I believe that the people should know. That is how they found out, because I believe that the people should know, even though it is not on that part of the balance sheet which is public debt. That is why I told them at 2120 the first meeting of the Parliament in the Budget debate after we had done the transaction, but not because it is caught by the rule. He is confusing all of that.

Mr Speaker, the one thing that I am impressed about is that ... I have never seen the New People quoted so authoritatively in this House (Laughter) until the hon. Member was elected. I know that he got himself into a lot of trouble for quoting it at Peter Caruana. He will not get into any trouble for quoting it at me. But I must tell him that I speak for the Government, and not the New People. It is not the Gazette, although I am not entirely disabused of the idea that it might perhaps in future be the Gazette. Given that the hon. Gentleman is almost supporting that people should read it, perhaps it should be the Gibraltar Gazette and New People that we should issue in the future. So he is wrong to say, ‘Ah, but the New People said this’, as if that were one of the documents in the legal hierarchy of documentation which he can look at to make his case. I shall tell the editor of the New People of the fondness with which he regards everything that he writes, and if I ever have anything to say to him and I cannot find him or raise him by phone – he does not appear to have e-mail – I shall just put an article in the New People in my name and be sure that at least by Thursday morning he will have read it. 2135

I am the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, we are the Ministers for Gibraltar, we speak for Gibraltar and the official documentation of Gibraltar is not the New People. It does teach you something though, Mr Speaker: if you ban someone from reading something, then the last thing they are going to do is stop reading it, and I know that the hon. Gentleman was banned by Peter Caruana from reading the New People – and look at the effect it has had. I should go round banning people from reading the New People and perhaps the circulation would increase, as it deserves to increase. 2140

Then he says, Mr Speaker, a loan is a loan. Well, of course a loan is a loan and you look at substance and not at form, but whose loan is it? It is, frankly, infantile – and I say that despite being as fond of him as the Hon. the Father of the House is, although perhaps today that fondness might have been lost in the passion with which I field the arguments, but it is absolutely infantile to think that you can look through a company. The hon. Gentleman has made a career of being in banking and in Gibraltar and dealing with companies. The shareholder of a company is not the person with liability; it is the company. There is something called the doctrine of separate legal personality and the shareholder has a different personality to the company. And so for the hon. Gentleman to say ‘I see straight through a company where the shareholder is the Government of Gibraltar’ is really something that he knows is not the reality. There is no guarantee on public assets either, because they made the case that we had alienated the assets into the companies. There is the reality. And he says ‘I fear what would happen if they get away with creating a mortgage over public assets and it is not public debt.’ Well, then, he must be very fearful of going around telling people that he represents the Gibraltar Social Democrats, because they are the ones who showed us how to do it. They showed us. They sunk the estates into the companies, but more so they took a loan using Government assets, creating a mortgage over Government assets, to invest in the Midtown development when it was being carried out by one of their favourite developers. Remember that? That did not increase public 2150 2155 2160 debt. They took a loan over Gibraltar Car Parks when they had cars parks in there, and that did not increase public debt.

2165 So I am sorry to say that the wizard is the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, not me. I am no David Copperfield. I am no magician. But you can only make the arguments the hon. Gentleman is making if you look at it from the point of view of turning a complete Nelsonian blind eye to what they represent, to what they were trying to continue in 2011 and in 2015. We have no fairy godmother. We work very hard indeed for Gibraltar to ensure that Gibraltar is able to take advantage of the opportunities that present to it as Government.

2170 I recognise the hon. Lady is leaving. I am sorry that we have to sit so late tonight, I genuinely am.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I appreciate that you normally [Inaudible]

Hon. Chief Minister: I am sorry about that.

2175 We have to work very hard indeed, Mr Speaker, to create opportunities for Gibraltar and then decide whether those opportunities are taken by the Government itself or by the company structure which we inherited from the GSD.

2180 It is because we are lawmakers that in this place we must respect the laws that are already made as well, unless we believe they should be changed. He obviously thinks we need to be going down a Cayman sort of road. I suggest he should speak to the Chief Minister of the Cayman Islands, the Premier, about what he thinks about what the UK did to him and to his country by the imposition of that definition of public debt. He might find that his advice might not be to pursue that sort of definition. We have to respect the laws that are made, and if we want to change laws we do not have to come with motions about how laws are interpreted, we have to come with amendments and win the 10-7 debate, and either pass it with 17 or 8-9 or in some other way.

2185 People do deserve to know what the public debt is, and they do know what it is. When they made such a song and dance of what they said the public debt was before the election and they said that was the principle plank on which they were defending their manifesto, their pamphlet – that and the explosion that could happen at North Mole and take out most of Gibraltar ... Those are the two issues on which they fought the election, and they were so roundly rejected by the people they had to accept that the people had confidence about the way in which we are running the economy and the public finances and that their view was one which did not prosper.

2195 Given all of that, Mr Speaker, and given the events of this morning in this House, I think the only appropriate way to deal with this motion is to propose an amendment to it. I therefore give notice that I move the following amendment to the private Member's motion presented by Mr Clinton, which dealt with section 73(1) of the Gibraltar Constitution, and that is namely to delete every word after the words 'This House' when they appear in the third paragraph of the motion, with the following words:

This House thus further endorses the motion approved by the House already today and standing in the name of the Chief Minister, which approved the practice established under the former GSD administration under both the 1969 and 2006 Constitutions that borrowings by Government owned and controlled companies are not considered and included in the measure of public debt.

2200 Mr Speaker, I shall pause before I speak on the amendment whilst the Clerk kindly circulates it.

2205 Mr Speaker, I understand hon. Members now have the proposed amendment. What this amendment does, obviously, is reflect what I have said during the course of the debate this morning and what I have said during the course of the debate this afternoon about the reasons why it is right to continue with the definitions as they are today, and why in fact just enjoying a debate on a motion – the sort of thing that all of us enjoy, otherwise we would not be in this Parliament – is not going to avail us of an opportunity to change the definitions and interpretations of a law and a constitution, however much fun it may be to debate those definitions.

2210 Having dealt with all the things that the hon. Gentleman has said already, and having already this morning indicated why I believe this was the right conclusion for the House to reach on the similar motion which I brought standing in my name, I intend to say very little other than I commend the motion as amended to the House and I ask the House to support the amendment that I now put before it.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the amendment moved by the Chief Minister, and therefore I invite hon. Members to speak on it.

2220 Hon. T N Clinton: Mr Speaker, the editor of the New People will be most disappointed this evening to hear that the Chief Minister disagrees entirely with his analysis. I am sure that Joe will appreciate what I am saying, yes?

2225 We have heard today, or in fact just now, the Chief Minister say, ‘Ah, well, look, this borrowing, this £300 million, is not on that side of the balance sheet.’ Well, what side of the balance sheet is it on, then? There are only two sides to it, and in this particular case it would be a liability; so if it is not on the balance sheet it is off balance sheet, as we have always maintained.

2230 Mr Speaker, in the 2015 General Election, the one in which the Chief Minister is so fond of reminding us that 70% of the electorate voted for him and his party, I wonder if they would have voted for him if he had been entirely honest with them – if he had told them the day before the General Election he had incorporated Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd and it was his intention to mortgage the buildings, you will recall in that, on the Government housing estates, six of them, for £300 million. If you read their GSLP manifesto, there is not a word about it in there. And he has the audacity to say, ‘Well, look, it’s in a company, we cannot pierce the veil of incorporation – you should know that, even if you’re not a lawyer.’ Yes, of course I know that. I also know 2235 about sham companies and the cases where you do pierce the veil. And what he actually said just now, which I am sure will be in Hansard ... He said, ‘Mr Speaker, this Government stands behind its companies.’ Well, if that is not a guarantee, what is?

2245 I could have perhaps accepted it if he had said, ‘Mr Clinton, we need to borrow £300 million, we are going to reschedule the debt, we are going to set up an SPV, we are going to mortgage the estates and then we are going to transfer that money into the Government’s coffers.’ But he has not done that; he has kept it off the Government books. If that money had then found its way onto the Government books by way of additional borrowing, then we would not be having this discussion because then the official gross debt of Gibraltar would be somewhere in the region of, excluding Credit Finance, £700-odd million. Simple maths. If you add Credit Finance, it would be over £1 billion.

2250 And so, Mr Speaker, I really cannot accept this amendment to my motion, although of course he has the majority – although I did find it interesting when the Father of the House did say, ‘If I was not subject to the collective vote I would vote in whatever way I would wish,’ which begs the question ... well, I thought he did already. In any case, I think, no matter what I say, the general public will see this magic trick for what it is. It is nothing more than a sleight of hand: he 2255 has taken £300 million of public assets, raised money on it and he will have us all believe it is not public debt. Well, Mr Speaker, I wish him luck in trying to convince the public of that.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Any other contributor to the amendment? The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, very briefly.

The hon. Gentleman has asked what has changed from the practice under the GSD administration and the practice now. Well, let me summarise – and I am reiterating some of the points that I have made before, but let me summarise: Greece in 2008; worldwide recession; the move to greater financial transparency across nations, particularly in Europe; Credit Finance has happened; and a £300 million mortgage of the six estates. That is what has happened – and, my hon. learned Friend Mr Phillips reminds me as well, Brexit – and in those circumstances we should be moving towards greater not lesser transparency, which is what we are advocating.

Mr Speaker, it really does not, in our view, matter, nor should it matter to them, whether the position of the GSD pre 2008 was the fact that Government-owned companies and the debt of Government-owned companies did not count as Government debt. At the end of the day, since I have been the Leader of the Opposition in 2013, one thing that they cannot accuse me of not having been consistent on is this point, because from the very first moment that I stood up and I started talking about these things, I said two things: one, I actually think Credit Finance ... effectively, the Government, in what it is doing, is breaching the legal borrowing limits. That is one thing that I said, and the hon. Gentleman made some of the points that he is making today. And secondly, the point I made was that even if technically there is no breach of the legal borrowing limit, because technically it does not form part of the debt of the Government, the reality is that in a community like Gibraltar we ought to be looking at the substance – what is the indebtedness of the community, not just technically the Government, but the community and that includes Government-owned companies. The hon. Gentleman says Government-owned companies are a separate legal personality – yes, of course they are a separate legal personality – one of the most trite statements the hon. Gentleman has made, but of course the Government is a shareholder but the Government is also, effectively, through public servants, also controls those Government-owned companies and are directors of those Government-owned companies. Nobody is going to say to me that the Chief Secretary – when he was, because the position changed and they are now corporate directors, but the Chief Secretary and the Financial Secretary, when they were directors of Credit Finance Company Ltd, they were making decisions in relation to what loans would be made by that company devoid of the opinions and the guidance of Government. That is not how it operates, Mr Speaker. The reality is that at the heart of this debate what we have is an argument on this side of the House that we should be realistic about how we view the public indebtedness of this community, and therefore we ought to take into account the debt of Government-owned companies and their view, which is, 'Well, no, let's take the narrow, technical, legal view, hide behind corporate legal personality, just simply to argue that our gross debt is £446 million, when if you take into account the debt of Government-owned companies, it would be over £1.1 billion.'

2280

2295

That is really the substance of the debate, that is the heart of this debate, and that is what really divides that side of the House from this side of the House, and of course I commend not only to this House but I commend to the community generally that our view is the correct view, because at the end of the day you cannot talk about the indebtedness, what this community owes, without taking into account that £700 million or £800 million that Government-owned companies actually owe. For that reason, we will be voting against the amendments, and for all the reasons that my hon. Friend very eloquently, I have to say, and in his usual erudite way has espoused in the course of his own intervention, Mr Clinton. We will be voting against the amendment by the Chief Minister. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Is there any other contributor to the amendment?
I will, then, call on the Chief Minister to reply.

2310 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is really, frankly, quite incredible to have to be dealing with these arguments. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition says he has been consistent – well, as usual, he has been totally inconsistent, and I am going to start there, Mr Speaker.

He sat next to the former Chief Minister in this House during the course of the Budget debate of 2011 and subsequently on a motion brought by the former Chief Minister, saying that I was 2315 unfit to govern Gibraltar because I said, ‘If you take the Gibraltar debt as it is today and you take the company debt and you bring it together, and the Savings Bank debt’ –

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
No, you were asked about the gross debt.

Hon. Chief Minister: In fact, the Hon. the Father of the House is right – he was arguing that we should not be dealing with the gross debt, we should be dealing only with the net debt. But on top of that, if you threw in the liability of the Government at the time in respect of what was not public debt –

2325

Hon. J J Bossano: Which we never criticised.

Hon. Chief Minister: – which we never criticised and I was very clear about, we would have exceeded the spending limit. And they all sat here and said it was terrible to even mention that.

So, Mr Speaker, the idea that he can say that he has been consistent in anything – his politics in particular, let alone this issue – is completely undone. It is completely undone. But he says, ‘The community must know this and the community must know that.’ Well, this is the argument he was making in the election and seven out of 10 people in the community told him, ‘No, actually, we do not think you are right about that – we want to pursue the GSLP Liberal approach instead.’

So when he starts talking about Brexit and Greece and those things being the reason why we should shackle ourselves even more and we should put ourselves into more strictures, not give ourselves more flexibility, I am left thinking in the words of that song, that this must be ‘a life of elusion, a life of control mixed with confusion’ and ask myself what we are doing here, because I cannot be hearing these things from the people who were doing them for 16 years, when he was sitting here like one of those puppy dogs that nods at the back of a car, nodding at everything that Mr Caruana said when he was doing exactly these things, and then saying, ‘Well, you would be breaching the borrowing limits if this were taken together, even if technically they are not to be taken together.’ He is a lawyer; he spends his life arguing technicalities. At least Mr Clinton can allege that he is not a lawyer and he does not argue technicalities – although much of what he has said is technically completely wrong. (Hon. J J Bossano: Yes.) But he is not just accusing us of getting this wrong; he is accusing us and every auditor and every Financial Secretary at least since 1996 of getting it wrong.

To hear the Hon. Mr Clinton say that he knows about sham companies, as if this were a sham company – is that the spectre he was trying to raise by saying, ‘I know about companies and I know about the doctrine of separate legal personality and I know about sham companies’? How dare he even pretend to even raise that spectre about a company and a structure established by the Royal Bank of Canada, which has wanted to become involved with Gibraltar, by Stocks & Co, by Hassans, the law firm that were advisers ... of a company that has James Levy QC and John Collado and Charles Serruya as its directors – that is what he is saying is a sham company – and about a structure on which we were advised on by Peter Montegriffo, who I understand was always the man he supported for the leadership of the GSD, the founder of the GSD. That is what he is calling a sham company, or trying to pretend to use that language to raise that spectre of. For goodness sake, Mr Speaker, they really do need to engage brain before tongue – or, in his case, abacus before tongue if he is going to start making any sensible points.

Mr Speaker, this is not magic, this is not sleight of hand, this is not an area where there is a lack of disclosure. This is an area where I have told him that through the Government company structure we have borrowed £300 million, where I have told him what the security is. That is what we have told them. There is no sleight of hand when what you do is say, 'This is what I have done.' Now, if you try and hide it, if you try to pretend it is not there, the hon. Gentleman might then want to accuse somebody of sleight of hand, which would be exactly what happened under the GSD when they mortgaged public assets, through the Government company structure that they created, to raise a loan by a mortgage to invest in the Midtown development. That was sleight of hand, applying his definition, not somebody saying, 'I have done this, I think it is a very good thing; I have done it through the company structure,' and saying it in this Parliament.

That is the problem that they have. I do not have the problem of getting away with anything. I am not trying to get away with anything; I am doing what I think is the right thing for Gibraltar and I am explaining it. The problem that they have is that they have to create the spectre that I am somehow trying to do something which is sleight of hand, although we have spent the better part of the three months since we have done it talking about it and I have invited them to a meeting to see it all. (Interjection) Yes, I know you are waiting for it. I have been to New York to defend Gibraltar's sovereignty, which is more important than sitting round the table with you and helping you to understand something that most people would have understood already. (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Hear, hear.)

And so, Mr Speaker, what needs to happen is that people need to not fall into the trap – and I think very few ever will, perhaps less now than even in December last year – of thinking that there is somehow a lack of certainty in the calculation of Gibraltar's debt liability, because that does not exist. However hard the hon. Gentlemen might try to create that uncertainty, they cannot do so, because when people come to make the determinations as to debt they look at the law, not at press releases. They do not even look at Hansards of motions. They look at what the Constitution says in section 73, they look at what the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act says, and that is how they make determinations which are certain – the way that they have been making them for the past 20 years.

Mr Speaker, I understand that hon. Members feel very hard done by at being caught out again on a motion that they should have given more thought to. I understand that they do not like the fact that I am amending their motions to reflect reality on what is proper and appropriate and not the foolishness that they would rather lay on the Hansard for eternity and perpetuity. On this side of the House we are keen to ensure that we continue to provide legal certainty and that nothing starts to, in any way, even bring a dew or a dust over it, and for that reason I have proposed this amended motion, and nothing I have heard, whether it was the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition singing us 'Grease' or whether it was the Hon. Mr Clinton lamenting that once again his labour of love, which is his motion of July, is being amended, none of that moves me away from the importance to this community of having the legal certainty it needs, and for that reason I ask the House to support the motion, as amended, although the amendment should be made so that the motion as amended now goes forward. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I will now put the Chief Minister's amendment (Interjection). The hon. Member has spoken on the amendment. He is able to speak at the end of it all. We are going to take a vote. (Interjection) Call a division, yes.

2415 Mr Speaker: There are 8 votes in favour of the amendment, 6 against, and there are 3 Members absent. The amendment is carried.

Does anybody wish to speak now on the motion, as amended, standing before the House?

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr –

Mr Speaker: If the Hon. Mr Clinton speaks now, then he is exercising a right to reply and that would preclude anybody else from speaking. Does any other Member of the House want to take part in the debate before I ask Mr Clinton to reply?

2425 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am just going to, by way of my last contribution, read from the motion that the hon. Gentleman referred to during the course of his own intervention on the amendment, which was a motion that was brought by the then Chief Minister, Sir Peter Caruana, in relation to a video podcast that had been posted by the hon. Gentleman on I think it was Facebook – in actual fact, his Facebook page. There is a transcript of what he said, and he said this. (Interjection) No, there is a transcript of what he... The then Chief Minister referred to a transcript of what he said in the podcast.

Hon. Chief Minister: Read into Hansard?

2435 Hon. D A Feetham: Read into Hansard, absolutely – which just illustrates the remarkable role reversal that we find ourselves in during the course of this debate this evening. This is what the hon. Gentleman said during the course of the podcast. He was talking about gross debt at the time; it was not net debt:

Gross debt, in other words the amount owed by the Government of Gibraltar, is now up to £480 million. The ceiling is £500 million. It is already £480 million. Well, the gross debt borrowing limit is £500 million. If you add the £480 million that we have already borrowed in respect of gross debt and the £20 million that Mr Caruana has borrowed from banks, using Government buildings which he has put in a company, then you have reached a total of £500 million. That second £20 million, for technical reasons, does not count as Government borrowing, but in fact the Government now owes more than the law allows them to owe.

2440 End quote, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks) End quote, Mr Speaker. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) End quote, Mr Speaker.

I have to say, Mr Speaker, that I do not think that I have enjoyed quoting from the hon. Gentleman as much as I have enjoyed quoting from that very famous infamous podcast from 2011.

2445 Hon. Chief Minister: I am saying exactly the same thing, so quote it as often as you like because I will be very happy with great satisfaction.

Mr Speaker: Is there any other contribution before I call on the Hon. Mr Clinton to exercise his right? The Hon. Joe Bossano.

2450 Hon. J J Bossano: So I take it, Mr Speaker, that what the hon. Member is saying is that my friend and colleague was wrong when he said that – which is what he is saying now, but it is now right when he is saying it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly.

2455 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, at least that argument I understand, although I do not share the argument. I think they were both wrong: he is wrong now and he was wrong then! (Laughter)

2460 But I have to tell him that what I find frightening is the level of ignorance about the accounts and the public finances of Gibraltar demonstrated by Members opposite, and I might understand it if people have been here a short time but I cannot understand how the Leader of the Opposition, who spent four years in Government, following four years when he campaigned on public debt as one of the key issues –

Hon. D A Feetham: In 2003 remember what I said.

2465 Hon. J J Bossano: In 2003 he was saying that the debt was too high at £100 million and he was accusing me – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) No, Mr Speaker, we can go back and search it, but I do not need to search because my memory is not yet failing me.

2470 Independent of the PFI he was saying that in fact he was criticising the fact that the debt would have to be rolled over because the bulk of it was held by Community Care. There was a debate on the radio in the election campaign, where he actually accused me of siding and agreeing with the then Chief Minister because I was saying £100 million is not high debt. The moment that he changed sides – this was before the start of the love affair – when they started flirting together, then he changed his tune (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) and he moved from saying that the debt of £100 million is too high and you are going to have to borrow to repay it, to the argument that came on later in 2011, which was the argument that was being defended by the then Government, including him, he subscribed to that argument, and that argument, for example, was the result of what happened the first time they breached the limit. Forget the PFIs and forget whether they borrowed £20 million on the car park, because, as far as I am concerned, when we were in Opposition we did not oppose it, we did not accuse him of anything. It might have been said on that particular occasion by my Learned Friend the Chief Minister, but I can tell him that it is not something that we discovered then – we knew it before. In fact, one of the explanations that we were given the first time that it happened was that, because it was not Government debt, there was assumed to be a higher level of risk by the lender and that the rate of interest was higher than the rate would have been on Government debt. That is a record in Hansard he can go back and search for. He will find that the definition used by the GSD Government included the interest that they paid on what was not Government debt, was higher than they would pay on Government debt because it was assumed that it was secure on the asset and not on the results of the Government.

2490 But the kind of arguments that they have put today are incredible. The hon. Member has told us that if they add the £300 million the debt would be so much – and that was excluding Credit Finance from the balance sheet, because if they included Credit Finance to the balance sheet the debt would be even higher. Is it that they do not know that the Government does not have a balance sheet? Haven't they even discovered that much after four years? Does he not know that there is no balance sheet? That these are cash accounts? That every time you spend money in buying an asset it does not appear on a balance sheet as an asset, it disappears, it is non-existent? So you could not put Credit Finance on the balance sheet of the Government because there is no such balance sheet, but if the balance sheet existed it would not go on the liability side; it would be an asset worth £400 million. You have got a company, that is worth 2495 £400 million, which is not on any balance sheet, but if you put it on a balance sheet it is an asset not a liability. The liability rests with the borrower of the money, not with the owner of the 2500 company. So what is he saying? That if we lend money to somebody in a business it becomes a Government debt if it is from Credit Finance? And if it is from the Gibraltar International Bank, what does it become? Or is it that because one has got a moneylender's licence and the other 2505 one has a credit institution licence the story changes? Is he saying that every time somebody puts money into the International Bank as a deposit our public debt grows? Is he saying that every time they make a loan on a mortgage our public debt grows? This is an insane definition of public debt. (Laughter) There is no limit to it. Never mind Greece: we will have more money than the entire world.

2510 There was a headline, Mr Speaker, that I noticed in yesterday's paper, and, given the importance that is attached to debt by the Members opposite, when I saw that the IMF was worried about the level of debt I began to say to myself, 'I have to read this', because it says 'Global debt record risks economic stagnation', and I said, 'Could it be that they have been persuaded by Clintonian economics?' Not so. The concern of the IMF is not about the record size 2515 of the debt, but the consequences of debt being reduced. The concern of the IMF is that, notwithstanding everything that Governments are doing to stimulate economies, the level of debt which is predominantly private debt is being run down and therefore the stimulus of borrowing and spending by the Government is being contradicted and negated by the fact that people are not in a spending mood and people are actually reducing their exposure to debt. That 2520 is the risk of stagnation. Stagnation can be brought about because you go into a situation which is deflationary. Does he not know that the response to the crisis has been that the debt of every single member state in the European Union has grown after the crisis? Does he not know that? Where does he get his analysis from?

Does he not know that, notwithstanding what they used to say in Government when they 2525 came and told us here that the borrowing limit that they were setting was for net debt because that was what was the standard of the EU, they were not telling the truth. The Maastricht Treaty clearly says that the monetary union and the single currency require that member states keep their gross debt at 60% of their GDP. And the GSD, the first time that they decided to link debt to GDP – because they did it, nobody else. I know the Members opposite think that it should not be 2530 linked to GDP now that they are in opposition, but when they were in Government they first linked GDP to gross debt and they put in the formula 40% of the GDP. They could have put 60%, because that is what is required by the EU. If they had put more than 60% they would have been in breach of the requirements of the EU, but they put 40%. But what happened is that within a year of putting 40% of gross debt they breached it and they had to change it retrospectively.
 2535 They did more than change it retrospectively – they actually redesigned the accounts, and if I wanted to be less generous I would say they did not redefine them, they cooked them. The accountant/auditor should have a look at that, Mr Speaker. They cooked it, because do you know, Mr Speaker, what they did? In order to ensure that the GDP was not caught out by the revenue, the one element that the hon. Member was reluctant to change ... I explained that to 2540 him before. The problem with the ratios is that if you have got 40% of the GDP and the biggest thing that pushes GDP back up is company profits and you are taking 10% of company profits in revenue, then every time your GDP goes up by 100 your company profits pay 10% tax. So the GDP goes up by 100 and the Government revenue goes up by 10. So the ratio of 40:80 fails to work the moment you change the tax system, and instead of addressing that problem what they 2545 did was inflate the revenue. And how did they inflate the revenue? By having the same money cycled twice, in and out of the authorities. You pay rates to yourself. And they did it retrospectively. They brought an amendment to the Budget law backdated to change the accounts, backdated because they had breached their ceilings.

We did not make a song and dance about it and accuse them of anything. This is what they 2550 did. They created a rod for their own back because they did not know what they were doing and they put in things which then they could not breach. They could not work, they could not borrow the money they needed, and if the Government wanted to invest in doing things that were good for the economy and good for Gibraltar we were not going to say on a technicality, 'What you

2555 are doing is wrong, because you are not doing it ...' They created a law that they thought would allow them to borrow certain amounts of money and they discovered in practice they could not do it.

2560 So the next step, after they had put through the cycle everything they could think of and they ran out of things to do, the next step was to come back having argued that the rest of the world was being far less prudential than we were, because they all linked it to net debt but we were doing it as gross debt. The greatest Gibraltarian said, 'We are better than any of the guys anywhere else because we are being more conservative.' And a year later he came back and he said the very opposite. He said, 'No, no, no, it is not gross debt, it is important that it is net debt – you are all wrong when you keep on...' Well, look, I had been talking of gross debt for all the time that he has been talking of gross debt. He decided in one year it was no longer convenient, 2565 because he could not balance the books, to talk of gross debt, so the new correct version was the net debt, and anybody who had been talking about gross debt had now to move to the new conversion to net debt.

2570 Well, the reality of it is that I actually think gross debt is a better marker, but we moved to net debt this year and I think the first thing that the hon. Member opposite did was congratulated us. At least we were both now in agreement to use the net debt. Fine. If they want to talk about the net debt, on the eve of the election what the GSD did was they hired somebody from the London School of Economics to tell us – and appear on GBC – that in fact the net debt at 25% of GDP was enough to make the rest of the planet green with envy. No mention of anything that was not debt as defined in the law. Well, it is now 20%, so should the rest of the 2575 world be greener? No. Dr Cortes would be very happy if they were greener, but greener with envy, because now we are 20% and we have got a manifesto that is designed to bring us to 12.5%, half of the 25% that the professor from the London School of Economics was brought to Gibraltar to say that everybody would be green with envy if they could have 25% of GDP. Nobody uses a percentage of revenue anywhere else. I explained that before as well. The only 2580 people who use it are the people who have it rammed down their throat – like the Cayman Islands, who get told by the UK, 'Either you do that or you can go independent.' They cannot say it to us, they cannot say 'Either you do it or you go independent', but is what they do to the other colonies.

2585 The fact is that the level of debt is the debt of the Crown. The debt in the book is the debt of the Crown and if the debt of the Crown – which is the £447.7 million gross, £460 million aggregate and £366 million net – is so irrelevant, then why did they have a press conference to kick up a fuss about not being given the relevant figures? Why, if it does not matter? It does not matter whether he knows it is £450 million or £350 million, because it is not relevant. It is a billion – it is £1.1 billion according to him. Well, it is not £1.1 billion. It is insane to suggest that 2590 every time you have got a business that is Government owned, the Government debt goes up. Should the Government debt have included the ship repair yard? Should it have included the sand company that they had in the 1970s, where Maurice Featherstone was the chairman of the company and they would not answer any questions in the House because it was a commercial entity and they did not have to give information here as to the debts that the company had? Is 2595 the Gibraltar International Bank, which is 100% Government owned, increasing the public debt every time there are deposits in it?

2600 Don't hon. Members understand that if it is a question of arguing something logically their arguments do not hold water? Not only are they not consistent with everything they have said before ... They may be consistent in the case of Mr Clinton, who has not said anything else in the short time he has been here, but he sometimes gives me credit and I am grateful to him that he learns something from it. Well, look, he has got to learn that this is not an issue that we are saying we have chosen not to call something Government debt because we are borrowing money that we do not want to show. Government debt is defined in a particular way in the Constitution and in the law. It is the debt of Gibraltar. Gibraltar is the Crown. If Gibraltar buys a 2605 business, the indebtedness of that business does not become a debt on the liability of the Crown. In fact, the asset does not even show. So every time we have invested in something through the Improvement and Development Fund there is no asset showing the investment we have made.

2610 Therefore, Mr Speaker, I have to say that they have not been able to make a case for what they want us to do. In fact, I think it is a disaster. If we followed what they wanted us to do it would be a disaster. What they wanted to do in the election would have been a disaster. Can they think of anything worse that they could do to this country, to the economy, to our ability to survive, to our ability to counteract Brexit and our ability to counteract Spain if they went round telling everybody that we have got a £1.1 billion debt, which nobody would understand was 2615 being calculated in the bizarre way that they want to calculate it? Everybody would think that the £1.1 billion debt was the debt on the books. That is what they would think. How many investors do you think are going to come to Gibraltar if you say there is a crisis like Greece? There is a crisis in the whole of Europe because of Brexit and we have got an additional crisis because Spain has made clear that anything that the UK manages to negotiate for itself they will 2620 try and block applying to us. They have made that clear and we should be under no illusions about that; and the answer to deal with that is that we must have more transparency.

Shall we send all our books to La Moncloa, so that they can get on with the job of destroying us? More transparency. We are going to tell them, 'No, we are indebted to our eyebrows and we are going to go bankrupt.' And this is the way we are going to defend ourselves! I have to say to 2625 the hon. Members: with friends like that who needs enemies? That is the last thing we want to be saying to them. Even if what they were saying were true, we should be keeping quiet about it, not parading it – and it is not true. This is like an issue that we have had in this House for years: since 1972 and between 1998 and 1996, figures on imports of certain commodities were provided and never mentioned in public. They were provided to me confidentially and I provided 2630 them to the Leader of the Opposition confidentially. Why? Because it is not in our interest to provide ammunition to our enemies. We are not enemies of each other. We have got different views, but we are not enemies of each other because we are all in the same boat. If the boat sinks, we all sink with it. The enemy is outside, and therefore our sense of responsibility, Members should know, requires us at the very least to be accurate, and if we really believe that 2635 something is right when it is not right, then at least do it in a manner which is not something that can create ammunition for those who want to see us disappearing from the face of the planet. And that is all I have to say on the subject, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Several Members: Hear, hear.

Mr Speaker: Any other contribution?

I call upon Mr Roy Clinton to reply.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, we are indeed getting a veritable lesson in economics this 2645 afternoon and this evening from the Father of the House. I do not dispute a word of what he said about Keynesian economics, but we are not here to talk about Keynesian; we are here to talk about what is in fact our true level of borrowing.

He has just said effectively that we on the Opposition benches should turn a blind eye because it is in the collective interest of the community not to ask awkward questions – it would 2650 appear to be the case. Mr Speaker, it puts me in a quandary, because how can I on the one hand not ask questions, which is what I am here to do, and on the other hand turn a blind eye? I am afraid I cannot do either in terms of reconciling that position.

He spoke about the press conference that we gave about him not giving me an answer on even the aggregate debt figure, only to hear this morning that the Chief Minister will be putting 2655 it on a website for everybody to see, and for that I guess I am grateful to the Chief Minister. But the Hon. Mr Bossano also said, 'It was an absurd press conference because, hey, you know, you're not interested in the £400 million, you think it is a bigger number.' Well, in fact, this is 2660 what we are debating right now here today. Furthermore, in his answers he did not give any information on gross debt, and so when I speculated, 'Well, perhaps they are going to borrow more,' he immediately issued a press release saying, 'No, that's incorrect, we're not going to borrow more – that's nonsense,' which is fine, because he would not tell us in this House whether he was going to borrow more or not, or what the aggregate level of debt was, which is why we need to know what the aggregate level of debt is when we ask the question, because 2665 otherwise, we can only speculate. But I am grateful to the Chief Minister, who it would appear will be publishing this information on a timely basis on a Government website, and I will obviously be following that avidly.

Coming back to my motion, even though it is now amended beyond recognition, there is one particular phrase the Chief Minister used, and I am sure when we get Hansard we can all look it up. He said, and I quote, 'We have borrowed £300 million.' Well, Mr Speaker, who is 'we'? Is 2670 'we' the GSLP, 'we' the Crown, 'we' Hassans, 'we' Crown agents? Who is 'we'? 'We the people', I guess. And if it is 'we' who have borrowed it, then it is the Government and nobody else. He can structure it any way he wants, but at the end of the day it is a debt of this community and we cannot get away from it.

He took great exception to the use of my word a 'sham' company. In Hansard you will find 2675 that when I asked about Credit Finance and who made the decisions for Credit Finance it has no employees. Treasury officials act on it. Not even the directors of the company make decisions for Credit Finance, it would appear. And Mr Bossano made it quite clear, when I asked, 'Well, who controls Credit Finance?' He said, 'It's the outfit.' I asked, 'Well, who is the outfit?' and he said, 'We are the outfit.' So, Mr Speaker, it is a sham company. It has no substance. It is those 2680 Ministers opposite who, the lawyers amongst them will probably appreciate, they are all shadow directors according to that contribution by the hon. Member, because – (Interjection) Yes.

And so, Mr Speaker, it really is unforgivable of this Government for the way they have dealt with my motion. As I have said before, the people of Gibraltar will see this £300 million for what it is: it is a public borrowing, pure and simple.

2685 With that, Mr Speaker, I stand down. Thank you.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I call a division on the vote.

2690 Mr Speaker: Right, I now put the Chief Minister's amended motion to the vote and the Clerk will call a division.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House do now adjourn sine die.

Matter of Urgent Public Importance

Procedural

2700 Mr Speaker: I now have to inform the House that on 27th July – and this was the first occasion that Parliament met after the Budget debate – the Hon. Roy Clinton gave me notice of his intention to seek leave under Rule 24B for the purpose of discussing a definite Matter of Urgent Public Importance in respect of the Gibraltar International Bank Ltd.

I did not inform the Chief Minister about this notice that I had received until lunchtime today, because it was going to be pertinent today. I did that because I was following the practice of Mr Speaker Vasquez during the years when I was a Member of this House, and he only informed the House – Mr Bossano will correct me if I am wrong – of the notice that he had received when the Chief Minister of the day moved the amendment.

2710 On reflection, however, having regard to the fact that here we have a matter for which the Minister responsible from Government is Mr Albert Isola, who is unable to be present this afternoon, I wonder on reflection – and it is a matter ultimately for me to decide – whether the correct thing would not be to actually inform the Government at the time that I received notice, because then that will enable arrangements to be made for the Minister who is responsible for answering to the debate to do so.

2715 The Rules of the House are very unhelpful, because when I receive notice of the intention by a Member to raise a Matter of Urgent Public Importance on the amendment, it cannot be taken until the end of all public business – in other words, for all intents and purposes until the Chief Minister moves the adjournment of Parliament sine die. This is why I have been advocating, since I became ... in fact, before I became Speaker, when I was the Chairman of the Commission and the Commission so recommended that the Rules should be amended as a matter of urgency, so that a matter can be raised when the House adjourns – from 27th July, let us say it adjourned until 9th September. If the rule had allowed that, the debate which we can now have would have taken place on 27th July. That would have been much more logical and the likelihood is that the Minister responsible would have been here.

2725 The requirement under Rule 24B is ... first of all, there is no formal motion and therefore there is no debate. A maximum time allowed is 40 minutes. Members of the Opposition, not just the person who has given me notice but other Members of the Opposition can speak, and obviously what they desire is that someone from the Government should reply. Therefore, although there is no rule about it, the practice here during the years when Members invoked this rule was to give the Government a reasonable period of time out of those 40 minutes to be able to reply.

2730 So, before I call on the Hon. Mr Clinton, is there anything that is not clear in what I have said? Is there anything that Members require clarification on? If not, it is now 8.12, so 40 minutes ... I will allow until 8.52.

Gibraltar International Bank Ltd

2735 Mr Speaker: I call upon the Hon. Mr Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, first of all, thank you for allowing me to raise the matter of the Gibraltar International Bank on the adjournment.

2740 The Gibraltar International Bank Ltd is, as you yourself, Mr Speaker, stated in Parliament on 26th February 2016, and I quote:

A National Bank. It is going to play an important role in the economy.

The creation of the bank was something that was supported by the Opposition at the time in order to fill the void left by the departure of Barclays Bank from the local retail market. Being a national bank with a taxpayer funded capital of £25 million, it is naturally a Government-owned bank in which is a legitimate and real public interest.

2745 When I enquired politely of the Hon. Minister for Financial Services and Gaming whether he would make available the full audited financial statements of the bank to all Members of Parliament when they were completed, his response was, and I quote:

The full audited financial statements of the bank will be filed at Companies Registry and available for public inspection in accordance with the Companies Act. It will therefore not be just for Members opposite but for the whole community to see.

2750 Mr Speaker, you will of course recall the subsequent comical exchanges with the Chief Minister offering to pay the £30 fee to obtain a copy from the Registry for me and then to hand deliver it personally. I am pleased to advise the House that, as I stated I would, I wrote to the board of directors of the bank, who have kindly sent me a copy of their audited financial statements at 31st December 2015 with their compliments. I will place a copy of this document in the antechamber of the House for all Members to read with my compliments. In any event, 2755 the Government can also obtain a copy from Companies House for £30, these having been filed on 22nd July 2016.

The bank was incorporated on 23rd April 2013 and I will, for the benefit of Members who have not yet had sight of the bank's audited results, read an extract of the directors' report for 31st December 2015 as follows. I quote:

The bank obtained its full regulatory authorisation on 20th April 2015 and opened its doors for business on 5th May 2015. As a result of the announced closure of one of the main international retail banks in Gibraltar and the urgency to open a retail bank within a limited period of time, the bank had previously sought, as authorised by the Financial Services Commission in October 2014, to open current accounts online for customers on condition that these accounts would remain inactive and unfunded until the bank obtained its full regulatory authorisation and had opened for business.

The purpose of this exercise was to alleviate a potential situation whereby, upon the bank opening, thousands of customers would require current accounts and the bank would have been overwhelmed and unable to cope with the situation from an operational perspective. As a result of the exercise, the bank held 3,500 accounts in its books ready to be funded and utilised by clients on the first day of opening for business.

Although a success, a considerable number of personal and corporate customers applied to open accounts post bank opening, to the extent that appointments were being taken for months in advance. Simultaneously, in excess of 400 mortgage loan appointments were taken for the Government's housing scheme purchases, although none of these lendings would be drawn in 2015.

As at 31st December 2015, 5,286 client accounts had been opened with an aggregate deposit balance of £119.6 million. From the outset it was envisaged that the sheer volumes of opening and mortgage loan applications would stretch the bank's resources to the limit, and in order to reduce the waiting times for customers wanting to open accounts staff members were redeployed from other departments to assist the operational workload. During the eight months from opening to December, and as stated in its business plan, the bank concentrated its efforts and all its resources in establishing and consolidating its client base.

2760 Well, Mr Speaker, I think this House now has an appreciation of the challenge that the bank, its board, senior management and staff faced. I think it only right that we offer them our collective congratulations.

All, however, is not entirely peachy. The Minister was able, at the Budget in June, to give the House an update, in that as at 30th June 2016 the bank had achieved deposits of £224 million with over 7,000 accounts and a lending book of £43 million with 450 mortgages. However, the most important piece of information was omitted, namely being its financial results.

I will now quote from the directors' report again as at 31st December 2015, under the heading 'Profits and Dividends':

As anticipated in the business plan, the bank reflected a loss for the year after taxation which amounted to £6,029,288 with a comparable number of £1,404,674 in 2014. Again in respect of the available for sale financial asset of £549,370 comparable number nil has been recognised in other comprehensive income, resulting in a total comprehensive loss of £5,479,918 compared to a 2014 loss of £1,404,674.

The bank has no accumulated distributable profits. Accordingly, the directors do not recommend a dividend for the year ended 31st December 2015.

2770 In other words, Mr Speaker, the bank, as at 31st December 2015, has lost a cumulative total of £7 million or 28% over a quarter of its original £25 million taxpayer fund of share capital.

Before the Government Ministers opposite turn blue in the face with screams of scaremongering, this is now public information, and I accept that the bank has always said it would take three years to break even. Furthermore, I would point out that, per note 20.5 of the financial statements, I quote:

The bank's capital ratio as at 31st December 2015 was 40.82% (the minimum is in fact 8.625% regulatory requirement) with a surplus capital of £15,700,225.

2775 So, Mr Speaker, the bank is soundly capitalised as at 31st December 2015. However, this is the capital position before the drawdown of mortgages, which reached 450 as at 30th June 2016, and no doubt the ratio will have inevitably decreased.

2780 I would encourage the Minister to provide more regular updates to this House, and not just at Budget time, as evidently he has access to information from senior management as and when he deems it appropriate to report to Parliament. In addition, it would be useful if he would also provide this House with annual audited financial results and capital ratios, as I have just done, because this House and the taxpayer both have a legitimate interest in the banks performance and expect more than a 'get it yourself' attitude in respect of such information. I would expect the Minister to stand up each year and make a statement in respect of the bank's performance.

2785 Mr Speaker, for the avoidance of doubt, I once again congratulate the bank's board, senior management and staff for the hard work and trust that in years to come this community will reap dividends, not just in financial terms, but in the products and services that are offered and much needed by all.

Mr Speaker: Does any other Member from the Opposition benches wish to speak?
Then I invite the Government to reply, if they so wish.

2795 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, I do not think I have detected absolutely anything in what the hon. Gentleman has said that could be described as urgent on 27th July or urgent on 7th October. All that we have been treated to is the hon. Gentleman giving us what is his own analysis of the accounts of the bank, of a document that is public which he says was sent to him by the bank because he wrote to them, and which he has now had an opportunity of reading out – and which any member of the public could also have had an opportunity of seeing.

2800 Frankly, I do not detect that there is absolutely any reason, therefore, why the people who are listening and who are considering the debate in Parliament today, would have been persuaded that there is anything urgent to consider – except, of course, if there was a loss which needed to be made good, but the hon. Gentleman has said it is well capitalised, so there is no need for that. We do not deal in sham companies or in sham banks, Mr Speaker, although he 2805 was the manager of a bank that invested with Mr Madoff, and that got him into court on a number of occasions and that was clearly a sham, but the companies that we operate do not deal in sham. And because there is a three-year business plan, it is clear that this is not a loss that was unexpected. This is not an urgent matter that needs to be brought to the attention of 2810 the public because there is a sudden loss. If you do a business plan and you say we are not going to be profitable until the third year, it is not urgent to say in the first year that you are not profitable. So, it seems to me that the argument of urgency is entirely unavailable to avail the hon. Gentleman of any assistance whatsoever.

2815 But, Mr Speaker, what the Hon. Mr Isola, who is not here today for the reasons you have indicated, and I would have thought the easiest thing for the hon. Member was to say, 'Well, I will deal with this motion next time that we adjourn and Mr Isola is here ... What he said was this. This was in the context of his Budget speech:

I start by congratulating the Gibraltar International Bank for making a complete success of its first year in operation. Since it opened last year the Bank, led by Lawrence Podesta and Derek Sene, the staff and the Board of Directors have worked tirelessly and deserve the congratulations and thanks of this House and of the community at large for the fantastic start the bank has made in its first 12 months of operation.

Over 7,000 accounts opened; £244 million in deposits; and an increasing loan book, with some 450 mortgages, is a testament to the work of the team at GIB. Many spoke of the doom and gloom at the departure of Barclays in late 2013 and yet today it is a distant memory, with a seamless transition to this modern, innovative and digital bank. There is, of course, still work to be done but I believe that the target date for break even and profitability after three years trading will be met.

As we speak, they are working on new areas in terms of products and functions, including of course, mobile banking which I much look forward to seeing in operation. My sincere thanks to Lawrence, Derek, the Board of Directors and of course the staff at GIB for their professional commitment in delivering the quality and service we asked of them.

2820 Mr Speaker that is what the Hon. the Minister said at the time of the Budget. I think that might have been 26th July, if not 27th July or earlier in the month. So it is not even necessary to get up to represent thanks, because we have already given them on behalf of the Government and on behalf of all of the Parliament in what the Hon. the Minister said at the time. It is not necessary to give the same figures that the Hon. the Minister gave now in this Parliament again, because he gave them when he stood up and gave the information that he gave at the time of the Budget.

2825 But we are now asked to give more information more often. Well, Mr Speaker, we are going to give the information in relation to the bank that we consider is appropriate, in exactly the same way as we give information about Gibtelecom only when it is appropriate and they, when they were on this side of the House, gave information about Gibtelecom only when it was considered to be appropriate. We are not going to stand up whenever the hon. Gentleman likes, to give him information about the bank, because that is not the way that it is possible to operate in the context of Gibraltar's democracy. And we are going to tell him to go and get it himself when it comes to accounts that are going to be public. That is the position that he is going to find: we are going to tell him to go and get them himself, or we are going to put them on websites. And if he wants to go and get them from the bank to save himself £30, despite the fact that he is paid £36,000 to turn up here once a month, or if we are going to require him to get them free of charge from a website, that is the way we are going to continue to operate. That is the greatest level of transparency that this community has ever seen, because he is able to have access to this information. Nobody is preventing him from having access to the information. As he can see when he wrote to the Directors, they were not being told not to send him anything.

2840 He says that we exercise control of the bank and therefore we must say more. Well, look, if they sent him copies of the accounts because they know him from his time as a banker – as a sham banker, to apply to him the standard that he applies to the directors of Credit Finance, who are upstanding members of the community, civil servants who are the controllers of the corporate controller of Credit Finance – it is fine, we have absolutely no difficulty with that. He went out and he got them himself and he saved himself 30 quid. Good for him. The taxpayer's salary that they pay him can be saved in respect of that amount.

2845 Mr Speaker, I am conscious that the accounts were filed at Companies House with a date of 22nd July, so if he did not have them before then – I do not know whether he said on what he

2855 There is a report from the chairman which sets out a lot of detail of what it is that the bank is doing, there is a directors' report which is very detailed also and signed by the company secretary, and then there is the independent auditor's report to the members of the Gibraltar International Bank, which is filed on behalf of Ernst & Young. How can hon. Members suggest that this is not all of the information that they might wish to have in respect of the operation of a bank like the Gibraltar International Bank, which is an independent bank and which we said 2860 from the beginning would be operated like an independent bank and would be allowed to operate like an independent bank? Mr Speaker, one thing is to say one thing and then do another, because that is political hypocrisy. If we had said, 'This is going to be an independent bank', and then we were exercising control over every step that the directors took – for example, saying to them, 'Don't send Roy Clinton, the sham banker, the audited accounts when 2865 you have them,' well then we could be accused of political hypocrisy. But when we say that a company is going to operate as an independent commercial entity it is quite something, given that that is one of the things that the Opposition say they agree with us on, that what they should seek that we should do is that we should interfere with the running of the company, obtain information which is not the information that a commercial company has to by law
2870 comply with, and bring it here to satisfy the thirst for raw data that the hon. Gentleman seems to display. We are not going to fall into the trap of being lured into political hypocrisy, because that is to pretend to trap us into doing the opposite of what we have said we would do, which was what they had originally asked us to do as well.

2875 So, Mr Speaker, this very detailed report – which is 36 pages, setting out all of the accounting policies and all of the detail of what the bank has done and the financial statements in considerable detail for 2014, which is the year that the bank started operation, and 2015 – in the view of the Government sets out absolutely all the detail and data that the public can want to have if they also want to have the confidence that the bank that we call the Gibraltar International Bank is operating at an entirely arm's length from the Government and in a way 2880 that is entirely commercially free standing and not being interfered with.

2885 But it is clear, in the context of what the bank has done and is doing, that the capitalisation of the bank is not just designed to deal with the regulatory requirements, it is also designed to deal with the bank's need for capital in the context of its trading, and if there is something which is clear about the way in which the accounts have been filed and what the Hon. Minister said in the context of the debate in Parliament, it is that the bank is acting in a manner that is entirely consistent with what the Parliament has been told. I think the hon. Gentleman has recognised that in what he has said, which just leaves me completely adrift in terms of what it is that he is trying to raise as an issue on an adjournment debate. I do not know whether it is just an attempt to say, 'Ah, you see, I did not have to travel down to Companies House, I did not have to put my

2895 I do not know if that is the point that the hon. Gentleman is trying to make, but he needs to remember the point that I was making when I was telling him that we would not treat him in a way that was privileged. The point I was making at the time – and hon. Members will recall that this is a point that comes up very often at Question Time, when people who are asking questions and answering questions fall into the trap that you always seek that we should not fall into, Mr Speaker, which is debate, and we fall into the trap of arguing over whether it is right to have to bring things here or whether in fact it is more appropriate in the modern technological age in which we live to simply be able to make things accessible online on the world wide web, so that 2900 every member of the community can have access to it. Well, Mr Speaker, the position of the Government remains that that is the better way to proceed and that the better thing to do is not to provide privileged access to Members opposite, in particular Mr Clinton, to documentation but to provide that documentation in a way that is accessible to all of the community in Gibraltar.

2905 That is what transparency is about. Transparency is not about giving them information; transparency is about making information available to the general public and a better way of making information available to the general public – who may not have, let's face it, the patience to sit through some of the debates that we have in this House in order to pick up a morsel of information that may pass between us – is to put it online. And so the Government's 2910 approach has consistently been that things which can be put online should be put online. The bank in this case files its data and its information, its audited accounts, as required by law – and, by the way, a Government wholly owned company filing its accounts on time, something which hon. Members are not able to boast of in respect of the party the initials of which they represent in this House – and those accounts are filed at Companies House in a manner that, by the way, is 2915 also accessible online to those who happen to have an account with Companies House or those who are able to go down there.

I have yet to understand what the hon. Member's great objection is. I would have understood him perhaps today if at the end of the evening he were to say to me, 'Fabian, given that you have acceded to my totally unreasonable request to establish a Public Accounts 2920 Committee, which is now going to take a lot of my time, I am no longer going to be able to be retired and putting my feet up in the afternoon, I have no time to go down to Companies House and still not the inclination to spend £30 in obtaining a document,' then I might have understood that he would have suggested that we should send him the account. But this is not the situation, we have not acceded to his totally unreasonable request to create the Public Accounts 2925 Committee, and so therefore I think it is entirely appropriate that we should report to this House in the way that we are committed to do in the context of all of the companies, in the way that has traditionally been the case during the course of the Budget debate. During the course of the Budget debate what we will do is we will provide the sort of headline information that we think it is appropriate for the public to have about the company, which will be very much in keeping 2930 with what is going to be filed publicly in the company's accounts.

I do not know whether that is going to completely dissatisfy him. Given what he is saying today, it appears that it might completely dissatisfy him. Well, he is going to end up having, in the words of Mick Jagger, no satisfaction, Mr Speaker, because we are not going to allow him to in some way, ruin or spoil the chances of Gibraltar International Bank to make a success of itself 2935 by in some way requiring us to give more information than is given about banks like Gibraltar International Bank, or by any competitor of Gibraltar International Bank. Because in respect of the bank of which he was a manager, nobody got a blow by blow account of how the profits were going, of how many people he was employing, of how many mortgages he was giving or how much was invested in Madoff. It was only when the requirement to file accounts was a legal 2940 one that bit that people would be able to go for payment of the same £30 to Gibraltar's Companies House – if they were established here, if they had a branch – and see those accounts and see those investments. Why should we put the taxpayer's investment in Gibraltar International Bank at risk by creating for Gibraltar International Bank a less level playing field than the one that applies to all of the other banks which operate in the same jurisdiction? It would be foolish to in some way allow the opportunity that is being dangled in front of us to be presented to members of the public as an opportunity for the bank to do better. This is actually an opportunity for the bank to find itself in a difficult situation when it comes to its competitors and in a way that would not, frankly, avail the taxpayer of any advantage, because at the end of the day the moneys that have been used to capitalise this bank – like the moneys that have been 2945 used to establish the University, another great building block of nationhood that we established 2950 in the course of the last Parliament – is taxpayers' money, which is voted by this House for those specific purposes and which we have an obligation to protect. We can have arguments about whether other amounts of money that we have been debating today are taxpayers' money or savers' money or not, but we have no argument that the amount which creates the capitalisation of Gibraltar International Bank is taxpayers' money, and given that it is taxpayers' money we have an obligation – and again this is a subject, I have no doubt, on which we do not disagree – to ensure that that money is protected and that we make the most of it going forward.

Mr Speaker, in that context, understanding how the bank has been created and the purpose for which the bank has been created, it would seem to me that it is not possible to accede to a request from the hon. Gentleman which, as I say, would, in effect, unlevel the playing field for the bank that we have created. He has just spent a moment trying to ingratiate himself to the directors and to the employees of the bank by giving them the thanks that he should have given them before, and which Mr Isola gave them at the time of the Budget, the fulsome thanks that it is absolutely right that this community should give them for the work that they have done in the establishment of the bank, and yet at the same time he is trying to entice us to unlevel the playing field in a way that might result in all of those people finding that the bank which they have created and for which they have been so fulsomely thanked fails because it is providing public information quite beyond the obligations that apply to all of its competitors. In fact, I should pause there, Mr Speaker, and refer to the fact that some of its competitors are also owned by governments, but not governments that are required to give the sort of information that the hon. Gentleman is suggesting that we should give about Gibraltar International Bank, because I cannot imagine that he would have survived very long if he were opposite George Osborne and not Fabian Picardo and he had told George Osborne to please send him a copy of the annual audited accounts of the Royal Bank of Scotland, which is majoritarily owned by the United Kingdom government, or of Lloyds Bank PLC because he did not want to go down to the Companies Registry or online in order to obtain for himself a copy of the accounts of that bank.

It seems to me, Mr Speaker, therefore, that given he was earlier telling us that the way that things are done in Westminster, some of the things that we should be copying and we should be doing things in the same way, that if he were at Westminster he would find that his entreaties during the course of the budget debate would have fallen not on deaf ears but in a great cry from the Chancellor of the Exchequer of 'Who does he think he is to get better treatment than any other member of the public!' Indeed, he would have been seen to be endangering the operation of Royal Bank of Scotland and of Lloyds Bank, that operate in a highly competitive banking environment, just like GIB in the context of Gibraltar, given that the products that it offers in the Gibraltar market are products which can be more or less attractive depending on the competition, and of course for us the requirement is that this is a bank that should succeed in its own right. We do not want to be pumping more money into a bank, unless of course it is that the bank does so well that it requires greater capitalisation because it is growing to such an extent that it is the right investment for our community to capitalise it further. That could, of course, become the case. It could be that Gibraltar International Bank grows beyond our own expectations and quicker than our own expectations, and if that is the case I am sure that initially we will hear them complaining and then eventually when they come to their senses they will come back to this place in order to thank and congratulate those they should have thanked and congratulated earlier.

Mr Speaker, the same, for example, is entirely true of the University. When we established the University, one of the other things that the hon. Gentleman was asking for was copies of annual reports, etc. Well, again, the commitment that we entered into in respect of the University is that it would operate entirely independently, and Members who were present may have detected that at the installation of the Chancellor and the Vice-Chancellor, one of the things that I said was I referred back to the mantra of 'Joe Bossano, no ordinary Joe' in the context of Gibraltar's political emancipation when he talked about the road to self-determination being paved by self-sufficiency. And in the context of the installation of the Vice-

3005 Chancellor I think it was also important to ensure that we made the point not just of recognising the sterling work that Gilbert Licudi had done in the establishment of the University, the ‘political Father of the University’, as I described him at the time, but also the importance for the University of standing on its own two feet and being a commercially viable entity that we could be proud of being not just academically independent but also commercially independent.

3010 In the context of the bank, Mr Speaker, the same of course is true. Of course it is entirely independent from a regulatory point of view and it is entirely independent as an entity. It must also be financially independent, and unless what happens is that the community finds that its bank has grown so successfully that it requires further capitalisation, the business plan is what we must ensure we see compliance with, and in that context we would otherwise need to have good explanations why the business plan has been failed.

3015 But what the hon. Gentleman has come today to tell us as a matter of urgency on an adjournment debate is that the bank is doing exactly what he was told the bank was doing. In other words, the bank has lost money in its first year, exactly as he had been told, and is therefore likely also to lose money in its second year, exactly as he has been told, because he has been told it is a three-year business plan and it will be in the third year of operation that the bank will operate at a profit. (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi) Break even, sorry.

3020 So, Mr Speaker, I have yet to understand what it is that the hon. Gentleman has tried to achieve by his 24B statement today in his letter to you. And if I may say so, Mr Speaker, dealing with the mechanics that has brought this debate today, I think it is important, even if it is not necessary, that as a matter of courtesy if a Member of the Opposition wishes to raise an issue on the adjournment then they should tell the Government, so that if they want to have a real opportunity to question or to debate, the Government should be able to reply. Otherwise it is very easy to simply say, ‘On the adjournment I am going to raise whatever I like without telling you,’ and the Government will then reply and say, ‘Well, given that you have not given us notice of what it is that you are going to be dealing with, it is not possible for us to do anything other than say that we will look into the things that you are talking about, or that we will counter the things that you are talking about from our general knowledge of the particular subject matter that may have been raised, but without the ability to bring to the House the benefit of the information that might otherwise have been obtained in the context of putting something across to Members of the Government is an issue that Members wish to raise.’

3035 The hon. Member, as he has told the House, has written me three letters. I do not know whether it is three or four, or more, or whatever it is, but he seems to take great gusto, every time he writes me a letter, in CC-ing the Speaker and CC-ing the Leader of the Opposition and CC-ing anybody else whom he thinks might have an interest in reading our correspondence. I have absolutely no difficulty ... If he wants, what he can do next time is he can post a letter that he would like me to read on Facebook and as long as he sends me a link to it in an appropriate email address that he knows I will read, then I can read the letter on Facebook. I have absolutely no difficulty, because it is not as if he is going to be telling me anything sensitive or I am going to be responding in respect of a letter, whether it is posted publicly or posted privately, marked ‘Urgent Parliamentary Business’ or not, in a way that is different.

3045 So I am surprised, Mr Speaker, that in the context of this opportunity which he has to raise an issue on the adjournment he should choose to communicate only to you and that it should be down to you, Mr Speaker, out of your desire to see the operation of Parliament to be more effective, so that none of us waste any of our time, to have alerted us to the issue that there was going to be an adjournment debate. Because given the practice that the hon. Gentleman has of copying all and sundry in respect of the correspondence that he has with us, if only he had given us notice that he had wished to raise this issue on the adjournment, then what we would simply have done is to advise him that Albert was not going to be here, which particular area was it that he wished to raise, and one of us would have been perhaps better prepared to deal with it. Of course, that is before we heard him, and it was not as if he wanted to raise anything of any particular concern which would have required us to go back to look into something and be able to respond to him in a particular way, because all that he has done is get up and give a speech about the bank. That is literally all that we have been treated to.

3060 The hon. Gentleman has said, 'Adjournment motion: I would like to get up and speak about the bank,' and he has spoken about the bank and he has told us the things that are public about the bank and the things he was told about the bank in the Budget debate, and he has told us all of that again – and then he has told us that he wants to be told more about the bank. Well, Mr Speaker, none of that is, with the very greatest of respect, what this mechanism that you have rightly been pointing us all towards since you became Speaker, long before Mr Clinton became a Member of this House, none of that is what this particular part of the Standing Orders and Rule 24B is about or is for, and I would commend hon. Members to use, on both sides of the House, as you often do, the mechanism of the opportunity to raise matters on the adjournment but when they are urgent. Otherwise, all that happens is that we are going to be here for 40 minutes talking about things (Interjection and laughter) that are not urgent and are simply keeping us away from our families, our friends, or whatever it is that we might be prepared to do.

3070 As I say repeatedly, I am in politics because I am a parliamentarian. I love Parliament and I have relished the opportunity today to debate with hon. Members on all of the subjects on which we have debated. As far as I am concerned, they can consider that, despite the vehemence with which I argue my point, it does not change the fondness that I have for some of them – I cannot say all of them, but I am hoping that one day it will be all of them. But when it comes to the adjournment debate, Mr Speaker, I think it is important, for the purposes of ensuring compliance with the rules and ensuring that we do honour by the rules and respect them, that we do only raise on the adjournment issues which are urgent. That is not to say that there could not in future be something which becomes urgent and which has to be raised in this way.

3075 I see that the rule says that something has to be brought to your attention by five o'clock. That makes sense to me, Mr Speaker. It is sufficient time, I think, for one to be able to obtain information, as I was able to obtain, once I knew what the subject matter of what the hon. Gentleman wanted to speak about. To, in order to be able to reply to any urgent point that he made I have now had an opportunity of reading the Gibraltar International Bank Ltd Annual Accounts Report of 31st December 2015, filed, as the hon. Gentleman has said, on 22nd June, and would have been ready to reply to anything that he might have raised in any part of the 40 minutes that he might have spoken, which might have been urgent and requiring my attention. But I think, given where we are and given that it is 8.52 and that he raised nothing else, I should just move that the House do now adjourn sine die. (Banging on desks)

3080 Hon Members: Hear, hear.

3085 Mr Speaker: I also love Parliament, but I was within a minute of behaving like the Chairman of the Fourth Committee!

The House will now adjourn sine die.

The House adjourned at 8.53 p.m.

CONFIRMATION OF MINUTES

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Thursday, 20th October 2016.

Order of Proceedings: (i) Oath of Allegiance; (ii) Confirmation of Minutes – the Minutes of the last meeting of Parliament, which was held on 24th, 29th and 30th June, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 5 27th July, 9th, 15th, 22nd and 29th September, and 7th October 2016.

Mr Speaker: May I sign the Minutes as correct? (Members: Aye.)

Mr Speaker signed the Minutes.

COMMUNICATIONS FROM THE CHAIR

10 Clerk: (iii) Communications from the Chair.

Mr Speaker: I know there is a communication from the Chief Minister before the Chair.

Congratulations to the Leader of the Opposition on award of Queen's Counsel

15 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, can I rise just to congratulate the hon. Gentleman, the Leader of the Opposition, on having taken silk this week. The announcement, I think, was made from the Convent on Monday.

He is, as I have said already in a public statement, my principal political opponent these days and I often say long may that continue to be the case, but at a professional level he has been recognised with the award of the rank of Queen's Counsel and I wanted to, on behalf of all 20 Members on this side of the House, congratulate him in that respect. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: May I associate myself with those remarks and congratulate the Leader of the Opposition on my own behalf and that of the staff here in Parliament – a most richly deserved achievement, in my view.

25 Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much to the Chief Minister and thank you very much, Mr Speaker, for your congratulations.

When the Hon. the Chief Minister said, about a week and a half ago, that he respected me as a lawyer but not as a politician, I saw a glimmer of hope that perhaps my application for silk had actually stood some prospect of success!

30 I am very grateful to the House not only on my own behalf but also on behalf of my wife Julia. They say that behind every man there is always a better woman, and no doubt that is more apposite in the case of my long-suffering wife Julia than in most cases. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) I am very grateful. (Laughter and banging on desks)

PAPERS TO BE LAID

35 Clerk: We carry on with the Order Paper: (iv) Petitions; (v) Announcements; (vi) Papers to be laid – the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table the Annual Accounts of the Government of Gibraltar for the year ended 31st March 2015 and the Audited Accounts of the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority for the year ended 31st March 2016.

40 Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Clerk: The Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information.

45 Clerk: (vii) Reports of Committees; (viii) Answers to Oral Questions.
We begin today with –

Mr Speaker: Before we proceed with answers, I have received notice from the Chief Minister that he wishes to make a Statement.

Cabinet reshuffle – Statement by the Chief Minister

Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

55 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, this this morning I met with His Excellency the Governor to advise him to appoint new ministerial portfolios under section 46 of the Constitution and to issue particular directions to that effect.

I want to start this afternoon, of course, by thanking all Ministers for the work that they have each done in their Departments to date. I have spoken to all Ministers overnight and explained to them how it was that I proposed that the Government should now continue the discharge of its responsibilities and each, of course, are delighted to hear that they will be moving to new Departments and new challenges, whilst of course being saddened in the same measure to leave behind people whom they have built very strong relationships within the past five years.

The work Ministers have done in the Departments that they have been responsible for since 9th December 2011 and then in the year building up to the General Election last year was magnificent work and I want to thank them for it. It was, of course, that work which led to the magnificent and unprecedented growth in our support, from 200 votes in 2011 to 5,000 votes in the General Election of 2015 last year when we were supported by seven out of 10 voters.

As hon. Members will recall, I announced that there would be a ministerial reshuffle after the General Election by the time of the following Budget. The small matter of the campaign in the Referendum on exiting the European Union got in the way and I must tell the House today that there are differences in the reshuffle that we will do today to the reshuffle that we would have done a year ago after the General Election, as a result of the Brexit referendum. So, it is time now, almost a year after the General Election, to reshuffle, to refresh and to reboot.

We think that we have, in the announcements that we made this morning, a better calibration of the spread of Departments in order to better align service delivery in areas where we have detected that we are doubling up on efforts where we are delivering a service to our community. As a result, when hon. Members look at this reshuffle they will see that the changes obviously have nothing to do with any individual's capacity to deliver in one Department or not deliver in another Department. You see, Mr Speaker, I have no doubt that I am probably the luckiest Chief Minister in the history of Gibraltar – and I note that I am in the presence of two others – in terms of the talent available to me and the undoubted ability of Ministers to deliver in any Department or Ministry that I might ask them to deliver on.

This is, therefore, Mr Speaker, the ministerial configuration with which I would have wanted to start the lifetime of this Parliament, with the additional changes that the Deputy Chief Minister and I have made as a result of the Brexit referendum.

So, if I can start now with the work that I am going to ask the Deputy Chief Minister to discharge on behalf of Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar. Joseph Garcia and I have been working together now for well-nigh 25 years, a quarter of a century in politics together – and, as far as he looks, not a day older – and this manifestation of a portfolio is one which we have agreed is the best way for him to assist me in the discharge of my obligations and for him to apply his extraordinary talents. Those who know Dr Garcia as long as I do, know that his abilities are without rival in the context of making the case for Gibraltar. He is no doubt, in my mind, the best Deputy Chief Minister Gibraltar has ever had and is able to deputise for me, and in some instances to do a much better job than I would, in terms of lobbying and ensuring that Gibraltar's message is put across.

At this historic time in the affairs of Gibraltar, Joseph Garcia becomes the Minister for Exiting the European Union. He continues to have responsibility for lobbying internationally and for the representative offices abroad, and he continues to have responsibility for European Affairs. If I may say so, Mr Speaker, for Joseph Garcia and for Fabian Picardo it is indeed with a very heavy heart that we create ministerial responsibility for leaving the European Union, something that I know all Members in this House would not have wanted to see us have to do. In the process of doing so, the Deputy Chief Minister will retain responsibility for Lands and Government Projects, for Civil Aviation, for Information and for Political, Democratic and Civic Reform, as well as for the promotion of the right to self-determination and liaison with the United Nations.

Mr Speaker, I follow now with the announcement of a major ministerial change which relates to the work of John Cortes, who will become Gibraltar's new Minister for Education and will relinquish responsibility for Health. In doing so, I think it is important to highlight that John Cortes is a magnificent political operator – although I think he prefers to think of himself as an environmentalist first and foremost. He has done a magnificent job, therefore, in Health. He has brought transformational changes to the Gibraltar Health Authority, where we have repatriated many, many services, which means not just a lower cost to the Health Service but also less stress for patients, who are now able to enjoy the benefit of care in Gibraltar where previously they might have had to go abroad for the purposes of that care. He leaves what is the highest spending Department in Gibraltar, but he leaves this post able to have the satisfaction of the 115 huge number of projects that he has completed in the past year alone and in the five years that he has been in post since December 2011. There are many other changes also already on foot in the GHA, some of them already very near to completion, but I am going to ask him also now to retain responsibility for the Environment and for the Upper Rock, which are the areas that all of us know are second nature to him, as well as Climate Change. The maintenance, administration and operation of tourist sites and beaches will also pass to him, which we think is better served 120 in that Department in the context of the Department of the Environment than in the context of the Department of Tourism, where we are looking instead to develop a Department that promotes Gibraltar internationally. Minister Cortes is going to retain responsibility for public health and environmental health, and the big change is that he is going to become the Minister for the second highest spending Department in the Government, which is Education.

125 Now with Education, I am giving John a huge amount of responsibility and I am going to ask him to do something which has never been done before in the history of Gibraltar. Mr Speaker, I am asking John Cortes to deliver five new schools during the lifetime of this Parliament. The planning of that work is already underway, but the beginning of the projects is to start under his time as Minister for Education. He is also going to be responsible for delivering on our 130 commitment to bring school lunches into school. He is therefore going to become Gibraltar's very own Jamie Oliver! In Education also John will have responsibility for the further development of the University of Gibraltar, one of the flagship projects that Gilbert Licudi was the father of and which now is ripe for further development under the tutelage of Professor Daniella Tilbury as Vice Chancellor.

135 I am also asking John to take responsibility for Heritage, which we think sits well with his responsibility for the environment, given that a lot of our heritage assets are in areas where he is going to be doing a lot of work also with the part of his portfolio that deals with urban renewal.
And he will retain responsibility for the utilities, including refuse collection and disposal, which again sits well with the environmental portfolio that I am asking him to take responsibility for. In 140 terms of heritage, I remind Members that there will soon be a new Heritage and Antiquities Act, and it will be his responsibility to see that Act through Parliament. So, in effect, he will be both our Jamie Oliver and our Indiana Jones, all rolled into one! I can think of no one better to take on these onerous responsibilities.

Gilbert Licudi will move from Education, which is now the domain of John Cortes, to take 145 responsibility for Employment, for Tourism, Commercial Aviation and the Port. I should say, Mr Speaker, it is very apposite that Mr Licudi is not here with us today, given that he is in Denmark promoting Gibraltar in an international backgammon tournament, where he plays for the Gibraltar side, already starting to do the work as Minister for Tourism.

Gilbert Licudi, as all those who have had the opportunity of working with him will know, is an 150 incredibly gifted politician and professional. He is a man who has delivered, in the lifetime of the last Parliament and in the early part of this Parliament also, probably more than most Ministers have delivered in all their time in the previous Governments that there have been in Gibraltar.
He has already delivered two new schools, he has delivered a University and he has delivered a small boats marina already.

155 I am asking him, therefore, to apply his considerable ability to areas where we need to explore new possibilities in a post-Brexit world. Tourism is one of those responsibilities. I think it is an area where we can do things in a different way, and that is why the Department for Tourism, the Ministry of Tourism that Gilbert Licudi will lead, will not be responsible for the maintenance of the tourist sites and the beaches. It is going to be a Department which I will now 160 ask to look outwards to the rest of the world, and not inwards to Gibraltar, in order to promote Gibraltar to the rest of the world as a tourist destination – with responsibility for keeping the sites in the order that they need to be in and to the standard that they need to be, passing, as I said, to the Ministry of the Environment.

I am also asking Gilbert Licudi to head a Department of Commercial Aviation, which will 165 include responsibility for Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd and new commercial aviation projects –

170 another area where we believe there are opportunities for Gibraltar after Brexit – and to take responsibility for all entry points to Gibraltar, including the Port. I am consolidating all responsibilities in respect of the Port – which was previously split across Ministries – in one Ministry for the Port, to include Maritime Services and ship and yacht registration, another potential area of business for Gibraltar.

175 In respect of employment and Social Security, which will move, together with the industrial tribunal, to Gilbert Licudi, he inherits from Neil Costa the lowest level of unemployment in recorded history in Gibraltar and his job will be to maintain those low levels of unemployment in the ballpark of where they are today – something, Mr Speaker, that Mr Licudi will be well acquainted with as he was the shadow Minister with responsibility for employment in the time that I was Leader of the Opposition and, before me, under Joe Bossano.

180 Gilbert Licudi will retain responsibility for co-ordination of international exchange of information, Civil Contingencies, the Gibraltar Fire & Rescue Service and the Airport Fire and Rescue Service.

185 Mr Speaker, I move on now to the responsibilities of Albert Isola. Albert Isola will head a new Ministry: a Ministry of Commerce. It is important, in my view, to consolidate in one Ministry what we do for the financial services industry, what we do for the gaming industry and what we do for the e-commerce industry, and what we do in e-government, and therefore he will also take responsibility for government IT, together with the responsibility for Business and Commercial Affairs and for postal services.

190 Albert Isola is undoubtedly a very, very safe pair of hands. Members of the financial services and gaming communities know that they have in Albert Isola a Minister who listens and who understands the issues that affect business in Gibraltar. He is undoubtedly an excellent conciliator who has the capacity to deliver on the most sensitive projects, and as we move into this post-Brexit world we need to ensure that what we do for commerce in Gibraltar we do well and we do in a joined-up way, and hence the creation of this one Ministry that will deal with the concerns of business in Gibraltar. I know that Albert will have a very big job on his hands to ensure that Gibraltar's financial services remain attractive post Brexit. He is already doing an excellent job of working with me and with the Deputy Chief Minister in recalibrating the nature of our relationship with the United Kingdom post Brexit to ensure that Gibraltar does remain very attractive to the financial services community. He has the depth of understanding of those industries to be able to assist us and to deliver for us and for those industries.

195 I move on now to two extraordinarily talented young people who have done an excellent job in Government since 9th of December 2011 – and I am not going to start talking about Joe Bossano, Mr Speaker! (Laughter)

200 Neil Costa has done a magnificent job in every Ministry I have asked him to oversee. He will become the Minister for Health, Care and Justice. Health is not a new area for Neil, as he held shadow responsibility for Health in the Opposition under both Joe Bossano and myself, and in creating this new Ministry of Health and Care, we have thought it important that we consolidate the way that we deliver care across the board in our community. Until now, we have had a Ministry dealing with Health, a Ministry dealing with Elderly Residential Services and a Department of Social Services, and another for the disabled. So today we create the Ministry of Health and Care, a Ministry that will deal with all the care services that we give in our community in one joined-up way. Neil will take on responsibility for the Health Authority, for Elderly Residential Services, for Social Services and for the Disabled, all under one Minister. We think it is time to stop doubling up the work that we do and to seek efficiency in the way that we deliver these services, so that we get the best value for money and therefore have more to plough back into the provision of care that we give in our community. This Ministry of Health Care is one that I have been very keen indeed to create since 26th of November last year and I am very happy that Neil Costa is going to be heading it. His record in each of the Departments that I have asked him to lead on is one of delivery and one of efficiency, and it is absolutely right that he should have the opportunity to now head this new pioneering Ministry of Health and Care. I sincerely believe that creating the Ministry of Health and Care is the most revolutionary aspect of what the Government is doing today in this reshuffle and it will be good for our community in the long term.

One of the things I am also asking Neil Costa to do is to take over where Gilbert Licudi has done a huge amount of work in the Ministry of Justice. Neil Costa becomes also today Gibraltar's Minister for Justice, and the youngest one ever to boot. He will take on responsibility for the legal system, for the Probation Service, for tribunals, for the community service schemes, for access to justice, legal aid and assistance, which we all know is in an issue that has to be resolved as soon as possible and where Gilbert Licudi has done a huge amount of work already with the Bar Council and with the judiciary to find the right parameters. Neil also takes on responsibility for law drafting. And so, after today, Neil Costa becomes Minister for Health, Care and Justice. In dealing with issues which relate to health and care I am conscious that the issues that face Gibraltar are not just issues for our community; they are issues for all of Europe and for the United Kingdom in particular. Wherever health services are provided free at the point of delivery there is a problem in all communities as our communities age, and we have to ensure that we are able to continue to provide the standard of care that we want to see provided across the board. It is also important to note that there is a huge interplay between Care and Justice, particularly in the areas of mental health and in respect of some young people in care, and this Ministry will be best equipped to deal with those issues under the auspices of one Minister.

225

235

The other young talent that has done extraordinary work in the time that she has been working with me in Government has been Samantha Sacramento. Mr Speaker, I should tell the House that Samantha Sacramento was flying into Gibraltar today but has found herself diverted not just from her Ministries but also to Malaga airport instead of Gibraltar, and will join us as soon as we are able to get her into the jurisdiction.

240

She is a very, very talented and passionate young woman, who cares not just about the politics of what she does but for the people in her care as a result of her ministerial portfolios. She is, I must tell you, the unsung hero of the building of Charles Bruzon House and Seamaster Lodge for the Elderly. She has been, as Minister with responsibility for Social Services and the Disabled and responsibility for Housing, the person who has ensured that those developments are prepared for people with disabilities and the elderly in a way that works for them. She has done extraordinary work in the remedial works required at Albert Risso House and Bishop Canilla house, and therefore creating a new Ministry today within the concept of the Housing Ministry is that of the Ministry of affordable Housing. No longer will the Government deal, through its Housing Ministry, just with the rental of Government property; we will now also deal, through the Housing Ministry, with the development of affordable property, something which has traditionally been done through No. 6 Convent Place alone. In the post-Brexit scenario that we face, it is important that I be able to continue to do the international work which I now I have to do with the Deputy Chief Minister, but that should not delay the development of affordable housing in Gibraltar, and given the work that Samantha has done already in property development for the Government at Charles Bruzon House and at Seamaster Lodge and the deep understanding she has, therefore, of building requirements, I think it is absolutely right and proper that she should be given the additional responsibility of taking on Gibraltar's affordable housing schemes and the responsibility and obligation that we acquired at the last General Election to develop approximately 1,500 more affordable homes during the lifetime of this Parliament. Work is quite advanced on paper in respect of these. The time has come now to start the process of delivering them, and I am going to ask her to start and lead in that process herself.

245

260

Samantha has also done fantastic work in the area of collection of housing arrears, as many Members of the House will know. That is the work she is doing at Housing and she is going to continue with that responsibility, as well as with responsibility for Equality and the Minorities, where she has done ground-breaking work in the past five years. Gibraltar has changed dramatically, under the auspices of her role as Minister for Equality, in the way that it deals with

265

270 minorities and how we approach equality, and it is right that she should continue to have that responsibility.

Samantha also takes on responsibility for Civic Rights, Citizens' and Advice the Ombudsman, Consumer Affairs and Protection, Data Protection and Health and Safety; and also, with a heavy 275 heart, I must also announce that she will take on responsibility for the control of drugs misuse, including substance abuse, and responsibility for Bruce's Farm. The reason I say once again 'with a heavy heart' is because you will know that I wanted to take on that responsibility myself after the last General Election. I am very keen to see us do a lot of work in that area, but it is impossible for me to do that work at the moment given the work I have to do internationally in respect of Brexit. Therefore I have asked Samantha to take on that responsibility. I know that 280 she will do it well, and what I propose to do is to create an inter-ministerial committee on the prevention of the misuse of drugs and on rehabilitation of drugs offenders, which I will chair and which will include Samantha and also the Minister for Justice and Health, Neil Costa, so that I can do some of the work that I wanted to do but that I do not delay the important work that needs to be done more efficiently in respect of that particular area of responsibility.

285 Mr Speaker, Steven Linares will continue to be the Minister for Culture, Youth and Sport, but he will relinquish responsibility for Heritage, which, as I have told you, will become the responsibility of John Cortes. Steven has done an absolutely excellent job in respect of the work he has done in Sports and in Culture. It is in his time that you have seen the development of events-led tourism as a result of the events that are organised by the Ministry of Culture – in 290 particular, the Gibraltar Music Festival, which I think is something that now will continue to grow and grow. And in the context of the work that he has already done, this fantastic political operator – who is vivacious and convivial, and all who know him get on with – will also assist me by taking on responsibility for broadcasting and the media, which until now has been my own responsibility and which I also reluctantly relinquish in order to be better able to deal with the 295 international issues facing Gibraltar today.

Paul Balban is a serious operator who knows his areas of responsibility better than absolutely anyone in Gibraltar or in this Parliament, and I am going to ask him to head a new Department, which will be a Department for Infrastructure and Planning, bringing together all the areas of Technical Services, Town Planning, and Transport and Public Service Vehicles, and Public 300 Transport, together with his existing responsibilities for Traffic, Parking, Roads and Licensing, and Vehicles, and of course the implementation of the Sustainable Traffic and Transport Plan.
That is best described, in our view, not just as a Department of Technical Services but a Department of Infrastructure and Planning, which is really what it is, and I have confidence that we are now very close indeed to being able to make major announcements in respect of the 305 implementation of the strategic Traffic and Transport Plan.

And last and most certainly not least, of course, is the man that Joseph and I are lucky to have as a political mentor within the Government, the former Chief Minister of Gibraltar, the Hon. Joe Bossano – another one of the young talented people in my Government – who will remain Minister for Economic Development and Inward Investment and will continue to have 310 responsibility for international trade and telecommunications and enterprise, but who will see the creation of a new Ministry today, which I am asking him to head, which is a Ministry of Public Sector efficiency. I think it is essential, in the context of the world into which we are going to be operating, that we understand that the public sector that we fund is as efficient as it can be. We do not believe in austerity and we do not believe in cuts, and we are and remain committed to 315 the manning levels of the Civil Service; but we do believe in efficiency and we think that one of the biggest selling points for Gibraltar is to be one of the most efficient places in the world in which you can do business. In order to do that, we have to keep constantly under review how our public sector works and what it delivers for the community that it is designed to serve. As Chief Minister of Gibraltar, my first obligation is to serve the public in Gibraltar and I head what 320 is in fact the public sector. Each of my Ministers has a responsibility to taxpayers and to voters.
Every single civil servant, everybody who takes their emoluments from the Crown, has a responsibility to the public to be the most efficient in the way that we discharge our obligations to them, and it is absolutely right, therefore, that we constantly check and review how we do public sector efficiencies in Gibraltar to ensure that we get the best results that we can and that we are dealing with inward investors and we are dealing with those who want to do business in Gibraltar in the most efficient way.

Mr Speaker, I think that creating the responsibility for public sector efficiency through Joe Bossano, who understands the public sector intimately, having been Chief Minister and having been a leading trade unionist in the 1970s and 1980s, will work very well with me retaining responsibility for the Civil Service and Albert Isola taking responsibility for commerce. In that way, together we can work to calibrate how best to ensure that the public sector delivers for this community as efficiently as it should. I am also asking Joe Bossano to take on responsibility from me for procurement, because this is one of the areas where I believe that the public sector can do better. I have believed that passionately since we were elected. I believe that we have done a lot of work already with the excellent people in the Department of Procurement to make our procurement better, but I think we can improve it even more. Finally, Joe will also retain responsibility for training and for the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

Mr Speaker, as I think is obvious, this is a Government of huge Gibraltarian talent. We do not do everything right, but we try to do as much as we can as well as we can, and with this reshuffle I believe that we can go further in doing so. I believe that these new Departments will make for a better layout of Ministries which are better suited to deliver our Strongest Foundations manifesto and to deal with the many challenges that Brexit presents to us. It may be necessary to tinker a little more around the edges of this reshuffle in the future because we are creating new Departments, but we need to make sure that everything is picked up to right effect in the right places as some of these departmental changes take effect. But I am sure that with the energy and the enthusiasm and the vigour that my Ministers will bring to the work that they will continue to do now in their new Ministries, we will be able to produce excellent results again, not just for the GSLP/Liberals at the next election but for the whole of Gibraltar in the delivery of the service that we provide as a Government – and that is what matters the most. And in reshuffling and rebooting and refreshing this Government I am conscious that it is important for us always for the political philosophy that we hold to ensure that no one on this side of the House ever feels that we have become the Establishment. We are not, Mr Speaker. We are the representatives of the electorate in the heart of Government, and with this reshuffle I hope we will be able to do more for those that we serve.

In this House, Mr Speaker, I hope that Ministers with new responsibilities will be able to work well with Members opposite in respect of the discharge of our respective parliamentary responsibilities also.

Thank you very much, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: May I explain, for the benefit of the new Members of the Opposition – the relatively new Members now – that it is the practice when a ministerial statement is made in Parliament, to allow Members of the Opposition to ask questions for clarification, if they so wish.

Procedural –
Ministerial titles

Clerk: We now move on to Answers to Oral Questions. We – 365

Mr Speaker: May I clear up a couple of things. I take it that the answers to the questions that have already been submitted will continue to be made by the outgoing Ministers as it were.

370

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, it was remiss of me not to say during the course of my statement that for this parliamentary session Members will be answering questions in respect of the Ministries in which they were at the time the questions were submitted.

375

Mr Speaker: For the next meeting of Parliament there is a need for the Clerk, with the Chief Minister, to consider the new titles, in respect of each new Minister, that are going to be inserted in the answers, so that they are explanatory but not longer than is absolutely necessary. That is something that can be carried out between now and then.

380

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes. I do not think the titles will change very much, and in fact they are probably now shorter –

Mr Speaker: You have indications already?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, I think they are probably shorter now than they were. Legal Notice 207/2016, which has been issued, I understand, a few moments ago, is the notice under section 46(1) of the Constitution, signed by His Excellency – the particular directions under section 46 which actually provide the new titles – and I am sure if one of them seems a little long the Clerk and I can liaise to agree a suitably abridged version for reading purposes.

Questions for Oral Answer

BUSINESS AND EMPLOYMENT

Q609/2016

Returning graduates – Placement in suitable jobs

390

Clerk: We now commence with Question 609/2016. The questioner is the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if I may, may I echo my congratulations to the Leader of the Opposition on taking silk. I am very happy for him to have received this honour.

Also, if I may, I would like to take this opportunity to wish all 10 Ministers the best of luck in their respective new portfolios, that they will run and deliver their new mandates with distinction and to the best of their abilities for the betterment of our community.

Mr Speaker, I know I have said this before, but even though we may not share the same political vision I want to thank in particular Minister Cortes for always having his door open in the Health Ministry. It is amazing how many people he has helped me to help, and I thank him

400 for his approachability. I similarly look forward to sharing positive working relationships with the other Ministers in their new portfolios for the good of our people. (Banging on desks)

Now moving on to my question: can the Minister for Education explain whether he is satisfied with the placing of graduates in jobs which reflect their specialities, once they return from the UK?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Employment.

Minister for Business and Employment (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the information requested is not available, as very few graduates who return to Gibraltar register with the Employment Service as unemployed and therefore submit to the Employment Service their qualifications, including the degree they have read.

Whereas it is, of course, wonderful to be able to report to this House that most graduates find direct employment as a result of our thriving economy, it means, unfortunately, that I do not have any empirical basis on which I can provide an answer to the hon. Lady's specific question. When terms of engagement are received by the Employment Service, their qualifications, including their degree, are not submitted, as it is not a legal requirement under the Employment Regulations 1994.

I can tell the hon. Lady, however, that whereas the 2012 Census of Gibraltar does not provide specific details on whether a graduate's job reflects his or her specialities, the data shows that most graduates are employed in 'professional, managers and senior officials' and 'associate professional and technical' occupations. In fact, 84% of male and female graduates in full-time employment were registered in these occupations.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: If I may, Mr Speaker, I would like to ask the Hon. Member, Minister Costa ... I have spoken with various individuals who have come back from the UK and have spent a few years in Gibraltar feeling a little lost because they have not been able to put their speciality to the best of their abilities. I appreciate the statistics that the hon. Member has put out, but would there be a policy to help such people who are feeling that their specialities are a little wasted and not used? Where would they turn and what would he recommend that they do in order for them to feel that they are managing or satisfying that speciality?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I remind the hon. Lady that at some point this year the Hon. former Minister for Education, Mr Licudi and I announced the creation of an Employment Development Service so that there are officials within the Employment Service who deal specifically with graduates returning to Gibraltar, and they guide, assist and advise them on vacancies that are available within the private sector and of course any vacancies coming out in the public sector.

As I have explained to the hon. Lady, it is thankfully a fact that most graduates when they return ... As somebody said to me very recently, all the good ones are taken up immediately and those who are having some trouble know that they can attend the Employment Service, and indeed the Education Service, to be able to be guided.

I have met with various – I can think, off the top of my head, of maybe four or five – graduates who have returned and who have had some difficulty in finding employment based on the speciality that they have read, but I am happy to say that most of them have been able to find a job that is, tangentially at least, related to their academic qualifications.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Sorry, if I may one last time: what about the situation where perhaps a graduate has been here for many years and perhaps has been working somewhere else but has a different speciality that he or she has not wanted to take up then – does that individual become expired to the system that you are now explaining to us works? Is it only for recent graduates, or ...? Can you understand what I am getting at? Thank you.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I think I understand the hon. Lady's question. The service that is provided by the Employment Service is open to absolutely every graduate, whether they have just returned from the UK or whether they have worked in the United Kingdom or elsewhere and are returning. It is a new service. It is relatively recent – it was only announced and came into operation, if I recall correctly, just before summer – so maybe I have been guilty of not making sufficient announcements or sufficient communications on the existence of the service; and whereas I am no longer the Minister for Employment, I have no doubt that the current Minister for Employment will be equally delighted to meet with any persons, if she has certain people in mind that we may be able to assist.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, a related supplementary: what about incentivising young people to do degrees in areas and professional qualifications in areas which are going to be necessary for the economy in the future? Is that something that the Government is also considering and has considered?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker. In fact, the reason why I did not address the point asked in the supplementary question was because the hon. Lady was asking me about returning graduates, but the Employment Service careers service that I spoke of just recently also deals with the Department of Education, and jointly they present public talks and also they hold private meetings and tutorials with the Education Department attending the schools and they identify what are the industries in Gibraltar which are bound to have vacancies in the future.

I know that Minister Bossano, when he was the Minister for Employment, made, rightly, the case that there were vacancies coming in respect of accounting and auditors, and to the hon. Gentleman's credit I think we have over 60 graduates, as a result of Minister Bossano's efforts, currently undergoing accounting and finance in the UK, so that over the three years accounting and auditing firms will find they will no longer seek vacancies elsewhere but rather will be able to recruit home talent.

The Education Department and Employment together, of course, work also closely with Minister Isola, who assists in feeding information in respect of gaming and financial services, so we think that collectively and holistically we have been able to, I think as the hon. Gentleman has done, identify a gap where we should be telling students, before they go off to university and before they choose their careers, which are the opportunities that are likely to arise when they return to Gibraltar.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful for that. Indeed, accountancy has been a longstanding issue not only during the currency of this Government but going back to the GSD Government, and there has been a huge amount of recruiting of accountants from the Philippines, of all places – I do not know why the Philippines, but there has been a lot of recruitment from the Philippines, as the hon. Gentleman recognises from across the benches.

Is the Government's philosophy and policy limited to information – in other words, providing students with the information of the vacancies of the areas that might be growth areas in the future; or is the Government going further and providing incentives to students to go into those areas? Off the top of my head, something that we certainly put in our manifesto was top-up grants, for example, in relation to students going to the United Kingdom and doing certain kinds of degrees which are necessary in order to fill skills gaps here in Gibraltar in areas that are necessary.

Clerk: Question 610. The Hon. T N Hammond.
Oh sorry, I beg your pardon. My apologies.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
Over the last couple of years, Gibtelecom have been offering additional support to encourage 465 people to go into that area, and unfortunately there have been no takers, even though we have got 950 people. I think historically when the GSLP took on the commitment to provide everybody with the opportunity of going into further education, the philosophy has been since then to give every child that comes out of school the opportunity to do what is their natural inclination and what they are likely to be best at, without in fact focusing on whether it would be 470 what Gibraltar needed. To that extent, the old practice of saying that if people did not come back to work in Gibraltar they would be penalised stopped making any sense, because we were not asking them to go and study for something specifically. I think there may be a time in the future when we will need to revisit that, but it has not happened so far. The incentive in the particular area of telecommunications where I am involved has not worked.

SPORTS, CULTURE, HERITAGE AND YOUTH

Q610/2016

Wellington Front refurbishment – Costs

475 Clerk: Question 610. The Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Government say what have been the total costs of the Wellington Front refurbishment and if any of that cost has fallen outside of the contract with Koala Ltd; and, if so, what that amount is and to whom it has been paid?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, we are not in a position at this moment in time to provide the information requested, but expect to be able to do so on the project completion.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I understand there may not be a precise figure of the final cost, but can the Minister not provide some information on the costs to date and whether any of those costs have fallen outside of the contract with Koala, or can he even indicate whether any costs whatsoever have fallen outside of the contract with Koala?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the project has not yet finished, but there was a contract with Koala, as the hon. Member rightly says, and yes, there might have been certain other works, but what we always try to do in these cases is that if we have a budget for the project we might then, at the end, say, 'Right, okay, you do this job but don't do that job which was part of the specification, therefore, in order to keep within the budget.' That is why it is very difficult at this moment in time to give the Hon. Member how all the invoices that come for different works that happen there ... If anybody goes to Wellington Front you will see that different jobs have been cropping up within the general project, but like I said, what we do is we try and see how we can cut down on certain things that were originally there but are probably not necessary, in order to try and cover up for works that might be necessary.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I think I understand what the hon. Gentleman is saying, and I will just try and paraphrase him and ask my supplementary. What he is saying is – and it is not unusual in a construction contract – that the main contract went to Koala, but, in order to keep costs down, certain aspects of the job were subcontracted to some other construction company, or some other company, because they were able to do it cheaper than Koala. No? Well, could he explain, please, because therefore I have not understood it.

Hon. S E Linares: It is nothing to do with the works being cheaper. The contract was given to Koala. Whether Koala then subcontracts in the general contract ... it is up to Koala who they subcontract to for different works. What I am saying is that in the general project of the whole of the Wellington Front there are certain things ... It is nothing to do with cheap or not cheap; it is what you want done or do not want done, nothing to do with the price.

I will give you an example: the outside walls which are in Queensway, for example, were originally to be plastered, to be sandblasted and everything like that, and we thought, 'Well, that is not really necessary to do, because the walls are all right as they are now, but the money you were going to spend to do that, do something else inside, which we would like you to do,' and whether it is Koala who does it through another subcontractor ... it is up to Koala to decide who does their works for them. That is what I meant.

Hon. D A Feetham: Okay, Mr Speaker, so essentially what he is saying is this, isn't it – that there are no costs that have fallen outside the contract with Koala because there is a Government contract with Koala and whether Koala subcontracts to anybody else is up to Koala. That is what he is saying, correct? Therefore, the answer to the question posed by my hon. Friend is that there are no costs that have fallen outside the contract with Koala.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): No, Mr Speaker, the answer to the question is the answer first given: that the project is not yet finished and that it may be that there are some costs which relate to the project or it may be there are not, but when the project is finished we will be able to tell him.

The hon. Gentleman should know that Wellington Front is an area which has, for example, sewerage pipes going through it and sewerage pumps going in it. Some of those are assigned to this project and some are not. In order to give an answer which is correct, we have to wait for the project to finish in order to be able to give an answer which is correct. Because the last thing we want to do is to give an answer which is not correct; otherwise we will be accused of giving inaccurate information to the House, which the hon. Members will not want to be receiving. In respect of a project like this, when it is finished we will be able to give a detailed breakdown of the costs.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, but I understand that that explanation that the hon. Gentleman has provided is applicable to the cost of the project, because what he is saying is, 'Well, look, we cannot provide you with the cost of the project, because we are still receiving invoices and until we basically collate all these invoices and look at them we cannot provide you with the information.' But part of the question is different. Part of the question is whether there have been any costs that have fallen outside the contract with Koala, and I am not going to push it but I would have thought that that is something that the Government is capable of answering, because either – and he has provided two different answers – either everything has been included in the contract with Koala, which Koala then subcontracts, or there is a contract with Koala and then there are several minor or larger, I do not know, contracts with third parties. That is the question: whether it is the former or the latter.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I just do not understand where the hon. Gentleman thinks he is going. There is a contract with Koala which is obviously being honoured and the works are being done; and if, in the context of that contract, Koala subcontracts anything, it is a matter entirely for Koala. We will get the invoicing from Koala. When we have finished the project we will be able to tell them what that project has cost, etc. But there may be other things happening in respect of Wellington Front. The hon. Member's question is about Wellington Front. Yes, of course we know, but they relate to the project and the wider aspects of the project. Some of them may be in the original determination of what the project should be and some of them will be outside the original determination of what the project should be, because it is normal, as the hon. Gentleman knows, in any construction project that you may end up breaking something whilst you work, or something may turn out not to be of the standard and quality that you expected when you were going into a project and it may break and it has to be repaired. That will be known at the end of the project.

The hon. Gentleman has been in Government and has been in charge of projects. I do not hesitate to remind him of how overspent his projects were and how overspent his Government usually was. At the airport they went from £24 million to £84 million, the highest overspend in the history of Gibraltar politics – probably one of the highest overspends in the history of politics in the world, Mr Speaker. But in respect of this project at Wellington Front we will be able to give a full and accurate answer when the project is finished.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, it certainly was not my intention when I forwarded the question to ... I did not expect quite a convoluted and difficult ... And it was not my intention to catch Government out in any way, it was a genuine interest to find out whether there was anything beyond the scope, because I am aware that Government do publish some figures – I do not know if it is running totals of works related to Wellington Front being carried out by Koala – and I was interested to know whether any other works may be factored in which are not available under the Government website.

If I were to come back at the next session and rephrase the question – rather than use ‘total cost’ use ‘running costs so far’ – does the Government think it would be able to provide an answer as to costs accrued so far, both towards Koala and potentially towards any other company that may be involved?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as with most Government projects, invoicing is happening all the time, there are adjustments happening, and we do not want to give information which then turns out not to be accurate – because when we give information in good faith which is then subject to adjustments, then we are exposing ourselves to suggestions that we have somehow misled the House either intentionally or unintentionally. So I would rather wait for a moment when we are able to give accurate information and not give a management account of any particular project to Members opposite, because we do not think that that is in the interests of efficiency.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, this presumably went out to tender, so the Government obviously has a price on this particular contract. Are they prepared to at least say whether the job is within the price, or is it going to exceed the price? What is the price?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, again I think hon. Gentlemen have heard me say before that where a contract is not completed we do not want to disclose that information, because it is not in the Government’s commercial interest to do so. We are still, at every stage, like every developer, negotiating the context of what is being delivered and trying to get the best deal for the taxpayer. As in the course of every potential development, things are coming up which we might think are new and not in the original scope but which we want done in the original price, and that is an ongoing negotiation.

At the end of the process we will be able to tell hon. Gentlemen what the job given was, what the tender price was, what the final price was and what the variations were. I think that is what is in the best interests of the taxpayer, so that we provide the community with full transparency as to the contract and tender price, the actual completion value of the contract and what was done for that completion value.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Government therefore confirm – because I am in some doubt now; I was not previously, but I am actually in some doubt with respect to the figures it publishes on its website related to this project and payments made to Koala – that those figures it publishes are accurate, because it seems Government is not absolutely certain whether it can provide this House with information that is accurate.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, of course they are accurate, because it is a reflection of payments made, so they are accurate as to a transaction. In other words, this is the amount that has been paid. What has it been paid for? Some of it is advance payment in respect of some aspects of the work, some of it is moneys which were retained in respect of other aspects of the work where the period of the retention is now at an end. So it is an accurate reflection, a snapshot, of what has been paid, but in terms of what it has been paid for ... there is obviously in any project, large or small, a constant negotiation between the Government and those providing services to us, which comes to an end in a final account, and that is when we can give accurate information as to payments made and what for.

Hon. T N Hammond: In which case, Mr Speaker, because I can find information on payments made to Koala but not to any other companies related to the Wellington Front project, would it be correct to say that no payments have thus far been made to any third parties directly by Government, any other companies directly by Government, with respect to the Wellington Front project?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman takes the term ‘Wellington Front project’ to mean that which Koala was contracted to do and is defined in that way, because it may be that you have got ... and I am just literally inventing this for the purposes of illustration. You could have a company that deals with sewerage that has been asked to do sewage clearing works, and that would be usually the responsibility of the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning, to use the terminology I will use in the next meeting of the House, and that may also relate to works done in the context of Wellington Front. That is not the Wellington Front project, but it is at Wellington Front and it may have been brought to our attention as a result of the Wellington Front project. An expansive definition of the ‘Wellington Front project’ might include that, because Koala might have told us that they cannot get new pipes in until the sewerage issue is dealt with. That is why it is accurate to say that payments in respect of that project have only been made to Koala and not to third parties, but that there may be third parties being paid for works that somehow tangentially also relate to Wellington Front more generally but which may have an effect on Wellington Front is also true.

Q611/2016
National Theatre –
Estimated construction cost

Clerk: Question 611. The Hon. R M Clinton.

485 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, how much does the Government estimate the construction of a National Theatre would cost?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, we are not in a position at this moment in time to disclose the information requested. Various estimates of what the theatre will cost are available to Government. The project has not yet commenced, and when it does, in order to get the best deal for Gibraltar, we would be unwise to disclose what we think each option should cost.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Hon. Minister for his answer. I just wonder if he could give us a ballpark – whether it is going to be somewhere between £10 million and £20 million, or £1 million, or £500,000, any idea at all; and also, perhaps as a rider while I am standing, if he could confirm the location would still be the site of the old Queen’s Cinema and the Queen’s Hotel, which I think the Government bought for about £5 million.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, we will not be giving an estimate or a ballpark or a finger in the air, first of all because that is to ask a hypothetical question, which is not allowed under the Rules of the House, and second because it would be foolish in the extreme for us to do so. If we pitch it here in the House just for the purposes of entertaining the hon. Gentleman with a ballpark play, we may be pitching it higher than it should be, and somebody who might be able to do it for less for this community might then take the advantage of saying, ‘Well, if they think it is ballpark £x I am going to go up to £x and I am going to be in their ballpark.’ So, given that we are very prudent in terms of looking after the public purse and we look after every single penny, I can assure him that we are not going to do anything that puts us at risk of giving an advantage to those who commercially interface with the Government by falling into the trap of answering his hypothetical question. But I can tell him this: we have absolutely no intention of wasting £10 million on the process of preparing for the development.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, perhaps the Hon. the Chief Minister prefers to answer my second question, which is: is the preferred site still the Queen’s Cinema or the Queen’s Hotel?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in relation to this particular project, is this a project that the Government intends to complete within the next four years?

Hon. Chief Minister: I know that the hon. Gentleman chivvies between asking us please not to complete our manifesto because it costs too much and he thinks we cannot afford it, and then chastising us for not completing those parts of our manifesto that he identifies we have not yet done and suggesting that we should have done so. I have absolutely no intention of falling into the invitation spelt TRAP of not completing our manifesto in the lifetime of this Parliament, and this is a manifesto commitment.

Q612/2016
External lift to Parliament –
Concerns of Heritage Trust

490 Clerk: Question 612. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how it intends to address the concerns of the Heritage Trust in respect of the siting of the proposed external lift to Parliament, and why is a chairlift not a viable alternative option?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar is fully committed to an inclusive society where nobody is disadvantaged. We aim to provide such an inclusive environment in all of our public buildings regardless of age, gender or disability. To do so we have to consider removing barriers which have been imposed in the past.

We have to acknowledge that buildings were designed without considering those with disabilities. We all therefore face a challenge when such inclusiveness is to be achieved in historic buildings. We have to balance the safeguarding of our historic fabric with its continued use by all members of our society. The Government continues to consider all options.

We acknowledge and we are grateful to the Heritage Trust, who have voiced their concerns. However, we are committed to providing access to all and feel that we have left no stone unturned when looking for possible solutions. We do continue to look forward to working with the Trust in all our projects.

The question of the use of a chairlift as an option is one which was discarded by technical experts advising Government, as it raised a number of obvious issues. Whilst chairlifts may be acceptable in a private dwelling where their use is restricted to a few individuals with limited mobility, their use in public buildings such as this Parliament raises a number of concerns. Apart from the fact that the public stairs serve as a fire escape and restricting its already narrow width imposes significant risks, there are more basic issues, such as how someone with this disability is to be managed and where are the wheelchairs to be stored.

Those who are disabled are to be treated with the dignity that they deserve and we do not believe that a chairlift is the best option.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker, sorry, thank you to the hon. Member.

Unfortunately, I do not believe I have heard an answer to the question in terms of the concerns of the Heritage Trust, because if he has, no doubt, read the letter to him, or to the Government, they were concerned that they had originally agreed to the siting of the lift at the north-east corner of the building and now it is to be on the north-west corner of the building, in which is, I think, a slightly different schematic design to the original option 1, as opposed to their preferred option 3. Can the Minister please explain why, what was previously agreed, the Government has now changed its mind?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, because having the lift in the north-east corner of Main Street site provided with a ramp, and the ramp would have come through at a gradient of 1.3, assuming headroom is at 2.3 m, which is the norm, or 1.6, assuming that the headroom is 2 m, which is less. Therefore it falls short of the limit that is legal, which is 1.12, and therefore to put a gradient at the angle of where the lift would have actually come to and then get into this Chamber would have been too much of a gradient, and therefore it would have made it illegal. So the technical advice that we have had is that doing it on the north-east of this building ... although I must say that the principle of putting a lift outside has already been accepted, it is a question of whether we put it on the north east or on the north west, and it is obviously technically easier and legal to put it on the north west, which was the original place where it was agreed. But then, yes, with consultation with the Heritage Trust and my office, the Ministry of Heritage ... together came and thought that it would be better to do it on the north east, and when all the technical works came about doing it in the north east, all these things arose about the gradient, so there was no other option but to go back to where it was originally, which the Heritage Trust was not quite happy with, but neither were the Heritage Ministry, but there was no other option, and therefore it has been decided that it should be on the north west of the building. But the encroachment on the building is exactly the same: either you put the lift on the north east or the north west. So it was thought at the time – because I was involved in that – that it looked better for the building to have it on the north east, but these things have arisen 550 which are of a technical nature, of a legal nature, and therefore we have had to revert to going to the north west. I am pointing in the hall, because it is exactly where we would do the lift.

Hon. Chief Minister: If I may be of assistance to the House, Mr Speaker – and the hon. Gentleman might be pleased to hear that all of those issues have now landed on my desk and I am not satisfied that it is not possible to pursue other options and I am looking at those other options myself ... I will say with equal clarity that if the choice comes when it is only possible to do it in one particular way, then it will be done in that way, whether or not we would all wish it to be done in another, because the most important of the two principles that we are dealing with – and both of them are hugely important: first the preservation of our heritage, and second access to people with disabilities – the second one is the one that is most important. So we are going to continue to try again to get this right in a way that satisfies not just the Heritage Trust but everyone in Gibraltar who is concerned about heritage. They happen to have the opportunity to voice their concerns as the Trust, but in the Ministry in particular and in my office we have these concerns as well and we want to get it absolutely right, but when we put, in the end, on the balance – which I hope we do not have to do – doing it one way which does not satisfy the Ministry for Heritage and the Heritage Trust, or even us, but is the only way to guarantee access to disabled people, then the hammer will fall in favour of disabled people if it has to.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Chief Minister's intervention and I am glad to hear that his office is having a look at the whole issue.

I of course agree entirely with him that access is the main priority, and certainly we need to bear that in mind as obviously this building was not designed in a time when those were paramount issues, but I agree with him that at the end of the day disability access must come first.

575 It may be a complete diversion, but I notice that there is no such provision for Members of this House. Maybe that will come at a later date, or maybe it can be done in parallel. I seem to recall there was some objection to members of the public passing through the Chamber if a lift was sited on that side of the House rather than on that side of the House. But anyway, it is a by-the-by and I certainly would not want to double the cost for the taxpayer to create two sets of lifts just for our convenience.

580 The Hon. Minister, on heritage, mentioned the question of legal matters. Just for the benefit of Members, who may or may not be aware, under the Gibraltar Heritage Act this building is actually listed on schedule 2 as a category B listed building under section 40, which means there is a restriction under section 49. That restriction means – and you will forgive me while I read from my not-so-big phone; I have not got a tablet yet – that:

49. No person who is beneficially interested in any Listed "B" building, structure, site or land shall–

– I only quote part (a), which is relevant; part (b) is about trees, which I know John will be interested in, though probably not in this case –

(a) make to that building, structure, site or land any alterations, addition, or repair that affects its archaeological, architectural, artistic, historical or vernacular character ... except in accordance with a permit in writing issued for that purpose by the Government acting after consultation with the Board.

The 'Board' being, of course, the board of Heritage Trust.

590 So I think what I am trying to say is the board of Heritage Trust is more than just an NGO acting in this case; it actually has a legal standing in whether or not a permit is issued and obviously the Government has got to act in consultation with it.

If I read the letter from the Heritage Trust to the Government, I notice they make reference to a heritage permit. I just wonder if that permit was for the north-east corner or for the north-west corner, and is that permit going to be changed.

595 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, let me start by dealing with the first point the hon. Gentleman dealt with. We have absolutely no intention whatsoever of installing a lift for hon. Members to be able to access this place. Hon. Members are advised to take the stairs. It is good for all of us, Mr Speaker.

600 If there is a Member who is disabled, that is why we are going to add a lift, so that he can come and access this place and do his job, or he can come and watch this place in action if he is not a Member, but there will be one lift and I think that that is absolutely sufficient for hon. Members or members of the public.

605 Frankly, if we needed to close our stairs and we needed to come in through the general area, we could. Members of the House of Commons access the House of Commons through the same door that members of the public access the House of Commons. They sometimes have advantages in terms of security in areas that they can access, and people would not be able to access the back, but we have absolutely zero intention of doubling up the cost in respect of access to this building when it comes to adding a lift.

610 Second, Mr Speaker, the law provides that a permit is required. No permit has been issued. There is consultation in the process of making a final determination. That consultation which the Heritage Trust is entitled to under the Act has already occurred, but the Government nonetheless now is taking other considerations into account in order to be able to try and marry those competing concerns of protecting our heritage and giving access for people with disabilities, which, by the way, is something that we have been wrestling with for some time 615 now but was never the policy of the previous administration, never the policy of the previous administration – something which I think is, frankly, shameful. We will get this right and we will get it right for the protection of our heritage and for access for people with disabilities.

Questions for Oral Answer

SPORTS, CULTURE, HERITAGE AND YOUTH

Q613-614/2016

Heritage –

Heritage and Antiquities Act; Heritage Trust trustees

Clerk: Friday, 21st October 2016. We continue with answers to questions and we commence with Question 613. The Hon. R M Clinton.

5 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide an update in respect of the implementation of the new Heritage and Antiquities Act?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

10 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 614.

Clerk: Question 614. The Hon. R M Clinton.

15 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, on what basis does the Government select trustees to be appointed to the Heritage Trust and when will it reduce the number of appointees?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

20 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the new Heritage and Antiquities Act is on track. I had a final revision meeting with members from my Ministry and the Government Legal Office very recently to iron out the latest draft. Pending certain clarifications and amendments, we should be in a position to present the Bill to Parliament very shortly.

25 Within the Bill mentioned above the appointment of trustees will be amended to fulfil our manifesto commitment.

Hon. R M Clinton: I thank the Minister for his response.

30 If he could clarify two things for me: how many appointees does he now envisage in the new Act; and again, in my question I asked on what basis does the Government select trustees, or is it that the new Act will totally abolish the appointment of any trustees by Government?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the trustees are appointed as they have been appointed for many years, exactly in the same manner. That means that the Government decide who are the trustees. In our case we select people who are very interested in heritage. The last one we appointed was the archivist, who was very interested in heritage himself so we decided to appoint him as one of the Government trustees.

What I have done as a Minister is consulted the Heritage Trust to see how we can fulfil the manifesto commitment, which says that the Trust will have a majority of trustees that they can pick, and we will be doing that and amending the law as in the Bill and that will be reflected in the Bill.

Hon. R M Clinton: I thank the Minister for his answer.

No doubt he will be attending the Heritage Trust AGM on 17th November and no doubt the Trust and the trustees will welcome the update on the passage of the legislation.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Victoria Stadium –
Lighting

Clerk: Question 615. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Sport provide details as to why it has been necessary to cancel evening allocations at Victoria Stadium Pitch No.2, as it seems the floodlights serving this pitch cannot be switched on if the floodlights at Pitch No.1 are also in use at the same time?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sport, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, there was only a need to cancel one evening allocation whilst the issue of the floodlight mechanism was resolved. Once this was addressed, training allocations have continued as normal.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, as a regular visitor to the stadium in the evenings, is the Minister able to confirm that the existing lighting of floodlights to pitch 2 – is that how it is staying, or is that being reviewed with the possibility of intensifying a bit more light? Although one can carry out certain training with the lights as it is at the moment, it is certainly not good enough for any type of competitive game going on.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, basically there were no lights before, and therefore we have been able to put in lights despite the fact that we were told when we came into Government that the lights were not even allowed to be lit at that place. We worked together with the RAF and the air traffic control to see how we could mitigate the fact that we could put lights in Pitch No.2.

Having said that, what we always strive for is to try and upgrade the lights, and at the moment there do not seem to have been any requests to upgrade the lights, but if there is any request – which there is on the main pitch, for example, because, as the hon. Member knows, when he was the Minister ... again, the terminology can be ascertained by the people who are experts, but you had 200 lux, which is how light the stadium was at the time that he was there, and then we had UEFA and FIFA coming in and asking us to upgrade it. We upgraded it to 1,200 lux, to which people were saying, 'Oh, we will have to wear sunglasses to play football and to be there!' Now, apparently, we have to upgrade it again, so it is a constant thing that we are looking at, and it is exactly the same with Pitch No.2. We did not have lights, we have put in some temporary lights because some of them, as the hon. Member knows, are put up temporarily, and if we need to upgrade it, then again these are issues where we always have to consult a third party, which could well be the Airport and how it affects that. As the hon. Member also knows, we have put lights in the hockey pitch and those are collapsible lights, again because we had to mitigate the issues of the air traffic control. So we will be working as much as we can to have exactly the highest light and of the highest quality.

85 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I must say I am really pleased on behalf of sports lovers to see that this Minister managed to succeed at least by dotting the I's and crossing the t's of work that I had started I think about three or four station commanders ago. It is certainly much better than what it was, but it still lacks, like I said, the intensity to be able to carry on some competitive type of games.

90 The Minister did mention that if there was a request to increase the light to Pitch No.2, he would look into it. Can he please accept my word for it, given that I spend so many hours there at the stadium, that there is, believe me, quite a substantial number of requests for improved or at least a greater amount of light on Pitch No.2 and I would like him to consider it over the next few months.

95 Hon. S E Linares: I will do, Mr Speaker.

Q616/2016
Football, cricket and rugby –
Facilities

Clerk: Question 616. The Hon. E J Reyes.

100 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports update this House if he has now identified and agreed upon or is in the process of discussions with respective sports governing associations regarding any additional or alternative facilities for the playing, teaching and development of football, cricket or rugby?

105 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Government is in close and continuous discussion with both the Rugby and Cricket Association in order to develop the Europa playing fields to provide adequate facilities for the playing, teaching and development of all sports mentioned and others.

110 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one supplementary in relation to that. As a father who goes every Saturday to watch his son play football in the resources that we have currently available, one question in relation to alternatives and I think one thing that the Minister should be looking at is how we make more efficient the process of allocation of pitches. My understanding of the position is that many of the clubs' coaches and their assistant coaches, within that alternative facilities question point that my hon. Friend has made ... that people have to go at eight or 8.30 in the morning to get that allocation. Is the Government looking at ways of making that more efficient, rather than have 20 coaches turn up to the GFA, or at least the point at which they get allocations to the GFA, and make it a lot more easier for people using those 120 facilities to get allocations, i.e. using other forms of allocation – online applications or some database that they could use to get allocations for football? It just seems to me to be inefficient to have 20 members of our community rocking up to the GSLA headquarters asking for an allocation for the specific week in advance. I just thought the Government may be looking at more efficient ways of dealing with this problem.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as the father also of a child who plays football and goes there constantly and understands the problem, the hon. Member is actually wrong because the allocations of football, for example, are given to the GFA in block and then it is the GFA who distributes it. As the hon. Member might concur with me, then the GFA distributes it to different 130 clubs and it is up to them to have the system that the hon. Member is saying. If they want to have an online basis with their clubs, then they can do that, but the GSLA does have a system of online applications and all that but it is done through the governing body. Therefore, what the GSLA will not do is, for example, give my son's club, Europa Football Club, specific training sessions, because it is up to the GFA to try and distribute it amongst the clubs. So whatever the 135 hon. Member is saying I understand, but I think it is more a system that needs to be done by the GFA itself rather than the GSLA, because again, like I say, it is done in block. Basketball is the same, and volleyball – anybody who uses the Bayside complex goes under the governing body of that sport, which is given block allocations and then that sport distributes it specially for training.
When there are matches, they will have allocations and everybody knows when the matches are 140 played, but when it is for training sessions it is up to the GFA to do that.

Hon. E J Phillips: One further point in relation to the Europa Point allocations that you were talking about before. There have been a number of occasions where a number of people have raised this with me in relation to Europa Point. You have mentioned the development of that 145 area for the playing of football, for example. There have been a number of occasions, and I have actually experienced one of them myself, where the gates are locked and no one is able then to open them and you have children climbing right behind, quite dangerously so, to get on to the Europa Point football pitch. I am not too sure if the Minister is aware of those circumstances, they have certainly been made aware to me, but what is the Government doing about it? I know 150 they have laid astroturf in certain sections of Europa Point. What further developments does the Government have in mind in relation to that specific area and access and egress?

Hon. S E Linares: As I have answered in the question, what we are doing is working with the rugby and the cricket in order to develop the area further than what it is today. That was an idea 155 that I had because we had leftover turf from when we ripped up the old turf. We had turf left over and basically it is recycling turf, and that is why you can see that the laying out was done on a temporary basis. At the beginning, I can also tell the hon. Member, there was no one who wanted to use that space – it was too far away, it was not adequate, there were health and safety issues. As soon as people understand that, yes, of course we try and mitigate health and 160 safety issues, we try and play in grounds that are safer ... because this turf was a 10-year old turf, but it is adequate for training sessions.

I am aware, because I actually see it from my balcony. I live up there and I see this constantly and I know what the hon. Member is saying, but I can tell you that the GSLA is all the time trying to fence off so that children do not jump, but children will be children. My son is one who goes 165 down there and sometimes jumps over the fence to play with his friends, which is wrong, of course it is wrong, and I tell him off. (Interjection) Yes, of course, and that is why I do take the responsibility seriously, and that is why we try and mitigate and make it as safe as possible. So what I am saying is ... Why isn't it open? Well, it is not open because it would be open for people to take their dogs and do what they do with dogs there, and that is even more dangerous 170 because of health and safety. (Interjection) Well, what I am saying is health and safety generally of using the space. The GSLA gives the GFA allocations now, and they then distribute it to the clubs, even in that space.

175 Hon. E J Phillips: I think, with respect, the Hon. Minister is getting rather confused about what I mean about the access to those particular pitches – recycled pitches, if you want to call them that. There have been occasions – I have experienced one of those in particular as well – that when an allocation is provided to a club, for example, there is no access available because the GSLA representative has not been there to open that gate for precisely the reasons that you have identified in terms of health and safety. That was the point I was trying to make, if the 180 Minister could give us any information or clarification as to how that operates.

Hon. S E Linares: It operates as I have just told you. If there was not, on that occasion, somebody to open the gate from the GSLA, we will find out why they were not there, but I can tell him that the system is that, if you have an allocation, somebody should go there and open 185 the door for you and the children to go in and play. If that was not the case, then something down there has failed and somebody has not gone to open the gate. But I will find out why that has happened and see that it does not happen again.

Hon. E J Phillips: I just make the point that these are concerned parents who have come to 190 me and ask me to put that question, and I have had a number of them and that is why it has been raised in this House.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, as a father who has constantly attempted to indoctrinate his children to play and watch football, and in particular support Manchester United, and who has 195 abysmally failed on both counts because none of my children have turned out to be sporty – (Interjection by Mr Speaker) (Laughter) No, it is not the Manchester United side of the equation that has turned them off, I can tell you; it is sport in general.

The hon. Gentleman must be aware of the importance of proper and adequate training facilities to the development of football in particular in Gibraltar. We have a situation where 200 most of our clubs are having to travel to Spain in order to train their players in Spain because they cannot obtain allocation here in Gibraltar. That is really stifling the development of the game here in Gibraltar. Therefore, does he not agree with me that if we really want to develop football here in Gibraltar the Government has to prioritise the finding of extra training facilities so that people do not have to travel to Spain in order to train on Spanish pitches?

205 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, again as a father – and, proudly, my son actually supports my team, which is Spurs, and I am sure that Mr Speaker would not like to hear that, because he is from Arsenal – what I am saying is that of course we are looking for as many spaces ... every single space. I go round travelling on my motorbike to see if I can identify spaces and areas in 210 which children can not only play football but any other sports that we can find. It is an issue that Gibraltar is limited in space; we cannot get over that. We try and find, and positively, all the time to see if we can get areas where we can convert into a playing area for futsal, for netball, for basketball and all that. We are striving all the time.

I can assure the hon. Member that I do see the importance, not only as a father but a 215 professional PE teacher, that it is very, very important for children to do sports and that we will strive and do as much as we can to find areas in which sports can be practised.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, if I may just assist in that respect, because –

220 Mr Speaker: Are there any other fathers who wish to inform the House about their – (Laughter and banging on desks)

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, as the proud father of a young Gibraltarian footballer, and, given that everybody is naming their team, I happen to be lucky enough to have received, from a friend who went to watch the match earlier this week, the programme of the Liverpool v Manchester United match the other day from Anfield, (A Member: Boring!) and wishing to see a Gibraltarian play at that level for any of the top teams in any league ...

The hon. Members have to recall that we fought a General Election campaign maintaining the Victoria Stadium, adding playing fields and pitches at Europa. Also, alongside the Victoria Stadium when we finish the hon. Gentlemen's project, which they did not finish in their time, of the 'tunnel under the runway', as it is colloquially called, we will add training pitches in the area of Victoria Stadium alongside the pitches that we are going to add at Europa, alongside assisting the GFA to have their own separate stadium.

So, in the context of stifling the development of football in Gibraltar, I think hon. Members need to look at themselves and look at their pamphlet and see that they were the ones who carried less training pitches in the context of the proposal that they put before the public. They were the ones who stopped the development of the tunnel because they ended the contract which then led us to litigation, which we won, and we are the team that stands for more training facilities.

So I am sure, Mr Speaker, we will score the goal, there will be more places to train and I hope when the time comes when we do deliver on all of that, they stand up – not in this House, outside of this House – in front of the electorate and say, 'Vote GSLP Liberal because they do what they say.'

Several Members: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I am going to curtail these exchanges on sporting facilities by all these proud parents, given that I am only a grandfather and all I do with my son is to go fishing and therefore I do not need any of the sporting facilities. I am going to curtail the exchanges and move on to the next question. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I will allow you one supplementary and no more.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker, it is on the original answer.

Mr Speaker: Yes.

Hon. E J Reyes: In the original answer, Mr Speaker, the Minister said that, looking at the Europa playing fields, he was looking into the development for the playing, teaching and development of cricket and rugby, and he mentioned others. Is it possible to have an indication of what sports fall under the category of 'others'?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker. I am pleased to announce that it is football, for training of football as well. (Interjection) Pardon? No, 'others' is football, rugby, cricket or any other outdoor sports that can be done. You can play American football or whatever. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

Mr Speaker: Petanca, for instance?

Hon. S E Linares: Petanca, yes. It is an open area in which we will concentrate rugby and cricket, but there will be a lot of time as well that can be used for other training facilities for any other sports, and that is what 'other' means.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I understand the Minister.

275 Mr Speaker: I said one supplementary, I will allow you only one more.

Hon. E J Reyes: No, Mr Speaker, I am just trying to –

280 Mr Speaker: We really have to make progress, otherwise hon. Members will not have any spare time to spend with their children. (Laughter)

No, I am serious. We have over a hundred questions to deal with and I think there is a limit to the amount of time that we should spend here unnecessarily. (A Member: Hear, hear.) When it is necessary we spend as much time as possible. So let's see if we can make progress.

285 The Hon. the Member who supports Arsenal, I will allow him one final supplementary. (Laughter)

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

290 What I was really trying to find out was, when he mentioned the word 'others' – and I know that others could be petanca right down to anything else – I was trying to home in ... Is there any particular sport that perhaps he can mention that he has already started to give very serious consideration to? I take it that the Minister will probably have even spoken with some associations, so perhaps he can enlighten this House by saying, 'Although not cast in stone, the others could possibly be ...' and perhaps list one or two.

295 Hon. S E Linares: I have already mentioned football is an extra one and I would suggest that some training sessions from other sports that might want to – for example netball or basketball or hockey might want some allocations there. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

Q620-623/2016

Youth clubs –

Names; youth workers; attendees; programmes

335 Clerk: Question 620. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm the names of the current youth clubs operating within our community?

340 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 621 to 623.

345 Clerk: Question 621. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm the numbers of qualified youth workers employed at each youth club?

350 Clerk: Question 622. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm the number of children and/or young people who regularly attend each club?

355 Clerk: Question 623. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm what programmes are being run from each youth club.

360 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the following youth clubs operate within our community: Youth Centre, Laguna Youth Club, Plater Youth Club and Dolphins Youth Club.

365 There are no youth workers employed in youth clubs. All youth workers are employed by the Youth Service.

It is very difficult, if not impossible, to ascertain exactly how many young people attend regularly each club. This is due to the fact that it depends on the programmes and projects that are offered at any given time.

370 All clubs and projects deliver informal educational programmes which reflect the needs of young people attending. These programmes include raising self-esteem, drug and alcohol awareness, bullying workshops, developing team work, managing emotions, exploring coping strategies to manage their anger, personal hygiene, etc. The sessions are delivered through a variety of visual aids and interactive games, encouraging positive participation and attitude at all times. The aims of the programmes are to enable young people to develop their life skills so that they can contribute positively to their community. This is carried out during weekdays and weekends throughout the whole of the year.

For further information on our Youth Service I would advise the hon. Member to access their magnificent website, on which activities and programmes are posted together with the posts of every single member of staff within the Youth Service. The website also includes policy procedures, contacts, training and news, which are updated on a regular basis.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, thank you to the Minister for explaining the magnificent website that is available.

I just want to know how the Government, or the Youth Service, attempts to judge how successful they are being at communicating and working with young people in relation to these life skills. You talk about certain areas such as personal development, drugs and alcohol awareness. Clearly, some serious issues are being dealt with, with young people using that particular youth club in that service. How does the Government satisfy itself, if it does not really know what numbers are visiting the youth clubs on a regular basis, that ... How does it monitor success of that and judge whether they need to make improvements, for example, in one particular area. How does it work? Is it on a piecemeal basis, or on a youth worker particularly referring to the Youth Service saying, 'We need to do more of this, or less of that'? How does it work?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, it is very simple. The youth workers get together nearly every week, they consult each other, they co-ordinate between youth clubs, they identify where the needs are, and therefore, for example, that is why I said that there is no youth worker employed in a youth club – they are all the Youth Service. They are all basically working under one roof and then they go to the youth clubs to deliver the programmes as and when required. For example, there might be a programme or a specific need within the south area of Gibraltar, like in the Dolphin Club, and therefore the youth worker goes there. They also have part-time youth workers who help, volunteers who help, but the one who leads is obviously the professional. The professional is the youth worker and, like I said, if the hon. Member looks at the website they are there. Everybody who is qualified, their names, their photographs, everything is there and also a rundown of all the programmes. But when it comes to say how many, numbers, well, if there is a programme there might be eight children or young people. There might be another programme that has more interest or is more amenable to young people and there are 20 in a group. So it all depends on the programme and the project that they are doing.

So it is not a question of me telling the hon. Member that in each youth club 10 people come every day. It does not work like that. It depends on the programme and what they are doing.

Hon. E J Phillips: The only difficulty I have, Mr Speaker, with the answer is that clearly children depend on regularity and frequency. You are dealing with very serious issues with children, in terms of drugs and alcohol awareness/abuse. It almost appears, from the description of the activities and the programmes that are being performed at these youth clubs, that it reflects almost a counselling service, and I think there must be an element of that to all of this anyway, but what I would say is that given the fact that children require regularity and frequency, if you are having what appears to be a floating youth service around our youth clubs, don't you think it would be better served having at least a regularity with one particular individual at each club?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I go back again that they are not employed by youth clubs, but yes, of course there is within the staff, I believe, continuity as well, and it is a very serious area. 425 The Youth Service, I can tell you, and the youth workers are very professional and very dedicated people who work even weekends, Saturdays and Sundays, and they do get involved in many things which we then have to pass to Social Services, for example, and children who are bullied and children who have mental health problems, and it is dealt with, with the GHA, which we are working with very closely to see how we can deal with young people who have mental health 430 issues.

Yes, the first port of call usually is the youth club. Children have social problems – they go to the youth club and they do have people ... There is continuity in the sense that there is usually a professional youth worker in each youth club and there is a lot of continuity. Maybe after four or five years there might be changes, but when I said ‘floating’ it is not floating in that a youth 435 worker goes one day to one youth club and then moves to the other. There are enough staff that have continuity and they stay. In the Dolphin Youth Club, for example, there is a youth worker there who has been there for about three years. There is a lot of continuity. It could well be that there is a need to move that person from one ... It is like a school teacher, basically, where you are in a school, you stay the whole year in a school and then maybe the Department of 440 Education wants to move you to another school. That is how it works, so there is continuity.

I accept that it is a very important role that they do play because they are always the first port of call for young people directly. That is why we work very closely with the GHA, with the Social Services, with everything, because ultimately it is to do with child protection issues.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I just have one more question, and I would invite the Minister to take this up as I am just trying to make a positive contribution to this question, and that is that don't you think, Minister, we should be moving more towards an active citizenship 445 programme at that youth level so that we can encourage civil responsibility, pride and respect?

I think one of the comments when people talk to me about our children and where they have to go in terms of sports activities and other activities, is don't you think, given the Government's 450 commitment to educating our children about Gibraltar's history and the pride that all our children should have for our history, that we should encourage active citizenship within our youth clubs?

Hon. S E Linares: I completely agree, Mr Speaker, and I can tell you that the Youth Service is very, very actively looking at doing those life skill programmes. They have got programmes to do with Mental Health Awareness Day, they get involved in that; the Easter community events which they do with the RGP; the Care Agency; and then they have Clean up the World, which is something to do with the conscience of the young people. I can tell you that they are very 460 actively all the time looking, and youth workers are all the time. Citizenship is another issue which they teach in a different way to the school environment. They teach how to become citizens: they should know their rights, but they should also know their responsibilities.

I can tell the hon. Member that I am very satisfied in the way in which currently the Youth Service is delivering all this and always strives to improve.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes has a supplementary arising from Question 618. 465

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I am really grateful for that.

Very short and sweet: on the schedule provided to Question 618, like you just said, under the 470 sub-paragraph ‘Grants awarded to Sporting Societies’, the penultimate one is shooting, £11,090. I know shooting has disciplines within the association, like the clay target, the pistol shooting and the air rifles, which we traditionally used to call small bore, those type. Can the Minister, if he does have it to hand – if not, he can sort of search it out for us in respect of which of the 475 disciplines, because there is a huge difference between clay target and pistol shooting. The shooter in one discipline does not necessarily take part in the other.

480 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I will clear it up with him, but from memory I think it is either one or the other or both. I remember that the target shooting bought equipment that they needed and they asked for a grant, which was given. But it could also be the new venue, which is the pistol shooting up in the retrenchment block where the new equipment would not be needed for the new premises. I will find out because it is a big amount, but I think it is split into the two. That means that the two clubs, target shooting and pistol, who are separate but all under one umbrella of shooting, both asked for grants. Therefore, I would suspect that if they are split it should have been notified here as split, but if they are not it might be one or the other and we can put the name of the association that it is.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you.

490 And finally, Mr Speaker, on the page of hosting of special sports and leisure events, there is £6,100 expenditure in sports day sound system. Am I correct in assuming ... I did see a vast improvement in the school sports this year, in the PA system. Am I correct in assuming that that is an expenditure in respect of use by all the schools and would therefore ... I would perhaps dare say the equipment might even now be registered in the inventory of the Gibraltar Sports & Leisure Authority, or is it a one-off hire charge for one particular school, or, for example, the other sports day, the GibSports Day? It could be that. The Minister may have it, but if not, Mr Speaker, I am willing to wait until he finds out.

500 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, again I will try and ascertain why the sports day has been placed there as the sound system. The hon. Member is correct, it should be all the sound systems for the sports days of schools and GibSports. But again I think the hon. Member is right, it might not have been put here but placed somewhere else. But I will find out for him.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am really grateful. That concludes my supplementaries on 618, Mr Speaker.

HEALTH, THE ENVIRONMENT, ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

Q624/2016

Gibraltar Nature Reserve mobile application – Upper Rock interactive map

Clerk: Question 624. The Hon. L F Llamas.

505 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain why the Upper Rock app interactive map does not work?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

510 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Nature Reserve mobile application requires a software update and this is currently being actioned. A new version of the application will be published this year and will include additional material on the Nature Reserve and all its components.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can I ask if the new app is being designed by the same company that did the current app, or is it a new company?

520 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not have the information, but I do know is that it is one aspect of the application, the so-called 'free tracking' function that is not working properly; all the rest of it works. I suspect it probably is the same people, but I will have to confirm that.

Q625/2016
Barbary Macaques –
Prosecutions for feeding

Clerk: Question 625. The Hon. E J Phillips.

525 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm how many people have been prosecuted for the offence of feeding Barbary Macaques in the Upper Nature Reserve?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

530 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, no people have been fined.

535 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just to clarify, no people have been fined was the answer to that question. Does it mean that it is not necessarily accurate how many people have been prosecuted? So no people have been prosecuted – is that correct?

Dr J E Cortes: Fined or prosecuted.

Hon. E J Phillips: Thank you.

Q626-628/2016
Litter –
Number of wardens employed and powers; prosecutions; fines

540 Clerk: Question 626. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm the number of litter wardens currently employed by the Government and explain what powers are currently available to litter wardens?

545 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

550 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with 627 and 628.

Clerk: Question 627. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm how many successful prosecutions have been conducted in relation to litter offences?

555

Clerk: Question 628. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm the number of fines imposed by the courts or other authorities, law enforcement or otherwise, in respect to litter offences over the last five years?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

565

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there are currently two litter wardens employed by the Department of the Environment and Climate Change. The powers include the ability to issue fines under the Litter Act and the Animals and Birds Act. They are also empowered to report for process in relation to offences against the Nature Protection Act. This includes stopping and searching, examining anything or vehicles which that person may have in his or her possession, and seizing and detaining anything for the purposes of processing under the Act.

There have been no prosecutions in relation to litter offences, but rather fines paid in court. In 2016, 31 tickets have been paid. Out of these, 12 were for dangerous litter at £250 and the remaining 19 were for litter at £70.

575

In the past five years 101 litter tickets have been issued.

Q629/2016

Bluefin tuna –

Tonnage caught and registered

Clerk: Question 629. The Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, further to Question 293/2016, can the Minister for the Environment state what has been the tonnage of Bluefin tuna caught and registered in Gibraltar during the 2016 season?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

585

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the tonnage of tuna caught this season is 13.894.

Q630/2016

Waste treatment plant –

Awarding of contract

Clerk: Question 630. The Hon. T N Hammond.

590 Hon. T N Hammond: Further to the answers provided to Questions 449/2015, 8/2016 and 332/2016, can the Minister now state when the contract for the waste treatment plant will be awarded?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

595 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, we are still not in a position to award the tender.

600 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Minister in a position to explain why we have had such a substantial delay in this project when it was originally stated by the Minister that there would be an announcement prior to August 2015 as to who would have this contract? We are now obviously well over a year beyond that point and there is still no announcement.

605 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. It is as a result of the success of the recycling programme that we have in treating our urban waste. We are increasing recycling streams tremendously. The amount of non-recyclable waste is decreasing and we have to reassess what type of treatment a decreasing amount of waste is going to have, and that is the reason why we have not taken an ultimate decision.

610 We are having the matter studied, but it is a very different amount of urban waste that we are producing now because there is so much more recycling and so much more being removed, so some of the original plans are non-viable because there is less waste to be treated.

615 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I might accept that we have made inroads into recycling, and that is a success undoubtedly. However, the fact is – and I need to be careful not to use unparliamentary language here, but we continue to pump human waste out directly into the sea and that is the issue that concerns me here and the issue that I am addressing.

620 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, we are obviously talking at cross purposes. From the waste treatment plant we normally used to refer to solid waste, the rubbish that is collected. From the hon. Member's supplementary it appears to me that he is talking about sewage, so we are talking about two separate things. My initial answer was in relation to waste treatment; now he is talking in relation to sewage.

625 In relation to sewage, we are still in detailed discussions with our preferred provider. We are making progress, but we are not in a position to declare the situation just yet.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Minister able to give an indication of when he might be in a position to provide that information?

630 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: But is the Government still committed to a sewage waste treatment plant?

635 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I think that asking that question to me can only have one answer: of course I am committed to that plant.

Q631/2016
Temporary power turbines –
Total cost since January 2012

Clerk: Question 631. The Hon. T N Hammond.

640 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister say what the total cost of the temporary power turbines has been since January 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

645

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the total rental cost of the power turbines since January 2012 has been £12,499,251.42.

Q632/2016
Electronic health record –
Cycling-related accidents

Hon. T N Hammond: Further to Question 99/2015, has the electronic health record been upgraded to allow for the recording of cycling-related accidents?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, no, but let me just qualify that. The electronic health record system has not needed to be upgraded, but we are now entering the data in a different way so that we are now able to identify it. So we have not had to upgrade it but we do now have a record of cycling accidents.

Q633/2016
Residential Dementia and Day Care Centre –
Update re opening

Clerk: Question 633. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide an update in respect of the opening of the Residential Dementia and Day Care Centre?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the residential unit is expected to open within the next two months. The day centre is due to open next week – I believe Monday – for relocated services, and in about five to six weeks for new services.

675

Q634/2016
Dementia Day Care Centre –
Contractor

Clerk: Question 634. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise to whom the contract has been awarded in respect of the Dementia Day Care Centre?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
685 Mr Speaker, a preferred bidder has been identified with whom discussions will be held, but I am not yet in a position to disclose this publicly.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, am I correct in understanding the Hon. Minister in that he will be opening the Day Care Centre next week and fully operational within the next five weeks, but he has not actually awarded the contract yet?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. I am sure that the hon. Member is about to ask me how I am going to do it, but I will let him ask me before I answer it.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, yes, I would be grateful if the Hon. Minister would enlighten me!

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I love getting Mr Clinton to do things I ask him to do!

Mr Speaker, the services opening this week are relocated services which are currently held elsewhere within Health Authority premises. In the choosing of the preferred bidder we have ensured that they have the resources available to kick in very quickly within the time period that I have stated, so that is part of the arrangement. So the Hon. Mr Costa will shortly be talking details through with the team that is already handling that, and they will be ready to start to provide the service within the timeframe I have said.

Q635 and 646/2016
Primary Care Centre –
Update on new appointments system

Clerk: Question 635. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Minister envisage making any further changes to the appointments system at the Primary Care Centre?
710

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

715 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 646.

Clerk: Question 646. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

720 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Minister for Health give us an update on how the Primary Care Centre's new system is working?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, in answer to Question 635, the Primary Care Team is constantly testing the system in table-top exercise to see whether any changes to the distribution of appointments would reap benefits. For example, repeat prescriptions and the manner in which sick notes are dispensed are areas which are being looked at – and if I may add 730 one which is not in the prepared answer, another thing that is being considered is allowing doctors the occasional slot during the day to deal with patients over the phone, for example reporting test results and so on over the phone, where they would be able to do perhaps a number of patients in one slot and not require the patients to come in. That is some extra information I have gained since the prepared answer.

735 In answer to Question 646, certainly in terms of availability of appointments it is ensuring that patients have access to a greater number of appointments on a daily basis than before. At present, patients have access to between 100 and 120 advance appointments and between 140 and 160 on-the-day appointments. Prior to the changes there would only have been on-the-day appointments, as the advance appointments would have all been exhausted by the first day of 740 the month. Typically there would have been between 70 and 85 appointments available only, instead of the number available now.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that information and I am sure that the statistics are favourable, and I am happy to hear that, but I hear a lot of complaints that 745 people simply cannot get through. I myself have tried, I have had my kids ... Two or three of them have been sick in the last month and I have literally given up calling. I am giving this information in good faith because I have given up and ended up going privately because I just simply cannot get through; and a lot of people tell me the same thing, so something is still not working right.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I will give them the information. I appreciate that. I am assuming that the hon. Lady is referring to phone appointments, phoning in and cannot get on the phone. At the appropriate time there are up to seven operators constantly manning the phones. There are hundreds of calls coming in. We took a sample month and there were in fact 755 55,000 calls into the PCC in one month. As you can understand, it is absolutely impossible, without employing a lot more people for a short period of time, to cope with that number of phone calls; it is virtually an impossibility and certainly the staff there are doing the best that they can, but dealing with 55,000 calls in a month – it is unbelievable, and I could not believe it when I was told – is very, very difficult. At least most times the message gets through in the 760 system that there are people on line and how much time they have to wait, but it is very, very difficult and I do apologise to people who phone. It is just that there is such a number of people calling in at the same time.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, is there any way to gauge how many of these calls 765 do not get through? That would give us an indication of whether we need more manpower to answer the phones, and perhaps even more doctors. I am sure the hon. Member will agree this is a matter of absolute priority, so if more manpower is needed as a result of finding out how many more of these calls are not getting answered, it would be good to know in order to take action.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I do not think, Mr Speaker, that the number of doctors, whether or not we need more – and we have a lot more than when we came into office – but whether we need more is related to the number of calls, because those 55,000 will be calls. It will not be 55,000 people – if somebody calls three times, that will register as three calls, and most of those people will be seen; the only thing is that they have to wait a long time. I can get the information. I can ask the GHA's IT team to extract that information. I will make it available to my colleague and I am sure that if you ask him later on he will be able to supply it.

775

It is a complex matter and we are trying very hard. I think we are making a great deal of progress, but clearly there is always more to do.

780

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Gentleman accept that this is one of the areas where there appears to be a significant amount of grievances from members of the public?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, of course, but many fewer than there used to be. The progress that we have made in the Primary Care Centre over the last few years – and there is written testimony from users and from doctors about the progress we have made – is tremendous, but you would expect that the greatest number of complaints would come from the frontline, when people are anxious, when people are not feeling well and when there is a lot of demand on the service. So absolutely, it is one area which will continue always to attract attention and people will continue wanting improvements, but that is actually almost by definition when you are accessing the service and that is where there is the highest volume of interaction, and therefore that is where you would expect most areas of concern.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, but this has been a topic on which successive shadow Ministers for Health have indeed been questioning, particularly the Hon. Minister, almost on a four-monthly basis. I have gone back to all the questions and I have questions about this going back to 2012, and the Hon. Minister keeps on coming back and saying it is a developing situation. At some point members of the public are going to want some concrete answers from the hon. Gentleman and not 'well, it's developing and we are looking at it'.

Isn't it not the reality that five years on from him taking over the reins as Minister for Health, we are nowhere near having a solution to this particular problem than we were five years ago?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker –

Hon. D A Feetham: Ah, to the rescue!

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, no, no... as I....

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I hear the trembling fear in the Hon. Leader of the Opposition's voice at the fact that I have got up and his attempt at a feeble joke to deflect from the fact that he has fallen into an almighty trap. He has given me the opportunity to actually reflect on the fact that actually in the five years that John Cortes has been Minister for Health, he has improved that situation tremendously in relation to the Primary Care Centre.

Are there complaints today? Of course there might be, and it is very likely, Mr Speaker, that it is impossible to devise a system which will not lead to a complaint, because I daresay to the hon. Gentleman, and indeed to the hon. Lady, in the context of the substance of what we are debating, that it is impossible to say that somebody might not call up one day and the line might be engaged because there is a huge demand for the service and we are continually seeking to improve it.

820 Mr Speaker, this is Question Time. It is not a time for political speeches from the hon. Gentleman in the guise of questions; it is time for short, sharp questions. But, I am not going to respond in kind by dealing with the litany of advances that John Cortes has brought to all areas of the Health Service in Gibraltar, (Banging on desks) in particular the Primary Care Centre.

825 Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady has moved on and does not defend the three initials that the hon. Gentleman now leads, but he is fixed with the abysmal service that we inherited five years ago and that we have improved tremendously, and that we are continuing to improve tremendously and that we will never rest from improving. That is why they will always hear from us that we are developing the service further, because when we have improved it we will improve it again. That is what John Cortes has done for each one of the five magnificent years that he has led for 830 Health in Gibraltar and that is what Neil Costa will now do for the many magnificent years that he will lead for health for my Government too. (Banging on desks)

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is an indictment on the Minister for Health that the Chief Minister has to stand up to defend him. (A Member: Oh!) Yes, because he cannot do it for 835 himself! (Interjections)

Mr Speaker, does the Hon. the Minister for Health – (Interjection and laughter) Yes, I hope he does not throw that at me. No. Shall I sit down? Shall I hide underneath the – ? (Interjection)

840 Mr Speaker, doesn't he recognise – doesn't the entire Government recognise – it is not a question of a complaint, as the Hon. the Chief Minister has described it, or some complaints, as the Hon. Chief Minister has described it? There is a litany of complaints about the operation of the Primary Care Centre, and what I want to know is what the Government is going to do about it, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not that John Cortes cannot defend himself. John 845 Cortes can more than just defend himself. John Cortes has demonstrated that the hon. Gentleman is no match for him – even in advocacy, where he was recently professionally recognised – when it comes to politics and in particular in relation to the Health Service. But, it is that John Cortes does not need to defend himself, because the whole Government, and indeed the whole community, recognises the job that John Cortes has done in relation to Health. Or 850 doesn't he know that he had only a distance of a mere, I think, 300 votes from John Cortes in the 2011 General Election and almost 5,000 at the last General Election? (Banging on desks) That is the judgement of the community in respect of how John Cortes has improved the Primary Care Centre, that is the judgement of the community in respect of how this Government has delivered in respect of the Health Services, and that, Mr Speaker, is nothing compared to what 855 the professionals will tell you has been the improvement that John Cortes has brought to the services that they provide to this community.

Mr Speaker, if you care to talk to patients and you care to analyse what sort of reaction there is from them in respect of the service that we provide, it is very easy to talk to the few who have had a problem. My job and his job has been and Neil Costa's job now is to improve on those who 860 have had a problem so that they never have a problem again. But the number of people who do not have a problem, who enjoy their passage through the Health Service, who have access to the Primary Care Centre without a problem I am sorry to say to him is much greater now than it ever was under them. The difference is that we will not rest until we improve it as much as we can.

865 Mr Speaker, John Cortes will get up to defend himself when a serious point is made which needs defending, not when a cheap political point is shot by a man who reshuffled his Cabinet before he knew what the Departments to shadow were to be.

870 Mr Speaker: May I point out to hon. Members that they are now of course debating the Primary Care Centre and it is not just a case of asking a simple supplementary and receiving an answer.

The Primary Care Centre is a very important item of great public interest – I use it myself regularly – and therefore I would welcome that hon. Members should debate the Primary Care Centre under a substantive motion, but I am not going to allow many further exchanges on this issue now. Information has been sought, two questions have been answered giving information; 875 I am not going to allow a debate on the Primary Care Centre.

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

880 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, very grateful for the guidance. I just have one more supplementary question and it is for the former and sacked Minister for Health. (Interjection) Can he please Mr Speaker –

Hon. Chief Minister: Point of order.

885 Mr Speaker: I would like the Hon. Leader of the Opposition, in order to maintain an equable temperament this afternoon, to withdraw the word ‘sacked’. I do not think that any objective person would consider that any Minister in Gibraltar has been sacked. There were 10 Ministers at the beginning of the week; there are 10 Ministers at the end of this week. Would he please withdraw the word, even though he may have said it in a joking fashion without any malice, but I really do not want exchanges to descend this afternoon into idle comments.

890 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker ... may I ...

Hon. Chief Minister: If I can assist the House, Mr Speaker, can I just tell the hon. Gentleman, on the basis of – 895 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker has asked me.

Mr Speaker: [inaudible] the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has [inaudible].

900 Hon. Chief Minister: But can I assist the House for a moment? (Interjection by Mr Speaker) All right.

905 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, of course. Mr Speaker asked me to withdraw the term ‘sacked’ and I will happily withdraw the term ‘sacked’: the former Minister for Health, and after the Hon the Chief Minister or...

I will ask my question, and my question is very simple. What people want to know is what is the Government doing in order to improve the service in the Primary Care Centre.

910 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, just dealing with the point of order that I was going to make, which I think you very usefully dealt with, it is very easy to descend into name-calling, but I would hasten upon the hon. Gentleman to recognise that although I thought he did it untimeously because it was clear that there was going to be a Government reshuffle – I had advertised it on a number of occasions and it actually came, I think, within a week of him having done his – when a Government is going to reshuffle, it does not sack anyone, promote or demote, unless people are sent to the back benches, but if anyone, having been reshuffled, is going to be described as having been sacked, I implore him to look at his own list of shadow responsibilities, because he has just sacked himself from Education, (Laughter) if you apply that standard, and sacked somebody else from Health and taking it on – although I do recognise, of course, he was in much greater difficulty than I was because he cannot keep his party together 915

920 and one of his people has gone, to no longer be one of his people, into an independent chair. But in those circumstances, given that he has been sacked as party leader by her, I implore him not to use that sort of language, which is so easy to then lead to a debate.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I will now answer on the factual content.

925 As the hon. Member clearly has not heard my answer and I made it very clear that whereas before there could be as few as 70 to 85 appointments on the day, now there are between 240 and 280 on-the-day appointments. Appointments no longer run out. We now have 22 doctors instead of 16, we now have a fully electronic health record in the Primary Care Centre, and elderly people no longer have to queue up at 6 a.m. in order to get their appointments. If that is 930 not improvement, clearly the hon. Member opposite is totally out of touch and my hon. and learned Friend Mr Costa will have a very easy time in answering his totally uninformed questions in the future. (Banging on desks)

As to my own situation, I think that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition might care to walk around St Bernard's Hospital on Monday morning and gauge the reaction about my departure 935 for himself. He may not be so well received after the comments that he has made today.

Mr Speaker, a little press release reported in one corner of the Gibraltar Chronicle criticising my performance will not go down in history, but today, just before coming here, I walked into the chemotherapy suite and I saw two Gibraltarian patients having their treatment there – and I need say no more.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can I just say to the Minister for Health, or the ex-945 Minister for Health, considering that I have called a few times on different occasions with three different children sick in the space of a month and a half and never have I been able to get through, can he take that as a sort of case study that if people ... It is very difficult to explain, but I understand what he means by you cannot always get through, but one person here has tried on various occasions and has not got through. So, please, if he could look into it, because the system does not seem to be working from over the phone. I know there are a lot of disabled 950 people as well who say the same thing and I think it should be looked at with a priority.

Thank you.

Hon. J E Cortes: Certainly Mr Speaker, that is one thing that will certainly be looked into.

955 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may make a hopefully constructive comment or question perhaps for the new Minister for Health: is given the difficulties that people obviously have in making telephone appointments, that he perhaps would like to consider looking into some kind of ... I know you already have a queuing system, but whether by having separate phone numbers for children's appointments or different types of appointments, or even within the same 960 queuing system. I know everybody hates trying to contact their bank, but a way you can perhaps say, 'Press 3 for children's appointments'. I know parents do find it distressing when their kids are ill. Obviously every illness is distressing, but it may be a form of triaging so that of those 50,000 calls there might be some which are more urgent than others, or parents feel more distressed than others may be. Just a suggestion: would the Minister consider it?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, some of these things have been looked at and also the making of appointments online, and that should be able to happen soon with the electronic system.

970 There is a problem: people do not like calling the bank and being passed from one to the other and people could get the idea that if they, say, press 1 for children, they are going to press

1 anyway and it might not be a child, and then they hear 'Sorry, I cannot deal with it.' So it is not as simple as that, but certainly these are all things that are constantly under review.

975

Q636/2016
Accident and Emergency –
Patient access

Clerk: Question 636. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is the Minister satisfied that patient access to the Accident and Emergency Department works well?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, yes Sir.

985

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, this is another area where there are a host of complaints in relation to the system. Anybody who goes to the Accident and Emergency will see that there are significant delays in the access to the department. My question is: is the Minister looking to improve the situation there, so that the very significant waiting times can be reduced?

990

Let me tell him this, just by way of an example: only last week I was told by an elderly lady that she had gone to the Accident and Emergency at 10 o'clock in the evening and was only seen at four o'clock in the morning – that is an elderly lady. You can understand why people feel very strongly about this, and you can understand why there are significant grievances.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, my answer was very clear. I believe that access works well because everybody has access to it.

Once you have arrived there are several considerations. I am not aware of this particular situation, although obviously we would need to look at the details as to what happened. There are fast-track systems for children, for example; we are now changing the system for ladies who are pregnant who have threatening miscarriages and we are taking them elsewhere so they do not have to wait in the waiting room; and lots of things.

One never knows what might be going on behind the scenes and whether there are emergencies that are being dealt with. Certainly there are more A&E doctors now than there were five years ago and the Department is currently going through a phase of construction to expand and have more facilities inside so more people will be taken care of inside without having to wait outside.

What I can say is that, because fortunately we now have an electronic system there as well, I am now able to call up statistics. I can say, for example, that in the year up to 18th October, which is just a day or two ago, there had been 29,548 attendances at A&E; that the average waiting time for arrival to discharge is four hours 20 minutes, which is just higher than the UK standard and much better than the actual case in the UK, where they are hitting averages of up to six or seven hours; and that the average waiting time from arrival to seeing a clinician is one hour and nine minutes, which is very good indeed. So the average is now much better than it was. We have occasions when the system seems not to work as well, but we are now able to pinpoint exactly which these instances are and investigate them further. I think that, again, is huge progress, and now we have this information readily available at the press of a button.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much.

1020 I was surprised by the original answer that the hon. Gentleman gave, that access works well, because there is a corridor that leads you to the Accident and Emergency – that is the reality of the situation.

1025 In relation to the construction that the hon. Gentleman mentioned of an extension to the Accident and Emergency, the information that is coming to me is that there has been a considerable scaling down of the equipment and features that were going to be made available at that extension. Is that something that the hon. Gentleman is aware of? If he is not aware of that, can he look into it? The concern expressed in relation to that is that of course the extension with those features was something that was going to improve the service considerably, whereas now the scaling back might have an impact on the improvement in the service.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am not aware of the detail. I am surprised, because I would have thought that I would have been made aware. I will certainly look into it, and if it is something I believe unreasonable I will ask the new Minister for Health to look into it and to rectify it if it is something that has been done for some reason. But I am not aware and I cannot confirm that that is the case.

1035

Q637/2016
Gibraltar Health Authority –
Formal complaints

Clerk: Question 637. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1040 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health state how many formal complaints have been made in relation to services within or associated with the GHA within the last two years, broken down by year and brief nature of the complaint?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

1045 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the information requested is on the GHA website.

1050 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just to clarify the answer the hon. Gentleman has provided, my understanding is that there are effectively three types of complaint, and I would ask the hon. Gentleman to confirm or correct me if I am wrong: there are complaints to the GHA Complaints Board, and then there are formal complaints to the GHA and informal complaints to the GHA. My question relates to formal complaints to the GHA. First of all, is my understanding of the various layers of complaints procedures correct; and secondly, does the answer relate to those formal complaints made to the GHA?

1060 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, his information is incorrect and out of date. I will not make any comment on that. It is incorrect and out of date because, as of April or May last year, the whole complaints system was taken over by the Ombudsman's Complaint Handling Scheme and is now all dealt with through that, and the Complaints Board no longer exists. Complaints now go through different levels to the Ombudsman. If there are any issues which need independent clinical investigation, the Ombudsman will then access somebody from outside Gibraltar through his own good offices. So there are not those different levels; they are all detailed by the Ombudsman.

1065 In the GHA website, in the quarterly reports of the complaints officer – or, now, the Complaints Handling Scheme Officer – it gives full details of complaints by discipline and by area.
It is quite a comprehensive report.

1070 As I said last time, Mr Speaker, in answer to another question, because all the complaints are now registered and treated in a more formal way, except for the very, very minor ones – why is my water not here and why is it by the next bed – and because all these complaints now go formally through the Ombudsman’s handling scheme, there are in fact more recorded complaints. That is an artefact of an improved system and is not necessarily a reflection of an increased number of complaints. This is why we have to look at statistics with wisdom and insight and we cannot just look at numbers on their own. I think I have answered the question that I have been asked in supplementary.

1075 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I would have thought that there were more complaints because there are more people complaining. That is the simple analysis that I would make (Interjection) – Mr Speaker, may I – in my simple non-scientific mind, I suppose.

1080 Mr Speaker, I have asked him the question because I did go to the GHA website. I went to the GHA website, and if the hon. Gentleman goes to it himself – and it appears he has not for some considerable amount of time, but if he goes and he looks at complaints – (Interjection) Yes. If he goes and looks at complaints, it says ‘GHA Complaints Procedures’. I have got it here, Mr Speaker, this leaflet, and this is the information that I downloaded only this week from the GHA website. It is a leaflet. This leaflet explains:

How you can let us know if you are dissatisfied as a result of a direct experience with our service.

Who can I complain to?

A verbal informal complaint to a member of staff in the Department where the complaint originated in the Primary Care Centre, then to the relevant manager at the centre.

A written formal complaint addressed to the Chief Executive of the GHA or the Complaints Co-ordinator.

1085 That is why I have asked the question, because it is on the GHA website.

So are we saying, therefore, that the information that the public is being given in the GHA website is out of date, is incorrect and therefore needs to be corrected by the GHA, by the Department that the Hon. Minister obviously runs so well?

1090 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there are a couple of things that have been raised. I accessed the GHA website yesterday, so maybe even more recently than he did. He is looking at a different place, and I will go into that now. It appears that that bit of information may be out of date. There was some information which was referred to by the Hon. Mr Clinton on mental health when we went on Viewpoint last week which was also out of date and which is now 1095 correct and updated. I will have to look into whether the right page has not been linked to on this occasion; I will have to check that. It is a massive website and is in the process of being renewed, so that might stand correction. But the information, the data and the statistics are included in the Quarterly Report section and all the information that I have said is available there.

1100 Oh, and one more thing: there are not necessarily more complaints recorded because more people are complaining, because if people in the past had an informal complaint which did not go into the statistics and now they have a formal complaint that goes into the statistics, even if there are fewer complaints the numbers in the statistics might be greater.

1105 But there is another thing: even if there were more complaints, considering that now we are doing 2,000 more operations than three or four years ago and we have 10,000 more patient-doctor contacts in St Bernard’s alone than we had three or four years ago, there are going to be more interactions and therefore there could be more occasions when things do not go according to what the patient would like to see. I can tell you though that if you divide the number of complaints by the number of interactions, the rate, which is very important, is in fact down.

1110 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can I pass this over to the hon. Gentleman?

Hon. D A Feetham: This is a leaflet downloaded from the actual website. It did not appear to me to be unreasonable, because you could have a complaint to the Ombudsman but you could also have a complaint to the GHA itself, and that is what I was directing my question to.

1120 You could have an informal complaint to the GHA, which is all set out in that leaflet, a formal complaint to the Chief Executive of the GHA, and separately a complaint to the Ombudsman by somebody who perhaps, for example, is not satisfied with the response given by the Chief Executive of the GHA in a formal complaint. The hon. Gentleman is saying that that does no longer exist, and obviously I am taking that answer at face value.

1125 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the new complaints board – sorry, the new complaints procedure – was actually passed here in Parliament in time for its enactment earlier on last year. This seems to have a couple of things out of date, including the e-mail address and the reference to an independent review panel, and obviously I will make sure – even if it is the last thing I do as Minister for Health – that this is corrected and updated.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q638/2016
St Bernard's Hospital –
Nurses

Clerk: Question 638. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1135 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister please provide a schedule setting out the number of nurses employed in each department of St Bernard's Hospital, also stating whether those nurses are permanent and pensionable or on a fixed term contract, together with their nationality?

1140 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the information is in the schedule I now hand over.

1145 I have been uncharacteristically helpful maybe, Mr Speaker, although I think not even the Leader of the Opposition who seems to have it in for me today would consider me unhelpful, in that the information does include other areas of the Health Authority and not exclusively St Bernard's Hospital.

St Bernard's Hospital –
Doctors' contracts

Clerk: Question 639. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1155 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister provide a schedule showing the length of contracts of all doctors employed at St Bernard's Hospital, showing the areas in which they practise, their nationality and the date they started?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

1160 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 648.

Clerk: Question 648. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1165 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Minister for Health explain why it is that most of the doctors and surgeons in St Bernard's Hospital are not on a fixed contract or pension scheme?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

1170 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the information is in the schedule I now hand over in relation to Question 639.

1175 In relation to Question 648, doctors recruited since 2012 are on a fixed-term contract or pension scheme, depending on circumstances. I may just explain, for example, we have a doctor recruited since then on a short-term contract because there is a Gibraltarian who is due to return with those qualifications who will replace him.

1180 Those in post before that are on various different arrangements entered into with the previous administration. However, the situation will shortly be rectified with the introduction of the new consultant contract and contract for non-consultant hospital doctors.

1185 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is the Minister aware that this is sadly one of the principal reasons why we have been losing very good doctors? They are simply not happy, or have not been happy, with their working conditions.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that is not the case. I do not accept that being a true reflection of the facts.

1190 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I have an e-mail that was sent around by a few of the doctors who left recently, one I am happy to lend the Minister. In the e-mail they are warning Ministers, managers and politicians. They say that they have warned them about the arrogance; the lack of respect for doctors; the fact that they consider that the GHA do not take advice from doctors and that they only take advice from the, I quote, 'corrupted incompetent professionals with their own agendas'; warning that the system will fail; that Gibraltar is going to lose a second surgeon; as well as warning about the GHA's lack of interest in their discontent; not interested in recognising the value of properly trained staff; do not respond to obvious red flags; saying there is little hope for the improvement of the system.

1195 This is something that I consider very, very concerning, especially when we have lost three doctors and we are now relying on locums, which is affecting quality and continuity of care, and of course the fact that it is costing a hell of a lot more money.

1200 Mr Speaker: This supplementary may not come strictly within the ambit of the two questions. I think I should allow an opportunity to the Hon. Minister because these are very serious allegations which are being made and which I am sure he will want to deal with.

1205 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I ask as well, for the benefit of Hansard, that whatever e-mail the hon. Lady has should in fact form part of the record, because if we are going to be discussing an e-mail it should form part of the record so that we can then refer back.

1210 Mr Speaker: You are quite right, yes. The Hon. Leader is quite correct. If it is going to be made available to the Hon. the Minister, it should be made generally available.

1215 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the question of when a person decides to leave a place of employment is always a very delicate one. I have to be careful what information I give and I am glad I do not know the name of the individual who wrote that e-mail, because it maybe that that person left for reasons that he may not have been happy with, but for all we know the GHA may not have been happy with the service that he or she provided, and there is always the ability to leave, send an e-mail which is not substantiated, and make spurious accusations which would need to be investigated. Therefore, that is something that one has to look at very carefully.

1220 In the case of the three surgeons who have left recently, one of them on retirement, one for family reasons and one for other private reasons, that is for them and is not for me to discuss in this House.

I am satisfied that those allegations are spurious and incorrect. I could bring a host of other e-mails from a host of other professionals who say the very opposite.

1225 So we must be careful. Did that doctor go because there was a certain grievance and therefore he is trying to get his own back because he did not agree with the action which may have led to that? We have got to be very, very careful. These are serious allegations and they would have to be thoroughly investigated.

In relation to locums –

Minister for Business & Employment (Hon. N F Costa): Do you mind?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, I will give way.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, on a point of order, this is a matter that we have spoken about previously when the hon. Lady decided to bring to this House – for the first time, I may add – questions on the basis of rumours that she had heard.

1240

I did refer Mr Speaker to the Standing Orders and I will refer him to Rule 17(1), and there are three Standing Orders which are relevant and which ... I think we have got to be extremely careful not to allow Members opposite to put questions which would be, in my view, a grave violation of the following Standing Orders.

The first is 17(1)(iii) and says:

if a question contains a statement, the Member asking it shall make himself responsible for the accuracy of the statement;

1245

In my submission, Mr Speaker, it is nigh impossible for the hon. Lady, without having the resources to make an investigation, to be able to tell this House whether or not the statements that she reads out in an e-mail are accurate, for the very good reasons that my hon. colleague Mr John Cortes has just said.

Secondly, 17(1)(vii):

a question shall not ask for an expression of opinion, or for the solution of ... hypothetical propositions;

In essence, Mr Speaker, when an e-mail is brought or any other statement is read which the Minister has not had an opportunity to consider and to investigate, what he is asking is essentially to opine on matters, on hypotheticals, which he is not allowed to do.

And thirdly, and certainly directly on point on this matter – and forgive me if I get the Roman numeral incorrectly – is 17(1)(xv):

a question shall not be asked seeking for information set forth in ... ordinary works of reference.

Sorry, 17(1)(iv):

a question shall not be asked as to whether statements in the Press or of private individuals ... are accurate;

1255

Mr Speaker, for all of those reasons and for all of those submissions it is not right that any Member of this House once again comes asking about questions based on innuendo, rumour and statements on which the hon. Gentleman has been ambushed without notice and is totally incorrect.

1260

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister is perfectly correct and I should not have been as liberal as I have been.

1265

He is particularly correct in respect of 17(1)(iii). A Member asking a question has got to make themselves responsible for the accuracy of the statement. Perhaps I have erred in being over liberal because Members of the Opposition, most of them, are still new and perhaps I err on their side ... Though some people may not think so, I do err on the side of giving them an opportunity. But having realised how serious the matter was, I thought I should not rule it out, because an allegation has been made and obviously the Minister must have an opportunity to deal with that matter.

1270 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, but, Mr Speaker, the reason why I rose to address the Chair on a point of order is because the moment that the House allows it on Hansard after having followed the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition's request that it should be placed on the record because the question has been asked, we are literally opening a floodgate that literally no one wants to allow.

1275 Mr Speaker, it is impossible for a Minister to come to this House being able to answer questions on statements, made by third parties, which the Minister has not had the opportunity to investigate. If it were to be allowed, we could be here ad infinitum every day of the week and twice on Sundays talking about rumours.

1280 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Minister is perfectly correct. One of the things that I have learned in the four years – the other day, four years – since I have been Speaker, is that the Rules are not well known by hon. Members.

I would invite ... in fact, I would instruct hon. Members that they should be familiar with the Rules. There is a need for them to know what the Rules are. Sometimes there may be a fine distinction, but we need to be very, very careful.

1285 Here we have had, this afternoon, certain statements made from some party – whom, we do not know. The hon. Member has to make herself responsible, and before she does come to the House making such statements she needs to ensure that they are accurate. If they are 100% accurate, then she is responsible and not whoever has made the allegations. (Interjection)

1290 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Please... Can I, if you do not mind?

Mr Speaker: But what it comes down to is ... and I would particularly ask the Members of the Opposition, because they are the ones who ask questions. Some of them are experienced, they have been here a number of years. There are definite Rules governing the right to ask questions – Rule 17 in particular. They need to be familiar with Rule 17.

Does the Leader of the Opposition wish to ...?

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, the hon. Lady wants to.

1300 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you.

Mr Speaker, with the utmost respect to you I was here the other day, four days ago, and I showed you the e-mail and I asked you if it was appropriate for me to ask. (Interjection by Mr Speaker) I know, because I am not a lawyer and I have not been here for a long time, I purposely came to you to ask if it was appropriate (Interjection by Mr Speaker) to bring up the e-mail.

1305 Can I just say a couple of other things. I accept the legal point, I would not like to start getting into that debate, but I would not call them rumours, because rumours are what people say without names. Whether they are spurious or not maybe can be debated, even though I do not agree because they are from two different doctors saying very similar things, so I would not use the word 'spurious'; but certainly not rumours, because they are not anonymous or hearsay.

1310 Above all, I think that there is a tendency here ... we are missing the point. What really should be coming out here ... the concern is that I have an e-mail and that I have given information that a few of our doctors – very, very good doctors – have left with very serious accusations, and I would have liked to have seen the Minister, or any of the Government Ministers opposite, showing more concern, rather than defensiveness that the situation ... about the things that I have been bringing up.

I am very sorry, but this is affecting an entire population that three doctors have left, and to say that they were personal reasons and retirement ... Clearly not, when I have an e-mail saying the opposite from two of them.

1320

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: No, I have the floor.

1325

Clearly, I am to blame because I have misled the hon. Lady and, had I not done so, had I guided her correctly, the matter would not have arisen. I have to apologise to her and to hon. Members because this has happened.

1330

The procedure should have been that the matter could have been raised in a general way: has the Minister received any complaints; is he aware of any complaints? Blah, blah, blah. That is the manner in which it should have been raised and not in the specific manner in which it has been.

I apologise to hon. Members. We all make mistakes. I have stated before in the House that I am not infallible, otherwise I would not be here – I might be in the Vatican instead. (Laughter) So I do apologise.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, if I may – just by way of assistance, I can assure the hon. Lady that I only arose because we want to be able to provide to this House the information that she requests. But it is not possible to be able to provide any information to the hon. Lady if she does not tell us of such allegations and accusations before the House, to be able to investigate it. And with the greatest of respect to the hon. Lady, because she knows that I have a lot of time and respect for her, just because two people say something does not make it right, and for us to be able to determine and ascertain – for the benefit, as she rightly says, of our community – allow us the opportunity to investigate those complaints.

Hon. Ms M D Hasson Nahon: Fair enough, but can I just say: now am I entitled to ask had the Minister for Health heard all these accusations? They are saying they have put them forward to the Minister. Am I allowed to ask whether these complaints ...? Or is the Minister saying that he has never heard any of these complaints?

1350

Mr Speaker: You are able to. The Minister may not give you the –

Hon. Ms M D Hasson Nahon: Are these complaints new? They are alleging that these complaints are not new: are they new?

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I was going to add. I have to say on the point of order I understand the elevation of rumours, I understand the question of making yourself responsible for statements, and I also understand the hon. Gentleman's point about asking the Minister a question without actually the Minister having seen the e-mail for himself so that he can then objectively look at the e-mail and then comment on it, because at the end of the day he cannot comment on something he has not seen. But the reality of the situation, Mr Speaker, has to be that on something as serious as this, that if there is an e-mail from two doctors – I have not seen it – that make serious allegations, surely the hon. Lady is entitled to ask about those allegations. The hon. Gentleman can then deny, accept or comment or whatever, but otherwise the scrutiny of this House, in terms of the ability of the hon. Lady to ask questions about this, would be severely curtailed. It is the process.

I understand it is the process, it is the affording of the opportunity, and I also understand it is the adoption by a Member of Parliament of something that is said in an e-mail. What a Member of Parliament cannot do is adopt something that is in an e-mail when that person does not have first-hand knowledge of what is contained in the e-mail. But the Member of Parliament must be 1370 entitled to basically ask the Minister to comment, provided he or she gives the Minister an opportunity to basically see the allegations that he is supposed to meet.

Mr Speaker: Yes, but on the other hand, care has to be taken that under the guise of a question that may appear perfectly harmless – why is it that doctors are not on a fixed contract or pension scheme – a supplementary is then asked which puts the Minister in an impossible position. It is for me to be the ultimate judge as to whether I should allow that supplementary or not. On this occasion I did, and I am wrong.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, if an hon. Gentleman or an hon. Lady wishes to have specific information on specific instances, the only way that the hon. Gentlemen opposite or the hon. Lady is going to receive it is by asking us, before the House, to investigate. Or, if they come to this House ready with a question, surely it would have to be on the Order Paper, with notice, and not – and I do not mean this word disrespectfully – ‘ambushed’ under the guise of a question that is only, if anything, tangentially related to the question on the Order Paper.

1385 But if, say, the hon. Lady only found out or only received the e-mail today or the day before and did not have the opportunity to put it on the Order Paper, but she felt that it was urgent and needed to be ventilated in this House, if she did not feel comfortable or did not wish to make the enquiry of Dr John Cortes before the House, respectfully then the question would have had to be couched on ‘Is the Hon. Gentleman aware that ...?’ or couched in general ways for the hon. Minister to be able to say ‘I have not heard’ or ‘I have heard’ or ‘I will investigate’, but to say in this House categorically that there are accusations and there are allegations which have been put forward by a doctor ... And in this society a doctor is taken as a person of absolute trust. When a doctor tells you to take a medicine, you do not go back home and check it so see whether or not you should take it. A doctor is in a position of absolute trust, and when doctors say something people tend to take that advice, really, as biblical, as gospel.

1395 As I say Mr Speaker, the Hon. Mr Cortes in particular, of all Ministers, would be the first one to dive head-in to be able to obtain the information that he is requested to do. I just rose because I thought it was unfair that under the guise of a question that was at most tangentially related to the question on the Order Paper, he should then have been put accusations by an e-mail which he has never sighted.

Mr Speaker: The upshot of it all is that I myself need to brush up on my rules, musn’t I!

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: If I may, this is hugely complex. I can say that we have well over 30 doctors now and the vast majority are very happy, but we have got to be careful because just because somebody is a doctor ... they are also human.

1405 Let us take an example of a member of any other profession who for some reason may leave. For all the hon. Lady knows – and it was not the case in this case – somebody may have gone through a disciplinary process or may have had some other problems and they were forced in one way or another to leave and they may have grievances. Then they can write whatever they like, whether or not it is true, and hand it to a Member of the Opposition, and then it is raised in Parliament and one has to defend something which is potentially totally unjustified, unfounded and spurious. Therefore we have to be very, very careful.

1410 On this particular occasion I have not seen the e-mail. I think from what the hon. Member says it is now not possible to put that in Hansard, but I would be very happy to see it and to share my comments.

1415 I think we are talking about three general surgeons who left. I have got to be very careful again, because I may know aspects of what led to their departure that I cannot share. (Interjection) Absolutely. I can say that at least one of them gave me a hug and thanked me for all I had done for him before he left. Another one thanked me for trying to resolve a question of registration which it has not been possible to resolve, and I will leave it at that. So there was no breakdown in my relationship with them. But you never know what is behind ... and you do not know – not you, Mr Speaker; I was not referring to this Lady, I was talking in general terms. So when we are talking about the departure of a person who then writes an e-mail, we have got to be very careful how much credence we give to it.

1425 Of course I am concerned, but I think that one thing is clear: it is not as easy to be a doctor in the GHA now as it was before, because we insist now on a certain standard of registration and we are now working on job plans. The majority of them embrace this, but some may feel less comfortable than they were when management and the Minister were not more on top of the fact that they are here, getting paid to provide a service to the people during the hours that they 1430 are paid – and perhaps it is not as easy now to be a doctor. The majority have embraced them. One or two may have decided to go away for other reasons – not these in particular, but I think that when you try and improve standards and demand certain standards, then some people accept it and some people do not.

On the specific matter of locums, locums tend to be more expensive, but on some occasions 1435 locums are actually better than the people who left. On this occasion we are very lucky, for example, with one particular general surgeon locum who has certain skills which the other ones did not have, and even though he costs us slightly more we are now able to do some operations or some investigations in Gibraltar that we used to have to refer abroad or we had to bring in a visiting consultant. So in fact in some areas the cost has actually increased. So you cannot say 1440 that a locum in particular is necessarily something negative.

On one other subject, since we are on the subject of locums, I think that the main Opposition party raised the issue of the fact that we do not have a pathologist. We do. We have a locum pathologist. Sadly, we do not have a substantive pathologist because the pathologist died, passed away under tragic circumstances after a short but very serious illness. We then had to 1445 bring in a locum. We advertised and interviewed, we selected somebody who told us that he would only come if he got twice the pay we were giving him, if he got extra time, if he had an extra-special flat, and we told him no. (Interjection) So we are now through the process with a locum who is doing an excellent job of replacing him.

So it is very easy to hear rumours in the street, or pick things off Facebook and then make a 1450 press release about it, or even worse bring them to Parliament, but we must be very, very careful and not lose the respect of the people by bringing such things here. Mr Speaker, of course everybody is free to bring things here, but I think that the hon. Members opposite will probably find the Hon. Mr Costa as approachable as I, and if they have genuine concerns let's try and resolve them without trying to make unnecessary political capital out of individual 1455 circumstances about which facts we are not certain.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, thank you, I am grateful for that. I think that the Hon. Minister knows that whenever I can I try to speak to him privately and I am not one to try to make political capital but to help people, above all. But this case for me was of very grave 1460 public concern, because to see three doctors leaving Gibraltar in a space of three or four months was something that worried me for the sake of our community in general.

I do not know any more how to put it across, because I feel like I am not really getting much by way of answer, confirming or not whether the Ministers as alleged have been hearing about it, but I accept the answer.

I just want to ask one more thing, which is not exactly about that. Back to the original 1465 question really, a supplementary. The Minister for Health tells me that the doctors who are now getting pensions and contracts as from 2012. Where does the Government stand on the fact that doctors who were working here for 10, 15 years did not have contracts or pensions? I am sure we will get back that it was before your administration, but perhaps did you try to right a 1470 wrong there? I know particularly, and I am sure that the Minister knows who I am talking about, that there is one terminally ill doctor who has cried to me and told me that he has got nothing to leave to his family – and that is not a rumour; that is from the horse's mouth.

1475 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, once again, this is very difficult because in Gibraltar it is a small place, we all know each other and we know who the people concerned are. It is a tragic situation of that particular individual, but it is not as it appears. I cannot give personal details in this House, so I will have to explain to the hon. Member outside this House, and even if Hansard will not reflect the answer I owe it to that individual not to provide the answer, but I have given certain assurances to his colleagues about his status.

1480 Mr Speaker, the situation regarding contracts is as follows. The consultants in 2004 were given a pay deal subject to a contract which never transpired. In 2012 we started negotiations on the contracts. For a number of reasons these negotiations were quite extended, they were very complex. Sometimes it was the doctors' representatives, Unite the Union, who took a little bit longer to respond to some queries; sometimes it was the GHA's management. We are now in a situation that we have agreed on all the main details of the contract and we are now just 1485 working out minor adjustments. I am sure that Mr Costa will be able to announce the full acceptance of the consultants' contract now within months.

With the junior doctors and non-consultant hospital doctors, we have been meeting with them regularly, we have been improving their terms and conditions, changing some of the shifts so that they do not do, particularly in some areas, as many hours. We have more now in place, 1490 we have given them safeguards regarding their security of tenure, and again we are developing that contract and working very closely together.

I think that covers most of the areas.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I? It was one of my questions too.

1495 What we have here is three consultant surgeons leaving within a short period of time in a particular area. We are talking about surgery. It must be more than mere coincidence that that has taken place. And let me tell you that one of those doctors is very close to my own heart – he saved my life – and I know exactly why he left, because he also told me, and it is not coincidence. (Interjection) I mean low morale was the reason that he expressed to me as the reason for going.
1500 Does the hon. Member accept that it cannot just simply be coincidence that three consultant surgeons have left during a short period of time?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not know who the doctor he is talking about is, but it is not relevant. Low morale can come from a whole lot of reasons, including one's own personal position, one's own personal perception of improvement and that perhaps you are resisting the change. So low morale is not necessarily due to the organisation; or, if it is due to the organisation, it may be a negative response to a positive development.

And yes, Mr Speaker, there is such a thing as coincidence.

1510 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Maybe I can be of assistance, because I have had discussions with the relevant doctor in question in respect of –

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, are we actually speaking under the Rules? If we are going to stick to the Rules ... A point of order, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, I am giving more information to the House. Doesn't the hon. Gentleman want more information? This is Question Time.

Mr Speaker: First of all, I need to judge whether in fact the Chief Minister is providing additional information in his intervention to what the Minister has provided.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I hope I will be able to assist the House because I have had discussions with the surgeon that the hon. Gentleman has discussed, on a number of occasions about the issues that related to him in particular. We will not be disclosing who that is, although 1525 the hon. Gentleman has thanked this person in public before and named them, and therefore people may be able to identify who it is. I understand anyway that that person reached retirement age, Mr Speaker, and that should give us an indication of how he reached the 1530 decision that he should retire – because he reached retirement age. But the issue affecting that person repeatedly was that he wanted to be able to buy a larger home, and he came to see me in respect of that on a number of occasions and asked to be able to access Government tenders without having to go through the tender system and asked to be able to purchase property from the Government without having to go through a public competition system.

Mr Speaker, with the best will in the world the Government is not able to allow people to jump the queue simply because they happen to be in a particular profession. If that affected 1535 morale – because the hon. Gentleman might like to know that this particular surgeon said repeatedly to me that this was affecting his morale – I am afraid that following the rules is something that the Government is always going to have to do, because people are not able to jump the rules in respect of property purchase in Gibraltar because of the profession they may be exercising.

1540 I hope, Mr Speaker, that that assists to inform the House – nay, the community, because all the community is getting is what the hon. Members opposite are saying – but we are not able to give more information unless they put us in the position where we have no alternative but to do so.

But the last time I checked, Mr Speaker, retirement age was retirement age.

1545 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I am sorry but I cannot accept the accuracy of the answer the hon. Gentleman has given and I feel duty bound and morally bound to actually stand up and to – (Interjection) No, Mr Speaker, he has given a statement which is not accurate. This particular surgeon is in Sweden practising.

1550 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –

Hon. D A Feetham: He is in Sweden practising.

1555 Hon. Chief Minister: He may be in Sweden practising, Mr Speaker, because they may have a different retirement age or he may have gone into private practice, but he may not be in the public sector in Sweden practising. Here, he was in the public sector, in the GHA, and he reached retirement age. Or is it that the hon. Gentleman thinks that he can just get up and say things in order to try and create an impression of something else? Is the hon. Gentleman saying that the 1560 surgeon is in Sweden practising on the public purse, employed by the Swedish public health authorities? And if he is, can he tell us what the retirement age is there and can he tell us whether he is just contracted as a consultant outside the retirement age, because here he reached retirement age.

When somebody reaches retirement age, Mr Speaker, what they tend to do is retire, whether 1565 their morale is high or their morale is low. If they then are able to obtain consultancy work somewhere else, well very good, but it does not affect that they have reached retirement age and it does not affect that whilst they have been here the thing that they have said has affected their morale is that they are not able to purchase a bigger home outside of the tender system.

1570 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if I may, I happen to know the history of this doctor and the housing issue, and I think that I need to clarify that the doctor was not asking for anything that he was not promised. This doctor came to Gibraltar in the – (Interjection) Please, Mr Speaker, I believe that – 1575 Mr Speaker: The hon. Lady is making a statement.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: No Okay, I will stand by that. I will stand by the statement I am about to make. Please, let me just ... I think I am entitled to ... If I know something that perhaps the Chief Minister is not correct about, I think I should be entitled to say it.

Mr Speaker: Please put it in the form of a question. (Laughter)

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: The doctor was contracted before this GSLP Government came to office and it was the GSD who gave him a promise of a property and for his child to have school care in Gibraltar. That was a promise that unfortunately the GSD did not honour on this doctor. So the doctor was initially cheated off, to say the least, because this promise and this part of his job contract, as he saw it, was not honoured and he had difficulty finding a place, based on the fact that they told him they would accommodate him. The Chief Minister knows this, because I came to see the Chief Minister before I joined the GSD, before the by-election, to explain to him that this doctor was not being given what he had been promised. However, let me just assure the House that he moved on from there and that his issues – take the e-mail, do not take the email, whatever you want – are not based on the house. I do not think it is fair and I think I am being fair enough to explain that this was a promise by an administration that was not honoured and it is not fair to say that he was trying to jump the queue or ask for something that he did not deserve, because it was part of what he was told before he came to Gibraltar.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Lady in respect of that information about what it is that he was allegedly promised, and I hope I get my grammar right in answering her now, but let's be very clear –

1600

Mr Speaker: Let me make one thing clear now. I am going to allow the Chief Minister now to intervene. Then I think the Leader of the Opposition has a supplementary and I will allow a supplementary. Then I am bringing the exchange ... We are then moving on, from then on.

1605

Hon. D A Feetham: I have no more supplementaries.

Mr Speaker: You don't? Then we are moving on.

Hon. Chief Minister: So, Mr Speaker, let's be very clear. The hon. Lady is right: she told me those things in the context of setting up a meeting between me and this person, this doctor. I then had the meeting with the doctor, who did not mention any of those things. He said, 'Look, the thing I need is this ...' (Interjection by Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon) But she was not at the meeting. What she has told the House is what she told me, which led to my having the meeting with the doctor. At the meeting with the doctor he says to me, 'Look, what I need is this: I need a property and I cannot afford to pay Gibraltar prices, and so therefore can I please buy a property from the Government without having to go through the tender process?' And my answer was, 'Look, you have to go through the tender process and you have to be in touch with the Deputy Chief Minister. There are things coming out in the Upper Town you may wish to buy there during the course of making a bid, and we give good deals in the context of those bids. People put in their sealed bids, the top bid gets it and you can get it – but we cannot do it otherwise.' But none of the things that she had said to me and she has referred to the House now were the things that the doctor was saying to me.

1620

Frankly, she is absolutely right. If somebody is given a job on the basis that they are going to be provided with (a) or (b), then that is the job offer and it should be made good, but he did not put those things to me as the things that were relevant to him. (Interjection by Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon) Right, absolutely, but those were not the things that he then put to me. Your meeting with me led to my meeting with him, and we were not able to resolve it in a way that he was very satisfied with but he went away saying that he would make a bid in the context of 1630 the then tender process. I do not know whether the man then made a bid or did not make a bid, but one has different pressures in one's life and if one then decides that it is not resolved and you want to take a particular course of action it has got nothing to do ... and I think the important thing here, Mr Speaker, is it has got nothing to do with what was happening in the Health Service. I know that what the hon. Lady has said does relate to the Health Service, but it is very surprising that those things which the hon. Gentleman was not aware of as Minister of 1635 Health were not the basis of the man's going. The man left because he retired, because he reached retirement age.

1625

I do not know how we can have a disagreement about that, Mr Speaker. It is simple: retirement age tends to affect morale in different people in different ways, because you reach an age where you do not feel as young as you used to.

1640

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
That is why I don't retire! (Laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: But it is not the wider malaise that hon. Members are referring to.

1645

The hon. John Cortes has a record, I think, of inspiring most people who work with him. I have yet to hear somebody who works in a Department run by John Cortes saying that they are low on morale. If anything, and until they work with Neil Costa, who has a particularly uplifting effect on me and everybody else he works with also, (Laughter) the people in the Health Authority are slightly in mourning because they are losing a man that they love, (A Member: 1650 Yes.) a Minister who is well loved in his Departments, (A Member: Yes.) and I am sure that they will also grow to love Neil Costa. People in the Department of Education are looking forward to him starting his stint there, because he is a man who is also known for his ability in respect of education. He has got more PhDs than most of us have hot dinners or than I answer questions in this House, (Laughter) but he does not have an effect of ruining people's morale – whoever they 1655 have operated on, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I have never suggested that the Minister has ruined anybody's morale. What I have brought up is issues in the Health Service and I am sorry to see that we have digressed onto matters of housing and other sorts of things that really have nothing to do with this. I am actually glad that I was privy to a lot of this history, because I was able to put it right.
(Interjection)

But we still have not dealt with the bottom line, which is that two doctors have alleged that things are very, very bad in the Health Service, and we are still on the defensive and we still have not got to the crux of the issue. I am very sorry about that, for the community – not only for the doctors, let me say but for the community. It worries me deeply that a few really, really good doctors have left Gibraltar, because it will have a domino effect in the quality and care of our people. I am really sorry about that, because now we are going to be having locums – the usual Xanit situation – and there is not going to be quality and continuity of care. I hope to God I am wrong.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady has to understand that it is not all just politics. It is not all just politics. It is politics here. This is politics: we are having a debate which is political.

She would have my full and entire agreement if I thought for one moment that the Minister for Health had supervised the mechanism where doctors are going, out of desperation for issues related to the Health Service, and we were being left with locums who could not deal with matters. That is not the case, but sometimes when somebody goes you have to have a locum because that is the way that you get the best person for the job. There are other questions on the Order Paper that will disclose the excellent job that is being done in finding the right people 1680 for the job, in many instances locals who are away – locals, not locums. Locals who are away.

1685 What she surmises is going to happen, which is hell and brimstone, is that we are only going to have locums, we are not going to have doctors to operate on our people, our community. Woe is us! That is not happening. We have had a coincidence of people leaving at a particular time for issues that are unrelated. Issues that are unrelated. I can tell her that the issues which affected the morale of this particular individual – which is what the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition raised, not her – when they came to me were unrelated to the Health Service. Right. Unrelated to the Health Service.

1690 The hon. Lady needs to understand you had a situation where the hon. Gentleman has got up and explained very candidly what happened in relation to the pathologist. The pathologist did not leave because of low morale. It is clear that the pathologist (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) passed away. (Interjection by Hon. Ms Hassan Nahon) I know you are not talking about the pathologist; I am. Perhaps if you listen you will understand what I am trying to say. The pathologist passed away. It is not that we do not know why the pathologist passed away because we have not got a pathologist to do a pathology on the pathologist. We had a locum quickly and we will have a locum pathologist until we have a full-time pathologist.

1695 Is it that Members are saying, ‘You should move even more quickly, because what we think is right’ – and this is where the balance has to be struck in terms of professionalism – ‘is to be able to choose the best person for the job long term, and when people leave you can either replace them quickly or you can replace them with reasonable pause so that you find the right person in the long term.’

1700 It is not as if we are being told nobody wants to work in the Gibraltar Health Authority because morale there is so low; the opposite is true. We have a lot of applications and that is why we need locums, whilst we sift them to get the right people for the jobs; and where possible, where we have invested – coming back to some of the questions we were dealing with yesterday – in educating Gibraltarians who are away, who are experts in those disciplines who apply, to see whether they can be the ones to take them if they are the best person for the job, because this is the Health Service, this is not just a place where you get in because of your passport. (Interjection by Mr Speaker) Coming on later. I hope that deals with the issues that the hon. Lady is raising. She does not have to think, ‘Woe is us – we haven’t got any doctors in the Health Authority!’ We have more doctors and more consultants now than we had when we were in Opposition and after we took over in 2011, so I think we are moving in the right direction.

1715 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I? (Interjection by Hon. Dr J E Cortes) I will give you a chance to round up with this question; no doubt you will use it to round up.

How many surgeons are there now working at the hospital?

1720 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am not sure whether I answered that as a question in a recent meeting of Parliament or whether I provided that to the media in relation to a press question. Off the top of my head, and this is recollection, we have four general surgeons at consultant or associate specialist level, four orthopaedic surgeons, three obstetrician-gynaecologists, six junior doctors –

1725 Hon. D A Feetham: Locums?

Hon. Dr J Cortes: No, locums? We have surgeons. Surgeon locums, we have the three covering the general surgeons, although the recruitment process is already well underway, and we have one, possibly two, covering long-term sickness, as far as locums are concerned.

1730 But if I may round off the question, locums are necessary because of the recruitment process, and remember that doctors, particularly good doctors with good jobs, need to give considerable notice to their own employers before they can leave and take up another job such as in Gibraltar.

1735 The surgical department in St Bernard's Hospital is an excellent department which has made huge progress. We now have, instead of one operating theatre, four or five operating theatres, including day surgery; we have more surgeons, we have more nurses. So anybody who, in those circumstances, had low morale is probably better off somewhere else.

1740 Just to round up completely on this, I can confirm, now that I know who the doctor in question is, that he did embrace me and thank me from the bottom of his heart for the way that he had been treated by me during his time under my Ministry.

Several Members: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Q640/2016
St Bernard's Hospital –
Attracting consultants

Clerk: Question 640. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1745 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain what he is doing to attract local consultants who are working in UK hospitals and further afield to come and work at St Bernard's Hospital?

1750 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, a great deal. Doctors who are consultants, or training to be consultants, who contact the GHA or are known to the GHA are always engaged with.

1755 Consultant posts which are due to become vacant are tracked and matched with the availability of local doctors. One example is the replacement of Dr Mike Maskill, whose retirement was planned and whose post was advertised on a designate basis and filled by Dr Gareth Latin, who eventually took over from him.

1760 Similar processes are envisaged in at least three other cases, and any new cases about which we may become aware, either through approaches by individuals or through information sought from the Department of Education, are also followed up.

Q641/2016
DHA stores –
Stock control security and frontline management

Clerk: Question 641. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1765 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what steps has the Government taken to permanently address the concerns raised by the GHA's Director of Finance and Procurement in his report to the GHA Board dated 31st May 2012 regarding serious concerns about stock control security and the frontline management in stores?

1770 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, in April 2014, after long negotiations with Unite, amended elements of the stores restructure proposal of 2011, held up due to longstanding stores staff claims, were finally given the green light and implemented.

1775 In January 2015 the Stores Supervisor position was finally made permanent after it had been filled on a temporary basis since the retirement of the previous supervisory grade D officer back in August 2011.

1780 In April 2015 an approved second HEO position within GHA Finance and Procurement was finally recruited and was assigned higher management responsibility for procurement and stores.

1785 In May 2015 the new HEO, the procurement and stores front line managers, together with GHA IT commenced working on the development of an in-house bespoke electronic inventory management solution. The software development has now been completed and was recently successfully piloted with some elements of pantry supplies. We will shortly carry out all major preparatory groundwork needed for the software to be uploaded with the relevant stores inventory data for the stock items to be barcoded before the software can become sustainable and operational within what will be a first phase of development and improvement in inventory management and control in this area.

1790 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much to the Minister for the answer.

Let me just read from the actual report, because it did strike me as quite a striking analysis from the Director of Finance and Procurement. What he said was, and I quote:

Stock control, security and the frontline management in stores continue to be a very serious concern and a risk that, if not addressed permanently, could have serious financial and patient care implications.

1795 That was on 31st May 2012. Why has it taken the Minister two years to get to his first step, which was in 2014, and then three years, to 2015, in order to introduce all the items that the hon. Gentleman has listed in his answer, given what are very serious concerns expressed by the Director for Finance and Procurement about, apparently, lack of control?

1800 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, perhaps the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition ... I am so sorry that I am being moved from Health, if only because I will not have the pleasure of answering his questions. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) But anyway, Mr Speaker, (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) I am grateful to the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition. Perhaps he should be able to answer me, if I were allowed to ask him questions, why in the 16 years up to 31st May 2012 nothing had even been identified. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

1805 Mr Speaker, the matter started improving at that time. There was a complex need to restructure the stores department, which had implications which Unite the Union was concerned about, and it took very long and hard negotiations to finally resolve them.

1810 The process of preparing bespoke software is complicated, but I am now very glad to say that we are beginning the implementation – not a moment too soon, I will agree, but there was a process to follow and the process at least was started in 2012 after nothing had been done about it for many, many years. (Banging on desks)

Q642/2016
GHA Director of Finance –
Submission of monthly finance report

Clerk: Question 642. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1815 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health advise if the GHA Director of Finance continues to submit to the GHA board a monthly finance report?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

1820

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, no, sir, he has never submitted a monthly report. Shall I assist, Mr Speaker, before he asks, that he has submitted a quarterly report?

1825 Hon. D A Feetham: And is that a document that the hon. Gentleman is prepared to make available to the Opposition?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I suspect that the reason for this question may be related to the last board meeting, where the ... There is a finance report which is an internal document, and there is a finance report which is a public document, which is tabled at the public meetings of the Health Authority. So there is an element which he can access on the website and there is an element which obviously is an internal report.

1835 Hon. D A Feetham: So, Mr Speaker, just to be clear in my mind about that answer, the quarterly finance report – is that a public document? Is it available to the public? Is he willing to make it available to the public? Or is he saying that parts of that report have been made public through the board's report, which is what he is saying?

1840 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there is an internal working document for the organisation, which is the quarterly report. There are internal reports that have a shorter timeframe, once a month some of them and so on. But the ones I am referring to are the quarterly reports which are submitted to the board. There is a summary of those reports which is part of the open agenda, which is a public document.

1845 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, we all welcome reasonable expenditure and proper expenditure on health. I cannot think of anything else that I would wish the public finances of this community to be spent on, apart from possibly education, Social Services, health. Those are the areas where any fair society would invest a vast bulk of the income generated by that society. But there is no doubt that over recent years there has been a huge increase in expenditure on health. It is projected in the books to increase to about £8.2 million a month by the end of this financial year. I suspect that it might even increase more than that.

1855 In the light of that, does he not accept that transparency in the way that the finances of the GHA are managed and handled is just as important as transparency in the areas of public finance? Therefore, I would invite the Hon. the Minister to perhaps at the very least provide a public summary of these reports on a monthly basis, if not the entirety of the report, so that there can be greater scrutiny of the finances of the GHA.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there is clearly a Budget session of Parliament where the question of expenditure in the Health Service, as elsewhere, is openly discussed at length. I have 1860 already said that a summary of the report is published in the quarterly board reports and therefore it is already happening.

Q643/2016
Gibraltar Health Authority –
Date of next public board meeting

Clerk: Question 643. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1865 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health advise when the next GHA board meeting will take place in public

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

1870 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, subject, obviously, to the new Minister possibly changing the date for other commitments, the intention and the booking is that the next GHA board meeting in public will take place on 23rd November this year. Mr Clinton will no doubt be there.

1875 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q644/2016
Gibraltar Health Authority –
Amounts paid out in claims

Clerk: Question 644. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1880 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how much has the GHA, or the Government on its behalf, paid out in respect of claims made against the GHA in respect of the last four years, providing a breakdown on a case by case basis?

Just to clarify, I am not asking the hon. Gentleman to provide the actual names of the cases, but if he can provide the breakdown I would appreciate it.

1885 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the information is in the schedule I hand over.

1890 Let me just explain, Mr Speaker, that it is presented by total cases by month rather than individual cases and it is divided into two parts. The first part is those sums which are paid for directly by the GHA and the second part are those parts of claims that are paid for by our insurers. So there are two tables there.

1895 Mr Speaker: Perhaps it ought to be made clear for the benefit of the general public that the Minister, in the schedule, has not revealed any names.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Absolutely, Mr Speaker, no names are provided whatsoever.

Mr Speaker: No names are revealed in the schedule.

1900

Mr Speaker: Next question. We can come back to it.

Q645/2016
Primary Care Centre –
Sampling patients for drugs

Clerk: Question 645. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1905

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government confirm whether the Primary Care Centre is sampling people with depression for drugs?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

1910 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, it is unclear what is meant by 'sampling'. If it is meant to refer to whether patients are tested routinely without the full consent and awareness of the patient of what exactly they are being tested for, the answer is no, sir.

1915 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I think this relates to another question, which is Question 647. I do not know if I am entitled to –

Mr Speaker: You can come back to it.

1920 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: If I can come back to it, but I think what I am trying to say is that my intention with this question was to suggest whether there should be a first stop to establish the root causes for depression primarily in youngsters and start treating the symptoms early on by trying to establish whether depression is coming from drugs.

1925 I read with a lot of concern the Connected Health document produced by Felix Alvarez and Damian Broton, who were suggesting a one-stop shop where everything would be treated in one go and therefore disorders for addictive personality and so on could be dealt with early on – this is why I am asking – as a prime tac to deal with people who are showing signs of depression at the Primary Care Centre as a first stop.

1930 I do not know whether legalities come into it, but I do not see why they would not have to be aware of it.

Mr Speaker: Could I suggest to the Minister that, given that Question 647 is of a similar nature – the only thing is that it is dealing with A&E, but it is of a similar nature – you deal with it. (Interjection by Hon. Dr J E Cortes) Yes. Question 646 we have done, so we will deal with Question 647.

1935

Q647/2016
Accident and Emergency –
Testing patients for drugs

Clerk: Question 647. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1940 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government inform whether youngsters or anyone who ends up blacked out in A&E gets drug tested?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

1945 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, yes. I am happy to answer the supplementary to explain the difference.

Mr Speaker: Yes, enlarge on it now.

1950 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the critical difference between a person going to a GP with depression and somebody attending blacked out in A&E is as follows.

1955 A person who goes to a GP with depression cannot be tested for drugs without their consent, because clearly that would be an invasion of their privacy and would affect the patient-doctor relationship. A doctor cannot just secretly ask for tests and take a blood sample without the patient knowing. The patient can discuss it with the doctor and the doctor can arrange for those tests to be done, but it has to be with their consent. It cannot be done without their consent.

The situation in A&E when somebody arrives blacked out, where there is no knowledge of what the situation would be – there is no chance of a conversation, like a GP can have with somebody with depression – is very different, because then the doctor has to rule out all the different potential causes of the blackout.

1960 Therefore I can confirm that in all cases, depending on the doctor's assessment, intoxicated youngsters will have blood-alcohol levels tested and urine toxicology for cannabinoids, opiates, amphetamines and other drugs, where there is an index of suspicion and this appears to be a feasible cause for the blackout.

1965 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: On a supplementary to Question 647 particularly, can I ask: do families get told or made aware of the findings of these tests, particularly for youngsters, so that they can be aware of it and try and deal with the problems of their children?

1970 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: In Gibraltar we all are very possessive of our children up to a fairly advanced stage, and it will not be the first time that I have had people coming to see me 'porque el niño' or 'porque la niña' and then you ask how old they are and they are something like 38 or 40! What can one say? Clearly, in those circumstances it would be given to the person, the patient. Anybody over 18 would have to have the ability to determine who else he tells. Anybody under 18 – and sometimes there is flexibility and the age can be 16, but anybody who is younger than that – clearly there is involvement of the parents.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you.

1980 As a supplementary on Question 645 particularly, can the Minister tell me whether doctors have a mandate or whether he would consider giving a mandate to doctors to recommend to patients that they see with depression to talk about the possibility ... whether they believe that they are on drugs, or take it from there and advise them to get tested for drugs or deal with what may seem like a drug problem in the patient?

1985 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not think doctors need a mandate, because doctors are trained in this, and obviously if they detect a possibility of a drug connection to a state of depression they are going to broach the subject.

1990 What I can say is that just a few days ago I met with Felix and Damian and in fact they told me that they had given you some information that they thought you were going to put into questions, and I said, 'Absolutely, it is her perfect right to do that,' and I have agreed – and I am sure that the Hon. Mr Costa will support me in what I have agreed – that I will meet them quite shortly with the GP leads in order to discuss how they could improve the service for people who are suffering from the influence of drugs.

1995 I think that is a better way of informing them, rather than giving a directive, because then the doctors will be able to express what their concerns may be, what the ethical issues may be, and they are going to be meeting with this group led by Felix and Damian in order to develop a modus operandi. I am sure that the Hon. Mr Costa will enjoy chairing that meeting, as I would have had I chaired it.

2000 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you. I am very happy to hear of this development and I would welcome any opportunity for Minister Costa to involve me if he thinks I can be of any value to this new incentive. Thank you.

Q649/2016
Fibromyalgia –
Classification

Clerk: Question 649. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

2005 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government explain why fibromyalgia is not considered a disability?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

2010 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, fibromyalgia is a medical condition; it is not a disability.

2015 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I accept that the Hon. Minister must know a lot more than me about medicine, and so I have been doing some research on Google – as we all end up in that place – and it is, I believe, open to interpretation in that, for example, the US accepts that it is a disability and offers benefits as a result.

2020 I have spoken to a few sufferers here in Gibraltar – it actually affects women more than men – and that is why I know that they suffer deeply and it does cause a lot of hindrance and suffering. Because I see that in different countries it is treated as a disability, I ask the Minister if Government would be willing to look into it because of the fact that there is a lot of suffering going on and it does debilitate the sufferer.

2025 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I think I need to explain this – and I have lots of friends who suffer from this condition.

The thing is that in defining a disability it is the effect that the medical condition has on your ability to perform in life. Therefore, you may have any particular condition at a certain minor level which is not enough to make you disabled, and yet that condition may progress and then you are disabled. So the definition of disability is not the medical condition but how it affects you in life.

2030 Therefore, I believe that, for example, when the Disability Panel meets to assess whether a patient is disabled or not, it is not the condition but how it is affecting them, so it is not necessarily that fibromyalgia is excluded as a cause for disability. That is the subtle difference that I should point out.

2035 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I appreciate that. So can I just ask the Minister: what would he say to a fibromyalgia sufferer who is severely debilitated by this and feels that he or she should be entitled to benefits and what goes with the disability of such a debilitating condition?

2040 Minister for Business & Employment (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, this used to be my area when I was responsible for Social Security; now it is the Hon. Minister Licudi who will be taking over that portfolio.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I look forward to him taking over.

2045 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): You'd better do your homework! (Laughter)

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I'm fine with Google!

Hon. N F Costa: A Google scholar!

2050 As I explained to I think it was the Hon. Mr Llamas and the Hon. Mr Hammond in a series of questions and supplementaries, the Disability Allowance is awarded to persons by an interdisciplinary panel. There are two panels, one for adults and the other for children, depending on the application and then depending, of course, on the specialists who sit on the panel, and the assessment is made on the influence of the disability of that person. So, if a 2055 person's disability is such that it affects that person's ability to do the things that the hon. Lady and I would take for granted – such as dressing, showering, preparing for a day – then Disability Allowance is provided.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Mental health issues in young people –
Investigation of increased numbers

2060 Clerk: Question 650. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Does Government have an opinion on the growing concern in Gibraltar about an apparent increase in mental health issues with young people, and are there plans afoot to look into the matter?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
2070 Mr Speaker, Government takes very seriously all issues related to child and adolescent mental health, as is reflected in our 2015 manifesto commitments. Greater awareness, improved assessments and screening programmes can account for apparent increases in current cases in Gibraltar.

2075 A multi-agency committee chaired by the Minister for Health has been meeting regularly with the aim of consolidating and advancing the work that is currently undertaken, improve inter-agency collaboration and communication, and explore ways of developing child and adolescent mental health services suitable for the needs of Gibraltar.

2080 This is over and above the current arrangements, which include courses for staff and parents on autism and the monthly meetings of the multi-agency Child and Adolescent Review Group and other work by the GHA, Social Services, the Youth Service and the Education Department.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I was personally, as I know that other Members in this House have been, very saddened by the amount of suicides that have taken place this year. It made me think about the situation with mental health and the fact that, as far as I can count, 2085 we have had four suicides this year and a few attempted suicides. I find this quite a big rate of suicides in Gibraltar and it genuinely worries me as to whether our Mental Health department is failing us. Is there follow-up care, I ask, for patients who have perhaps left Ocean Views or patients who have gone back home? Where is Mental Health when these are the types of figures that we have been looking at so far?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this is not a direct supplementary but I am very happy to answer it.

Very shortly after the latest of the very, very sad suicides – and these things touch us all in Gibraltar much more closely than in less close-knit communities – I called a meeting of the 2095 Mental Health team and we had wide discussions. This is not something that can be conclusive, because there are many different causes for suicide and not all the persons who have committed suicide were known to the Mental Health Service or had made any contact with the Mental Health Service. They can be people who have problems and they do not make contact and maybe are unrecognised. So I asked the Mental Health team to look critically at what we 2100 may or may not be doing and I am expecting that a report will be presented to my successor on this.

There is follow-up by the Community Mental Health team, who do an excellent job, but sadly we cannot control what happens in every person's life and it is possible that suicide in a small community can almost have a copycat effect and people who are thinking of it may almost be 2105 encouraged to take that step when they have heard of other people doing it. This is something that is very, very sad, but I can assure the House that the team is looking very critically at whether there is anything at all that can be done in order to approach and to be able to prevent this sort of situation – but it is very difficult.

2110 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for that.

I accept what the Minister is trying to say, but I would like to make him aware that only yesterday I had to deal with an attempted suicide. And this is not rumour, this is not spurious – I saw it for myself: there is no follow-up care. I say this in good faith. Please note that there are people who are left alone and there is no follow-up care at the moment, or perhaps a very low 2115 level of follow-up care, and I urge the Minister to please look into this more carefully. The assumption is that psychiatric medicine is given and patients are left to their own devices and there is not enough follow-up.

In a supplementary, if I may ask: what provisions are given in schools to our young students, in terms of mental health?

Mr Speaker: Is the Minister able to answer that?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I will be in a couple of weeks' time as the Minister for Education, or maybe just a couple of hours' time – because I pick things up very quickly! (A 2125 Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks and laughter)

Seriously, Mr Speaker, I do know a little bit about it because I prepared for the Viewpoint discussion last week. The schools have their own special needs co-ordinators. They have a person in the school – it is often the deputy head – who is detailed to look after pastoral care, and there are also two educational psychologists, which is one more than when we took office; 2130 we had a manifesto commitment then. And there is a considerable amount of support and cross working with the Youth Service and so on. For more detail than that it would have to be either the Hon. Gilbert Licudi, who is not with us today, or me after I have been able to inform myself better. There is support there. Certainly it is an area which, because of the work I have done in the GHA on mental health, particularly interests me and I hope to look at how we can improve 2135 services for children in the Department of Education in the future.

In relation to the sad incident that the hon. Member tells us she witnessed yesterday, without knowing the details I cannot comment, but if there are any particular concerns she wants to share with me later I would be happy to talk to the Mental Health team and see what may or may not have happened and what support maybe would be necessary in the future.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for that. I will indeed speak to you about that later, but again I was not trying to use that point to make a political point but mainly to make you aware of what is actually happening.

In terms of the schools and a psychologist, luckily on this occasion I did do my homework and from what I understand there is no clinical psychologist in schools. Would the Government be 2145 interested in introducing a clinical psychologist – because I believe that the educational psychologists do not necessarily know how to deal with mental health like a clinical psychologist – which would be greatly appreciated there?

2150 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there is a clinical psychology service provided by the GHA, which employs three clinical psychologists and they do work with the schools when young children are referred to them either through the school, through the Youth Service or through a GP. I could not tell you what volume of work they have, but I do know that there is access to clinical psychologists. Even though they are not working for the Department of Education, they 2155 are working for the GHA.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: This was my question, Mr Speaker: whether the Government would be interested in having an on-site Department of Education clinical psychologist. I would urge them to look at this.

2160 I hear the Minister saying no. Why would you not agree with me if it means helping our young students?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am not able to comment on that; I do not know enough about what the educational demands would be for a clinical psychologist.

2165 We must be careful here, because very often we say, 'Why don't we have such and such in Gibraltar? Why don't we have a specialist in this and that?' We must be very careful that, because of Gibraltar's small size, in some specialities we would not have enough cases to keep that specialist skilled, and therefore in the UK sometimes for particular conditions you have to have maybe 200 or 300 patients a year in order to keep your accreditation and for an order for 2170 your college to allow you to practise. We cannot bring people to Gibraltar to be employed here within our schools or elsewhere if there are not enough cases. What we would have to do is bring a specialist over for a period of time – like we bring child psychiatrists over, for example – but we would not have enough work for them. It is not just that they would be sitting down doing nothing; it is that they would de-skill, which means that they would not be of any practical use, or limited practical use.

But I do not know what the workload would be and so on, so at this point in time I cannot comment further.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I do not think that one clinical psychologist working for the 2180 Department of Education, shared by all the schools that we have in Gibraltar, would stay stagnant, but again that is just a comment.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I didn't say that.

2185 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: No, I am not saying you said that, but I would more or less guess that their workload would be taken up, and therefore it was just a constructive suggestion.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would the Minister be able to advise the House whether in his 2190 meeting with the Mental Health team there is an intention to include any NGOs in the general discussion about the recent spate of suicides? I appreciate it was not mentioned in the Viewpoint programme, probably precisely because we do not want to encourage any copy cats, but it is obviously very concerning to the community – and we are a small community.

2195 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, again the Hon. Mr Costa may have a different approach, or not, to the one that I was planning, but certainly my policy has always been to involve the relevant NGOs. I come from an NGO background, after all, and I must, for example, say that I have discussed the suicide issue already with a group of counsellors who are not officially yet 2200 structured as an organisation but who came to see me collectively to talk to me about issues in relation to counselling. So I have already done that and it is something that I ... What I normally do in these circumstances is I talk to the internal team first to see exactly what the issues are and so on and then invite NGOs for a more general discussion, and then meet again – internally, for example – to see whether we need to change anything or develop anything further.

2205 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister.

Perhaps a question addressed to the new Minister – to perhaps consider organisational frameworks and models such as the Samaritans, which obviously is a well-established model worldwide. Obviously, we have Childline in Gibraltar, but it is catering for a completely different age range. A lot of people who may be driven to suicide could fall completely out of the net in terms of mental health care, not necessarily displaying any symptoms or perhaps not even wanting to get help, which perhaps leads them to this – and this is particularly more prevalent amongst males because we tend not to share our problems with other people, as perhaps the other gender does more readily. Again, just a suggestion that the Minister would consider that when he takes over his Ministry.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I must say that my hon. and learned Friend's diary is already pretty full and he does not know it yet! I have already scheduled a meeting with Childline. They have, in fact, announced publicly that they are going to extend their activity to include adults. I think that civil society has a huge role to play in developing our medical services and I am sure that my colleague does so. Already in his diary – although, as I say, he does not know it yet – there is a scheduled meeting with them to explore just that line.

2220

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, coming back to the original Question 650 – and the question by the hon. Lady was does the Government have an opinion on the growing concern in Gibraltar about an apparent increase in mental health issues with young people – is the Government agreeing that there is a growing problem of mental health issues with young people? And if there is, how does the Government actually come to that conclusion? Is it because it has statistics of these things and therefore the hon. Gentleman can make that assessment?

I am just interested because there have been many, many supplementary questions in relation to this, but I am just not clear whether, from the answers that have been provided, the Government actually accepts that there is an apparent increase in mental health issues with young people; and if it does, on what basis does it make that assessment?

2230

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: What is an 'apparent increase'? I certainly have no data to corroborate that, but 'apparent' ... What is 'apparent'? If you hear of several cases in the street or in the newspapers, or talking to people, or when particular issues come up on one of the social media, it is very difficult to pinpoint. I think that whether there is an increase or not, real or apparent, mental health issues have to be tackled and we are doing quite a bit to improve provision.

2235

There has been a spate of suicides, not all in young people, but that maybe unusual, a coincidence perhaps, possibly copycat – it is a very delicate matter, so I am being very careful in how I express this view. Perhaps given over a period of 20 years the incidents in Gibraltar may be lower. I do not think that is related necessarily to youth mental health issues.

2240

It is a fact, not just in Gibraltar but throughout the western world – if that definition is still valid – that cases of particular conditions, such as autism for example, are increasing. But then, as I said in my answer, our ability to detect this is also improving. There is better training, more vigilance, more screening programmes. So it may be apparent. Is it real? I cannot judge one way or the other. What we have to do is tackle the problem regardless of that.

2245

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q651/2016

Government cleaning contracts –
Changes in the last year

2250

Clerk: Question 651. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government confirm whether there have been any changes in Government cleaning contracts in the last year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change.

2260 Mr Speaker, no, sir.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I ask because I have witnessed for myself and also heard a lot of complaints about Gibraltar looking rather filthy, in particular and I want to let the Government know that in the lighthouse the toilets are pretty disgusting and I think it is a bad image that we are giving to our tourists in our main area of pride, where everything should be in tiptop condition.

I was wondering if it may have had something to do with cleaning contracts or workload, salaries, cuts in manpower. I also suggest ... I do not know why rubbish is not collected on a Saturday. You have people here for the weekend, and Gibraltar has tons of bin liners all over Gibraltar on a weekend. I do not know, but it is just looking rather shabby. This was the root of my question.

2270

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, if I may be able to assist, because the hon. Lady mentioned Europa Point and how ... I did see the post of one individual who had actually gone there, and I thought it was pretty disgusting the way the toilets were. I was concerned about it and I stand up to answer that because the GSLA has, in a way, the parks, and we try and do all the parks and all the toilets and have everything as clean as is possible. We have already got a maintenance team, of which we have a hotline of things that might be going wrong in the parks.

2275

Yes, it was on a Sunday, somebody was supposed to have cleaned that toilet on that day, but I can assure the hon. Lady that there are not any cuts or anything that has happened to the cleaning contracts that at least I am aware of, or that we have cut down on anything. It was just that day, and I agree with the person who posted it that it was rather disgusting. I can assure the hon. Lady that it is constantly being cleaned. What you cannot avoid is that it is cleaned one minute and then 10 minutes later somebody comes in and leaves it in a disgusting manner, and then you have to wait for another hour until somebody comes and cleans it again. But it was specifically on the Europa Point one.

2280

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, thank you to the Minister for the answer, but I have to say in all honesty this had nothing to do with the Facebook post. I am really on none of the groups. I do not think I am on any of the groups, because I decided it was better for my health not to be, even though it might remove me a little bit from society, but it works out better for me.

2290

I take my children there very often to play, so I see it, so I very much doubt, anyway, the coincidence of me having found this complaint on the day that he talks about. I also have very dear friends who actually have to make time every morning during the school run to go and take their kids to play at about eight or 8.30 in the morning and they stay there for a little while before they go and do the school run, and they have also been rather shocked by the condition

2295

2300 of the toilets. So it really has nothing to do with that one event that he talks about, and I think it is an ongoing problem. So I hope that with his connections and Departments he can maybe have a closer eye on it, so that Gibraltar's image is not affected by this.

2305 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I think, with respect, my learned Friend raises an interesting point about not only rubbish in our streets but litter as well. Obviously the Minister confirmed that there had been zero prosecutions in respect of litter offences and 101 tickets issued in the last five years, which amounts to one and a half a month in five years, which I think ... Clearly it is a question of education enforcement, isn't it?

2310 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, again, if you average out over five years, when in the first few years there was not a single litter warden in the former administration, there were no litter tickets ... (Interjection) What I am saying is that you cannot average it over five years, because we implemented the programme a couple of years later, so you have got to average it over maybe two or three years. You cannot say – (Mr Speaker: Sixteen!) Well, over 16 years: what is zero over 16? Infinity, no? (Laughter) The Hon. Speaker was my mathematics teacher, so he will correct me if I am wrong.

2315 But I cannot really say. We are actually fining a lot more people recently – if you made a graph, it is increasing – and we are doing a lot. In fact, now one of the reasons why people ask to see me is to see whether I can waive their litter tickets, which I cannot and I will not. This is a new dimension, so I think it is having an effect.

2320 But as my hon. Friend says, if you happen to go into a toilet after somebody has been in it, or there have been three coaches coming in and made it a bit of a mess, that is regrettable. What I can say is that whenever we have reports of toilets and so on being in a bad condition we immediately take action and get it rectified.

2325 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I?

Mr Speaker: Yes you may, but I hope that you are not going to ask a supplementary which is going to contribute to a debate on the general cleanliness or otherwise of Gibraltar. Let's be fair. I will allow the Hon. the Leader ... We have the original question: can the Government confirm whether there have been any changes in Government cleaning contracts in the last year? The answer could have been, 'Yes, we cancelled this particular contract but we gave a new one to somebody else', or, 'We have introduced new requirements in our contracts in respect of this and that.' That is the kind of answer that I would have thought was really relevant to the original question. And what happens instead? We are beginning to get into a debate about the general state of cleanliness or otherwise in Gibraltar.

2335 The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

2340 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker has obviously read my mind in terms of the question that I was going to ask, and I will tell you why I was going to ask it: it is because the hon. Lady in her own supplementary – Mr Speaker has not picked her up on that, and allowed it – asked about the toilet and asked about the general cleanliness of Gibraltar. The Hon. Minister Linares answered about the toilet but not about the general cleanliness of Gibraltar, and I just wondered whether that aspect of the question that the hon. Lady has asked would be answered, which I understand is: does the Government accept that there has been a recent deterioration in the cleanliness of Gibraltar? I think that was the question that was asked by the hon. Lady, and it is an important issue because I certainly am getting an increasing number of complaints in this regard and therefore it is right that the Government, which has received a question, should be afforded the opportunity of answering it.

2350 Mr Speaker: I will, of course, allow the Government Minister to answer, and then we are going to move on. But I look forward at the next meeting of the House to a motion in which there will be a general discussion about the cleanliness or otherwise of Gibraltar.

2355 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, again, it is hard to tell because all the information that the hon. Member will have got by way of complaints will be anecdotal, it will not have been a systematic study of rate of cleanliness and so on.

I know that the litter wardens work very hard, we are now fining more than ever. I chair a litter committee, which includes NGOs, which meet regularly and we have made a lot of progress in a lot of areas from sorting out problems like the long-standing problems of bins in Chatham Counterguard, which are no longer there, and other areas we are tackling. So I think there are areas which are better; there may be some areas which are worse, and these are things that we have to carry on working on.

2365 Mr Speaker: Yes, Mr Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

2370 Going back to the original question on cleaning contracts and the subject of procurement, I notice it was the Minister for Sports and Leisure who stood up and answered the question in respect of his area or Department taking care of those particular facilities. My question to the Government is: what is the Government policy on cleaning contracts? Is there an omnibus contract for the whole of Gibraltar? Do you split it down by the schools, by the sports authorities, by main streets? What is the general policy on cleaning contracts? Are they centralised? Is this something perhaps that Minister Bossano will be looking at in terms of procurement, whether to look at the award of these particular types of contracts? I guess what I am saying, Mr Speaker, is: does each Department award their own cleaning contracts?

2375 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the answer is that the position at the moment remains exactly as it was under the former administration, because they gave a 20-year contract –

2380 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Which has not finished.

2385 Hon. Chief Minister: – for cleaning services, which covers the whole of Gibraltar, and given the comments that we have heard today, that 20-year contract that they gave does not seem to be fit for purpose. But we will take under advisement all the things that we have heard today in the context of reviewing the cleaning contract that the GSD gave for 20 years for the whole of Gibraltar.

2390 Frankly, Mr Speaker, I also do not think that this question arises from the original question, but anyway ...

2395 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thought it was particularly pertinent to the original question. (Interjection) It is, but the question was have there been any changes in the Government cleaning contract. I am asking how are these contracts awarded. That is particular pertinent to the question.

2400 Mr Speaker: That in itself can be an original question: on what terms does the Government award a contract? That can be a substantive original question and not a supplementary. But I am being liberal because it is Friday afternoon. Pero la siguiente vez se vai a enterar. (Laughter)

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: All I can say on that is that the Department of the –

Mr Speaker: I do not need to apologise for that aside do I? (Laughter)

A Member: Nobody heard it!

Dr J E Cortes: Just to finish this one, the Department of the Environment manages one general contract, which is the one that the Hon. Chief Minister has explained was inherited, and that is the one that I am responsible for.

2410

There may be minor cleaning contracts here and there for little areas or office areas and so on. I am not aware of the detail and it would have to be a substantive question where all my colleagues would have to feed in to provide a substantive answer.

2415

Hon. Chief Minister: Let me be clear, because I think it is important that the House has the right information. The GSD gave, in Government, a 20-year contract for the cleaning of Gibraltar. There are office contracts, so different offices may have different contracts for Government offices, but for Gibraltar there is one contract for 20 years, granted in 1997 by the party opposite when they were in Government.

2420

Mr Speaker: Right, I am now going to give my former pupil, the Hon. Dr Cortes, a respite after the very busy afternoon that he has had. So we will move on to Question –

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Excuse me.

Mr Speaker: My patience is being stretched. Okay.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Sorry. I appreciate that the contract is being run by the same people as before, so does it mean that the GSD is to blame? I do not see it like that. If Gibraltar is getting smelly –

2430

Mr Speaker: No –

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: – and if Gibraltar –

2435

Mr Speaker: No!

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: – how can the Government –

Mr Speaker: I am going to ask you one more time –

2440

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: – not take responsibility for these –

Mr Speaker: If Gibraltar is getting smelly, you bring a motion –

2445

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I am sorry –

Mr Speaker: – to the next meeting of Parliament and we will debate it then.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: – but how can you say that the cleaning contract was given by the GSD so eso es lo que hay?

Mr Speaker: Order! (Mr Speaker bangs on the desk) Order! Please! Order. Do not make me have to stand up and suspend the session. I expect hon. Members who have got the floor to let me have the floor when I ask for it. That is fundamental to the respect which the office of Speaker is entitled to.

2455 If I am not doing my job properly, if I do make a mistake ... and I have apologised already, but I do expect fundamental basic respect. When I ask for the floor hon. Members must concede the floor to me and not carry on arguing the toss with me. That they must do.

2460 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I can clarify, I have not for one moment said anything to do with that. I have been asked a separate question about how we procure services and I have said we have procured the service 20 years ago, or 19 years ago, in 1997. I did not answer the hon. Lady's question; those questions were answered by somebody else. She has jumped to the conclusion that I am blaming today's problems, as they have put them, in respect of cleanliness on that contract.

2465 I was asked a defined question – how does the Government procure those contracts – and I have answered saying that we procured them under the former administration 19 years ago. They gave a contract for 20 years. She has then said, 'Is the Government saying the GSD are to blame?' We have not said that, because it is obviously not the GSD who are supposed to be cleaning our roads and it is not the GSLP who are supposed to be cleaning our roads; it is supposed to be the people who the GSD gave the contract to. So, if our roads are not as clean as they should be, it is obviously a company that is responsible.

2475 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I apologise on my part if I got you hot tempered, and I apologise to the Chief Minister if I seem to have misunderstood. I did not mean it like that. I just got the impression that perhaps it was a bit like 'this is a contract, these are the people from the GSD who came in under the GSD, they have a 20-year contract and this is what we have'. It came to me as an implication to the fact that perhaps if they are not working to the best of their ability or Gibraltar is smelling a bit, it is a contract that we cannot get rid of. I am sorry.

Q688/2016
'Last shop in Europe' site –
Plans for development

2480 Mr Speaker: Question 688, please.

Clerk: Question 688. The Hon. L F Llamas.

2485 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, what plans does Government have to deal with the plot of land next to the lighthouse where the last shop in Europe once stood? (Laughter)

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

2490 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, Government is shortly to advertise the plot of land for expressions of interest. Government is open to ideas for its development that are in keeping and sensitive to the area. A condition will be imposed on the successful tenderer to include a Neanderthal interpretation and visitor centre within the development to complement the world heritage site at Gorham's Cave.

2495 Hon. L F Llamas: That is very interesting and is something which I think will be quite well received.

2500 Can I just ask why nothing has been done, in terms of leaving it abandoned in that state, in the same context as my Friend has just said, the image it portrays of Gibraltar, having a tourist spot where loads of tourists go up in coaches and taxis and they see a derelict area day in and day out?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I fear the answer may be rather similar to the answer the hon. Lady was given. It is a long story and I will try to explain it as succinctly as possible.

2505 The site was put out for expressions of interest by the hon. Members themselves when they were in office and a preferred bidder was identified. They started discussions with that preferred bidder. We continued the discussions with the preferred bidder. There were a number of issues which stalled those discussions when both sides of the House have been in Government.

2510 One of them was the possibility of locating a sewage treatment plant in the area, which the preferred bidder was not very keen to see and wanted certain guarantees and assurances which I think neither they nor we were prepared to give.

Secondly, if you recall the issue with the stadium which was going to be located in that area and which may have had a restaurant in the area, again that also delayed the project considerably.

2515 Finally, the third delay was caused by Brexit, where the preferred bidder wanted some kind of assurance or guarantee, or at least wanted to wait until the Referendum had taken place and to know what was going to happen before taking a decision. The Referendum took place, the results in Gibraltar we all know and the results in the UK we all know, and then, as a result of that, we have now terminated discussions with that preferred bidder and that is why the plot is going out to tender again.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am sure we all remember the old shop that used to be there, but what remains of the original shop I think is a heritage piece which I think, and I am happy to be corrected, are either a bomb-proof shelter or an ammunition store. Would the Minister be able to confirm to the House that that will not be allowed to be demolished?

2525

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, can I say I am not aware exactly of the heritage value of what he is referring to, although I am aware of what it is that he is referring to. My understanding is that that is where they want to locate the Neanderthal visitors interpretation centre, so there is some intention to preserve it at the moment but we need to wait and see when the expressions of interest come in and then determine the area that is going to be required and also determine the heritage value of that particular area that he is referring to. I myself am not clear on that question at the moment.

2530

2535 Mr Speaker: Before we move on to the next question, I cannot help but comment that whoever called that 'the last shop in Europe' of course had no knowledge of geography whatsoever – unless there are no shops in Tarifa, that is. (Interjection)

A Member: Or for language. Much cheapness.

Q689/2016

Northern Defences regeneration – Progress

2545

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Government say what progress has been made in the project to regenerate the Northern Defences, and when does Government expect the project to be complete?

2550

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Yes, Mr Speaker. Following the completion of cleaning-up works in the area of the Puerta de Granada site and Princess Lines last year, works this year at the Northern Defences have focused on the King's and Queen's Lines.

The progress to date is as follows. Access from the Princess Lines via Lower Forbes Battery to the Queen's Lines is now possible. All tunnels (King's and Queen's Gallery) have been cleared of debris and asbestos. Musketry loop holes along Queen's Gallery have been unblocked and provide a new attraction to this unique military site. Tons of debris and rubble are currently being removed from the Queen's Lines. These operations are expected to be completed by the end of this year.

Cleaning-up operations will then focus on the area of King's Lines in January 2017. Completion of such cleaning-up operations is expected by March 2017.

I would like to add that it gives me great pleasure that tours along these newly exposed areas are now available and are being organised by the Heritage Trust and the Government.

Hon. T N Hammond: Just for complete clarity then, the entirety of the project is expected to be completed in March 2017 – is that correct?

2570

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, this only refers to that particular area. I think when the project was originally announced and we started to get involved in the Northern Defences I made it very clear that this was going to be a long-term project, it was something that was going to take very many years. So I am talking about this particular area, the Queen's Lines, King's Lines, King's Gallery, Queen's Gallery. That is the area which will be completed by March 2017 in terms of the clearing-out operation.

ADJOURNMENT

2575

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn to Wednesday, 26th October at 11 a.m.

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn to Wednesday, 26th October at eleven in the morning.

GOVERNMENT BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Civil Marriage Amendment Bill 2016 –
First Reading approved

10 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to make provisions for the marriage of same sex couples and for connected purposes.

The Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

15 Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the marriage of same sex couples and for connected purposes, be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the marriage of same sex couples and for connected purposes be read a first time.

20 Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Civil Marriage Amendment Act 2016.

Civil Marriage Amendment Bill 2016 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento):

25 Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

Mr Speaker, the Bill intends to give effect to the Government's proposals to enable civil marriage between people of the same gender.

Mr Speaker, the first landmark moment came with the introduction of the Civil Partnership Act in 2014. There has since then been lobbying for civil marriage between individuals of the same sex to be made possible.

30 The Government's manifesto commitment in 2015 was to publish a Command Paper in order to take the public views on this issue. Having taken office for a second time last November, we immediately set out to give effect to our manifesto commitment and issued the Command Paper in December 2015, the response to which, Mr Speaker, was overwhelming. Indeed, it was the largest response ever received to a Government Command Paper. The majority of the responses were in favour of equalising civil marriage.

Since the close of the consultation period, which we even extended, and through an inter-ministerial committee headed by the Chief Minister, we have given a lot of thought and consideration to the matter. Such was the importance that we have given to this process, that we also had lengthy meetings with representative groups. Marriage is a hugely important institution.

This of course has been an important and has also been a very emotive subject, with strong views for and against. I wish at this stage, Mr Speaker, to thank everyone who was involved in the consultation process and helped inform and guide us with their different views and indeed valuable insight. It is important for us to strike the balance which provides equality and respecting individuals' beliefs.

Mr Speaker, this Bill will enable same sex couples to enter in a civil ceremony. That is, Mr Speaker, a civil ceremony in a registry office or other approved place, whilst protecting and promoting religious freedom. I wish to make that point very clear, Mr Speaker, that this is about civil marriage and not holy matrimony or any other religious marriage and I will explain certain religious safeguards, particularly those we introduced following our consultation process, in a moment.

We believe, Mr Speaker, that opening up marriage to all couples demonstrates society's respect for all individuals regardless of their sexuality, making our society fairer and more inclusive for all its members. This change strengthens the vital institution of marriage and ensures that it remains an essential building block of modern society.

Turning to the formalities of the Bill, Mr Speaker, the amendment to the Marriage Act introduces two new definitions, 'parties' and 'relevant marriage'. These are introduced in section 2 in order to give effect to the provisions allowing for same sex marriage. The term 'parties' had to be defined as there were numerous references within the Act and no clear definition was afforded to it. In order to avoid uncertainty or any ambiguity, given the extension of marriage to same sex couples, this had to be addressed and it now means opposite sex and same sex couples.

The other definition included in section 2 was the 'relevant marriage' meaning a marriage of a same sex couple.

Two further amendments are made after section 6 and section 40 respectively, with the introduction of new sections 6A, 6B and 40A.

Section 6A, Mr Speaker: the existing section 6 subsection (a), which deals with marriages solemnised or contracted in a place of worship, is slightly amended so that it is now subject to the provisions contained under the new section 6A.

Section 6A relates to marriage of same sex couples in a place of worship and it reads as follows, Mr Speaker:

Marriage of same sex couples in a place of worship.

6A.(1) A minister in a place of worship may not be compelled by any means (including the enforcement of a contract or a statutory or other legal requirement) to—

(a) conduct a relevant marriage;

(b) be present at, carry out, or otherwise participate in, a relevant marriage; or

(c) consent to a relevant marriage being conducted,

where the reason for the minister not doing so is that the relevant marriage concerns a same sex couple.

(2) A religious organisation may not be compelled by any means to allow the use of premises owned or controlled by it for the purposes of a relevant marriage where the reason for not doing so is that the relevant marriage concerns a same sex couple.

75 By not compelling ministers to carry out a relevant marriage of a same sex couple in a place of worship, the above amendments impose no obligation on ministers and protects those who do not wish to conduct, be present, carry out or otherwise participate or consent to a relevant marriage.

The section makes it clear that attempts to use the enforcement of a contract, statute or other legal requirement to compel a minister to carry out a relevant marriage shall not be upheld. It respects and protects religious freedoms.

80 To this extent, Government has not changed the definition of marriage as determined by any religion. The definition of holy matrimony, a sacrament of the Catholic Church or the respective rights of marriage in the Jewish, Islamic or Hindu religions remain entirely unaffected. Furthermore, any religious organisation is also protected in that it may not be compelled to allow the use of any premises owned or controlled by them for the purposes of a relevant marriage of a same sex couple.

85 Section 6B, Mr Speaker, provides a provision to opt out by a Deputy Registrar. This section grants a Deputy Registrar who does not wish to conduct a relevant marriage of a same sex couple, a provision to opt out. This stance is akin to the position taken in relation to ministers under section 6A, insofar as the Deputy Registrars may not be compelled by any means to conduct a relevant marriage of the same sex couple.

In such cases, an alternative Deputy Registrar shall be assigned for the purposes of the relevant marriage. Again, this protects and respects religious freedoms of a Deputy Registrar and at the same time, allows for marriage of same sex couples to take effect by appointing an alternate in his stead.

95 Section 40A, Mr Speaker, allows for the conversion of civil partnerships into marriage of those couples who may wish to do so. The only requirement is that they must have formed a civil partnership pursuant to the Civil Partnership Act 2014. This section provides the power for the Minister with responsibility for personal status to make rules establishing the procedure for conversion of civil partnerships and such rules shall make provision for the technical arrangements, Mr Speaker.

If a couple decide to convert their civil partnership into a marriage, once the conversion process is completed, the civil partnership automatically ends and the couple are treated as having been married since the date the civil partnership was entered into.

105 There are also amendments to the Matrimonial Causes Act, Mr Speaker. The Matrimonial Causes Act governs matrimonial causes and makes provision for matters incidental thereto, or connected therewith. Consequently, amendments are required to the Matrimonial Causes Act following the changes made to the Marriage Act for the purposes of this Bill.

110 The most important of the consequential amendments to the Matrimonial Causes Act is that marriage shall not be void on the grounds that the parties are not respectively male and female under section 25(1)(c) and that a marriage shall not be voidable under section 25A(a) and (b) when it applies to the marriage of a same sex couple.

The Bill, Mr Speaker, also allows the Government to amend any Act or subsidiary legislation by way of regulations in order to make further provision and such consequential, transitional and savings provisions deemed necessary for the marriage of same sex couples.

115 Mr Speaker, I wish to single out Joyleen Gomez-Bruzon and Nadia Sisarello-Parody from the Government's Law Drafting Office for their hard work in this process in such a short period of time and also for their invaluable advice on the subject. A Bill such as this one requires a lot of work as it has wide-reaching consequential amendments to many other pieces of legislation.

120 Finally, Mr Speaker, this Bill will place all couples on the same footing as other couples already married at the Registry Office, as the proposed amendments to the Marriage Act will provide the same option for all.

This, Mr Speaker, is another historic step and a reflection of a progressive and inclusive society and a further testament of our commitment to equality. (A Member: Quite right.) There is no such thing as 'gay marriage', Mr Speaker; it will just be marriage for all.

125 Mr Speaker, I commend this Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

A Member: Hear, hear.

130 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, today we are debating the amendment to the Marriage Act to bring about marriage between same sex couples.

135 I welcome the speech of the hon. Member for Equality and commend the Government on the manner in which it has brought the Bill.

Mr Speaker, I will support the Bill, subject to one reservation, because it provides this House the chance to support couples, loving couples of the same sex who desire to be married. It is my hope that everyone in this House will support the Government Bill because it will give the opportunity to those in our community to have their relationships celebrated, valued and recognised by the State in the same way as everyone else is.

140 Mr Speaker, to those people inside and outside of this place who oppose the Bill, and argue that those couples already have a statutory framework for civil partnership, I say this. The introduction of civil partnership was a step in the right direction, in my view, and I am proud that this has past the legislation when it did.

However, we need to take the next evolutionary step forward. I understand that there are those that strongly oppose the Bill and I respect their right to hold those views, but I do not agree with them. Mr Speaker, this is not just about the ceremony of marriage and everything else that it entails. It is about the promotion and recognition of long and stable relationships.

150 Why would we as a society want to prevent a same sex couple from getting married just because they are gay? Marriage represents a meaningful commitment and why should that not include those of the same sex? If we as a Parliament fail to pass the Bill, Mr Speaker, we are saying to those who fall in love with someone else of the same sex that they are worth less than opposite sex couples.

155 Mr Speaker, there are a number of key objections to the amendments to the Marriage Act and I feel duty bound to ventilate those objections so that this House can properly reflect on them, even though I form the view that these objections do not hold up to detailed scrutiny.

160 Mr Speaker, those who oppose the Bill fear that religious organisations in our society which oppose same sex marriage will be expected to perform marriage between gay men and women. This argument is, with the greatest of respect, wrong and misconceived. The amendment provides safeguards in the form of section 6A of the Bill that the hon. Member talked about.

165 Mr Speaker, everyone in this House I believe respects the views of our religious leaders and the safeguards provided in the Bill demonstrate that we as a community recognise the right of our religious institutions to refuse to solemnise same sex marriages which do not accord with their belief systems.

Marriage in my view is not the preserve of religious organisations and whilst respecting their religious freedom and their right not to conduct religious marriages between same sex couples, we cannot and must not allow the exemptions or opt-outs contained in section 6B to extend to Registrars who conduct civil marriages on behalf of the State.

170 I want to pause at that point and explain my reservation about section 6B. In my view, those charged by the State for conducting civil marriages cannot simply refuse to perform their public duty because of their beliefs. The Marriage Registrar and the Deputy Registrar are public officials and as such, they must conduct marriages that are permitted by our laws.

175 On the superficial level, section 6B provides for a mechanism whereby in a specific case of a Deputy Registrar refusing to conduct a marriage on the basis that it is a same sex marriage, can appoint a replacement Registrar or an alternate, as the hon. Member discussed before. In my view, although we have created the architecture which purports not to offend basic fundamental rights, I believe it is a wrong starting point to take.

180 Secondly, Mr Speaker, I have heard it been said by those who oppose same sex marriage that the word 'marriage' by definition means marriage between a man and a woman and that definition has been in place for hundreds, if not thousands of years. The religious view is that marriage is between a man and a woman and therefore the amendment to the Marriage Act compromises their faith. I have said that the Bill protects their faith, but in my view it should not prevent this House from changing the law. Not amending the law simply reflects discrimination, 185 plain and simple.

The law, until relatively recently, provided that legal sex was between a man and a woman. For many years, women in marriage were treated by their husbands as property in which fathers handed their daughters to a suitor and denied rights of their own. Years ago, the rape of a husband of his wife was not even illegal. In common law countries, civil marriages were 190 introduced over 170 years ago and at the time I understand it was a radical move. In summary, Mr Speaker, marriage has evolved over time and why should it not evolve further?

195 Thirdly, Mr Speaker, I have heard it being advanced that marriage is about the procreation of children, and I think this is a mischaracterisation. Civil marriage does not, for instance, by definition include reference to the bringing into the world of children. Society does not prohibit the marriage of loving couples based on their ability to have children. There are many couples who cannot have children, couples who marry years after child-bearing years.

I accept that the process of marriage is the first step to the starting of a family in the significant majority of marriages. However, gay couples bring up children too. The lifelong commitment of marriage is much more than the bringing up of children.

200 And at this point and with Mr Speaker's leave, I make reference to a former Shadow Home Affairs Minister who said this in the Westminster Parliament, which I thought was important to air here. She said:

Most MPs will know the sadness but also the inspiration they have drawn from visiting a long-married couple where, for example, the wife is struggling to cope, struggling to remember the world around her and struggling to recognise even the husband with whom she has shared decades of her life, yet he carries on: cooking for her, washing for her, getting her up, putting her to bed, talking to her even as she becomes a stranger in front of him. That is marriage. But I have also visited a gay man, who died some years ago after a long illness during which he was cared for every day at home, in hospital and eventually in a hospice, by his long-term partner. I do not see why that cannot be marriage too. The idea that the biology of procreation should deny same-sex couples the respect that comes with marriage is to ignore the full richness—the happiness but also the tragedies—of modern family life. For better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health: that is marriage.

205 Fourth, it is argued that same sex marriage will undermine the institution of marriage. I disagree fundamentally with that proposition. Marriage has evolved over many generations. Britain, Spain, France, Denmark, Belgium and others, celebrate same sex marriage and their institutions have not collapsed. Our views in our community on homosexuality have changed and evolved over time and we must now accept that. We must as a Parliament embrace this evolution and support the Bill.

210 The Bill before the House is about giving couples who wish to marry the same rights as anyone else. The Bill also protects the religious organisations who do not agree with same sex marriage. I am of the view that the Bill does not dilute the meaning of marriage but rather evolves and strengthens the institution of marriage and the promotion of long and stable relationships, which can only be of benefit to our society.

215 I have expressed my reservations about section 6B, but I cannot in all conscience vote down the Bill that represents a fundamental step in the right direction. I would commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon.

220

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, in 1969 when Franco infamously closed our frontier with Spain, some of the worse affected in our community were those whose partners lived on the other side. The pain suffered by all Gibraltarians was felt hundredfold by these individuals, as joyous relationships were suddenly strained with distance, separation and needless uncertainty.

225

Theirs is a mostly untold story of yearful heartache and wasted years that time could not fully repair. Thankfully those times are now long behind us but it is immensely saddening that so many years later where progress has been made in other areas, there are still legal barriers hindering the affairs of the heart.

230

The heart, Mr Speaker, knows nothing about frontiers. It also knows not about gender, it knows not about doctrine, it knows not about what society expects. It knows only about love. This love is blind, but it is a powerful force that motivates many of our actions and pushes us to overcome the obstacles that are placed in our way. Indeed, while its course never runs smoothly, it can never understand why those obstacles are there in the first place and can never forgive those who put them there.

235

This Bill is not just about rights, Mr Speaker; it is also about doing what is right, and what is not right is that we continue to allow the law to hang an anachronism over members of our community. Like love, the law must also be blind and a law that claims to be secular must be allowed to neither discriminate nor privilege. It must not pass judgement on a love that has no impact whatsoever on the lives of others and no longer must it impede the pursuit of happiness. To prevent two people who love each other from living their lives and realising their dreams, that is the true abomination and I commend the motivating principle behind this Bill in righting a grievous wrong.

240

However, Mr Speaker, while I endorse this principle, I have to express serious reservations, as the Bill grants concessions to Government workers to refuse to discharge their professional responsibilities. I am saddened that a Bill that aims to end discrimination with one hand legitimises it with the other. I am worried about the precedence this sets, as well as the seeming recognition that some members of our community are entitled to less than others simply because of their sexual orientation.

250

This attitude would not be accepted toward any other minority, so it is disappointing to see it applied to our gay community with a religious objection being permitted to override a professional duty and blunting the purpose of this Bill.

255

As a result, I am sorry to say that we fall short of legislating in favour of the inclusive and progressive society we all desire to live in and it is in this spirit of addressing this that I will be tabling an amendment to clause 2(4) of the Bill, which I shall present at Committee Stage.

Thank you.

Mr Speaker: Is there any other contributor to the debate on the Second Reading?

The Hon. Dr Joseph Garcia.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Yes, Mr Speaker. I too welcome the opportunity to say a few words on the Government Bill before the House today.

265 Before doing so, I wish to congratulate my hon. Friend the Minister for Equality, Samantha Sacramento, for her leadership over this issue and for introducing the Bill. I say this, because the proposed legislation before us has potentially created more controversy outside this Parliament than it has created inside this Chamber. This is in itself, a rare occurrence. Indeed, in 17 years in this House it seems to me that this has been one of the most commented, talked about and written about draft laws that we have debated.

270 Controversy, Mr Speaker, is not a bad thing. It serves to generate interest in the proceedings of the House and in the work that we do here on behalf of the people who elected us. It also exposes Members to a whole range of detailed and strongly held views on both sides of the divide.

275 My own view is that this Bill is precisely about equality. It is our duty to ensure that the same avenues and procedures available for mixed gender couples are also made available to same sex couples as well. That is the bottom line. Equality between the citizens is the first duty of the State.

280 Mr Speaker, in 1999 the then administration, with our support, set up a Select Committee of this House in order to consider a reform of the 1969 Constitution. I was one of the five Members who sat on that Committee. My colleague Joe Bossano is the only other Member who is still in this House. The process involved looking at the then Constitution line by line and making amendments to the text as it then existed.

285 I recall that in the very first meeting of that Committee in December 1999, the Human Rights section was discussed and in particular, the non-discrimination categories that it contains. This is now section 14 of the Constitution, which prohibits discrimination on a number of grounds. The list of categories includes sex, race, language, creed and political opinion, among others. In that very first meeting, both Joe Bossano and I flagged the possible inclusion of sexual orientation as one of those non-discrimination categories.

290 Mr Speaker, this happened at the time when the GGR, now the ERG, did not even exist and when there was no external pressure in this regard. I remember that the view from the then Government Members was that the term 'sex' covered sexual orientation and that therefore it was not necessary to include the specific reference as one of the categories on the list.

295 Mr Speaker, I say that because I am therefore proud to sit here as a Member of a progressive team that has shown itself willing to consult, to listen, to discuss and to take a view on the issue. Many times in life and also in politics the easiest option is to do nothing or to follow the line of least resistance. That is not the way we operate. When we take a view, we lead from the front.

300 The House knows that a Command Paper was published in December 2015 and the views were taken until the end of January 2016. In March, an Inter-Ministerial Committee was established and meetings were held with interested parties. I was not involved in that process but I know that it was intensive and meticulous; 3,490 responses to the consultation were made. This was the highest ever for any consultation on any proposed legislation.

305 There have been voices accusing the Government of having moved too slowly. The reality, Mr Speaker, is that the more consultation there is, the slower that a process becomes. Indeed, at the other end of the spectrum the Government has also been accused of moving too fast. The fact is that this Government introduced civil partnerships in 2014 and is set to legislate on civil marriage only two years later.

310 Mr Speaker, the Civil Partnership Act was a landmark piece of legislation which provided, for the first time in Gibraltar, for recognition by the State of a union between two people of the same sex. That recognition was also extended to opposite sex couples who did not want to get married.

In a practical sense, this meant that the rights, the benefits and the entitlements as citizens which were enjoyed by heterosexual married couples have now come to be enjoyed by same sex couples as well.

315 However, a couple made up of a man and a woman is also able to take advantage of civil marriage in order to have their union recognised by the State. This means that there are two routes for recognition by the State of unions made up of two people of opposite sexes. They can either enter into a civil partnership or they can enter into a civil marriage, whereas same sex couples only have one route for this recognition by the State, and that is the route of civil partnership.

320 This is why, in my view the issue is one of equality of citizens in the eyes of the State. The inequality lies not in the rights, benefits or entitlements that either route will bestow on the couple; it lies on the availability of one or two avenues to get there, depending on the sexual orientation of the people involved.

325 Mr Speaker, the discussions and debates that we have had in Gibraltar over this matter are no different to those that have arisen in other parts of Europe. As of June 2016, 13 European countries legally recognise and perform same sex marriages. These are Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Iceland, Ireland, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and the United Kingdom. On 22nd December 2015, Jersey approved the principle that same sex couples be allowed to marry. The relevant legislation is due to come into force in January 2017. In Guernsey, a year later almost to the day, on 21st September this year, the States of Guernsey approved a Bill to legalise same sex marriage by a vote of 33 to 5.

330 It is true to say that there are also many countries that do not recognise civil partnerships or civil marriage between two persons of the same sex.

335 Mr Speaker, there is no right and wrong in this debate. The Government has gone to great lengths to explain that this Bill will have no impact on the different religions, the way in which they choose to define marriage or choose to practise their beliefs. Indeed, the reverse is true. The freedom of religious denominations to continue as they always have done is explicitly protected in the Bill, following the representations that have been received.

340 The Bill in my view is not about religion at all. It is not about religious marriage; it is about civil marriage. At the heart of the Bill is the cold principle that every citizen should be equal in the eyes of the State. The central issue is that the different procedures and processes offered by the State for recognition of a union between two people should be open to everyone. (A Member: Absolutely.)

345 There are two such processes, as I said earlier. These are civil partnership and civil marriage. Therefore, in the same way that civil partnership is open to all couples regardless of their sexual orientation, civil marriage cannot be open to heterosexual couples alone. That is not equality.

Mr Speaker, I will be supporting the Bill. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Any other contributor? The Hon. Neil Costa.

350 Minister for Business & Employment (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, whereas it would not surprise anyone inside and outside of this House to hear me say that the Government should have legislated to enable civil marriages for same sex couples from the outset, there is no doubt in my mind that civil partnerships were a hugely important and progressive step forward, and I am extremely proud to have been a Member of the Government who introduced civil partnerships in 2014. Although civil partnerships provide legal recognition for same sex relationships, it is absolutely right to now take the additional step for equality by introducing equal marriage in Gibraltar and allowing same sex couples the chance to marry if they choose to do so.

360 To those who argue that civil partnerships contain in all material respects similar rights to marriage and that therefore this Bill is in effect unnecessary, I would say that a legal partnership cannot logically be the same as civil marriage, because if it were, why have two legal schemes regulating unions?

In other words, Mr Speaker, by having a regime that enables same sex couples to register their partnership but another legal system to which they are not allowed to enter, we 365 necessarily as a society are making a conscious distinction against same sex couples. There is no skirting around the issue that we are saying that a civil partnership is not quite the same as a civil marriage. We are saying that same sex couples are prohibited from entering into civil marriages while opposite sex couples may also enter into a civil partnership – in my view, plain discrimination.

370 Mr Speaker, imagine our collective disgust and dismay as our community if we substituted 'same sex couples' for 'black couples', for 'Jewish couples', for 'couples with disabilities'. We would rightly call it racism, anti-Semitism and bigotry, and indeed, Mr Speaker, this distinction that still exists today is clearly one that some in our society seek to maintain precisely because it is an important difference in the minds of some members of our community. Otherwise, why 375 seek and fight to keep this legal distinction?

It is clearly the case in the light of this wonderful debate, Mr Speaker, that we can enjoy in Gibraltar without fear of prejudice, that society views marriage and civil partnerships as being different. Same sex couples therefore, rightly in my view, feel their relationship is not valued by society in the same way as civil marriage. All couples who enter into a lifelong commitment 380 should be able to call it marriage.

If same sex couples wish to exchange promises of love, of responsibility, of commitment in marriage, who am I, Mr Speaker, to stop them? If a same sex couple wishes to bring up children in love, in affection, in protection and in family, why would I seek to prevent such a beautiful and meaningful thing to come to pass?

385 Mr Speaker, there is significant evidence that shows that opposite sex couples do not have – to put it mildly – the best track record in bringing up children, and one only has to read the newspapers to hear of some terrible tragedies that afflict vulnerable children. On the other hand, Mr Speaker, I am not aware of any studies that indicate that children raised in same sex relationships fare any worse or suffer any more harm than a child who is brought up by same sex 390 couples.

And, Mr Speaker, if the House would allow me to be personal for just a moment, as the child of parents who separated when I was around ten, I can tell this House without a moment's hesitation that it would not have made the slightest jot of difference to me if my parents were of the same sex and had they not gone through the suffering of their separation.

395 And so, Mr Speaker, who are we in Parliament, in Government, in the State, to tell any person whom they can love and how they can live their lives? I abhor such a thought and cannot countenance any actions that may create laws that patently say that someone is slightly less than somebody else.

Imagine, Mr Speaker, the child at school who feels marginalised, different and perhaps 400 inferior from his class mates because he is attracted to a member of his own sex. Imagine, if you would, the father who would not fight, Mr Speaker, for his child's right to enter into a civil marriage and to ensure that his child is treated in all respects exactly like everybody else.

Mr Speaker, in my opinion, we either believe that we are all equally worthy of the law's protection or we do not, and it does beg the question, are we not all flesh and blood? Are we 405 not all sentient human beings wishing, all of us, in our way to be happy? Of course we are, Mr Speaker, and I sincerely believe that we are all deserving of the same rights, privileges and legal protections. And it would be for me, Mr Speaker, a frightening dereliction of my responsibilities not to support this Bill, because society considers our laws, rightly, as representing our values.
And our values surely must be that we all love each other and that we are all equal as human 410 beings.

Mr Speaker, I do of course recognise that members of our community worry about the way that our world is changing. There are those who argue that the definition of marriage has for hundreds ... indeed, for millennia, been between a man and a woman and should remain so.
Others oppose same sex unions because they believe that marriage is about the procreation of 415 children. For some community members, it is their faith that matters and therefore argue that it will weaken the institution of religious marriage.

My own view, Mr Speaker, is that in fact allowing more couples to enter into marriage will actually strengthen the institution of civil marriage, not weaken it. There are countries in Europe as the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister has said, who have introduced same sex marriage and it has not shown a weakness or an undermining of religious marriage in those countries. These countries have managed to introduce same sex marriage, while at the same time protecting religious freedom.

And in that respect, Mr Speaker, the Bill before the House does protect the right of those who do not agree with same sex marriage. For those who are concerned that equal civil marriage threatens freedom of religion, they can rest assured the Bill contains guarantees that neither a religious organisation nor a Minister in a place of worship will be forced by law to marry same sex couples.

And Mr Speaker, I can assure religious members of our community, many of whom I have the great privilege of calling friends, that I will equally fight with the same ardour as I stand here today to fight for the cause of one civil marriage for all, for the right to freedom of worship and in not ever allowing the situation where the State obliges a person of faith to act against their conscience.

Let me also say, Mr Speaker, that whereas I am no religious scholar, I have read the New Testament and for me, what strikes me above all other things, is the commandment to love each other and to love God.

Mr Speaker, I wish to thank the hon. and learned Lady, my learned friend Samantha Sacramento who has shown, I think, great leadership in this House (Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) in bringing forward the Civil Partnership Act and now this civil marriage for all and I will urge her, in fact, to continue to be as progressive and, if I may, perhaps even more radical as the Parliament progresses.

Mr Speaker, I conclude by saying that equality is indivisible. One cannot be partially equal. Either one is equal or one is not, and therefore the Bill before the House tells the world that it values everybody equally in Gibraltar and for this reason, I have no hesitation whatsoever to commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am mindful that the first section of the Constitution deals precisely with the protection of fundamental rights and freedoms. Section 15 talks about the right to marry and found a family. Section 15 reads quite simply:

Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and to found a family as prescribed by any law governing the exercise of this right.

I note it is silent as to who they may marry, but just that they may marry.

I personally identify with the comments of my hon. colleagues in this House so far this morning. I believe it is a measure that is perhaps long overdue and if I may paraphrase the famous Shylock speech in The Merchant of Venice, 'Has the gay couple not eyes? Has the gay couple hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections and passions? Fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a heterosexual couple? If you prick us, do we not bleed?' And so, Mr Speaker, I think and agree with my colleagues in this House that it is about equality and not about discrimination.

I must say that on the whole I am satisfied with the intention of the Bill to eliminate what is an unjust discrimination. However, I would welcome clarification from the Members opposite, as to how on the one hand, as my hon. Lady has said, they remove the discrimination, and yet on the other hand seem to legalise an objection to it. If you were to change a few words in paragraph 6B, you would find it extremely obnoxious, if you were to allow this kind of 465 exemption in any other form of legislation in Gibraltar. So, Mr Speaker, I would welcome clarification from Members opposite as to how on the one hand they feel that this eliminates discrimination and yet on the other hand allows for it.

That, Mr Speaker, is I think important and I note that the hon. Lady to my left is proposing to delete this clause. I would welcome the views of the Members opposite as to whether or not 470 they would consider that proposal.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

475 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you Mr Speaker.

I wish to make a small contribution because I believe I am the only person in this House who has ever actually conducted the ceremony of marriage, so I can talk from a different perspective and so on!

Yes, Mr Speaker, it is a Bill that obviously I feel is relatively easy to support. There are a couple of minor things that have been aired now by my hon. colleagues here on this side.
480

I must start by saying that I like the words the hon. Lady, as the mover of the Bill said, that marriage was a meaningful commitment between two people and starting from that point, irrespective of whether the two are male or the two are female or they happen to be male and female, there should be total unity in everyone in supporting that marriage is a meaningful 485 commitment.

The small differences seem to be arising in that we all wish to protect the religious institutions and their laws. For example we take the Roman Catholic Church, the canon law and so on and I do not think anyone has any problems in supporting the principle that we have to respect their laws.

490 However, having been on that side of the marriage ceremony where from my point of view it was canon law that was dictating whether I could or could not conduct that marriage, because canon law is far more stricter in who can enter into a marriage or not. And it was the State that was allowing people like myself who at the time were ministers of religion to actually conduct the marriage.

495 Very different to, for example, from a marriage ceremony that I attended in my days when I lived in Rome as a student, when one of my friends was getting married and he actually had to go through two marriage ceremonies. He had to go and have a state wedding at a particular state building and then he had to go and have a church wedding at the church of his choosing because the state was not recognising the religious minister as an authorised person or registrar 500 or deputy registrar to conduct a civil marriage because the claim was that their laws were completely different.

I know colleagues on this side of the House are rightly saying that we are not entirely 100% yet convinced and we want to hear what the Government has to say about on the one hand trying to protect those who want to opt out of not conducting same sex marriages but I just 505 want to warn both sides of the House, do we really want to end up with a situation where church marriages will not at the same time simultaneously be recognised as civil marriages? It would mean that those getting married would have to necessarily go one day to the civil registry and have their marriage there and then most couples, like my daughter in a couple of weeks' time, choose to get married at a weekend because it is easier for guests to attend and then the church wedding is something different. All I can say is, that as the father of the bride, it does cut 510 a lot of expenses if you have both things happening on the same day. Believe me, it costs quite a pretty penny to get married nowadays!

But, Mr Speaker, having said that like I think Members on both sides of the House, we have heard what constituents have to say. We have taken their views on board and so on and I have 515 listened to everyone with equal respect and so on. Yet there is one young lady, in fact I do not think she is quite of voting age yet because I believe she is still a sixth-former, gave me these words, with which, with your leave, Mr Speaker, I want to end my contribution today.

520 This young beautiful lady said, 'Heterosexual marriage is a tradition. However, may I remind you that human ritual sacrifice, public executions and curing illnesses with spells and magic were all considered a tradition once. Let us go back to the days where we could watch people being beheaded in the town square, shall we?'

With that, Mr Speaker, I declare my intention to support this Bill. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. John Cortes.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, one of the essential points that has been made in this debate, particularly outside this House, is that the Government governs for all the people and not just for those who hold a particular view, whether or not it is the view of the majority.

530 Having said that, it is clear that one of the main arguments used against the Bill outside this Chamber is a religious one. As a Catholic who tries his best to practise his Christian faith, this is important to me and I have given the matter a great deal of thought.

535 There is much in society today, Mr Speaker, that differs from some of the teachings of my church and of other denominations, Christian or otherwise – some of which have also expressed a view on the subject, divorce, marriage between divorcees, extra marital sex, even what we do with the ashes of our deceased loved ones are examples, and all are allowed by civil society. Some may argue that these undermine the fabric of society, but society continues nevertheless and the relationship between church, all denominations, and state continues to be excellent.

540 There will be those who are religious who choose not to divorce or choose to do so; it is their choice and their decision. Few would question that now and I have not heard that point emerge in the public debate surrounding this Bill. Nor is it for me nor for this Parliament to cast judgement – judge not on the way that couples faced with such situations express their free will, another important tenet of the faith with which I grew up.

545 I would argue that the same applies to civil marriage. Indeed, civil marriage between a man and a woman exists and has existed in Gibraltar for decades and is not a church wedding but a civil occasion which clearly in concept is identical to what this Bill wishes to introduce. It does not impose a duty for same sex couples to marry nor force anyone who believes it to be wrong to do so. Nor will the lack of such provision prevent persons of the same sex who love each other from entering into a relationship.

550 What it does is give a right to all persons regardless of sexual orientation to be treated equally in civil terms in the eyes of the law, not of the church. Only the church can determine who marries under the church, but civil marriage is not the sacrament of holy matrimony, nor the equivalent in other denominations. And so I see no conflict.

555 Mr Speaker, as a practising Christian with total respect for those who disagree, with love for all of my fellow citizens and with a clean conscience, I will be supporting the Bill. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Is there any other contributor? (Interjections)

560 Hon. D A Feetham: If the Hon. the Chief Minister wants me to go first, then I will happily oblige him.

565 Mr Speaker, I will be personally supporting this Bill. I have a history of supporting these kinds of issues and I am a fervent supporter and believer in equality. I have stood in this House, Mr Speaker in a minority of four, with everybody else except for four colleagues including myself, voting for issues of this nature, including it has to be said, my hon. Friend, Mr Reyes and I see no reason why I should change my mind and indeed, I am a firm believer in this particular issue of gay marriage.

570 What I intend to do, Mr Speaker, is outline the policy of the GSD in relation to this. I will then very briefly go through my reasons as to why I will be supporting this Bill. I will then address the question of the amendment by the hon. Lady, and also, very briefly touch upon some further amendments that I believe are necessary in order to deal with blatant inequalities that may arise from this Bill. I am not asking the Government to do it in the context of this Bill, but to bear it in mind that further amendments will be necessary in the context in particular of the Immigration, Asylum and Refugee Act, and it is something I have touched upon in this House in the past.

575 Mr Speaker, the policy of the GSD is that it will not impose either on its MPs or on its Members, any view on a matter of conscience. It is up to an individual GSD Member, an individual Member of Parliament, to make up his or her own mind as to the way that he or she wants to support or not support, or vote in favour or vote against these types of issues.

580 And I believe it is right that on these types of issues that impact on matters of conscience and people feel very strongly about, they should have the right to express their own views in favour or against these kinds of issues. Indeed, the hon. Lady described the Civil Partnership Act as the first landmark moment in these types of issues. I disagree with her. Indeed, the first landmark moment was in 1991 because these issues are issues that developed over time and the first landmark moment was 1991, when the Hon. the Father of the House, as Chief Minister of this community, brought a Bill to this House to decriminalise homosexuality. On that occasion the GSD too allowed a free vote and no-one on our side of the political equation at the time, voted against the decriminalisation of homosexuality.

The next major step –

590 Mr Speaker: In 1991 I was the Leader of the Opposition; the GSD were not in Opposition.

Hon. D A Feetham: I beg your pardon, it was 1992. I beg your pardon, it was 1992. Quite right, it was Sir Peter Caruana – or Peter Caruana as he then was – who was the Leader of the Opposition. In 1992 on the decriminalisation of homosexuality, the GSD allowed a free vote and indeed nobody opposed the decriminalisation of homosexuality.

595 The next major step was in 2010 when I brought to this House a Private Member's Bill in order to equalise the age of consent and bring down the age of consent for homosexuals from 18 as it then was to 16. The context in which that arose, Mr Speaker, was because at the time I was amending all the criminal legislation in Gibraltar in the Crimes Act, and I took a position, supported by Mr Reyes, supported by Mr Montiel and supported by Mr Netto, that we would not come to this House with a Bill modernising all our criminal legislation and leave what was to us a blatant inequality in our legislation, which we believed was unconstitutional and in any event, infringed on our conscience because of that inequality.

600 The way that was resolved within the Government of the day was that we were, or I was, supported in the bringing of a Private Member's Motion where that Private Member's Motion was supported by four Members of the GSD Government at the time and everybody in this House, including the then Opposition, voted against.

605 In 2010, as a consequence of that, the matter was then placed before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court then came back and agreed with the view expressed by myself, expressed by Mr Reyes, by Mr Montiel and Mr Netto, that in fact the inequality was unconstitutional and as a consequence of that, we then brought the Crimes Bill, which was supported by every single Member of the GSD Government at the time, which equalised the age of consent at 16.

610 It is then right that the hon. Lady then brought to this Parliament the Civil Partnership Act, which was and is rightly described as a landmark moment in the advancement of civil rights and in the advancement of these types of issues. And indeed, at the time, everybody on this side of the House also supported this particular Bill and everybody on this side of the House, despite the fact that it is a matter on which they are voting their consciences and there is no three-line or four-line whip operating on this side of the House, everybody on this side of the House is going to be supporting this Bill today.

620 Mr Speaker, from my own point of view and the reason why I support it is not only because I support equality and I have a track record of supporting equality, I believe that equality has to be advanced at every single opportunity. One of the reasons why I have made the point that I have made about the hon. Lady's comment about the first landmark moment is because society has to remain vigilant. Society has to remain vigilant and we cannot see that Bill or this Bill as a final moment in the advancement of civil rights and in the advancement of equality. As society develops, there will no doubt be further landmark moments and I hope to be in this House, Mr Speaker, in order to support them.

630 But, Mr Speaker, more than anything else I support this Bill for this reason. I am a firm believer, Mr Speaker, in the institution of marriage. My parents were also, like the parents of Mr Costa, divorced when I was ten in fact, the same as Mr Costa. But I believe that marriage offers a cementing and stable environment in which families are brought up, in which children in my view are brought up. I believe that having allowed gay couples, as indeed the hon. Gentleman – and I left this out in the history of landmark moments – allowed for the case to be brought to court in relation to gay adoption which has now been allowed as a consequence of a decision of the Supreme Court, I think it was in 2013, which I believe was also a landmark moment.

635 But having taken the decision, by law or otherwise, that gay couples can adopt, I think it is wholly illogical to then say that gay couples cannot have access to that institution of marriage that has those benefits for those couples. In my view, it is completely and utterly illogical. If gay couples want to marry or if straight couples want to marry, they should have the right to marry and gay couples should have the right to marry. I believe that marriage provides that stable, cementing environment in which families are brought up and therefore it should be accessible, in my view, to gay couples.

640 Mr Speaker, in relation to the amendment, this is where I am in a minority on this side of the House. I believe that the clause allowing an opt-out on religious grounds for Registrars, is justifiable and I will be supporting that particular clause in the Bill and I will be voting against the amendment.

645 Mr Speaker, Gibraltar is a very small community. It is a tolerant community. In Gibraltar we have learned to live with each other, different religions in a melting pot that is Gibraltar. Indeed, the Gibraltarian people have grown out of this melting pot and the stability that we have in our society comes from tolerance. I believe that, if we are to be that tolerant society that has been so successful in living with each other and tolerating our different religious beliefs and our different beliefs in other spheres too, that we have to allow people who have a religious conviction and therefore cannot for a religious conviction perform a civil marriage to have the opt-out and for that not to be forced on them, Mr Speaker.

650 And let me also say this: that although I am a believer and a firm believer in equality, one of the things that I lament most, in the way that the United Kingdom and other jurisdictions have developed as a consequence of some of the legislation that has been introduced from the equality perspective in some of those jurisdictions, has been the forcing on Christian minorities, on Muslim minorities or religious minorities, to do things that they would not otherwise have done because of their conscience. Let me give the House some examples of that.

655 Mr Speaker, it is absolutely ridiculous in my view – absolutely ridiculous – that a bakery in Ireland ought to be forced to bake a cake for a gay marriage and be found liable in a court of law for not doing so, simply because we are talking about Christian bakers, Catholic bakers, who took the view that on religious grounds, they were not prepared to bake that cake. There ought to be a sense of sensibleness in my respectful view in relation to this. We should not be forcing people to do things that go against their religious convictions.

660 In the United Kingdom, one of the largest adoption organisations in the United Kingdom was the Catholic Church, one of the largest adoption centres and indeed other Christian churches. As a consequence of some of the equality legislation that was introduced in the United Kingdom, it has forced these adoption centres to close, who were placing children in worthwhile families.

They have had to close because their own religious convictions would not allow them to obviously adopt to gay couples.

675 Now, I may disagree with that and I may say a gay couple is just as capable of adopting and bringing up a child in the context of a loving, safe and secure relationship as anybody else. But I think that we have to be sensible in society and that we have got to recognise that there are people with different views, that there are people like those Christian organisations in the United Kingdom that offer a worthwhile service to society and we should not be forcing those people to do things that go against their own conscience.

680 And I think it is right in that context for the Government to introduce into this Bill, a clause that does not ... that will allow Registrars to opt out of gay marriage, civil marriage on religious grounds. And for those reasons, Mr Speaker, I will be opposing the amendment that is proposed by my hon. lady Friend, Marlene Nahon Hassan.

685 Finally, Mr Speaker, in relation to further amendments, I would also invite the Government to bear in mind that not only does the Matrimonial Causes Act need to be amended, but also the Immigration, Asylum and Refugee Act and I brought this matter to the House in the past but I think it is an important matter.

690 At the moment what we have is a blatant discrimination against men who are married to foreign women, their wives are not entitled to the same residency rights as a situation where a Gibraltar woman is married to a foreign man or indeed, Mr Speaker, because they amended this particular Act upon the introduction of the Civil Partnership Act, or indeed a gay couple that has entered into a civil partnership. I think that is wrong.

695 There is also a discrimination against the children of a Gibraltar man married to a foreign woman, which again are discriminated against in relation to those in a civil partnership and also gay people in a civil partnership and also a Gibraltar woman married to a foreign man. I think that, in the context of that Act that is now going to have to be amended, of course, in order to also recognise that there is a civil partnership, that we should end that discrimination across the board, and I invite the Government to do so.

700 But for those reasons, Mr Speaker, I will be supporting this Bill and I will also be voting against the amendment proposed by the hon. Lady. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, I do think today is a landmark day for this community and for this Parliament.

705 I want to start with section 15 of the Constitution which the hon. Member referred to, which is the section which relates to the right to marry and found a family. Mr Speaker, that section, what it has been interpreted to mean in the case law of the European Court of Human Rights and what it says on the face of it, in my view, is central to a determination of how this Parliament deals with this matter.

710 I know it has been central also to the course of the debate in this community, because many have said that there is no right to marry, in the course of contributions that I have read in the past year. But in fact, Mr Speaker, section 15 of the Constitution – our principle and overriding enactment – actually says this:

Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and to found a family as prescribed by any law governing the exercise of this right.

715 So it is a right, and that right is exercised in keeping with laws, and this Parliament makes laws. But anyone who has approached this debate from the point of view that there is no right to marry has failed to read section 15 of the Constitution, or at least has failed to understand it.

Because I have also read some comments to suggest, well, it is a right for men and women. Well, Mr Speaker, we may describe our sexual orientations in different ways. I have learnt from 720 Samantha Sacramento that it is now LGBTTT, lesbian, gay, bisexual, transsexual and transgender, but we do not describe each other physically as anything other than men and women. So this is a right that applies to everyone in our community regardless of their sexual orientation and that is already preserved in our Constitution.

725 And it does not say, Mr Speaker, in this section that this is a right for men and women to marry each other. That would have been an important addition to this section if that is what was meant by it. 'Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry' – full stop. It then goes on to talk about founding a family. Well, Mr Speaker, therefore I think that it is essential that this clause of our Constitution is central in our minds as we have the debate that we are having today.

730 Mr Speaker, I did not imagine on 9th December 2011 that I would be Chief Minister of Gibraltar, to see a Bill moved for equal marriage whilst I was in the Government that I was leading. I did not imagine that that would be the case in 2011 when we were framing our manifesto, when we had the internal debate of what we would do to deal with this issue of discrimination, that same sex couples were not able to enter into a partnership.

735 I sincerely believed that we were not just trail blazing; we were doing the right thing in the right way when we brought the legislation on civil partnerships. We did it, Mr Speaker, in a way that had not been done for example, in the United Kingdom, where civil partnerships were available only to couples who were of the same sex orientation but not to heterosexual couples, creating thereby a new discrimination which has just been undone in the UK but which we were careful not to create in Gibraltar when we made our Civil Partnerships Act.

740 Mr Speaker, I told the House in March 2012, in answer to Question 318/2012 that I believed we had satisfied the concerns of the LGBTTT community in the creation of the Civil Partnerships Act. In fact I specifically said this, Mr Speaker ... and it is not good to go around quoting oneself, Mr Speaker. Lord Denning used to do it by laying down bits of law that he would come back to quote of himself in order to lay down new bits of law. But I think that it is important, that when 745 we have said things and we have changed our minds, we face up to it and understand why that has happened.

I said specifically this:

My own view is that we should not have gay marriage in Gibraltar, that we should have civil partnerships.

750 That was in March 2012. Mr Speaker, for me it has been a road of long consideration and of very careful thought, which I can only describe as very deep soul searching, to come to the conclusion that in the context of the following General Election, the one in 2015, the position of the party that I lead and of the executive of one of the parties in the alliance that is this Government, should be to propose a consultation in the context of our manifesto to do exactly the opposite of what I believed in 2012 should not happen.

755 Mr Speaker, what was it that changed my mind in that respect? Well, the dates here are actually very, very important. But most of my thinking has actually developed in discussions and deep considerations of this issue with my own wife. You see, Mr Speaker, in March 2012 I was the husband of a very pregnant wife but I was not a father. I became a father in April 2012. And, Mr Speaker, I do not think there is anything that changes your outlook like having a child and understanding the importance of what that child means to you and how that child looks to you 760 for protection in his early life.

And Mr Speaker, my discussions at home have been very, very concerning from the point of view of where I was in March 2012. Because, Mr Speaker, put yourself in the position of a husband who is asked this: 'now that you have a little boy, how would you feel in 30 years' time if your son has that sexual orientation and he is not able to do something that everybody else who is of a different sexual orientation is able to do?' In terms of the civic – not in terms of the physical or in terms of something else; in terms of the civic. And if he were able to turn around to you then, in 30 years' time and say, 'I cannot marry, Dad, because when you had the power you did not change the law.'

770 Well, Mr Speaker, this is not a place of power exercised in that way. This is not a place where I am going to say to the ten people who sit on my side, nine of whom are in Gibraltar today, 'You must vote in one particular way or you must not vote in a particular way.' That is not the way to exercise power. But to search your soul, to understand what you may have done that led you to a conclusion that may have been wrong and to then seek to understand with your community, whether you should make those changes that might lead to a different conversation 30 years 775 thence, I think was the right thing to do.

And that is why we included in our manifesto, after a long discussion in our Executive Committee where there were different views, after a detailed discussion with our coalition partners in the Liberal Party, that we would do a consultation in the whole of our community.

780 Well, Mr Speaker, I am not in bad company in changing my mind on this subject. President Obama was against equal marriage in 2008. He said that he believed that the United States should pursue civil unions and not civil marriages for those of the same sex. And yet by 2013 in his second inaugural address, he said this:

If we are truly created equal, then surely the love we commit to one another must be equal as well.

And in 2015, I think the whole world will remember the words which resonated from him when he welcomed the decision of the United States Supreme Court to make equal marriage 785 legal in the United States, through a judicial decision, not through a legislative change.

So, Mr Speaker, our approach has been to go to the community with this issue. Our manifesto, Mr Speaker, our Strongest Foundations manifesto of 2015, at pages 95 and 96, deals with the issue of equality. It sets out the work that we had done by November last year and the work that we were seeking a mandate to continue to do. In the section which is in great 790 measure down to the drafting of the hon. Lady and the detailed policy discussions of the Executive Committee, it says this on page 96 – 'civil partnerships':

We trail blazed with the landmark commitment, which we have already delivered, to introduce into law the Civil Partnership Act. This recognises the rights of people to have their same sex relationships reflected in legislation and all rights that accrue from this because we did not consider it was right for the State to discriminate between people on the grounds of their sexual orientation. This regime is now also open to opposite sex couples so that there is full equality across all the sexual orientations. We will now publish a Command Paper in order to take the views of the public on how best to deal with the request by some for civil marriage to be extended to same sex couples. We are totally committed both to ensuring that religious denominations are not forced to change their practices, beliefs or sacraments in any way and to the principle that the State must not discriminate between individuals based on grounds of sexual orientation. The results of the responses to the Command Paper will be published by June next year.

This manifesto, Mr Speaker, garnered wholesale support during the course of the last General Election in Gibraltar and that commitment was part of the manifesto before the people at the General Election. Mr Speaker, in fact I am very pleased that we introduced also, the 795 concept of the Command Paper because the Command Paper was not known to this Parliament and to our laws, until 2011 when we became the Government.

We were therefore able to put in the context of that Command Paper, which is a paper published by Command of Her Majesty through the Government, and I will come to that later because this is a Government Bill, an important issue to highlight which both the hon. Lady and 800 the Deputy Chief Minister have highlighted. But this is a Command Paper published by Command of Her Majesty for people to consider what their views are and to come back with the views that they wish to express in the context of that consultation.

So, Mr Speaker, I think we were able to publish the Command Paper in time and I think we have slipped by about 60 days in the context of publishing the responses to that, because we 805 were committed to a date in June this year. But a small matter of a Referendum dealing with some international partnerships of the United Kingdom has really dominated the first part of this year, but we otherwise complied with our undertaking to the letter.

810 Before I move on to deal with that part of what we did, Mr Speaker, dealing with civil marriages, I want to just reflect for a moment on civil partnerships. Because in the same way as civil partnerships in the United Kingdom excluded heterosexuals and we did not and they have had to change it, it is also true, Mr Speaker, that civil partnerships have found a life beyond their original raison d'être. I mean the original reason for civil partnerships was to provide a route for people of the same sex to have the ability to enter into stable relationships, recognised by the State, without knocking on the door of marriage.

815 But of course, as we allowed them here for heterosexual couples also and they were allowed eventually in the UK also for heterosexual couples, civil partnerships have found a different sort of life for themselves. And this very morning, Mr Speaker, perhaps providentially and in time for my speech, I read in one of my favourite columns in The Times, the Matthew Parris This Week column, the following excellent reference. And Matthew Parris writes this of himself – the title is 820 'Not the Marrying Kind': he says that new data offers an interesting peek into gay relationships. The number of civil partnerships formed last year is almost half the number in 2014 when gay marriage was introduced. So far, so unsurprising. If marriage is available, less people are likely to be going for the civil partnerships which were introduced to avoid those marriages.

825 But within that figure, he tells us, there is a more striking one. Nearly half of new civil partnerships are between over 50s compared with only a fifth in 2013, the year before marriage became an option. And his conclusion, Mr Speaker, I think is as amusing as it is informative: 'That many older gays who get hitched are still resisting marriage suggests that opposition to the reform was not always routed in moral disapproval, but sometimes in reluctance to change the meaning of long familiar words. Kind friends sometimes call my partner and me "husbands".
830 Though I have tried, I just cannot get comfortable with that word, but then again, I am 67', he tells us.

Well, Mr Speaker, it may be that it is important to highlight that simply because the option is on the table, it does not mean that we are going to require anybody or force anybody to do it.

835 Mr Speaker, the consultation which we undertook was probably the widest consultation exercise undertaken in this community, certainly in my political lifetime. I do not know whether something has gone deeper than the consultation on this Command Paper but it is certainly not something I remember.

840 The Select Committee on the Constitution which the Hon. the Father of the House and the Deputy Chief Minister formed part of, opened itself out to contributions from the community. There were lots of people who were politically involved who wanted to contribute to that, but the depth and breadth of the support for this Command Paper in the responses to it, is something I have never come across before in my political life.

845 And if I may say so, Mr Speaker, it ranged across the board of the whole of the community. We engaged with so many people, Mr Speaker, people I had never met before, people I thought I knew and had views that I was not able to associate with, and of course some who I knew and who had views I knew I could associate with, Mr Speaker.

850 And if I may say so, with thanks, the representations made also included representations made very thoughtfully and carefully and sensitively by His Lordship, the Bishop Zammit and His Lordship, the former Bishop Heskett, and I will come to some of those contributions in a moment.

855 The first part that I want to come to, Mr Speaker, is in the opinion that His Lordship the Bishop provided on 8th September 2016 and which was published in the Gibraltar Chronicle on the eve of his ordination in Malta, where he said that as Bishop of many in Gibraltar, he was writing his letter to express concerns about the issue of equal marriage and to share some considerations. I thought that there was a part that the House should be referred to. Two parts in particular, and the first is this.

In paragraph 11, His Lordship says this:

Whatever the decision of Parliament regarding this matter, the Church will hold fast to its authentic understanding of marriage, which has been written in the human heart, consolidated in history and confirmed by the Word of God. Any civil law allowing same sex marriage has no bearing on the teaching of the Church regarding the sacrament of marriage.

That is absolutely right, Mr Speaker. Whether one shares His Lordship's view in respect of the first part of his sentence or not, the second part of this paragraph is of course, absolutely true.
860 Nothing that we are doing here today in any way affects the teachings of the Church regarding the sacrament of marriage, or any other religious teaching in relation to the many incarnations of marriage.

And as the Bishop I think said in some of his other public interventions, but he said directly to us in the inter-ministerial committee meeting that we had with him and other members of the Church, the Church proposes but does not impose. I think the Church has been, through His Lordship the Bishop, exquisite in observing that approach, in providing us with information, in providing us with guidance on what their views are, but has not for one moment suggested to us that we should or should not do any particular thing in the context of the consultation and, indeed, is not purporting to say to the community that it must or must not do any particular thing.

Those views of His Lordship, Mr Speaker, the views of every Member in this House as expressed and the views of everybody who contributed to the consultation and those who did not, all of them are protected and preserved by section 9(1) of our Constitution, which says this – “Protection of Freedom of Conscience:

Except with his own consent, no person shall be hindered in the enjoyment of his freedom of conscience, and for the purposes of this section the said freedom includes freedom of thought and of religion, freedom to change his religion or belief, and freedom, either alone or in community with others and both in public and in private, to manifest and propagate his religion or belief in worship, teaching, practice and observance.

The first phrase of that paragraph is the most important, Mr Speaker, because it says, ‘except with his own consent, no person shall be hindered in the enjoyment of his freedom of conscience’. Everything else is mechanics.

So we live, Mr Speaker, in a free society, where one is free to worship or not worship the god or gods that one wishes to worship or not worship, and in a society which in the other section I have read to you, establishes the right of men and women to marry.
880

And, Mr Speaker, it was not just His Lordship and the Church that provided us with useful and careful and sensitive guidance on aspects of this proposed amendment. It was also the Evangelical Alliance who represent a lot of other denominations and who spent a lot of time with us – very convivial time, even though we might have different views, but a very convivial time understanding each other and understanding the issues that we were wrestling with and wanting to deal with in the best possible way for this community.
885

And the Equality Rights Group, Mr Speaker, who have led on this issue for those seeking marriage equality, with whom we had a very positive engagement. Not just in respect of the protection of the fundamental rights of all those who wish to marry regardless of their sexual orientation, but also if I may say so, the protection of people to practice their own religion in their own way and how those rights must also be preserved. Something which the Equality Rights Group were very keen to ensure we understood they were as signed up to as they might have been signed up to the cause of equal marriage.
890

We met, Mr Speaker, with a group of lawyers, young and not so young, who of course through our profession I knew well and in fact, all members of the Inter-Ministerial Committee happened to be lawyers so we all knew each other and have always got on relatively well, and had a good legal ding-dong on the subject of marriage and rights and not rights. Their thinking was also helpful in informing us in how we framed some of the exceptions that we had been asked to consider by the Church and which some of these members of our profession at the Bar
895

900 were able to help us shape in some way. We disagreed with most, but not with all, Mr Speaker, who came to see us in that context.

Mr Speaker, this was a process of consultation which resulted in the most careful consideration, most in-depth analysis of what was put to us in the context of this Command Paper and the responses to it. And if I may say so, Mr Speaker, I think I speak for all of the 905 Members of the Inter-Ministerial Committee when I say that I think this was a hugely enriching process.

This was not just dealing with the law; this was dealing with who we are in a values-based system like Gibraltar. Where is our morality today? Is this law a law that affects our morality in some way? It was a hugely stimulating and enriching process, Mr Speaker.

910 I chaired that Inter-Ministerial Committee with Samantha Sacramento, Neil Costa, Gilbert Licudi and Albert Isola as members of it. Albert Isola is, as Members will know, in China today on Government business. Mr Licudi and Mr Costa are here and they will agree with me that Samantha Sacramento's work in relation to equality is absolutely trail blazing and landmark in many ways, Mr Speaker.

915 Attitude is probably the first way that marks her out for distinction in this field, because Samantha Sacramento does not need to be told that laws need to be changed to provide for a more equal society; she feels it instinctively and understands it instinctively. And she is not in a position where she has to come with a Private Member's Bill to this House, Mr Speaker, to seek to rely on Opposition votes to change things; this is a woman who is able to count on 920 Government support, because she persuades those who might need persuading – not that we take long to be persuaded – when she raises an issue of equality that it must be dealt with in that particular way.

And she is a young talent, Mr Speaker, who I think those advocates for equality outside of this Parliament – which you might call the equality lobby – have long recognised as a 925 magnificent advocate for equality. She is the one, Mr Speaker, who taught me that it is not gay marriage. We sometimes go round using the terms like 'gay marriage' as shorthand in the context of this debate.

It is not gay marriage; it is about equal marriage. And terminology matters. Political correctness is not something that people should have much time for, but the importance of 930 terminology and how different terminology can hurt others, is something that we should all have regard to and she has consistently kept us on the straight and narrow in that respect when we have fallen into shorthand.

Mr Speaker, if I can just deal briefly with the usual discordant note that the current Leader of the Opposition has struck in respect of the debate and which I feel I must reply to, especially 935 given the fact that he has given us a draft of his retirement or resignation letter already during the course of a recent television programme, at the same time as he told us that he felt he was not paid enough for the job that he does.

Putting those things to one side, Mr Speaker, and ready to deal with them in the context of another debate, look, we agree that in relation to homosexuality, the first landmark moment 940 was the decriminalisation of that by the first GSLP Government during the course of its second administration, not its first administration.

If I may say so, Mr Speaker, when it comes to criminal laws, I do not think that Governments come to Parliament for people to vote their consciences, although I always expect my party to vote its conscience. They do not need to be given a free vote to vote their consciences; I actually 945 expect them to vote their consciences every time we come here. If they disagree with me, they disagree with me. I intend to vote my conscience and so should they.

That is what they are paid for because they are Members of Parliament and that is part of the allowance that they are paid, the one that the hon. Gentleman said to GBC he thought was too low, to come here and vote their consciences. But to have to be given a free vote on whether or 950 not to decriminalise here, Mr Speaker, is really quite something. But the hon. Gentleman is wrong about so much, Mr Speaker, that even when he refers to facts which are so objectively determinable as to how people voted, he gets it wrong. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Mr Corby voted against – 955 Hon. D A Feetham: No, he abstained.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well he voted against decriminalisation then. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) ‘My conscience does not allow me to vote in favour of the amendments’: Mr Speaker, that is quite something. (Hon. D A Feetham: He abstained.) That is quite something. It really is 960 quite incredible that the hon. Gentleman tries to use that as a badge of honour in the context of what his party stands for in terms of equality – really quite something.

And then he talks about his record of standing for these things. Well, Mr Speaker, look he came here with a Private Member’s Bill on equalising the age of consent, where he wanted to rely on Opposition votes to get it through. When in exactly the same way as we were dealing 965 with the issue of this decriminalisation in 1992, our view was that it was an absolute scandal that the equalisation of the age of consent, which was a legal requirement, should come to this Parliament by the hand of a Minister for Justice’s Private Member’s Bill. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) It was absolutely disgraceful, Mr Speaker. It should have come as a Government Bill, Mr Speaker. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) It should have come as a Government Bill, Mr 970 Speaker, not as a Private Member’s Bill.

So look, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman wants to clothe himself in the cloak of being the most equal person here. But look, if it were true that he is, he will be fulsome and genuine in his support for the work that the hon. Lady has done and for the work that the hon. the former 975 Minister for Health, Mr Cortes has done. Because if there is one thing we can be absolutely proud of, it is our record in respect of equality. The hon. Gentleman has recently ensured that IVF is available for same sex couples in the same way that it is available for heterosexual couples, something that we introduced ourselves in any event, Mr Speaker.

The hon. Lady’s work in respect of equality does not need to be spelt out for people to understand how magnificent it has been. But, Mr Speaker, to try and denigrate that in the 980 context of this debate and to bring the partisan into it I think really demonstrates that the hon. Gentleman is only interested in putting on such cloak as he thinks might garner him some element of support at any particular time.

And I think it is unfortunate that this otherwise convivial debate on which we have been able to hear contributions from Members Opposite where I think we have all agreed has had to be 985 tarnished by that attempt to bring in the partisan. And if he is such a champion of equality, Mr Speaker, where was this in the pamphlet?

Because, Mr Speaker, let us be clear, we had a soul searching debate in our Executive. I had a soul searching debate at home with my wife, thinking about the future of my children. We put it in our manifesto and we have acted in keeping with our manifesto. Where is it in his?
990

Look, Mr Speaker, we did the same thing in relation to smoking in public places, another important issue of a different type. The hon. Member’s manifesto in 2011 was six of one and half a dozen of another in respect of smoking in public places. You could read, you could sense in the manifesto, this was a tightrope-walking exercise of trying to appease those who were in 995 favour of stopping smoking in public places and not annoy the smokers.

And, Mr Speaker, for the hon. Gentleman to now say that he is the champion of equality and that he has a record of standing for these things when he was the person responsible for – I cannot call it a manifesto; I do not know what to call it – the pamphlet that was put out at the last General Election, which was silent on the subject despite a letter from the Equality Rights Group dealing with the issue and asking parties to state their positions on it, is really to ask 1000 people to believe anything.

I think the hon. Gentleman was honest when he says that he thinks he is underpaid. He has such a high opinion of himself I do believe he thinks he is underpaid. And I am very grateful that he went on television to say that he thinks he should be remunerated better than he is. But everything else, Mr Speaker, just does not ring true. It does not ring true.

1005 So anyway, the champion of equality who did not put anything about equal marriage in his pamphlet, I think has added very little to the debate but I do welcome the contributions from other Members, Mr Speaker. If I may say so, though he is not here to hear me, Mr Speaker, Mr Reyes made a very interesting and poignant contribution because he has been a man of the cloth, as he reminded us. He has actually married people. And it is also important for us to 1010 recognise and appreciate the journey that he has made and the contribution that he has made today in this Parliament, and I sincerely, sincerely value it, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, the consultation also included debates organised in other fora. The Panorama and The Chronicle carried contributions from one and another. Gibraltar Broadcasting, the public broadcaster organised a debate on the subject, which I think was held at one of the cinemas. Joe 1015 Garcia contributed – not this one, another one – Eric Ellul, both of whom I think also contributed lengthy pieces in the local press on the subject of their objection to changes in the legislation. Eddy Wood, Charles Gomez – and Charles I think, is one of the people who came to see us in the context of the later more detailed consultation and he has also written extensively in the local media and social media. I think he contributed from the floor in the context of that debate.

1020 And finally, Mr Speaker, Ivan Hernandez, who was on that Viewpoint programme and who wrote for me the most touching opinion on this subject. He wrote an absolutely excellent contribution that told us not just about why he thought the rules should change from an objective point of view, from the international point of view, from the rules and mores point of view; he talked to us about himself and the discrimination he had suffered overtly and not 1025 overtly.

Because you see sometimes, Mr Speaker, we think that simply because we do not call somebody an awful name, we are not discriminating against them. And I have heard it said before, 'Well, in Gibraltar we have never discriminated against gays, we have never given them a problem.' Well look, Mr Speaker, we do not have to be Zimbabwe beating up people who love 1030 people of the same sex, or Russia who do the same thing, to discriminate against people and to make them feel excluded.

And this man's opinion explained to us that he had not felt able to return to Gibraltar to live with his parents and his extended family, his brothers etc. because of the way Gibraltar was structured in society. Sometimes the most learned, the most intelligent understand the 1035 structures of state discrimination better and therefore find them so anathema that they cannot form part of that state, and that is what Ivan told us in that piece. He said, 'I couldn't come back to be with my family because the place in which I wished to live institutionalised a discrimination against what I was.' And that was a subjective contribution that I think was amongst the most powerful things I have read in a long time in any newspaper, local, national or international and I 1040 thank him for having shared that level of his yearning for equality with the rest of the community. It was not wasted at all.

Mr Speaker, there were 2,336 contributions in the consultation – 2,336 contributions to a Command Paper is an extraordinary number. It is literally 10% of the electorate; it is almost a fifth of our vote and almost half of theirs. That is. That is an extraordinary number, Mr Speaker:
1045 1,368 comments were in favour – and the community may want to have these numbers – 1,368 comments were in favour, 955 comments were against same sex marriage and 13 were in favour of a referendum to decide the matter.

Well, Mr Speaker, every single person who wrote a contribution or who simply signed the contribution with which they agreed which had been prepared by others, deserves the thanks of 1050 the Government for having become engaged in this process with us and for their respective contributions. If I may say so, Mr Speaker, instead of each of us putting on a cloak of how we are a champion of this or of that, what we need to do and what we need to reflect as representatives of our community is how proud Gibraltar should be of itself, of the debate that we have had, of the way in which we have had it, of the amount of contributions filed and 1055 frankly, Mr Speaker, of the magnificent and peaceful way in which we do not just tolerate but we respect each other's views and we understand each other's feelings.

Mr Speaker, it is also absolutely true that the figurehead of this push for equal marriage has undoubtedly been Felix Alvarez, who has really pushed for this change in the law, along with others. But he is always the person who is prepared to put his head above the parapet and, if necessary, become unpopular in order to pursue an issue in which he believes and it is right that we should recognise the work that he has done in addressing this issue, usually with Charles Trico in tow who comes to see us.

And if I may share an intimate reference, Mr Speaker, one of the meetings that we had in the Inter-Ministerial Committee with Felix and with Charles and when we were saying to them, I was sharing my views and the views of others, I made my own views public as to why I thought this should proceed, Charles Trico said to me, 'Well, Felix and I have probably done the easy part, which is to persuade you. The difficult thing now is to find ourselves a husband!' (Laughter) I suggested, Mr Speaker, that perhaps they should talk to each other, but Felix and Charles said there was absolutely no question of that. They both deserve to be singled out, Mr Speaker, for particular mention and for the thanks of this community for having led from the unpopular front, Mr Speaker.

The contributions that we have had have really been reflections of very deeply held beliefs and of the things that define each of us as individuals and therefore as a collective define us as a people and as a community. And I think this is really the best and deepest debate that we have had as a nation for many generations.

I do not know how our laws on divorce came to be on our Statute Book, I do not know how our laws in other controversial areas came to be on our Statute Books. In those days there was less consultation, there was no Command Paper, there might have been the British Government putting pressure, it is true to say, Mr Speaker, that in some of the other overseas territories, the British Government has had to put pressure simply not just to decriminalise homosexual activity but to also to get rid of the death penalty which was still on the Statute Books of some of the other overseas territories, that may have come about in that way.

This is a change in our law that we as a community are bringing ourselves after the deepest soul searching, because it is clear that people have really, really dug deep to understand who they were, what they wanted to say to us in the context of the contributions that they were making, where we come from, where we are going to, what is it that we feel our journey should be in the future, and how this law fits into that.

Mr Speaker, it may be that we do not have debates about morality and about equality often enough these days, the hon. Lady always tells us that we must not take equality for granted and that is absolutely right. Perhaps we should be having more of these debates. Perhaps we have too many debates about finances and foreign policy and we do not pause often enough to debate who we are, where we are going and how our laws should reflect that.

I happen to think, Mr Speaker, that one of the reasons that does not happen is because the big moral questions have been settled, because the left has won all of the arguments. Before, people were not entitled to universal education; they are now because the left won the argument. People were not entitled to universal health care because the left won the argument. Dare I say it, Mr Speaker, there was no universal suffrage until the left won the argument. Some might have been pleased if there was not, Mr Speaker; they might have got a larger share of the vote just of landowners than they did of the general population.

But those moral questions, Mr Speaker, have been settled because the left won the argument, but the left must never forget that it is important to keep winning the arguments.

Mr Speaker, Gibraltar has confronted this debate with maturity and I want to congratulate not just my colleagues in Government but everybody that has dealt with us in the consultation for that maturity and for the courage and conviction that it takes to put yourself out there and to give a view that on one side or the other you know will be unpopular with the other side.

It is also true, Mr Speaker, that the debate has been had overwhelmingly in a spirit of respect. Not just of tolerance but of deep respect and I think that was most in evidence at that Viewpoint programme that I have referred to already.

1110 Some people have talked about their religion, some people have talked about their morality, some people have talked about their consciences and some people have talked about themselves. But where we have done so, we have been able to do so largely – and I think with only two exceptions that I will come to – without causing each other any pain, without calling each other any names or without judging each other. And that for me has really been the highlight of this consultation process.

1115 And so, Mr Speaker, two discordant notes really did stand out to me in the context of the debate, which I thought were an aberration in an otherwise robust but very constructive process of debate. Because I think, Mr Speaker, that there is absolutely no room in Gibraltar whatsoever for us to consider that any person is ill or disabled because of a sexual orientation, as one contributor to a GBC Newswatch programme said.

1120 Similarly, Mr Speaker, I do not believe that it is acceptable that there is any room in Gibraltar for somebody to refer to the religions of others in the context of this debate as a Bronze Age religion, as one correspondent said in the letters page of Panorama.

1125 Mr Speaker, we are a community that is defined by its respect – not just tolerance; its respect – for the views of each other and in fact, that is exactly what section 9(1) provides, that no person shall be hindered in the enjoyment of his freedom of conscience.

And, Mr Speaker, there is freedom of speech: you can say whatever you like about somebody else's religion and about somebody else's beliefs. Of course you can. But discretion is sometimes the better part of valour, when it comes to those issues.

1130 Mr Speaker, one man's food is another man's poison and I do not think that has ever been truer in respect of a debate on a law than it is in relation to this matter. That is why, Mr Speaker, on this issue I want it to be explicit that everybody on this side of the House will be voting their consciences.

1135 I say 'explicit' because all hon. Members must remember that it is implicit in every single vote. Whether it is a matter relating to financial services or it is a matter relating to morality, on this side of the House everybody always votes their consciences; but in this instance, I think it is important that we be explicit in saying that.

1140 Mr Speaker, one of the determining factors of the debate has been how this law interplays with the law on civil partnerships. I have heard time and again, statements to the effect that 'what does the gay community' – as some have referred to it – 'want, given that they have everything that they need now in the context of civil partnerships?' Well, Mr Speaker, it is true that civil partnerships were akin to marriage in just about every way possible and that the Government did not offer a defence in the context of a case on same sex adoption in the Supreme Court. Therefore, with civil partnerships and with that decision, the architecture of same sex relationships and the architecture of opposite sex relationships was in effect identical other than in nomenclature. That is one of the things that was consistently put to us, 'but why do they' – disclosing the 'them and us' aspect in some people's mentality – 'want more? They have everything already in civil partnerships – it is just a word.'

1145 Well, Mr Speaker, therein lies the rub. Because you see it is a mighty double edged sword that argument, for those who say that we should not change this law in this way, because if everything in substance has happened – if we take an attitude of substance over form – if everything in substance has happened in relation to same sex relationships that has to happen for them to be equal to heterosexual relationships, other than the nomenclature applied to the description available, then it is clear to me that those who are against this Bill have lost the argument. Because they cannot argue that moral hell and brimstone will befall this community because of the nature of the relationships. Because as part of their argument to stop this Bill, 1155 some have said, 'Look, they have got everything! They have that in the context of a civil partnership.' That demonstrates that this debate has become just about a word.

1160 And look, short of going into the etymology of the word 'marriage', which this community has enjoyed better scholars than me giving it chapter and verse on for both sides, the fact is that we are just talking now about the word 'marriage'. That is the reality, Mr Speaker.

So if you are in a debate which is about form and not about substance, solve it quickly because you are not going to need to be going on for very long because the horse has bolted, Mr Speaker. We had nowhere near the level of antipathy to the Civil Partnerships Act when it passed, that we found from some quarters in respect of this matter.

1165 Mr Speaker, is it not incredible, though, to reflect on how far we have come in less than five years since we became the Government? It is not yet 9th December 2016. We have not yet been in Government for five years. We have already legislated for civil partnerships and we are now, I trust, about to see on the Second Reading what I hope will be unanimous support for this Bill. Well, Mr Speaker, those are five short years of very, very exciting changes.

1170 Mr Speaker, that does not mean that the many years before them were not long and arduous for those who suffered those discriminations.

And it is less, Mr Speaker, than one year since we received the overwhelming mandate of the people of Gibraltar for our strongest foundations manifesto. Less than a year since then, we are implementing the manifesto commitment bringing the Bill to the House for debate on a second reading.

1175 Mr Speaker, as I have said, everybody on this side will be voting their consciences and therefore, Mr Speaker, I will ask the Clerk for a division of votes during the course of The Second Reading, Mr Speaker. There are no whips on this side, Mr Speaker, neither three-line nor four-line. There never are, but it is important that people see how we vote our consciences.

1180 Mr Speaker, just before I deal with my concluding remarks, I want to deal with the issue of clause 6B. It is important in a community which is structured like ours is structured, where 955 people are against this measure and 1,368 are in favour, according to the responses to the consultation, that what we do is structured to ensure that we do not create new hostages to fortune.

1190 Now, Mr Speaker, the Government comes to this as the main architect of the Corpus Juris of Gibraltar but also as the employer in the context of public servants. And in that sense, as a responsible employer, our role must be to ensure that we provide the service to the public – i.e. in this context the same or opposite sex couples who wish to enter marriage at a civil level – and provide the protection for our employees who wish the freedom of conscience, which the Constitution provides them, not to be involved in that whilst still being able to accede to the relevant post of Deputy Registrar or Registrar. This strikes that balance, Mr Speaker.

1195 This does not create a new discrimination because you see, Mr Speaker, in the goods and services cases, the bakers were denying the cake. We are not going to do that. We are going to ensure that the Deputy Registrar or the Registrar is there to marry those of same sex who wish to enter into those marriages.

1200 The Government is the organisation; the third parties are those who wish to enter the state of civil marriage. They come to the Government and they say, 'Can I please have a cake?' and the Government says, 'After this change in the law, you will have the cake.' But we cannot be told that inside the Government the cake must be baked by Joe or by Jerry, by Diane or by Dorian. It is a matter entirely for the Government.

1205 The Chief Secretary, the Head of Human Resources, the Head of Department, can move a civil servant who is a clerical grade, overnight from one post to another. That is the way it has always 1210 been in the Civil Service. It has always been handled in that way. It is an established practice of the Civil Service.

Now, if there is a person who does not want to officiate same sex marriages, they can simply be moved; but they might be quite happy to officiate other marriages. So the Government as employer is preserving the right of its employees who do not wish to do this, to have access to the grade of Deputy Registrar, to be able to do the other marriages which they wish to do and yet respect their 9(1) right not to do other things.

1215 And this happens across the board, by the way. There are many other examples of things that people are not required to do in the service because of their beliefs. There are people who do not work on particular days because of their beliefs. There are people who do not count votes because they do not wish to do so. Nobody is compelled to do so. Mr Speaker, there are many examples in the service of that and what the Government believes is, that it is absolutely right and proper that the Equality Rights Group, that those who are members of the 1,368 who responded saying that there should be equal marriage, should insist that Gibraltar should provide equal marriage and that we should do it in the same way as we do same sex marriage.

1220 But nobody is entitled to be married in opposite sex marriage by Joe or by Jerry or by Dorian or by Dennis. Nobody is. A Registrar turns up on that day and it will be the one with the black hair, the one with the ginger hair, the one with the blonde hair, whoever is available on that day is the person who officiates at that civil ceremony. And that is what the Government is going to ensure that we do. We are going to provide the service in the context of the goods and services cases, we are going to provide the cake.

1230 You can go into the baking shop and you can say, 'I want a cake from this shop' and you buy the cake from that shop because the goods and services legislation provides for that. But you cannot say to the baker, 'And it must be baked by Joe, or by Jerry or by Dorian or by Denise.' You are not allowed to do that, you are just allowed to have a cake. They can outsource the provision of the cake; they can get Miriam to prepare the cake. That is the reality.

1235 I see the hon. Lady shaking her head but that is the reality of the legislation, and that is what the courts have provided for, that nobody should be denied service. There cannot be a denial of service, but in the context of a public service, which is 4,000 people – the Civil Service which is half of that – there cannot be a law that says the same person must do the same thing for everybody else.

1240 Look otherwise, the hon. Lady needs to understand, people are just going to reportarse de malo, which is colloquially known as reporting in sick on that particular day if they do not want to officiate at a particular thing, or they are going to fall back on their own right under 9(1).

1245 So this strikes the right balance because we will provide absolutely the service that is required in order to provide equality to those who must have equal marriage, but we will not force it down anybody's throat that they must also officiate those marriages when – I do not understand why, but – they may have an objection to it. The hon. Lady needs to understand that we do that as an employer, an employer not just as a Government moving a Bill to bring equality, because there must also be an equal right to freedom of conscience.

1250 And if I may just round up on this point in this way, Mr Speaker, if it is right for hon. Members opposite to be able to vote their conscience and it is right for us on this side of the House to vote our consciences, and the hon. Lady has freedom of conscience and can vote against this Bill if she wanted to, why must it not also be right that a civil servant should be able to have the freedom of conscience not to do something which he is a conscientious objector to. It is a blade that cuts both ways, Mr Speaker. (Interjection by Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon)

1255 No, Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady is saying from a sedentary position that we are allowing them to discriminate under our umbrella. Look, Mr Speaker, what we are doing is ensuring that we respect our employees' freedom of conscience under 9(1) of the Constitution. Now, that we are required to do, by the way.

1260 We could do it in another way, we do not have to put it in the legislation. We could simply allow it administratively, but we believe it is right to do it in this way. I note, Mr Speaker – I do

note this – that she is leading the Opposition in respect of this amendment and that the hon. Member is a minority of I do not know whether one or two in respect of that, but she is leading the Opposition in respect of this. I think she has got three votes out of seven, I do not know whether she has got four, but I congratulate her for bringing an amendment which enjoys the support of other Members of the benches opposite according to what they have told us during the course of their speeches. I do not know whether they will be prevailed upon – i.e. whipped! – to vote in a different way or not when she puts the amendment. (Interjection by Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon)

Mr Speaker, I want to now deal with the final part of my address by saying something of what His Lordship said in the context of the opinion piece in The Chronicle of 8th September, which I referred to earlier. Mr Speaker, paragraphs 12, 13 and 14 of what His Lordship said bear reflection. And in large measure, where they are not dealing with his view of the substance of the issue but where they are dealing with his views on society and cohesion, I think they bear understanding.

His Lordship says this:

12. Issues of religious freedom and freedom of conscience may arise in the future if there are no clear safeguards in the law which would accept marriage as applicable also to same sex partnerships. It is hoped that the proposed law, if it goes through, would make sure that such issues will be clearly safeguarded, and such safeguards must apply not only to sacred places, church ministers and believers, but also to conscientious objectors and the use of property belonging to religious institutions or conscientious objectors.

– which I think deals also with the 6B point.

13. Much has been written and said about this issue and at times antagonistic language and behaviour were evident. There is no place for such attitudes in a civilised society and I am sure that Gibraltar is such a society, where all may express their opinions in freedom and there is reciprocal respect towards such opinions. Disagreement is not discrimination. People with different views of Marriage will hopefully be able to express their beliefs and convictions without fear of intimidation or hostility, and that religious freedom and liberty will be supported and defended. We do not force people to agree with us, but we ask to be granted the same freedom to hold our beliefs.

14. Gibraltar has always been looked upon as one big family with different religions and cultures living peacefully together. In spite of our different opinions and beliefs, it is my hope that all of us will continue to live together without hostile feelings alongside those whom we agree to disagree with, whatever the final outcome of this debate.

I think those words from Bishop Zammit are absolutely worth reflecting on, because they are entirely and absolutely correct as to the cohesion of this community of ours that we call Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, in the final analysis, love is love and before anything else, that really must be what marriage is about. And if love is love, then who feels that love, who do they feel it for, what sex they are and what sex the person that they feel it for is, should not be a reason to deny today, a description to one couple's love that is applicable to another couple's love.

Today, as the Bishop himself has recognised, this Parliament is not interfering with any religion. We are not changing any sacrament or trying to alter the course of nature. Today we are changing a law that got in the way of love, and in doing so, Mr Speaker, we are doing the right thing.

So, Mr Speaker, I have been dying to say these words and I hope that with our votes, all of us – not just one of us; all of us – by the power vested in us by the people of Gibraltar, we are moving forward to deliver marriage equality. And when we pass this Bill, Mr Speaker, and it becomes an Act, then we will be able to say genuinely, we will be able to say honestly, we will be able to say truthfully that which section 15 of our Constitution has been proclaiming but which our laws have been denying.

And I will therefore end, Mr Speaker, exactly as I started, by quoting section 15, because I believe after we vote and if the vote is in the affirmative, then Gibraltar will be a place where 'men and women of marriageable age shall have the right to marry and to found a family' – but only then, Mr Speaker, at last. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute? I will call the mover to reply.

1300

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, there is very little that I need to add now following the words, particularly of the Chief Minister that we have heard.

1305

The only issue between us really, Mr Speaker, has been the objection of those on the opposite benches to the proposed section 6B, other than by the Leader of the Opposition, Mr Speaker.

And I just want to make this very minor point. The consultation process, Mr Speaker, as we heard from the Hon. Chief Minister, was a long one, a serious one and one which we took in depth because it was important for us to understand what the strength of feeling was in the proposal that we were going to put to the Parliament.

Because of course it is a fundamental matter of equality when we were looking at extending the principle of marriage to people of the same sex. And of course, Mr Speaker, when we are looking at something that is so fundamental, we are not in the same breath going to discriminate against anybody, because the point of this legislation, Mr Speaker, is to eradicate discrimination.

1315

And we are the architects of our own laws, Mr Speaker, and in this process we have had a very well thought out balancing act between the expression that we find which is enshrined in part 14 of the Constitution and the protection that we find in 9(1) which the Chief Minister has explained to us already.

1320

Hon. E J Phillips: Will the hon. Lady give way? I am grateful.

Mr Speaker, just before the hon. Lady develops her response in a particular way, I just wanted to ask the question and put forward a proposition in relation to Ladele v. London Borough of Islington – that was the leading authority in the European Court of Human Rights that dealt with this issue of discrimination.

Now my understanding of the ruling by the European Court from 2 to 7 was that the majority of the European Court held that Mrs Ladele was not discriminated against by the London Borough of Islington on the basis that she refused to conduct a ceremony of marriage. So my view is that insofar as discrimination is concerned, our concern and I think that of the hon. Lady on this side of the House, there are real deep concerns about 6B in terms of potential discrimination.

1330

I was wondering whether the learned and hon. Lady had a view in relation to that, given the authority in Ladele.

1335

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, just before I gave way I was referring to our Constitution, Mr Speaker, and it is our Constitution that provides the community with these fundamental rights and freedoms, Mr Speaker. And it is our view that people are entitled to protection under 9(1) of the Constitution, Mr Speaker.

1340

Furthermore, as the hon. Gentleman is I am sure aware, before a Bill is brought to Parliament, we require it to have a certificate that tells us that it complies with the Constitution. So I do not agree with ... Well, I am grateful for the point that he has made in relation to UK legislation, Mr Speaker. I am satisfied on the basis of the advice that we have, that this Bill does not infringe the Constitution.

1345

Hon. D A Feetham: Would the hon. Lady give way?

Mr Speaker: There are certain matters that can be revisited in Committee. I do not want this toing and froing when the mover is exercising her right to reply – otherwise the debate never finishes.

1350 Hon. Ms S J Sacramento: Because, Mr Speaker, the point that I am trying to make is that when we are deciding this legislation and undertaking this balancing act, (Interjections) others agree with us as well, Mr Speaker, that while of course the fundamental point that we are moving, Mr Speaker in the amendment to the marriage –

1355 Mr Speaker: I would be sincerely grateful if hon. Members were to stop talking across the floor of the House.

1360 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, this is recognised by many, even by the Equality Rights Group, Mr Speaker, who have publicly said and acknowledged that the freedom of religious expression is important. But, Mr Speaker, as you said it may be something that maybe more appropriate for us if it is going to lead to a discussion or a debate, to discuss at Committee stage.

The only other point that I wanted to make, Mr Speaker, in perhaps cleaning up what has been said this morning, is the point made by the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition referring to a couple of pieces of legislation, Mr Speaker.

1365 It is very clear from the Bill, Mr Speaker, that there are a lot of amendments, consequential amendments that need to be made to the legislation which is why we have the power that we have in section 4, because not only do we have to make the consequential amendments to the legislation that he referred to; in fact we have to make amendments to 33 pieces of legislation to ensure that all our legislation complies with this Act should it go through.

1370 Mr Speaker, that is why I thought and I felt it important to single out the sterling work made by our lawyers in the Legal Drafting Office, because while what we see here in terms of the Act is just proposed amendments to the Marriage Act and to the Matrimonial Causes Act, Mr Speaker, there are amendments to 33 other pieces of legislation that need to be undertaken. I know that has been a tremendous piece of work that they have undertaken in a very short period of time.

1375 I have nothing further to add, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Since the Chief Minister made reference to the fact that he was going to ask for a division, I think it ought to be made clear and I am going to do so, that it is going to be recorded that two Members are absent and that nothing should be read into that. It is in this Parliament, Members, when they have to stick their necks out to vote, do not follow the practice of some other Parliaments, where some Members of Parliament who do not wish to vote in a particular way, just absent themselves from Parliament. That is not the practice here.

1380 The two Members, one from the Government and one from the Opposition, who are not present in the Chamber today are unavoidably absent and in fact they did not know that this Bill was going to come up this morning. It was not until earlier this morning that the Chief Minister gave me notice of the fact that the Bill was going to be taken today and we informed Members of the Opposition.

1385 I think the position of Members who are away, who are absent, has to be safeguarded. We do not want people sometime in the future to be reading into their absence something which is totally out of order.

1390 I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the marriage of same sex couples, and for connected purposes, be read a second time. And a division has been called for.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

1410

Mr Speaker: Does the Chief Minister wish to move to recess now?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): No Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should resolve itself into Committee to consider the following Bill clause by clause – that is to say, the Civil Marriage Amendment Bill 2016.

In Committee of the whole Parliament

Civil Marriage Amendment Bill 2016 –
Clauses considered and approved

1415

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to make provisions for the marriage of same sex couples and for connected purposes.
Clause 1.

1420

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 2.

1425 Mr Chairman: A notice has been circulated of an amendment which the Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon now wishes to move.

Reference has been made during the course of the Second Reading and the matter has been debated, but there is no reason why now in Committee, the matter cannot be revisited and the hon. Lady if she so wishes can now speak again in support of the amendment.

1430 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Chairman, I never in my wildest dreams, as a traditional Jewess that I am, thought I would ever find myself quoting the New Testament. But today I thought this quote was especially pertinent, from Galatians 3:28 –

There is neither Jew nor Gentile, neither slave nor free, nor is there male and female for you are all one in Jesus Christ.

1435 Mr Chairman, in my earlier response, I stated that the principle behind this Bill aims to right a grievous wrong. This amendment has the same intention. Members of this House should not be comfortable with the fact that a Bill with these aims should effectively grant a licence to discriminate. What does it say to our community about the commitment and conviction behind this Bill, that the access to equal rights that motivates this legislation is in itself denied by it? Is it not saying, Mr Chairman, that as a House we are so insecure about the principle of same sex marriage that we are willing to grant the Government's own employees the right to not observe one of our own laws?

1440 Does this not devalue the Bill? Does this not raise doubts about our commitment to end discrimination? Does this paradox sit easily with Members, some of whom have flown the flag for an equality that we are now calling into question? Is there actually such a thing as 'a little bit' of equality?

1445 Mr Chairman, I ask the House, could this not be seen by the people of Gibraltar as more of a cop out than an opt out?

1450 Such a question, Mr Chairman seems justified especially in the light of the Equalities and Human Rights Commission's recommendation to UK MPs that a clause like the one that is being proposed would represent a breach of human rights. As a result, governments in England, Wales and Scotland decided not to exempt registrars. In their view, religious views do not override other freedoms, including the right to equal marriage. Italy adopted a similar approach and while there was naturally some resistance, these nations persevered with the conviction that this was the right thing to do.

1455 This may only apply to jurisdictions outside Gibraltar, but should human rights not be a universal constant unrestricted by frontiers? What is more sacred, Mr Chairman, than our rights as human beings. Even in Northern Ireland where equal marriage is not yet even legal, the rights of gay individuals are still respected and protected, as was the case only a few days ago when an appeal court in Belfast ruled that a bakery had discriminated against a gay customer by refusing to bake a cake featuring a slogan that endorsed the very act of equal marriage that we are making legal today. Their ruling stated that the principles of equality should not be changed to suit religious arguments and yet we are making that particular allowance today. Should Gibraltar be playing catch-up, Mr Chairman, on an issue as important as fundamental human rights?

1460 And where do we go from here, Mr Chairman? Are we for example going to allow Registrars to refuse to marry divorced individuals, given that this is allowed by law but clashes with some religious doctrine? Can a Jewish Registrar deny conducting a civil marriage where a Jew is marrying outside the faith because his religion forbids this? This may be allowed by law and by the Constitution but it does not happen because it is wrong. We should not be drawing arbitrary lines on issues of equality, Mr Chairman.

1470 I am a person of faith, Mr Chairman, but I am also a person of compassion, and I do not believe that my religious views, which might not be shared by others, should dictate how they should live their lives where it has no impact on how I live mine. I also believe, as I think all proponents of modern democracy should, that Church and State are two separate entities and the agendas of the former should not always be the same as the latter.

1475 Later on in this parliamentary session, we will be discussing the issue of co-education. How ironic that the decision to separate boys and girls at secondary school, a decision that was partly influenced by the Church, is over 40 years later being contested on the same session that we are allowing similar influences to shape another decision. Let us not make the same mistake again.

1480 The law should never be allowed to discriminate, Mr Chairman. After all, according to the Treaty of Utrecht I should not even be here and neither should all of Jewish or Muslim faith. And yet, 300 years later this Bill as it currently stands seems to recognise that one section of our community is not entitled to the same treatment as others. Instead, the law should embrace one common to all belief systems, be it in one God, many Gods or no God at all, and that is the law of tolerance, and it is in this spirit that I lend the full weight of my conscience and humanity towards supporting this amendment and I urge all my parliamentary colleagues to do likewise.

1485 And if this amendment does not go through, Mr Chairman, I shall be sad about the message that this Bill will be sending: that it is acceptable for a person to discriminate against another by denying them a service they are employed to provide.

1490 I shall be dejected about the fact that we will be communicating to our gay community that they will not be entitled to the fair treatment that this Bill aims to ensure; that it is fine to see them as lesser class citizens against the very principles of our Constitution. I would be concerned about the precedent that this could set and I would be disturbed by what it suggests about us as parliamentarians and human beings.

Mr Chairman, surely moral backbones should not be allowed to buckle that easily.

1495 And lastly, Mr Chairman, I would like to say that irrespective of my amendment being passed or not, on the balance of the predicament currently facing gay members of our community, I wholeheartedly support this Bill in recognition of the fact that it represents a significant step forward in our maturity as a nation. While a decision not to delete this clause would fail to fully address some of the injustices in our society, I hope and pray that with time, perseverance and especially tolerance, we will eventually arrive at a Gibraltar that is truly for all.

1500 Thank you.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, the Government was not minded to accept the amendment when the hon. Lady put it initially. If we had to be persuaded to definitely not support it, she has just managed to do that completely.

1505 Because for her to suggest that we are somehow, by not accepting her amendment to our law to create equal marriage, creating a lesser class of citizenship amongst our gay community and that somehow we are communicating that is, if I may say so with respect to her, creating an embarrassment for Gibraltar. Gibraltar is not going to create a lesser class of citizen or in some way communicate to gay members of our community that that is what they are.

1510 What we are going to do is we are going to ensure that the Government of Gibraltar, which is what this side of the House represents, stops discriminating against people when it comes to entering into equal marriage. And we are going to provide that service using any one of the 2,200 civil servants employed by the Government to do so.

1515 Now, it may be, Mr Speaker, that the Chief Secretary could carry out these marriages or it may be, Mr Speaker, that a junior member could carry out these marriages, but who is Deputy Registrar at the point when the marriage comes to be celebrated is a matter entirely for the Chief Secretary.

1520 Mr Speaker, to say that by trying to walk the tightrope of these very difficult issues, we are incurring in any of the things that the hon. Lady has just read us out that we are incurring in, is to pretend that she lives in a world where section 9(1) of the Constitution does not apply. Now, the preservation of the right of freedom of consciousness is not the preservation of the right to inequality. Everybody must be treated in the same way – of course they must.

1525 But the hon. Lady needs to understand, we are employers as well as being Government. As a Government we bring here as the executive, a law to pass in order to allow equal marriage. We are the first Government in the history of Gibraltar to do that in the context of a Government Bill.

1530 We are the trail blazers, the leaders, the deliverers of equality and to hear that because we want to also protect our employees' freedom of consciousness, we somehow are the ones who are making gay members of our community, who have never been availed of any assistance or support in the context of this issue until we have been elected, making them somehow lesser citizens really lets the hon. Lady down.

1535 Look, I know that in the chair in which she sits, she needs to look for relevance and needs to look for arguments that raise her above the parapet. She has certainly done that today because she seems to have the support of some Members on the benches opposite, where the Leader of the Opposition does not take the same view as they do.

That is all very good in terms of politics but this is about much more than just politics. This is about whether we deny Government employees the operation of section 9(1) of the Constitution.

1540 Now, we have to deliver to those who are arguing for equal rights those equal rights. This Bill at last does so. This Government has delivered where no other Government has delivered. Our manifesto promised to do that where the one that she defended at the General Election did not even mention it. But you have to do it in the context of the constitutional architecture in which you operate which provides for that freedom of conscience also to be protected in respect of your employees.

1545 You could take a different attitude: you could say look, if you are not prepared to do this, I do not allow you to accede to the grade of Deputy Registrar. Well look, Mr Chairman, that would be to deny somebody advancement simply because of their own conscience. Look, I do not defend that view; I do not think it is fair, proper or in any way defensible to have the view that you do not allow yourself to be used to officiate those marriages. I think it is nonsense but if somebody has them, I also think many other views that people have are nonsense, but they are free to have them. The Constitution provides for that.

1550 Now let me turn it round for the hon. Lady. Is she saying with her amendment, that Government employees will be lesser employees because they will not be entitled like every other Gibraltarian to the protection of section 9(1) or that they have to leave Government employment in order to do so? Mr Chairman, when you subject the argument to logical scrutiny, it is embarrassing!

1560 Because look, there is one thing that she has to accept and that is the Constitution. She can like my arguments, she cannot like my arguments, whatever – we usually quite like each other's arguments – but in the context of this that she is putting now, she has to understand the ground rules. She cannot undo with her rhetoric, section 9(1) of the Constitution because that is what would lead to inequality and to some people being lesser than others, if you take away the right of freedom of conscience from people.

1565 Now, you respect that right and you respect their employment and you say, 'Okay, you will not have to do this.' But I am definitely going to do it; my Government is definitely going to deliver that equal marriage. In the context of what she said about cakes, we are going to deliver the cake. We are a bakery that will deliver a cake to whoever arrives asking for a cake, whatever makeup of orientations together they may be. I am committed to that, this Government is committed to that, we have all voted that we are committed to that.

1570 But what they cannot do, Mr Chairman, from benches opposite, and I note that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has said – well, I do not know whether he has changed his mind, you never know – has said during the course of the Second Reading that he agrees with us, perhaps for different reasons, that it should not be done, is that we can be told who has to officiate the marriage. It has to be one of those people who have been Deputy Registrar and they can be forced to do so.

1575 It is the most logical way of doing so, Mr Speaker, to have an exception, as we have here, that simply allows people who because of their conscience do not want to do this not to have to do it. Although we think they would be wrong to have those pangs of conscience and that they would be failing to see that equality is best delivered in a way that is seeing through the sexual orientations of people who turn up to marriage.

1580 But some of the things that the hon. Lady has said she has to make herself accountable for, for goodness' sake: Gibraltar survives on the basis that human rights are international and apply across the board everywhere. We rely on our right to self-determination, our international human rights. To simply respect one of our employees own fundamental rights under section 9(1) of the Constitution, whilst accepting our obligation to deliver the service, is not to somehow 1585 create a chasm in respect of human rights.

Now, if hon. Members are just doing this for politics, they are doing Gibraltar a huge disservice if they are just doing this for politics. If they are doing it for any other reason, I implore them to better understand section 9(1) of the Constitution and what it is that it says and what it is that it sets up and to think of themselves as employers in the context of this debate, as 1590 employers under section 9(1) who have the obligation to respect that right for the people who are employed for them.

And as probably the best employer in town, the Government is going to respect the section 9(1) rights of its employees, and therefore we will not accept the amendment.

1595 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I have heard a lot about the Constitution this morning. In fact I did read it myself in my own contribution to the debate. And we are hearing a lot about section 9(1) and the Government's duty of care it would appear to its employees, not to infringe on their consciences. But unless the Government intends to legislate across the board for all its employees in any capacity whether they be cleaners, doctors, lawyers, or any other person 1600 employed by them, for them to exercise their freedom of conscience ... and reading section 9(1) all it says is:

'Except with his own consent, no person shall be hindered in the enjoyment of his freedom of conscience ...'

Now, I will obviously defer to my learned colleague to my right, the Hon. Elliott Phillips, where he quotes the Ladele case which went to the European Court, and he will correct my memory, but my memory was that the ruling was the individual was not being hindered in his 1605 enjoyment of their freedom of conscience.

And again, the Chief Minister refers constantly to section 9(1) but ignores section 9(5). section 9(5) says:

Nothing contained in or done under the authority of any law shall be held to be inconsistent with or in contravention of subsection (1) or (3) to the extent that the law in question makes provision –
(a) in the interests of defence, public safety, public order, public morality or public health; or
(b) for the purpose of protecting the rights and freedoms of other persons, including the right to observe and practise any religion or belief without the unsolicited intervention of persons professing any other religion or belief, except so far as that provision or, as the case may be, the thing done under the authority thereof is shown not to be reasonably justifiable in a democratic society.

And I would like to pause on section 9(5)(b): 'nothing done in the authority of any law that should be held to be inconsistent in the contravention of subsection (1)' and clause (b) 'for the 1610 purpose of protecting the rights and freedoms of other persons'. So how does he reconcile inserting clause 6B with subsection (5)(b) of the Constitution? Otherwise any individual in the employment of the Government could rightly turn round to their supervisor and say, 'No, I am sorry I am not going to serve this divorcee because it is against my conscience.' That cannot be right.

1615 As a former employer, how could I in the bank allow an employee to say, 'No, I do not want to deal with that person because it is against my religious belief'?

By inserting this clause – and to this extent, I agree with the hon. Lady – is you are more or less condoning a form of discrimination. You are not protecting somebody's conscience; you are actually enshrining legislation the right to discriminate, and this is what I do not understand.

1620 And no, this is not politics; this is just that I do not understand why the Government feels they need to insert this clause. It cannot be to protect employees, because if that was the case, they would be doing it across the board on all legislation, not just this one.

So again, I will be supporting the hon. Lady's amendment because I do not see how it is abhorrent to not have this clause, in terms of section 9(1) of the Constitution. Section 9(5) of the Constitution applies exactly for the protection of rights and freedoms of other persons. If you insert section 9B you are doing the exact opposite.

And so, Mr Chairman, I will be voting in favour of the lady's amendment.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Chairman, I think that a lot of what the hon. Gentleman has said is just complete nonsense in the context of 9(1) and 9(5). Look, the debate that we are having is on the subject of this Bill. The only thing before the Parliament is this Bill. There is not before the Parliament, a law about who collects whose rubbish. There is not a law before the Parliament a law about any other aspect of what the Government does as a municipality or as a Government, just this issue of equal marriage. That is why we are only doing it in relation to marriage, because if it came up in some other area we might agree to protect our employees also in that way.

Now the hon. Gentleman said, why are you doing it only in relation to this? Well, I would have thought that was blindingly obvious: because that is what we are dealing with today.

And he says he does not understand what it is that is the hindrance that people might suffer. Well, it is very simple, Mr Chairman. The hindrance is that they may not be able to access that job with that grade with that salary unless they are prepared to forgo their freedom of conscience and officiate marriages which they are not prepared to officiate. I would have thought that much was obvious. Section 9(5) is there to protect against a clash of freedoms and that is exactly what we are doing with 6B. In other words, if one wants to express one's freedom of speech by going out and insulting people, the hon. Gentleman knows that there are laws which restrict that if you incur in libel or in slander. So there are laws that protect against clashes of freedoms.

Now, does the hon. Gentleman want to set up a society where you say, 'Right, you are free to do this and you are no longer free to say that you will not be a party to it'? I want to set up a society which is truly free where both, an individual is entitled to all of the same rights that anybody else is entitled and other individuals who are involved in the provision of that, so long as the service continues to be provided, cannot be singled out to be the ones that must provide it.

And that is what we are doing: we are walking that tightrope to both ensure a landmark change in our law which delivers the service to members of our same sex community of marriage to them, which they have long been denied, which I was initially against and I am now in favour of as a result of all the things I told hon. Members, for all of the reasons that has been delayed in Gibraltar, at last there is a Government that is going to deliver that full equality. And at the same time, we are not going to force some of our employees to be the officiators of that because we respect their section 9(1) rights.

Mr Chairman, I do not know that the hon. Gentleman has said anything about 9(1) and 9(5) that requires any other response. I would have thought it was blindingly obvious from reading the two sections that, particularly in the context of being an employer, one has to protect the 9(1) right, especially if you can deliver the service that we have all agreed has to be delivered under section 15.

I give the hon. Gentleman the same example I gave the hon. Lady, because I think they are not getting it, so I explain it in terms of the case involving the cake. You walk into the bakery, whatever sexual orientation you are, you are entitled to bake the cake. You are not entitled to tell the baker, 'I want the cake that has been baked by the fifth cook from the back, six from the left.' There is a cake on show, it is available, you can have the cake. I think it is wrong not to sell people cakes because of their sexual orientation.

But there are people who also have the right to be protected in the way that they exercise their freedom of conscience, however much we may completely disagree with them. And not just in the context of structuring the community as a Government, but as an employer and that is the difference that the hon. Gentleman has to appreciate: as an employer, as a public sector employer that provides services to the general public. If you are working in a bank you provide services to who you like; you do not have to provide them to everyone. We must provide the same service to absolutely everyone in this community and no-one, heterosexual or homosexual, same sex or opposite sex, is able to go into a registry and say, 'I want to be married by Dorian the blonde.' You just put your name down to be married and somebody turns up and marries you. And what the hon. Gentleman and Lady is saying is that we must force a particular individual to marry those who are of the same sex and that, Mr Chairman, is entirely wrong and unacceptable.

Mr Chairman: I hope that in the contribution that hon. Members make, even if it is in Committee, they will not just repeat the same argument again and again and again. Because otherwise we are not getting anywhere. I do not hear any fresh arguments either on one side or on the other. I do not want to curtail debate but let us not repeat ourselves.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Chairman, just on that point, I indicated in my speech that I took the view that 6B was offensive and therefore I believe that I have every right to mention this issue again and speak on the amendment that my hon. friend has mentioned.

But I would just say one thing, we do not dispute – of course I do not dispute – that the Government is an employer, but an employer has to take tough decisions. And quite frankly, where you have a civil registrar, a marriage registrar who is effectively conducting an entirely secular role, I think it is wrong for a civil Registrar or Registrar in Gibraltar to say that, 'I will not marry that individual' and for the Government to create by way of legislation a mechanism for them for the appointment of another Deputy Registrar.

How would a gay person, going into the Registrar saying, 'Please marry me' – 'Oh, I am sorry, I cannot marry you, but we will get someone appointed for the purposes of the law to marry you because I feel that my freedom of conscience is being engaged' ...? Frankly I do not agree, I think 6B is offensive and I think that it should be removed. I would agree with the hon. Lady that her amendment should be approved by this House.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Chairman, I do not know which 9(1) the hon. Gentleman read. Was it the 9(1) that says people shall only have the freedom of conscience when dealing with issues of morality or religion? I have not read in 9(1) anything that says people shall have freedom of conscience except when they are dealing with issues which are secular. That is an invention of the hon. Gentleman. Everything is secular, even the moral and the religious you are dealing with the today, you are dealing with decisions that are being made today.

People's protection is there for everything that they do. Now if you take a job, look, I would expect that people who now take a job as Deputy Registrar will know that they are likely to be asked in some instances to officiate at same sex marriages. So if they take the job in future, you might even argue that they are volent if they seek the job, but at the moment there are people there. Some of them may or may not agree with it. I have not had a discussion, I do not want to make a judgement about whether people there are or are not prepared as a matter of conscience to officiate these marriages. But for the hon. Gentleman to say that because the matter is secular then 9(1) does not apply, look, it is it absolute and utter nonsense.

1720 And the idea that gay people he says, are going to turn up and are going to be told by the Registrar they are not going to be married by them, look that also, with respect to the hon. Gentleman, is a cartoon version of what happens.

1725 Look, what happens is that people who wish to enter a civil marriage fill in a form. They submit it and they are told when the form is verified and the fee is paid, 'Okay, we have a slot tomorrow at three or we have a slot this afternoon at six.' It is about slots, and they turn up and the person who will be there will be a person who is prepared to officiate that marriage.

So no gay person, no lesbian person, no bisexual person, no transgender person, no transsexual person – I think have got them all – is going to turn up and be told they are not going to be married – far from it – or that 'this person' is not going to marry them. They are creating an edifice of potential discrimination which is just not there.

1730 What we are doing is ensuring as an employer that when the form comes in, we do not say, 'Ah Mr X, you do not want to do same sex marriages because you are always against them for whatever issue of religion or conscience or whatever - you must do it. And as I do not like you and I am your boss, you must do it. And when you say you will not, you will be subject to discrimination because you will be demoted or there will be a black mark on your file.'

1735 We as an employer are ensuring that does not happen. But not in a way that is going to create for a person of the LGBTT community any rejection or anything like that. Because we would never allow that and if that is what were happening, we would have championed the cause that they are pretending to champion now.

1740 But that is not going to happen. We are going to ensure that every LGBTT person who turns up to enter into a same sex marriage, has the service of that same sex marriage officiated for them and we are the first Government in the history of Gibraltar to lead on that and deliver on that. But, at the same time, we are going to protect our employees' freedom of conscience.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, may I?

Mr Chairman: Yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, let us be clear about my own position which the Hon. the Chief Minister has made every attempt in order to confuse. I am going to be voting against the amendment. I do not vote against the amendment for the reasons that the Hon. the Chief Minister puts forward, which is that by not including this amendment, the human rights contained in 9(1) of the Constitution of public servants might be infringed by not allowing them to basically opt out of a ceremony.

1750 And the reasons why I do not even go there is because the matter has already been determined by the European Court of Human Rights, which contains exactly the same provisions as in our Constitution. Because what happened in Ladele was that this lady refused to perform a civil marriage to gay people and she was sacked. She sued for unfair dismissal, her claim was dismissed and then she went to the European Court of Human Rights saying, 'My human rights have been infringed because I refused to perform this marriage on the grounds of my religion.'

1760 And the European Court of Human Rights said, 'Well no, there is a balance here. There are also somebody else's human rights and you cannot refuse to perform the marriage.'

1765 So I do not oppose the amendment on the grounds that the Government opposes the amendment. I oppose the amendment because I think it is wrong to force on public servants to perform gay marriage in circumstances, Mr Chairman, let us not forget, where Ladele was actually sacked for refusing to perform a gay marriage.

Are we saying in this House that a public servant that refuses to perform a gay marriage ought to be sacked? Because there is no way in a million years that I would sign up to any such law, Mr Chairman. (A Member: Hear, hear.) No way, Mr Chairman, that I would sign up to that law.

1770 And that is the reason why I am opposing this amendment. Because in a tolerant, in a respectful in the kind of society that we live in in Gibraltar, where we are respectful of each other, we should not be forcing upon people who have their own religious beliefs and their own rights of conscience, to perform a gay marriage in circumstances where, as the Chief Minister has quite rightly pointed out, somebody else is going to be performing it and therefore no one is going to be deprived of the right to marry.

1775 And let me just end with this point. The hon. Lady has mentioned the Irish bakery case, as indeed I did during the course of my contribution. I read with interest, Mr Chairman, a contribution by Peter Tatchell in The Daily Telegraph who for many people was actually the main activist in favour of gay marriage in the United Kingdom, actually saying that in cases like the Irish bakery cases, that it is wrong and that he regrets the fact that the law has actually been pushed that far into a situation where those who bake a cake in a small bakery can be sued for refusing to provide a cake for a gay wedding ceremony on the grounds of religion.

1780 I mean come on, Mr Chairman! What kind of a society would we live in today if those kinds of claims were allowed in our Gibraltar, Mr Chairman? Well certainly, I am not signing up to any amendment that could possibly lead to that kind of situation. Because in Gibraltar we pride ourselves in our openness and we pride ourselves in the fact that we live together and respect each other.

1785 Therefore I agree entirely with the Government that this clause is apposite and this clause ought to be included.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Chairman, I really do not know who the hon. Gentleman has agreed with but I think I should thank him for saying that he agreed with us, although he started saying that he did not.

1795 Because you see, Mr Chairman, his interpretation of Ladele is not one that we share, for the reasons that he came on to when he said that he supported the text of 6B, because Ladele was fired. And this amendment ensures that nobody would be fired. (Interjection)

But exactly the ... Exactly, when in fact the servant in question of an entity, public or otherwise in that case, had to go through a legal case of unfair dismissal in order to protect the position (Interjections) that she should have been entitled to.

1800 And, Mr Chairman, our view is that there has to be clear protection in our law for employees in that respect, whilst at the same time delivering the service. And where I do not think we agree, Mr Chairman, is in relation to the cake, because we take the view that the cake should be delivered. The cake should be delivered. It is just that you cannot require the baker's shop to have that particular baker bake it for you.

1805 So perhaps unusually, Mr Chairman, I will be grateful for the support although I entirely disagree with the reasoning. Usually it is both, but in this instance at least it is only the support that I welcome, but not the reasoning.

1810 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Chairman, I just have one question to ask which I cannot actually understand and it is to do with providing that service.

If a heterosexual couple attends a counter and files the form and they get offered certain slots, perhaps on the following day, but then a homosexual couple a gay couple goes and fills in the same form but perhaps does not get offered the next day because there is not a Deputy Registrar available on the next day, what would happen on this occasion? Well, it is hypothetical but perhaps ...

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I am grateful for the hon. Gentleman's practical question. Notifications are usually up for 21 days for a marriage so we have time to plan. We have six Registrars. We anticipate that we will be able to fill every slot six times over every day if we had 1820 enough chapels. I do not know whether we are allowed to call them that – enough ‘rooms’ in which to officiate civil marriages, rather than ‘chapels’, in which to do them. So at a practical level nobody is going to be even delayed because there may or may not be a Registrar who wishes or does not wish to do this.

1825 Can I just say for the purposes of the record, no Deputy Registrar has evinced to us any suggestion that they do not want to do these same sex marriages at a civil level, so nobody should think that there is a person at the Civil Registration Office who does not want to do them. This is a matter of legal theory to protect potential putative employees, not actual complaints of concerns from anybody who is not prepared to bake the cake.

1830 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: If a Registrar refused to marry a couple because the couple is black or his religion forbids them to, are there provisions in the law for such or is this law just for sexual orientation?

1835 Hon. Chief Minister: There is specific provision in our law in that respect, because the Constitution provides a protection against discrimination on the grounds of race and there would be an action against the Government as the employer of the individual for that discrimination.

1840 As the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister indicated in the earlier intervention that he made, there is no specific protection in our law on the grounds of sexual orientation. There is a law that suggests that the word ‘sex’ in the Constitution means sexual orientation in some instances, but the words ‘sexual orientation’ do not appear in our Constitution as a grounds for actionable discrimination, because the Hon. Mr Bossano and the Hon. Mr Garcia were not able to prevail upon those who were in the Select Committee at the time, none of whom are now here, to include that word, which I am quite happy to tell the hon. Lady we shall be seeking, in the context of the new Constitution, should be included.

1845 Then there would be an inbuilt actionable discrimination on sexual orientation grounds, without needing to rely on external jurisprudence. There is not at the moment but there is on the grounds of race and on the grounds of religion, etc.

1850 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: So is this something you will be looking at in the constitutional reform?

1855 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, unless the hon. Lady is turning me down, I have suggested that we should look at it together in the context of the Select Committee that she is going to be invited to form a part of. And what I am doing, I am giving notice that one of the things I will certainly be doing, is I believe, as my colleagues the Hon. Dr Garcia and the Hon. Mr Bossano believed at the time of the 1999 Select Committee, that this is an issue that must be in the body of the Constitution itself explicitly as sexual orientation.

1860 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I appreciate that, Mr Chairman, Chief Minister, because I cannot, I do not find myself able to wade in on the legal argument. There are enough lawyers here and I am not one of them.

1865 But for me this is a matter of morality and it was not in order to find a form of relevance from my lonely chair. It was more about principle and at least to know that the Chief Minister considers it a point that could be used as a discussion and perhaps hopefully to move in Constitutional Reform Committee decisions, would be a great thing for us, I think.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, coming back to the Constitution and the protection against discrimination on grounds of race orientation etc. Section 14(2) says:

Subject to subsections (6), (7) and (8), no person shall be treated in a discriminatory manner by any person acting in the performance of any public function conferred by any law or otherwise in the performance of the functions of any public office or any public authority.

1870 Subsection (3) goes on:

In this section, the expression “discriminatory” means affording different treatment to different persons ...

I will not bore the House by reading the rest, but obviously it includes sexual orientation.

How does the Chief Minister reconcile this to his purported concern to protect people’s freedom of conscience when everything in our Constitution is saying ‘Don’t discriminate against minorities’?

Hon. Chief Minister: I think it is so obvious but I suppose that he has not asked rhetorically to demonstrate what little understanding he has of the Constitution; he must have asked in wanting me to give him an explanation.

1880 What I am going to do, Mr Chairman, is ensure that you do not put a public sector employee in front of people who are looking for a service from the Government who is not able in all conscience to discharge that function in order not to incur in the area which that section deals with.

1885 In other words, we are not going to have a public sector employer, a civil servant, put in a situation where he feels because of his conscience that he has to discriminate and say to them, ‘I will not marry you, whatever the law provides.’ (Interjection) That is the position and we are not going to discriminate against those who tell us that they would be put in that position.

1890 Now, the hon. Member’s various emanations of quizzical faces that I have been treated to since he was elected in November last year continues to entertain us. But it is very simple, that is what the section provides. You cannot, if you are a public servant, discriminate against somebody in the context of the discharge of your public office. So, we are not going to put a public servant in that position. We are going to allow them not to be put in that position and another public servant will be put in that position who will not incur in that discrimination.

1895 Although I must tell him that it is not the Constitution that gave rise to equal marriage; it is the actions of this Government with our manifesto which demonstrates that we are the ones who really cared about this subject, with our consultation and with our Government Bill. That is what is going to end the discrimination, not any operation of the Constitution in that respect because the bit he has read is about the person who stands in front of the same sex couple who now have the right to accede to that marriage.

1900 And in the context of 9(1) what we are doing is allowing through 6B that the person who stands in front of that couple does not incur in that discrimination.

1905 Hon. R M Clinton: So, Mr Chairman, if I follow his logic, if he decided to pass in law an amendment where somebody decided that they did not like people’s colour, language, creed or something else, then he would remove them from that position so he did not have to effectively breach this section of the Constitution. Is that not what he is saying?

1910 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I have explained it so many times, over and over again, that my answer to the hon. Gentleman is to go back and read the Hansard over and over again as many times as he likes and to put down his beige friend for a while and enjoy re-reading this debate over and over again, because I have already provided the answer over and over again.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I am here in a constructive frame of mind, trying to make sure we pass the best possible legislation for the people of Gibraltar. (Interjection) All I get from the Chief Minister are comical remarks and nothing constructive.

1915 Now he has the benefit of having an Oxford degree in Law which I do not have, so I as most people in Gibraltar, have to read the Constitution as a lay person, because frankly that is all I am when it comes to the Constitution.

1920 But it seems obvious to me, although it is not obvious to him, what he is doing is that the Government is effectively condoning discrimination. It is as simple as that and, Mr Chairman, seeing as my contributions are not valued by the Chief Minister or anybody else on that side of this House, I will end my contributions there.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I do not think I have ever heard such an attempt to make a person a victim in this House as I have in the course of the hon. Gentleman's intervention.

Mr Chairman: Could I ask hon. Members, today has been a day when overall the standard of debating has been excellent and all the parliamentary proprieties as required by the Rules have been observed. Could I please ask them to stick to that standard?

1930 Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Chairman.

And as I was saying, the hon. Gentleman has attempted to make a victim of himself simply because he apparently wants me to explain over and over again what certain parts of the Constitution mean.

1935 Well look, Mr Chairman, there are a number of lawyers on his side of the House, he has heard on a number of occasions what their views are in relation to 9(1). I would have thought he would have more regard for their views than he has for mine, he can go back and read them all in the Hansard, but he is not paid by the public in Gibraltar, to just keep asking us the same question all over again, every five minutes and make the same rhetoric.

1940 We take a different view: we are not creating a discrimination; we are at last from this side of the House undoing a historic discrimination. We are trail blazing and we are the first movers in this. Otherwise I might ask him, why did he not prevail upon people on the other side to put in their pamphlet at the last General Election anything to do with same sex marriage?

1945 Because if they come here and talk about wanting to protect against discriminations being created, etc. what he should have done is done that in his executive committee and put something in his manifesto like we put in ours. That is what they would have done if they really cared – not pretend here to be caring now about an issue which is a non-issue and which actually imperils civil servants.

1950 And I am very pleased actually that the Leader of the Opposition takes a completely different view to him and a number of others. To see what number of others and assuming that this is the last contribution in respect of this section, I would call for a division in respect of the vote in respect of the amendment.

1955 Hon. D A Feetham: And, Mr Chairman, I emphasise that for me what is important here is that we should not be placing public servants in a position where public servants can potentially be sacked simply because their conscience as Christians, Muslims or whatever, prevents them from performing this kind of service. I think that in a small community like Gibraltar that would be wrong and that is the reason why I am voting against the amendment.

1960 Mr Chairman: May, I, the Leader of the Opposition have spoken about people being sacked. There is a post of Registrar, isn't there? Not just of Deputy Registrar; there is a post of Registrar, and therefore people would be applying for promotion to that post and therefore there is a danger. I am saying this because of my knowledge as 13 years Chairman of the PSC, where the Government always tries to be a good employer, that people should not be inhibited from being able to apply for promotion. Not just the fear of being sacked but applying for promotion as well.

Okay, I think we will put the hon. Lady's amendment to the vote and I think a division has been requested.

Questions for Oral Answer

TOURISM, HOUSING, EQUALITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES

Q589/2016

Approved care providers –
Progress

Clerk: We continue with answers to questions.

We commence with Question 589, the Hon. L F Llamas.

5 Hon. L F Llamas: Can the Government provide a list of approved care providers?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

10 Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento):
Mr Speaker, there is no list of approved care providers.

15 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I bring this question to the House because in the last Parliament session, I referred to a Government Press Release this summer, earlier this year, where the former Minister for Employment had made a suggestion that a number of recruits were being recruited from an approved care provider, and I asked for a list at that point, but because it was not actually connected to the original question, I was not able to obtain the list.

Would the Minister be able to explain why there is a mention of this in a Press Release, but I am not able to get the actual list?

20 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am not aware of the Press Release that the hon. Gentleman is referring to; it is a Press Release that was issued by the former Minister for Employment. While I am, obviously I read all Press Releases, but if it was issued months ago, I cannot be absolutely sure of the exact words that are referred to in a Press Release or not.

25 The situation is that, unlike in the construction industry, for example – and I am wearing my Minister for Housing hat – there is a list of approved contractors that the Government uses to undertake works. In order to be on the approved list of contractors, people have to meet a specific criteria.

30 We do not have an equivalent of that list or that system in Care. That does not mean that we do not use care providers, or that they are not approved, or that we do not monitor, as I have explained in previous sessions of Parliament, Mr Speaker, but technically it is not an approved list of care providers in the same manner that we have other approved contractors in the Government.

Q590-591/2016
Floating attractions in beaches –
Cost

Clerk: Question 590, the Hon. L F Llamas.

35 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm the full cost of purchasing and installing the floating attractions installed in our beaches?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

40 Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 591.

Clerk: Question 591, the Hon. L F Llamas.

45 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain how many floating attractions are in usable condition and why the decision to discontinue the use?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

50 Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the total cost to date, since the first attraction was purchased by the Gibraltar Tourist Board, in the financial year 2013-14, is a £182,795.

Mr Speaker, as the summer season has ended, no floating devices are currently in use.

55 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, obviously I would not expect for the floating attractions to be in use when it is not summer season, but I believe they have not been used throughout this particular summer season. I know that some of them are undergoing repair perhaps, due to weather, but nevertheless there is obviously a substantial investment by the Government, and I think Government should explain why they have not been used in this particular summer 60 season.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is wrong and they have; and precisely because it was this Government that made this investment, in order to provide access to the beach by users with disabilities.

65 Mr Speaker, we came into Government in December 2011; our first summer was the summer of 2012. There existed a system for bathing at the beach, which was a pergola at Eastern Beach, which of course is laudable that this existed as providing something for people with disabilities. I did not have the time in the first year to be able to improve it, but it gave me a year to lead up to the summer of 2013-14, where I worked very closely with my colleague, the then Minister for 70 Tourism, the Hon. Mr Costa, and what we did was, in that summer, Mr Speaker, we invested very heavily, in most of Gibraltar's beaches, so that they could be completely accessible to people with physical disabilities for the first time in the history of Gibraltar, Mr Speaker.

Now, to make those beaches accessible for people, Mr Speaker, we invested in infrastructure. You will recall Mr Speaker, that we have new ramps at Catalan Bay, we have 75 Mobi-Mats that take you to the sea shore, we invested in all new equipment and very importantly, Mr Speaker, we have changing stations, which we call 'Changing Places', which allow people, adults with physical disabilities, who require a lot of assistance. We have track hoists in this place, Mr Speaker, in Changing Places, so we have completely revolutionised the way that people with disabilities and elderly people with mobility issues can bathe in Gibraltar.

80 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman thinks that he can rewrite history, because one day this summer, on National Day, one of the flotation devices that we use, which is particularly used by people who are in wheelchairs to swim in the beach, suffered a puncture.

Mr Speaker, it was National Day, but that puncture was fixed within half an hour. But of course, the Opposition, who did not really do much by way of assisting people with disabilities, particularly going to the beach, want to make a big song and dance, because at the end of a summer season, because of wear and tear, one of the facilities had a puncture.

85 Bur Mr Speaker, what this Government has done and this Government's track record for people with disabilities is unprecedented, to the extent that we have physically changed the landscape of Gibraltar, particularly the beaches. Mr Speaker, on a particular day, one piece of equipment had a puncture and it was remedied very, very shortly after.

90 So, Mr Speaker, that is the state of affairs at the beach this summer.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, unfortunately I believe the Minister has gone on the defensive and misinterpreted my question. My question is about the floating attractions – the ones that you jump on; not the floating devices to assist people with disabilities.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, unfortunately and regrettably, those were all vandalised, Mr Speaker.

100 It is actually quite shocking, Mr Speaker, that the Government goes and invests in these devices and every couple of weeks during the summer, we have to get people – life guards and sometimes divers – to patch these up. Mr Speaker, it is disgusting; and this summer, when we went to get them, they had all been absolutely destroyed, Mr Speaker.

105 So this massive investment – and I apologise, because the answer is in relation to what was interpreted as a different question – I do not know how much they cost, or how much the investment was initially, but certainly Mr Speaker, it is a combination actually of vandalism, and in some of the beaches that are not protected, then it is because of the exposure to the elements that it is not sustainable, and it costs a lot of money to repair and maintain continuously. While some of the damage is as a result of the weather, the majority of the damage, Mr Speaker, is literally when we see it, is that they become slashed. People go in the middle of night with, I do not know, pen knives or whatever, and slash, Mr Speaker. It is very sad and very regrettable that there are people with malice to that extent, and Mr Speaker, it was not feasible to continue.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I was completely unaware that that was the situation and that is the reason why the Government has discontinued their use. Obviously, on this side of the House we condemn any sort of vandalism imposed on these attractions, which obviously were enjoyed by so many members of our community, especially the younger ones.

115

Q592/2016
Visitors to Upper Rock –
Methods of public transport

Clerk: Question 592, the Hon. L F Llamas.

120

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, further to Written Question 47/2016, can the Government provide an updated schedule, together with a definition for the term 'other' contained in the previous schedules?

125

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the term 'other' refers to visitors made up of those accessing the Upper Rock through the cable car and those visiting the 100 Ton Gun exhibition.

130

The updated schedule requested is public information and is available online.

135

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, at the time of presenting this question to this Parliament, the information was neither in the same format as the schedules I have been provided by Parliament, nor was it updated, so that is the reason why I brought this question to Parliament, otherwise I would not be wasting her time and mine.

140

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I specifically checked, obviously, before answering, preparing the written answer. When it was answered it was prepared in this manner and I was told that the information was uploaded online a week before the question was asked.

145

Clerk: Question 593, the Hon. L F Llamas.

150

Hon. L F Llamas: Can I just come back to that question? I have just managed to log in. The information provided on the actual website is not the one that I have been getting through Parliament; it is actually consolidated, per month and per year.

155

The one I am always asking for in Parliament, since the new Policy on the Upper Rock came into place, was a breakdown per public service vehicles, walking tourists and any other tourists going up the Nature Reserve. That is the difference between the schedule I get in Parliament and the schedule that is on the Government website, so the information is not in the public domain.

160

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I have the schedule that is in the public domain. If he wishes to have a further breakdown, then I am happy to provide him with a further breakdown, but, Mr Speaker, the answer that the hon. Gentleman seeks is not obvious and apparent from the question. But if that is what he is seeking, Mr Speaker, then that is not an issue. It is information that has been provided in the past, information that I am happy to provide if he were to request it clearly, which I am sure that he is doing it now, and it is information that I can provide.

165

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I have asked for the schedule twice, since we started the summer policy and I am actually referring to the written question for December 2016, where the schedule is ... I am asking for an update as one on that schedule, so if I need to actually spell out what is in the schedule, then I will have to, but if I think I am referring to a previous question on a schedule, then I do not think I have to spell it out each and every time.

170

But that is my position.

Q593/2016

Foreign licensed vehicles visiting Upper Rock – Number turned away

165 Clerk: Question 593, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide statistics of how many foreign licensed vehicles have been turned away at the entrances to the Upper Rock Nature Reserve?

170 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): No Mr Speaker, the Government, does not keep a record of this.

175 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I would like to know how this Government actually analyse its sustainable tourism policy, if it is not monitoring the results and the consequences of this policy.

Sustainable tourism is composed of three important factors: it is the economic, the environmental and it is also the social. I think Government would have been wise to actually monitor the situation at the point of entry and understood whether the policy that is being implemented is being well received by the tourists.

180 For example, if we take into account – which is quite astonishing – an increase in reviews on a forum such as Trip Advisor, which has 70 reviews on Gibraltar rating it as terrible, 35 of which are from the last six months, I think Government would do wise in monitoring what the situation and the consequences of this policy, because obviously, I think the social aspect and what people are saying on these public forums should be monitored at inception, rather than wait for people to drive up, to be told they cannot go up the Rock and then plaster it all over the internet.

190 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the way –

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Where is the question?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: There was one at the very beginning, before the ramble.

195 Hon. L F Llamas: How would the Government analyse the sustainable tourism policy (Interjection) if it is not monitoring the results of the policy? (Interjection by the Hon. Chief Minister)

200 Mr Speaker: Perhaps I should remind hon. Members, the purpose of questions is not just to seek information; it is also to urge the Government to adopt a certain course of action on a certain policy. Perhaps what the hon. Member is after is precisely that.

The hon. Lady has said, 'No, we do not keep such a record'. You are making the point that it is relevant to do so. In that instance, I would suggest that a proper supplementary would be to urge the Minister to pursue the line of policy that you would like her to.

205 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I will explain to him how the Government monitors how successful our tourism strategy is. This, Mr Speaker, is as a result of an unprecedented investment in our tourism product and in particular, in the Nature Reserve and in the Upper Rock.

210 Mr Speaker, I have the schedule that I was referring to before – the one that I said is available publicly online – and these figures show that for the last few months, our average number of visitors to the Upper Rock ... not our average number; our total number, to the Upper Rock are on average, month on month, 10,000 visitors up from the same month last year.

215 So that is how we quantify it, Mr Speaker: hard facts, hard figures, our tourist numbers are up. Our visitor numbers to the Nature Reserve are up.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, the numbers may be up, but if you take, for example, a review of somebody – and I will quote this one – a driver in Gibraltar in a Spanish-plated car, gets told 220 50% up the Rock, that the entrance is only available to locals, and you have to go find an alternative route. ‘Bearing in mind that I have a British passport, we had to walk 50 minutes to find loads of cars parked around and we were left with no alternative but to pay 12 euros to be able to walk up. The only positive out of my trip to Gibraltar was the cheap fuel’. So, even though I appreciate that Government looks at its statistics, and statistics speak for themselves, but I do believe and I would urge Government to see beyond the figures and analyse what 225 people are taking back with them.

Will the Government change its view and actually analyse what people are taking back with them home to spread to their friends and families?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I do not know what the hon. Gentleman is reading. I 230 do not know where it is from, I do not know who reads it, I do not know what date it is.

Certainly, of course, there has been a change in policy and there are people who visit Gibraltar and may be getting used to the new policy. Certainly the Tourist Board makes every effort to be able to communicate that policy. On occasions there may be people who may not read the policy, who may not learn the policy and find themselves up the Rock.

235 But Mr Speaker, Gibraltar’s not the largest country in the world – all they need to do is drive down and park and they would be able to find other means of accessing the Upper Rock, Mr Speaker –

A Member: In the 1,000 car parks. (Interjections)

240

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the important thing here is that this Government had a very clear vision and a very clear strategy in relation to tourism in Gibraltar and the figures; particularly in the Upper Rock, speak volumes.

245 And Mr Speaker, I just want to add to that one final point that wherever you go, there will always be good reviews, positive reviews, negative reviews. I am sure, Mr Speaker, if one were to go to Disneyland and then look on the various websites where people are given the opportunity to comment, I am sure that among the lots of positive ones – as indeed, we do receive a lot of positive ones about Gibraltar – there will be negative ones. That’s life, Mr Speaker. The world is not perfect and you cannot please everybody all of the time.

250 But of course, if criticisms are brought to our attention, we will always look at them and we will always strive to improve, Mr Speaker, but the figures and the facts show that we are improving, and that we are improving significantly.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, on that point the hon. Lady has said the figures prove that 255 we are improving significantly and indeed she also said that the figures are on the up and up.

Mr Speaker, can I draw the hon. Lady’s attention to the Tourist Survey Report 2015, and in particular page 5, which is Tourist Expenditure in Gibraltar, from 2005 all the way to 2015, and if she looks at the amount of money spent by tourists in 2011, it was £279.79 million. Today, it stands at £199 million, it is actually gone up from the 2014, where it dipped at a £168 million.

260 Therefore the figures do not show an up, certainly not in tourist expenditure, and can the hon. Lady confirm that some of the decisions that the Government has made in relation to the Upper Rock are not seeping into these figures that we see here, or are they attributable to something else?

265 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker – and that question is somewhat far removed from the original question, which relates to visitor numbers in the Upper Rock, and whether we monitor people who are turned away. Because if we were, from that, were to follow through to a logical supplementary, Mr Speaker, it would be whether people are spending less money on the Upper Rock and, Mr Speaker, what we are looking at is the figures.

270 I am perfectly aware of the survey. I am perfectly aware that obviously what we need to do is make sure that ... Our primary objective has to be to ensure that we have more visitors to Gibraltar. When visitors come to Gibraltar, we need to ensure that they spend as much money in Gibraltar as possible, but Mr Speaker, one thing is the report and the content of the report – but I would not, Mr Speaker, relate that to the policy in relation to the Upper Rock whatsoever. In fact, I do not know what report the hon. Gentleman is referring to and what the date of that 275 report is, but I doubt that that has any connection with the policy, given that the policy that we are referring to was introduced recently and I think that that report ... I am not sure which one it is, but it may be that it predates the policy. (Interjection) Therefore Mr Speaker, it predates the policy.

Q594/2016
Signage around Gibraltar –
Plans to update

280 Mr Speaker: Question 594, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, does the Government have any plans to update and renovate the signs in Gibraltar, in particular tourist sites, parking areas and last but not least, the Royal Anglian Way Suspension Bridge?

285 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, signs in Gibraltar are updated and renovated as needed.

290 In respect of the Windsor Bridge at Royal Anglian Way, a new sign is being produced and should be in place in the next few weeks.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I do not know how well they are renovated because some of them are quite appalling – due to vandalism, because they are outdated, for whatever reason – but they simply do not seem to be maintained. Actually, they seem to disappear when they get 295 too bad and they do not seem to actually be replaced. I have seen that happen on one occasion.

But referring to what I was saying before, when tourists go up the Rock and they get turned away and they say, ‘Well, Gibraltar is a very small place, they just need to turn back and find parking’, one particular place, which is the 1,000 parking space area built in the Midtown, does not actually have a parking sign to direct you to it.

300 If you come from the frontier, unless it has happened within the last couple of days, but if you come from the frontier, you get directed to Ocean Village parking and then eventually you get directed to Alameda Estate parking area, but there is no sign in between to tell you to turn left at King’s Bastion and park in that public parking area. So will they actually be updating these signs any time soon; or are people expected to carry on second-guessing and hoping that they 305 have an updated TomTom?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as I said originally, signs are updated and renovated as needed. Clearly one was needed for the new car park and I understand from the Minister for Transport that it is now up – it is already up. (Interjection) It is about to be put up.

310 Mr Speaker, the thing is that when we need signs, it is not like one can go to a supermarket and buy a sign. Signs need to go before the planning authorities and they need to be procured and it is the whole system that needs to be in place, Mr Speaker, but I understand that it will be in place very soon.

315 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, of course they need to go to planning and through the planning process, but one would think that if you are building a bridge, you go through the planning process and you include a sign; and if you are building a multi-storey car park, you go to the planning commission and say, 'By the way, I want a sign', and you implement everything at the same time – (Interjections and banging on desks)

320 So, can we have a date, by when these signs will be up?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, it is in the process. I understand that it will be ready very soon.

325 But Mr Speaker, it is actually quite funny, because I was in touch with someone who was asking me, particularly for a traffic sign, who told me that he had been chasing the Government for a traffic sign for in excess of ten years. So while the hon. Gentleman may wish to pontificate as much as he does in relation to traffic signs, it is something, Mr Speaker, that seems to be something that historically has not been as straightforward, but certainly Mr Speaker, I can assure everybody, that in terms of, particularly in terms of signs that will impact and assist 330 tourism, that these are being reviewed, as I said initially Mr Speaker, to make sure that we have as fluid a system as possible.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, with your leave, I have a supplementary. It is on signage and it does relate to the Upper Rock, but it relates more to the previous question, but I think that 335 there is relevance as well, when we are talking about signage to the Upper Rock in general.

Mr Speaker, I obviously live in the Upper Rock. I drive up to the Upper Rock and through the Upper Rock every single day and I can tell the Hon. Minister that at times it is absolute pandemonium at the entrance to the Upper Rock, because of the fact that mainly Spanish registered vehicles get to the Upper Rock, get to the barrier at the Upper Rock and then they are 340 forced to turn back. If there were proper signage – either at the bottom, at the actual Mount Alvernia entrance, or elsewhere, that foreign registered vehicles cannot drive into the Upper Rock, then it would prevent that kind of pandemonium from occurring. Certainly it would prevent irate tourists as well, whose opinion may be seeping in and are being expressed in Trip Advisor, as the hon. Gentleman alluded to earlier, because of course it is very frustrating to drive 345 all the way up there and then, at the barrier, be told that you have got to turn back. A simple signage would deal with that and I would commend that to the Hon. Minister.

Does she not agree with me?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Of course I agree that we can always look to see to facilitate 350 processes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I may, as signage can always be a frustration when you are in a strange town and do not know quite where you are going, often it has happened to me in Spain, so I can imagine it is similar for tourists in Gibraltar, despite the small area.

355 Can I just ask if the Minister, or if the Government would consider actually conducting a review of the signage in general, just to ensure that it is providing tourists with the necessary information and probably at the same time alleviating traffic, to some extent, by not having them stopping in the middle of the road and causing disruption?

360 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, that is already happening. In fact I requested one a couple of months ago and I expect it shortly, but now I expect it to be handed to my colleague, the new Minister for Tourism. But I did request that a while ago, because what I want to see is a more holistic approach to the system.

365 When it was highlighted to me by this gentleman who had been asking for this sign in excess of ten years, that is when the penny dropped.

370 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just returning to my supplementary – we are not, on this side, actually on this, politicising this particular issue; what we are trying to do is to make constructive suggestions for the improvement of the service – the hon. Lady has said yes, we can strive to improve, but the question that I have asked related to the signage for tourists to be told at an early juncture that they cannot drive into the Upper Rock, and is that within the plans of the Government to include such signage, either at the bottom of Sunset Close, or alternatively ... well, actually and on the other side, which is the Mount Alvernia side, in order to prevent those kind of scenes that I have alluded to?

375 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, the question of signage, as I have just said, is part of a wholesale review that I requested.

380 But having said that, Mr Speaker, the Tourist Board, at the outset, when the change of policy was introduced, did employ people to give out leaflets, not only at the entry points to the Upper Rock, but also at the frontier, and have people actually be down the hill in the area where the hon. Gentleman is referring to, in order to direct tourists to the change of policy, initially when the policy was changed.

But in terms of the signs, as I said, I commissioned a report to look at a more seamless way at having signage in Gibraltar.

Q595/2016
Tourism policies –
Publication

385 Clerk: Question 595, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain what tourism policies are currently in place, and whether these will be clearly set out when appropriate on its website, brochures, etc.?

390 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Government's tourism policy is very clear: to attract tourists to Gibraltar.

395 We achieve this by: investment in Gibraltar as a destination, which we have at unprecedented levels; by marketing the destination; working with, and continuously developing relationships within the industry; and with events-led tourism, on which we co-operate with other Departments and in particular, the Ministry of Culture.

Our strategy is working extremely well and the figures speak for themselves.

400 I will forgive the hon. Gentleman, as his clear lack of experience in these matters is obvious, but it is not normal or customary for such policies to be on a tourist board website or brochure.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, obviously the basic policies that one would expect should not be ... I have actually put there 'when appropriate'. You would not expect what the Minister has just said to actually be on a website. That would make common sense to just implement them.

405 I am referring to policies such as the Upper Rock ban, that for example when you go to the visit Gibraltar website, you are greeted with, and I quote, and this is live:

No unauthorised private vehicles are permitted in the Nature Reserve, however a number of walking, taxi or bus tours are available.

410 So, this website omits to tell you that you can go walking without having to go on an actual tour, because it is implying that you can go on a walking tour, and it is also omitting the fact that if you are in any way disabled, and either have a blue badge or a doctor's letter – I do not know exactly what the policy is – that you will be exempt from this policy and you will be able to go in your own vehicle to the Upper Rock.

415 So, it is this type of policy and any other one which may be implemented, but we do not know, because obviously we got to find out about this policy through sheer hit-and-miss and rumours going round town that this policy had come into place. It was nowhere on the website and it was nowhere to be seen.

So I am asking whether these types of policies will be updated and will be made clearer on websites. And I appreciate her thinking that I am being foolish in asking this question, but I am looking at this from the point of a tourist who goes into the official website and gets this policy to read and does not get the full length of the policy.

420 Will she be updating this any time soon?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I think I just heard the hon. Gentleman say that he was reading live from the Tourist Board website. It means therefore, Mr Speaker, that the policy is live on the Tourist Board website. The Tourist Board website says that no unauthorised vehicles are allowed in the Upper Rock.

425 Clearly, I think it is pretty clear that a tourist will not assume that they are authorised to go into the Upper Rock. The message is on the website, Mr Speaker, it is very clear. I honestly do not understand: the website is live, so a tourist who wanted to go into the Visit Gibraltar website this afternoon because he wants to go to Gibraltar tomorrow will have a notification on the website that says that unauthorised vehicles are not allowed in the Upper Rock.

Hon. L F Llamas: So, can the Hon. Minister then explain how somebody who wants to go hiking up the Upper Rock is supposed to derive that they can go hiking up the Upper Rock, without having to go on a tour, through the website, because it is not clear; and how somebody who suffers from disabilities, or is disabled in any way, can be exempt from this policy? That is not either clear on the website.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: I do not understand the first supplementary, Mr Speaker, because what the website has is a prohibitive notice relating to vehicles. It does not say that you are not allowed to walk. I do not understand the first supplementary.

440 And insofar the second supplementary, Mr Speaker, there is always an ideal level of information that one wants on a website, but the website also has a space that invites you to contact the Tourist Board if you want any particular details, or an email can be sent and the details are on the website.

445 If somebody, on the website, were to reach a particular site on the website and wants further information, then that information could be sought and that information would be available. But having said that, that the website can have a little bit more information: I will look at the website again and see what else we can do to update it, because that is the beauty of a website, Mr Speaker, it can be updated very quickly if there is any need for improvement.

450 Hon. L F Llamas: Yes and obviously this is only one form of or one way of communicating with tourists abroad. There are people who may not have access to online and will come as they have come in the past and find out, but obviously we cannot pre-empt every occasion.

But what I am trying to get at is the wording – it is not making a song and dance on the website of what the policy is. It is the actual wording which says:

... however a number of walking, taxi or bus tours are available.

455 So there is nothing in that wording that allows you to interpret that if you want to go walking by yourself, you can still do so; and obviously I think the disabled exemption should also be on there.

460 Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I know that we are using our old portfolios during this session in Parliament, but clearly it is a matter I have an interest in as the new Minister for Tourism. It just seems to me that the interpretation that the hon. Member is giving to that is plainly wrong. It talks of walking; it talks of taxi – it does not necessarily have to be a taxi tour; it can be a taxi ride; and then it talks of bus tours. So the reference to ‘tours’ is bus tours. So you can go by walking, you can go 465 by taxi, or you can take a bus tour. It is simple – plain language!

Mr Speaker: I just wonder what one can do, when one does not have any access to websites, like myself! (Laughter) I do not seem to be able to do anything these days! (Interjections)

470 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the question has been asked in good faith. I now have it in front of me:

No unauthorised private vehicles are permitted in the Nature Reserve, however a number of walking, taxi or bus tours are available.

I think it is ambiguous. Can the hon. Lady take it from us that if we find it ambiguous, somebody who does not understand the English language, or the English language being a second language or a third language, is also going to find it ambiguous?

475 All we are trying to do, from this side of the House, is to be helpful in relation to this. We are not trying to catch the hon. Lady out and therefore to ask a question, otherwise I am in breach of the rules, will she at the very least look at this, consider it and then come to a conclusion, based on what she has heard today, about whether this is or is not ambiguous? (Interjections)

480 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I said before that things would be looked at, but in relation to his question, well no, because I will not be looking at it. I will leave that to the hon. Gentleman to look at in future!

But of course, I will, of course – (Interjection) This hon. Gentleman, who is now responsible for the Nature Reserve and for the sites, Mr Speaker.

visitgibraltar.gi website–
Plans to make multi-lingual

485 Clerk: Question 596, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, what plans does Government have to make the visitgibraltar.gi website multi-lingual?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

490

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the website and its content are being reviewed.

495

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, what plans does Government have, in terms of when the review will take place – well, it is under review, but – when it will actually go live? Is it in talks with service providers to provide the new platform? How far in the process is Government actually involved with updating the actual site?

500

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I was looking at alternative proposals for the website. I cannot give more information than that, because it has not been developed that far yet.

Q589/2016

Approved care providers – Further supplementary questions

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, am I able to come back to Question 589, the list of approved care providers?

505

Mr Speaker, the original question I asked back in September was Question 484, and I asked whether Press Release 371/2006 could be elaborated a bit further in giving us further details of what Government had done in order to create these 50 new care worker vacancies. With the answer from the Hon. Mr Costa, a Government-approved care services provider, Grand Home Care, had been engaged in providing, at that point in time, 20 of the vacancies. So as a result, I asked a supplementary of: who were the Government's approved care service providers? And obviously, the Minister, at that point, did not have the information – (Interjection by Hon. Miss S J Sacramento)

510

I said that the Minister Costa, in his reply to my original question, mentioned Government-approved care services providers, so knowing that there should be – deducing from that answer, that there is – an approved care service providers list or schedule, if the Minister, if she has not got the information today, will forward it within the next couple of days, after this session is over?

515

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, because my answer does not actually change, because that answer given by Minister Costa is not necessarily incompatible with the answer that I have given, for the same reason that I gave when I answered and for the same reason that I have given the Parliament in the past.

520

In terms of the mechanics, it is not like there is a list of endless providers as we have in the construction world, or we may have a list of a variety of people. We know, from previous answers we have given in the Parliament before, there are only a couple of service providers who provide care, and what I think is meant by that, is that it is approved in terms of the care that is provided, for the reasons that I have given in the Parliament in the past, as opposed to having a list of contractors.

525

A care provider, when it provides care to the Government, has an arrangement with the Government and the Government has to be satisfied with the level of care that they are providing, and that is what makes them approved. If something were to not satisfy the Government in the care, then they would not be approved. And that is the difference, I think, of what is intended, as opposed to having a list of care providers.

530

When I said that there is not a list of care providers, there is not a list of care providers. Because there is a word or that wording appears in a press release does not change the answer

535 that I have given. It is not that there is a list that exists that I am not aware of or I am not familiar with; there is not a list as such.

Hon. L F Llamas: So would I be right in saying, in this case, that all care services providers are Government approved, and that there are none which are not approved? (Interjections)

540

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I think, part of the reason for the confusion in the point that the hon. Member is making, is that he may be aware that originally, the approved contractor list was limited to certain activities and that earlier this year, we extended it effectively to anybody selling, or 545 supplying, or doing work for the Government. That is not approved by the Department that uses the contractor; that is approved by the Department that had the original list, which originally consisted of construction companies, cleaning companies and security companies. I think at one stage, I gave the Leader of the Opposition the list and I said to him it was being added to, not because there were more of the same activities, but because there are new activities that are 550 being added to it, in the sense that the logic is, look, given that the original list, which was started by the previous administration, included a condition, for example, that people have to be up to date with their social insurance, up to date with their tax, have to give first opportunities in vacancies to people who are registered unemployed, it makes sense to extend it to as many activities as we can, because it is clearly a useful thing to have, to monitor whether 555 the people that are being paid by the Government are actually paying their due things.

But I think that is where the approved list concept comes from.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, given that the Minister has said that they get approved in the sense of the level of care that they provide and there is only a number of care service providers, 560 I think it would be beneficial for the community, given that there is nobody who regulates them, other than Government, when they use them, that the names be listed of who has been approved as a Government care service provider, for the sake of those in the community who may think that all of them are approved, and there may be one which is not being used by Government because the standard of care falls below the level expected.

565 I would urge the Minister to provide us with a list of Government-approved care services providers, in order to reassure the community that the care provider that they are using is also approved by the Government, given that there is no regulatory authority in Gibraltar to regulate these companies.

570 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: There was no question –

Hon. L F Llamas: Will the Minister look into this and provide Parliament with a schedule of the Government-approved care services providers?

575 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, there is no such schedule.

Q597/2016
Wifi hotspots –
Tourism expenditure 2016-17

Clerk: Question 597, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain what the expenditure of 'Wifi Hotspots' contained within the Government estimates 2016-17 under Tourism is in relation to?

580 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, this relates to Wifi hotspots provided at various locations in Gibraltar where visitors and residents can access certain websites for free.

Hon. L F Llamas: Does the Minister have a list of where these hotspots are?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, these were covered in the recent sitting of this House, but again, the locations are: the Apes' Den; Cable Car Top Station; Camp Bay; Casemates; Catalan Bay; Coach Terminus; Cruise Terminal; Eastern Beach; Europa Point; The Frontier; Garrison Library; Gibraltar Museum; the Great Siege Tunnels; John Mackintosh Square, Little Bay; Moorish Castle; 100 Ton Gun; Ocean Village, Queensway Quay; Sandy Bay; and St Michael's Cave.

590

And the websites that can be accessed are: Visitgibraltar.gi; Gibraltar Airport; Government of Gibraltar; Gibraltar Bus Company; and Gibraltar Port Authority.

Q598/2016

Persons with disabilities – Accessibility signs and maps

Clerk: Question 598, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, does the Government have any plans to update signs and provide accessibility maps for persons with disabilities on how to move around in Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Department of Equality is already working on a holistic programme with the Gibraltar Tourist Board and the Technical Services Department.

605

Hon. L F Llamas: Does the Minister have any idea whether the plans will be implemented before Christmas, after Christmas, in 2017 – is there an actual timeline?

610

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, it is part of a bigger accessibility project, so it is unlikely to happen before Christmas, but it will happen as soon as it can possibly happen.

Q599/2016

Shop Mobility Contract – Expenditure under Tourism

Clerk: Question 599, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain what the expenditure of 'Shop Mobility Contract' contained within the Government estimates for 2016-17 under Tourism is relation to?

615

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

620 Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento):
Mr Speaker, this relates to a maintenance contract for the provision of what was previously provided at the Shop Mobility Centre.

625

Q600/2016
Mons Calpe Mews and Beach View Terraces purchasers –
Allocation of returned rental housing

Clerk: Question 600, the Hon. E J Reyes;

630 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, sir, can the Minister for Housing, provide details of how many rental homes have been allocated and/or assigned by Government, inclusive of room composition of said homes, from the stock returned by purchasers of both Mons Calpe Mews and Beach View Terraces?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

635 Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento):
Mr Speaker, 16 flats have already been allocated or assigned by Government from the stock returned by purchasers of both Mons Calpe Mews and Beach View Terraces.
The room composition is as follows: six 2rkbs; eight 3rkbs; and two 4rkbs.

640 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, is the Minister aware if there are still any other Government rental homes to be returned, because the purchasers are still in the process of doing that; and if that is the case, does she have at least an approximate estimate whether it is going to be just a small handful or in the 20s?

645 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: There are more than 16 that are returning; it is just that because the question was in relation to those allocated or assigned. More have been returned, but they are in the process of being cleaned and refurbished.

650 Now, off the top of my head, I do not think that there are ... I think most people have completed and if maybe there are a couple who have not completed, I do not think that those will be returning more to the housing stock. This is a different question.

There are more coming into the housing stock, but not because of completion: because they are still in the pipeline, they are being refurbished and they are being cleaned.

Q601/2016
Tenants –
Urgent decanting since April 2016

Clerk: Question 601, the Hon. E J Reyes;

655 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of how many tenants required urgent decanting from their homes since 1st April 2016, indicating the reason why, the date when said decanting became necessary and the date when the tenants were able to return to their home?

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, since 1st April, six tenants have required urgent decanting from their homes: one in June, two in July, one in September and two in October, five as a result of flooding and one as a result of a fire.

665 One tenant returned to their flat in June, two returned in July and one in September. There are two tenants currently in hotel accommodation.

Hon. E J Reyes: And may I ask, arising from that, Mr Speaker, the decision that the flats, or the homes, that required to be decanted on an urgent basis, who certifies or who decides when the said home is ready to return?

670 There seems to be ... I am not trying to attack Government; I am trying to come to an understanding with them that there seems at times to be tenants, who say, 'Government has said the temporary accommodation is going to cease to be available for me as of Friday, they want me to move back', but yet, they claim that the housing official or whatever has still not been able to sign the papers certifying that the house is now suitable, re-habitable and some are claiming that their electricity supply is not available and so on.

675 Is there someone or a system whereby certain certificates of re-fitness for habitation is available? Does the Minister have some information in that respect available?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the situation that the hon. Gentleman is alluding to is very unusual because what we do is, in the normal course of things – because we are talking about repairs – regardless of the reason for the repairs, whether there is decanting or not, so repairs will be sent to be repaired, whether it is by the Housing Works Agency, or by a sub-contractor, depending on the works that are required. Once the works are completed, they will then be certified by the Inspector and Housing Department, then the person will be asked to move back in.

680 It is the Housing Department that decants the person and provides for the alternative accommodation. If the Housing Department has now remedied any defects in the flat or in the premises, then the person will be asked to move in. You do not do one without the other, you cannot – if you have decanted the person, you cannot force the person back in, unless the premises are fit for them to return, but clearly, at the same token, if the premises are fit, then the person needs to return. But then, that is an internal process that will be dealt with by the Inspector and then by the Housing Manager, but I have never heard of any gap in between.

Hon. E J Reyes: No, the gaps that I have heard, Mr Speaker... We are talking about urgent decanting, yes? So, I think the Minister gave me the good examples before: flooding or fires, things that are unexpected, it happens. We react on humanitarian grounds, we decant the family, we carry out the repair works.

695 There are claims, and I ask the question, Mr Speaker, because over the course of the last few months, there have been more than one that says, 'I've been told that I can go back, but my house still doesn't have electricity supply because no one has certified that the electrical circuit is now available for use', and so on, and I am trying to determine, so that in many ways I can work alongside the hon. Lady for when these constituents come up and say, is there someone who ultimately has to sign some certification? When there are new constructions – and Minister Bossano can certainly guide on this one – someone has to sign and say, 'Right, it is certified that they've now met the conditions, and so on. We accept it and therefore the houses can be issued.'

700 I am trying to apply a similar sort of situation in these cases, where unfortunately, urgency has required them to be decanted, and some tenants are claiming, 'I've been pushed back, because they say that the accommodation is only temporary, that has to be returned to the stock and so on' – all that is acceptable, but ultimately, whose responsibility is it for signing on the given dotted line, saying 'this house is now in a condition where you can move back in'?

715 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, any works are verified, certified by or on behalf of the Housing Works Agency. I certainly have never been called because of a situation like that, but if something odd like that were to arise, then I would ask the hon. Gentleman to call me and I am sure we can find a solution, but certainly nothing of that nature has been brought to my attention.

720 Maybe that sometimes, Departments may have slipped, somewhere along the line, but that is certainly not the policy and not the practice as far as I am aware. There may be an exception, it may have happened to somebody who went to see the hon. Gentleman instead of going to the Department, who would have reported it, but surely, as the hon. Gentleman says, I am happy to work together if this were to happen.

725 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister has said, should I come across a situation, I can then approach her, so I think that should settle the matter for today and we will continue working jointly for the benefit of tenants.

Q602/2016
Eviction of squatters –
Legal costs since April 2016

Clerk: Question 602, the Hon. E J Reyes.

730 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing say how much expenditure has been incurred in respect of legal costs relating to the eviction of squatters from Government rental homes since 1st April 2016; providing a breakdown showing the number of homes involved and to whom payments were made?

735 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, since 1st April 2016, a total of £2,585 has been paid to Triay & Triay in respect of five eviction proceedings.

Q603/2016
Repairs to rental homes –
Details of pending works

740 Clerk: Question 603, the Hon. E J Reyes.

745 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details in respect of pending repairs to rental homes, indicating the dates when there reports were made by tenants and stating how many will be repaired by (a) the Housing Works Agency, (b) sub-contractors, and (c) the assigned tenants themselves?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento):

750 Mr Speaker, there are currently 273 pending repairs to rental homes. The date in which these were reported were as follows: there were 28 in May; 42 in June; 35 in July; 40 in August; 47 in September; and 81 in October Twenty-seven of these will be repaired by the Housing Works Agency; 246 will be repaired by sub-contractors; and one is on a self-repair basis.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, from the answer the Hon. Minister has given to me, the dates given by ... If I heard correctly, so that the one that is longest outstanding dates back to 28th May. Can the Minister reconfirm that there is no reports prior to 28th May still pending to be carried out?

760

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: That is what I am told, Mr Speaker.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Lady come to some sort of agreement with me? If I can produce to her, on behalf of a tenant that claims to have reported matters that require repairs, dating way back to February and there were matters that arose as a result of refurbishment works or being carried out at Laguna Estate and therefore problems that did not exist before, have now come in; water seepage and so on and this constituent even showed me photographic evidence and so on, claiming that the reports were made way back in February and as a concerned tenant, the summer months have helped to dry it a little bit, but as soon as the first rainfalls come, they are expecting a really pretty bad winter. How can we ensure that the Hon. Minister has the total and correct updated information? Unless I am being misled by constituents, but certainly the reports seem to have been – or the repairs seem to have been requested way before May of this year.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, it may be that there is a case that has slipped. It may be that there is a mistake in the system, but certainly if there is someone who has an outstanding report, then I am happy for the hon. Gentleman to give me the details and I will look into it.

780

It would not be in the case like that, of structural damage or anything significant like damp, but the hon. Gentleman needs to be mindful as well, that as from the beginning of the year, non-urgent works, or non-fundamental structural works, are not happening if the tenant is in arrears. It would not be in the case where there is damage that would affect the integrity of the building, or may have an impact on a neighbour, but let's say that someone wants new tiles, because they have had those tiles for a long time, if those people are in arrears and there is no justification for the arrears, then people in arrears will not have non-urgent works undertaken for them, until they pay the arrears, until they settle the arrears – unless they are, of courses, themselves, having genuine reasons for being in arrears. (Interjection)

785

The hon. Gentleman may recall, I mentioned this at my budget speech and I have mentioned it before, when we have discussed the arrears and there was agreement across the floor of the House, that we would have support – and of course this relates to people who do not pay rent, because they do not want to pay rent, as opposed to people who cannot pay rent.

790

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Lady might recall that I have always supported her in respect that if a tenant wants the benefit of his rights as a tenant, he must also fulfil his commitments and pay the rent and so on.

795

I may have got a bit confused before, when the Hon. Minister was trying to explain to me the type of work and whether it impinged or infringed upon a neighbour and so on. From what I saw, the photographic evidence, this seems to be because of refurbishment works being undertaken at Laguna, there is now water ingress through the roof and down the walls and so on, that was not there before, so that home has now for months ... that dampness keeps on increasing. I stress again, the biggest concern is the wet weather is soon approaching us. In Gibraltar, it does not rain; it pours and when it pours, that person really, really has a very serious and, in my opinion, genuine concern because of the amount of water coming in, the amount of buckets having to be put around the house, the amount of mops and cloths that one has to buy, to soak up this water.

I tried to explain to the hon. Lady before, there could be something that ... I don't know, maybe the system is such, that – the report was made as far back as February – they have started to work upon it by reporting it to the contractor, so therefore as far as the Housing Works Agency, it is ticked, action is being taken upon. But now, in the last days of October, certainly as far as the tenant is concerned, the repairs have not been undertaken.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: That is precisely what it is, Mr Speaker, because now that the hon. Gentleman has explained what the works are, and if they are attributable to the construction works, to the refurbishment, those repair works, the remedial work will not be undertaken by the Housing Works Agency, or the normal sub-contractors. It will be referred to the contractor that is undertaking the refurbishment works, and that is why it is not in this schedule.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, and just to make sure I do not give the lady the wrong impression, I am not only referring to or using the example of Laguna Estate. I can give her, perhaps later on, behind the Speaker's chair, even the name of the tenant, from Alameda Estate, who has been waiting for repairs since last November and it has not been started upon so it has not fitted into the category ...

I was giving the Minister the benefit of the doubt that work is ongoing, therefore it is no longer classified as outstanding to be done, so perhaps we need to find minutes over a cup of tea and a biscuit, and we can update ourselves for the benefit of tenants.

Q604/2016
Reallocation of empty homes –
Expenditure on repairs

Clerk: Question 604, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of all expenditure incurred so far this current financial year, in respect of contracts awarded for making empty homes suitable for re-allocation; stating to whom payments were made, how much has been paid, the number of residential homes pertaining to each payment, as well as indicating the type/nature of repair works or cleaning services undertaken?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, Avanti, £17,545 for two properties ; Property Repairs Ltd £10,858 for one property; Liberty General Construction, £18,458 for two properties; Base Maintenance, £9,243 for one property; Sarah Jane Construction, £8,896 for one property; Ernest Lopez & Sons Ltd, £12,031 for one property; Ace Plumbing, £13,320 for one property; Eulogio Cruz Construction, £11,396 for one property; JI Construction, £19,950 for one property.

The works carried out by these companies were all general refurbishment works, such as plastering walls, ceilings, taking down walls, painting, replacing floor tiles, doors, plumbing, electrical works, etc.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, if I may, one of them – the £13,320, the name of the company was plumbing something. I automatically ... My brains – (Interjection) yes – Ace Plumbing. My brain automatically went into, ‘This must be some sort of plumbing repair’. I know plumbers, like most good craftsmen, are not cheap, but £13,320, for plumbing does, to me, sound a very, very big quantity.

850 Is it just the one residential home, or is it because there is a whole series ... they are refurbishing like a block or from source, or so on? Perhaps the Minister has a little bit more information in that respect.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the name of the company is Ace Plumbing and (Interjection) these figures represent refurbishment of homes, not necessarily and it is not ... Just because the name of the company is Ace Plumbing, it does not mean that it exclusively undertakes plumbing work. It undertakes general repair works, so a figure such as this is our average for the repair and the refurbishment of a flat. It is not just for plumbing. It is for the whole refurbishment.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I understand that. In fairness to her, Mr Speaker, my question did end saying, ‘indicating the type/nature of the repair work’ and the Hon. Minister has given it to me in a very collective term, saying this or the other. Perhaps for a future session, should I come up with this question? She knows that I like to pose it at least quarterly and so on. If it is possible, and she is providing the information saying from this expenditure, well, look more or less so much was in respect of plumbing and so much in respect of the other. It gives us a better picture to see, because I know roof repairs, for example can be extremely expensive. Just the mere fact that scaffolding has to go up immediately shoots the price sky high, so some sort of break down might help, not only the Opposition, but will help Government tenants to better understand how money is being used for the refurbishment of homes.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, when the properties are handed back, as the hon. Member may know, from having been in Government, they are handed back in a certain state of disrepair. There is a standard set down by the Housing Administration – which I imagine was there before, it is not one that has been changed – which lays down to what level it has to be restored before it can be allocated. These properties are properties that come to me – ‘to me’ meaning to the people that are employed in Town Range – to distribute it and as he can see from the list, the policy is to distribute it amongst the local companies that can handle that level of work, but nothing much bigger, because they employ half a dozen people, and irrespective of a title, Ace Plumbing is somebody that tends to have more plumbers than other things, but it does not mean they cannot do anything unless it is plumbing. So, if there is an all plumbing job, they are more likely to take it, but they can still take on a house that needs re-tiling and re-plastering and maybe doing something because they have taken the kitchen sink with them, or something else, because they have taken the toilet with them – other things have happened.

885 But the actual level of work that is required is assessed by the landlord, the Housing Administration and they determine the price, which, if it is above £2,000, which it normally is above £2,000 for a refurbishment, is then given to the people in Town Range who get three quotes, which have to be below the figure that has already been determined as acceptable by the landlord. Out of those three quotes, the standard rule is that we give it to the lowest quote, unless there is only a couple of hundred pounds’ difference between the lowest and the highest, in which case we then look at which company is running out of work, because there is a dual purpose to this. One is to get the houses done and re-rented and the other is to keep people in jobs, so that they do not get laid off.

895 So in a sense, the distribution of the list is a reflection of those two policy objectives. One is that we give it, so that we get value for money, to the one that gives the best quote below the ceiling laid down by the Housing; and the second is, that when they are very close – which they often are, because really, there is not much that they can ... that one can be much cheaper than all the rest, but there will be some people there that have got it, even though they might be a couple of hundred pounds higher than somebody else, simply because they are running out of work and we seek to avoid that.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes Mr Speaker, if I may, there was, in my subsection (c), under the assigned tenants themselves, there is one who is going to carry out that repair work – (Interjection) Sorry, I was referring to the subsection (c). The Minister said that one tenant is going to carry out that repair work themselves. How are the expenses towards that repair settled? Is it that the tenant buys the materials and gets given so much in compensation as well if he provides his own labour, or is there some other formula? Perhaps the Minister can enlighten me a little bit on how we estimate, or how we reach an acceptable estimate to both sides of the cost of that repair.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, this is a supplementary, not to this question, to another question, but generally when it is self-repair, the estimate at the Housing Works Agency will calculate the value of the works and its usually provided by vouchers, or the materials are provided.

Q605/2016
Rent relief –
Levels awarded

Clerk: Question 605, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is the Government satisfied with the level of rent relief they are awarding at present?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, yes.

Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, there are many pensioners, and people living on the edge, shall we say, who consider that pennies off in rent relief – as I understand, in some cases, we are talking about 15 pence or 60 pence a month, 15 pence a week, something like that – really does not help in any significant way. So would the Minister be willing to revise the policy, or is the Housing Ministry undertaking ever a case by case process, to help those who feel that the rent relief awarded does not relieve much at all?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well no, Mr Speaker, because the hon. Lady starts from the wrong premise, in that we are assuming that rent relief is only 15 pence off the rent.

The way rent relief is calculated, actually, is based on the income of the person, so if we are going to talk about figures, then I am going to give the correct figures and put it into context, because it is not that people have 15p rent relief.

There is a formula to calculate and the factor that is taken into account is the whole of the household income and marital status and whether there are children living there or if the person has a disability, because every case is assessed on a case by case basis and the applicant is looked at individually.

945 So, for example, if a single person were on the minimum welfare payment, or minimum income guarantee, then they would not pay rent, so the level of rent is commensurate with the income of the individual and this is a policy that has been in place since 2007.

But let's give another example: let's say if there is a single pensioner, who is on an income of say, £400 a month, then their rent would be £11.40. So if we look at an average rent – say, a 3RKB in Glacis has a monthly rent of £64 – then we are talking about a rent relief of much more in excess of 15p.

950 It may be that the hon. Lady has been given information by one individual, but that one individual does not represent the assistance that Government provides by way of rent relief and we look at the income and we look at the scenario and we look at the household income.

Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that answer and I know that the hon. Lady does a lot to help the vulnerable and the needy, because I have spoken to her about these situations before, but can I just ask if a member of the public comes to me and tells me that they really are finding it hard to pay their rent and that the rent relief they have been awarded just does not make a difference to them, how would the hon. Lady suggest I help that individual or those people?

960 There are a few people, not just one, but various, who have come to me with this situation – with this issue that they have. Where could the hon. Lady tell me to direct them, in these cases?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, Mr Speaker, my advice would be to look at the case as a whole, because maybe what needs to be looked at is the rest of the expenditure and not the rent relief, because the formula to assist the person by way of rent relief is already in place so the rent relief the person will get will be commensurate to their income. So if someone is in a very low income, then their rent relief would be a 100% because they do not have to pay any rent.

970 What I am trying to say is that there is a connection between the level of rent relief and the income that that person is receiving, so if the level of rent relief is low then it is commensurate to the income and it may be that that individual needs to look at other ways in which the income is distributed because the relief is commensurate to the level of the income, and if someone is on a very low income, then the rent relief is a 100% and rent due is zero.

Q606/2016
Children of separated parents –
Housing requirements

975 Clerk: Question 606, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What is the Government policy on allowing parents who are separated and have agreed joint custody terms and conditions out of court in relation to housing requirements?

980 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, 'joint custody' is not a legal term since the introduction of the Children Act in 2009. What used to be referred to as joint custody is in law now parental responsibility. On separation, joint parental responsibility has not, and never has been the test for determining entitlement to housing composition, as most parents will have this in any event.

In cases of separation, the Housing Department requires proof that both parents have joint residence of the child, in addition to joint parental responsibility and if joint residence is established, then both parents are entitled to the same housing requirements for the child.

990

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, from what I understand in this area, it seems that the law discriminates men, in the sense that men actually need this shared residency order agreement which the hon. Lady has just mentioned, forcing them to have to go to lawyers and spend money to legally validate something that the mother gets naturally without having to provide this agreement. I have evidence of this, which I am happy to show her in private, because obviously it comes from different sources and different individuals who have suffered this.

995

Would the Minister be prepared to accept that this policy needs changing and reviewing to make it more egalitarian?

1000

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, because the policy is not as the hon. Lady understands it to be.

The policy applies to the child and it relates to the parent who has the residence of the child. If parents separate and one parent has the residence of the child, then the parent with the residence for the child will be given the room for the child, because the additional room is for the child and not for the parent.

It has never been the case that when parents separate, the child is accommodated in both dwellings. There will be provision for the child to live with one parent or the other, but in exceptional cases, because it is in exceptional cases where both parents have joint residence – nothing to do with joint custody; joint custody is a different concept – but if both parents have joint residence, then a room for the child will be allocated with each parent. So the policy is actually very egalitarian. But it is based on the arrangement that is made for the child and I do not agree that lawyers need to become involved for evidence of that because there is no ... What I have said is that the policy is that the parties need to provide evidence. I have not said that the parties need to provide a court order, because in fact that was the position before, but because I do not believe that people should be spending money on lawyers and I think that – and in fact it goes against – (Interjection) in cases such as this – and particularly in cases such as this because the overriding objective of the Children Act is the ‘no order principle,’ it would be quite contradictory for the Housing Department to be asking people to go to court where the framework of the legislation does not want you to go to court.

So what I did in the Housing Department to facilitate the process was to ask for evidence and evidence can be provided by way of a sworn statement; and a lawyer and therefore expenditure is not required.

So, Mr Speaker, in answer to the question, I think that the procedure, particularly the new procedure, is very fair.

1025

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker. May I? Because this is certainly a bugbear with me, and I don't mind my saying that it was a bugbear when I was Minister for Justice and this arose at Cabinet, because the hon. Lady is right: it does discriminate invariably against men.

1030

It does not discriminate objectively against men in this sense that of course a man or a woman can have residency in respect of the child and his or her spouse can then have contact. Effectively what the law does is that it affords either both parties joint residency, in which case there would be no problem, as the hon. Lady has rightly pointed out, because both of them would be entitled to the same Government housing; or the law provides for one of them to receive residency in respect of the child, with the other spouse or the other parent receiving contact.

1035

Now invariably, it is the mother that always ... well, not always, but the mother invariably obtains residency. It is the father that obtains contact, and in that kind of situation, you then 1040 have ... Government housing will go to the mother, so if a couple is living in a three-bedroom flat, for example, the mother will take the Government flat, then the father has to look for alternative accommodation. If the father cannot afford to obtain alternative accommodation, 1045 the state, the Government, will afford a Government property, but the Government affords a one-bedroom flat or a studio flat for those fathers and that is where, does she not agree, that the discrimination arises and the unfairness arises? If you have a large family in a 3 or 4RKB, it is unfair to then award the father just simply – who cannot afford private accommodation, let's not forget – a one-bedroom flat or a studio flat, where he is never going to be able to enjoy the contact with his children, because his children are never going to be able to stay overnight, it is impossible!

1050 That is the unfairness and that is what I would urge – and I have done so before to the hon.
Lady in this House – for the unfairness to be considered by the Government. I have to say that these arguments are not new. I have already said that these arguments are what we had when we were in Government and I was not able to prevail upon my colleagues that the policy ought to be changed, but certainly I urge the hon. Lady to look upon this, because I certainly agree with the hon. Lady that it is a discrimination, of men in particular.

1055 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, when we are talking about Government rental stock, of which there is a limited amount available, then there needs to be certain criteria set, to ensure that there is an equitable distribution of rental stock to everybody.

1060 Now, if the housing stock is limited and a child – because the allocation really is made in respect of the child and not the parent; it is just that the parent will take the consequence of the room allocated to that child – if a child lives with one particular parent, for the majority of the time and will have contact with the other parent from time to time, say one night, two nights a week – then, in the context of the limited housing stock available, that is the rationale for this policy. That is the base line, Mr Speaker.

1065 However, having said that, there are always exceptions and avenues, where individual cases, which may be outside of the norm, are also considered, because we do have these social avenue or the medical avenue, which are open to people who necessarily may need to make different applications.

1070 The hon. Gentleman said that it is difficult for someone who is allocated a studio and then has three or four children, for them to have contact. First of all, there are very few properties which are studios, the majority of them will be ... Actually, there are more 2RKBs, which is actually a one-bedroom than there are 1RKBs which is a studio, so it is very, very rare for people to have a studio; we are talking about a 1RKB. And 1RKB, in terms of dimensions, is actually quite big and does allow for partitions, but if there is a case, a situation, where there is 1075 significant contact and the parent has a lot of children and there can be justification, then in cases like that, they will be considered by the committee and a view may be taken.

1080 But certainly, if someone has a child and that child lives with their mother five days a week, if the Government were to be providing a bedroom for every child whose parents are separated, then we would have to double the housing stock that we provide because we are providing double for that child.

1085 The view that is taken, by the Housing Department and has historically been taken by the Housing Department, as the hon. Gentleman says, is of course in the context of the limited stock and but it is also consistent with the view that is taken by the courts when it is necessary for the court to take a decision. It is generally that the child lives with one parent and it is the view of the court, where the policy is then followed through by the Housing Department.

1090 Hon. E J Phillips: I just have one further question in relation to that, and I know that my learned and hon. Friend has experience with, for example, parental alienation syndrome, which is often the cause of separation and what happens when the children stay with their mother and there has been refused access and it goes to court and there is a dispute. But I think it is right that the hon. Member should have an eye of that, because the number of instances of that occurring now, and men coming up to me and speaking to me about the lack of access, the lack of opportunity to spend time with their children and the effects thereafter on those children that cannot re-engage with their father, I think it is a really, really important fact. I think we should be looking at ways in which we can alleviate that problem by increasing the opportunities available to men, in those situations, to have further contact with their children, and overnight access.

I know the hon. Member knows about this and I appreciate that it is a balancing exercise insofar as the housing stock is concerned, but we may be dealing in the future with a generation of young children without proper access to their fathers and serious issues of parental alienation syndrome, which I know the hon. Member is aware of, through her practice in the law.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes Mr Speaker, and it is precisely because of my practice and my experience in a former life, that I have simplified the procedure to help cases where it is possible, but as I said, we have to live in the position where we have limited stock and if the stock is limited there is only so much that we can do. So it is all the constraints in relation to the housing stock.

It may be, Mr Speaker, that in the next few years and because everything is fluid, Mr Speaker, so in the next few years when we complete the new affordable housing that we will be constructing, because the housing stock availability changes, that the demands on the stock change and it may lead to a result ... it may result in a change in policy.

Of course, Mr Speaker, when I am looking at my Department, I deal with the immediate issues and I am looking at medium-term planning and at long-term planning because this issue precisely will probably only get worse, because that is a reflection of society going forward. They are things that I need to bear in mind in terms of my long term planning. Insofar as my immediate situation, I am constrained by the stock that is available to me.

Q607/2016
Drug addiction issues –
Migrating Government responsibilities

Clerk: Question 607, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Does the Government not think it is time to migrate drug addiction issues from the Social Services Ministry to the Health Ministry?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): No.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I noticed from a press release in today's Chronicle, an Inter-Ministerial Committee to take up work of studying possible changes to drugs policy in Gibraltar. Can I ask how often will this team be meeting?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, I am going to be the chairman of that Committee and I wanted to meet with regularity. The hon. Lady knows I want to do much of this work myself, but as I said in the context of the statement I made to the House last week on the reshuffle, it is not going to be possible for me to take the portfolio, but I want to stay involved with those issues and the Committee will also have the Hon. Minister for Care on it as well.

1135 So we meet every Monday, but as a Committee, we will probably meet once a month, I imagine.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What major changes will be on the agenda and what is the timeline expected in the delivery of any changes?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think it is a question the hon. Lady might wish to ask us after we have met for the first time. I could share ideas with her here etc., but I do not think that Question Time is for that sort of discussion.

1145 I am quite happy to also have a discussion with her on any ideas she may have and if she wants to come to the Committee on a particular day and give us her views of things that we might be prepared to consider with her, which may be relevant of course, we would be happy to do so, or to write to me with those ideas, I am quite happy to consider anything which could be of assistance to the community in this respect.

1150 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: If I can just track back to the original question, I just wanted to ask: the World Health Organisation talks about drug addiction issues being a health issue. It is considered a mental, psychosocial and physical illness and there is plenty of evidence from the WHO to suggest this.

1155 So when the hon. Lady said, no, is it something that will not be moved at all, or will they not consider this evidence from the WHO and perhaps think about the possibility of migrating such an issue to Health?

1160 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know she is asking the hon. Lady but the distribution of portfolios is down to the Chief Minister and I have determined that it should not be included in the amalgamation. The initial amalgamation at least of areas related to Care, which is now the responsibility of Mr Costa, who is dealing with all of the areas of Care, but not with drugs, although he is going to be involved in the Inter-Ministerial Committee.

1165 I am persuaded that the Health Services have a role to play. That is why I have created the Inter-Ministerial Committee, and the Minister for Care will be part of that Inter-Ministerial Committee. I am not persuaded that there should not be a separate ministerial responsibility to deal with these aspects – or the many connected aspects of issues that are related to the abuse of drugs – and that, at the moment, is not going to be something that changes. Look, it could be that the result of the work that we do together; it appears that there is more work to be done in respect to the control of the abuse of drugs and its misuse and their misuse, from the Health point of view, than from the Justice point of view or the independent portfolio point of view, but 1170 at the moment, this is a determination made a week ago.

Q608/2016
Drugs detoxification –
Ocean Views and Bruce's Farm

Clerk: Question 608, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1175 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Would the Government agree that detoxification of drugs should be stopped being undertaken at Ocean Views and carried out in Bruce's Farm?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services.

1180 Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): No, Mr Speaker.

1185 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, from many of my conversations with many ex-drug addicts and their families, it normally takes weeks for a transfer between these two places and there is a lot of time lost in a system that at present is not cohesive and what is needed is a system that encourages the addict to get treated immediately, instead of wasting time in an environment which is not bespoke to the needs of the addict, only to have to face a new challenge weeks later, when they have lost much time.

1190 In light of this, is there anything that the Minister would consider in terms of changing the process?

1195 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker. There are different issues here. The issue of the question being asked is whether detoxification should take place at Bruce's Farm instead of at Ocean Views. Mr Speaker, detoxification from drugs, from someone who is a drug abuser, is a very serious matter and needs to be done and undertaken in a safe, clinical setting, such as Ocean Views. Bruce's Farm is not a clinical setting; it is a rehabilitation facility, which is more of a social therapeutic setting. What we cannot have is a structure that provides for one thing, providing a service which is complex and medical, and which is provided by the Government elsewhere, particularly given that Bruce's Farm is up the Rock.

1200 Imagine if someone is being detoxed, even if we had the structure and the staff – which of course in Bruce's Farm, the staffing there is related to the service that is provided ... It is not a clinical service, it is not a hospital, it is not a nursing facility. It is a rehabilitation centre – a therapeutic rehabilitation centre, because there are different types of rehabilitation centres.

1205 In fact, I have visited various rehabilitation centres and in none of those rehabilitation centres is the detox facility part of the rehabilitation facility. They have two separate functions.

1210 But let's imagine for the moment that we were to have the infrastructure, the nursing and the medical supervision that we have in Ocean Views, up at Bruce's Farm. Can you imagine, Mr Speaker, if we were to have an emergency at the Bruce's Farm, having to transfer that person to hospital in the middle of the night from the Upper Rock? We would have to get the ambulance up there and then the ambulance back down.

1215 The reason why it is not done, Mr Speaker, is because detox is complex, there can be people who have multiple addictions. They can be addicted to more than one substance: usually it is to drugs and to alcohol together which makes detox more complicated and it is therefore important that we have it in a setting that has the adequate clinical supervision to ensure that detoxification is undertaken safely for the person.

1220 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: In that case, is the Minister therefore satisfied, at least at present, Ocean Views is the apt place to cater for the detox process, or does she believe that more can be done at Bruce's Farm to provide a better and more bespoke environment for the detoxification process?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I believe that detox needs to be kept separate and needs to be provided in a medical facility with clinical supervision, and Bruce's Farm is not that facility.

1225 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, with your leave, I do have a question that straddles both 607 and 60 ... and with your leave ... very shortly. Thank you.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, would the hon. Gentleman just give way for a moment?

1230 I am starting to run perilously late for a meeting. Can I therefore propose that the House now adjourn – and perhaps we take that supplementary tomorrow, if it is convenient for the hon. Gentleman – to 2 p.m. tomorrow afternoon?

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn to tomorrow afternoon at 2 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

TOURISM, HOUSING, EQUALITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES

Q607-608/2016

Drug addiction and rehabilitation – Further supplementary questions

Mr Speaker: There was a supplementary that was left pending yesterday evening.
The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

5 Hon. E J Phillips: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

Yesterday, in response to Questions 607 and 608, there was some discussion about the Inter-Ministerial Committee that had been established, that I think the Chief Minister referred to a week ago in respect of drugs and that important issue.

10 One of my concerns about that response was that the Government had established on 26th June 2013 an Inter-Ministerial Committee in relation to drugs and rehabilitation; what I would like to know is what progress has been made in relation to that Committee? It has now been reconstituted with different Members – the former Minister for Justice is now out, as we know – but what were the terms of reference for that Committee in 2013 and how have they changed now, some three years later, and what progress has been made with that Committee?

15 Minister for Tourism, Housing, Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is absolutely right, I did set up an Inter-Ministerial Committee in 2013 to review the matter of drugs in Gibraltar. If the hon. Gentleman, as I am sure, has read the press release relating to that, he will see that the result of the Inter-Ministerial Committee was to form a Drug Strategy Committee. In fact the members of the Strategy Committee are listed in that press release, and the result is that the Committee was born from the Inter-Ministerial Committee, and the Drug Strategy Committee is one that was working and working very well since 2013, and one that will continue.

20 Now that I am once again the Minister responsible for drugs, it may be that ... The new Inter-Ministerial Committee, I am sure will continue the work. It may be that the first Inter-Ministerial Committee will really continue as the new Inter-Ministerial Committee. It is the same Ministers wearing different hats.

25 Well, obviously the first one was not chaired by the Chief Minister, and it is important that the Chief Minister chairs the new Inter-Ministerial Committee. There were other Ministers in my original Inter-Ministerial Committee, but I am sure that they will be called upon when the relevant issues to those portfolios arise. But it is about the work that flows from the Inter-Ministerial Committees because of course the Ministers at that level set the policy. The policy was that we develop a strategy, and it is the work of the Strategy Committee really that will give us the overall product that we want.

35

Hon. E J Phillips: I am grateful for the answer to that question.

I think that the hon. learned Member will understand what I am getting at and that this is a Government that has established a Committee to establish a sub-committee, effectively, that is dealing on the ground with it and then, once a reshuffle happens, develops another Committee to do something else.

40

Frankly, we would like to know what the results of the Drugs Strategy Committee are and what has been happening on the ground, because I think this side of the House and members of the Committee could care less really about the constant establishment of committees on committees, on committees, but really want to know what is happening in relation to the Government's policy in relation to drugs, and what efforts are being made and what conclusions are being drawn from that Committee.

45

I take the point that the Chief Minister clearly has an interest in drug rehabilitation and drugs and the strategy moving forward, and I commend him for that. I also commend him for suggesting that he does not have, really, the time to deal with it because he is dealing with bigger issues such as Brexit; but, look, we need to know in this House how this Drug Strategy Committee is moving forward, what decisions are being made, how they are tackling drugs in our streets, and crime relating to it. I would appreciate a little bit more information about how the Government intends to pursue its policies in relation to drugs moving forward.

50

55

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, Mr Speaker, I can say that I am absolutely delighted to be the Minister with the constitutional responsibility for drugs, as from last Thursday. I have been the Minister with responsibility for drugs for approximately two years and I cannot wait for next week where I have already convened a meeting of my new drugs team to make sure that we progress everything in relation to drugs as much as possible as much as we can.

60

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Excuse me, we still have not had an answer on what has been achieved in the last ministerial committees and pre-committees until today. What can we see that is palpable? Can you give us any information on what actually has been achieved in these committees?

65

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, a lot has been achieved by having a focus on drugs in the last five years. We have developed policies and what is the most important thing, particularly in relation to drugs, given that it straddles so many Departments and so many areas in life, is that I think the most important thing to come out of it is the fact that we are now working in an inter-departmental and inter-agency way as has never been seen before because we have the most relevant Departments working together, because we have the Police working with the Social Services, with the drugs rehabilitation facilities, with Education, with Justice and all the different spheres.

70

What we have achieved through the Committee is two things: one is that we are looking at each Department individually to see how each Department can improve the way that it deals with the drugs problem in Gibraltar and then what we have been doing is working together to see how, together, we can improve the way that we work together in relation to the drugs problem in Gibraltar. So what we look at is improving each individual Department, so each individual Department will see how it can restructure itself and do things better.

75

Speaking from my experience in the facilities that I have been responsible for up to date, which is of course Bruce's Farm, Drug Awareness and Drug Rehabilitation in the Community, looking for tangible pointers and evidence as to the improvement, we can see that our 85 occupancy levels at Bruce's Farm are up. I have said in this House before that Bruce's Farm occupancy levels were at an all-time low in 2011, and they have now been extremely high – in fact at the point where a couple of months ago I was called and I was told, 'Minister, we have a problem. Bruce's Farm is full.' So I said, I am delighted to have this problem because it means that the Strategy is working and that we are getting people with a drug problem into the rehab facility where they ought to be.

90 Just because a rehabilitation facility is empty does not mean there is not a drug problem in Gibraltar. A drug problem exists in Gibraltar as it exists everywhere in the world and what our duty to do as a Government is of course to reduce the problem. But there are people who are victims of addiction, because no addict wants to be an addict, so we have to make sure that we are there to support the addict, try to help the addict from become free of the addiction and of course be there to support their families as well, and do as much as possible in terms of 95 awareness to hopefully make sure that people do not fall into the problem of addiction – whether it is through drugs, alcohol or other addictions – and by working together, of course our aim is to tackle the drugs problem in Gibraltar. It is not a simple thing to do; it is not something that we can do overnight and while we aspire to not having a drugs problem in Gibraltar, it is something that we need to be constantly aware of and constantly working with all the relevant 100 sectors, to do as much as we can to prevent it and to support people who have the problem.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just to follow up – (Interjections by Hon. Miss S J Sacramento and Hon. Chief Minister)

105 I did not know the Chief Minister had a preference on who speaks first; I thought it was Mr Speaker. I am on my feet. Mr Speaker, I am on my feet. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order!

110 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: It was because it was my question.

Hon. E J Phillips: It is a supplementary on a supplementary on a supplementary.

Mr Speaker: Order. The Hon. Elliot Phillips.

115 Hon. E J Phillips: I am grateful.

I thank the Minister for her response but it seems to be a lot of air and not a lot of action in respect to the policy on drugs. (Banging on desks) There is not one answer to the question.

120 My hon. Friend, Ms Hassan Nahon has asked the question: what specific areas and tangible benefits have arisen out of the Drug Strategy Committee? There is nothing. There is clearly no strategy by this Government in relation to drugs, apart from establishing committee upon committee.

I am grateful the Chief Minister has the time to concentrate on this area and now say that he actually cannot concentrate on it and therefore it has to go back to Miss Sacramento, the Minister for drugs, but what action has been taken by this Government in the last five years?

125 People are entitled to know this information. We have a drugs problem on our streets and this Government is failing to deal with it.

Mr Speaker: You have asked a supplementary: what action has been taken in the last five years?

130

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am surprised that the hon. Gentleman is not going to be, in this House, somebody that we can regard as somebody who is going to allow, for example, the hon. Lady to continue dealing with her supplementaries as she allowed him to 135 finish his line of supplementary questioning before she got up – because I think all that is going to happen is that it is all going to get very mixed up.

We have just had a Member for the GSD get up and follow up a question of the independent Member in respect of the information that has been provided to her. I do not think that is helpful, but if the hon. Gentleman simply wants to jump like a nervous jack-in-the-box to be the first one to answer or to ask a further supplementary, it is a matter entirely for him, but I commend to him a more measured way of pursuing questioning. He might not then find that he has to ask to once again put to a witness something that he should have put earlier – but anyway.

145 Mr Speaker, in terms of the question that the hon. Gentleman has now asked and the question that the hon. Lady asked, the Minister is giving the information. It is just that they do not like to hear it, Mr Speaker. Is having Bruce's Farm empty an indication that there is no drug problem in Gibraltar? Look, Mr Speaker, I think objectively anybody will accept that that is not the case. It is a question of rehabilitation having not had the support it should have, and that is why Bruce's Farm was empty.

150 Or is it that the hon. Gentleman is going to make the case that on 9th December 2011 Gibraltar did not have a drug problem?

He might, because there are two ways for governments to deal with the issue of drugs. The first, which is actually commended to governments around the world by public relations officers for governments, is to say, 'Well, look we do not recognise that we have much of a drug problem. Some people are caught with drugs but Gibraltar does not have a drug problem.' That is one way of dealing with the issue of drugs.

The other way to deal with it, which is harder but is in my view absolutely the right way to deal with it, is to say, 'Gibraltar, like every other state in the world' – and the hon. Lady has put it better than I can – 'has a drug problem and we are trying to deal with it.' The first way to do that is to acknowledge the existence of a problem.

160 The hon. Member should go back and try and find in Hansard a moment when the former administration got up and did that. They never did. Certainly not in the time that I was here. So step 1 in dealing with the problem: acknowledge that you have it. That is the first thing that we are doing in respect of this matter.

165 Step 2: deal with the obvious parts of the problem – i.e. those who have been convicted in respect of the possession or misuse of drugs and those who have got an addiction problem that they want to see dealt with. In relation to the second, the issue of Bruce's Farm is one on which Mr Corby led, and in relation to which Mr Joe Caruana, with Camp Emanuel, had been dealing before when the former administration was not prepared to assist. But look, the former administration dealt with it when it created Bruce's Farm.

170 When Mr Corby leaves Government, Bruce's Farm is ignored for many years. So what have we done, tangibly in respect of the issue of drugs? Once again ensured that Bruce's Farm is available to deal with those who have an addiction problem.

175 The best possible commendation of what this Government is doing, which is not 'air', Mr Speaker, is the work that Steven Linares and Samantha Sacramento have done in respect of ensuring that Bruce's Farm is available to be used, and people who go through the system say thank you for making Bruce's Farm available once again, because it was falling into disuse because the resources were not there before 9th December 2011, although it had been the creation of a GSD Minister.

180 The other issue, which is the issue of dealing with those who have offended: does the hon. Member not know that we put great emphasis in respect of the rehabilitation of offenders?

Mr Speaker, do you want to say something?

Mr Speaker: Yes. I would like you to bring your answer to a conclusion, because I have a comment to make.

185

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am quite happy to –

Mr Speaker: I will allow you to ...

190 Hon. Chief Minister: So, dealing with the rehabilitation of offenders who have been convicted of the misuse of drugs in a more effective way; dealing with those who are addicted in a more effective way; creating an Inter-Ministerial Committee, which was something that was already working before the reshuffle and the new Committee that I have created, where I will continue to be involved in that way rather than the way that I wanted to be directly involved.
195 Well, Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman wants to pretend that that is ‘air’, well look, he had better explain to us what it is that he breathes. Because what we have done in respect of dealing with people with a drug problem is certainly not air.

Mr Speaker: From a simple supplementary question, we are now, as is very often the case, 200 having a debate on the general drugs problem. And it all arises from two questions: 607, ‘does the Government think it is time to migrate drug addiction issues from the Social Services Ministry to the Health Ministry?’; 608, ‘would the Government agree that detoxification of drugs should stop being undertaken at Ocean Views and carried out at Bruce’s Farm?’ Two fairly specific questions, and now we begin to have a debate on the drugs problems generally.

205 A very important issue for Gibraltar, and I invite Members, if they so wish, to bring a motion to Parliament and debate the drugs problem in a general sense, and then you have every right to ask the Government to explain what they have been doing for the last five years.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that intervention, because I think that is right.
210 Our supplementary question was in relation to the Inter-Ministerial Committee that was established by the Government and what developed from that was: what tangible benefits have been derived from that Committee, which I think is a natural logical conclusion to these questions.

215 But I take the point that the Chief Minister’s response has now gone into swings and roundabouts about their policy – but there we go.

Mr Speaker: What develops from that is a general debate and of course, the usual practice that a supplementary becomes a pretext for a debate.

TRANSPORT, TRAFFIC AND TECHNICAL SERVICES

Q652/2016

Taxi fares –

Increase in unit rate

220 Clerk: We now move to Question 652, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can Government say on what basis the decision was made to increase the unit rate for taxi fares from 20p to 30p for journeys under eight miles?

225 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the increase arose as a result of a request originating from the Gibraltar Taxi Association.

230 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I take it from that answer that the Government found an increase to the fare of 50% was a reasonable increase. Could the Minister tell me when the previous increase might have occurred, if he has that information available?

235 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the previous increase occurred sometime in 2013, and it was felt reasonable, that an increase from 20p to 30p for these journeys, at the time that we decided to go ahead with it.

240 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, bearing in mind the general rise in cost of living from 2013 to the present day is nothing like 50%, on what basis did the Minister consider that to be a reasonable increase in fares?

245 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, we did not feel that the actual percentage increase was relevant. It was just an increase of 10p. If we had gone up from, say, £1,000 to £1,500 then you would say, well, it is quite a significant difference in money; but when we are talking of 20p to 30p, we are talking about 10 pence. It did not come across at that moment in time as a huge increase.

250 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I have to disagree with the Minister in terms of it not being a significant increase, because it is a 50% increase, and well above inflation, and certainly pensioners for instance with their pensions, would love to receive a 50% increase, but certainly have not done so over the same period.

Was there any requirement in terms of service delivery imposed on the Gibraltar Taxi Association in order to implement this increase?

255 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the service provided by the Taxi Association is a metered service, so they have to be actually there to be able to gain the benefit of that increase. That is the reply.

260 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, what I am referring to: is there any requirement imposed in terms of the availability or improvements to the taxi service? We know the city service is frequently criticised. Was there any discussion between the GTA and the Government in terms of service delivery improvements, or any metrics in that regard for this increase?

265 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the only way (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) that a taxi driver can actually gain the increase, as the hon. Gentleman has mentioned, is if they are there actually giving the service, so it is an incentive and so right for taxi drivers to be there, working, to be able to benefit from that 10p increase. If they are not there, they do not get the increase. So it is an incentive for them to work.

Q653-655/2016

Company enforcing parking regulations – Government arrangements

270 Clerk: Question 653, the Hon. T N Hammond.

275 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can Government say whether any Government or Government-owned company assets were transferred to the company now enforcing parking regulations and if so, whether there was any consideration paid for these assets?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 654 and 655.

Clerk: Question 654, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can Government say what arrangements are in place between themselves and the company now contracted to enforce parking regulations with respect of collection of fines imposed by that company?

Clerk: Question 655, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can Government say whether it has imposed any quotas with respect to parking fines on the company now responsible for enforcing parking regulations?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, in answer to Question 653, Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd (GCPL) has provided the company with the equipment for the period of the term of the contact and on a loaned basis. On termination of the contract, the company has an obligation under the contract to return to GCPL all such non-consumable items of equipment.

There was no consideration paid.

300

During normal working counter hours for Government, members of the public who are fined pay at the offices of Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd.

Payments received by the PMOs are handed in to Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd the following working day and processed accordingly.

And finally, in answer to Question 655, no quotas are imposed on the company.

305

Hon. T N Hammond: Just coming back to Question 653, Mr Speaker, I understand then that the equipment has been loaned to the company. Is the Minister aware of what the length of the contract to that company is?

310

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the length of the contract is five years, I believe.

Hon. T N Hammond: So presumably, Mr Speaker, there is effectively a cost to the Taxpayer in terms of the depreciation of the assets, because over five years, if it is a vehicle, for instance, clearly it will be five years older and worth less. Is it correct to say that there is certainly no contribution on the part of the company in terms of depreciation of the assets that they have been loaned for free?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, in answer to the question, yes, clearly the goods will depreciate, but no different rate than they would have, had they remained with the company. They are being used by the new company, so the depreciation is the same. The arrangements are exactly the same arrangements as that agreed by the previous administration with Master Services cleaning, so I do not see how there is any problem with the way things have been done.

320

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, just for the record, I have not said there is a problem. I am just trying to establish the process by which the arrangements have been made with that company. The Minister seems to have become somewhat defensive on that issue, but he has clarified the point and I am grateful for that.

325

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

330 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, as in any commercial contract, I imagine there will be some incentive involved for the company. Could the Minister advise the House if the company get any share or some kind of percentage of the fines raised?

335 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, that was exactly the question that was asked by the hon. Gentleman: whether there was any incentive to fine. The reply to that question was no.

They get agreed amounts of money for the contract and the services they provide, and that is their incentive: what they get paid.

Q656/2016
Clamping of vehicles –
Monthly figures since 2015

Clerk: Question 656, the Hon. T N Hammond.

340

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can Government say how many clamps in order to disable vehicles have been placed, by month, since January 2015?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

345

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Gentleman is as follows: January 2015, one; February 2015, zero; March 2015, one; April 2015, zero; May 2015, one ; June 2015, one; July 2015, five; August 2015, one; September and October 2015, both zero; November 2015, one; December 2015, all the way to August 2016, zero; September 2016, 341.

350

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain why the sudden and very dramatic increase in clamping of vehicles has occurred and is this now Government policy to enforce parking through a clamping policy?

355

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the law provides for the clamping of vehicles. Remember one thing must be noted, that the clamping of vehicles is done strictly to vehicles who would otherwise get that fine from the windows, screw it up in a ball and throw it away in the bin and not come back into Gibraltar, for example.

360

The reason why there are so many clamps, is the only way that we can ensure that an offending vehicle which is not locally registered can pay their dues like any other person. So it is actually a matter of equality.

Hon. T N Hammond: So the Minister is saying there has been a change of policy and the intention is now going forward.

Presumably there has been a change of policy, because from January 2015 to August 2016, there were fewer than 10 vehicles clamped, and then in September there were 341 vehicles clamped. So I presume that the Government's policy on enforcing of parking or the enforcement of parking measures has changed and it is now the intention to impose and use clamps as a means to enforce illegal parking.

370

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, it is not a new policy. It has always been there – the facilities have always been there. Cars can be clamped or towed away, depending on the circumstances. It is just that local cars are not clamped or towed away. There is an FPN, as we call it, a fixed penalty notice is affixed to their window. It is only the vehicles that cannot or we suspect do not have to come back to pay this fine: it is the only method that we have to be able to ensure that they pay. This is also the case in every other country.

Hon. T N Hammond: Just coming back on one thing that the Minister said, is it the case, then, that of those 341 vehicles not a single local vehicle has been clamped?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, no, that is not correct. Well, yes ... as far as I am aware, and I would have to come back to him, because obviously that is a very specific question which I would need to ask you to give notice to, or I can provide an answer at another time. I am of the opinion that – it is my understanding that – the clamps have probably all been issued to vehicles that are not local.

Now, tow-aways are a different story, because there could be a vehicle which is causing obstruction, and regardless of where the origin of that vehicle is, then that vehicle needs to be removed.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I can inform the Minister that local vehicles have certainly been clamped, because I have been approached by many people who have been clamped in this way, particularly in Grand Parade, as it happens, and are actually finding it quite difficult at the moment, if they live in, for instance, Alameda Estate, to find parking, because they are actually terrified of being slightly off the white line and parked. So I can inform the Minister that certainly, of that 341, at least a proportion – I cannot say how large a proportion – has been clamped.

Hon. P J Balban: I have not heard any question coming from that, it has just been a statement. But I will find out. I thank the hon. Gentleman for that information. Again, I am of the understanding that is not the case because we have fixed penalty notices, but again I will find out and revert if necessary.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if the Minister could clarify for me, what is the difference in the fine level between a fixed penalty notice and a clamping fine? And, does the clamping fine accrue to the Government or Gibraltar Car Parks, or does that go to the company which is doing the clamping?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, there is absolutely no difference in the fine between a clamp and a fixed penalty notice. It is just the mechanism that we have to ensure the fine is paid. So, if it is a fixed penalty notice we give the person adequate time to go and pay, and the clamp is just a method that we can ensure that same payment. But there is not an increase in payment in that respect.

And, no, the hon. Member is asking the same question but from a different angle and I have already said that there is no incentive to the company apart from what the agreed sum is per contract for them to clamp more vehicles, or tow away more vehicles or fine more vehicles. I think I have adequately answered that from every angle now.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I have got a supplementary to do with looking at this from the tourist angle.

Obviously the majority of these vehicles are coming from abroad and it is right that they have to respect where they should be parking. However, recently, only two weeks ago I saw a foreign registered car being clamped in the residential area of Alameda Estate and the person who was clamping was not even aware that there is no such thing as a residential scheme and in Humphreys are yet to be implemented, and obviously nobody has an updated disc because it has not been renewed in quite some time.

Is the Government aware that this is an issue which has to be raised with the company in order to ensure that people are not unfairly clamped?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is stating ... well, I assume that he is clear on what he is saying. (Interjections) Well, I will inform the hon. Member that there is no such residential scheme in the Alameda Estate, so that is not the case.

Now, where there have been clamps is when there has been a cleaning operation that has taken place and I am not sure of the days, but one time it is the north side, then it is the south side and car owners who fail to recognise that are clamped. So, if someone has been clamped that does not sound right because there is no residential scheme – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker, the hon. Member mentions the word ‘fear’, the fear of people regarding being clamped. It depends on which side you are on. If you are looking for a parking space and you are trying to find – as has everyone who has tried to find a car-parking space – this scheme of street-cleaning, not only does it do what the word states, which is clean the area, but it also serves a very, very important secondary function, and that is to allow for the circulation of vehicles. As we all know people, unfortunately, leave vehicles parked for weeks on end, if not months on end if there is no such scheme in place and, in effect, what they are doing is just taking a parking away from other potential users.

So, really, I think it is just a question of respect and these cleaning campaigns help not only to clean places, but for drivers to be respectful of others who may also wish to use those parking spaces. When parking enforcement was lower, people were saying it is not fair because they are not being targeted enough; and now, when it is better, it is not fair because it is too much. Whichever side you look at it, you are damned if you do and damned if you don’t.

I think this is a fair system, it ensures that indiscriminate owners who park their vehicles illegally at the expense of others are reprimanded in that respect.

Hon. L F Llamas: Yes, but my question specifically deals with the fact of a car which was parked and it had nothing to do with the cleaning and, when explained to the company employee, he actually did remove the clamp. I am asking Government if they can please ensure that this does not occur because it gives rise to tourists –

A Member: Put some signs up!

Hon. L F Llamas: – being clamped unfairly when they should not have been. That is the question I want to ask.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is speaking completely about one case in question. If that is the case, there are mechanisms where the person can appeal that.

Mr Speaker: There is no need for an appeal, it was removed.

Hon. P J Balban: Oh, it was removed? Ah, right. (Interjections)

Hon. L F Llamas: It was removed because I happened to be there and tell the company employee that he could not clamp it because there was no such scheme in Alameda; and, obviously, the tourist would be none the wiser to be able to appeal if he had found the clamp.

So what I am talking about is the mechanism from Government’s point of view needs to be addressed with the company to ensure that tourist cars are not unfairly clamped when they should not be, and they are only clamped when they should be.

475 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, look, the Government of course seeks that the company should only enforce the laws of Gibraltar and, if an over-zealous member of the company thought he was doing something which was beyond the laws of Gibraltar, if that is the case – because we are taking the hon. Member at his word – we will check with the company to see on what occasion a person had a conversation with the hon. Gentleman who has become 480 the advocate of foreign drivers in Gibraltar. I hope he gets many votes from them, Mr Speaker!
(Laughter) The advocate of foreign drivers in Gibraltar will see what it is that he was advocating on that day!

But look, a company that has a Government contract to enforce parking laws cannot enforce laws that do not exist. But we will follow up with the company to determine what it was that 485 was happening in that particular case.

Hon. T N Hammond: Just coming back on the answer that the Hon. the Minister has given in terms of whether it is a change of policy or not: am I correct in my inference that what is happening is that the Government is trying to educate drivers? In that case it would imply to me 490 that there has been a change of policy and that we see better behaviours around parking, with people not taking a parking space up for several weeks; in which case, it would seem to me that local vehicles are being clamped because, clearly in order to enforce that policy of education on our roads for local drivers, you would have to clamp local vehicles.

495 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, persons can be educated by being taught how to read signs and obeying them, or by the placing of a fixed-penalty notice, or via clamping, or by towing away.
This is a process whereby we have to address it, and I think everyone will agree the dire situation that is to do with parking. So, either we address it or we do not address it; and this is what we are doing. (Interjection)

500 It is a dire situation of illegal parking, yes, everywhere in Gibraltar. Things are much, much better now, but that is the issue we are trying to address.

Q657/2016
Right-hand drive vehicles –
Importation numbers

Clerk: Question 657, the Hon. T N Hammond.

505 Hon. T N Hammond: Can Government say how many right-hand drive vehicles have been imported by month since January 2014?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

510 Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Department has never kept statistics on right-hand drive vehicles registered in Gibraltar.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I could be wrong on this but does not the logbook of the vehicle indicate whether it is a left-hand drive or a right-hand drive vehicle?

515 Hon. P J Balban: Not that I am aware of, Mr Speaker, no. As I said these statistics have never been kept in Gibraltar.

Q658/2016
Paving stones in Main Street –
Filling in the gaps

Clerk: Question 658, the Hon. E J Phillips.

520 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I ask this question on behalf of all the ladies that wear high heels in our community.

Can the Government confirm the position as regards the Government's commitment to filling in paving stones in Main Street?

525 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, this was actually placed in our Manifesto directly as a result of our concerns for ladies who do wear high-heeled shoes, who were informing us and complaining of injuries sustained because of the works carried out to Main Street by the previous administration, that did not cater for their needs.

530 During the 2015-16 Financial Year, the Government filled the gaps between the paving stones at the northern end of Main Street from its junction between Cooperage Lane up to the junction with Engineer Lane, a length of approximately 100 metres.

535 During the current financial year a similar phase of works will be carried out to tackle those areas where open joints are causing a problem. The areas are currently being identified and works are earmarked to commence before the end of this year.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I find that quite surprising, given the statement made by the Government on 8th May 2016 in which they confirmed that the phase should take place within five weeks to complete, in respect of filling in paving stone joints; and it was with much fanfare that the Government announced they would complete this process. And yet five months on there is no end in sight in relation to filling-in of paving stones.

540 Can the Government confirm what the hold-up is in relation to this matter, given the clear health and safety risks that have been referred to by the Government in relation to ladies' tripping over these paving stones? It is clear that the blame game continues with the GSLP blaming the GSD administration in relation to not filling them in in the first place.

545 But the question I would like to put to him is: why is it taking, when the initial estimate was five weeks and now we are five months on, is there still no progress? We have done 100 metres of Main Street and there is no end in sight.

550 Can the Government explain the delay in relation to that?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, this is not a blame game; this is a reality check. This is a reality check that hon. Members are responsible for the works that caused this problem. It is a reality check that the hon. Member is getting up and acknowledging that there is a problem with a project that, previously, was a fanfare project for the GSD. This is a reality check that this side of the House is dealing with the problem. A reality check that we have started to deal with it, and a reality check that the works are going to be done in the context of the timetable that the hon. Gentleman has disclosed. That is what is happening, Mr Speaker.

555 Now, look, as a husband who suffers the beration of a wife who wears high heels, for not having yet sorted out the huge problem that the GSD created, I acknowledge that we have to complete this project and we will. Because they created the problem, which they have now accepted in the line of questioning that the hon. Gentleman has pursued, and we will finish fixing it, Mr Speaker. It is that simple.

565 I am sorry if the hon. Gentleman has ‘tripped up’ over policy on this one, but he should have seen it coming!

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I have one supplementary and I will give way then to my hon. Friend.

570 It just strikes me that you have a situation where the Government commit to doing something in five weeks, and five months later there is still no progress. They like to... It clearly is the blame game, Mr Speaker. But in their statement, and Mr Balban in his press release, said the following: ‘It gives me great satisfaction to announce the commencement of a paving repair programme as part of the Government’s continued commitments following extensive trials over 575 the last two years.’

How long is it going to take for this Government to solve the health and safety risks that are presented in relation to paving stones? It is two years of trials – extensive trials by the Government’s own admission – to now, and January is when we start filling in the gaps.

Mr Speaker, there is just no explanation for it.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am delighted, Mr Speaker, to be able to join the dots for the hon. Gentleman.

He has just said something really quite remarkable and, as a result, I think the Government will have to consider how it acts in what was a flagship GSD project is actually a health and safety risk. When he goes back and reads his Hansard he will realise that he has now put the 585 Government on notice that the GSD’s project to put those paving stones in Main Street which, as we have had to hear from the GSD before, was a flagship project, is a health and safety risk to ladies.

So we will take that under advisement and we will consider how we deal with this magnificent admission from the GSD through the mouth of Mr Phillips, that this is a health and 590 safety risk.

The Government is dealing with a problem that we identified from opposition, and which we are fixing, which is not an easy problem to fix. You cannot just cement, because you sometimes need to undo these stones, they are not made to be cemented in, it is complex and there have 595 been delays and there have been alternatives considered. But look, Mr Speaker, we are on the verge of being able to resolve it. The hon. Gentleman has said so.

But the admission that this is a health and safety risk created by the hon. Members opposite, is one that I am very grateful for. I am genuinely grateful for the candour that the hon. Gentleman has brought to this House about the abysmal record of the former administration, and we shall pursue that carefully to understand what other health and safety risks this may 600 create for our community in general.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, if it is a health and safety risk as the learned Chief Minister says, why has it not been done before? It is going to take three years to fill paving stones.

605 My understanding is that the real issue for the Government here is the cost and actually removing each one of these blocks and cementing round it. That is the real issue, it is costing them too much and they cannot afford it!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is another demonstration of the nonsense that comes 610 out of the hon. Gentleman’s mouth.

If he thinks that the Government of Gibraltar cannot afford that somebody remove a brick, clean it and put it in cement, he has got to persuade the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition that we are not actually in the good financial state we are in, because the Leader of the Opposition has already said that we are never going to go bankrupt – something that I was grateful he had 615 realised.

But it is not the Government that believes that this is a health and safety risk. The Government believes it is an inconvenience in particular for those who wear high heels. It is that the hon. Gentleman has got up and said today something really quite impossible to believe. He has got up and said that this is a health and safety risk!

620 Now, nobody has ever said that before; he is the first person to say it. So in the context of him saying it we are going to go away and consider how we deal with it. Everybody just thought it was a nuisance and an inconvenience until he got up and said that the flagship GSD project of the repaving of Main Street has created a health and safety risk. We will look at that.

625 Until then we are the practical ones; we are the ones dealing with the problem. We identified the problem which they did not say existed. We are dealing with that problem and look, Mr Speaker, when there is a Government project that is not in their manifesto for 2011 or in their manifesto for 2015 ... so it is not as if it is something they had not identified before, but when we identified it they supported it. We are dealing with it; we are the ones pragmatically dealing with the problem.

630 We are not going to accept hon. Members coming here and become the timers of when we are doing it. We are doing it. We will deliver the result before the next general election, of something that we said was a problem. They did not say it was a problem, they said it was something magnificent. So there is going to be a bit of a reality check here. This is not just ding-dong, GSD-GSLP. This is not just politics. This is us delivering a real result on the ground – 635 literally – for those who find this an inconvenience.

He is the one who has raised it to the level of a health and safety risk.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if I may, I have to declare I have an interest here because I tried to wear high heels (Laughter) in town and it is very inconvenient! Yesterday, alone, I was literally stuck in a little pothole – I had to drop my bag and get myself out of it. It is something that plagues us women who like to wear heels.

Mr Speaker: And men if you watch the television, the adverts, there are a lot of men wearing high heels these days! (Interjections)

645

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Whatever goes, Mr Speaker, but everyone should be entitled to wear heels.

I mean, yesterday we passed a very important piece of legislation on equality and anybody who wants to wear heels, man or woman, should be entitled to and should be feeling safe enough to do so in Main Street.

The point here is that we do not. And I, personally, from this little side of the House do not care about GSD/GSLP, it is irrelevant to me. I am a woman, I wear heels, I cannot wear them in Main Street and I want to know how soon these streets are going to be able to be fit for us women and men, or whoever, to wear heels, please?

655

Mr Speaker: Last supplementary that I am allowing on the issue of stiletto heels.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady has to acknowledge that she is in this House because she fought a general election with the GSD.

The GSD did the works that created the problem. The GSD did not recognise that there was a problem. The GSLP Liberals said this has created a problem, and started the process of fixing it and are continuing the process of fixing it. So I will take from her statements today, commendation of the GSLP Liberals that we identified where she glibly did not at the last election, a problem; commendation that we are the ones fixing it and commendation that we should do so as soon as possible. So I will thank her for the backhanded compliment.

665

But I will remind her, Mr Speaker, that section 15 of the Constitution availed us both of a very useful argument in respect of the right to equality to marry; but I have yet to find in the Constitution, in respect of any particular aspect of attire, a right to wear anything. I think, unfortunately, there is a requirement that we wear something but not a right to wear anything.

670 But, having been the party that identified this nuisance, which we do not think is a health and safety risk, as the hon. Gentleman has in his usual hyperbole elevated the matter, we will continue to be the ones to deal with it timelessly. And I thank the hon. Lady for recognising that we were the first to realise this, we have been the ones to deal with it and we will be the ones to finish dealing with it, so that anybody can wear whatever they like in Main Street within the rules of public morality.

675

Q659/2016

Temporary mini-roundabout –
Permanent replacement

Clerk: Question 659, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm how long the temporary roundabout at the junction between Glacis Road and Bayside Road has been in operation and when a permanent roundabout will be put in place?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the temporary mini roundabout at the junction of Glacis Road and Bayside Road was launched as a pilot scheme in April 2015. It will remain in place until the Ocean Spa Plaza development is completed, at which time a permanent roundabout will be constructed and the road resurfaced. The completion of the development is estimated to be around January 2018.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, with respect to the Minister, that is an incredibly long time. Glacis Road is, as you know, an artery for incoming traffic, particularly tourist traffic and I think it is important that reflects it. Is there something can be done to beautify, effectively, or to make it look more pleasing to the eye for our tourists who spend their money in our jurisdiction, so that one of our arteries can be brightened up?

690

It just looks terrible to have that rather odd plastic roundabout on which the markings are still unclear for incoming tourists and residents alike.

695

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the roundabout is working tremendously well and it does not make any sense whatsoever for us to resurface the road at great expense to the taxpayer and build a roundabout which is clearly going to be destroyed because of the work vehicles.

700

The only reason why we have not completed it, is not because we do not want to complete it – yes, plastic bricks are not ideal – but it is because the damage sustained by the contractors would mean that we would spend a lot of money in repairing and making it good now, and then we would have to do the same works again in the future.

So it does not make sense. The roundabout is working well and our Highways Engineers are always constantly on top of it because the lorries themselves create potholes. Most of the damage that we see appearing at the roundabout is as a direct result of the HGV heavy goods vehicles that use the roundabout, many of which access the construction site.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, we have HGV vehicles travelling all over Gibraltar, particularly in different areas where there are building sites. (Interjection) But, look, this is an artery to 710

Gibraltar, it is the front of house for our jurisdiction, for tourists and for residents and it just looks appalling, with the greatest respect to the Minister.

715 Surely something can be done, without great expense, to improve the quality of that roundabout so that people do not see Gibraltar just as a built-up area where construction is going on all the time? I think we really need to look at the aesthetics of the problem here.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, on this side of the House we do not agree with that way forward. Our way of looking at it is that it is a roundabout that works tremendously well; it has 720 proved it is no longer a pilot roundabout in that respect. It is something that will stay.

It is a roundabout that gives a driver many different options to be able to turn left and right, where before every vehicle was shunted towards Waterport roundabout, creating many more traffic problems. So our plan is when the time is right and when the building construction is over, we will fix a roundabout at once and it will be fixed and be there to enjoy by drivers for a long 725 time.

We are not going to spend money now and then have to spend it again. I do not think that is prudent use of taxpayers' money.

Hon. E J Phillips: I think, with respect, there should be a reassessment of that position 730 because there is no left turn now into Bayside Road – that is blocked by the hoardings for the Ocean Village development. So there is no movement down Bayside Road, so therefore it makes pointless the purpose of having the continued pilot roundabout.

I have seen no traffic and I travel up that street every day, in fact, because I am going to watch my son train at 7 p.m. every evening, although I will not be there tonight. (Interjection)
735 Well, some reconsideration of that then, because aesthetically it looks bad and I think there is no traffic – that is my understanding and I have been going up there every day, as I said.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, it is a great thing that I was a taxi-driver and I have driven through Gibraltar's streets and I know, and I take an active interest in our roads in Gibraltar. And 740 on many days I actually go up there and look at things for myself, because that is what I really enjoy doing.

I disagree with the proposal by the hon. Member that we might as well remove the roundabout until 2018, by which time we can replace it again; that would be totally wrong in my opinion. He is right in terms that you cannot go into Bayside Road, but lots of taxi drivers especially will use that to access Ocean Village gym, the Ocean Village Sunborn and the Ocean 745 Village complex to pick up clients. If they could not do that they would have to go all the way to Sundial Roundabout and come through Bayside Road to access the Sunborn and to access the gym. Many people, especially after bingo nights at 11 o'clock at night, I still recall, are picked up at that point and without that roundabout they could not do that.

750 Now, the other thing they have to take into consideration is that when you exit Bayside Road, before you had to go straight on to the Waterport Roundabout even if you were going to Four Corners or even if you were going to the East Side, you would turn left there as it avoids having to get into that traffic jam.

755 So I do not agree with the hon. Gentleman and what he has said. I think that it serves a very good purpose at the moment and so we will not remove the roundabout, and we will stick to our grounds and fix it once and for all in 2018.

Q660/2016
Gibraltar Taxi Association –
Service Agreement

Clerk: Question 660, the Hon. Ms N D Hassan Nahon.

760 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is the Government happy with the city service provided by the Gibraltar Taxi Association following the agreement signed in 2013?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

765 Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Would the Government concur with the Chamber of Commerce that it is, quote, 'giving a very damaging image of Gibraltar to visiting business people and tourists alike'?

770 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, objectively I think we would all agree that the taxi service is not perfect. Now, whether that it is causing a damaging effect to Gibraltar that is, I suppose, a matter of opinion and one that has been expressed by the Chamber of Commerce, and which they have a right to express.

775 I would be foolish to stand up and say the taxi service is perfect in Gibraltar because that is not correct. There are a lot of things that can be done to improve it and they, themselves, are the best advocates, and they are self-critical of their efforts and they are the ones who often propose solutions themselves as to how things can be improved.

780 That they are a long way from achieving that, perhaps so; but that they are damaging to Gibraltar, I do not agree.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Would the Government agree with the Chamber's suggestion then, that without competition the service will never improve? Or is the Government looking into the possibility of issuing new licences as a means of improving the service?

785 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, it is not the intention of this Government to offer new licences. I recall the Chamber of Commerce meeting before elections where the GSD in fact said that if they won the next election they would consider granting 50 more licences. But we have no intention of doing so; in fact the number of taxi licences in Gibraltar is perfectly adequate in our opinion.

790 A Member: Mr Speaker –

Hon. Ms M N D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can I please finish?

795 If the Government is saying now that they are not looking into new licences and we are not talking about competition either, what kind of mechanisms does the Government have in order to improve the service?

What is the Government thinking as a means to improve the service?

800 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, there are a number of issues that affect the taxi service in Gibraltar and none is more important than the traffic situation itself. And although everything cannot be blamed on the traffic but it is a considerable problem that taxi drivers face, and reasons why they cannot get from A to B in that respect.

805 So there are many, many factors which affect the quality of service in Gibraltar but the number ... and we expect that, once the tunnel under the airport is completed, then this will solve many of the issues.

Now, if what the hon. Lady is saying is it would be a great idea to offer more licences, then the moment that this traffic gets better, what do we do with these cars? There is absolutely no need for new licences. One hundred and twelve taxi licences in Gibraltar is adequate enough.

810 That cars cannot get to places quick enough, perhaps: that there are times of the year where there is a greater demand; we have days where cruise ships come in; we have a lot of influx of tourists across the border. Clearly, in any part of the world, in any city of the world, there will be times when it is not possible to get an adequate service, and that happens. I have spent time in Victoria Railway Station in London and other parts of the world where it is impossible to get a taxi within 45 minutes. Then there are other times, when you go to Casemates here or you go to 815 the Airport, and there are loads of taxis and not enough clients. Again, you cannot – just because there are no taxis in one given moment in time – you cannot just go and say, ‘Well, let us give out more licences’ and aggravate the situation when there are. That is it.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, the only thing I have heard from the hon.
820 Gentleman are reasons like traffic and the tunnel not having been completed. For example, at two in the morning, I and friends, and people, and also, yes, you hear it on Facebook, there is a general complaint that taxis take sometimes 30 to 45 minutes to come. There is no traffic and it is absolutely tumble-weeds around Gibraltar. In that case, the traffic excuse, I just do not think is good enough.

825 The tunnel: who knows when that tunnel is going to be built? We cannot all keep our hopes up that the taxi service runs well the day that tunnel gets finished.

Furthermore, to say that you are not preparing any solutions like any more licences and the issue of creating a competitive environment just shows me that there is no solution coming forth from Government at the moment. Let us not get into the, ‘It started with the GSD’. I have also 830 lived through problems with the taxis as a child when more licences were issued, so I know about the sensitivities with the Taxi Association.

But I must say that Gibraltar is growing, thankfully. We have a very upper middle class population coming into Gibraltar all the time. We have business, trade and industry and we need to know if and when – 835

Mr Speaker: Try to ask your question.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: – does the Government have a solution for the taxi service.

840 Mr Speaker: Try to ask a question, please.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: We need a solution now and it rests on the Government to give us a solution, so please tell us what the Government is doing about it?

845 Mr Speaker: What is the Government doing about it?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, traffic is not the only problem. I have said the traffic is not the only problem. The tunnel: you say that we do not know when the tunnel will be built, but if you read Government press releases we have categorically stated that in November 2018 the tunnel 850 will be built, so by that moment in time we will see an improvement.

It is not all about traffic – you are right. At three o’clock in the morning there is no traffic, but there is a big demand for taxis and we cannot oblige drivers to be out there all the time. There are not that many drivers working at three o’clock in the morning.

855 Again, as I have given the example of problems you face when you travel to other busy parts of the world where there is an inevitable wait, unfortunately there is a wait for taxis at any one given moment in time during the day. But, needless to say, the Government is very aware of all issues. I, myself, am very aware of all the issues and we are working with the GTA to find solutions, which I will assure the hon. Lady of. She has experience of this in the past. We have to look carefully at how to make things better, but we have accepted and I have said clearly that 860 the Government is not happy and we are working to find solutions to make things better, but those solutions will not come as a result of giving extra licences. That is one thing that this Government is adamant will not happen.

Mr Speaker: I am very sorry but I have to tell Members that we have been an hour here and 865 nine questions are what we have dealt with! If we have 127 questions to deal with, that is – nine into 120 – 14 hours! That is not good enough. I do not think a parliament of this size anywhere in the world sits for 14 hours dealing with questions. (Interjection)

I want hon. Members on both sides to keep that in mind. The Opposition, they have a job to do: to get information, to urge Government to take action and find out what the policies are.
870 You can do that by asking short, sharp questions with a point.

The Government: make your answers short; deal with the question that you have been asked and do not express opinions and debate. I must urge Members to do that, unless they do not mind being here for 14 or 15 hours.

I am in the fortunate position that I can be here 14 or 15 hours because I have nothing else to 875 do other than the fact that I am Mayor of Gibraltar, and my commitments here are beginning to interfere with the work that I need to do as Mayor. Other than that, I have no family or problems why I cannot be here, but if that is the position with all Members: Members in Government, who are very busy at this time of the year and Members in the Opposition who, when all is said and done, this is a part-time job and they have other responsibilities ... I have to 880 tell you that these are the realities. It is up to you. I can only try to implement the Standing Orders, but I do have to draw your attention.

An hour for nine questions – nine simple questions, not terribly controversial; just you wait until we get to the controversial ones – that is not good enough. It is up to you.

885 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Minister: he stated that the Government is not entirely happy with the taxi service provided at the moment and he said he is looking at solutions with the Taxi Association. Could the Minister advise if one of those solutions is actually providing legislation to ensure that holders of licences actually do provide a service and, if they do not provide that service, then the licence is removed?

890

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, no. The law actually states that a driver has to conform to certain days of the week for city service. At any given day of the week, you will find around 18 to 19 vehicles on city service – that is imposed upon them. They do that for five days. Added to that you have the licences which are radio taxis and those radio taxis provide the radio service. That 895 adds another 15 to 20 vehicles that are doing a radio service as well. But those do it because they want to – that is their shift; they choose to do that.

Those 18 to 19 vehicles or drivers that I have already mentioned are the ones who have to commit for a shift of five days and then the next shift comes into play. We actually give them times, so they have to provide a service. I am speaking from memory so I apologise if I am not 900 entirely correct. But I think I is from eight or nine in the morning until, I think it is something like eight o'clock in the evening that they have to be there, with one hour break for lunch, etc. At weekends, I think they are allowed to start a little bit later, so I think on a Sunday they start at 10 o'clock if their five day shift encompasses or covers a Sunday.

So the law ... This is not, 'I will go down to work when I want to' or 'I feel like doing a bit of 905 city service today' or not. They cannot do Rock tours every day of the week. They have to provide a service to the community. That is in legislation. If they do not comply with that, then the transport inspectors – of which there are seven – they will fine them, not only for those purposes but for purposes like not displaying taxi insignia on the cars, not displaying the licence numbers, not having a fare table visible to everyone. So there are many, many reasons why, and they are policed in that respect. We do ensure that taxi drivers – which is the most important point that you raise – are there doing their shift when it is their turn.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q661/2016 –
MOT appointments –
Waiting time and online booking

Clerk: Question 661, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government explain to this House how long it is taking for car owners to obtain an MOT appointment and why it is no longer possible to obtain them online?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the next available appointment is for the 3rd January 2017.

The online MOT booking service is available and has been available throughout. However, some months ago one of the three lanes was closed due to staff shortage. As a result, the number of available bookings in the system has been reduced by a third. With fewer bookings available but the same number of MOT certificates expiring, the rate of bookings has not slowed down. This means that the waiting time for an appointment is constantly being pushed further and further into the future. This has had an impact on the online application. In order to keep performance of the Vehicle Road Worthiness Test booking system to an acceptable level, the calendar was originally only loaded with two months' worth of bookings.

When we were notified that no bookings were available during the two-month period, the window of appointments was increased to display three months, and later four months. The extra load created by checking four months' worth of bookings has resulted in the system being slowed down. However, while this may test the user's patience, the booking does get made if the user is willing to wait a few minutes and, of course, if there is an available slot within the four-month period.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I am sorry, Mr Speaker. I just want to say that at the time that I wrote this question, the online was not working, so if it is now I apologise for the question but at the time it was not working. That is all I wanted to say.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, if the online booking system was down at that particular moment in time, obviously that may have been the case, but as far as I am informed, the reason is it has mainly been a slow-down more than it not working. As far as I am aware, it is working.

EDUCATION AND JUSTICE & INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION

Q662/2016 –
Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Service and LNG – Training and additional equipment

Clerk: Question 662, the Hon. T M Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Minister say what, if any, training or additional equipment has 950 been provided to the Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Service in order to deal with any incidents involving LNG and, if none, whether any training or additional equipment has been programmed or will be purchased?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

955

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Service has been proactively engaged in ascertaining its operational training requirements since the initial stages of this project. Regular consultation and conference meetings have been held with professional representations from 960 outside and local agencies to confirm the proper training and equipment needed for the GFRS to deal with any incidents involving LNG.

Numerous training providers have been identified and contacted. These include the Fire Service College in the UK and the Flack Fire Academy in Rotterdam. Last month three officers of the GFRS attended the Emergency Services Show in Birmingham, UK, at which they met with 965 representatives from Emergency Services Training Institute in Texas, US. This organisation is globally renowned for excellence in LNG training, offering these courses in mainland Europe.

Also, during the GFRS visit to the Emergency Services Show a meeting with Mr Chris Caswell from the UK Fire Service National Operational Guidance Programme was arranged to obtain 970 advice for the GFRS on the proper manner in which to formulate the emergency action plans for Gibraltar's LNG Plant. I am informed that Mr Caswell has formulated the original action plans for incidents at the UK LNG Isle of Grain Terminal.

Furthermore, the GFRS Hazardous Material and Environmental Protection Officer, with the Senior Officer of Operations and Training and the Chief Fire Officer, recently conducted a familiarisation and fact-finding visit to the LNG Terminal itself in the Isle of Grain in the UK. The 975 interaction with experts here is intended to contribute in determining the GFRS action plans, training and possible equipment needs. This visit was organised in partnership with Kent Fire and Rescue Service who provided the GFRS with an insight into their method of operations at the LNG Terminal. In this connection, the brigade has also been in contact with their Norwegian counterparts to explore their approach to LNG incidents.

980 As the hon. Member will see from that response, there is already quite a lot of initial work and contact that has been established to precisely plan out the training requirements and the equipment requirements of GFRS in this matter.

Q663-664/2016 –
HMGOG and the University of Gibraltar –
Funding arrangements and self-sufficiency

Clerk: Question 663, the Hon. E J Phillips.

985 Hon. E J. Phillips: Can the Government confirm what funding arrangements are in place between Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar and the University of Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

990 Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question 664.

Clerk: Question 664, the Hon. E J Phillips.

995 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm when the Government expect the University of Gibraltar to be self-sufficient/self-funded?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

1000 Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, funding arrangements for the University of Gibraltar are a matter of public record. On 4th September 2014 a Bill to appropriate the sum of £10 million in order to fund the University of Gibraltar was published. That Bill was debated and passed by this House on 17th October 2014.

1005 As I have previously explained, Mr Speaker, the Government envisaged that the £10 million would fund the set-up costs to the tune of approximately £6 million, leaving around £2 million per year for the first two years of operation.

Section 35(2) of the University of Gibraltar Act provides that:

... the University shall use its best endeavours to become and remain self-financing.

1010 That is a statutory obligation on the University and the Government has every expectation that the University will comply with its obligations.

The University has been operational for just over a year. It is therefore too soon for the Government to say when it expects the University to be self-financing.

1015 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, am I right in saying that the Government expects – and I think that the hon. Gentleman has mentioned this before, and if he has could he confirm that continues to be the present intention – that the University will break even at year three and will be self-financing by year four? That has been my understanding, but I will be corrected if I am wrong.

1020 Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker. I do not believe I have ever said that. I have said that we have put together funding arrangements for the University up to year three, the first three years, as I have already explained. I do not believe and certainly I have no recollection of ever having said, after that the Government expects the University to be self-financing.

1025 As I have explained, the University has a statutory obligation to 'use its best endeavours' and the Government fully expects that statutory obligation to be complied with. That does not mean that it is going to be self-financing next year or six months thereafter. That means it has to use its best endeavours to comply with its statutory obligations, and we expect it to do so.

1030 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I have just one further supplementary, hopefully. Are there any other capital projects that are envisaged in relation to the University itself? I have in mind, of course, the accommodation block – particularly in relation to that. Could the Government clarify that?

1035 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is indeed a capital project that is envisaged for the University, but it is not a Government project. That would be a University project. What we have done – and as I believe I have already said – we have made available the land to the University for the use of the accommodation block. It is for the University to now develop its plans and arrangements to actually build that accommodation block.

1040 Hon. D A Feetham: But, Mr Speaker, in any venture of this nature that is going to be costly – and of course we have already passed a Bill in this House for the initial funding for the University to the tune of £10 million; that is a cost to the taxpayer – there must be a business plan that must have been drawn up when the Government decided to create the University showing at what point the Government expected the University to be self-financing, bearing in mind that 1045 there is a statutory obligation as well on the University ‘using its best endeavours’ to become self-financing.

Is the hon. Gentleman telling me that really there is not a business plan showing to the Government when it expects it to be self-financing?

1050 Hon. G H Licudi: Certainly when the Government set up the University it did not carry out a projection as to when it would be self-financing. What I did say – and I have said many times: this is a University which was brand new; it was going to start in a small scale and it needed to develop and evolve over time. It was impossible to predict how the University was going to evolve and develop in any particular year to be able to say with any degree of accuracy or 1055 certainty, other than simply being speculative or hypothetical and say, ‘Well, I want it to be self-financing in five years or ten years.’ We could have plucked a figure out of the air. We have not done so and now it is for the University to develop its own business plans, having regard to the fact that it has been operational for a year and now knows its business and where it can obtain its funds from.

1060 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister. He stated that land had been made available to the University for the accommodation block. Could he advise the House whether that land has been legally transferred to the University and, if so, when?

1065 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, no, the land has not been legally – as far as I am aware ... Certainly I have made no arrangements, nor do I believe my colleagues have, for the land to be legally transferred. The land has been identified and earmarked and essentially made available to the University but not in a legal sense because the legal document still needs to be provided, but we have identified and earmarked that particular piece of land for the accommodation block 1070 of the University.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q665/2016 –
University of Gibraltar –
Cost and staffing of kitchen and canteen

Clerk: Question 665, the Hon. E J Phillips.

1075 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm the cost of the kitchen and canteen installed at the University and the number of catering staff permanently employed to operate the kitchen and canteen?

1080

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the kitchen and canteen are part of the fabric of the University. There is a building cost which is part of the overall building costs, and certainly we do not have a building cost per room of the University. It was just a general project.

1085

But in terms of equipping and fitting – which is what, perhaps, the hon. Member is getting at – the cost of equipping and fitting the restaurant kitchen, the training kitchen and the canteen – because there are three elements: there is a restaurant kitchen; there is a training kitchen and there is a canteen at the University of Gibraltar. That cost was £256,042.55.

1090

The engagement of staff is a matter for the University of Gibraltar and not for the Government.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q666/2016 –
University of Gibraltar –
Department of Education oversight or involvement

Clerk: Question 666, the Hon. E J Phillips.

1095

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm what oversight or involvement the Department of Education has in respect of the University of Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

1100

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, section 19 of the University of Gibraltar Act sets out the composition of the Board of Governors. One of its members, by virtue of his post, is the Director of Education. That is the extent of the oversight and involvement of the Department of Education through its Director as a member of the Board of Governors of the University.

Q667-670/2016 –
Five new schools –
Building stage, consultation, plans for Bayside School

1105

Clerk: Question 667, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm the exact stage reached by the Government in relation to the building of each of the new five schools?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I will answer together with Questions 668 to 670.

1115

Clerk: Question 668, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm whether parents, students and teachers have been consulted in relation to the plans to rebuild the five new schools?

1120 Clerk: Question number 669, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm whether or not Bayside School will be rebuilt?

1125 Clerk: Question number 670, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government explain how it is envisaged that Bayside School will include, within the existing footprint of the school, playing fields for rugby, football and hockey?

1130 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the position remains as stated in answer to Question 474/2016. May I just say, Mr Speaker, that question was answered on 30th June 2016, so the position remains as stated in that answer.

1135 Hon. E J Phillips: As far as I recall from memory – and correct me if I am wrong, I am sure the Minister will – the position is that you are undergoing preparatory stages in relation to each of the schools. So insofar as the answer is concerned, you have not arrived at anything different as to the position? You are still in a preparation period for each of the new five schools? Is that correct?

1140 Hon. G H Licudi: That was the thrust of the answer given in June, so the preparatory work has commenced, consultation has commenced. A significant amount of preparatory work before bricks and mortar are actually laid is required, so that process is continuing. I am not saying that the process stopped in June because the answer is the same. The process of the preparatory work is continuing.

1145 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I am not too sure that 670 was answered in the last question in relation to the existing footprint and playing fields: rugby, football and hockey. There was some discussion in supplementary relating to that question but there is nothing more than that.

1150 I think the Chief Minister mentioned the playing fields, 'Why should not Gibraltar have the playing fields of public schools in the United Kingdom here?' I think that was referenced by him but there was no specific answer to that specific Question 671. I may be wrong. I know he may have it with him.

1155 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I do have Hansard with me. I do not know and I cannot recall whether that was specifically mentioned at the time but everything to do with the schools, Bayside and the others, and what will be contained in the footprint of those schools, are certainly part of the preparatory work that is being done at the moment.

1160 Hon. E J Phillips: One further supplementary in relation to that section of questions: it is right, then, that Bayside will be rebuilt? I just wanted to clarify that because it is not very clear from the answer that he is referring to and the one now whether it is going to be rebuilt. I just really need the answer to that very specific question.

1165 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, part of the preparatory work involves precisely identifying how the project is going to be carried out and what the elements of the project will be. I did say at the time, I seem to recall, that it involves a very careful logistical exercise as to how it needs to 1170 be done. So those questions about rebuilding: which parts are rebuilt and which parts may not 1175 be rebuilt; whether the whole thing is rebuilt are certainly questions that the preparatory work will raise.

Hon. E J Phillips: I think I will ask a very direct question, a very simple question. I know I am 1175 taking much of Mr Speaker's time in relation to this point, but the question I am getting at is that the Government's manifesto – the Strongest Foundations Manifesto – refers to – and most of the glossy pictures demonstrate – an entire rebuild of five new schools in our community. What people expect to know is, is this going to be a lick of paint refurbishment of Bayside School or is it going to be rebuilt? That is the question I am asking and I would appreciate the answer.

1180 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, what you get in manifestos are artist's impressions giving an idea of what is envisaged. The hon. Members will recall that the final product may not be exactly the same as that artist's impression; it may actually be better. The hon. Members will recall that 1185 in 2011 we published a manifesto with a 700-berth marina, which has nothing to do – except for the location which is very close – with the marina that we actually built. The marina that we built is much, much better than the artist's impression in 2011 would suggest. Therefore, the fact that there is an artist's impression is simply for guidance. It does not tie down the Government to what it needs to do and how it needs to do it. All these things need to be assessed and determined and the Government will take its time and will deliver its commitments as set out in the manifesto before the end of this term of office.

1190 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, the answer to that question really demonstrates – and I put the question very succinctly – a real lack of vision and lack of preparation in relation to this –

Mr Speaker: Look – and I have to issue a word of warning to the hon. Member. He is not 1195 going to be able, unless he is very careful, to ask further questions arising from these five next month. He may have to wait six months before he does so, according to the Rules, because we are talking of progress. That is what he is seeking, right? Therefore, having asked the question, having been told that the position is exactly the same as it was last June, in a way he has pre-empted himself from asking questions that he was perfectly entitled to in January, but now that 1200 we are in October, that has been moved to about April. I think I should issue a word of warning.

Now, carry on with the question on Bayside.

Hon. E J Phillips: The reason why I say that is because clearly one of the questions that was 1205 put in this House today was about the roundabout at Bayside junction. If we are going to have heavy lorries moving down through Bayside Road where the new school is going to be rebuilt, it clearly shows a lack of vision and lack of preparation between my learned and hon. Friend across the floor and the Minister Balban in relation to that. Clearly, there is no planning here. A school is going to be rebuilt from the ground up and they are not even thinking about the roundabout on Bayside Road. This school is going to be complete, they say, in three years' time, so we are 1210 looking at 2019, 2020.

I put it to him that we would at least like some indication as to how he is going to rebuild the school.

1215 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, to say that I am flabbergasted by that supplementary is the understatement of the year! To suggest that the Government has not got vision because it has not discussed the issue of a roundabout in the area not even outside Bayside ... He is talking about Bayside and rebuilding Bayside, and now he turns to a roundabout which is 500 metres away and suggests there is a lack of vision, lack of foresight and lack of planning because I have not consulted with Mr Balban as to what will happen to the roundabout. The hon. Member has 1220 been given a clear position on that roundabout: it will be ready and resurfaced when the building adjoining the roundabout is complete. That has absolutely nothing to do with Bayside, and therefore what the hon. Member is raising is quite simply a red herring.

1225 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what I am interested in, quite apart from the answers to the question that my learned and hon. Friend, Mr Phillips has asked, is whether the Government intends to rebuild Bayside School or whether it is just going to be an internal refurbishment of Bayside School, because the impression that clearly the community had at the last election was that Bayside School was going to be rebuilt. That is what I am interested in, in the supplementary that I am asking.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the excellent plans for the new Bayside Schools will be announced when the Government is ready to do so.

1235 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that may be so. I am absolutely certain that they are going to be excellent plans, of course –

Mr Speaker: He said for the ‘new’ Bayside School.

1240 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, but of course one can call something ‘new’ by just simply refurbishing it on the inside. The question is: is it going to be rebuilt, or is it going to be a refurbishment job? That is basically it. That is a really simple question that the hon. Gentleman ought to be, in his capacity as Minister for Education, able to answer.

1245 Hon. G H Licudi: The position is very simple, Mr Speaker. We have certain requirements and we have given certain commitments. The professionals are now going to be looking at how those commitments and those requirements of the different schools... because we are not just looking at Bayside, we are looking at other schools, so the preparatory work is in respect of the other schools, and whether it is a complete rebuild or almost a complete rebuild, or a major refurbishment plus rebuild, the outcome will be a new school for Bayside, as we do have already 1250 two new St Bernard’s schools on the site of an old building, with magnificent facilities. Have those been rebuilt? Are they refurbished? What are they? It does not matter what the label is. Labels do not matter. What matters is the outcome and the product, and the product will be just as good as the new schools we have already delivered in our last term of office.

1255 Several Members: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Q671-672/2016

Bayside School –

Conversion of timeout and sixth-form common rooms

Clerk: Question 671. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1260 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm why the timeout room at Bayside School was converted into a classroom and why the new timeout room was incorporated into the study hall?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

1265 Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 672.

Clerk: Question 672. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm why Bayside School has removed the sixth-form common room and converted it into a classroom?

1270

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, this was done in order to create additional classrooms required due to an increase in the number of students.

1275

Hon. E J Phillips: Doesn't the hon. Gentleman agree with me that the longstanding common room that many of us in this House have enjoyed over the time of our studies at Bayside should be maintained in some form? It gives the opportunity for students to clearly have timeout space – I am not referring to the time out, but time to study privately in the common room – and have a break from their studies, so removing the common room has had an effect on students and some of them have approached me with this issue.

1280

In relation to the timeout room, my understanding from people who have spoken to me is that it has been converted into a classroom and that the new timeout room has been incorporated into a study hall. The timeout room is specifically, to my knowledge, being used for the purposes of time out for certain students who have had some difficulties, and therefore it just seemed the wrong process by which to increase rooms. I understand the need to increase rooms, but the maintenance of a common room is also important in Bayside.

1285

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member believes that individual Ministers sit down and determine what each room in every Government building is used for, then he has got a different notion to being in Government than what we have experienced in the last five years. These are decisions for the professionals. They have got the building, they have got a fabric there, they have got to make the best use of an educational facility to provide the level of support, learning and teaching that is required. So, if they decide that the best use... 'best' use, because there may be choices to be made: do you leave it in this use, or do you use it in this other way? The hon. Member may disagree, but the professionals who know about these things are the ones who take these decisions and they have decided that this is the best use for these particular facilities. Therefore, I bow to the professionals and not to the hon. Member.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, of course I understand the professionals are in situ and therefore they conduct what they believe is the best use of these rooms, but we also have to consider the significant number of students in sixth form that use the common room and have an interest in maintaining the common room. I understand that difficult decisions have to be made at that level, but I think we should also consider those students who require that facility. We have all used it – I have used it and I am sure all of us in this room who were at Bayside have used the common room.

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, and I am sure the professionals who took these decisions have considered those matters and have determined what the best use is, but in any event I am sure that all these matters will again be considered in the context of the new Bayside School, in the same way as we considered all of these matters in the context of the new, excellent and magnificent St Bernard's schools.

1310

Two Members: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

1315

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I do not think I have got to declare my interest that I do come from the teaching profession, but I will.

1320 I am grateful to hear the Minister saying that he has left the matter in the hands of professionals. I take it by that he can either mean the profession in general, or perhaps by representation through the Teachers' Association or with the senior management, the headteacher, his deputies and so on. And of course consultation is great and helps Ministers, whatever political party they come from, to carry out their duties in the best manner possible.

1325 Can the Minister now confirm whether there has been any consultation whatsoever as well with the sixth-form students, who are the parties directly involved?

1330 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I have no idea. It has not been a ministerial decision. I have not even been consulted on this. It is not a matter for the Government or for the Minister to interfere in these matters. It is a matter for the professionals, and by 'the professionals' I would expect the head of the school and the senior management of the school to discuss it with the Department of Education and come to a view as to the best use of the facilities they have for all the students and all the staff.

1335 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, taking on board what the Minister has just said, is there any Government policy as to whether there should or should not be a sixth form in any of our secondary schools?

A Member: Common room.

1340 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, this is not a matter of whether there is or there is not a policy. There was a sixth-form common room. Would we like to see one in the schools for the secondary? Yes, absolutely, the Government would certainly like to see common rooms for the sixth form in the secondary schools.

Q673-674/2016
Truancy rates –
Rates by school

Clerk: Question 673. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1345 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm truancy rates at each school operating under the auspices of the Department of Education?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

1350 Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 674.

Clerk: Question 674. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1355 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm what measures or procedures are in place for reducing truancy?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

1360 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, truancy rates at all schools, barring Bayside and Westside, stand at 0% of the school population. At Bayside the truancy rate stands at 2.2% of the school population; the figure at Westside is 1%.

1365 School registers are checked daily and weekly. The school then endeavours to engage with parents when children playing truant are flagged. Meetings are set up in school with the parents in order to try and ascertain why the child is absconding. Strategies are worked out: it may well be that the child is placed on a daily report which needs to be countersigned by the parent at the end of each day. The school's liaison officer is then invited to come in and speak with the child and the parents. The Department's Advisory Service becomes involved at this stage, and education advisers and psychologists also attend these meetings. The situation is periodically 1370 reviewed.

The matter is referred to the Care Agency if the parents do not co-operate and the truancy continues. The school writes to the parents explaining that the child is still absconding or not attending school, and this could lead to the Director sending a school attendance order to the family if the issue is not resolved.

Q675/2016
Royal Gibraltar Police –
Manpower resource

1375 Clerk: Question 675. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that they are satisfied that the Royal Gibraltar Police are sufficiently resourced, particularly in relation to manpower?

1380 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education.

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, yes.

Q676/2016
HM Court Service –
Drugs court

1385 Clerk: Question 676. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Given the strong link between drugs and the commission of criminal offences, has the Government given thought to the creation of a specific drugs court within the existing resources available to HM Court Service?

1390 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Government does not currently have any intentions of creating a specific drugs court.

1395 Clerk: Question 677. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide the total gross debt –

1400 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I was just going to suggest this might be a convenient moment, given that we are between Ministers, to recuse the House for 15 minutes and then continue.

Mr Speaker: We will now have a short recess.

The House recessed at 3.50 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 4.10 p.m.

1405

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND THE GSB

Q677-680/2016

Public finance –

Public debt; liquid reserves; Sinking Fund

Clerk: Question 677. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1410 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide the total gross debt, aggregate debt after application of the Sinking Fund to gross debt, cash reserves and net debt figures for public debt for each of the following dates, being 1st August 2016 and 1st September 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

1415

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 678 to 680.

Clerk: Question 678. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1420

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide the total liquid reserves figure and its constituents, namely Consolidated Fund, Improvement and Development Fund, Government-owned companies, deposits, contingencies and other funds for each of the following dates, being 1st August 2016 and 1st September 2016?

1425

Clerk: Question 679. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1430 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise how total liquid reserves are invested/held, giving details of all bank/savings bank accounts and cash held for each of the following dates, being 1st August 2016 and 1st September 2016?

Clerk: Question 680. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1435 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how much has been paid out of the Sinking Fund from inception to 31st March 2016 in respect of interest payments?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

1440 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the Government will be providing the information that has been provided previously, but not the further breakdowns requested by the hon. Member.

The gross debt and the Sinking Fund balance have not changed in July and August.

The cash reserves and the net debt for the dates requested were estimated at £45.2 million and £42.2 million, with the result of a net debt of £400.8 million and £403.8 million.

1445 Interest on the public debt from the Sinking Fund for the period requested has been £3,290,480 million.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for providing at least the cash reserves and the net debt figures of which I am very grateful.

1450 Can he confirm just one simple question, that – I suppose I should work backwards – the gross debt figures unchanged are £447.7 million?

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is correct, there has been no change in that.

1455 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

In respect of the other information I was requesting, would the Minister be able to confirm to me, in terms of the components – although he may not give me the numbers – of total liquid reserves, when it comes to Government-owned companies would that include companies such as Gibraltar Investment Holdings Ltd?

1460 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, as I have explained in the past, the system that existed prior to December 2011 and came into existence post May 1996, i.e. the period when the party that he represents in this Parliament was in Government... all the money in all the companies is pooled together and managed by the Treasury. That includes, in some cases, companies that have got a zero balance, companies that have got a plus and companies that have got a minus, and the net figure of company balance is the addition of the pluses and the minuses.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1470 We recently had the Principal Auditor's Report for 31st March 2015, and I note that in terms of liquid reserves the number at 31st March 2014 – including the Government-owned companies, which was £201.68 million – the total number was £284.29 million compared to the position at 31st March 2015, which was £134.33 million, which represents a decrease of £159.96 million, or effectively £160 million decrease in liquid reserves in one year. I note that the bulk of this seems to be from Government-owned companies.

1475 My question is: if Credit Finance has a call deposit with Gibraltar Investment Holdings Ltd, is the Minister confident that Gibraltar Investment Holdings Ltd will have sufficient cash to repay that call deposit if total cash in Government-owned companies at 31st March 2015 was only £60 million?

1480 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, as you well know, the Standing Order does not allow Members to ask in supplementaries for information that has nothing to do with what was in the original question, and therefore the answer to his question is yes, but I am not required to give him an answer.

1485 Hon. R M Clinton: I understand that 'yes' to mean that he is confident that Gibraltar Investment Holdings can repay the call deposit at call. I presume ... if I may ask him to share with us what it is his understanding of the word 'call' means.

1490 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, he is not entitled to ask me that question because it is in breach of the rules, which say that you cannot introduce new material in supplementaries that do not arise from the original question. Because I have given him an answer which he is not entitled to have, he now wants me to give him an explanation for my answer. Well, he is not going to get one.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1495 Again, I thank the hon. Member. Coming back to the question about the net debt and the gross debt figures, is it now the intention of the Government to place these numbers on the Government website on a monthly basis?

1500 Hon. J J Bossano: I do not put information on the Government web page at all – I do not believe in web pages – but it may well be that it gets put on the web page.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the hon. Member for that answer.

1505 In terms of the Sinking Fund, I am now in possession, finally, of at least some movements in the Sinking Fund for the year 31st March 2015, and I note in his answer to my question the hon. Member says that the total interest paid out of the Sinking Fund was £3.294 million – if that is correct.

Hon. J J Bossano: I will repeat the answer, Mr Speaker: it is £3,290,480.

1510 Hon. R M Clinton: So, Mr Speaker, if I understand correctly, effectively £3.2 million between us, yes? Okay.

Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if the hon. Member could explain to me what is the discrepancy, as it would appear to me, between £3.2 million of interest and the payment showing in the Principal Auditor's Report for the Sinking Fund movement, which says:

Redemption returns paid on issue of capital bonds of £8,342,391.

1515 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, perhaps I need to point out to the hon. Member that what he is doing now is asking in supplementaries for explanations of things that are in the Principal Auditor's Report, which was tabled at the last House.

1520 The explanation for that is the explanation that there is in the book: that that payment was for the repayment of capital bonds and not for the payment of interest. He has put a question of the payment of interest – I have given him the answer to the question that he has put and now he wants to know what is the explanation for what is reported by the auditor in the audited accounts that were tabled at the last meeting of the House. That explanation is that they are capital bonds that were repaid in that period and that was the amount that was repaid, but that amount did not constitute interest – which is what he has asked me now.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I really do here run the risk of having a supplemental disallowed. If I understand the Member correctly, is he telling me that the capital bonds were issued at a discount and redeemed at par, or they were redeemed at a premium?

1530 Mr Speaker: No matter how generous the Minister is in providing information, I find it very difficult as Speaker, given the five questions originally on the Order Paper, to take the view that that supplementary automatically arises from any of those five. I do not think it can be construed.

1535 There are questions which invariably the hon. Member is going to make which require separate notice. He has to give separate notice of questions.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I accept your ruling entirely.

1540 If I may deal precisely with the £3.2 million paid out of the Sinking Fund, which – and the Minister may correct me – I presume must have been paid from 31st March 2015 and 31st March 2016, it must be for that year ...?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have answered the question that he asked, and he did not ask that question in respect of one financial year, he asked the question paid out from the inception of the fund, so the answer is that is the figure from the inception of the fund.

1545

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, coming to the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act, may I ask the Minister whether, in the calculation of the annual debt service ratio, any interest paid out of the Sinking Fund is taken into account?

1550

Hon. J J Bossano: (a) I am not a lawyer, and (b) I am not here to give him legal advice, Mr Speaker. Nevertheless, my interpretation – having been here for 44 years – of that particular piece of legislation is that the debt servicing ratio, which has to beat the percentage of the revenue, is independent of how it is repaid when it is repaid. The amount is calculated on the basis that if to service a public debt in a given year you have to pay £20 million in interest, then that is the figure that is used in the formula. The fact that it is paid from the Consolidated Fund or paid from the Sinking Fund or paid from anybody else has no relevance, because there is nothing in the law that makes any mention of where it has to be paid from. It is just a formula to give an indication of what it costs as recurrent expenditure to carry that volume of debt.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would the Hon. Minister accept that without the movements on the Sinking Fund in terms of interest, and given that, as he says, again, I am no lawyer either, the interest payment is made out of the Sinking Fund, that it would be pretty nigh impossible to work out the debt service ratio without the information on interest paid out of the Sinking Fund, because obviously when we look at the charges on the Consolidated Fund it has a LIBOR Bank interest and Government debenture interest, but obviously the interest paid out of the Sinking Fund would not appear?

1565

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I do not agree at all with what he says. I think it is completely irrelevant and complete nonsense. I have just explained to him.

1570

Look, if he is lending me money and I have to pay him interest, the amount of interest that I have to pay him is what is then used in the formula in the Public Loans Act, which then says that that is cut at a certain percentage. Whether I pay him from the Consolidated Fund or from the Sinking Fund, and whether I pay all of it from the Consolidated Fund or all of it from the Sinking Fund has no effect on what that figure is, because it is a figure that is determined by the amount that is payable, not by who pays it. So the answer is it does not matter. We can pay it all from one place or all from another, but it neither increases nor decreases the payable amount.

1575

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I think we both agree with each other. I understand exactly what the Hon. Minister is saying. But that is not my question. My question is: how is it possible to determine from the annual Estimates Book, which has a charge in here for bank interest and interest payment on Government debt, which is, as we all know, cash based, and then you have a one-line number £10 million into the Sinking Fund ... how is one able to determine what the debt service ratio from this side of the House is without having sight of what interest is paid through the Sinking Fund?

Hon. J J Bossano: I am not sure that I am really supposed to give him lessons on how he should do it, which I did when I was there. Mr Speaker, he is asking me how is he, from the Opposition, going to figure out ... Well, look, he is looking at the wrong place in the book – that is the answer. What he should be looking at is the information he has already got on what is the interest on the debt, which is not something that is reflected anywhere in that, which is all estimates of what we think is going to be spent in respect of certain things during the course of the financial year.

1590

1595 At the end of the year an exercise is done, which is done retrospectively. You take the previous year's revenue and the previous year's income and the previous year's expenditure, and in that global numbers game there is a figure for the interest for the year which, for example, at the beginning of the year you may not be able to predict. At the beginning of the year we have an estimate of the amount of borrowing we have got. That does not mean that there is a prohibition to increase the level of debt during the year, because what we have done is an estimate, and the prohibition is the maximum of 40% of the GDP. If we wanted or we 1600 needed to increase the debt during the year, that debt would increase. If that debt increased, the estimated interest during the year would naturally increase. It would increase more if we did it in April and it would increase very little if we did it in February 2017. So it is not a figure that you can calculate on the basis of the estimates for this year, because the estimates for this year are not set in tablets of stone.

1605 At the end of the year what is required is that we should not have breached the percentages laid down in the law, and I can tell him that interest rates would have to be very high for those percentages to be breached with the volume of debt that we have got. So what he is looking at is are we within the limit, and the answer is we are within the limit, but of course one of the things with that particular limit, which is defective in a way, is that should the pound collapse 1610 totally tomorrow and we did not have fixed interest rates and we had floating rates, we could suddenly find ourselves with the interest rates being more than we anticipated and the possibility of having a problem that we might be reaching the maximum that is permissible under the law. At present that is not something that is likely to happen.

1615 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, finally, I would just like to record my thanks to the Minister for actually now giving us the gross and net debt figures. Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Q681/2016

Maritime Cadet Training Scheme – Gibraltar students

Clerk: Question 681. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1620 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can Government provide details in respect of any Gibraltar students currently undertaking the Maritime Cadet Training Scheme, indicating at what stage they are in their training and estimated completion date, together with qualifications aimed to be attained?

1625 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
Mr Speaker, at present there are none undertaking the Maritime Cadet Training Scheme.
However, there is one person funded by a discretionary grant from the Department of Education who has been doing a comparable course of study since 2015.

1630 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am really glad to hear that there is a student enjoying a discretionary grant and so on. Would the Minister happen to know what is the qualification that should be attained upon successful completion of this course?

1635 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Mr Speaker, I thought he might want to know. The position is that this student has been in the Warsash Maritime Academy, which is where we used to send the ones under the scheme previously, as a cadet officer. He has been working on ... The first ship was 1640 called Mare Transporter from Germany. He has been back to Gibraltar and he has been out on several other ships. He is expected to finish his studies in 2018 and he would then be qualified as an Officer of the Watch. He has to accrue a minimum of 12 months on board a ship during the three-year period; and it is a sandwich course, which means he is part of the time in the college and part of the time at sea, and he has been on different ships.

1645 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker. It is great to hear that and I hope the Minister does agree with me that these sort of courses, ones where it is a combination of practical and theory, do end up producing really – in my opinion, and I hope the Minister’s opinion as well – better quality professionals because they have done a lot of the training on the ground.

1650 May I add, Mr Speaker, if I posed it as a question, would the Minister agree with me that perhaps he could ask – especially the new Minister for Education who is going to take over that portfolio – should ask that we encourage, in a nice way, the professionals within the schools to ensure that the students there are informed about the availability of joining the Maritime Cadet Training Scheme. I am sure the Minister, like myself ... I am always extremely proud to see reports in newspapers, like in Today, of young Gibraltarians attaining qualifications and so on. Above all what makes us proudest is to see a Gibraltarian being the Captain of the Port, and 1655 perhaps when the day comes that the hon. Member and myself both decide to call it a day in this House and meet in the lower Chamber downstairs enjoying a coffee, then we will be satisfied that we have planted the seeds for a new Captain of the Port to be a Gibraltarian wherever possible.

1660 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, this is not a run-of-the-mill course, Mr Speaker, because it does mean spending at least half the time at sea on merchant vessels, and that is not everybody’s cup of tea. I spent myself four years, but not at such exalted heights – I was a mere deckhand! But certainly I think it is important that people should be aware that that is an opportunity that exists, and if there are people attracted then fine.

1665 I have always believed that in providing education – it is something that surfaced earlier in another question, no – really we should not push people in a direction that is not their natural inclination, because people are more likely to perform better and produce better results if what they set out to learn is something that inspires them and they enjoy doing. That is why in our educational scholarships we do not require people to limit themselves to things that are useful 1670 for us in Gibraltar. The result of that is that we lose an awful lot of the people that we train, but as the hon. Member correctly says, it is important that those who do undertake training would at least at some later stage in life be able to come back and bring back their knowledge and their experience to serve in Gibraltar, as has been done in the case of the Port.

1675 So, I agree with his sentiments and I will certainly recommend his views to the Minister for Education.

Q682-685/2016

Construction Trades and Engineering Training Centres – Enrolled trainees; new intakes; level 1 NVQ

Clerk: Question 682. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1680 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Training provide updated details in respect of all trainees currently enrolled at the Construction Trades Training Centre, listing the specific discipline or course being followed, as well as indicating at what NVQ level they are enrolled together with their start date at the Training Centre?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

1685

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 683 to 685.

Clerk: Question 683. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1690

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Minister for Training provide updated details in respect of all trainees currently enrolled at the Engineering Trades Training Centre, listing the specific discipline or course being followed, as well as indicating at what NVQ level they are enrolled together with their start date at the Training Centre?

1695

Clerk: Question 684. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, please state the number of new intakes at the Construction Trades Training Centre and the Engineering Trades Training Centre in 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015 and 2016?

1700

Clerk: Question 685. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many people are currently undertaking Level 1 NVQ at the Construction Trades Training Centre and the Engineering Trades Training Centre?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
Mr Speaker, I will include these issues in my contribution to the motion on the Order Paper dealing with training. (Laughter)

1710

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, of course one thing is debating a motion, which Mr Speaker always has commended to this House since he took up the speakership, and indeed that we have lately been taking up, because we have been filing an intend to file motions very regularly; and the other is answering questions which are perfectly legitimate questions.

1715

Can the hon. Gentleman – because he has done this before – confirm that the information that we are seeking in these questions – certainly the information that I am seeking at 684 and the information that I am seeking at 685 – will be provided during the course of his intervention in the course of the motions? That is the question, but may I remind him that when we asked for questions on net debt and cash reserves prior to the Budget, the hon. Gentleman said that the information was going to be provided by the Chief Minister in the course of his intervention, and it never happened. So please could you confirm that that is going to be the case?

1720

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Mr Speaker. (Interjection and laughter)

1725

Q686-687/2016
Assistance re training and jobs –
Offenders; young people

Clerk: Question 686. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1730 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I have to say that I am warmed for the first time to see another round of Hassan versus Bossano here in the House, and although at this time it is the Hassan side with less experience, I hope that even if we disagree we can deal in the same way that they did in the past with the same respect and dignity.

1735 The question is: is the Government satisfied with their level of assistance to rehabilitate and integrate offenders with jobs and a future after coming back into society following a prison sentence?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

1740 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 687 – and I will do my best to keep the same level of affection in the answers that there used to exist between her dad and me.

Clerk: Question 687. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1745 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Does Government intend to look at training for our youngsters via vocational training to possibly prepare for the possibility of restrictions in border flow with the advent of Brexit and the subsequent uncertainty of access to foreign workers?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

1750 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I have put quite a lot of detail because I am trying to give a full answer to the issues that have been raised by the hon. Member.

1755 As regards the retraining and rehabilitation and integration of offenders following a prison sentence, the answer is yes, but it is not an unqualified yes, as that would imply that nothing more or better can be done, and I believe that this view should never be taken. What I can say is that we are satisfied that more is being done now than was being done prior to December 2011.

1760 There is the indirect effect due to the improved market conditions. This is because the introduction of the Training for Employment Strategy has increased the level of employment and therefore considerably reduced the number of persons registered as seeking employment. So, on the one hand those disadvantaged by having served a custodial sentence face less competition from resident workers. At the same time, the economic programme since 2011 has increased the number of jobs in the labour market and a larger labour market means more demand for workers. This has gone up from 22,247 in 2011 to 26,144 in 2015. Thirdly, the joint campaign by my Department and the Department of Employment to remind approved Government contractors that they must give priority to local residents seeking employment applies equally to those entering the labour market after a custodial sentence.

1765 The introduction of the Training for Employment Strategy in 2012 was accompanied by making provision as part of the programme for financing a part-time counsellor, who was a person already undertaking work with Her Majesty's Prison on a voluntary basis and was therefore able to provide support for offenders on a more structured basis and as a result of the funding. This was developed both whilst a custodial sentence was being served and after release on a follow-up basis for a limited period, with the counselling then being delivered in premises provided within my Department.

1770 The opportunity to take up training in a placement where the employer has a job vacancy and is seeking to recruit from the unemployment list receives additional support to make it more attractive to employers to take on an offender after his release.

The Department has as well invested in providing additions to the facilities within Her Majesty's Prison for training in the construction trades. In the current programme from the 1780 European Union, the ESF funding can be used to provide training for persons still serving custodial sentences, provided they have less than three years remaining prior to the date of their release. This is part of the current programme making partial use of ESF funding, which was originally intended to be a programme until 2020 but is currently expected to be available at a 1785 reduced level up to 2018. The need for initial local funding will be reviewed after this date, depending on what arrangements apply as a result of the negotiations with the European Union.

As regards the training of resident workers, irrespective of age, in the event that border restrictions following Brexit limits access to frontier workers, the position is that given the level of unemployment and the number of frontier workers there would be limited impact from the existing resident workforce in terms of redeploying them.

1790 The policy of the Government as stated in the 2011 manifesto is that there should be priority given to resident workers for filling vacancies for which they are suitably qualified in the public sector, and in the private sector where contractors provide a service to the public sector. The training and apprenticeships provided since 2011 have been for the private sector in order to encourage all private sector employers to give priority to resident workers by giving financial 1795 support in the provision of the training.

The most recent example has been the training and employment to qualify them for public service vehicle drivers. This training has been funded by the Ministry for Economic Development, working closely with the industry. It has been followed by a scheme that guarantees a two-year employment contract in the private sector coach industry to service 1800 primarily the cruise liner visitors where there is an increasing number of visits creating a demand which would have been at risk if it depended on the service relying on frontier workers. This has now been successfully implemented with the support of the European Social Fund. The allocations of this fund would have lasted, as I have said, until 2020 but for Brexit. It is likely that the full allocation of the current programme will not be available to us, given the present 1805 intention of the UK to trigger the Article 50 notice in March 2017. This would lead to the departure from the EU by March 2019, unless the EU agrees to defer the date. This deferment at present seems unlikely and therefore my Department is working on the premise that it will not happen.

1810 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, firstly, I am glad to hear of the hon. Member's optimism regarding Brexit and where he said that there would be minimal impact – and I really do hope that that will be the case, but of course only time will tell.

On the matter of ex-offenders, my concern was that I find that I speak to a lot of ex-offenders and they feel a little lost as to who to go to – not just the counsellor, but is there anyone, any 1815 Department, where ex-offenders can go directly within Government to deal with the sensitivities associated with getting back into the workplace?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, yes, it is my Department. The person we are employing on a 20-hour basis, on a part-time basis, has been dealing with something like 158 offenders over the period 1820 that he has been doing this job for us, since he started in 2013, and, as I have said, he is, in a way, the conduit of the transition. The counselling is not limited to employment, but in the context of the counselling, while the people are still serving the sentence he sees them regularly in the prison, he encourages them to take on training and then he warns us, before they are due to leave, when they are due to leave and we then alert the people who are responsible for 1825 providing potential trainees to the private sector on the basis that we tend to provide funding for a longer period in order to make it more attractive for an employer to take somebody for which, in effect, there will be a bigger amount of subvention so as to make it more likely that they will be taken on. The counsellor then continues to make appointments to see them regularly in a confidential context within my premises so as to give them support and follow-up 1830 advice once they have come out and they are already in the labour market.

1835 All this is a voluntary thing. Obviously the individuals have to want to take up this facility, because there is no compulsion. We try to make it as attractive as we can. We all know that sometimes it is difficult, for example, for persons in that context to attend regularly and so forth, so there tends to be sometimes the problem of absenteeism at the start of the process. We tend 1840 to use, where we can, persons who are doing work for the Government and contracting work for the Government, on the basis that we are in a better position to say to them if a guy misses one day a week because he spends the money on the weekend and then he has got a problem getting up on Monday, it is better to have him working four days than not to have him working at all, and we, as the client, will not hold him responsible for any deficiencies in the delivery of the work that you do for us. So we try to do it in a situation where we are the customer as well in dealing with people who are providing services to the Government.

1845 But, as I said at the beginning when the hon. Lady asked me if I thought we were doing enough, the answer is it is never going to be enough until you have got a perfect system and everybody gets a job the day after they come out.

1850 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: If I may, one last supplementary. One of the setbacks that I have found exists within ex-offenders is that they find it very hard to open bank accounts when they come out and they get into the job market, and this is something obviously that holds them back for obvious practical reasons. Is your Government willing to relax those laws or give some kind of system or infrastructure for them to start having a bank account and getting back into the day to day?

1855 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I am not surprised because everybody seems to be having a problem opening bank accounts nowadays in Gibraltar, so I can imagine it is even more difficult if you have just been serving a custodial sentence.

1860 I do not think we can do much about it with commercial banks. I think if the Savings Bank were at some point to extend the level of services, that may be an area where we could have direct influence. But even in the Government-owned International Bank, from the beginning we have treated it at arm's length. I do not know whether there is anything we can do, but I will certainly try and find out if there is any way in which we can help.

1865 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one question in relation to Question 687. Does the hon.
Member agree with me that in respect of training of skills, just in the context of the United Kingdom when they are looking at Brexit, I know that the Minister for Training and Skills is looking at increasing training opportunities for skills-based learning. It is a very important thing in the United Kingdom to increase awareness in relation to skills and apprenticeships and vocational training. Would the hon. Member agree with me that we need to do much more about increasing those opportunities in the context of a Brexit situation?

1870 Hon. J J Bossano: I think we need to be conscious of the supply of potential trainees and the numbers of frontier workers. You are talking about a couple of hundred people who are the potential trainees, who are currently unemployed, and 7,000 frontier workers. If we lost 7,000 frontier workers they would have to be supermen if we were going to replace them with the 200 we have got out of work!

1875 What we have done, for example, in the case of the liner industry is a very good example, because there you have a situation: we are talking about having trained about 50 people who were previously unemployed, who had driving licences but they did not have PSV licences. We first invested in their training and we got them qualified, and then we negotiated with the whole industry a level of wage subsidy which would enable the industry to give regular work where 1880 previously we had two problems in that area which meant that they were dependant on frontier workers. One problem was that there were people unemployed who did not have the right D-licence and who could not afford to finance the training and pay to get the licence because they 1885 were unemployed – on the supply side of the equation. And on the demand side of the equation the industry was not offering anything other than seasonal work. It was not offering permanent work, and therefore it was not a sufficiently attractive proposition for local workers who were unemployed, even though the rate of pay is quite good by the standards of the private sector, because they preferred a lower paid job but continuity, whereas the industry tended to be ...

there was a demand which was very high at certain periods and less in other periods.

1890 By negotiation with the industry we have actually managed to reduce their labour costs by providing financial help and that has enabled them to commit to guaranteed two-year contracts.
That means that, in effect, we have insulated that particular industry. It is a very small part of the whole market, but we have actually succeeded in insulating that industry from any potential risk, and in many respects the employers in that area want to be able to know that if they have got a commitment with a liner company and the liner arrives at nine in the morning or eight in 1895 the morning, never mind the closure, there is not going to be a queue and they have got all the coach drivers on the wrong side of the border. So that has been an example of something that we have been able to do. The initiative came from the industry, to be fair, not from me, – although they are giving me the credit for it. They came up with the idea and asked me to find a way of finding the money to help them, and that is what I was able to contribute.

1900 But certainly it is something that I would be happy to look at in any other area where something similar can be done. That is the answer.

Order of the Day

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDERS

Standing Order 7(1) suspended to proceed with Government Bills

1905 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move, under Standing Order 7(3), to suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with Government Bills.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question that Standing Orders be suspended in order to proceed with Bills. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Carried.

BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Gibraltar Consultative Council Bill 2016 – First Reading approved

1910 Clerk: A Bill for an Act establishing the Gibraltar Consultative Council and governing its functions and duties, and prescribing the terms of membership of the same.
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move that a Bill for an Act for a Gibraltar Consultative Council be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act establishing the Gibraltar Consultative Council and governing its functions and duties, and prescribing the terms of membership of the same be read a first time.

1915 Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

Clerk: The Gibraltar Consultative Council Act 2016.

Gibraltar Consultative Council Bill 2016 –
Second Reading approved

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to beg that the Bill now be read a second time.

1920 In my Budget speech of 2014 I indicated that I wanted to establish for Gibraltar a body akin, similar to that of the Privy Council in the United Kingdom.

During the course of that speech what I explained to the House was as follows: that when a nation such as ours finds that there are issues that affect the national interest, there needs to be a body above party politics that can provide an opportunity for consideration of those issues.

1925 The former Chief Minister, I reminded the House, had established a similar ad hoc consultative body when Gibraltar was facing the threat of joint sovereignty, but did not include the Opposition in it. I wanted to go further than that and change the way that we do politics on some issues which matter to the national interest, and as a keen supporter and defender of the Westminster adversarial system it is also right that we should at some stages, in the national 1930 interest, where the national interest is at stake, that we should be able to work together instead of adversarially, because Gibraltar's best brains can be brought to work in unison in some necessary instances, and not have to be condemned forever to be challenging each other. Therefore, I wanted to create this committee in order not to have to go down the alternative route, which is to simply throw out the baby with the bathwater of our adversarial system and 1935 have to, instead, for the committee system of government, which I would have thought was not a good thing for Gibraltar.

I indicated then, Mr Speaker, that such a body, in my view, had to be permanent and it should not be ad hoc, and I proposed that that body should be made up for their lifetimes of all individuals who had held the post of Chief Minister, for their lifetimes all individuals who have 1940 held the post of Deputy Chief Minister, for the period of their tenure in office the Leader of the Opposition and the Minister for Justice, and for such period as may be stipulated in the notice of appointment such other persons as the Chief Minister of the day may consider appropriate to appoint.

1945 Mr Speaker, I also made clear in 2014 that Members would be required to sign the Official Secrets Act and the information that might be shared with them in the context of that forum would be subject to strict rules of confidentiality, very much like the position in the Privy Council.

1950 Having such a Consultative Council, in my submission, would enable the Chief Minister of the day to meet with all or just some of the members of that Council as any Chief Minister may consider appropriate and exchange ideas or take advice on any particular matter or issue within the parameters of the strict confidence required of individuals who would make up that Gibraltar Consultative Council (GCC).

1955 I also said at the time that it was the view of the Government that individuals who became part of the Consultative Council should be able to use the prenominal letters of 'Right Honourable' or something similar, as is the case in respect of membership of the Privy Council in the United Kingdom. I also, I think, stressed at the time, Mr Speaker, that appointment to the Consultative Council should not be remunerated, because I thought it would be a huge honour for a Gibraltarian to be called upon to serve by a Chief Minister of the day in respect of this advisory capacity. Neither do I think that this is a committee that will meet every day or every week.

1960

Mr Speaker, in 2014 therefore I gave instructions for a Bill to be drafted to implement that objective of the Government, and a Command Paper was published in April 2015 for a Gibraltar Consultative Council Act which would implement the decision to establish a body in Gibraltar similar to the Privy Council in the UK.

1965

When I first spoke of the matter I referred to the 'Chief Minister's Consultative Council', and speaking during the course of his response in the Budget debate the former Chief Minister, Sir Peter Caruana, suggested that perhaps it might be more appropriate that the Council should be named the Gibraltar Consultative Council rather than the Chief Minister's Consultative Council, something which I told him during the course of my response to the Budget addresses of hon. Members opposite that year, thought actually was a good idea and a better idea than calling it a Chief Minister's Consultative Council, so that it is clear that although it was designed to advise the Chief Minister, it was Gibraltar's Council and not in any way the Chief Minister's Council.

1970

Mr Speaker, as is stated in the Command Paper, when the Act comes into effect it is intended that there would be an inaugural meeting of the Gibraltar Consultative Council at which all members will take an oath of appointment. After that, the Chief Minister will convene a plenary meeting of the Council at least once every 12 months. A plenary meeting will be convened at least once within four months of the appointment of a new Chief Minister, who may at his discretion convene a meeting of the Gibraltar Consultative Council as he determines necessary. The note also explains that the Chief Minister may wish to consult individuals or groups or members of the GCC on any matters as and when he considers necessary.

1975

I think it is important to make that point, Mr Speaker, just to remind the House that it is not necessary that the whole committee meets every time that there is a need for the consultations to occur. It may be that there are people with particular expertise that a Chief Minister wants to consult in terms of the auspices of that committee. He may wish therefore to only contact two or three of the members of the GCC at any one time, or any other grouping.

1985

Mr Speaker, in the Command Paper it was also made clear that in our view this is a seminal piece of legislation, that it is important there should be a permanent forum created which allows what some might sometimes refer to as some of the best brains in Gibraltar to work together on issues that can affect all of our community regardless of the parties with which we might have a particular partisan allegiance. We thought, Mr Speaker, and repeated in the note to the Command Paper, that the UK Privy Council model is a good one for us to follow in establishing such a body and I was therefore looking forward to bringing the Bill to the House. I also thought that there would be widespread support for this Bill, and I am sure that it is likely that there will be – I think there have been indications that there would be – and the Bill, after consultation, was published I think before the last General Election and it fell away as a result of the dissolution this time last year.

1990

There was a republication of the Bill on 25th February this year and, of course, thereafter we had many months when we did not meet because of the Referendum campaign etc. The Bill therefore now before the House in effect gives effect to the commitment originally made in that Budget speech that I have referred to of 2014 and the Command Paper of last year, 2015.

2000

If hon. Members look at the Bill, Mr Speaker, they will see that section 1 makes clear that the commencement of the Act will be on a date to be appointed by me, and my intention is to commence the Bill with effect from the beginning of next month if the Bill is to become an Act today.

2005

Section 2 sets out the interpretation of certain phrases that pertain within the Act.

Section 3 establishes the Consultative Council to aid and advise in the government of Gibraltar and sets out that the persons who are members of the Council shall from time to time be summoned by the Chief Minister and sworn in as counsellors.

2010 I should give the House notice, Mr Speaker, and I think hon. Members will now have it, that these sections and some others have amendments set out in the letter I have provided to you now. In order to assist hon. Members, I have not just given a table setting out what those amendments are, but actually provided a copy of the Bill with the amendments set out in detail on it as tracked changes.

2015 The Consultative Council is to be chaired, under section 3, by the Chief Minister, to be composed of the post-holder members, the life members and the ad hoc members, as described in that section. The post-holder members, as I told the House a few moments ago, will be the Chief Minister, the Deputy Chief Minister, the Minister for Justice from time to time and the Leader of the Opposition from time to time. Life members are individuals who have held the post of Chief Minister or Deputy Chief Minister. Ad hoc members are any person or persons not 2020 exceeding 10 as may be appointed by the Chief Minister.

Mr Speaker, as is made clear in section 3, there will be an inaugural meeting of the Gibraltar Consultative Council, at which all members shall take the oath of appointment, which is set out in schedule 1, and will be appointed as members of the Council. Oaths of appointment will be administered by the Chief Justice or a judge of the Supreme Court that the Chief Justice may 2025 determine is an appropriate person to take those oaths.

Part 3 of the Act covers tenure and membership and, as is made clear under section 4, post-holder members hold membership of the Council for such time as they hold their particular posts only in respect of those posts. They may then pass on to become life members who will hold those positions for their lifetime.

2030 Section 6 provides for the ad hoc membership, who are individuals appointed for such period as may be specified in their notice of appointment, and those periods can actually be specific periods of years – five years, ten years, two years, one year – or another sort of period. For example, it could be ‘for the lifetime of this Parliament’ – it could be that somebody is appointed by a Chief Minister to be there ‘but for the lifetime of this Parliament’ in order not to take up 2035 space on the committee after the lifetime of that parliament.

Under section 7 it is made clear that membership of the Council is not remunerated, as I said before, and under section 8 that members may, for the period that they are members, use the prenominal style of Right Honourable in keeping with the Bill, but I am going to propose that we should use the terminology ‘The Honourable’ rather than ‘The Right Honourable’. The reason for 2040 doing that is that the post-holder members and the life members are likely to be people who have the letters ‘Honourable’ before their name, but some of the ad hoc members are not likely to be people who have the word ‘Honourable’ before their name because they may simply be people who have never been in the Parliament or in the House of Assembly; they could literally be people who have a different sort of expertise. So I am going to move an amendment simply 2045 to use the terminology of ‘Honourable’ rather than the terminology of ‘Right Honourable’. It may be that in future we come back to amend that and to go back to everybody who is in that Council being ‘Right Honourable’, but for now I think it is sufficient to simply have people prenominated as ‘Honourable’ if they are members of that Council – and that may mean no change for those who are post-holder members or life members, who are likely to have those 2050 prenominals in any event.

Section 9, Mr Speaker, provides that no person is qualified to serve as a member of the Council in certain circumstances, including if they have pledged allegiance to a foreign power – or at least if they have disclosed that they have pledged allegiance to a foreign power; individuals who are bankrupt would not be eligible; members of the armed forces; those who 2055 have been certified insane – and one hopes that the post-holder members will not also suffer the ignominy of being removed from the Council for that reason; or those who have been under a sentence of imprisonment.

Membership of the Council would also be suspended if the member who is a life member accepts a judicial post, because of course it will not be appropriate for judicial post-holders to be 2060 members of the Council, and those exceptions, Mr Speaker, are the common exceptions, which are elsewhere in our laws.

Under section 9(5) membership of any ad hoc member would cease if the ad hoc member becomes an elected member of the Parliament and is not otherwise qualified as a post-holder member or accepts a judicial post. Post-holder members vacate their membership of the Council on ceasing to hold a particular post, unless that person is qualified for membership by becoming a life member or an ad hoc member.

Life members or ad hoc members can be removed from membership if all post-holder members and two-thirds of other members so agree.

2070 Public officers are to be appointed as secretaries of the Gibraltar Consultative Council also, so that there is a record of the functioning of the Council.

Plenary meetings of the Council will be held at least every 12 months, as I have said, and this is provided for in section 11(1). The Chief Minister can, in his discretion, convene other plenary meetings with members as he determines the governance of Gibraltar or the public interest requires. He or she can also constitute the subcommittees or consult individual members as he or she considers necessary.

2075 The duties of the Consultative Council will be:

... to advise Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar and specifically the Chief Minister on any issue on which advice is requested by him or her via the structures and mechanisms laid out in this Act in respect of—

- (a) the governance of Gibraltar;
- (b) the public interest of Gibraltar;
- (c) the conduct of or performance of public policy;
- (d) the international obligations of Gibraltar;
- (e) any matter touching upon the public affairs, peace, order and good government of Gibraltar.

The quorum of the plenary is set at five and in the absence of the Chief Minister the Deputy Chief Minister is able to preside at meetings and ensure that minutes are kept by the secretary of the Council and provide a copy to the Chief Minister.

2080 Part 5 of the Act governs confidentiality, publication and disclosure of matters considered by the Council; and, consistent with the sensitivity and the importance of the matters being discussed, this part really makes clear that deliberations of the Council are confidential and that members will be required on appointment to agree to be bound by the Official Secrets Act.

2085 Members will be restricted, without the consent of the Chief Minister, not to publish or disclose to any unauthorised person the contents of any document, communication or information which has come into their knowledge in the course of their duties under the Act, and the Act provides a number of penalties in the event of a breach.

2090 Section 20 in particular restricts disclosure of material in any legal proceedings of communications between the Chief Minister and members of the Council and between members of the Council themselves, unless the Chief Secretary, after consultation with the Chief Minister, consents in writing.

Section 21, as Members will see, is a general rule-making power to carry out the purposes of the Act.

2095 Schedules 1, 2 and 3 set out the oaths of appointment for members, the secretary and the Chief Secretary.

2100 I want to thank the Attorney General, Michael Llamas, for his advice in respect of the preparation of this Bill, and Keith Azopardi QC – who I think himself has been a Deputy Chief Minister and a Member of this House – who drafted the initial Bill and has greatly assisted me in the preparation for today. My relationship with Mr Azopardi goes back in politics a very, very long way. He was there with us in 1991 when we took our first faltering steps as politicians. We then ended up on different sides of the House, but always good friends and able to get on despite our political differences as they emerged.

2105 Mr Speaker, I believe this is a very, very important Bill for Gibraltar. It is seminal to be able to create such a body. I think it is a step in the process of the maturity of our democracy, and of course also an indication of the sorts of threats that you start to face as you emerge into nationhood and you have to determine your own responses to a lot of these issues that you are facing.

2110 Hon. Members have the amendments which I intend to move in committee. Just to highlight that they are really about turning the Bill into the sort of shape it would have if it was more in keeping with the drafting that we usually do, so it is more about the section headings than it is about changing any of the general principles and merits of the Bill that I have just related to the House. There are 22 amendments set out in the letter that I have provided. That is why I have also provided the Bill with the amendments, so that hon. Members can see that they are principally just moving things about and changing the subject headings.

2115 I would invite you, Mr Speaker, in committee – unless hon. Members opposite have a particular objection in respect of any one of the amendments – to simply refer to the amendments in the letter, because many of them are just very typographical for the reasons set out – other than the deletion of the word ‘Right’, which I have taken the House to also in the context of my speech and in the styling section at section 8.

2120 Mr Speaker, for all of the reasons I have just set out, I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I invite hon. Members who may wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill, there are two matters I want to raise.

2125 Having regard to what the Chief Minister has said, clause 8 in the enclosed table of amendments then instead of for “Right Honourable” substitute “The Right Honourable” and may be referred to as Councillors’, that should be ‘Honourable’ only. So that is a mistake – ‘Right’ should be cancelled.

2130 The other thing is the date: 2015 or 2016? Surely it is 2016. And therefore, again, clause 1, where it says ‘insert 2015’, that is wrong.

Hon. Chief Minister: It is, Mr Speaker, and that comes from the fact that these amendments were ready when the Bill was ready but it then fell away.

2135 Mr Speaker: So let me ask, then ... Well, in fact, what then happens is that clause 1 does not have to be amended. I do not think ‘replace heading in 1’ ... other than replace section heading title and amendment in section 1 and insert 2015. That does not have to be done.

And clause 8, we go back to that and it would read ‘substitute “the Honourable” and may be referred to as Councillors’.

2140 Does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

2145 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am afraid that on this side of the House we cannot support this Bill. That is a decision that we have taken not easily or lightly, because it is within the makeup of the Opposition, as we have indeed demonstrated on a number of issues, to work with the Government where we can. But we feel, after internal and careful deliberation, that this particular Bill has the potential to stifle debate and therefore is a potentially retrograde step, from a democratic point of view, and I will attempt to make that out during the course of my intervention. But before I do so, I would like to place this particular Bill into its proper context.

2150 The Hon. the Chief Minister has said on a number of occasions that he is modelling the Council that is being created by this Bill on the UK Privy Council, and indeed at page 15 of their manifesto at the last election that is precisely what it says. It is a commitment to:

the creation of a Council that would be based on the principles that govern the UK Privy Council and allow members to be briefed confidentially on matters of national importance.

2155 A privy council is a body that advises the head of state, usually the monarch, in the context of a constitutional monarchy. In the United Kingdom the Privy Council is a committee that advises Her Majesty the Queen on a confidential basis on matters of state, but in particular how Her Majesty exercises the Royal Prerogative – the most common example is issues such as state honours – and members of the Committee then take the prenominal style ‘Right Honourable’.
2160 Their discussions are discussions that are undertaken in private, or secret, and indeed right up to the late 1990s – it might have even been the beginning of the last decade – the oath of secrecy in the Privy Council in the United Kingdom was actually itself in secret, and it was thought by constitutional lawyers that revealing the nature of the oath was in fact treasonous until the Blair government answered a question in Parliament and basically revealed the oath. But even in the 2165 United Kingdom, where the Privy Council is actually advising Her Majesty the Queen on very narrow sets of circumstances or powers, the exercise of her prerogative powers, the Privy Council has come under criticism from very reputable charities such as, for example, Justice, who have described it, and I quote, as ‘bypassing Parliament and any prior accountability’. And there we are talking about a Privy Council that is set up to advise Her Majesty the Queen, not a politician, on very narrow powers that are exercisable by Her Majesty the Queen.

2170 Mr Speaker, of course the Chief Minister is not the monarch of Gibraltar, he is certainly not exercising narrow prerogative powers, and the concerns of the Opposition are highlighted if we go to the powers or the areas that this Consultative Council are going to be asked to advise the Chief Minister of the day. They include the governance of Gibraltar, the public interest of Gibraltar, the conduct of or performance of public policy, the international obligations of 2175 Gibraltar, any matter touching upon the public affairs, peace, order and good government of Gibraltar. In other words, Mr Speaker, it includes everything under the political sun. That is the reality.

If one looks at section 17 of this Bill, it says:

All deliberations of the Gibraltar Consultative Council and advice tendered by any member to the Chief Minister shall be tendered and received in absolute confidence.

Section 18:

Any member of the Gibraltar Consultative Council shall be required on appointment to signify on such form approved by the Chief Secretary for that purpose that he agrees to be bound by the Official Secrets Act ...

2180 And section 19:

(1) No member nor any other person shall without the consent in writing of the Chief Minister publish or disclose to any unauthorised person or otherwise than in the course of duties under this Act the contents or any part of the contents of any document, communication or information whatsoever which has come to his knowledge in the course of his duties under this Act and a person who knowingly acts in contravention of this sub-section is guilty of an offence and is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for up to one year and to a fine not exceeding level 4 ...

2185 So, Mr Speaker, I can be asked to come into this Consultative Council as Leader of the Opposition and the Chief Minister imparts to me information about the governance of Gibraltar or the public affairs or peace and order or good governance of Gibraltar. I receive it, and if I believe that it is in the public interest that I should bring that to the attention of the people of Gibraltar, if and I do so, I am committing a criminal offence. I would be the most foolish Leader of the Opposition in political history if I allow myself to basically go into a trap of this nature, and whether this is a deliberate trap or it is not a deliberate trap – and I give him the benefit of the doubt – the reality is that it places the Leader of the Opposition in an almost impossible position.

2190 But of course it also covers people such as former Chief Ministers and former Deputy Chief Ministers. It is the kind of people who could be expected at any given moment in time in the future to stand up and criticise a government of the day – let's put it in neutral terms: not the Hon. the Chief Minister or his Government, but a government of the day – on something concerning the good governance, the public affairs and the public interest of Gibraltar. And yet if it concerns a matter that the Chief Minister imparts to them in this Consultative Council, then 2195 they will be committing a criminal offence if they refer to it.

I just believe, Mr Speaker, that in those circumstances this is potentially a dangerous retrograde step and it is an anathema, in my respectful view, to my understanding of democracy. We do not need more titles, we do not need more secrecy; what we need is more openness and more transparency. For those reasons we will be voting against this Bill. (Banging 2200 on desks)

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Roy Clinton.

2205 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I identify myself, obviously, with the remarks of my learned colleague.

In reading this Bill, there is – apart from the obvious flaws that my hon. colleague has mentioned, and I note there has been a wholesale copying of the Constitution, for example, on disqualification for elected Members – nothing here about qualification for elected Members. In 2210 the Constitution, under section 27, it says that subject to section 28 – and section 28 is effectively a paragraph that has been copied into this Bill about the disqualification under section 9 – there is no qualification, and that qualification under section 27 in our Constitution says:

... a person shall be qualified to be elected as an Elected Member of the Parliament if, and shall not be qualified to be so elected ... [if] he is a British citizen or a British overseas territories citizen by virtue of a connection with Gibraltar who has attained the age of eighteen years.

2215 There is nothing in here that says the hon. Member could not appoint a six-year-old to be a Member of this Council, if he so pleased, as an ad hoc member.

So I feel there are some areas here that, if the Member is going to go ahead with it, even though we oppose it, it is flawed.

2220 And in the context of appointing all previous Chief Ministers and Deputy Chief Ministers, again there has to be, unfortunately, a disqualification for certain people in terms of the posts that they may hold in future. And I note there is a disqualification section for an ad hoc member, if he is elected as a Member of Parliament. However, what happens in the case of a life member who has been the Chief Minister who is – I regret to say, Mr Speaker – the Speaker of this Parliament? Is it right that the Speaker of the Parliament is forced, under these rules, to 2225 effectively swear ... I would not call it an oath of allegiance to the Chief Minister, but I dare say an oath of secrecy, in that he has to swear to give good advice to the Chief Minister while he is Speaker of this Parliament? I do not think that would be appropriate, Mr Speaker; but again the drafting of this legislation, I think, needs further thought.

2230 Furthermore, Mr Speaker, I note this desire to create a privy council, and again this seems to favour the lawyers amongst us, because I note that the Minister with responsibility for Justice is a permanent member of this Council, but the Minister for Finance is not! Of course, at the moment the Minister for Finance is the Chief Minister but if, for example, the Hon. Mr Bossano was the Finance Minister he would be excluded from this Consultative Council. That cannot be right.

2235 Mr Speaker: I thought he was a former Chief Minister?

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, sorry, indeed, I stand corrected!

2240 But if he was not, or if somebody else was the Finance Minister they would be excluded. And if this Consultative Council is truly meant to advise the Chief Minister on the range of subjects, as my learned colleague has mentioned, which is particularly lengthy and which will no doubt include financial aspects, should not the Minister for Finance also be included in this Consultative Council?

2245 And again I fear this is a wholesale attempted copying of the Privy Council in the UK which is, as in his manifesto commitment, exactly what it is. But if this is a consultative council and its general intention is to find the best possible advice for the Chief Minister, then I humbly submit that it should include other Members, including Finance, and not just the Minister for Justice.

Also, in some of the ad hoc members, I would like more clarity as to what qualifies somebody to be an ad hoc member; it seems to be entirely at the Chief Minister's discretion. Surely, there must be at least a minimum criteria for qualification for an ad hoc member?

2250 I come back to the point about qualification to even be an elected member. Could it be possible that the Chief Minister could appoint an American to form part of this Consultative Council? Or somebody else of any other nationality? What is missing, I think, in this Bill is qualification; there is a lot about disqualification but there is nothing much about qualification other than for the life members.

2255 And so, Mr Speaker, apart from the reasons that my learned colleague has given, I really cannot support this Bill as it stands.

Mr Speaker: Are there any other hon. Members who wish to speak?

The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, in principle I always welcome any committee or body set up with the intention of brainstorming an advancement for the good of Gibraltar, so for my part in principle I would welcome the inception of this Council.

2265 The only question I have is why do we need to invoke the Official Secrets Act, because perhaps it is something that could chain us MPs? I would like to know more about that, please.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak before I call on the Chief Minister to reply?

The Hon. the Chief Minister, then.

2270

Hon. Chief Minister: You can take a horse to water, Mr Speaker, but you cannot make him drink.

I am surprised that hon. Members feel they cannot support the Bill and that they have not said, 'Look, we would be able to support the Bill if it did this, or if it did that.'

2275 The speech from the Hon. Leader of the Opposition has been simply to say that they cannot support the Bill. The Bill was published in 2014 as a Command Paper, as I said to the House before; it was published as a Government Bill in 2015; the issue of the Bill was set out in the context of my party's manifesto at the last general election. And in respect of all three of those opportunities to write or to communicate to me that they had concerns about certain aspects of the Bill, but they would wish to support it nonetheless, there have been no communications with the Government – none whatsoever.

2280 When I spoke during the course of the Budget in 2014 and I gave these indications, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition who was also Leader of the Opposition by then, thank God, did not for one moment say that he had a concern about the privy council structure, the Official Secrets Act, etc. Not at all. In fact I will have to go back and see whether he actually said that he might support it. But I doubt he did, because I reckon what he did was he got up and read his prepared speech. I stood here, Mr Speaker, and delivered the Budget for Gibraltar, and the hon.

Gentleman then got up and read the speech he had prepared, regardless of what it was that I might have said.

2290 Sir Peter Caruana, who he has described, as you will hear ad nauseam from us, as the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, said he was supportive of it but he thought the nomenclature should change.

I would have thought that in trying to create something constructive like the Gibraltar Consultative Council Act, that hon. Members, if they had these concerns, might have wanted to get in touch with the Government and say, 'These are the concerns that we have'; not simply highlight them in the context of their speech today. It is not as if this has been visited upon them; this is not a Bill brought in less than six weeks, certified as urgent and here we go. This is a Bill that has been doing the rounds for too long, in my view. So if I may say so, with respect to hon. Members opposite, I think that they are pretending constantly that they want to co-operate with the Government and that they want to be collegiate has just been demonstrated to be absolute bunkum!

They have just uncloaked the reality of what they are really like when they say they want to co-operate because, given the opportunity to do so, they have not even said, 'We want to be part of that Council but we have concerns about the confidentiality aspects.' All they have done is today say, 'We won't support the Bill because we have those concerns.' At least the hon. Lady has said, 'Can you deal with the issue for me and then I might be able to get comfortable with it?' That is not what we have heard from the Leader of the Opposition, he has not asked me to deal with something in my speech and respond to his concerns, he says he is not supporting it because of the issue of confidentiality.

2310 Well, Mr Speaker, if I may say so, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is once again, as he is wont to do in his interventions in this House and even in his interventions in the local media, he is making once again a mistake of historic proportions. Just like he made the mistake of historic proportions on Monday when he said he does not earn enough as Leader of the Opposition. And today, Mr Speaker, just over 96 hours later, in saying he is not going to support the establishment of a council for Gibraltarians to be able to provide advice to the Government in respect of all of the areas that have been set out.

He has then done an analysis of what the Privy Council is. Therefore, Mr Speaker, I think he must have understood, despite the Bill having been published for this long and despite everything I have said, that I am trying to create a privy council in Gibraltar. I am not creating a privy council in Gibraltar! I am creating a Consultative Council on the lines of the Privy Council for the United Kingdom, in Gibraltar. It is an advisory council, not to advise a monarch on titles, because we do not give titles here in Gibraltar in the way that they are given in the UK. We give titles in Gibraltar in this Parliament together, not in the way that it is done in the UK.

2320 Gibraltar advises the UK in relation to nominations from Gibraltar, through an Honours Board, but that is done in a different way. This has got nothing to do with that and to take the debate in relation to this to titles is to be so completely illucid in the analysis, that it is just incredible that the person who has delivered that speech is charged with the responsibility for leading Her Majesty's loyal Opposition in Gibraltar.

2330 We are talking about an opportunity to consider together things that matter to Gibraltar and the hon. Gentleman comes out with the fact that the Privy Council in the UK also advises in respect of state honours! It is absolutely an abdication, Mr Speaker, of the sort of responsibility that they could have taken by supporting the creation of this Council, that demonstrates why the hon. Gentleman is so ill-suited to public office.

2335 The hon. Gentleman himself went on to say that if he supported the creation of this Council, as if his failure to support it would in some way stop it from being created, he would be the most foolish Leader of the Opposition in history. Well, Mr Speaker, I think he may go down in the annals of Gibraltar's parliamentary history as the most foolish Leader of the Opposition in history, for not supporting the creation of a body that enables Gibraltarians to work together for the good of Gibraltar and to advise Government in that respect.

2340 He pretends to want to and he seems to have better ideas than anyone for any topical issue that might arise. In fact the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister and I were quite looking forward to the meeting we were going to have with him on the issue of Brexit in July, because he was telling us for months that he needed to meet us on the subject. When he met us, Mr Speaker, he 2345 nodded his head and told us that he thought we were doing a very good job indeed. And then went off to carry on with his business.

So I really do not understand what it is that the hon. Gentleman thinks is going to happen in the context of sharing information which is not otherwise publicly available, that might somehow put him in strictures which he would not otherwise expect to be in. Or is it that he expects to be brought into confidence, to be told things that are not otherwise publicly available 2350 bits of information – very sensitive, potentially, not publicly available bits of information – and to simply be able to turn around and go outside and disclose that?

Well, Mr Speaker, the structure of this Bill is not because we have any particular piece of information in our minds that we are going to share with him. It is because we have been advised that is the best way to create such a body in the context of such an oath. But he has 2355 taken us down the road of titles, etc. in respect of the position of the Privy Council in the United Kingdom. But you see he has foregone one of the most important aspects of what happens in the United Kingdom today – for example, security briefings on Privy Council terms given to the sorts of post-holders that we are talking about here. Or is he not aware, in his desire to pretend that this is in the UK only about who becomes a knight and who becomes a peer, is he not 2360 aware, that members of the Opposition are given briefings on Privy Council terms on sensitive defence issues and sensitive intelligence issues?

I have no desire to be involved more than I have to be, I suppose, in who becomes a knight or who becomes a peer. In fact I do not think I have any influence whatsoever on who becomes a peer; but we might have some influence on who takes some state honours by just reflecting the 2365 Gibraltar view when we are asked for it. But nothing could have been further from my mind.
Indeed I dare say, Mr Speaker, nothing was further from the Hon. the former Chief Minister's mind when he replied to me in very positive terms about the creation of this Act, than who becomes a knight or an OBE or an MBE, or takes another honour.

This was about creating a body that enabled Gibraltar to take a step in the direction of having everyone work together in the context of things which have to happen in camera, because advice is sought in respect of things which cannot be shared; and a structure had been proposed by a person who was a former Deputy Chief Minister of the GSD! Keith Azopardi, who started with us in 1991 and who I have spoken about in such convivial and friendly terms, went on to become Deputy Chief Minister of the GSD, not of the GSLP Liberals. This is his draft and structure 2375 of how the thing should be done in order to ensure that there is the security of information which is shared in that context.

This is a body created for the good of Gibraltar to ensure that we have the sort of advice that another decision-maker, not a monarch but a prime minister, is also able to count on in the context of the United Kingdom structure along the lines of the Privy Council. But we are not 2380 creating a privy council. I do not have a privy and, if I did, I would not need a council for it, Mr Speaker.

So I really do not know how the hon. Gentleman's political paranoia has taken him to such a level of concern that I might wish to have him imprisoned for disclosing something I have said, that he cannot support the creation of a Council. He needs to understand, and I am going to 2385 make it explicit for him, nothing could be worse for me and for those that I represent on this side of the House if, by becoming imprisoned, he disqualified himself from becoming the Leader of the Opposition. We want him to stay forever as Leader of the Opposition; we do not want him to go. We think that one of the best things that happens to us on this side of the House is that he is on that side of the House. So he does not need to worry about us wanting to exploit anything 2390 that might lead to him becoming disqualified from being a Member of the House.

I do not want to see him in shackles, I do not want to see him anything other than actively leading the Gibraltar Social Democrats at the next, and every other, election. I was very disappointed when he said that he would leave the leadership of the party at the next election if he lost. I sincerely think that it is a bad thing for the GSLP and for the Liberal Party. Although I did notice, Mr Speaker, that he also said that he would stay on the GSD front bench, which is to have very little regard for what the next leader of the GSD after him might decide should be his role. He might decide that although he might offer himself he should not be a front bencher for the GSD – again, something which would cause huge disappointment on our side, Mr Speaker. But his intervention on Monday night will no doubt be one that endures in the context of the debates in this House.

So he should not be concerned to think that we have any reason for wanting to see him subject to any prosecution, but there is that provision in the Bill. It is true that there is that provision in the Bill. He has not said to me if I remove it he would support the Bill; he has not said that he is concerned about the post-holders who are in post at the time not being subject to it, he just said that it should not be the case. It is the case, as he has said, that in the UK Privy Council members are subject to confidentiality in respect of information that they receive in the context of that body which is not just, as I have shown, in relation to state honours. So I am very surprised that he has taken that attitude.

Mr Speaker, there are some areas where no modern society or state can have full transparency: areas of intelligence, areas of police investigations, areas of inter-state intelligence. Hon. Members need to realise that what we are trying to do in respect of this Bill is to share that information with them in the context of taking their advice and views on it as well. Now, because that sharing is structured in the way that this is structured in other nations and other states, that is why it is structured in this way. I am very surprised, therefore, at the attitude that they have taken.

Mr Speaker, no Government has been supportive of openness and transparency like this Government has been. We demonstrate that in the information that we volunteer, let alone the information that we give. And I know that it does not fit with the hon. Members' narrative of where we are because they want to pretend that we are not disclosing and not transparent; but that is all they are doing – pretending. And if there is one thing that the public is good at in Gibraltar, it is seeing through a ruse, spin, and whatever you like. But the public will see through you.

And if you pretend to be transparent and you are not, they will see through you. And if you pretend that somebody is not transparent when they are, they will also see through you. And the hon. Gentleman should know that because he ran a campaign during the general election last year that we were not transparent and that there was an issue with our public finances, and that there was an issue with LNG – and look where that got him. He was so seen-through that he was very transparent to the general public.

Moving on to the Hon. Mr Clinton, who is not here to hear my response to the points that he made, can I just say that when he gets up and says, 'Obviously I support the position of the Leader of the Opposition', I think he needs to realise that remark is no longer one that he can afford to make. Yesterday he took a different position to the Leader of the Opposition in respect of the amendment proposed by the hon. Lady – who I will come to in a minute. He took a completely different position, so in the context of 'obviously' there is nothing obvious about it!

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition yesterday did not lead the Opposition when it came to the position in respect of the amendment. Yesterday, Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition was the hon. independent Member. She proposed an amendment with which we did not agree and the majority of Members opposite voted with her, not with him. So whenever any Member opposite gets up, absent the hon. Lady, I suggest to them that they no longer fall into the trap of saying, 'Obviously I agree with the Leader of the Opposition', because we will all be on tenterhooks for the next three years to see on which way they fall and whether they are more towards the rocket chair or more towards the centre of gravity there, for many years, we hope. For many years, the centre of gravity there.

2445 Then the Hon. Mr Clinton took us through what he sees as the failings of the Bill, which we see as some of the strengths. The ability to appoint a person to advise in the Consultative Council who might not fit the criteria of appointment to this House; I will give the hon. Member an example, a member of the clergy. A member of the clergy could be an important person from whom the Chief Minister may want to take advice in the context of understanding our community and our society.

2450 A member of the clergy cannot stand for Parliament, they are prohibited from being Members of Parliament if they are members of the clergy. And yet they may be an important part in a particular moment in our history because of who they are, perhaps less than because they wear a dog collar. They could be an important part of the advice that a Chief Minister may want to take.

2455 Restricting the pool of available talent to advise, to the pool of talent that is available to stand for Parliament, would mean that we would be stuck with us – or something that looks like you. Well, Mr Speaker, we think that there are many more things that are thought of in the philosophy of what the Gibraltarian is, and who we might want to take advice from; and that may include people who are not eligible to stand for election. So I think Mr Clinton has made a mistake going down that route.

2460 I could appoint an American, he says, in the context of his submission. Well I suppose I could, but there is a provision that says that I would not be able to appoint somebody who has sworn allegiance to a foreign power. So if I was to appoint an American, Mr Speaker, the passport is allegiance to a foreign power; it is not, in my view, contrary to that rule but it would be very particular.

2465 But if he or she who was Chief Minister at any particular time was to decide that they wanted to appoint an American, who would not otherwise be eligible to be a Member of this Parliament, there might be a very good reason for doing so. And why should we not have that talent available for a year or for six months? It would be an ad hoc appointment. I think it is absolutely right and proper that we should have that power.

2470 And then he says, but of course the Minister for Finance might not be available if he were not the Chief Minister and, if he were another Minister, we would not have the benefit of his advice. What a deep misunderstanding of the structure of Government! The Chief Minister, if he is not also the Minister for Finance, sees the Minister for Finance at Cabinet meetings every Monday; at least that is the way we do it because we run a cabinet government. And I know if there is one thing that they appear to have been briefed on it is that when they were in Government they did not have any cabinet meetings. So they might not see each other unless they bump into each other in the corridor. (Interjection) Well at least not with the regularity that we have them. (Interjection by Mr Speaker)

2480 I accept, Mr Speaker, that they sometimes had cabinet meetings, or meetings of the Gibraltar Council of Ministers once in a while, but not very often. We even had a Minister in the GSD get up in this House and say to us, 'Oh, that is not a decision for me, that is a decision for central Government.'

2485 Well, doesn't the hon. Gentleman forget that the Hon. Mr Britto referred to some decisions as being decisions not for him and his Ministry but for Central Government? Mr Speaker, central Government is now cabinet Government. We meet every Monday unless one or two of us are travelling, and we get together. And I would therefore have the benefit, if I was Chief Minister, of taking advice from the Minister for Public Finance – if that was not me, as it is – from Mr Bossano, who is the one that Mr Clinton has postulated would take the role in the context of a cabinet meeting or indeed in the context of a bilateral meeting, without having to have him in the Consultative Council, with all the oaths that we have already taken as Ministers.

So, Mr Speaker, I think the things said by Mr Clinton are really, again, another ruse not to support a very positive step forward in the development of our democracy. We do not share the concerns that Mr Clinton has set out.

2495 I detected from the hon. Lady, a more genuine approach to a concern which I hope I can deal with. She said, 'I am just a little concerned about this business of MPs being chained' – in her usual figurative language – 'with information that they cannot disclose'. The position is this and the reason for the structure is this: any MP or any member of the Consultative Council can say anything they like, publicly, they retain their right of freedom of expression in respect of any 2500 matter. The only potential liability, because this is the structure that has been proposed to us, is that if somebody disclosed something that they had only found out in the context of the Council, which had been shared with them, and which was sensitive – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman is going to go down the road of saying that everything that is said in the Council is subject to the Official Secrets Act, he needs to understand the structure of Official Secrets. In other words, if somebody is given a cup of Earl Grey tea from Brooke Bond, with a bourbon cream, that person can come out and say, 'I had an Earl Grey tea from Brooke Bond, and a bourbon cream'. In the old days the Official Secrets Act did not permit that and the explanation to civil servants was that they could not, in breach of the Official 2505 Secrets Act, even say what brand of tea they had had, because that was what the Official Secrets Act meant.

This is a design to protect sensitive information, not to protect everything. (Interjections) So, Mr Speaker, what jeopardy would a person be putting themselves into if they were to take membership of this Council? Well, the jeopardy is an obvious one: if something is disclosed which is sensitive and information which that person has not received otherwise, then there is a 2515 potential prosecution. Good luck to the Chief Minister that presses that button in relation to something that is merely political; and whoever would be subject to prosecution would probably be the greatest martyr in the political history of Gibraltar.

So this is not something intended, as the hon. Gentleman has suggested, to catch a member out when they have said something that might embarrass a Chief Minister, that is certainly not 2520 what we are talking about. We are talking about very, very potentially sensitive material that would in the context of a disclosure somehow require prosecution. (Interjections)

Look, Mr Speaker, whether or not it says that, that is obviously the reality and if the hon. Member wants to look just at oaths he should look at some of the oaths that people have signed in the context of Official Secrets, and of course they are very, very strict oaths which leave very 2525 little wriggle room. But the number of prosecutions under the Official Secrets Act is very low and it relates only to the disclosure of sensitive information, not anything else.

In the context of a political body like this, what I am saying in this House today would be relevant because it would be an issue of interpretation of that section under Pepper v Hart. It would not be an exposure to a criminal sanction to anyone, she can have the comfort, who 2530 disclosed anything other than sensitive information.

Now, Mr Speaker, in that context I would hope that with what appears to be from her at least a genuine desire to work together in the common interest of Gibraltar, she would be able to support this Bill which sets out to create a body where we can do that joint work; where we can have those joint discussions, where we can share that sensitive information and where it may be 2535 that we might actually be able to, together, progress the cause of Gibraltar when we are dealing with very sensitive matters.

In fact, Mr Speaker, when I referred to the creation of this body in 2014, Brexit was not even thought of. At that time we had not even had a reference to a referendum from David Cameron, and yet look at where we are today. Now there will be a select committee in respect of Brexit.
2540 The select committee will sit in camera but nobody needs to sign the Official Secrets Act in order to have information shared in camera, because we can tell you some of the things that we are doing in the context of confidentiality. Because we will trust that that confidentiality will not be broken even though we might have a political disagreement because that is politics, and if it is broken the sanction would be political.

2545 If somebody says something which is said in confidence by a Chief Minister to a member of the select committee or a Deputy Chief Minister to a member of the select committee, the sanction is that we say, 'We cannot trust you anymore and Gibraltar has been let down by you'. But if it is in the context of more sensitive information and we think there might be such more sensitive information in the future which is beyond the political, that is when these Official 2550 Secrets Act issues might be relevant when they would not otherwise, in my view, be relevant.

So, Mr Speaker, I trust I have given her the comfort that this is not an attempt to chain anyone up or to muzzle anyone, or to somehow prevent someone from speaking their mind on an issue where they have had information which is political, but to move Gibraltar into a different level. And I sincerely believe that it is really quite concerning that the hon. Members 2555 opposite are now coming to a conclusion. They talk about wanting to work together and yet, when they have been given the opportunity to do so, it would appear that they are going to seek a spurious reason not to support the creation of the Council.

I do not think, Mr Speaker, that history will judge them lightly for doing so. Neither is it likely that they can do anything in the next few minutes which would prevent the creation of the 2560 Council, which will therefore have the opportunity of creating that body which I have shared with hon. Members we think should be shared. And which will, for the first time, allow Gibraltar to take a step in the direction of the establishment of a body that shares the level of information between Members that is necessary. I am conscious that this is an important Bill and that all 2565 hon. Members who are present in the House today will want to have the opportunity of voting in one direction or another, in order to determine what the position of each of the parties may be.

I think it is important, Mr Speaker, that we should have a chance to work together in the context of a Council like the one I am proposing. Even with the amendments that I am going to 2570 move I think the Council is going to work well. I think it is going to allow not just Members of this House, but Gibraltarians and others who might be appointed, to give something more to Gibraltar in the context of this maturing of our democracy, which I believe is heralded by this Council – and which hon. Members have had two years to share their concerns about with us, and which they have not shared to date.

Mr Speaker, I see that Mr Clinton has returned to the Chamber. I answered the points that he 2575 raised and maybe he was able to hear that over the modern equivalent of the tannoy that we have got, namely the transmission behind the Speaker's Chair.

I therefore, Mr Speaker, commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now put the question which is that a Bill for an Act establishing the Gibraltar 2580 Consultative Council and governing its functions and duties, and prescribing the terms of membership of the same, be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? (Interjections by Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.) Carried.

2585 Clerk: The Gibraltar Consultative Council Act 2016.

Gibraltar Consultative Council Bill 2016 – Committee Stage and Third Reading deferred

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken later today, if all hon. Members agree.

2590 Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Several Members: Aye.) (Several Members: Nay.)
Then it will not be taken today, it will be deferred to another day. It can be taken tomorrow.

ADJOURNMENT

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): In that case the Bill will be how we start tomorrow; and I move that the House do now adjourn to tomorrow morning at 11.30 a.m.

2595 Mr Speaker: Tomorrow morning at... ?

Hon. Chief Minister: That the House adjourn to tomorrow morning at 11.30 a.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

CHIEF MINISTER

Q690/2016

GJBS and its subcontractors– Work done on Ministers' private property

Clerk: We continue with Answers to Questions.

We are now doing questions to the Chief Minister and we commence with Question 690, the Hon. R M Clinton.

5

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please list all works undertaken by GJBS or its subcontractors on the private properties of Government Ministers over the last five years to date, describing the nature and monetary value of the works undertaken?

10

15

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the following works have been undertaken by the GJBS in the homes of Government Ministers and paid for by the Government. Before 1996, in the home of the Hon. Joe Bossano MP, security works carried out on the recommendation and advice of the Royal Gibraltar Police. The total: circa £15,000.

Between 1996 and 2011, at the home of Sir Peter Caruana QC, security works carried out on the recommendation and advice of the Royal Gibraltar Police, circa £30,000.

After 2012, at my own home, security works carried out on the recommendation and advice of the Royal Gibraltar Police, in the value of about £34,500.

20

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for that answer. I notice that his answer – it may be that that is the nature of the reply – in that it only seems to be in respect of Chief Ministers, but my question was wider, in respect of Government Ministers.

25

Was he saying that the only work undertaken by GJBS – and again, I am not asking just in terms of paid by the public purse but actually conducted by them – whether it is limited or this includes not just Chief Ministers but also all Government Ministers?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, these are the works paid for by the Government. The Government is answerable for the work paid for by the Government. GJBS does works for the 30 Government and for third parties. It has traditionally always done so. It is a company that operates in the private sector as much as it does in the public sector.

We are the shareholders of GJBS but, as we do in relation to other Government companies, we do not answer questions about the work of those Government companies, neither GibTelecom nor the Gibraltar International Bank, etc.

35 Mr Speaker, as far as the records show, the only work paid for by the Government – which is what I am answering for: work paid for by the Government – are these works which relate to these three Ministers who also happen to be the Chief Ministers of the particular period, who are the ones who have had security works done. No other work has been paid for by the Government in any other Minister's home that the records indicate.

Q691/2016

Bluewater Project, Coaling Island Project and Rooke Development – Updates

40 Clerk: Question 691, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide updates in respect of the Bluewater Project, the Coaling Island Project and the Rooke Development?

45 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the position remains as set out in answer to Question 435/2016, which I note is less than six months ago.

50 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I think, following parliamentary Rules, I was asking for an update which is not the same question as I asked six months ago.

From the Chief Minister's answer, if he can just confirm to me: basically, there is no progress from the last time he provided an update?

55 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, following parliamentary Rules, asking almost exactly the same question, whether it is for an update or not, is asking the same question within six months. Question 435 was:

Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please provide Parliament with an update in respect of the Bluewater Project, Coaling Island development and reclamation project, and the proposed Rooke development and any premiums received, due or contractually agreed?

And this one is:

Can the Government please provide updates in respect of the Bluewater Project, the Coaling Island Project and the Rooke Development?

60 So to me, Mr Speaker, it is asking exactly the same question within a period of six months. I have not said that there is no progress or development. I have said that we are in exactly the same stage as we were at the time that he asked Question 435.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q692/2016
Chief Secretary –
Links to Civil Service and Government pay scales

65 Clerk: Question number 692, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide a list of all pay grades in the Civil Service and Government authorities whose pay scale is in any way linked to that of the Chief Secretary?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the grades of Financial Secretary, Attorney General, Members of Parliament, Leader of the Opposition, Speaker, Ministers and Chief Minister are linked to that of the Chief Secretary as a result of the motion of December 1998 carried by GSD majority.

Since then, the pay scale of the Principal Auditor has also been linked to the pay scale of the Chief Secretary.

80 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that response. Would the Chief Minister be able to tell us or tell the House what his analogue is to the Chief Secretary as a percentage?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not think it is a question that arises from here. I would need notice. I think actually it is something that was provided for in the motion. I would have to read the motion to work it out or otherwise, but if he gives notice of the question I can, I am sure, provide it to him.

Mr Speaker: If the original question had said, 'and explain how these are linked, the manner in which they are linked to the salary of the Chief Secretary', then it would have been perfectly in order and no need for a separate question.

90

Hon. Chief Minister: Of course it is not a legitimate supplementary. How do you expect me to know every formula going? I will tell you, somebody who works it out will tell you, and it is what the GSD thought it should be.

95

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I will of course follow your advice.

Perhaps the Chief Minister might be able to answer this. Given the list of grades that are linked to the Chief Secretary, would I be correct in saying, that in some way, shape or form, they would get some kind of pay increase, as the Chief Secretary is getting, of 28% – I am still pending a response from him on that – in some shape or form?

100

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I believe that would be the ordinary meaning of what the word 'linked' means.

105

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q693/2016

Bob Peliza Mews and Hassan Centenary Terraces – Updates

Clerk: Question 693, the Hon. R M Clinton.

110 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide an update in respect of Bob Peliza Mews and Hassan Centenary Terraces?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

115 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the answer remains as set out in answer to Questions 534/2016 and 535/2016, which I note is just about a month ago, certainly within the six-month period.

120 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I notice the Government is not shy of issuing press releases – certainly one dated 26th August – saying that negotiations for both developments are now in an advanced stage and the Government continues to push to get the best possible deal for the Taxpayer. Can I ask the Chief Minister how he is progressing in getting the best possible deal for the Taxpayer?

125 Hon. Chief Minister: Very well, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, does he have any idea as to when ground might be broken in these developments as there are people waiting still to hear from the Government following the glossy brochures that were issued more than a year ago?

130 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: Does he have a date, Mr Speaker?

135 Hon. Chief Minister: A likely date, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: Would that be in the lifetime of this Parliament, Mr Speaker?

Hon. Chief Minister: Certainly, Mr Speaker.

It is your turn again, as we are answering these sort of questions every month.

Q694-695/2016

Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd –
Mortgage use and Hassans' fees

140 Clerk: Question 694, the Hon. R M Clinton.

145 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise to what use the £300 million loan raised in Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd by way of mortgage over six housing estate buildings is to be put?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question 695.

150 Clerk: Question 695, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how much in the way of fees Hassans has been or is due to be paid in respect of work undertaken in respect of the £300 million loan raised by Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Tempting as it is to say to the hon. Gentleman that he should ask the fellow sitting next him, Mr Speaker, I will say this: as the Hon. R M Clinton is aware, we are due to have a meeting to discuss all of these points. I shall look forward to discussing all aspects of this matter with him then. A full list of fees paid to all advisers will be provided at the meeting.

The £300 million will be held by the Government-owned companies to provide flexibility to refinance existing borrowing and to fund further capital projects by these companies.

165

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that answer. As he is aware, I did write to him on 3rd October and I would be grateful if he would give me an indication as to when he would be able to have this meeting in respect of the £300 million loan?

170

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I hope it will be in the next 14 to 21 days, maximum.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that and I look forward to the meeting in due course.

175

In respect of the use of the £300 million, could he explain to the House how he would intend to get the money from Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd to the Government's own coffers in respect of refinancing?

180

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not think I have to do that because I do not think I am required to explain to him how the company structure works, especially given it is one that was established by them, but I have said that there will be further capital projects by the companies. I have not said it will be by the Government.

185

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister be able to explain, when he says 'capital projects', these would be Government capital projects?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have said, 'by the companies'.

Hon. R M Clinton: So, Mr Speaker, I presume these are Government-owned companies and therefore they will be Government projects, by definition?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman knows that we have a disagreement about that, we have ventilated 100 times since the time he was elected to this House, that the Government projects are the Government projects set out in the Estimates Book in the I&D.

195

Hon. R M Clinton: So, Mr Speaker, this money will be used by Government-owned companies to finance capital projects which are not going through the Improvement & Development Fund? That effectively is what the Chief Minister is saying.

Hon. Chief Minister: Repeatedly, Mr Speaker.

Q696/2016
Devil's Tower Road Workers' Hostel site –
Details of sale

200 Clerk: Question 696, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the amounts raised from the sale of the site of the Devil's Tower Road Workers' Hostel; to whom, and for what period is the lease?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Devil's Tower Road site has been leased to G&JB (Hotels) 2014 Ltd for a period of 150 years. The amount raised from the sale is £530,000.

210

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, this may or may not be deemed to be a justifiable supplementary, but would the Chief Minister know the date of the sale agreement or the date of the lease, when it was granted?

215

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, I do not know the date of the lease. If the hon. Gentleman gives me notice, I am sure I can provide it. That probably is also a question that refers to something that will be or is in the public domain because the leases are searchable. But if he gives me notice, I can give him the date.

220

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, just for the Chief Minister's information – this is obviously not a question – I would have him know I have done a search at Land Property and there is no such lease registered, certainly within the last month.

225

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, GJB Hotels: is that the company that owns the Caleta Palace Hotel?

230

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I gave the title as G&JB (Hotels) 2014 Ltd. The Caleta Palace Hotel was built, I think, in 1965 and as far as I know is not owned by this company, but I am not able to tell him whether it is or whether it is not. It may be that it has been moved into this company by the family that owns the Caleta Palace Hotel or not.

I do not think it is a question that arises anyway from the question that has been put.

235

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, just to connect the dots, or he may correct me if I am wrong: this is the company that is going to develop the Holiday Inn Express, or the Holiday Inn?

240

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think that is also public information, because the DPC considered an application from G&JB (Hotels) 2014 Ltd for the development of that hotel, so it is public information.

Of course, the DPC now sits in public and hon. Members can attend and see what is considered and the minutes are available and it is all online. This is public information.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Chief Minister's confirmation.

Q697/2016
Relocation of Moroccan Hostel –
Receipt of premium

245

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise, as per its press release 48/2014, if it received the premium of £2.7 million from the developer of Buena Vista for the relocation of the Moroccan Hostel from the Stone Block?

250

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, the Government received the £2.7 million premium in December 2014.

Q698-699/2016
GCP Investments and GAR Ltd –
Deed of Sale and stamp duty

255

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the purpose of the Deed of Sale between GCP Investments – a Government-owned company – and GAR Ltd – another Government company – on 1st July 2014 for 14 properties with a combined value of £40,292,975.59; how was this valuation arrived at and where did GAR obtain the money from?

260

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer together with Question 699.

265

Clerk: Question 699, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, how much stamp duty was paid to Government on the sale of property from GCP Investments Ltd to GAR Ltd for £40,292,975.59?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, these properties were valued in February 2013 by Land Property Services Ltd and were transferred by the Crown to GCP Investments Ltd. They were subsequently transferred to GAR Ltd as part of a rationalisation exercise.

275

The total stamp duty paid was £1.4 million.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his response. Could he explain the rationale for this reorganisation? What was the reason for it?

280

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, rationalisation.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, rationalisation to what end, I would ask?

285 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what we considered to be a better way of holding the properties.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am sure the Chief Minister will appreciate that you do not do something for no reason, especially when you have to then pay yourself £1.4 million in stamp duty.

290 Again I ask, what was the reason for moving it from one Government-owned company to another Government-owned company?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, of course you do not move something from one company to another company, especially if you incur a charge, unless there is a good reason for it and rationalisation is a very good reason to do something like this. In other words, rationalisation means to better structure your holding of assets. That is why we have done it, because we think this is a better way of holding the assets.

300 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that.
In what way is it better?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, perhaps he should give notice of that question, because all he has asked me is about the transaction and he has not asked me for a detailed understanding of the rationalisation. He may find that the Government does not want to give more detail, or he may find that if he writes he may get a further answer, but what he cannot do is to say that this arises.

310 Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, I will follow his advice and I will write in next time a question specifically asking for the Government's thinking on this.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I may just ask ... I may have missed the answer in the original question – and apologies if I did and the Chief Minister has to repeat himself – but where did GAR Ltd obtain the money from? I am sure the Chief Minister probably answered that but I did not hear.

315 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not have the detail of where GAR obtained the money from. The hon. Gentleman is right that that is one of the constituent elements of the question but I do not have the detail in the answer of where GAR obtained the money from. I assume it has either been dealt with by way of inter-company loans or it has been dealt with from own funds of GAR.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, in either of those cases, GAR being a Government-owned company, its own funds would effectively be money obtained through Government – or would it be through another income source?

325 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it would be from the pool of cash that the companies have, a pool of cash which was established for the companies by the GSD administration.

Q700-701/2016
Derivative contracts –
Details of policy, current contracts and valuation

Clerk: Question 700, the Hon. R M Clinton.

330 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, what is the Government's policy in respect of the entering into and use of derivative contracts; who is authorised to enter into them and what exposure limits have been set and by whom?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

335 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 701.

Clerk: Question 701, the Hon. R M Clinton.

340 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide a list of all derivative contracts, excluding interest rate swaps, held by the Government, Government agencies or companies, together with the current valuation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

345

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, derivative contracts are entered into with the approval of the Government in order to hedge interest rates on loans, fuel costs and currency risks.

350 In the case of fuel hedges, the authority of the GEA board is required as well as that of the Government. Hedging of currency risks are authorised by the Financial Secretary with the approval of the Government.

Excluding interest rate swaps, the only derivative contract currently held is the five-year Fuel Hedge entered into by the Gibraltar Electricity Authority which expires on 30th September 2017.

355 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can I ask who would be responsible, then, for monitoring these contracts?

Hon. Chief Minister: The Ministry of Finance.

Q702/2016

Government financing for commercial property development – Details

Clerk: Question 702, the Hon. R M Clinton.

360

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, has the Government or any Government agency or company provided any financing for any commercial property development in Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

365

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, my Government stopped the financing of a commercial property development by third parties which the GSD was pursuing and for which they had taken a mortgage of £20 million secured over more than 20 Government properties to the value of £32,914,000.

370

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister can correct me if what I say now is wrong. He is effectively confirming that there is no current Government financing for any commercial property developments in Gibraltar.

Hon. Chief Minister: That is right, Mr Speaker.

375

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q703-704/2016
Air Terminal –
Purchase, lease and stamp duty

Clerk: Question 703, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the purpose of the transaction executed between Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd and Gibraltar Land Holdings Ltd and the Crown on 20th May 2013 whereby Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd surrendered its lease to the Crown, Gibraltar Land Holdings Ltd purchased the Air Terminal for £90 million and then gave a lease to Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd for 20 years at an annual rental of £5.4 million?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question 704.

Clerk: Question 704, the Hon. R M Clinton.

390

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the amount of stamp duty paid on the £90 million by Gibraltar Land Holdings on the purchase of the Air Terminal; has the £90 million been paid to the Crown; and where did Gibraltar Land Holdings obtain £90 million from?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the purpose of this transaction was to reflect the Airport Terminal building in the balance sheet of the Government-owned companies at cost and to reflect the annual market rental value of this asset.

The total stamp duty paid was £3.3 million – and I think he could have worked that out for himself.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I do not believe I heard an answer in respect of where did the £90 million comes from.

405

Hon. Chief Minister: He did not, Mr Speaker, but I assume it comes from the pool of cash which the GSD established for the companies, which is where the companies' monies lies.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, when I ask a question I would like the answer rather than the Chief Minister's assumption. Does he have any clarity on the question?

410

Mr Speaker: Repeat the question please.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I asked, other than his own assumption, does he have any actual information as to where the £90 million came from?

415

Hon. Chief Minister: That is a question, Mr Speaker! Before there was not a question. Before, he got up and said what he would like, which is a matter for him. He can tell us what he likes, what he wishes and all the rest of it.

420 No, Mr Speaker, I do not have the information, but my assumptions are usually correct.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, with respect to the Chief Minister, I have asked a fairly simple question and he has responded with his personal assumption. I am asking the Government of Gibraltar do they know, do they not know, where the £90 million came from for this transaction?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have told him that it has very likely come from the pool of cash that the companies have available to them, which the GSD established, because that is where the companies get their money from.

Hon. R M Clinton: Well then, Mr Speaker, let me ask him this question: can he confirm that the £90 million was actually paid over in respect of this transaction?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I would need notice of that question, but when a transaction occurs for an amount, it occurs for an amount.

435

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I believe I have given notice to this question in 704 where I said specifically, '... has the £90 million been paid to the Crown?'

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the Crown has not entered into a transaction with its own companies for which it has not been paid, because I would have been notified of that.

440

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, so can I assume by that remark that the Crown has been paid?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as far as I heard the hon. Gentleman say, 'I will assume from that ...' – well, that is fine.

445

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I will ask again of the Chief Minister, has the Crown been paid the £90 million in respect of this transaction?

450

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave a few moments ago.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, as I do not have Hansard in front of me could he perhaps refresh my memory as to what he said a couple of minutes ago, because I did not hear him say the Crown was paid £90 million.

455

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, he can go on Hansard and look at it when it comes out. I am not here to refresh anybody's memory about anything.

460

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, I guess then the Crown has not been paid the £90 million since he will not confirm it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I said something before which led him to assume the opposite and now he wants to guess the opposite. It is up to him. He is getting rather confused this morning.

465

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, let me ask him this: is the £90 million sale by the Crown reflected in the books of the Government as at the date of transaction?

470

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, those parts of the books of the Government will already have been published and the hon. Gentleman can look at them himself.

I cannot imagine any reason why the Government would not want to reflect the transaction.

475

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, when the Hon. the Chief Minister says that the money comes from, 'the pool of monies in Government-owned companies' he is referring to the pool of money that is held on call account by Gibraltar Investments Holdings, is he not?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, sir.

480

Hon. D A Feetham: Therefore, Mr Speaker, what he is referring to is the pool of money that is being paid to Gibraltar Investment Holdings by Credit Finance Company Ltd and indeed also the proceeds from the loan that was obtained in relation to the various estates that the Government has now mortgaged to the hilt.

485

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we have had a number of discussions about whether something is a mortgage or is not a mortgage. We have had a number of discussions about what is or is not in the pool of companies. The hon. Gentleman, therefore, has had extensive opportunities to try and determine what is and is not in that pool. They set it up, Mr Speaker, when they were in Government. They thought it was a good thing to have when they were in Government. We have continued the application of it and there are many things which make up that pool, Mr Speaker.

490

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, perhaps I can simplify it and maybe he gives me a straight answer to this question: is the bulk of the money that is in Gibraltar Investment Holdings the proceeds from the £320 million paid over by Credit Finance Company Ltd – their creation – and the £300 million from the loan obtained as a consequence of the mortgage on the Government estates? When one talks about the 'pool of money', the bulk of that money is that money?

495

Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. Gentleman always wants straight answers to crooked questions.

500

Mr Speaker, that supplementary does not arise from this question.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may return to Question 703, can I ask the Chief Minister if he would characterise the transaction as a sale and leaseback?

505

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, an analysis of a sale-and-leaseback transaction requires much more than me just to get up and answer the hon. Gentleman's question as if we were having a conversation over a pint – so he is not going to get my analysis of that here.

510

I would be delighted to have a pint with him and do this and many other analyses, but not here.

Q705/2016
National football stadium –
Update

Clerk: Question 705, the Hon. E J Reyes.

515

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, sir, given the apparent abandonment by the Gibraltar Football Association of their plans to construct a national football stadium at the Europa Playing Fields site, can Government provide updated information in respect of what other alternative site or sites are being considered for the provision of a UEFA Cat. 3 approved stadium?

520

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as stated in Press Release 634/2015, subject to DPC approval, the proposed move of the new football stadium is to Lathbury Barracks. But, Mr Speaker, this is not a Government project; it is a GFA project.

525

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I accept what the Chief Minister is saying – I am sorry my wording is wrong. I know it is a GFA project, that is why I started my question by saying that ‘the apparent abandonment’ was by Gibraltar Football Association of using the Europa grounds.

530

What I do try, as well, to ask in the question, especially the part after the comma: are any other alternative sites, other than the one referred to in press release 634 – which is the Windmill Hill – being considered? Because there is a lot of talk amongst people who frequent football games, either Victoria Stadium or Faro, in that other sites could be looked into.

535

I was asking the Chief Minister – not trying to catch him out but more out of concern for football lovers and above all those of us who have to put up with the inconvenience of travelling all the way to Faro – to see if there are any other sites being considered.

540

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have a residual affection for the hon. Gentleman because we have been in this House together for so long, that when he asks me a question I do not think he is trying to trip me up, I genuinely think he is trying to get to the information.

545

He is right that Faro causes a number of inconveniences, in the Government certainly. Individually, as a collective, we would like to see our national football stadium happen and football coming home to Gibraltar.

550

In particular, Mr Speaker, I tell him, as somebody who is now permanently on a diet, going to Faro presents many, many temptations, usually of the fishy variety, and it is better to stay home and closer to the local and locale than it is to go to Faro.

555

Mr Speaker, there is wide sympathy in all parts of the Government for wanting football to be able to come back to Gibraltar. This is, again, a GFA project. The GFA are looking at Lathbury. I understand they have only recently finished their in-depth analysis of that location, which is the one that they have asked us to look at. If they want us to look at other locations, we will. As long as they are compatible with other land-use requirements of the Government and of this community, we will of course try to work with them if Lathbury does not work.

We are wishing to make this happen in Gibraltar. It is not easy to have another football stadium in Gibraltar. It has to be, as hon. Members know, a football stadium. It cannot be a multi-sport stadium. I know that the GFA are constantly trying to repatriate football, even if it is on an interim basis, just for some matches to Gibraltar, which might even be played in the existing facilities whilst they look for a new home. They have the full support of the Government in doing that, as hon. Gentlemen know. They have seen that we have refurbished part of the Victoria Stadium already in order to deal with non-national games. There is now a possibility of some national games coming, potentially, which I think we would all welcome.

This is a vexed issue for a territory that is two and a half miles by one mile at its widest point, Mr Speaker. But within the six km<sup>2</sup> we will find a way of doing business. We find a way of doing everything.

565 Hon. Ms M D Hasson Nahon: Mr Speaker, can I rise, can I ask?

The Chief Minister explained about Lathbury Barracks, but I just wanted to say, despite the fact that we know that there have been partisan disagreements on the location of the proposed GFA stadium, I would like to ask the Chief Minister, isn't it obvious that going for or recommending a place like Lathbury Barracks that is so aloof and so remote – when you think 570 that so many foreigners are going to be coming to Gibraltar – there are inevitably going to be transport issues, getting so far and coming back?

Isn't it obvious that it would be much better suited to recommend something in the Bayside area, especially when the schools are going to be taken down, rebuilt, or whatever, and there is scope to place it somewhere near the Frontier, near Spain, near a massive car park? Isn't it 575 obvious that logistically it would make a lot more sense to have it in the North District?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady may or may not know ... In fact, from what I know of her, she will understand that those of us who are Liverpool fans have to suffer the trek out of Liverpool City centre to Anfield, which is very far indeed, very difficult to get to, 580 etc. It does not stop Anfield from being full every time the Reds play at home. It does not mean that they always win, although I understand that this year we are not doing badly. There is one particular team just ahead of us. (A Member: No comment!)

Mr Speaker, look, this is about land use, and remodelling things is not easy and the UEFA requirements are not easy. I know this is not a Government issue, this is a GFA issue. The GFA 585 asked the Government for Europa; the GFA asked the Government for Lathbury. The Government have tried to help the GFA to identify other areas but we are trying to work with the GFA. The GFA have looked – for all the reasons the hon. Lady has talked about – to the North District. They have looked at Victoria repeatedly. The partisan disagreements about Victoria are not that we do not want to do it there, it is that UEFA have been insistent that it cannot be a 590 multiuse facility; we would potentially lose it for all other sports. There are all sorts of issues tied up here.

What would be the best area? The hon. Lady is probably right that it is easier and more convenient for those who are coming into Gibraltar if it could be further north. It is also true that, if you want to make more of those who are coming to Gibraltar, you want them to walk 595 through Gibraltar. In some respects, you also want to keep them away from some parts.

This is not an easy decision. The only thing a Government can do in this situation is work with the Association that has the responsibility to provide the facility and try and help them as much as possible. I am sure whoever might have been in Government, we would all be trying to work 600 with the Gibraltar Football Association to deliver this facility as soon as possible in the best possible place and in the best possible way so that football fans from Gibraltar and from the rest of the world can enjoy the GFA's matches in Gibraltar, and Champions and Europa League matches in Gibraltar, where our lads and ladies do us so proud.

It is particularly true that now the ladies' game is taking off in Gibraltar as a result of the efforts being made by the GFA. It is also true that in the men's game we have had some 605 extraordinary successes in the past six months. Lincoln Football Club beating Celtic in Gibraltar was really quite an incredible thing that people might not have imagined possible. All of those things, I think, contribute to the affection that there is for what is already one of the most popular sports in Gibraltar.

She can rest assured that the Government is doing everything possible in working for the GFA 610 to deliver the best possible facility for those sportsmen who play the game and those fans who want to go and watch the game being played in Gibraltar.

615 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what UEFA will not do is actually fund a national stadium, or provide a contribution in respect of funding of a national stadium, if it is used for other sports. It does not actually prevent national football games being played – and indeed there are examples elsewhere – in a multipurpose facility. UEFA will allow that.

620 My question is this: the question by my hon. Friend, Mr Reyes, talks about UEFA Cat. 3. The football stadium that is being planned by the GFA is a Cat. 4. UEFA rules provide that in the absence of a Cat. 4 – and there is no Cat. 4 here in Gibraltar at present – international football can be played at a Cat. 3. Victoria Stadium is very close to a Cat. 3. The Government has done a good job in relation to the upgrade of Victoria Stadium – it is very close.

625 Therefore, will the Government, just as a temporary measure ... Because we all know that the Government's policy is to facilitate the release of land to the GFA in order to build its own football-exclusive Cat. 4 stadium. Will the Government consider – and again I urge on them to consider – the upgrade of Victoria Stadium just that little bit more from that Cat. 2.8, as the hon. Gentleman described it, to a Cat. 3 which would enable the Victoria Stadium to be used – only on a temporary basis – for our home games? I am not sure what the position is on FIFA, but certainly on UEFA, that is the position.

630 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not accept anything that the hon. Gentleman says is or is not UEFA's position. The Government will continue to work with the GFA and consider the things that the GFA ask us to consider, not anything that he asks us to consider about what is, in effect, their responsibility, their obligations, and their membership of UEFA and their membership, now, of FIFA – something that we all welcome.

Mr Speaker: Next question, please.

Q706/2016

Write-offs of Government arrears – Number and Limitation Act

Clerk: Question 706, the Hon. D A Feetham.

640 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many write-offs of Government arrears have taken place in each of the last five years and how many will the Government now pursue in the light of the recent changes to the Limitation Act?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

645 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, details of arrears written off are published in the Annual Audited Accounts. Details of the arrears asked about are previously provided in answer to Question 576/2016.

650 The amendment to the Limitation Act will no longer prevent the Government from following up arrears due which were previously statute barred or debts which are reaching six years from becoming statute barred.

Whenever possible, in future actions brought against a debtor in respect of Government arrears due, the full extent of the arrears due to the Crown may be pursued as appropriate, notwithstanding that none of this debt may have previously been written-off as a result of the Limitation Act.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q707/2016

Allegation against GSD Minister made 7th October – Information to substantiate

Clerk: Question 707, the Hon. D A Feetham.

660 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister place before this House the information he had on Friday 7th October 2016 to substantiate the allegation that in January 2003 the GSD Government had made a loan to a company in which a Government Minister apparently had an interest?

665 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government will make a further statement in due course to provide all relevant information at its disposal in respect of this matter.

670

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, with respect, that is not a satisfactory answer. What information, Mr Speaker, did he have at his disposal on that Friday to basically say to this House that he thought or there was some kind of prima facie evidence that Inverigan Ltd had received a loan and that Inverigan Ltd was owned or that a GSD Minister had an interest in Inverigan Ltd?

675

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he may or may not be satisfied with my answer, but I have told him what I have told him: I will make a full statement in due course which will provide that and all the other information which I consider appropriate.

680

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, has he, in a professional capacity, acted for any of the shareholders in Inverigan Ltd and was that the reason why, in his own mind, he made this link – I will ask him some further questions in relation to this – which is completely and utterly spurious as far as this inference that a Government Minister had an interest in this particular company in January 2003?

685

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not answerable in this House for the things I may or may not have done in my professional capacity.

690

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, if he acted for one of the shareholders of Inverigan Ltd, does he not agree with me that he ought to have declared his interest when he made the statement that he made on Friday 7th October to this House?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, I do not agree. But I do not see how that is a question that arises from.... How is that a supplementary that arises from this question?

Hon. Gentlemen know that we spend hours here because they do not follow the Rules that they have to ask questions which arise. The hon. Gentleman wants to go on an exciting cross-examination of the Chief Minister to try and lead him to the place that he wants to try and catch him in the trap of. I have given the answer to this question: I will make a full statement and provide the full information when I am ready, Mr Speaker. I am not answerable in this House for things I did as a professional – which I am very proud of having done.

700

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, to use the phrase that he used in relation to us when he surprised us with this information, surprised the rest of Gibraltar – it appeared in the Gibraltar Chronicle the next day, front page – ‘The Opposition is wriggling on a hook.’ Well, it appears to me, Mr Speaker, that it is the Chief Minister who is now wriggling on a hook.

What information did he have to slur the reputations of eight GSD Government Ministers when he made the statement that he made on 7th October, two weeks ago, Mr Speaker?

710 Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. Gentleman can rest assured, Mr Speaker, that I am not wriggling and I am on no hook. But just asking the same question over and over again is not going to change how I am going to answer, nor is it going to change the statement I am going to make which will clarify everything for the whole of this community, especially given that it is something that has been contained in the auditors' accounts for many, many years.

715 The community will be very pleased to see what I have to say about that particular matter and will be very interested to hear what I have to say in relation to the matters that have been ventilated in this House. I very much look forward to making it, Mr Speaker. Perhaps the hon. Gentleman does not look forward to my making it and that is why he is trying to dissemble it and trying to suggest that I should be saying something now instead of when I am ready.

720 What we are doing, Mr Speaker, is having a debate on the subject rather than dealing with questions. I commend to the hon. Gentleman that he should watch the Westminster Parliament more often. He might learn how to ask questions in Parliament, because it is completely different to asking questions in court. He does not seem to be able to change the guise in which he asks the questions.

725 Hon. D A Feetham: Does he know, Mr Speaker – and he ought to have known, because I believe that he acted for the shareholders of this particular company – that a GSD Government Minister had a shareholding in this particular company and sold his shareholding in this particular company on 28th April 2000? Therefore, when the loan was granted in January 2003 there was absolutely no interest. Therefore, it was wholly improper of the Chief Minister to have made the assertions and the allegations that he made on 7th October, two weeks ago.

735 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not see how that arises from this question. This is a statement that the hon. Gentleman has obviously been itching to make. I remit him to the answer I gave a few moments ago. I will be making a full statement of what I knew and what else I know and why I said the things I said in due course. But he obviously wanted to get up and say those things. He might have just done it in his first supplementary and we could have avoided all of this uncomfortable dancing around each other that he insists on doing – although I must say he is one dancer that cannot be described as having two left feet anymore because he seems to have gone to the other side.

740 Mr Speaker: Perhaps it will be of assistance if I explain that, given that the Chief Minister has committed himself to make a ministerial statement on the matter arising from a question, the attitude that I will adopt will then be different as to when a normal ministerial statement is made –

745 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, my answer has been that I will make a further statement. I have not said it is a ministerial statement and I have not necessarily said it will be in this House.

750 Mr Speaker: That further statement will arise from a question. Therefore, unlike a ministerial statement, when only questions on clarification are permitted, the questions that will be asked will be part of the normal process of question and answer.

755 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in order to assist the Hon. the Chief Minister – and bearing in mind that the Hon. the Chief Minister invites us constantly, rather than answer questions in this House, to do searches at Companies House and expects us to trawl through hundreds of companies – we have made our own enquiries in relation to this. I have a file with all the documents here to substantiate what I have put to the Chief Minister and, if he wants me to send copies of this, I will be delighted to do so during the course of next week, if he wants me to send copies.

760

Hon. Chief Minister: I do not want copies of any documents he has, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: We move on to the next question.

Written Questions numbers W56/2016 through to W59/2016.

Questions for Oral Answer

Q708-715/2016 Top 30 Government debtors – Supplementary questions

Mr Speaker: Are there any supplementaries arising from the schedule?

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes.

820 Mr Speaker, in relation to this schedule, there are quite a few staggering amounts. I do not say that in a way that I hope will be politically contentious, but if one looks at, for example, the answer in relation to PAYE, the highest one is £582,402. That same company – well, it must be a company – owes, as well, Social Insurance of £306,000. That is £800,000.

Mr Speaker: Do you know that it is the same company?

825

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, because it is provided. It is one of the questions that I asked. If you actually look at Question 712. Does Mr Speaker have it? (Mr Speaker: Yes.) Question 712: Mr Speaker, will see £582,000 and then for Social Insurance it has £306,000. Does Mr Speaker have it? Then underneath it, there is a £364,000 and Social Insurance £300,000. That is equal to 830 £600,000. Then, underneath that, £271,000 and £131,000.

Mr Speaker, have any of these companies gone into liquidation or does the Government envisage that it will still be able to recover these amounts from these debtors? I am talking in particular, Mr Speaker, about the high amounts at the top of these various columns, say the first five, which are quite high in each sector?

835

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government's intention is that everybody should pay what is due and every corporate should pay what is due. If they are not in liquidation, then they are companies that are going to be or are being already very actively chased by the Government. In respect of some, Mr Speaker, we are dealing with companies that are in 840 liquidation. In respect of others, we may be dealing with different scenarios.

The position of this Government is that these arrears must be paid and they must be paid timeously – and there is a constant exercise now ongoing in respect of this matter. A lot of the debt is aged debt which comes from before our time and may not be recoverable, although there is, of course, a hesitation to write-off large amounts, in particular if there are directors 845 who might be within the jurisdiction who have liability in respect of Social Insurance, etc. But nobody is going to be let off and there is already ongoing a process of recovery.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, can he help me with ...? Does he know how many of these companies that owe these vast amounts of money are in liquidation? Does he have that 850 information?

If he does not, I am going to ask another question on notice in relation to this anyway. I may ask it by way of a written question. But does he have that information, as to whether these companies are or are not in liquidation?

855 Hon. Chief Minister: I do not have it with me, Mr Speaker, but it is information that can be provided, I am sure, because we will have the information through the Official Receiver.

Hon. E J Reyes: May I, Mr Speaker ...? Just to clarify, from the list provided in answer to Question 715, it refers to debtors for rent arrears. I know they range from £19,707 to £14,483 860 for the top 30 debtors. Is the Chief Minister aware, are all these 30 arrears in respect of Government rental homes or could some of them be because Government does own, for example, properties where they are leased out on a commercial basis? I am thinking, for example, if one takes, let's say, Laguna Estate or Varyl Begg Estate, underneath the blocks there are some commercial premises, so someone could owe rent from there. It belongs in the 865 housing estate, but not necessarily for a rental home; in fact, it is a commercial enterprise rather than a family home.

I do not know whether, between the Ministers, they can work it out.

Mr Speaker: Are you saying that the question – 870

Hon. E J Reyes: The question did not make a distinction between residential or commercial.

Mr Speaker: – did not make a distinction between residential or commercial?

875 Hon. E J Reyes: No, I am asking because ...
Yes. I know, Mr Speaker, but –

Mr Speaker: It could be both.

880 Hon. E J Reyes: The Minister for Housing and I talk a lot behind the Chair. She knows how supportive I am that those –

Mr Speaker: Does the hon. Lady or the Chief Minister have the information?

885 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister is not yet an hon. Lady, but I do hope in future that the GSLP ... (Laughter) (Interjection by Mr Speaker)

Mr Speaker: Does the hon. Lady or the Chief Minister. I look forward to the day when an hon. Lady becomes Chief Minister– 890

Hon. Chief Minister: So do I, Mr Speaker, and I sincerely hope that she is a socialist lady that takes the post and leads by example.

Mr Speaker, I do not have the information, but the information has been sought from all the Departments that receive rents or that have properties that receive rents, and then the top 895 30 have been provided. I do not have a breakdown of what is commercial and what is residential.

Mr Speaker: Any other supplementaries?

900 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, is the Government going to pursue a policy of naming and shaming these various companies for the high levels of arrears that are owed to the Government?

905 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman must know the answer to that question. We have passed legislation in order to be able to do so – it was an initiative of this Government. We have found that very often, when we are about to publish, people pay, and if there is not yet a payment in respect of these amounts, it is very likely that a lot of this debt is aged debt which cannot be recovered, otherwise that instrument would also have been used alongside all the other instruments we use to recover debt.

910 I think it is important that people understand their liability to pay their dues in this community, whether it is in respect of residential property, commercial property; whether it is in respect of taxation or Social Insurance. It is one that must be complied with. Shaming people is, in my view, a better tool than winding them up, if you are able in that way to continue to see the company in operation and receive the monies. But, hon. Members must know, we are the ones who passed the law to do that so, of course, that is one of the things we are likely to be doing.

915 Mr Speaker: Perhaps there is no need to make it clear – or perhaps there is – that although the schedule will not be recorded in Hansard, the information provided is now in the public domain.

920 Hon. D A Feetham: It would be in the Hansard!

Mr Speaker: No, a schedule ... (Interjection) It would be? Okay, previously, it was not. I am glad to hear.

Anyhow, more so, it is in the public domain.

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Gibraltar Consultative Council Bill 2016 – Committee Stage and Third Reading

925 Clerk: Committee Stage and Third Reading.
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

930 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, dealing with the amendments that I tabled yesterday to the Bill for the Consultative Council Act, hon. Members have, I think, the letter that we submitted ... We have not gone to Committee yet. (Interjection by Hon. J J Bossano) Oh, sorry.

Mr Speaker, I move that the House should now resolve itself into Committee to consider the Gibraltar Consultative Council Bill clause by clause.

935 Dealing with the letter that I provided yesterday and with the updated, track-changed version of the Bill, Mr Speaker, with the two mistakes that you spotted in respect of '2015' being '2016' and just taking out the words, 'Right Honourable' in the eighth proposed change, I would ask, Mr Speaker, that you take as read those proposed changes which are really just adding titles in most places, taking out a 'G' for a 'g', etc.

In Committee of the whole Parliament

Gibraltar Consultative Council Bill 2016 –
Clauses considered and approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act establishing the Gibraltar Consultative Council and governing its functions and duties and prescribing the terms of membership of the same.

Clause 1, as amended.

945

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 2, as amended.

950

Mr Chairman: A number of amendments which have been circulated – hon. Members have had them since yesterday. Unless there is any objection, clause 3, as amended, stands part of the Bill.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): The Act was introduced in parts, Mr Chairman. Do you want to do it by part rather than by clause? It is up to you – just to accelerate the business of the House. (Interjection by Mr Chairman) Ah, there is that one as well, sorry, yes.

Clerk: Clause 5, as amended.

960

970

Clerk: Clause 8, as amended.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 9.

975

Mr Chairman: In respect of clause 9, there was a matter raised by the Hon. Edwin Reyes yesterday, and I have received a copy of an amendment that he is proposing to clause 9(2) which has been circulated. I do not know whether the Chief Minister is happy to accept the amendment.

980

Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. Gentleman discussed this with me yesterday and I understood the point that he was making. As I confessed to him, issues that relate to the hierarchy of the military confuse me completely, as it is not a thing that I understand. I know he understands them much better than I do. I think this is a useful way of clarifying, given what he explained to me, and I am happy to accept the amendment as proposed.

985

Mr Chairman: Very well, then clause 9, as amended, including the amendment moved by the Hon. Edwin Reyes, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 10, as amended.

990

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 11, as amended.

Gibraltar Consultative Council Bill 2016 –
Third Reading approved: Bill passed

1045 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the Gibraltar Consultative Council Bill 2016 has been considered in Committee and agreed to with amendments and I now move that it be read a third time and passed.

Mr Speaker, I would call for a division in respect of this Bill.

1050 Mr Speaker: I now put the question which is that the Gibraltar Consultative Council Bill 2016 be read a third time and carried. A division will be called.

Mr Speaker: Just checking my calculations, we have four Members are absent; there are eight Members in favour; and five Members against. Carried.

The Gibraltar Consultative Council Bill 2016 has been read a third time and passed.

ADJOURNMENT

1055 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn to Tuesday, 8th November at 10 a.m.

1060 Mr Speaker: I am sorry to have to tell the Chief Minister that I think that I have a long-standing dental appointment – indeed I do. I have a long-standing dental appointment at 10.30 a.m. I could meet later that morning. If the Chief Minister will care to move the adjournment to, say, 11.30 in the morning, I could manage. Because it is a long-standing appointment, I am not confident that I can get an alternative slot.

1065 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in order to accommodate you we will, of course, try and do the best we can. 11.30 a.m. you think will be convenient? (Mr Speaker: Yes.) 11.30 a.m.

Mr Speaker: So the House will now adjourn until Tuesday, 8th November at 11.30 a.m.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Consultation on co-education

- 10     Clerk: Order of the Day: Private Members' motions.
The Hon. D A Feetham.

- 15     Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, before I move on with my motion, may I congratulate the Hon. Member Neil Costa for his appointment as Minister for Justice and on just taking the Oath. I have to say that it is with great pleasure that I see him doing so. Who would have believed in 2005, when we were both doing cases together at Hassans, that I would be swearing that same Oath and that he would also be swearing that same Oath a few years afterwards. So, on behalf of the Opposition I congratulate the hon. Member on his appointment.

Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

That this House notes that there are no overriding advantages for single-sex schools on educational grounds; acknowledges that there is a compelling case for the view that co-education provides a more realistic way of educating and training young people to take their places naturally in the wider community of men and women; acknowledges that education and ways to improve it must always remain at the top of the political agenda in this community and debate on these issues is important; and calls on the Government to generate that debate by undertaking a consultation exercise with teachers, the unions, parents, students and other stakeholders to determine the views of the community on this issue.

20 Mr Speaker, at the outset of this debate I would like to say that I recognise that there are studies that expound the benefits of both co-education and single-sex education, even if the balance, in my view, is in favour of the former. I am also prepared to accept, for the purposes of this debate, that the interpretation of the results of studies in the private or public sectors in the United Kingdom and other countries has been hotly debated, resulting in varying policy 25 recommendations based often on the same evidence.

But I believe that there is a compelling case for co-education. It is not surprising that over the last 20 years the number of single-sex schools in the independent sector in the United Kingdom – in other words, what we term ‘public’ schools; private schools would be commonly called public schools – have actually halved in the last 20 years. The time has come for us as a society 30 to debate the issues and the time has come for us to examine whether the decisions taken with the introduction of the comprehensive system in the 1970s to have single-sex comprehensive schools continues to be the best solution for secondary education in Gibraltar.

I hope that this debate on this motion starts that process, because there is no better investment than the investment in the education of our children, and anything that can be done or can potentially be done to improve that education is important and should be at the top of our collective agendas in this House.

My motion, Mr Speaker, does not seek to impose a view on this House, or anyone else for this matter. What it seeks to do is to generate and start what is a very important debate. But it is my view that there are excellent educational reasons for choosing co-education in a modern 40 Gibraltar. They include the capacity to offer a wide range of subjects equally to boys and girls at comprehensive that is not only beneficial purely from the perspective of offering greater choice and the same choice to students of both sexes, but also helps to break down gender stereotypes when girls and boys see each other studying the same subjects, particularly subjects which have traditionally been associated with girls or boys in the past.

I also believe that education is much more than just the study of maths or history or any other particular subject. It is also about educating and training young people to take their natural place in the wider community of men and women. Male and female students can learn from each other’s perspective and approaches, learn to collaborate, each bringing their styles and opinions to bear in working together. This in itself is an important learning opportunity, in 50 my opinion: it is about preparing young people for the realities of life, and the realities of life include men and women working together. It is not natural to segregate men and women and it is not natural, in our view, to segregate girls and boys during their education. Indeed, we do not segregate girls and boys at junior or middle school, and we do not segregate ourselves from members of the opposite sex after we leave comprehensive school. The views of men and 55 women and their different perspectives on life enrich society, and I believe that diversity would enrich secondary classrooms and better prepare students to move in the real world.

In many respects, Mr Speaker, the segregation of girls and boys at comprehensive school was a response to a very peculiar set of circumstances that existed in the 1970s that do not exist today, or at the very least need to be re-examined today, and I will make that out by referring to 60 the Collister report of July 1974, which is a report produced during the time that Mr Speaker was a member of the then AACR Government. To understand the Collister report – and I think it is important for the House to understand it – one has to start by placing it into context. The Collister report was a report that was commissioned as a consequence of recommendations and a visit by Mr Collister, an education adviser, in June 1973. This is what the report says about 65 Mr Collister’s visit to Gibraltar and what he had to say – and this is at page 2, for any of the Members who have a copy of the report:

Although Mr Collister's main purpose in visiting Gibraltar was to consider the proposed procedure for the implementation of the decision to develop a single comprehensive school on two different sites, he came to the conclusion that it was necessary to reassess the validity of the principle of co-education in the light not only of educational desirability and practicability, but also of the state of public opinion.

70 So, in other words, Mr Speaker, at the time, in 1973, the decision had been taken in principle to have two comprehensive schools in Gibraltar, but they were going to be co-educational schools, and Mr Collister came to Gibraltar in order to advise on whether that was the appropriate model going forward.

I read from the report, page three at the top:

Mr Collister went on to observe that as yet co-education did not appear to be fully acceptable to society. He formed the opinion that although the majority of the members of the Gibraltar's Teachers' Association were in favour of co-education, there was still great and natural apprehension on the part of parents whose traditional background was that of single-sex education. He therefore recommended the postponement of the proposed introduction of co-education in 1974.

75 So, presumably on the basis of his view, in 1973-74 I think was the first comprehensive intake, there was a boys' comprehensive and a girls' comprehensive, but what he recommended was that the matter be re-examined by a working group.

I am reading from the top of page 1 for anybody who wants to follow:

The terms of reference for the working party, as published in the official notice on 12th January 1974, were as follows: 'To make recommendation to Government as to whether secondary education would in future be organised on co-educational lines on a junior high/senior high school basis or continue on the present system of two single-sex separate schools. Any recommendation for change would not take effect until the session of 1976-77 at the earliest.'

The options that the Collister working group were considering are set out at page 6 of the report, at point 2, 'School Options'. It basically said:

We outline the following four options, stating that the working party considered options 1 and 4 as being the most suitable for Gibraltar.

80 Option 1 was one girls' school and one boys' school; option 2, one girls' school, one boys' school, one sixth-form co-ed; option 3, one co-ed school in the north, another in the south; option 4, one co-ed school split on two sites. Basically, those were the options being considered.

85 The first thing that the Collister group did was conduct a very extensive consultation exercise with the public, which I advocate ought to be the approach in the first instance of the Government and which I am inviting the House to agree in the form of my motion. At page 9 of the Collister report one can see the type of consultation exercise that was undertaken and also the results which I am about to set out for the benefit of this House. On page 9 at the top, 'For Public Opinion', the report says:

In our endeavour to inform public opinion about the main issues involved, we published four fact sheets and two opinion or information sheets, a case for co-education and a case for single-sex education. These were published in local newspapers and GBC Radio and Television, and copies were distributed to parents through the schools. Discussions on the subject were held on television. We believe that it may be safely stated that the matter was well and truly placed before the public. The public was then invited to make written or oral representations to the working party.

Mr Speaker, outside in the lobby, told me about the consultation exercise that his Government had undertaken – well, these are the results of the consultation exercise:

Teachers' opinion. The rate of response from teachers was 65%. There were 212 replies. Of the teachers who responded, 67.5% were in favour of a change to co-education, 32.5% in favour of single-sex education.

So the teachers were overwhelmingly supportive of co-education.

Parents' opinion. The rate of response from parents was between 40% and 45%.

90 In other words, Mr Speaker, less than 50% of parents responded to the consultation exercise, but there were still 2,560 replies – quite a lot of replies. Of those parents who responded, 37.7% were in favour of co-education, 60.8% were in favour of single-sex education, and 1.5% were undecided. So parents, although it was less than 50% that responded, were overwhelmingly in favour of single-sex education.

Pupils' opinion. The rate of response was 80% of the secondary school enrolments.

95 That is very high.

There were 1,171 replies. Of those pupils who responded, 54.3% were in favour of co-education

– the majority –

24.2% were in favour of single-sex education, and 21.5% were undecided.

Ex-students' opinion. Only 86 questionnaires were completed. Of these, 75.6% were in favour of co-education, 18.6% were in favour of single-sex education, and 5.8% were undecided.

100 So, Mr Speaker, it is safe to say that in the consultation exercise that was undertaken in 1974 the majority of those that were consulted were in favour of co-education, and those that were against ... really, the only body that was against was parents, of which 40% to 45% responded to the survey but those were the only group who were against co-education, in favour of single-sex education.

Indeed that is reflected as well in a resolution. First, there was a resolution that was passed by the Gibraltar Teachers' Association on 20th May 1974, which read as follows:

Having made an up-to-date study of educational research and practice in European countries, this Association continues to be committed to co-education as the better matrix from which the community of Gibraltar can develop.

105 My understanding – I will be corrected, if I am wrong, by my hon. Friend to my right – is a resolution that continues in fact to have effect and continues to be the position of the Gibraltar Teachers' Association to this day.

Then there was a rival resolution, which was a resolution by the Gibraltar Parents' Association on 25th April 1974, and it read as follows:

That single-sex education at secondary school level be retained.

And then there is a rider to that resolution and it says as follows:

It was generally agreed by the Association that we be prudent to allow for changes in the future when deciding on the type of buildings to be erected.

110 Mr Speaker, the recommendation of the Collister report, as we all know, was that at the time we continued with the recently introduced comprehensive system on a single-sex basis with two separate schools, and the reasons were as follows. I pick it up at page 14, under the title 'Comprehensive Education' – and it says this - and this is really one of the main reasons, if not the main reason, why the Collister report recommended that we continue with single-sex 115 education – it reads as follows:

It has been represented to us, and we accept this, that the change to a comprehensive system in Gibraltar, while desired by the majority in all sectors of opinion, was introduced too quickly and without adequate planning and preparation. This has led to a number of problems in the practical working of the system, in the words of Mr Collister a 'highly sophisticated and complex organism' which those concerned are doing their best to overcome. Apart from this aspect, however, we consider that the system, which is a relatively young one even in Britain, should be given a chance to develop over the next few years to the point at which genuine comprehensive education is fully available in Gibraltar.

We therefore consider that it would be wrong to impose upon the educational structure as it is at present a further radical change which, even if there were not a substantial body of opinion against it, would be bound to present further difficulties and problems in administration, organisation, training and assimilation.

In other words, this is an education system that had just been introduced, the comprehensive system; it needed bedding down. But of course that which was the main reason in 1974 is no reason at all in 2016.

120 The second reason was this. It talked about the options and then it said:

We have, however, found considerable opposition to option 4.

I remind this House that option 4 was two comprehensive schools on co-educational principles on two different sites in Gibraltar.

Option 4 – one educational school split on two sites. The first major objection was to the creation of one school for as many as 2,000 pupils with all the problems of administration and organisation as well as the difficulties in establishing personal relationships and some feeling of belonging which would arise. Equally cogent was the argument that the physical division was likely to perpetuate a notion of a privileged class of pupils who would move on to the upper school and indeed that such division might dissuade some pupils from staying at school after reaching the age of 15.

125 In other words, it was felt to be divisive to have two schools on co-educational grounds on different sites in Gibraltar – that one could develop a reputation for being better than the other and that it would just simply lead to elitism. Again, it is not a reason, in my respectful view, that can possibly apply today.

And then it says:

And then, third, staff. We have referred above to the need for the full orientation of teachers if a true comprehensive system is to be established. While it would no doubt be possible to take at least some steps to remedy the need for training, etc. before 1977-78 we believe again that it would be unwise to attempt to do so whilst the difficult process of adaptation to the comprehensive system remains incomplete.

The fourth reason was that a majority of parents were against it in Gibraltar. That was the fourth reason that was provided.

130 The reasons are summarised at page 21 at the very top, when the working group reported as follows:

Co-education should not be introduced in Gibraltar at least until (a) present problems are overcome and a truly comprehensive system is fully established; (b) public opinion is in favour; (c) adequate specific and long-term preparation of teaching staff is possible; and (d) two separate co-educational schools are no longer regarded as potentially divisive in social or academic terms.

135 Mr Speaker, I believe that the time has come for this issue to be reopened. I believe that the time has come for a working group on the lines of the Collister working group to be set up today in order to look at this particular issue. And I believe that, above all, the time has come to have profound engagement with parents, with the union, with students and with all relevant stakeholders in order to see whether the public opinions that were expressed in 1974 and so informed the decision of the Collister group and working party at the time, are still public opinions that prevail today. I doubt it very much and I believe that public opinion in Gibraltar would be very much in favour of co-education.

140 I believe that the time has come to be progressive on this issue, the time has come to look forward on this issue and the time has come for us all to embrace a modern outlook to coeducation, and the starting point is the setting up of a working group and the starting point is engagement with the public in order to have a proper debate in relation to this issue.

Mr Speaker, I commend the motion to this House. (Banging on desks)

145

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Hon. Mr Feetham. Does any hon. Member wish to speak on the motion?

The Hon. Gilbert Licudi.

150

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I have listened attentively to the hon. Member. Essentially what he has done is recite a 1970s report (Laughter) and come to the conclusion that he does not agree with the conclusion of the 1970s report! But he has here set out his case based on that report, only to say that the report reached the wrong conclusion and that a different conclusion would be reached today. And he has ended by saying, 'Time to reopen the issue, time for a working group to be set up.'

155

I do not know how long ago he prepared his speech, but several weeks ago I gave notice by letter to Mr Speaker of a proposed amendment to the motion, which I will come to in a moment when I move the amendment – at the moment I am just replying to the hon. Member, but I am referring to the text of the amended motion which was provided to the hon. Member – which sets out, and I will go into further detail later, that a working group has already been set up. For the hon. Member to come with a prepared speech and say 'You should be doing what you are already doing', when he knows we are already doing it, 'because the report that I have read out almost in its entirety from the 1970s was wrong' simply is to ignore the reality of what is going on today in education in Gibraltar.

But, Mr Speaker, I want to start my contribution to this debate by setting out the Government's position and setting it out as clearly as I can. This was certainly my own personal position when I was Minister for Education and it is the Government's position as a whole. It is quite simply and quite clearly that we have an open mind. The Government does not currently have a firm view on whether secondary education in Gibraltar should continue to be offered in single-sex schools or in a co-educational environment, so we have an open mind. And in fact I have had that open mind and I have had these discussions with professionals at the Department of Education since December 2011 when we were first elected into Government and I took over the Education portfolio. So this is not a debate that is new; this is a debate that has been going on for some time – and yes, we do have that open mind. But having said that, Mr Speaker, one thing is absolutely clear, even though we have an open mind: we must not change for the sake of change. There must be good reasons. There must be sound educational arguments and educational reasons for co-education for a change such as this, to introduce co-education, to be made.

170

180

It is worth noting I recall a few weeks ago a contributor to the letters column in the Gibraltar Chronicle who wrote specifically on this subject, having heard the hon. Member saying that he was going to propose a motion on co-education, and referring in that letter to the good results that we get from both Bayside and Westside., he simply said, 'If it ain't broke, don't fix it.' What we have, Mr Speaker, is a system that by and large works well. Of course the system can be improved, and we have made improvements to the system. We are constantly looking at ways in which to improve our children's education, and we have done so. We have removed inequalities which existed during all the time that the GSD was in office.

Because the hon. Member in his contribution says there are excellent educational reasons for going co-ed, having premised his arguments by saying that he feels there is a compelling case for co-education, and he proclaims there are excellent educational reasons – and I sat patiently hoping to hear those excellent educational reasons. In fact, I thought we were going to get a list of those excellent educational reasons. We got one matter. One point was made, and that is all that was made, in respect of the excellent educational reasons for going co-educational – just one in his entire contribution: greater choice of subjects. I have got it written down: greater choice of subjects.

195 And then he went on to talk of social reasons, like preparing young people for life in an environment where people are going to be mixing male and female and we should do that – but those are social reasons. But when he said ‘excellent co-educational reasons’ I really wanted to hear what they were, because it is important for the debate, not just because I wanted to have the benefit of hearing them.

200 Greater choice of subjects. The hon. Member will know that during his time in office there was less choice of subjects in our comprehensive schools. The hon. Member will know that they had a system in place whereby, for GCSEs, where students did not get the grades they wanted, there was one system for Westside and a different system for Bayside. Whereby Westside students were offered the opportunity of a repeat year. Of those who wanted to improve their grades at GCSE level, being able to stay on for that extra year at GCSE level and do repeats of 205 some of the subjects they wanted to improve in, plus a couple of additional subjects which were offered to be done in that particular year ... That existed for Westside and not for Bayside, and that existed during their time.

Now, I say what on earth has that got to do ...? That has to do with choice of subjects – of course it has to do with choice of subjects. It has to do with ability to opt for certain 210 improvement and have subject choice at schools. There was a choice to be made at Westside but no choice to be made at Bayside during their time. We corrected that and, as a matter of policy, I gave an instruction that that had to be corrected and a repeat-year facility had to be introduced in Bayside. We did it and it exists – it now co-exists in both schools. That choice of subjects, that opportunity is available in both schools because we did it, not because they did it.

215 But when the hon. Member talks of excellent educational reasons and choice of subjects, I have to ask myself – particularly on that example that I have given of some inequality that existed in Westside and Bayside – what on earth has that got to do with gender? What on earth has that got to do with whether the school is single sex or a mixed school? Or is it that somebody decided at some stage we are only going to do this for Westside because they are 220 girls? It has got nothing to do with the gender argument, it has got nothing to do with the mixed school argument, it has got nothing to do with the single school argument. All it has to do is that somebody at some point decided that in Westside they were going to introduce this facility – not because they were girls, but they were going to do it in Westside and not in Bayside.

225 The same could have happened if it had been co-educational. It would have happened in one school and not in the other and we introduced it in the other so that everybody across the board in Gibraltar – regardless of sex, regardless of gender, regardless of whether you were in a single school environment or a mixed school environment – had the same choice.

230 And we did the same again this year in particular having started working on it previously with A-level subjects, something which the hon. Members have been harping on about for some time and have been asking me for some time. And asking me in the knowledge that the inequality that existed in choice of subjects between Bayside and Westside existed during their time and they did precious little to correct it. It fell to us to put in a new system.

235 It fell to us to put in a new system, which I announced and which has now been fully implemented, whereby the whole list of options at secondary level which is available in Gibraltar is offered to everyone, regardless of whether you are a boy or a girl, regardless of whether you are in Bayside or Westside. And I explained the reasons why in some cases some subjects are offered in one school and not in the other.

240 And one of the reasons I explained was demand – numbers. If we had five students wanting to do a particular subject, a class of ten, does it make sense to have that subject replicated in two schools? Particularly where in a particular subject there may be issues with subject specialisation and availability of subject specialists whereby if they are used in both schools to teach that subject, they may not be released to teach other things or to do other things at different levels.

245 We introduced a system to create that greater choice across the board. But again, that has absolutely nothing to do with whether you are a boy or a girl or which school you attend to. It so happened that certain schools had certain demand and certain subject specialists and those subjects were offered in that particular school, whether it was Bayside or Westside. The same could have happened in a co-educational environment.

250 So this is quite simply a red herring – greater choice of subjects. Or does the hon. Member think that because you have got co-education in both schools, that necessarily has to mean that a subject on which there is little demand has to be offered in both schools the same, just because it is co-education and co-education fixes everything? Well, it does not. Quite simply, if there is co-education and you have got a subject in one particular school, whoever wants to do that subject goes to that school. It is not as if they have to travel from Penzance to the Isle of Wight to do that. They have to travel barely a kilometre more to go from one school to the other.

260 So whether you go to one school in Gibraltar or not is not really the issue and we have introduced a scheme whereby if you are a boy and you choose subjects which are offered in Westside, you go to Westside and that seems to be working well. So in effect we have introduced co-education not by policy or by design for the sake of co-education but through the element of subject choice which is the one sound, or the excellent the only excellent educational reason which the hon. Member is able to come up with in terms of the reason for his compelling case on co-education.

265 So, Mr Speaker, the bottom line is no change for the sake of change. We must be satisfied that there are, and the hon. Member is right on this, we must be satisfied as to the educational reasons that exist; that the educational arguments exist to make that change necessary or desirable. That must be, and that is, the Government's starting position.

270 Having said that, Mr Speaker, of course we acknowledge that there is a debate to be had. There is a debate going on not just in Gibraltar but elsewhere in relation to co-education. And because we acknowledge that there is a debate to be had is the reason why we have initiated the debate.

So the hon. Member, when he comes and says we bring this motion in order to initiate the debate, seems to ignore what we said in our last manifesto, precisely on this issue, whereby in the foreword on the section Education it says, and I quote:

Is co-education a good or bad idea for the Comprehensive schools ... ?'

275 We asked the question: is co-education a good or a bad idea? That is the start of the debate, a manifesto provision. And it goes on to say:

This must also be reviewed dispassionately and on a non-partisan basis by experts.

280 So we have initiated the debate and we do clearly acknowledge that it needs to be looked at by experts, there is obviously a consultation process to be carried out. But of course we also have to acknowledge that this is not a new debate. This is not something that is springing out of the air as if nothing has existed before. The hon. Member has referred to a 1970s report only to dismiss the conclusion, as I said.

285 It may be said that circumstances change, views change and what may have been looked at in the 1970s may not be entirely relevant today. But the hon. Member in referring to the report of 1974 said that in 1973 a decision had been made in principle to have two comprehensive schools which should be co-education, as I understood the hon. Member (Interjection) and he said that in fact what then happened was that we continued with single-sex education at comprehensive level.

In fact comprehensive schools on a single-sex basis had been introduced before that. It started in 1972. Mr Linares and myself were part of the first intake at Bayside, the very first 290 intake. (Interjection) September 1972 was the very first intake for the comprehensive schools and we were the first group in Bayside in that year.

But it was not anything new. Bayside took over a school which was already a secondary school: the Lourdes School was housed in that particular building and that as I recall, Mr Speaker will recall, was a boys' school. We also had the Grammar School which was a boys' school. We 295 also had St Jago's, which was a boys' school – all this pre-comprehensive system and then we had the Loreto system for the girls.

So it was not the comprehensive system that was brought in and it was decided that that should be the start of this division and the creation of single sex education in Gibraltar, that preceded that and what happened at the time was simply a continuation at a comprehensive 300 level, in a comprehensive environment, of single sex education at secondary level which already existed in Gibraltar.

And yes, it is true that a debate was had in the 1970s and yes, it is true that a debate has continued – not just now, it has continued throughout the years. The hon. Member, I do not know if he is aware, during the time of the GSD in office, a decision was actually made by the 305 GSD to go co-ed. I do not know if he is aware of that. The Government of which he was part – not sixth form as he is suggesting, a decision to go co-ed was made by the GSD administration.

And in the 1970s, the report that the hon. Member has referred to also talks of a working group. The GSD itself set up a committee to look at this but not to look at whether co-education should be introduced, but on the basis that a decision had been taken by the previous 310 administration to actually bring in co-education and the committee was simply set up to advise on implementation measures, how it was to be done.

And that happened in 1976, Mr Speaker. That committee produced an interim report. The interim report started by saying – 315 A Member: In 2006. You said 1976.

Hon. G H Licudi: Sorry, 2006. Did I say 1976? Not 1976; 2006. The GSD had not even been conceived at that time!

In 2006 there was an interim report headed, 'Co-education at Secondary Level'. Paragraph 1:

Following Government's commitment to introduce co-education at secondary level, a Steering Committee was set up to recommend to Government on the way of implementing such a move.

320 That was a decision that was taken at the time by the GSD administration – admittedly before the hon. Member was a member of the Government, but by 2007 he was a member of the Government. I am not sure why he was not pushing this agenda. He would have been pushing at an open door. A decision had already been made, a Steering Committee had already been set up and made recommendations to the Government. All that was needed was the Minister for 325 Education to be tasked with implementing that procedure. That would have happened at a time that the hon. Member was in office as a Minister of the Government.

Or did he not know what the rest of the Government was doing? Perhaps they did not have cabinet discussions as we do (Laughter) on a regular basis and no-one knew what the other was doing. That is certainly the impression that we get.

330 So this interim report actually lists advantages in keeping six single-sex schools at secondary level; and it lists disadvantages in keeping single-sex schools at secondary level. And even then, one of the items used, which for the reasons I espoused previously, I dispute as a reason as to whether to maintain single sex or go co-ed – one of the reasons is, the current system is inflexible in respect of subject choices offered to students. That is in the 2006 report.

335 So in 2006, the GSD itself was acknowledging it had an inflexible system in terms of subject choice and they seemed to think that the answer was co-education. They did not introduce co-education and did not fix the issue of subject choice. We did, without introducing co-education.

The report ends by saying:

These interim proposals are presented for consideration by the Minister in order (a) to encourage further discussion in a different direction or (b) accept present recommendations and request detailed proposals.

340 But the premise of this report was, as I have said, following Government's commitment to introduce co-education at a secondary level.

345 So it was his Government that made this decision and decided – for what reasons I really do not know, Mr Speaker – that it would not go ahead and implement co-education even though there was an interim report which already set that out. It seems that is where that ended, at least at that time, until more modern times. It appears that a decision was taken not to proceed even though a commitment had apparently already been given, or at any rate no decision to proceed was taken but the matter did not go ahead.

So the hon. Member comes to this House today with a motion seeking to generate a debate and he sets out his own views in seeking to generate that debate, and that includes his own view that there is a compelling case.

350 Mr Speaker, one of the main problems with the hon. Member's motion – and it seems to me that it is intrinsically contradictory – is that it starts:

THIS HOUSE NOTES that there are no overriding advantages for single-sex schools on co-educational grounds.

355 So the hon. Member is asking this House to generate a debate, but to answer the question before the debate is happening: to note that there are no overriding advantages to single-sex schools, to come to that conclusion today, that is what the hon. Member is seeking this House to do and then to generate a debate. It seems like putting the cart before the horse.

Because then in the second paragraph he says:

Acknowledges that there is a compelling case for the view that co-education provides a more realistic way of educating and training young people ...

360 So he asks the House to acknowledge that there is a compelling case. So if we note that there is no advantage to single-sex education and we acknowledge that there is a compelling case for co-education, why would we not do it? That would be the end of the debate, one would have thought. This House having resolved that this is a good idea, this is good for Gibraltar, this is good for young people in terms of their education and their training, and if we resolve that, then we simply have to talk about implementation, not about generating a debate, which is what the hon. Member is then asking in the motion that we should do. So it seems to us that it is inconsistent for Parliament to be asked to take a particular view and then simply to call for a debate.

365 And so, Mr Speaker, because we do not believe that the hon. Member's motion sets out a proper, a valid or realistic position for this House to take, we are and I am proposing in particular, an amendment to the motion.

370 Mr Speaker, I would draw your attention to a letter of 13th October which I sent to Mr Speaker, asking or indicating that I would be moving an amendment to this particular motion by removing the words after 'THIS HOUSE' and replacing them with the text which appears attached to the letter.

In the text of the amended motion, if passed, would read like this:

THIS HOUSE

Acknowledges that Education and ways to improve it must always remain at the top of the political agenda in this community.

Notes that there are educational arguments both in favour and against co-education for Gibraltar's comprehensive schools.

Notes that the GSLP/Liberal manifesto for the 2015 elections posed the question whether co-education is a good idea or a bad idea for the comprehensive schools and provided a commitment to review this dispassionately and on a non-partisan basis by experts.

Acknowledges that in keeping with this commitment, the Government has already set up a working group made up of teachers, officials at the Department of Education, Union officials and parents to report to the Government by March 2017 on co-education for the comprehensive schools, with the following terms of reference:

(1) To advise HM Government of Gibraltar on the advantages and disadvantages of the current and mixed co-education models for the comprehensive schools in Gibraltar.

(2) To make recommendations on whether secondary education at the comprehensive schools in Gibraltar is best delivered using a mixed or single gender model.

(3) To make recommendations on possible implementation scenarios.

(4) To make recommendations on an appropriate consultation model to ensure that the views of the relevant stakeholders are taken into account.

And notes that the working group's report will form the basis of a consultation by the Government with all relevant stakeholders before a decision is taken on whether co-education is to be introduced in the comprehensive schools and, if so in what form.

375 So you see, Mr Speaker, we are not just generating the debate, we are acting on our commitment. We are acting on our view that there is a valid question to be posed and that there is an analysis to be made not just on a rhetorical or philosophical question of single sex versus mixed schools, but whether it is good or bad for Gibraltar.

380 Because the hon. Member in his contribution also highlighted the fact, he stated it as a fact that in the UK most comprehensive schools are mixed, co-educational. (Interjection) Well it is a fact that in the public sector in the UK there are quite a number of mixed co-educational schools and where you have got one school serving a particular borough and that borough necessarily has boys and girls, you have to have a school that caters for the children in that borough, rather than two different schools in the same sector or the same region. The position has traditionally been different in Gibraltar.

385 But certainly there are things that need to be looked at, firstly is it a good or is it a bad idea for Gibraltar? Does it work and how is it going to work best? So we have to have a working group with a realistic timescale and what I consider to be a rather short timescale, we have asked the working group to report by the end of March 2017 so that then any consultation process can be looked at.

390 The working group will need to advise the Government on the type of consultation that will be carried out and one of the terms of reference is also to look at implementation models – if indeed co-education is recommended. That is because there are a number of practical and infrastructural issues to be considered. We will have to look at – if and when co-education is introduced – at what level? Is it introduced at sixth-form level and that is it? Is it introduced at sixth-form level initially and then working down?

400 There are issues of catchment areas. There are issues of the fact, as I indicated, when we moved into Bayside, as a first comprehensive intake, it was already a boys' school. I do not know whether it was originally designed as a boys' school but certainly it looked like a boys' school because there were not facilities for boys and for girls. Toilet facilities, shower facilities, these are practical issues that have to be looked at. You cannot just decide overnight, 'Let's go co-ed', and click your fingers and it happens.

405 The other practical issue is that whatever model is used or recommended, if indeed co-education is recommended, is that there are examination cycles and there will be boys and girls who will have already started on that cycle, usually a two-year cycle. What you cannot do is disrupt that cycle. So do you start from the top down at sixth-form? Do you start from the bottom up at eighth form? But what you certainly cannot do is change Years 10 and 11 where they are already involved in a cycle of education geared for certain exams.

410 So there are clearly matters to be considered, a multitude of issues to be considered, practical and infrastructural issues, catchment area issues, as well as the education issues which are what have to be at the core of the decision in the first place.

Now it is true and the hon. Member has alluded to this, that there are some educators, some professionals in the field who do feel that there is a compelling case for co-education, and others feel precisely the opposite and both cite arguments and both cite advantages and disadvantages in favour of their case. The debate has really been quite polarised one way or the other.

415 The reason why the Government has this open mind is precisely because it is not an open and shut case, and that is evident from all the studies that have been carried out. I have had the very useful advantage of being provided with a thesis dated April 2016, from this precise year, by Christopher Cortes, who happens to be a nephew of our current Minister for Education.

420 Mr Cortes was a teacher at Bayside and Head of Music was given a sabbatical in order to do a Master of Science in Education in the United States. The basis of that Master of Science was a Master's project culminating in a thesis. The title of the thesis was 'The Perceived Impact of Single Gender Instruction in Catholic Schools and the Ecclesiastical province of Cincinnati'. So although the title relates to Catholic Schools, it is about the impact of single gender education.

425 And essentially what this was, was a Master's thesis on the single sex versus mixed school debate. What Mr Cortes has done is drawn a multitude of studies, both in the US and internationally, precisely on this issue. One of the reasons why this is particularly useful is that it reflects current thinking. It reflects modern studies that have been carried out internationally and which looks at ... it does not clearly look at the position in Gibraltar, but it informs the debate as to educational thinking on this current debate of single sex versus mixed schools environment.

430 One of the things Mr Cortes does in his thesis is to ask the questions: 'Do teachers perceive single sex classrooms to be effective? Do they believe that gender separation can have a positive or negative impact on students' development? What are their opinions about gender based instruction? Do they consider single sex pedagogy useful when they are instructing students?'
435 Those are the basic questions that were asked as part of this study.

What he does and I am quoting from his report, is:

'provide an overview of multiple studies that have been designed to test whether single sex instruction has had an impact on student achievements, self-efficacy, behaviour or other important educational and social factors. The research contains an equal number of resources that support and reject single gender classes and schools'.

And just to give a flavour of the elements of the research that exists and which are quoted in this Master's thesis, Mr Cortes quotes a 2011 study, where they explicitly stated that research on the benefits of single gender pedagogy was inconclusive; a 2012 study where they stated that the differences found between single-sex and co-educational learning were insignificant – a 440 fairly recent study, 2012.

Another 2011 study where they concluded the differences in academic achievement in single-sex schools had more to do with student selection and peer quality than gender.

445 A 2009 study, where they concluded that single-sex pedagogy was beneficial to foreign languages courses, especially for males. In 2008, where they stated that although research regarding single sex was largely inconclusive, there was conclusive evidence to say that it was beneficial for girls and minorities.

450 A 2006 study where it was stated that single sex pedagogy was highly recommended; a 2008 study where they stated that multiple studies had shown that single-sex education was extremely useful in raising the achievement levels of students.

455 If there is one thing clear about all these studies, it is that the research is essentially inconclusive. If you want to argue one particular way and find a piece of research by professional educators, by people in the field who have carried out proper analysis, you will be able to find something that supports your point of view. You will equally be able to support something that supports the other end of the spectrum and you will equally be able to support something that says everything is inconclusive.

So we have research that suggests that everything is inconclusive, to differences between single sex and co-educational models being insignificant, to single-sex education raising achievement levels. Therefore what seems to me that this demonstrates is that there is no 460 compelling case one way or the other.

But the issue that really falls to be determined, the issue that we need to decide – yes, having regard to all these international studies and what educators round the world have already done and considered and are of the view – is this still a good idea for Gibraltar? Is this something that is going to improve our present system? We have a system that delivers very good results, 465 excellent results.

We all came out in August congratulating our students, our teachers, the schools, the efforts, the parents and the effort everybody makes in achieving the results that we achieve in Gibraltar.
We have a system that works. Should we change that? By all means we should change that if there are good educational reasons for change.

470 So at the end of the day, Mr Speaker, we are talking of a debate which is quite simply a perennial debate and it is charged. It is a debate that is charged with emotive arguments on both sides. We have many head teachers and experts ultimately believing that there are more important factors that influence the quality of education than in fact gender issues. There are strong pros and cons for both single sex and for mixed schools. And the choice between co-475 educational and single-sex schooling is certainly something that could have important implications for young people in terms of their academic, their psychological and their social development. That is something that we acknowledge.

And what we should not do is quite simply restrict the debate to simply academic performance. That is something that we should not do. If we do that, it would appear to favour 480 girls in a single-sex environment. But that is not the end of the story because the reality is certainly much more complex.

We have academic performance which is also linked not just to gender but the quality of the school, the leadership in a particular school, the quality of the teaching and it is also inextricably linked to the support that students receive at home. That is an important message that we also 485 have to drive through: children at all levels receiving good support at home.

There are in Gibraltar, and turning the argument to Gibraltar itself, a number of factors that can be considered which are both pros, or advantages and disadvantages of single sex and coeducation. And when we look through a list of factors, it is difficult at this stage at least to come to the conclusion that one is better than the other. It is possible to come to the conclusion that 490 neither is best, but we still have to find what the best model is for Gibraltar.

One of the factors to be considered at a Gibraltar level is that the Gibraltar College went co-educational many years ago, and certainly there have been no detrimental effects on that. Now we have, as I already explained, a sixth form that operates on the premise that it can work on a mixed gender basis, because of the introduction of wider subject choice for everybody. So we 495 already have that.

And the issues as I have already alluded to, may well not be simply ‘do we do it?’ but ‘how do we do it?’ There are infrastructural issues, practical issues, issues for example workshops which are different in the two schools, kitchens are different in the two schools, toilet and showering facilities which currently do not cater for both boys and girls.

500 Mr Speaker, we can go through a list of advantages and disadvantages and it does not lead us to any particular conclusion. So what is necessary, and what we feel was the right way to proceed, was to consider the issue for Gibraltar, to look at the system that exists in Gibraltar at the moment; to put together a working group as we have done already, to report to the Government by March 2017 on whether, as a matter of principle, we should proceed on a co-505 educational basis or not and whether if we do so, or what if any changes should be made, either at a school level, infrastructural level, Department of Education level, catchment areas level, there is a plethora of issues to be considered.

But all that, Mr Speaker, is encapsulated in the amended motion which recognises that we have already initiated that debate, which recognises that there are arguments both in favour 510 and against co-education, which recognises that we have already made inroads by setting up the working group, which recognises that we have given terms of reference to that working group which are designed not to just come up with a question of if, but how. And also for the working group to advise on the consultation that is best to be carried out in Gibraltar.

515 Mr Speaker, for all those reasons, I commend the amended motion to this House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Does any hon. Member wish to speak on the amendment proposed by the Hon. Mr Gilbert Licudi? I think all hon. Members have a copy of the amendment.

520 The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, this debate, although as the Hon. Minister has described it as perennial, has taken a long time as far as I am aware to actually be discussed openly in this House. And he is right, there are arguments for and against and this is precisely why we should be having this debate. I personally welcome the creation of a working group. However, I must admit I seem to have missed the Government Press Release announcing the date of the creation of this working group and who the members of this working group are.

525 I note that in his motion he said it is made up of teachers, officials of the Department of Education, union officials and parents, but which union and which parents from which schools? (Interjection) Only one union?

530 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, the Teachers' Association.

Hon. R M Clinton: Okay, well, you could have actually said so.

535 As I was saying, Mr Speaker, this working group is obviously such an important group because it will determine the educational future of our children and we do not even know who the members of this group are. (Interjection) Well, I am about to. I am about to ask the Minister if he would at least publish the names of the members of this working group. (A Member: Why?)

540 Well, because, Mr Speaker, otherwise this, unfortunately if the public is not told when this group was set up and who its members are, we can only conclude that this group is meeting in secret and is a secret committee. (Laughter) Well, you may laugh. You may laugh, but we do not know the members of this group who are determining a very important educational decision. We can only conclude it is a secret group set up by the Minister.

And I hear sighs from the opposite side of this House.

545 Hon. G H Licudi: You hear laughs.

Hon. R M Clinton: Well fine, laughs, sighs, groans, whichever. But, Mr Speaker, the actual original working group, the Collister working group which published their report in 1974, everybody knew who the members of this working group were. People could talk to them, people could write in to them, they invited consultation.

550 Your working group is going to make recommendations on very important matters to the Government and the public do not even know who they are. So, Mr Speaker, my first premise would be, I think it would be only a courtesy to the community for the Minister to actually issue a press release to the public stating that he has set up a working group on whatever date it was – I certainly hope it predates the date of my learned colleague's motion – to look into these matters and when these terms of reference were actually issued.

560 And, Mr Speaker, I note looking at his amendment to the motion, and this is where I will take a view, not from the point of view of the educationalists, not from the point of view of the unions or the parents, or the Government or the Opposition, but the students themselves. My learned colleague in his motion at least had the courtesy to include the word 'students'. The Minister's working group does not include them. So obviously the very people that we are going to affect the most are not even part of this working group. (Interjections) Perhaps the Minister

565 can correct me if I am wrong, in that there are no students represented in this working group, which is a very important working group considering the future of education in Gibraltar and they are the most affected parties and they certainly have a real interest.

Mr Speaker, with your indulgence, I actually found an education handbook from the Gibraltar Teacher's Association from 1985-86, and to my surprise I found in there an address from the 1985 International Year of the Youth and there was an address by a sixth former, and I will quote and this is from 1985, so more than 30 years ago. I quote:

It is frustrating to see that we have not been given the opportunity to air our views on internal politics that will directly or indirectly affect our future. The apparently controversial topic of co-education we feel, should be resurrected and seriously discussed. The antiquated idea that dismissed co-education in favour of a segregated system are perfect examples of the older generation's views on youth in general. From an educational, social and economic point of view, there are numerous advantages to be found in the co-educational system as opposed to a segregated one. All that stands in the way of progress is a vote taken more than a decade ago by the adults at the time.

570 As we know that was 1974. And it goes on:

Come let us have a re-vote and let us ask the students to take that vote, for we will be and have been affected by such a vote. Remember it is we the youth who will take this world into the 21st century. Therefore let us be given more respect, understanding and attention, the negative ideas associated with youth be thrown out and be replaced with new sensible ones.'

Mr Speaker, to my surprise, I find I wrote that myself in 1985, in the year of the youth (Laughter) as a sixth former (Banging on desks) at the tender age of 18!

575 And so, Mr Speaker, this is not a view that I have just come to today. This is a view I held 30 years ago and it has taken 30 years – (Interjection) Well, thereabouts, plus or minus, at least a quarter of a century. It has taken at least a quarter of a century for it to come to this House and have a serious debate about it, and that I think should be welcomed. But I think that in terms of the student population, they should not be ignored, (A Member: Hear, hear.) whether it be sixth-form head boys and girls, whether by the Gibraltar Students' Association or some other representative body. They should be allowed to have their say and have their input in it. And it is not to say they may even think it is a good idea. They may prefer it stays as it is. In fact I took a straw poll of my stepchildren and they both said 'No, we actually like it as it is.' So, it is a real open question.

580 But let us not close our minds by educational reports or what was said more than 30 years ago in 1974. Let us have a genuine open debate, an open and frank discussion with all the stakeholders, not just a few select individuals who we do not know the names of as yet and I would urge the Government to include in the definition of stakeholders, certainly the students. Even the Collister report, 1974 at least had the courtesy to survey existing pupils and past pupils.

590 And so, Mr Speaker, what I would say in his motion if he is so minded, although obviously I have not given notice of an amendment, if he might want to include students in his working group, or at least perhaps consider in future to include students in his working group, purely as a matter of courtesy, especially on what is a subject which may be with us for the next 30 years, who knows? I think it is only right, fair and proper that the students in this community be allowed to make a contribution and an input to this working group which the Government has set up of its own accord.

595 Mr Speaker, a lot has been made of a report that was issued in 1974 and I think it is right and proper that the general public understand fully why it is that we have the system we have today and it is right and proper that the conclusions of this report, the reasoning as to how we have the system we have today came to be, is put in the public domain again.

600 Because this is... I will be perfectly honest, I found this report – and Members opposite will laugh – I found this report on e-bay! This is not something you can just walk into a Gibraltar book shop and say, 'Can I have a copy of the Collister Report?' No it is well out of print – I will obviously make it available to anybody who wants a copy.

I think it is well and proper that the general public are made aware of what the strength of public feeling was at the time, the rationale at the time, how we came to be where we are today and they have to be properly informed, as does the working group and I am sure the working group will have had a copy of this report for its own use. Also, I think that the working group, when it comes to consider the consultation models, would do well to look at what the Collister group did.

They did a very extensive consultation process, they even have in their report, examples of the leaflets as they did in the time before social media, leaflets written in fact in both English and Spanish as to the whole consultation process. It is in fact quite a valuable document from, if not a historic point of view, certainly a social point of view in terms of our development as a people.

And so, Mr Speaker, what I would urge the Government is do not ignore the students themselves. We can have a big debate about the academics of it, about the educational value, but let us not forget the students. Let them have a voice as well in this debate.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Dr John Cortes, the present Minister for Education.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I would like first of all to thank the hon. and learned Gilbert Licudi for contributing his wealth of knowledge which he has acquired over the past five years as the outgoing Minister for Education. (Banging on desks) (Several Members: Hear, hear.)

What a contrast, Mr Speaker, in presentation and research between what we have heard from the Leader of the Opposition quoting a report almost half a century old as the only substance which he did not agree with anyway, and the hon. Mr Clinton, a report 30 years old, with the wealth of information that we have heard and the analytical way in which my hon. Friend has presented his moving of the amendment.

Mr Speaker, I can confirm as the incoming Minister for Education that the Government position and my own, is as stated by the Hon. Mr Licudi. His team now passes on to me and we will seamlessly continue the process that he has already started. In order to reassure the hon. Member opposite, I was given a briefing over two weeks ago when I changed responsibilities and took over Education, which included the names of the people who were members of this working group. I do not recall them all now, but it is not going to be secret in any way.

And as a former Chairman of the then extremely progressive Gibraltar Union of Students, I will obviously make sure that the students view– not just school students, but also people who have recently been students in the comprehensive schools – have their views heard, absolutely.

So, Mr Speaker, I look forward to the work of the working group, to working with them, to their conclusions and to the broader consultation so that we can reach a decision based on current advice and not advice half a century old. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Is there any other? The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, they say history has a habit of repeating itself, a maxim that is very much at the forefront of my mind at this particular moment, because over 40 years ago, my father and many others around him, including yourself, Mr Speaker, took to this Chamber to discuss the contentious issue of co-education, as the comprehensive system started to peer over a distant horizon.

Many views were sought and powerful arguments made, both in favour and against, with co-education very much on the table. With hindsight, however, I think many of us feel that the decision to separate boys and girls in school as from the age of 12 was probably a mistake.

Today many decades later we are still feeling the effects of this error to the extent that to reverse it would require significant changes to both Bayside and Westside.

655 Perhaps the long awaited new building for Bayside, and ideally for Westside as well, will provide us with the opportunity to wipe away the past and guarantee a co-educational future for our students.

I am therefore pleased that this motion has been presented, asking the Government to conduct a detailed study into the possibility, and I was also pleased to note the Government's inception of a working group with this topic in mind. Although, Mr Speaker, I am sorry to hear 660 that the Minister for Education at the time of the last election promised GCSE and A-level students, shortly after a Viewpoint on the subject of co-education, to meet monthly – something which to date has not materialised and something I consider a wasted opportunity where the engagement of our youngsters who are the most affected are concerned.

And as important as it is to maintain links with students, teachers and parents on views about 665 co-education, the prospect of co-education must not be allowed to detract from matters which are even more important in the day-to-day management of schools and teaching of lessons. While less crowd pleasing and headline grabbing, these urgent issues are far more pressing within our educational system. They include buildings and maintenance of course but also resources and funding, teacher accountability, teacher morale and attendance, curriculum 670 provision, issues within human resources, parental support, staff training, extended service incentives and definitely a closer relationship between the Department of Education and a more proactive Social Services structure.

These issues more accurately represent the real challenges faced by teachers and students alike, and while I welcome the ideology behind this motion, I feel that a similar focus should be 675 given to these priorities. Otherwise a cosmetic change will only lead to another mistake, one which again may take generations to reverse.

Thank you.

680 Mr Speaker: Any other contribution to the debate?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): On the amendment, Mr Speaker?

Mr Speaker: On the amendment. What is now before the House is the Hon. Gilbert Licudi's motion. Okay, any other contribution? If there is not, I will call upon the mover to reply.

685 Yes, the Hon. Steven Linares.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as a former President of the Gibraltar Teachers' Association, I feel compelled to go into this debate, because when I was the President of the GTA during the 690 time 1992-93, I remember bringing a motion to the floor of the GTA in order to say that co-education should be what we should have in our schools. That means, I was in favour of co-education.

Therefore, it was the floor that actually passed a motion and it was to do in reference to the 1975-76 report because they thought at the time – and we were talking about 1992-93 – they thought that report was a bit old and past and dated. Therefore the floor brought a motion 695 which was unanimously passed and therefore it was for the executive to negotiate with Government and pursue co-education.

What happened, Mr Speaker, was that I as the President started negotiations with the then Government about co-education and I went back to the Members, especially – then it was the boys' and girls' comprehensive, now Bayside and Westside – that the staff themselves were a bit 700 apprehensive about how co-education was going to affect their working conditions.

Therefore, I went back to each school and their staff and I said, 'Look, if you are not really convinced about trying to forward co-education, there is a motion which the executive has to follow', and I wanted to follow, but it was the staff that were reluctant in me as the President to follow co-education.

705 One of the issues was, was it educationally sound to have co-education and therefore what we did on the committee at the time, we got a couple of us within the committee to research and find out whether there were sound educational motives why we should have co-education. Mr Speaker, as it has been said here, there are no educational advantages or disadvantages about having co-education so it is not that we should change just for the sake of changing. It is important that whatever we do – and I have declared that I am still an advocate of co-education
710 – it is no good just to change our system if it is working, just because I believe in co-education. It has to have an educational and the most important educational arguments and therefore it is not conclusive.

I welcome that we are going to have yet another committee which is going to look at it. I am sure that the conclusions will be along the lines of what we have been saying, that there is no conclusive educational reasons why we should have co-education, but for me, it is an issue that I have been trying to follow for years and years. And yet having children, and having in my case two girls that have gone through the education system and gone to Westside and now a boy who is obviously going to go to Bayside, I am convinced that as a parent what I want is that they 720 have a sound education. Whether they are united as girls and boys, for me is irrelevant.

I think what we need to look at is what the professionals are saying and in the case when I was then President in 1992-93 was that it was going to affect the challenges that boys and girls together were going to have and basically that then the girls were doing much better than the boys.

725 So are we going to risk those things? Anyway, all I wanted to say was that I look forward to the working committee to look into co-education because like I say, I am an advocate of co-education but I will not have it blindly. I will not go blindly for co-education if it is going to affect our society. Thank you. (Banging on desks)

730 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Lawrence Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I believe that co-education is one of the components in modernising our children's secondary educational system. Additionally, we should be also taking the opportunity, whilst reforming our school buildings, to reform our educational system radically at the same time.
735

If we look at the Finnish style of education, one of the leading educational countries in the world, they actually emphasise on respect of each child's individuality and the chance for each child to develop as a unique person. They also prioritise the need to grow socially and grow their interactive skills, to be aware of people's needs and to care about others. It is a very positive and relaxed approach to education when compared to the more rigid system we have here in Gibraltar. Instead of a controlled, competitive and stressful standardised method of testing, they enjoy a highly professionalised teacher-led encouragement and method of assessment.
740

I feel we place too much pressure on our young children and at a very young age, due to the approach that we currently have. The system does not place a need to study at university level. University entry is a far more rigid system and the opportunities in the economy arise through vocational and academic training achieved prior to a university entry age.
745

I believe that whilst we are looking at the possibility of introducing co-education in Gibraltar, we must also research whether single-sex schools are leading to gender oppression and to the creation of negative stereotypes. This is extremely important. The implications therefore, surpass the academic achievement to the impacts on the way boys and girls navigate their surroundings and establish social and sexual identities.
750

Cross-party support on co-education should be agreed on sooner rather than later. Referring to a recent interview given by Mr Peter Watts at the opening of Prior Park School in Gibraltar, I took note on one particular point he made which is the main advantage of having a co-

755 educational system: the fact that all children continue to learn how to respect each other in an environment working together, and the same position will be carried on in their later life in the real world, when we all have to work together.

Co-education is simply one of the cogs in the educational system, and I would urge this House to shelve political agendas and to look towards a brighter future for our children. If we adopt, for example, a Finnish model which seems to work very well, looking at the results that they actually publish, infused with our glorious climate we have here, Mr Speaker, the sky is our limit.

Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Joe Bossano.

765

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I am standing up to say that I support the amendment and I certainly reject the arguments that have been put on the other side for not voting in favour. No indication has been given whether they intend to vote in favour or against the amendment because I think they have stood up and spoken to the original motion, rather than to the amendment.

770

I certainly think that to suggest, as I think the last speaker has done, that we run the risk of gender oppression if we go to single-sex schools, given that we have all been in single-sex schools, presumably we are all now suffering from gender oppression! (Laughter) Well, I can say I do not engage in gender oppression, but I can only speak for myself. I do not know what is happening on the other side. I will ask after the House, whether my colleagues have been contaminated by gender oppression through their experience of single-sex schools. I did not have the advantage, of course, of going to a comprehensive. In my time the system was that of the grammar school system and there were of course single-sex schools.

775

Change of course is one thing and progress is another. Therefore the easiest way to try and discredit an opposing view is to say that you are not being progressive. Well, the present government in the United Kingdom apparently thinks that going back to grammar schools is progressive because that is the policy they have just announced: that the emphasis of the government in the United Kingdom will be to go back to grammar schools on the grounds that it is educationally better.

780

I think the essence of the education system is to provide education. In the process, clearly if you can demonstrate that by having co-educational schools, the education does not suffer and society gains, then there will be an argument and that is what the motion that is being amended originally asked us to accept without any evidence.

785

That is to say nothing in the report of 1974 and nothing in the quote from 1985 from the Hon. Mr Clinton, who was quoting himself – (Laughter) I do not know whether that means that he was so visionary that he was already progressing at the age of 18, or so stuck in the mud that he has not progressed since the age of 18! (Laughter) But I will not pass judgement. I will not pass judgement on the hon. Member, but they are the only two possible conclusions.

790

I have to say that the idea that we can take our place naturally in the wider community of men and women only if we go through co-education, again is something that is a compelling case that the hon. Member is obviously a believer in. I do not know if all the colleagues that he has on his side share it, or if the former Member of the opposite sex that is now as an Independent occupying the seat that I long occupied in that corner, shares that view.

795

But it suggests that in the absence of co-education, which we have never had, we are incapable of taking our place naturally in the wider community of men and women. This is a very sick society if this is right, (Laughter) a very sick society. And certainly, if that is the view of the Leader of the Opposition, then it worries me that having been in Government, he did nothing about it and allowed the sickness to be perpetuated and having belonged to a party that was there for 15 years, they allowed generation after generation of school leavers to go into the wider community of men and women to take their place unnaturally, when it was possible to make them take it naturally.

And for all those reasons of failure to convince me and absence of logic, I have to say I support the amendment. (Banging on desks)

810 Mr Speaker: If there is no other contribution, I will call on the Hon. Gilbert Licudi to reply. Sorry, the Hon. Edwin Reyes, before.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker, sir.

815 I think I ought to start with, as an educator, an overriding factor that I have always tried to implement in any educational matters and that is, what is in the best interests of the people? If politicians from either side of this House put that first and foremost and leave aside all these partisan views, then inevitably we will end up getting and providing our children with the best possible options for them for the future. That, Mr Speaker, is something that I must stress and repeat if necessary.

820 There are arguments for and against co-education. It has been said already by the Members. You can use figures, twist them round whichever way you like and so on for what is best. But, figures that are always based on just simple, pure academic results does that in itself, provide the best education for our children?

825 What is it that we want to give our children? Do we want to produce a set of youngsters that get three or four As or A*s at A-levels and then throw them out, like into the deep end of a swimming pool and say, 'Now off you go to further studies' or do we want to make sure that these students are prepared in the best way possible for their adult life, which in today's lifespan they are going to have at least another 60 years to go forward?

830 So everything is not just as simple as getting As and A*s, nice as they are, proud as we all are and so on. I have always ... I think, my fellow predecessor too— I have also held the post of President of Gibraltar Teachers' Association – we always had this little joke going around during coffee breaks and so on: if the academic results in a particular year were quite good or outstanding, it is because Gibraltar has very clever children, especially parents would say, 'Look how clever my son is or my daughter is'; however if the results dropped it was, 'Oh well, the teachers are not as good as the ones we used to have.' So we can play about and find excuses and reasons for whatever.

835 But a good valid point that I think we also have to bear in mind is, what is it that we are providing for our children? Are we just simply providing for them A-level certificates with As and A*s or are we providing them with the best possible preparation for their future adult life?

840 One of the things for which I have always declared my favouritism towards co-education is that in Gibraltar's history, slowly co-education was introduced first into what is now called middle schools. Once upon a time before they were called middle schools, they were actually called junior schools and they were single sex at one stage and for various reasons – and, Mr Speaker, I cannot obviously preach or try to give you any lessons, you were very much a very, very senior educationalist in the early 1970s, before you took the bold decision to have to resign your post to be able to become a Member of this Parliament or the House of Assembly as it was at the time.

845 But for reasons that we can spend hours and hours discussing, a decision was taken not to introduce co-education. There are some other reasons that people say, and not necessarily written in a report. But up to 1974 until the introduction of the then called Education Ordinance, now the Education Act. Prior to 1974 there was a very different setup in education: there was a board which was chaired by the Bishop and which non-Roman Catholic teachers had problems in getting teaching jobs in what were state schools and past Gibraltar Teacher's Association Presidents had to end up teaching in the Hebrew School because although they were Christian, they were not Roman Catholic.

855 But that is another chapter of the history which perhaps a future nephew of the present Minister for Education might want to do his Master's thesis on, will be very interested. I have known Christopher Cortes for some time, I value the thoroughness in which he carries out 860 things, so perhaps at one stage if your nephew consents, I could also have a look at the result of what he has written out in his thesis.

But not to deviate further, Mr Speaker, yes, it is valid to say in a letter through The Chronicle and so on, if we have a system that works, 'if it ain't broke, why fix it?' Does it work? Let us go back to that question: does it work? What yardstick are we using to say it works? Does it work why, because we have got x number of pupils with As and A*s? Or does it work because we have all spoken in favour and I do not think it crosses anyone's mind: we want to keep apparently to a comprehensive system.

870 A comprehensive system in its full sense, which is equal with everyone, must include in my opinion that equality of males and females especially in delivery of subjects. I am glad to hear the Minister reminding this House that it was them who managed to bring back and get rid of the problem that my predecessor in the Teachers' Association and myself had always been against: this inequality of opportunities for the girls being able to stay within the familiar surroundings of their school to repeat their A-levels and so on. But politics being politics, it must be said that it was actually the GSLP who introduced that inequality and took away the opportunity for Bayside students to remain in Bayside to repeat the sixth form. So they did 'fix what was broke' and at the end of the day what happened? It was the students who got the best deal possible. And that is what I want to keep on repeating we must all bear in mind in working towards the future.

880 Look, there is a price to everything. By having the students and the boys staying back in Bayside to repeat those GCSEs and so on, the price to pay is that there seems to be lack of rooms now to be able to have a sixth form common room. But the decision had to be taken: do we have a sixth form common room or do we have classroom opportunity for the children to learn? Therefore what is in the best interest of the pupil? The best interest of the pupil is that they are able to get adequate results that would allow them to go on into higher education and so on.

885 So something has to give way to something. What is best? Therefore, Mr Speaker, I want as well to repeat that in the amended motion in the paragraph that says, 'acknowledges that in keeping with its commitment the Government has already set up a working group made up of teachers, officials from the Department of Education, union officials and parents', I must repeat there that there is no mention of the word 'students'. So I think Dr Cortes as the current Minister already indicated that he will certainly pull his weight in that respect, and make sure that students are represented. But it is not reflected in this motion. (Interjection)

What I am saying, Dr Cortes, you alluded that you wanted to make sure that students were represented in the working group.

895 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: If the hon. Member will give way just for clarification.

My comment was that I do not need to pull my weight! It is just going to happen anyway. It is not that I am going to force anybody to involve students; it is something that is a logical thing to do.

900 Hon. E J Reyes: Okay, I am glad to hear that. Therefore an amendment has to be made to the wording here. (Interjection) Just so that for the record, Mr Speaker, I like things to be put down properly. The omission of the word 'students' could give the impression tomorrow or for future generations to say, 'Look, they were not even thinking about students because the word is not included here.'

905 So, Mr Speaker, whatever happens, can I wind up by repeating to all Members, please bear in mind and always think what is in the best interest of the pupil and how can it be best delivered and how can we ensure that not only are things working well but they can work even better to make Gibraltar an even better educationally sound state.

910

A Member: Hear, hear.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Neil Costa.

915 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, just very quickly on a couple of matters that have been raised. In the first place, speaking on the amendments by the Hon. Mr Licudi on the motion, the question before the House is simply whether or not co-education should be introduced in Gibraltar. That is what we are debating. And as the Hon. Mr Licudi has said, the evidence and the empirical 920 studies are in effect half and half as to whether it would be of benefit and whether it would actually be to the detriment of one of the sexes.

The Hon. Mr Reyes asks the question whether we should consider fundamentally the reasons why we educate our children. To be honest, Mr Speaker, if we were to ask that question philosophically then I would suggest that we teach more Plato and Socrates and we read more David Herbert Lawrence's Women in Love and that we teach children how to meditate, but that 925 is not the question before the House.

The question before the House is, is co-education more beneficial – yes or no? And on the reasons that have been put forward by my learned and hon. Friend Mr Licudi, the answer is that has to be the subject of empirical and knowledge-based study and no one here has the answer to that question without being able to undergo that important consultation process.

930 And I have to just finish by saying that the Hon. Mr Clinton said that the only logical conclusion on a debate on education that he could draw from the absence of a press notification setting up the names of the persons on this committee has to be that we are keeping it secret. I can think of 20,000 reasons why the Government did not announce by way of Press Release, the names of the committee.

935 It may have decided not to do so because persons of the committee decided that they did not want to do so at that stage, because the Hon. Minister had not yet got to that basis. It is almost as if to suggest by a scientist that if a spider whose legs have been broken off, the only logical conclusion is, rather than the legs having been broken off, that the spider is deaf. It is a totally illogical conclusion and it is certainly not the only conclusion, Mr Speaker. (Banging on 940 desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Gilbert Licudi. (Interjection and laughter)

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am particularly grateful to the hon. and learned Neil Costa for 945 that contribution. (Laughter) (A Member: Hear, hear.) There has in fact been, Mr Speaker, very little said across the floor of this House which merits or needs a response. There has been very little said in substance in relation to the amended motion itself, which is what we are actually debating now. Is there anything in the amended motion that they disagree with? Is there anything that they agree with? It seems that we are none the wiser.

950 The only issue in relation to the amended motion that has been raised has been by Mr Clinton and I would have hoped that, if he was going to talk about the amended motion and this being a debate with a working group, looking at it in consultation and a possibility of recommendations being made to Government, it would have been a little bit more positive.

955 But he started talking about the composition, no press release, secret meetings, as my learned friend has alluded to. Talk, Mr Speaker, about trying to find issues where there are none; trying to create polemic where this absolutely none! The amended motion talks of a working group having been set up. There is no question of secrecy. We have said that there is a working group that will report to Government and it talks about professionals of the Department of Education, union officials and parents.

960 As the Hon. Dr Cortes has said, I have certainly been given a list of the people in the working group, I do not have it with me but it is no secret to say that the Chairman of the working group is the current Senior Education Advisor, Mr Darren Grech. He will be Chairing the working group.

Included in the working group as one would expect, are the head teachers of the comprehensive schools, their schools are the ones that are most affected by this, so they will be part of the working group. Included in the working group will be the representative of the Gibraltar Teachers' Association, whose President is currently Mr Stuart Borastero, and there are also parents from parents' associations included in the working group.

The suggestion is that students have been somehow through some Machiavellian plot excluded. They certainly have not been excluded. The fact that they do not form part of the working group itself does not mean that they are excluded at all. It does not mean at all that their views are not relevant. It does not mean that their views are not important. Of course their views are relevant and their views are important.

We mentioned relevant stakeholders in the amended motion in terms of consultation and of course very relevant stakeholders will be the students themselves. But for the working group, one of the terms of reference, if there is going to be a recommendation and a consultation process, is to make recommendations as to how that is to be conducted and who is to be included – students.

Do we include everybody in the secondary sector? Do we include those in the primary sector that are going to go into the secondary sector and have their views? (Interjection) Those are matters that have to be considered by the working group and what we have not done is create any cut-off point to say, 'These students are to be included and these are not.' That is a matter for the working group and I know, and it will not be necessary, as Dr Cortes has mentioned, for a Minister to say, 'You have to do this and you have to consult students and you have to get the views of students.' Of course that is going to happen. That is intrinsic in this approach.

Mr Clinton also says, Government should not close its mind to this. I opened my contribution by saying Government's position is that we have an open mind. (Laughter) Precisely the opposite of what the hon. Member has alluded to.

Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon suggested that single sex comprehensive was probably a mistake, a view that can be taken. It is probably pushing it and pulling it a bit too far as Mr Llamas has put it, which the Hon. Mr Bossano has already dealt with in terms that it has created gender stereotypes and it is gender oppressive.

As has been said, in fact most of us – (A Member: All.) well, most of us here are the product of the single sex comprehensive system which the hon. Lady suggests was probably a mistake. I look around and it seems that we have not turned out that badly after all – although that is a matter of opinion, (Laughter) I am sure! And I certainly, having gone through single sex comprehensive education, did not feel at the time that I was missing out on anything, on educational grounds. (Laughter)

Was it a mistake? It happened. We are all essentially products of that system by and large we have people in Gibraltar, generations that have been educated on that particular basis and Mr Reyes, and I welcome the contribution by Mr Reyes as an educator, as a professional in the field and as former President of the Gibraltar Teachers' Association. He does say that this is not just about academic results; students need to be prepared for adult life. That is precisely what we do in our schools: prepare children for adult life and not just give them an academic education.

But the question is whether they are better prepared or less prepared or is the implication that they would be better prepared for adult life in a mixed sex environment? That is something that the working group will need to look at and the hon. Member has indicated that what needs to be looked at is what the best solution for Gibraltar is. There is nothing in what I have heard from the hon. Members opposite in terms of any evidence, any suggestion as to which is best. Therefore having heard the debate across the both sides of the House, I am more convinced than ever that the terms of the motion that the hon. Member put are mistaken, that the right motion for this Parliament to pass is the terms of the amended motion which I have moved.

Therefore I have great pleasure in, once again, commending that amended motion to the House. (Banging on desks)

1015 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I call for the House to divide on its vote. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) I call for the House to divide on its vote.

Mr Speaker: We are now going to put the amendment in the terms moved by the Hon. Gilbert Licudi to the vote. And you want a division, very well.

A division was called for and voting resulted as follows:

1020 Mr Speaker: There is one Member absent, 11 votes in favour of the amendment, 5 votes against. The amendment is carried.

We now have the motion before the House as amended and the convention that I have seen in this House applied over the years by Speakers has been that where a motion and the amendment overlap in the manner in which these do, you either speak on one or you speak on the other.

1025 Therefore I will allow the Members who have not spoken at all this morning, namely the Hon. Elliott Phillips, the Hon. Samantha Sacramento, the Hon. Dr Joseph Garcia, the Hon. the Chief Minister, the Hon. Mr Paul Balban and the Hon. Albert Isola, they can all speak on the motion as amended.

1030 I will not allow any of the others because I do not think that they will ... well, they are going to be repeating themselves. And then, when all that is over and done with, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has a right to reply and he is the final speaker on the debate.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

1035 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I confess that on this side of the House we have been rendered perplexed by the failure of hon. Members to support the amendment put by the Hon. Mr Licudi. It is an amendment which talks of the creation of the working group and that should, in our view, have been exactly what hon. Members must have wanted to see as a conclusion of this debate: the fact that the group has been established and how it is going to be dealing with these issues.

1040 Mr Speaker, therefore one is left with the feeling that we are dealing with a motion brought not because there was an underlying purpose that hon. Members opposite would want to see the Government move to, but that there was simply a desire to get up and say something, say anything that dealt with the issue of education.

1045 Mr Speaker, I am going to speak in respect of this motion both in relation to the work that the working group is doing, but I am going to start giving the House my personal views, because I think it is important that the House has heard the views of all Members and it should hear the personal views of Members.

1050 Mr Speaker, the reason this matter is with a working group of educators and professionals, is because this is not a matter for politicians to make their minds up on. This is not a matter where the Leader of the Opposition should bring a motion to the House to promote co-education happening in one moment and not say, as the hon. the former Minister for Education, Mr Licudi has said, this must be dealt with by the educators.

1055 My personal opinion, Mr Speaker, is that a report that is 42 years old has absolutely no relevance today. I think it is absolutely irrelevant to go back to the decision-making process in 1974 to take a political position today.

1060 Mr Speaker, my personal opinion, not to interfere with the working group is very simply, that we do not live life in single-sex silos; that we live life in co-habitation with people of opposite sexes and of same sexes with different sexual orientations. I believe, Mr Speaker, that our children build strong relationships across the sexual divide in first and secondary schools and that we rip them apart when we send them to single sex comprehensives. I believe that those relationships do not recover from the at least initial four years of separation.

1065 But, Mr Speaker, I believe that as a past pupil, I believe that as a parent and I believe that of course as a politician – but I am no-one to decide whether that is the system that produces better academic results and potentially better rounded individuals or not. Because what I definitely know is that I do not know what the right answer is. I can tell you what I think and I can tell you what I feel, but I cannot tell you as an educator what the right answer is.

1070 Mr Speaker, that is why this is not an issue for cross-party agreement, as the Hon. Mr Llamas has said, one way or the other. What we should have had is cross party agreement to support a motion to establish a working group of professionals, supporting the fact that the Minister for Education had already done that when he was responsible for Education, when Mr Licudi was there.

1075 Mr Speaker, hearing Mr Reyes speak then one is left with the impression that we agree that this is an issue for professionals, but yet he has not supported the motion amending the motion put by his leader which reached conclusions – the same conclusions that we might personally reach, but which reached conclusions politically about things that none of us, except for him and Mr Linares, are professionals at. And that I think, Mr Speaker, is the thing we have to be very, very careful to fall into the trap of not doing.

1080 But I think this motion has been an excellent opportunity, Mr Speaker, for Mr Licudi to demonstrate the work that the Government has already done on this subject and why this must not be an issue for this House. In the time that he has been Minister for Education, Gilbert Licudi has done many things, Mr Speaker, most of which are well known to the general public. I mean he has not just built schools, the physical aspect of education and a university, also the physical aspect of education, a prize that was elusive to most in fact elusive to all other former Ministers for Education and which he delivered.

1085 But the curriculum has also changed in consultation with teachers, so that we now have the teaching of local history in our schools, something that goes to producing not just more rounded members of our community; to producing more rounded Gibraltarians who also understand our context.

1090 Now, Mr Speaker, we have to see where that working group takes us in relation to co-education. But to say that the working group should include the pupils is really, Mr Speaker, to stretch the concept of consultation in the context of decision-making at a professional level, to breaking point, as the Hon. Mr Clinton has done. Of course pupils and students must be involved in the process of consulting once the working group has reported, which is what the motion talks about.

1095 But to say that they should form part of the working group is something that only Members on this side of the House could say legitimately, because we talked about the possibility of people being able to vote at the age of 16 and they pooh-poohed it. So how is it that the hon. Member can get up and say they must form part of the working group in this context but they must not make decisions as to who governs?

1100 Mr Speaker, look the working group of course will have to take cognisance of the views of pupils and students. The consultation that the Government does as a result of the working group's report will of course be something which will be consulted on with students and with 1105 pupils. But, Mr Speaker, the working group is meeting during working hours. It is doing a job. If we had proposed that the working group should include pupils, hon. Gentlemen would be saying that we were trying to get the advice on the cheap and that we were pulling them away from their work.

1110 It really, Mr Speaker, makes little sense other than, perhaps, an attempt to ingratiate oneself with a particular demographic. If that is what it is, Mr Speaker, I think it is fairly cack-handed, especially to say, 'Don't ignore the students, this is about the students.' Well, Mr Speaker, for the reasons that Mr Licudi has given, of course it is and of course it will and Mr Cortes has now confirmed that it will, as it must.

1115 But who did their decision-making body consult in 2006 when they made the decision to go co-education? Would the hon. Gentleman care to tell me who was in the secret group that made the decision in 2006 to go to co-education? (Laughter) Or which students or pupils were consulted in 2006? Because if it was about the students and they should not have been ignored, they appear to have been blithely put aside in 2006 (Interjection) and ditto, they were not on the committee.

1120 A committee of which by the way, Mr Speaker, there was no press release (Laughter) as I understand it, (Interjection) because I must say to the hon. Gentlemen, I have found out about it today! I have found out today that there was a committee established by them in secret, because there was no press release that did not consult or include any pupils.

1125 So, Mr Speaker, it is really quite something. It is really quite something to see. (Interjection) This is not a pendulum swinging; this is a pendulum spinning (Laughter) on the other side, Mr Speaker. This is just, Mr Speaker, another example of the politics of what sounds right to them. And we must be very careful in Gibraltar, Mr Speaker, not to move to the politics which parts of the rest of the world are moving to, of doing the things that sound right, whether they are right or not.

1130 We must not move to post-truth politics in Gibraltar. We must stick to the politics of the facts and of the work of experts like the experts in the working group established. That is not to say, Mr Speaker, that the group established in 2006 got it wrong or got it right. It is to say that by their measure, the measure that they have applied today, this must be a secret group that failed to consult or to include the pupils and the students.

1135 Because, Mr Speaker, what might sound ripe on the lips of a Leader of the Opposition looking and casting around for relevance in this community, may not be what is ripe for implementation in our schools and in the best interest of our pupils. But as usual, Mr Speaker, I thought I would give the hon. Gentleman opposite, the mover of the motion, the benefit of the doubt, because believe it or not, I always do, Mr Speaker.

1140 And so I went back to their election pamphlet of 2015. Now, Mr Speaker, I know that the hon. Gentleman obviously in preparing his motion had not read our manifesto because he would have come across the parts which the Hon. Mr Licudi read to him which demonstrated that what we were doing was already what they were prompting us to do. But I am – this week in particular for reasons that are being debated outside this House – constantly surprised by his failure to remember what was in their pamphlet at the election.

1145 You see, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has said in his motion that he calls on the Government to generate a debate by undertaking a consultation exercise with teachers. To generate a debate by undertaking a consultation exercise with teachers. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Oh, I am quite happy to read the whole thing – teachers, unions, parents and other stakeholders, with everybody. Consult and generate a debate with everybody.

1150 This morning, Mr Speaker, I re-read the whole of the 2015 GSD election pamphlet because it is such a quick read, Mr Speaker, (Laughter) there is no point in even asking the electronic gadgets one has today to search through, when you can read the whole thing, just to give them the benefit of not missing one reference. And what the hon. Gentleman has done in his motion, is entirely contradict the position that was in their manifesto last year, a year ago. This is one of the quickest political volte-face in history!

1160 Their manifesto, Mr Speaker, on page 16 features a photograph of Mr Hammond, who is not here today – no doubt for good reason, I make no criticism of that – with a graphic of Rooke on the next page and the word ‘Co-education’, that is it. There is a jumble of words at the bottom that no doubt some media guru advised them was a good way of presenting things, under a text from Mr Hammond and it says the word, ‘Co-education’.

On page 17, the word ‘Co-education’ appears again. And it appears in the context of a statement which was one of their flagship policies at the election: ‘we will move from the two single-sex schools to one co-educational facility, state of the art, at Rooke’.

1165 What consultation, Mr Speaker? Their policy was a fait accompli on one of the most important issues in the election which was the movement of the use of land to go from two schools to one in co-education. No consultation with students, with pupils, with teachers, with unions, with anyone, with parents – no-one! The policy was co-education. That was what people were asked to vote for, Mr Speaker, and to put everyone in the same school.

1170 Well, look, Mr Speaker, he may know now, given what I have said, that as a past pupil, as a parent and as a politician, my instinct is that I believe in co-education. It appears that we might agree on that subject. But to simply impose in the context of the debate of something as important as what we are talking about here, which they speak of in highfaluting terms when they come to this House in this motion, in the context of an election pamphlet, that that would be the policy, I mean it is really quite something, Mr Speaker. They were not for a consultation; 1175 they were for co-education full stop. Now, one year later, they have come round to the concept of consultation on this careful subject.

Now look, Mr Speaker, Christopher Cortes is a person with whom I have had the opportunity of working in a number of different fields. I have the deepest respect for him. I have the deepest respect for him: he is a man who is an educator, he is a musician, he is one of Gibraltar’s 1180 cultured and developed minds. He has done an in-depth study on the subject and he is an educator. The people who were on their committee, the people who will be on our committee, are the people who are experts at this. And you can find reports one way or another, Mr Speaker, and it maybe that in the end there will have to be a decision made based on that advice. But to go from that careful process of detailed analysis and consultation to simply say 1185 ‘everyone at Rooke, co-education’, that was absolute nonsense, Mr Speaker.

So I will tell the hon. Gentleman that I have been pleased again to see another complete and utter U-turn from him, where he is once again at last been made to face the right way. I do not know whether it is by logic, I do not know whether it is by people who have approached him who have put him on the right track, I do not know what it is but at least he is now talking about 1190 consultation. He is talking about consultation in all the wrong contexts because I think the Hon. the Father of the House has demonstrated that the wording of the motion which the hon. Member brought, was verging on the ridiculous, Mr Speaker.

It is really quite something when a Leader of the Opposition, who should be the guide, the guiding hand to the other more junior members of the Opposition, can allow himself to put a 1195 motion in the terms that we have had before the House. It is really quite something, about people taking their natural order in the wider community of men and women, as if that were not the case, for reasons Mr Bossano has already set out.

So, Mr Speaker, the only way to lead on something as sensitive and as important as the wholesale reform of our system of education is to do so in consultation with the right experts. 1200 That is the way to lead and that is the way to be truly progressive, Mr Speaker.

This is not an issue for politicians and an issue for speeches attempting to ingratiate oneself one way or another. It is an issue for careful consideration and for that, Mr Speaker, I commend the work that has been done in the Department of Education in this respect in the right way.

1205 So, Mr Speaker, what we have seen in the context of the debate we have had already and hon. Members’ speeches this morning, in the context of the amendment put by the Hon. Mr Licudi, is first that their position in 2015 was one of imposition of co-education without consultation; and second, that their position today, although on the terms of a motion which 1210 should not enjoy any support, was to move to consultation which is where we were in our manifesto of 2015 which is where we have demonstrated that we are already in the Department of Education and which is what we are moving to ensure our society has the benefit of in the context of making an important decision like this.

1215 So, Mr Speaker, the amended motion, which is the motion now before the House, deserves the support of the whole House if we are going to have a cross-party approach to preparing work to advise how we should progress on this matter. Because anybody who does not support this motion – and I know they have not supported the amendment, but now they have to support or not support the motion as it is before the House – will not be supporting the creation of the working group with terms of reference which are frankly not just unobjectionable but they are absolutely the right terms of reference for a decision to be made which is in the interest of our community.

1220 So, Mr Speaker, given all of that, I urge hon. Members on both sides of the House to support the motion as amended so that our community can be informed by the work of this group that has been established by the Department of Education and by the former Minister and which will be taken forward as ably by the new Minister, John Cortes. (Banging on desks)

I commend the motion to the House.

1225

Mr Speaker: Is there any other Member wishing to speak, before I call upon the Leader of the Opposition to exercise his right to reply?

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1230 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much.

Mr Speaker, the Opposition is not going to be supporting the amended motion, as indeed it did not support the amendments to the motion. We are not supporting the amended motion because the motion is inherently contradictory in itself, Mr Speaker, quite apart from some of the reasons that have already been put forward by my friend, Mr Clinton.

1235 Not only is the motion inherently contradictory but it also – quite surprising bearing in mind what the Hon. the Chief Minister has said about our position being contradictory – contradicts, Mr Speaker, statements that the Chief Minister himself made to public television on 15th December last year, just after the general election, which is the very reason why I drafted my motion in the way that I drafted my motion, as I will outline in a moment.

1240 But, Mr Speaker, the speeches from the hon. Gentlemen, particularly the Chief Minister but now surprisingly I have to say, Minister Licudi, are unnecessarily aggressive, Mr Speaker – unnecessarily acerbic, Mr Speaker, and arrogant, Mr Speaker, to the core. It oozes the question, 'How dare you question Government policy? How dare you want to bring a motion to debate something as important as co-education?'

1245 And all, it has to be said, Mr Speaker, on a motion calling on the Government to generate debate by undertaking a consultation exercise with teachers, unions, parents, students and other stakeholders, to determine the views of the community on this issue. And, Mr Speaker, from the hon. Gentleman's contribution, the Hon. Minister Licudi, it really does not fill me with confidence that he is approaching this issue with an open mind.

1250 Indeed, Mr Phillips to my left, who is un llanito buena gente just turns round and says to me,
'But is he really approaching this with an open mind?' (Interjection and laughter) Because the whole tenor, Mr Speaker, of the contribution by the hon. Gentleman was, 'Yes we want to consult, yes we want to do this, yes we want to do that', but really the undercurrent is that they are not in favour of it, Mr Speaker. That is the reality of it and that is what comes across from listening to the speeches of the hon. Gentlemen opposite and it is surprising, Mr Speaker. Mr 1255 Speaker, it is surprising.

The Hon. the Chief Minister says, 'Well why have you drafted the motion as you have drafted it, starting from the premise, that yes we believe in co-education but then calling for a consultation exercise?' And he also said, 'Well look, in your manifesto you were in favour of co-

1260 education; now what you are saying is, let us consult on it.’ But there is a very good reason for that, Mr Speaker: as he reminds us incessantly, we lost the election; they won the election, Mr Speaker. (Several Members: Hear, hear!) (Banging on desks) And, Mr Speaker, on 15th December 2015, in a City Pulse programme on GBC –and in fact it was reported on GBC the day afterwards – ‘CM advocates co-education, but says consultation necessary’. (Interjection) 1265 ‘The Chief Minister has said he personally favours the concept of co-education in schools, but believes a process of consultation ...’

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentlemen opposite are conducting themselves in exactly the same way, as I have said they conducted themselves during the course of their own speeches:
arrogant, acerbic, angry. (Laughter) Mr Speaker, I am on my feet, I ought to be allowed to 1270 continue with my speech without hon. Gentlemen constantly heckling and all but trying to interrupt. (Interjection)

Mr Speaker: May I ask hon. Members to observe the best principles of parliamentary practice and not those which one sees on a Saturday evening on la tertulia de La Sexta. (Laughter)

1275 Hon. D A Feetham: Well thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, and of course, in that programme, he did not say that he was setting up a working group (Interjection) what he said was that he personally believes in the concept of coeducation which is what I say in my motion, Mr Speaker, but that there ought to be a 1280 consultation exercise.

Well, Mr Speaker, that is not what this motion actually does, Mr Speaker, because the consultation exercise – and I will come to it in a moment – comes at the very end of the process, after there is a report from the working group. There is nothing about the working group in what he said to GBC and the reason why I have drafted my motion in the way that I have drafted it, is 1285 believing that I can come to this House with a constructive motion and try and find some common ground between the Opposition and the Government.

But it is too much to hope, Mr Speaker, because even a motion that is brought to this House in good faith, that is designed to find some common ground between the Opposition and the Government meets with the kind of aggression and acerbicness that we have met today in the 1290 speeches of the hon. Gentlemen and in particular, Minister Licudi and the Chief Minister. But there is logic to this, because it follows my motion, because it follows the statements that the Chief Minister himself made to GBC on 15th December last year, just days after the general election.

Mr Licudi and indeed with a lot of humour, the Father of the House, have examined the 1295 reasons as set out or part of my motion, the grounds for supporting my motion in paragraphs 1 and 2. Mr Speaker, paragraphs 1 and 2, in particular paragraph 2 of my motion is the central argument in favour of co-education. The hon. Gentleman describes it as a social reason. But indeed it is also an educational reason and when you look at all the reports and all the studies and all the arguments from the people who have advocated co-education, what they say is this: 1300 education is much more than just simply the teaching of particular subjects. It is about preparing people to take their place in the wider world and the wider world includes both men and women and therefore you are not preparing young people properly by segregating them. And a better way to prepare young people for that wider world is by actually having that co-education and young people working together.

1305 And, Mr Speaker, in the report, in the Collister Working Party Report, which sets out the case for co-education and the case for single-sex education, which is the last time that there was a major public consultation exercise and a major report based on the work of a group across the board involving educationalists, involving parents and involving unions, this is what they had to say and this is the point about my paragraph on the wider world of men and women.

1310 Education is, and I quote:

'not merely instruction at school in reading, writing, arithmetic, history, geography. Education is the whole process starting at birth by which a child becomes a mature individual and an adult member of society. Education starts and is always centred in the family, apart from academic instruction, the school's main contribution to a child is showing him/her how to live in a larger society than the family, how to meet, assess, work with and just get on with people of different types and backgrounds. Half the people our children are going to meet in his/her life outside school are of the opposite sex. Why therefore do we not accept the responsibility implied in the word "education" of helping our children to get on with members of the opposite sex?'

1315 That is the point, Mr Speaker. That is the point and of course, I would hope that nobody in this House – look, I cannot vouch for everybody, but I would hope that nobody in this House – has a dysfunction by reason of being segregated at secondary school from members of the opposite sex! But it misses the point, Mr Speaker. The Hon. the Father of the House, ingenious as he is with his arguments, entertaining as he is with his arguments, misses the point. It is about what better prepares a child to meet the challenges outside school. If the challenges outside school are challenges of people working in a mixed environment, why not replicate that and that also is part of education within the secondary education system?

1320 And, Mr Speaker, a lot has been made about my quoting the Collister report, but the reality is, and indeed it was I think the Chief Minister that said that the report was not relevant today. Well, that is precisely the point! The reasons for the report in 1974 for rejecting co-education are not relevant today. That is the whole point of my going through the report. Society moves on, society develops and the reasons for rejecting co-education in the 1970s are no longer reasons that are prevalent or apposite today. That is the point.

1325 But, Mr Speaker, I come to the wording of the motion itself and I will deal with the contributions from hon. Members as I go through it.

Mr Speaker, the Hon. Mr Costa said there are 20,000 reasons not to announce the names of those on the working group.

1330 Hon. N F Costa: I was being generous.

Hon. D A Feetham: 30,000, 40,000. But, Mr Speaker, again that misses the point. For a Government that likes to issue press releases, Mr Speaker, like confetti at a wedding, as I have said before in this House, for the Government to suddenly forget not to come out with a press release saying, 'We have set up this working group to report on this question of co-education', Mr Speaker, that is very strange indeed – very strange indeed!

1340 And the first time that the working group, this fantastic thing that Mr Licudi, according to the Chief Minister ... absolutely fantastic! What a wonderful Minister of Education we have had, and this is proof of it. A wonderful, wonderful Minister of Education, this is proof of it: that he has set up this working group to report on this question of co-education. And the first time we find out about it, Mr Speaker, is when I file my motion on co-education and he files – and I am very grateful that he filed it with plenty of time – an amendment to the motion. Well, Mr Speaker, one would forgive any opposition, not only this Opposition, for being rather sceptical about the Government's intentions or the Government's good work in setting up this working group that nobody knew anything about until Mr Licudi filed amendments to the motion.

1345 It is particularly surprising, Mr Speaker, given that the Hon. the Chief Minister, in his programme The City Pulse on 15th December 2015, did not say, Mr Speaker, that he was setting up a working group. What he said was that he himself was in favour of co-education – always the populist, our Chief Minister, I have to say; he probably thinks that is a popular line – but he does not want to step on the toes of anybody else. He then says 'but let us consult'.

1350 Well, Mr Speaker, he did not say that he shortly expected to set up a working group. And, Mr Speaker, the points made –

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Gentleman give way?

1355

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I am not going to give way. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

1360 Hon. D A Feetham: The points made – Mr Speaker, I am not giving way because the courtesy is never extended to me (Interjections) – yes, Mr Speaker, today that I have a right to respond, they are going to sit down, they are going to heckle, they are going to laugh, but above all, Mr
Speaker, they are going to have to listen to me (Laughter) because I do not get the chance, Mr Speaker, to have the final word! But today, Mr Speaker, they are going to have to listen and I 1365 note that the Hon. the Chief Minister has, as soon as I have said this, exited the Chamber obviously he does not want to listen to what I have to say, or he is going to listen to it from the Antechamber.

Well, Mr Speaker, the point made by my hon. friend Mr Clinton, about students, is a point that is well made, Mr Speaker. This is a motion that is brought before this House, that says that a 1370 working group has been set up composed of union officials, officials from the Department of Education, parents and it is going to report by March 2017 and it does not include the very same people that we are all talking about, the very same people whose futures we are today discussing.

Mr Speaker, that is an omission (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi) of huge magnitude, Mr 1375 Speaker. And Mr Cortes said, but their views are going to be heard. Well look, Mr Speaker, their views are going to be heard, that is neither here nor there, Mr Speaker! What we want is for students to be included within any working group (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi) so that their views can properly be taken into account as and when the decisions are taken, Mr Speaker, and not as an afterthought. (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi) No, Mr Speaker, I am not giving way. No, 1380 I am not giving way. Sit down and listen. (Interjections) Sit down and listen, Mr Speaker.
(Interjections)

Mr Speaker, and then he said it is the logical thing to do. Well look, I am sorry but that is not the logical thing to do. The logical thing to do is to include those whose futures you are discussing within the working group who are making the decisions or the recommendations 1385 about that group's future, Mr Speaker.

Now we come to the huge contradiction between the statements made by the Chief Minister to City Pulse programme on 15th December of last year and this motion and indeed the inherent nonsense of the motion itself, Mr Speaker. Because this is a motion that basically says that by March 2017, this working group is going to advise Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar on the 1390 advantages and disadvantages of the current and mixed co-educational models for comprehensive schools. So on 17th March, we will have a report. We will have a report on the advantages and disadvantages.

And then it says, secondly, to make recommendations on whether secondary education at comprehensive schools in Gibraltar is best delivered by co-ed or single. And then it says to make 1395 recommendations on possible implementations of a scenario.

And then lastly, Mr Speaker, and most remarkably, I have to say – and that is the reason I could not support it, because I was reading this last night and I thought about ringing the hon.
Gentleman and saying to the hon. Gentleman, 'Look, can we at least try and amend this?' But of course, it is not a question of amending it because the mechanics are already in motion, they 1400 have already done this. Then (4), to make recommendations on the appropriate consultation model to ensure that the views of the relevant stakeholders are taken into account.

The views of the relevant stakeholders, Mr Speaker, are taken into account after there is a recommendation by the working group on what is the model, Mr Speaker. That is placing the cart before the horse, Mr Speaker. (Interjection) Because the consultation exercise ought to take 1405 place before the working group reports to the Government, Mr Speaker. (Interjections) That is the reality and this is ill conceived, Mr Speaker.

1410 And it also contradicts what the Chief Minister himself said on 15th December, which is that there would be a consultation exercise. That is what I would have thought and that is what we would have supported, Mr Speaker, (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi) No, Mr Speaker, (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi) No, Mr Speaker.

1415 Mr Speaker: May I draw the attention of the Hon. Minister Licudi to Rule 45, interruptions. Please read it carefully because three times you have attempted to invoke the rule to elucidate some matter raised. You have not succeeded. I think that that is an indication that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, who has the floor, does not wish to give the floor to you and therefore you should allow him to get on with his speech.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker –

1420 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker has referred to the Rules.

Mr Speaker: Yes, I am asking you to read the Rules.

1425 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker -

Mr Speaker: Here you are, here is a copy of the rules.

Hon. G H Licudi: No, no, I am grateful for that and I am well aware of the Rules.

1430 Mr Speaker: Well then let the Leader of the Opposition get on with his speech. (Interjection)

Hon. G H Licudi: I have simply asked on a Point of Order in relation to the Rules – 1435 Mr Speaker: Please sit down. Please sit down.

Now, the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker –

1440 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if the Hon. Minister wants to make a Point of Order - (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham)

Mr Speaker: No, no, he has not – 1445 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, with the greatest respect -

Mr Speaker: He has not been making a Point of Order.

1450 Hon. Chief Minister: I accept that, Mr Speaker, I accept that. But the Hon. Minister was about to say, 'I would like to make a Point of Order then' and you have just told him to sit down. And, Mr Speaker, with the very greatest of respect, it is important that we have debates like this and it is important as you rightly point out that we have them in keeping with the Rules. If somebody is not giving way, well look it is a matter for them whether they give way or not.

1455 But if there is a point that the Hon. Minister wants to make, which is a Point of Order and you would then rule whether it is a Point of Order or not, he must be entitled to put it to you and then you would decide whether it is or not.

Mr Speaker: Right, but he has only come up with the notion of the Point of Order, when on three occasions he has asked for the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition to give way, which he has not. He has not given way.

1460 Right now after I have drawn his attention to the Rules on interruptions, he comes up with a Point of Order. I am prepared to listen to him if it is on a Point of Order, okay? But what I think is a pity, is that we have had, since 11.30 we have been debating a motion positively, constructively and that it degenerates right at the end. I think that is a matter for regret and I have to tell the hon. Members that it is a matter of regret.

1465 Now, the Hon. Mr Licudi, on a Point of Order. (Interjection)

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it is certainly not our intention to degenerate the debate. In fact it has been as you have indicated, a positive and constructive debate with views shared on both sides.

1470 The point is quite simply that I am obviously aware of the Rules in relation to interruptions. It seemed to me that getting up to ask the hon. Member to give way, to correct a misapprehension which the hon. Member clearly has on the points that he is making in respect of our amended motion, and in particular and of particular relevance, is the fact that it is the reason, the very reason why he says the Opposition or the GSD is voting against and he has a fundamental misapprehension as to all that. That is the only reason that I asked to give way.

Mr Speaker: But the Rule says that another Member in due course, 'provided that the Member speaking is willing to give way and resumes his seat'. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has not done so on three occasions –

1480

Hon. G H Licudi: And I sat down.

Mr Speaker: So if you are going to continue to interrupt on the basis of asking him to give way, we are not going to get anywhere.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much.

I have to say that I get flogged, politically speaking, mercilessly from Members opposite, mercilessly. And I sit down and I take it on the chin and I listen. I do not interrupt, I do not heckle and I just listen. On the odd occasion that I have asked for the hon. Gentlemen to give way because there has been a misrepresentation about my position, people have not given way to me.

Now, I believe – (Interjection) Well no, Mr Speaker, therefore I have taken the view that on this occasion I am not giving way, Mr Speaker.

The hon. Gentleman, I have read the motion as set out, that he has drafted. He has set out firstly that there is going to advice to the Government; secondly to make recommendations on what model, whether it should be co-education or single sex; and to make recommendations on implementation. And then it says to make recommendations on appropriate consultation models to ensure that views of relevant stakeholders are taken into account, Mr Speaker.

And certainly on our side, we believe that the working group ought to be composed as widely as possible, that we know who the people in that working group are, as indeed we knew who the people within the Collister working group were, which included the headmistress of the girls' comprehensive, the headmaster of the boys' comprehensive, the Director of Education – Mr Pitaluga was Director of Education then, later on he became Chief Secretary, the unions were there, there was a statistician and there were people across the board.

1500

We think that this working group is composed too narrowly and that the first thing that the working group has to do, before it reports in March of next year, is to conduct a consultation exercise in order to then inform it about what the views are of the community on co-education. Because surely the views of the community on the question of co-education is going to be

1505

1510 important; it is never paramount. I accept that if you have a preponderance of educators that tell the Government of the day that co-education is the way forward and we then have the wherewithal in terms of obviously the bricks and mortar of schooling etc. that will allow us to 1515 deliver on co-education, then that I believe is an overriding reason in favour of co-education that should trump the views of certain sectors in society, which is not what happened in 1974, because the views in fact of parents in 1974 were given a greater weight than indeed the views of other sectors of the community. But indeed, there were other very specific reasons in 1973-1974 why co-education was rejected then.

But, Mr Speaker, consultation has to be at the heart of this particular process, it has to come before there is a report by the working, absolutely the Hon. the Minister says to me 'No, no, it has not', and that is precisely the difference. It has to come before the working group reports 1520 and, Mr Speaker, we cannot support the amended motion for all those reasons.

I thank Members of the House for listening to what I have to say, even though they did their best to interrupt me at every single opportunity. (Interjection)

1525 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I call for the House to divide on the vote on the motion.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question in the terms of the motion proposed originally by the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition and we will take a division.

A division was called for and voting resulted as follows:

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

High-quality apprenticeships – Introduction to meet needs of existing and emerging businesses – Amended motion carried

Clerk: We continue with Private Members' motions. The Hon. E J Phillips.

- 5 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

This House notes that we must tackle the serious skills deficit and the real need for the introduction of high-quality apprenticeships to meet the needs of existing and emerging business; acknowledges the statement by Unite the Union on 27th October 2015 for the introduction of advanced apprenticeships to counteract the skills cliff edge and the growth in substandard apprenticeship provision in Gibraltar; acknowledges the statement by the Chamber of Commerce during the 2015 General Election campaign calling on the Government to give assistance to private sector business which provides apprenticeship or other forms of vocational training; acknowledges the statement presented to all hon. Members of the House on 22nd September 2016 by concerned members of our community calling for the introduction of high-quality apprenticeships for young people; and calls on the Government to introduce high-quality apprenticeships in traditional crafts and trades as well as the creation of a modern apprenticeship programme for the training of skills in technology and allied services.

Mr Speaker, I have brought this motion to the House because I feel, together with my colleagues on this side of the House, passionate about the creation of better opportunities for our young people.

- 10 We, as a community, need to move fast in terms of the provision of quality training of skills, otherwise we risk being left behind in the skills race if we do not act now. It is, in my view, about quality and quantity.

- 15 Brexit presents the biggest challenge to our community in recent times, and the best investment in times of uncertainty is the investment we make in our own human capital. We must look to Brexit-proofing our community and we must make sure that our people are well trained and well skilled to face the challenges that may well come.

- 20 We believe that one of the crucial ways to create sustainable and long-term growth in our economy is to build a well trained workforce. Not everyone is destined to complete a university degree – and this was talked about at length by my hon. Friend Mr Llamas, who talked about pressurising young people to complete university degrees – and we must, as a community, strive to focus the development of our training programme and the development of skills through an apprenticeship programme which delivers on the demand for traditional skills and new modern skills, so that those who do not wish to pursue higher education, for whatever reason, can make a contribution to our community and have a fulfilling and successful career. Higher education is important, and in the context of the debate that we had today in relation to co-education, most of us, if not all of us in this room, are beneficiaries of an excellent educational support and access to higher education. But it would, in our view, be a grave dereliction of our duty if we continued to neglect those who would benefit from the development of skills-based work. In our view, apprenticeship and skills should be at the top of the agenda, running in parallel with education. We must create a gold standard in the training of skills.

I have long been vocal about the training of skills, before my time in this House and now, and the subject of skills, and we have advocated for the development of apprenticeships. I, together with my hon. Friends on this side of the House, have worked very hard to deliver our message on the development of the modern-day apprenticeship and we have received widespread support from the community at large.

Mr Speaker, I know the Minister with responsibility for training does not share our vision. In fact, in this House Minister Bossano has positively rejected our proposals and suggestions. It is regrettable that we cannot have a meeting of minds on this most important subject with the hon. Gentleman. I respect the hon. Gentleman's view, but I cannot agree with it and agree with the direction that Minister Bossano is taking training and the skills within our community. I respectfully invite him to put aside for one moment his prejudices about the creation of a modern apprenticeship and pause and reflect on what we are saying.

I know that amongst the Government there are like-minded thinkers on the question of apprenticeships and skills, and the presence of Minister Costa at the Gibraltar Start-up Community brings a new sense of optimism on this side of the House that skills development is finally going to be taken seriously and given the attention it so rightly deserves. I like to believe that there is much that we have in common on the development of a training strategy that meets the needs of young people and provides them with vital opportunities. With that in mind, and where we can, I would welcome depoliticising this issue on both sides of the House, recognising, as Unite the Union and the Chamber of Commerce have done, the serious skills cliff edge facing our community. We also need to recognise the efforts of those outside this House for raising the issue by campaigning outside this House on 22nd September 2016.

Let us not ignore the clear and unequivocal calls by the majority of people in our community on this issue, the calls by young people, parents, educators, union representatives and business leaders. Unite the Union this week repeated their request for an alternative training system and described the existing minimal training mechanism as inadequate. We must not as a Parliament, underestimate the strength of feeling on this issue, and I would invite the Government to join us and the rest of the community and actively explore ways in which we can together develop an apprenticeship programme which meets the wider needs of our community. That, in essence, is the purpose of this motion and it is hoped that the Government takes the motion in the spirit that it is intended.

When looking at apprenticeships and speaking to many people I have been reminded of the dockyard apprenticeship. People have spoken of the loss of key skills and the demise of dockyard apprenticeships and look to it with great affection. The world has changed, but there is much that we can learn from how these apprenticeships worked in the past, and I am sure the Hon. Minister will no doubt in his intervention provide us with a detailed analysis of the workability or otherwise of a dockyard type of apprenticeship in 2016 and its applicability to other trades and the modern apprenticeship.

We live in challenging times and it is our view that we must coldly assess where we are with skills and where we need to be. This is not about conducting a skills survey and plugging the skills gap. It is much, much more: it is about a 20-year plan for creating opportunity for all and supporting sustainable growth.

I have spoken to many technology companies who want to recruit our people; and, despite the clear interest from young people, they often lack basic skills which could have been supported at school and ultimately by the Government. Our new industries must be supported with a skilled and adaptable workforce – and we have been found wanting.

Mr Speaker, the emphasis is wrong, in my view. It must start with the early years and move right through our educational system, in which apprenticeship is not characterised as an alternative stream for under-achievers but a clear pathway to a successful career for those who do not want to pursue higher education. Each and every one of our young people represents a golden opportunity for our community and we cannot afford to let any of them down.

If we are, as a community, going to encourage new business to establish a presence in Gibraltar, then our people should be those we look to recruit. We are only as good as our people and our best investment is in our human capital. Therefore, I would call on the Government to strive for the introduction of a high-quality apprenticeship in traditional skills and modern programmes in technology and allied services. Our people should be the first choice because they are the best, and to do that we need to shoulder the responsibility in partnership with business to do that.

Mr Speaker, I commend the motion to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Hon. Elliott Phillips.

The Hon. Neil Costa.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition this afternoon ... I am sure I heard him say that he thought that our contributions today were acerbic and abrasive. But, Mr Speaker, this Chamber has always enjoyed robust argument and counterargument, and I do not think there is anything wrong with the Government Ministers standing in this House to strongly put our points of view across, especially when the motions presented by the hon. Members opposite implicitly set out a premise which we just cannot accept.

By setting out a motion that somehow suggests that this Government has not done anything on training requires a robust response, and for all of the reasons that I shall set out we will prove this afternoon that in fact this Government has done more for training and more for employment in five years than the GSD dreamt of doing and never did in 16 years. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

Mr Speaker, if there is anyone inside or outside of this House who does not need a friend and colleague to speak to an Opposition motion which he is primarily addressing, it is of course a redoubtable giant of Gibraltar politics, which is my hon. friend Mr Joe Bossano. (A Member: Hear, hear.) And if I stand, Mr Speaker, it is only because I know now, from bone marrow experience, that he has a genetic inability to set out for the record everything that he has done – and I have no such qualms in setting out every single achievement that the Hon. Minister Bossano has set for training, for employment, for the present, for the future and for the prosperity of our small nation, (A Member: Hear, hear.) and of course I do so without ever having mentioned to Minister Bossano that I intended to speak in such terms.

Mr Speaker, the Opposition's motion as currently drafted, implicit in what is being said, is nothing more than, I dare say, a sad, uninspiring, science-fictional piece of regrettably predictable partisan political theatre, and it has to be said that it is science fictional –

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): The second one today.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, indeed, Mr Speaker. Science fictional because on these benches we are unsure how this Government or indeed any other Government can train our compatriots for a business that is emerging – short of course subscribing to Harry Potter's Book of Wizardry, asking

125 for a fully functioning crystal ball, or indeed graduating from a yet-to-emerge Masters in political voodoo.

Mr Speaker, we deal in facts, and when the hon. Gentleman opposite talks to me about vision
I must throw my hands to my head and remember the Theatre Royal hole – a vision of the GSD; a £24 million airport which ended up being an £85 million air terminal – another vision of the GSD; having a hospital in an office block financed by PFI that cost the taxpayer so much more 130 than had they built a purpose-built hospital. (Banging on desks) That is the vision of the GSD, Mr Speaker. So when they talk about vision, let's all throw our hands to our heads and think of what they are truly, which are nightmares. (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, having prefaced the introduction to my remarks in the way that I have, I have to obviously thank the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition for his very kind words this morning when 135 he thanked me for being appointed (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) the Minister for Justice, which of course I very much appreciate.

So, in order to be able to ground this debate in reality and to be able to ground this debate on the facts as they exist, we must set out what I think are the Government's many achievements, in employment and in training, in the proper context; and in so doing, let the 140 public decide indeed, on an objective assessment on the facts and the figures, who in this Chamber, which team in this Chamber, has done more for persons unemployed and persons requiring training in our nation.

Mr Speaker, it will not have escaped the notice of hon. Gentlemen opposite and the hon.
Lady, that it will not have escaped the notice of opposite hon. Members that it is the Statistics 145 Office – not Minister Costa, not Minister Sacramento, not indeed the Minister for Economic Development – who sets out in an employment survey, black upon white, the fact of employee growth, growth in employee jobs in our economy, recording 1,722 jobs in one year. This is the highest number of employee jobs ever recorded in an employment survey and is a testament to the success of what I never tire of saying is our tiger-like economy. Indeed, it is not me saying it, 150 the economists have said so in previous publications, that Gibraltar boasts of a tiger-like economy and a regulatory, fiscal, budgetary and legal environment that Government has carefully nourished since taking office. And indeed it would not be a coincidence to anyone who objectively analyses the situation that the highest number ever of Gibraltarians in employment was last year at 11,010.

155 We do believe, Mr Speaker, as the Hon. Mr Phillips has said, that we are as good as our people, and as I will demonstrate it has been this Government that has rolled up its sleeves and has worked tirelessly with those who are unemployed and are seeking training to be able to achieve their objectives and indeed enter the labour market.

In addressing the subject of the motion, it was the private sector that saw a growth of 1,629
160 in October last year. Of course, Mr Speaker, these facts which I have just mentioned and the rate of employment I have to say put in doubt, and I would say even put to shame, the record of the GSD when they were in Government.

Mr Speaker: I have to remind the Hon. Minister that in replying to this motion I am prepared 165 to allow certain references to be made to the high levels of employment, to the fact that there is very low unemployment and so on, but these matters are only loosely relevant to the motion.
The motion is not about employment; the motion is more about skills and apprenticeships. As I say, I am prepared to allow him to make some references in passing. I did not stop him with what he had to say about the airport or about the Theatre Royal by way of introduction, I have 170 let him get away with that, but these are not matters which are germane to the motion. So by all means make some passing reference, but you cannot develop those points to any great extent, because they are not relevant to the motion.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chair for his remarks. The reason for setting 175 out the labour market, as I explained in my preface, is for the very simple reason that if there is a

180 motion before this House that suggests that there is a skills cliff edge and that there is a serious deficit in training, there have to be people to be trained. Therefore, if I am putting to this House that there is the highest number ever of Gibraltarians employed in all the different areas of our economy which are set out in the employment survey, it is, I think, respectfully, germane to the extent that if we are to analyse objectively and empirically and investigate which sectors indeed should there be a need for training, that we set out first of all the labour framework, which of course is our labour market.

185 Mr Speaker, talking about training, I continue to address the motion. The hon. Gentlemen opposite should know that when the manifesto was prepared last year and presented to the public, we set out there the Government's achievements in respect of training, and indeed we set out the facts and the figures of what had been achieved so far. One salient fact is that out of a total of 276 trainees who are employed by the five Government training companies, 168 of those were employed in the private sector, which is the point that I was making before Mr Speaker's contribution.

190 Mr Speaker, following on with employment, there has been no mention by the hon. Gentleman opposite that for there to be a proper identification of the skills that are required, and for which the Government should put in place any training programmes, we did launch, the Minister for Education and I, this year an Employment Development Service, which was started by the former Minister for Employment, the Hon. Mr Bossano, who went literally to schools to advise school children of the skills that will be required by our economy. It is therefore not a coincidence that, following the hon. Gentleman's identification of such skills, we shall now have over, around 60 students who are training for accounting and finance to be able to do the jobs in auditing and accounting – an industry, where there has always been a shortage of skills but now where there are over 60 students who are obtaining the skills to be able to enter the job market.

200 And of course, Mr Speaker, it also has to be said, in terms of the comment the Hon. Mr Phillips made that we are as good as our people, over the three months that started roundabout in June this year, the House will recall that we were able to employ 172 previously unemployed persons who had come to this Government for help. Therefore, it is, in our view, somewhat rich for us to be lectured about helping people in finding employment or in training when this is the Government that has assisted as much as is humanly possible, and is proven by the facts that I have set out a few moments ago as to all of the people who were previously unemployed and who now boast of being in full-time employment. In that respect it should not go unmentioned that in the four years that this Government has been in office there have been 730 full-time jobs for Gibraltarians. That is, in our view, I think, a very fair summary of the achievements of this Government since taking office.

210 Mr Speaker, in terms of the training that has been conducted until now I already referred the hon. Gentleman to pages 32 and 33 of our manifesto, and in those pages we have just some of the most salient points that I am sure the Hon. Minister Bossano will take to further elucidate during the course of this debate. But it has to be remembered that when we prepared this manifesto in 2015 the number of Gibraltarians in the construction sector had risen, and it has to be recalled that previously we had heard, when we were on the opposite side of this House, that Gibraltarians did not want to be in the construction sector and that is why they were not in the construction sector – and, as the Hon. Minister Bossano will now prove when he addresses this House, there was a vertiginous increase in the numbers of Gibraltarians who took to working in the construction centre.

220 Further, since the introduction by Minister Bossano of City and Guilds, a total of 209 at the time of writing the manifesto, had successfully completed the craft apprenticeship and were awarded or were awaiting their certificates. That is, Mr Speaker, at the time of last year, 209 trainees in less than four years, compared with 124 in 15 years. Does the hon. Gentleman therefore not realise how hollow his protestations sound when in five years we were able to achieve so much more than they did in 16?

In care, a burgeoning field as well, the Hon. Minister Bossano was able to start providing care training, and I am sure the whole House will agree that care provision is of course a burgeoning field in terms of employment.

230 Mr Speaker, in total sum there was, in the three and a half years from February 2012 to August 2015, a total of 1,242 previously unemployed persons who had obtained employment after training, so it is clearly the case that there has been plenty substantial meaningful skill training in Gibraltar in the time that we have been in office.

235 The hon. Gentleman opposite also says that we should pay heed to being able to provide training to other businesses and makes note of the Chamber of Commerce's remarks. Mr Speaker, in that respect surely the hon. Gentleman opposite knows that the Hon. the Chief Minister announced training costs as an expense against profits of a business or company at the rate of £150. That means that a company that invests £1,000 in training its employees with a view to them obtaining skills or qualifications now is able to obtain £1,500 as a deduction against 240 its profits for the accounting period on its tax computation. That is a clear incentive, which goes to address one of the points that the hon. Gentleman made in respect of not providing sufficient incentives for training and noting the Chamber's comments.

The hon. Gentleman opposite also has to note that whilst noting the training that has been done by the Hon. Minister Bossano, it is also a fact that the Department of Education also provides for persons who want to be trained in certain skills, such as electrician, to be able to pursue that route as well. So it is not just one route that is available to persons who require or wish to raise the level of ambition and to be able to train, but there is in fact another route available to them.

245 Mr Speaker, in all, to say that it is not realistic and it is not fair to say and it is not right that there should be a motion before this House suggesting that there has been no training, or very little training, or substandard training, when a quick read of the manifesto and the statistics that are contained in here shows that in fact there has been training and the results that have been achieved there.

255 So Mr Speaker for all of these reasons I will robustly ask my colleagues to of course vote against the motion presented by the Hon. Mr Phillips, because if ever there has been a team of people down to a man and to a woman who have cared about finding employment for the unemployed, who have cared in making sure that people are trained and have the right skills to be able to enter the labour market, it is this Government. (Banging on desks)

260 A Member: Hear, hear.

Mr Speaker: Any other Member making a contribution?

Any other Member of the Opposition making a contribution? The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

265 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I wanted to make a contribution but I was waiting for the Hon. Joe Bossano. He had indicated at the last Question Time that he was going to provide certain figures as requested in Questions 682 to 685 inclusive. If I make a contribution now, Mr Speaker, I have used my slot, shall we call it. I then would not be able to reply or make use of any of the figures that the Father of the 270 House was going to provide. I do not know how we can solve this so that (Interjection) I do have at least some information to be able to make ...

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I want to listen to what everybody has to say before I answer them all. I can only speak once.

275

Mr Speaker: There is sometimes a problem during debate in trying to determine the order in which Members are going to speak, but you cannot force –

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, because I have such high regard for the Father of the House 280 and I have a soft spot in my heart for him, I will go first and then he can hear what I have to say in relation to this. I hope he will reciprocate by providing the answers to the questions, as he promised in the last session of Parliament.

I am just going to talk about a very narrow aspect of this debate that has been brought into sharp focus by the contribution of Minister Costa. Minister Costa made a point, and he said, 285 ‘Well, how can we train people in the industries of the future? We do not know what the industries of the future are.’ And to hammer home his political point he said it is political voodoo, a crystal ball from Harry Potter. And then to hammer the point even further, he mentioned the hole in the ground and the airport, which hon. Gentlemen opposite manage to weave into every single political point in every single political debate that they make.

I think that is at the heart of an important division between the Opposition and the 290 Government in relation to this point. Because our position for a number of years, certainly since I have been Leader of the Opposition, has been that what we ought to be doing is conducting a survey – engage with industries, look at what employers want in terms of training and how employers see the economy moving in the future; how does the Government itself see the 295 economy and the sectors moving in the future; what are the sectors that we want to be attracting to Gibraltar – and then train people in those sectors. That is our philosophy. It is not about voodoo. It is about preparation, it is about looking forwards to what we think Gibraltar is going to look like: what are the industries of the future, what are the industries that we ought to be, as a nation, training our young people so that they can take up those opportunities?

The difference between the Government and the Opposition, highlighted by the sarcastic 300 comments of the hon. Gentleman, is that they take a different view – and I understand it, in fact.
I am not sure that the hon. Gentleman understands it, but I understand it because I understand where the Hon. Minister Bossano comes from. The philosophy of the Government, in statements made by Minister Bossano, is ‘Well, actually, let’s do something different: let’s analyse in the 305 labour market’ – and that is the first survey that was made by the Government, chaired and headed by Minister Bossano – ‘let’s analyse what are the jobs at the moment in the economy.
We look at the jobs that are there in the economy at the moment, we look at the nationalities of people within those particular jobs and then what we do is we try and fill those jobs with Gibraltarians by training people to do those jobs.’ That is the philosophy of the Government and 310 I understand it. What that has, in my view ... and I understand it, and to a certain extent it is logical and there is a worthwhile point to it, but what it does, in our respectful view, is it focuses the skills of people on a very narrow platform, and that is what are the jobs today, what are people doing today and let’s get our own employees to replace the foreign workers in jobs. That is why, in terms of the training and construction centres and the other training centre in 315 Gibraltar, what the Government is basically doing is focusing on the wet trades, for instance. The Government says, ‘Right, the jobs in construction are in wet trades’ – cement, bricklaying, those kinds of things – but it is narrow, Mr Speaker. I understand that there is a benefit to that, but it is narrow because we should be training people in a much wider skill set than just simply the wet trades. We should be looking at electricians, we should be looking at carpenters, the traditional 320 skills which are being forgotten – they are being taken up by ... we are having to import that skill set from outside because we are not training our people in those skills. Therefore, training is much more than just analysing the figures, much more than just analysing the nationalities; it is also about proper planning, it is also about a much wider skill set and looking to the future.

That, without looking at any Harry Potter crystal ball or without any voodoo economics or 325 voodoo of any kind, is really what we believe that we ought to be doing. That is my own contribution and that is what certainly I have urged the hon. Member and hon. Members opposite to be doing – is to be looking at that wider skill set. We are losing those skills and we are also losing a golden opportunity, particularly now that we have got to have an eye not only on the present but also on the future, because of Brexit, and looking at what are the skills that 330 an economy that now needs to move on, that needs to de-diversify into different sectors ... what are the skills that are going to be necessary for the future.

That is the approach in a nutshell. I hope I have fairly summarised what the differences are between us, but that is the approach certainly that we would advocate from this side of the House, and therefore I associate myself with everything that the hon. Gentleman, my hon. and 335 learned Friend, Mr Phillips has said, and I too commend the motion to the House.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Albert Isola.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, thank you.

340 I have some difficulty understanding what we are hearing from the other side of the House in a number of different ways.

The first is that I remember when, in the Election in 2011, the Future Job Strategy was announced, and everything that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has been talking about just now has been talking about looking at the future to ensure that in the future we have 345 people in a position to take jobs locally to support the local economy. I remember also at the time – I was not in this House – hearing the hon. Member talk about the failed job strategy. And so if you rewind the clock five years to 2011 when the Future Job Strategy – failed job strategy from that side ... and you then fast forward five years, I think if there was going to be the remotest teeny bit of fairness, the Members opposite would have to concede that the Future 350 Job Strategy has been a huge success. How do you measure that success? Well, Mr Speaker, the only way is by looking at the numbers of employment. At the last Election, in 2015, the hon. the mover of the motion would go on television and even in their pamphlet talk about ‘dead-end jobs’, that in fact what we were doing was training people in dead-end jobs. We never found out what those dead-end jobs were, and we still have not heard that today of course, and that 355 seems to have slipped through the net – we have not heard it much since the 2015 Election.

But in real terms, when you look at the motion that has been proposed by the hon. Member and you read ‘serious skills deficit’, and he talks of ‘high-quality apprenticeships’, I would like to understand what a high-quality apprenticeship is – because he has not told us. We do not know what ‘advanced training’ is, we do not know what ‘high-skills apprenticeship’ is. Is it high skills if 360 the tools they use are made in Switzerland as opposed to China? What is it? Because he said absolutely nothing, and in their pamphlet in 2015 absolutely nothing about what this great training scheme that they are going to provide for the future of Gibraltarians is. I struggle to understand. He says that the motion should be taken in the spirit it is intended, and the first line – I do not know what spirit it is that he intends it – ‘notes that we must tackle the serious skills
365 deficit’. (Laughter) Are you serious? Are you seriously telling this side of the House that you expect us to take the motion in good faith – good faith which the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition said that was what the motion this morning was about – when you are telling us that there is a serious skills deficit, that we need ‘high-quality apprenticeships’, that we have a ‘skills cliff edge’, ‘substandard apprenticeships’? (Laughter)

370 Mr Speaker, (Interjection) I am the newly named Minister for Commerce, so I represent the bulk, I would say, of the working community. I meet with the Finance Centre Council, which represents the entirety of the financial services sector, the Gibraltar Gaming and Betting Association, the entire gaming... I know you did not mention them in your pamphlet, but I think when you talk about skills you may want to have the GBJ in the back of your minds. I talk to the Chamber and I talk to the GFSB. As the Hon. Minister Mr Costa just said, the one item that he 375 refers to in his motion has actually already been done; it is just that you have not even realised. The bit in the motion where you talk about providing private sector business with support and assistance has been done since the last Election.

380 So when you talk about all of these things, and when I talk to all these different groups and associations that really between them represent the entirety of the business community, not once, not once have they said to me, 'We really have a skills shortage, we really have a skills cliff edge, we really need high-quality apprenticeships,' which God knows what that means.

385 I was hoping that today with this motion the hon. Member would get up and spell out once and for all what it is that the GSD and the Opposition mean when they talk about high skilled apprenticeships, what they mean by their skills school and the other bits and sound bites that they mention, because it all, from this side of the House, seems very much the same. It sounds good but it is actually meaningless. There is no substance to what they are telling us.

390 So I do not understand how you could ever have a motion before this Parliament talking about skills, talking about labour, talking about employment, without in the very first line congratulating the Hon. Minister Joe Bossano for absolutely everything he has done to achieve the highest levels of employment ever with the lowest levels of unemployment ever. I am not surprised they do not want to listen, because it cannot make very pleasant hearing.

395 Mr Speaker, in all seriousness, a motion that seeks to denigrate the training and the skills that this side of the House has provided is frankly astounding. The Leader of the Opposition talks about the division between us, and I think he analysed the two parts as two philosophies with a degree of accuracy, but for me it is more about another word which they so much like to use on that side of the House – it is about a vision. We do not believe in visions, we believe in reality and we believe in getting people trained and into jobs as quickly as we possibly can for their long-term future and for the benefit of our community in securing that. Anything else, anything 400 other than that, is simply playing politics with people's lives and I do not believe that anybody in this Parliament should stand before the community today and mess around with talking about these things which are absolutely meaningless. They sound good, they promise a lot, but as usual they deliver nothing.

405 Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, the motion before the House this afternoon is no less important than the one this morning. We have a duty in Parliament, obviously, to provide 410 meaningful jobs for all.

I have just heard the Minister for Trade – I believe that is his new Ministry – congratulate the Government for the highest levels of employment. There are lies, damned lies and statistics, and I am sure Mr Bossano will lead us through them later.

415 The highest level of jobs ever in this economy was the growth of 1,722 jobs from 2014 to 2015. It is interesting when you analyse that growth number, which is 7.1%, because of those 1,722 jobs generated in this economy in that year, for which the Government claims credit, 1,248 of those workers are described under nationality in the official statistics report as Spanish. So their fantastic growth of 7.1% in one year – of those jobs, 72.5% went to our friends across the way. I am sure the Gibraltarians listening would be interested to know, of those 1,722 jobs
420 that this Government has generated, how many went to Gibraltarians. Well, according to this, 19 went to Gibraltarians, which is more or less about 1.1% of the growth. So Members here, we can talk about statistics, and statistics and more statistics, but the fact of the matter is that the jobs growth has not gone to Gibraltarians, and this is something that has to be made clear. It is not just the statistics that matter, but to whom these jobs go to.

425 I remember many years ago, when I was doing an economic analysis of the economy, I went to the Stats Office and I asked for the unemployment statistics, and I was told, 'Well, we don't actually produce those.' There has been a lot of talk about reduction in unemployment, but unfortunately in this report, which is quite rightly called an Employment Report, it says nothing about unemployment, nor do we have any accredited statistics in here talking about 430 unemployment levels. It may be something that this Government or future governments may consider introducing.

Of course, an employment survey which goes to employers is obviously by definition only existing jobs. There is nothing in here that talks about unemployment, the length of unemployment, the nationality, the period and other things like that which would be useful in any normal economy. We hear quite a lot about the unemployment rate in the UK going up and down and in America the same way, non-farm payrolls in the US, but in Gibraltar we do not have anything to say – (Interjection) Well, we don't. If anybody does have it or if it is published, please let me know. I would love to have it. So when we talk about statistics we have to be very careful, because either side of the House can spin them any way we want – Mr Bossano knows that and I know that – but the reality for the man on the ground is have they got a job, have they got a future, is it a meaningful job. For those reasons, I identify very much with my learned colleague's motion.

The Minister for Trade talks about affectively meaningless comments about skills gaps and what are we really talking about. Well, perhaps you should go, instead of to the Chamber of Commerce you should go and visit Unite the Union as well, because Unite the Union, I quote, and this is only yesterday, says it is 'concerned about the skills gaps that exist regarding manual trades in Gibraltar'. Their words, not mine. (Interjection) Unite says it cannot allow Gibraltar to see itself short of trades people and believes leg work to resolving the matter has to start now. The union recognises the current minimal training mechanism but claims this training programme is inadequate to furnish Gibraltar with the quality tradespeople it deserves. Mr Speaker, those are not words coming from the Opposition, they are not words coming from the Chamber; these are words coming from Unite the Union, whose responsibility it is to look after its membership and ensure that they have good and meaningful jobs in the future.

And so, Mr Speaker, for the reasons I have outlined, Unite the Union have got their concerns, the statistics do not necessarily seem to indicate what the Government would wish us to believe, and for those reasons I identify myself with the motion by my learned colleague and obviously I will be voting in favour of this motion.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Joe Bossano.

Hon. J J Bossano: I am not sure which of the three motions I should be speaking to, Mr Speaker. There is the motion by Mr Phillips, the motion by Mr Clinton and the motion by Mr Feetham, because they spoke about three different concepts.

Let me say the one I have little difficulty in agreeing with is the one from the Leader of the Opposition, but of course what he said has nothing to do with the motion that has been brought to the House, because what he has told us is that the difference between us – that is between the party in opposition and the party in Government – is that they understand that we are looking at the present requirements but they believe we should be looking at the future. I understand what he is saying, but I will explain to him why, in fact, there is a flaw in the analysis that he has put to us. The hon. Member is right, and I am grateful to him, not because he has been nice to me because he loves me, but because he is being accurate, which is something I think he should commend to his colleagues – (Hon. Chief Minister: And to himself.) and to himself when he talks to other Members, but he has been accurate with me. (Laughter)

It is true that we carried out the skills audit. In fact, I would remind the Leader of the Opposition that his present colleagues did not know that we had done it. I was asked when it was going to be done, in an earlier meeting of the House since the last Election, and I had to remind them that it had in fact been done in 2012. It was a very comprehensive thing. It was based on records that are not 100% accurate. Because for the benefit of Mr Clinton, let me say that we consider the figures on the level of employment that are provided by the returns from employers to be more accurate than the figures that exist in the records of the Ministry for Employment, for the simple reason that quite often people employ people and their employees are recorded because the contract of employment is recorded. But very frequently the termination is not recorded; or, if recorded, is recorded a long time after it has happened. So

485 there is a discrepancy and there have always been of the order of 2,000 or 3,000 between the people who are supposed to be working in Gibraltar according to the records of the ETB and the people who are employed in Gibraltar according to the records of the employment survey. So the Government – this Government and the previous Government – have used the more conservative figure as the more accurate one, and that conservative figure shows the increase 490 that there has been in the private sector, not in pseudo jobs as the hon. the mover of the motion has described it in the past: pseudo private sector jobs. These are real private sector jobs. So we have moved in a situation where our training has been geared to make sure that we took a greater number of people into jobs who were residents that previously were taken by frontier workers.

The economy has grown, so although we increased the percentage of Gibraltarians in 495 employment in 2011, if he looks at the 2012 employment survey he will find that in that year the total number of workers came down because the construction slowed down, and in the construction sector that was shrinking the number of Gibraltarians went up. But of course subsequently, with the developments that have been taking place in recent years, the construction sector expanded and that expansion brought in workers from outside. We have 500 always accepted that when you have got a lot of building going on, the size of the construction sector – at least it has always been described by me in those terms and nobody has ever challenged it ... There is a size of construction industry in Gibraltar of around 2,000 people that is there all the time, and there is a size of construction sector that is between 3,000 and 3,500 505 which is there when there is a lot of building. What we need to do, in terms of having a resident construction workforce, is to look at ensuring that we have as many of the jobs in the 2,000 category as possible. That is what we set out to do. It is not true that we concentrated on the wet trades to the exclusion of anything else; what we did was we put more emphasis on the wet trades, and therefore the intakes in the Construction Training Centre have been eight for plumbing, eight for carpentry, eight for painting and 24 for the wet trades. I explained from the 510 beginning ... and if there was logic and genuine intentions in the motions that are brought by the Members opposite, then you would expect that the explanation that we give would have some effect, but if somebody says something in a motion which is the same thing that they said in the elections and they ignore everything that was said before the election, everything that was said during the election and everything that was said since the election and carry on saying the same 515 thing ... Well, look, as my colleague has rightly pointed out, how can we note that there is a serious skills deficit that we must tackle? If we know that there is a serious skills deficit we must tackle, which the mover of the motion says exists ... The Hon. Mr Clinton says it exists because the union said so yesterday, and the Leader of the Opposition says he does not know if it exists because we need to do a survey of the businesses to find out if it exists and that is what we need 520 to be doing. Well, it cannot exist because it is looking to future skills in future industries. I do not dispute that that is a policy which is not necessarily different or in conflict with ours. I think the policy described by the Leader of the Opposition, with which I have no quarrel, is compatible with ours but it cannot be the exercise that we need to do to train the people that are unemployed now, because if we provide training now to the unemployed people in expectation 525 that there will be a future demand for those skills. And if the demand does not arrive, they will not be in a dead end job, they will be in zero job – they will be unemployed. They will be more skilled but still without work. That is why investing public money in providing skills starts from the premise that it has to be demand led. That is the difference: that we train in the knowledge that there is a skills deficit. For me, a deficit is a gap between supply and demand. I do not know 530 what the hon. Member means, but that is what it means to me, and I can only assess that the gap exists by using two sources of information, which is what I have used.

One source of information is: is there a gap that is currently being filled by outsiders which I know can be filled by our people, not because we need to sack the outsiders but because there is a huge turnover? The transient workers in Gibraltar have a churn of 4,000 a year. We lose 535 4,000 people and 4,000 new ones come in. If we have got 300 people out of work and 4,000 people leave, all we need to do to help the unemployed is to see which of the 4,000 jobs that have become vacant because people have left – not because the economy is shrinking but because the labour market is expanding ... So we can look to the jobs that are coming new and the jobs that are becoming vacant and channel the training into those areas, and that will lead to employment, which is the purpose of training.

If we, in addition, think that there might be a skills deficit in the future in skills that do not now exist then I have no problem with that, as put by the Leader of the Opposition, because that is not in conflict with what we are doing in the present circumstances but is looking to the future – and I believe we need to look to the future but the indications of what might come in cannot come simply from asking the present employers. It has to be linked to inward investment. This is why the training precisely is in the Ministry for Economic Development and has been, from the beginning, linked to inward investment – because the original concept from the start was that if an investor comes tomorrow and says, ‘I want to bring a new industry to Gibraltar but the skills that I need do not exist’, we will not wait for the cliff to hang over. What we will do is say to the new employer, ‘You have to tell me what skills you need and I will give you all the necessary support – if you need work permits, I will give you the work permits – but there will be one condition: there have to be x number of locals shadowing the people you bring in, for which we will pay, we will provide them free, and then when the local guy is trained he takes over from the outsider.’ That is looking for future skills for future industries, linking it to things that are coming in. Until now, we have not had that kind of new skills set being demanded from us, because until now the expansion that we have had has not been from totally new industries but expanding organically from people who work here already or from people who came to add to those who were here. We have had gaming companies or other entities coming in entering a market that was already there, we have had insurance companies coming in entering a market that was already there.

545

560

If we are really serious, if this is not just playing politics – which I believe it is, but if it is not – then the debate has to be serious, it has to be professional, it has to be technical and it has to be based on facts. And there are no facts. We start from a position where what we are being asked to do is the antithesis of the democratic process, because if the hon. Member says this was the difference we had in the election campaign ... Well, look, this is the manifesto we had in the election campaign and we were voted to implement this. We produced a detailed account of craft apprenticeships and vocational training. We explained what we had done and we asked people for a mandate to carry on doing it. (Hon. Chief Minister: Seven out of 10.)

565

The position of politicians is that they are expected to implement their manifesto when they get into Government. When the GSD was first elected to this House in 1996, the first thing they did in the first few months was to bring a censure motion against me – it has taken the present Opposition a little bit longer than it took the last time – and I said to them, ‘If you censure me, the logical thing is that if you were to win we would have to resign and call a new election, something that I would enjoy – since I have beaten you 73 to 20, I do not mind repeating the exercise.’ Obviously, the pleasure would not be as great this time because this time we only beat them 63 to 37, but with a bit of pushing – (Hon. Chief Minister: Sixty-eight to thirty-two.) Ah, 68 to 32 – I was being too generous! (Laughter) It must be all the nice things that he said to me at the beginning. (Laughter) (Hon. Chief Minister: Seven out of 10.)

So what is it then that we should do if we were to not fulfil our manifesto: look to theirs? What is it that they had in theirs that we should be looking to? Can I remind the Leader of the Opposition that he invited the electorate to welcome the 2015 manifesto, and having explained all the things that we were doing wrong – which is perfectly legitimate if he wants them to vote for him and not for us – he then said at the end, having first welcomed them to the manifesto, ‘This isn’t the manifesto, but we are still finalising it, but here are some of our priorities.’ Well, they have not finished (Laughter) finalising their manifesto. They are still saying the same things that they did when they were beginning to prioritise it. In politics people are criticised for not fulfilling their manifesto. They did not even get round to printing it or producing it! It is a failure of a magnitude that is geometric, not arithmetic (Laughter) – and they criticise us for what we do. They were saying the same thing then: ‘We will abolish the Future Job Strategy and the false promises, our apprentices will be given the opportunity of learning real skills for real jobs.’ Why do they want to know what people are learning? Why is it that in the 15 years from the time that Pepito Baldachino left the Training Centre – which was the year that it produced most trainees, by the way; it went down after that with every year of the GSD – in those 15 years, the Construction Training Centre was producing the same skills in the same trades? What was it about those 15 years that stopped in 2011 and then it became unreal jobs and unreal training?

The hon. Member has asked me am I going to give him the information that he asked for in Question Time. Well, yes, I will give him the figures showing who is being currently and really trained for unreal jobs, the low quality useless training that is now being done by the people in the Training Centre who were doing wonderful training between 1996 and 2011 and decided, for reasons not known to me, to stop giving people quality, real training and produce rubbish training, which somehow we conned the City and Guilds Institute of the United Kingdom into accepting as real and they gave certificates and signed them.

We have got, at the moment, four doing plumbing at level 2, one doing tiling at level 2, one doing bricklaying at level 2, two doing plastering at level 2, six doing carpentry at level 2 – I hope that makes him happy, Mr Speaker, because when he spoke he was concerned that I was only doing wet trades and not doing carpentry: six doing carpentry – and two doing painting. They all started in the Training Centre in October 2015.

In the case of engineering apprenticeships, the numbers and start dates are as follows: fabrication and welding, two at level 3 – I do not know if level three is a sufficiently high level or the hon. Member wants us to do welding at level 4, which I understand is the equivalent of an honours degree in welding; two doing mechanical engineering at level 2, who started in 2016; four doing mechanical engineering at level 3, who started in 2014; four doing mechanical engineering at level 3, who started in 2016. So in mechanical engineering we have got a total of 10. Is mechanical engineering a sufficiently attractive skill to satisfy the hon. Member, or is that a dead-end-job rubbish skill as well? Or is it that he does not know that this is happening?

In electrical engineering we have got three at level 3 and eight at level 3. The three are the ones who started in 2014 and the eight are the ones who started in 2016: 11 doing level 3. Level 3 is something that is not required for a craft rate of pay, as previous Ministers of Employment in the GSD administration have told the House for 15 years. Or is it that, before, a level 2 was a craft skill obtained by an apprentice which enabled him to get the craft rate of pay which is accepted by the employers in the industry and accepted by the union, and now the fact that we have got so many people doing level 3 is that we are failing and we are doing minimal training?

The number of intakes per financial year in both centres have been 11, 12, 1 – I am not counting the ones that happened before November 2011; 12, 13, 3; 13, 14, 11; 14, 15, 21; and 15, 16, 12.

The potential trainees for enrolment at level 1 have been identified, contacted already and interviewed, and the new intake is expected to take place in the month of November – this month. They have already been selected, they have already been interviewed, and there is an intake altogether, covering the four construction trades that I have mentioned, of something of the order of 34 or 36, I think. I think more were contacted, but the ones who have actually turned up I think is around 34 to 36 and during this week they are being given the induction and the protective clothing and that kind of thing for the start of the course. They will be doing the generic health and safety thing, which everybody does initially, and then they will be doing an NVQ level 1 and then specialising in their trade in level 2, which is the way the system works under City and Guilds.

Mr Speaker, this is the latest information in the context of a motion that the hon. Member is asking me to accept, which says that we must tackle a serious skills deficit and that there is a real need for the introduction of high-quality apprenticeships to meet the needs of existing businesses and emerging ones. Well, I do not know what the needs of the emerging ones are 640 going to be because they have not yet emerged. (Laughter) I am concentrating on the existing ones, which I know are there, and I am doing it with the same quality training that was done for 15 years.

I think it is an absolute disgrace to pretend to be seriously wanting to find common ground, on the basis that we accept that we have done more of what they were doing, when they were 645 doing ... it was less in quantity but better in quality. What we are doing now is more in quantity but less in quality. It is now rubbish, but it is the same qualification – the NVQ. It was the hon. Member opposite who, in fact, corrected me a long time ago – three years ago – when I talked about the NVQ being one thing and the City and Guilds being another. He put me right and he said, ‘No, you are wrong, they are all NVQs; it is the awarding body that is different.’

650 When the hon. mover asked me will I consider doing things other than City and Guilds, the answer was no – not because I do not want to agree with him; I explained to him we were already doing it. I said to him, ‘We are already doing the Construction Board certification, the City and Guilds certification and EAL certification, so if you ask me, “Would you consider doing more than City and Guilds?” the answer is no, I do not consider doing it, because it has been 655 going on all the time. The fact that you do not know that it is happening does not mean that I am being unco-operative or not wanting to respond to you; it is that you just do not know what you are talking about – and I cannot help that.’ (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, in trying to interpret what the hon. Member thinks is reality one can only go by what has been said previously by the mover, and one has to assume that the mover of the 660 motion is in fact continuing the same story that he told in the election campaign. I would remind the hon. Member of the radio interview he did on this subject, and in that radio interview when he was asked about the gold-plated apprenticeship he said he was very excited about it and it was about finding an academic route for young people who do not have the requisite skills to pursue vocational training in terms of craftsmanship. The core principle behind this, he says, is 665 creating opportunities for young people so that we can create sustainable jobs in plumbing, craftsmen and electricians. Well, look, these are the rubbish jobs that we are training them for now. I have just told him the number of people who are doing level 2 and level 3 in plumbing, craftsmen and electricians. It is happening. If it was not happening, then he would be entitled to say he wants me to do something that I am not doing.

670 He also said we have to look at new technologies, gaming and e-commerce. Well, look, I have said publicly ad infinitum that I welcome being approached by employers who are interested in taking on apprentices and we will provide all the support that they need. Nobody has come forward.

My Department wrote to him immediately after the elections – and you wrote back. What 675 you wrote back was to say, Mr Speaker, that he could not tell us the names of the people who were crying out desperately for the apprentices. I said, ‘Okay, well don’t tell me their names. Go back and tell them that this offer is an open-doors policy. I want to welcome them and I want to give them all these apprentices they are crying out for.’ Well, clearly they prefer to carry on crying but they will not come forward. (Laughter) Clearly they are so committed to the GSD that 680 they are willing to spend an eternity waiting for the miracle to happen when they come into Government so that they can stop crying and get their apprentices. I do not believe it. I think he is making it up. (Banging on desks and interjections) I do not think there are people out there, because if I was an employer – and I hope that there are employers listening to me – then I have to tell them you do not need to wait for Mr Phillips to be in Government to come forward. Come 685 and see me and I will give you all the support and all that you need, because if you wait for Mr Phillips all your businesses will be out of date and we will then have to be looking for the new businesses that the Leader of the Opposition says we should be looking at, because that is how long it will take.

690 Is it that apprenticeships for nursing careers, which he does not mention, is something not worthwhile? Does he not know that we have got now degree courses for staff nurses and that we have reintroduced enrolled nurses? (Interjection) No, not the degree courses. They did not exist, because they have happened in the middle of our time. We started doing something else, diploma courses, and now they are degree courses. But we have reintroduced enrolled nurses, which they abolished, and the system we put in place means that we have been training people who were unqualified. We trained them first by employing them through the Training Company and they did on-the-job training to become nursing assistants, and then, following that, they have gone into an 18-month training which gives them up to NVQ level 3 and they become enrolled nurses. After that, they still have, as a result of the NVQ level 3, an opportunity to go into the grade of staff nurse and get a degree, even though they were the people who did not have the opportunity of going to university. These are the people who did not have the A-levels and who could not go to university, and now we have found a route that gets them up to NVQ level 3 and opens up an opportunity for them – after they have trained as an enrolled nurse, after they have been working – to enhance their skills further and get something that was out of reach before.

Is that not something worth supporting and is that not an opportunity for those people who fall behind, ensuring they get an opportunity to get quality skills? Or do we have to carry on increasing the number of frontier workers in our Care Agency and in our hospital, which, if we had a hard Brexit and a problem at the frontier will lead to the collapse of our medical services and our social and care services because of the level of dependence created in the last 15 years which was not there in 1996? And they are going to lecture us!

I suppose he does not know it. I suppose he does not know what happened in those years, but if he wants to be honest then he should make it his job to see whether what we can be criticised for compares favourably or not with the track record of the party he has chosen to join. I know it is quite possible that when the party he has chosen to join was in office he was criticising it as PDP and the leader was criticising it as the Labour Party, (Interjection) but they have got to understand that they were right when they were criticising it and now they are wrong when they are defending it. (Interjection) They were right when they were criticising it. (Laughter) He was wrong to have left the GSLP and form his own party – that we all agree. (Laughter) But for as long as he was still a Labour opposition wanting to get rid of the GSD more than I did, according to him – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) As long as that was the case, then I think he was on the right track. I think when the love affair started then I am afraid it was all lost. (Interjections by Hon. D A Feetham and Hon. Chief Minister)

Mr Speaker, the jobs that have been created in our economy and the growth in our economy are important statistics, not because it is the inevitable consequence of the training, because the training is only a part of it, but because the hon. Member says without quality training we will not be able to develop the economy and produce economic growth. Well, look, we are growing at 7.5% - we are actually growing a bit faster than China now. What is it we need to do in quality training to break the speed of sound at the speed he wants us to grow? In the four years from 2007 to 2011 the private sector grew by 1,339 jobs, which was considered a magnificent achievement by the GSD in government. In opposition, the GSD rubbish a four-year growth of 3,110 jobs in the private sector. (Laughter) So we grow by two and a half times as much, which was a miracle – so ours is 2.5 miracles, which is rubbish. (Laughter)

How can he expect me to take him seriously and accept the hand of friendship? I am likely to get it bitten off! (Laughter)

Inferior qualifications: if the hon. Member is able to identify the skills that he says exist ... because I accept the version of the Leader of the Opposition that there will be skills that will be needed in future, and we do not know what they are now but it is clear that the technology-driven global economy, if capitalism continues to survive, which is a big if but assuming that it still does, (Interjection and laughter) then Gibraltar's own economy will have to adapt to that. But let us look at what is the nature of the economy we have got today and let us be realistic in what we can deliver, and if we are not doing enough of it the Opposition is perfectly entitled to criticise us for it. And if they think that they can put forward proposals – specific, identifiable proposals that we have not thought of – I will welcome that and I am happy to give them the 745 credit for doing it. So what? What is wrong in accepting that they might have thought of something that we have not thought of? But it has got to make sense and it has to be done with the private sector.

I gave the example. When I answered the hon. Lady's question in the previous session I explained to her what we had done with the bus drivers as an example – the coach drivers. The industry was concerned that there were a greater number of cruise liner calls planned and that the cruise liners had only agreed to come here on the basis that we could guarantee that there would be coaches and coach drivers. The industry was interested in having resident coach drivers, because it is no good having the cruise liners having the coaches and the drivers on the other side because on that particular day the guy got out the wrong side of the bed and was stopping everybody, so they preferred to have local people. In order to do that, we funded the training of people who had normal driving licenses and were unemployed and who were willing to take on this job. And then we went one further: in order to make it possible for what is a seasonal trade and therefore not very attractive – that is to say it was not attractive because there was no guarantee of a job all the year round ... But by the definition of the hon. Member what we have done is retrained unemployed people and put them into dead-end jobs, because if you are a coach driver, even though the dead-end job pays £10 an hour, which is quite a good rate for the private sector, it is not a job where you get promoted from bus driver to anything else – you are a coach driver, you do the Rock tour and you explain the tourist side to the tourists. That is an industry that we want, that is an industry that they support and that we support, and we invested public money in making sure that those jobs which were not previously attractive to Gibraltarians were made attractive, and we used the EU funding – which I am trying to use up before it disappears, as Members will understand – to provide funding that will enable people to be given two-year contracts. Therefore, people who were previously not even interested in being given a job on the basis that they were called when the liner arrived and then laid off when the liner left – for reasons that are very understandable because they would say to me, 'Well, look, Joe, if I take this job I may make a few hundred pounds in a couple of days but I may miss the opportunity of a regular job by coming off the unemployment list' ... So now we are giving them, by agreement with all the industry, all the employers in the industry ... and although they gave me the credit for it I have publicly said no, the credit goes to them because I responded to what was their initiative. That is something that I think is important that the private sector should be aware of: that we have got an open mind and an open job policy and we will respond. But they have to come to us and convince us. They have got to produce a business plan that shows that we are not throwing away public money, that we are investing public money in something which in effect will regenerate itself because the activity that is now happening as a result of having trained 58 otherwise unemployed people to do the coach driving means that now that money stays in the Gibraltar economy. Before, it would have been vulnerable to Frontier problems. It could have cost us people taking us off a list of reliable cruise ports, and therefore it is an investment that we made. That is the kind of things that makes us ... We do not say, 'Who wants to be a coach driver?' We will wait until there is a secure, gold-plated, lifelong job and meanwhile we will keep the guy unemployed.

785 This is what the motion is talking about. The motion and the things that the hon. Member said when he was interviewed ... When he was interviewed in that radio interview he kept on about the nature of the work. I quoted the bit about the craftsmen. He said that the Government should get the private sector to take on apprentices and that the employers would get top-up grants to reach the minimum wage. Doesn't he know that what he was proposing in his manifesto and in his election campaign is less than what we are already doing? We are asking the employers not to pay anything. We pay the minimum wage, 100%. Doesn't he understand that quite apart from the fact that the people who are training now are getting over £1,000 a month and that in the GSD they were getting between £150 and £280, doesn't he understand the fact that in Germany an apprentice gets €632 euros and in Gibraltar he gets €1,200 euros a month must mean that we are making it much more attractive for unemployed people to go down the route. We are actually rewarding those who wish to learn at a level that nobody has ever done before in Gibraltar and nobody is doing anywhere else in Europe? Nobody has ever done it before us and nobody is doing it now, currently, anywhere else. That shows the level to which we are committed to attracting people, to persuading people that they should take on learning, because in many cases the minimum wage is what is being paid in the private sector for 60% of the jobs and we are saying to people you do not have to choose between working as a labourer for £6.28 or being an apprentice for £3, because you will get your £6.28 by being an apprentice, and then when you have learned, you are getting paid the same as a labourer while you are learning, and then when you have learned you will be able to get £7.50 or £8 in the industry. That is the difference that there is. That is what a craftsman gets, that is what a carpenter or a painter or a bricky gets in the private sector, about £8 an hour.

This is not a wonderful job that you have got to go forward to, so when the hon. Member said in that interview that instead of going to the UK to do a degree, what they would do would be to persuade people that an apprenticeship is as good as going to university, he was asked by the interviewer, 'Do you really think people will take it up?' and he said, 'No, I do not.' Even he did not have confidence in his alternative, and the reality is why should people take up the job if it is a question simply of wanting ... You have got the choice of going to university. The prospect of coming back and getting more than the minimum wage is guaranteed if you come back with a degree. The fact that you then become a craftsman in the trades that he mentioned will not get you anywhere near those rates of pay. That is the reality. Even if you do the level 3, which allows you to be a chargehand, if we trained everybody to level three there would not be enough chargehand jobs for all of them.

So it is not that we are doing less training or less quality training because that is our policy and theirs is different; it is that we are doing what the market requires. There is no deficit in terms of the market, other than the deficit between the demands of the market and the resident workforce, and that deficit is both numerical and in skills. It is numerical because we have got 26,000 jobs in our economy and a population of 31,000. At the rate we are going there will be more workers than the population. Obviously, the skills requirement of the economy requires numbers that we do not have and requires skills that we do not have, but the bulk are in areas where the level of skills required is not that high but those jobs are not attractive. If people have to choose between working in catering, which has got unsocial hours for which no payment is made and weekends for which no payment is made because that is the way the industry ... If the industry has to pay a different kind of pay structure for resident workers than what they have to pay for imported workers, they will not employ the resident workers.

When we had the situation under the GSD where people did not want to join the construction industry, which was the original explanation for the low intake into the construction industry, the position changed in 2010, as I have explained to members previously. In 2010 the Government took the view that there was a reluctance on the part of the private sector to employ local people and a reluctance on the part of the construction company to employ local people and to accept them when they came out of the Training Centre, and the way they addressed that reluctance was by saying, 'Well, if you work for the Government then you will be required to be on the approved contractor list, you will be required to give priority to the people we send you from the unemployment list,' something I supported when I was in opposition and something that we have continued doing in Government. And, in fact, recently, in conjunction with my colleague the former Minister for Employment, we have extended that beyond the areas where it was before, which was construction, security and cleaning, and we are now extending it to everybody who has got a Government contract and is supplying a service, so that we can then have more opportunities. But that does not mean that we have got enough workers to replace all the important labour force. We would need to have a population of 60,000 to be able to do that. We may get there one day, but we are a long way off.

So the position is that we are trying to get a situation where not only do we want to have unemployment well below 300 but we want the employees that we get employed to get an

850 opportunity to move up the scale in terms of the available jobs in the private sector – but they must be jobs that exist, and therefore we monitor what we found in employment and the next thing we do is we monitor the vacancies. If I say to the hon. Member the average number of vacancies is 200 a week. Fifty a week come with the person to fill the job already identified and selected by the employer. Of the 150 that remain, something like 125 are on the minimum wage, £6.28, which is already paid to the apprentice, and most of them are in areas which are in 855 the catering or construction industry. The big area that we have not been able to get into has been the gaming industry. It is not for want of trying but we have not been able to identify the kind of skills that they need where we can provide people who are capable of acquiring those skills, because the reality of it is that the biggest problem we face in Gibraltar ... and I think the failure to home in on that shows that the gap between us is bigger than the hon. Member thinks. The big problem that we have in Gibraltar is not that there are those who want or do not 860 want to go to university; it is that there are people who come out who, if nothing is done for them, finish up in what has been used in the United Kingdom and in other places in Europe as NEETs, which is that they are not in employment or training or receiving education. That category, which are the people who come out without paper qualifications and are in a situation where we have to concentrate in that area.

865 This is why when we started looking at the training programme that we are doing, what we have done is not to lower the quality, because the quality is the quality of the body that gives the qualifications, but to look at the problems that our people have. And there is a serious problem that we have got where when they go from level 1 to level 2 they have to be doing it at work. This is not something they do in the Training Centre; they are away from the Training 870 Centre. The people from the Training Centre visit them on the sites and they have to build up a portfolio. The guy may have no problem in building a cavity wall – and I use the example of the cavity wall because one of the things that has kept bricklayers in training for four or five years was the fact that part of the requirement was that the trainer, the lecturer, the person doing the assessment, had to go on a building site and see a cavity wall being built. It was not accepted 875 that the cavity wall should be built in the Training Centre. Somebody somewhere in Gibraltar has to have a cavity wall. So the guy had completed everything in his portfolio, he had done everything he needed to do, but he could not get the papers as a level 2 craftsman until we found a cavity wall for him. But having found a cavity wall, he then has to put in the portfolio the description of what he has done. This requires a level of command of the English language even I 880 or Members opposite might not have in actually writing out everything. I can tell the hon.
Member that that is a real and a serious problem, and we are producing people who have got a problem in passing the element of the portfolio, the academic part of it, when they are actually totally, totally competent in doing the physical work. I think that is discriminatory against our own people, because if somebody has got some problem in describing in English what he has 885 actually done, the Portuguese construction workers, the Rumanian construction workers, the Polish construction workers, the Spanish construction workers, all of whom are building in Gibraltar, none of them will get the NVQ, none of them, if they have to do the portfolio to get it.
But of course nobody gives them a portfolio when they go to the building site, somebody gives them a brick, the cement and the mortar and says go and build a brick wall.

890 So we have to look at having a situation where testing the skills is something that is important, because we want our people not to be disadvantaged. We want them to do those jobs if they are prepared to do them. We want to encourage them to do it. We want to make it financially attractive to do it by paying them the minimum wage, and then we want to resolve the problems that they have. And all the time we are looking at how we can get round this 895 problem. We have agreed with the union that we need to be looking at local qualifications in a way of meeting this or doing something that enables the people who are otherwise held back by ... Some kids who come out of school at 15 come to the Training Centre and say, 'I don't want to be here as if I am back in school. I did not want to stay in school and this is not what I want. I want to get my hands dirty. This is what I want to do – I want real work.'

900 Everything that is taking place outside Gibraltar, the hon. Member has argued that he has been ... In the election he said he had done a lot to look to the UK and that he was going to follow what the UK was doing. Well, I am not sure that he has looked at what the UK is doing, because what the UK is doing is closer to what we are doing than to what he is saying. No? Well, Mr Speaker, I can tell him that in England – because there is not even a system in the whole of 905 the UK; England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland have each got their own system – and in England, the new apprenticeship schemes provide that there is no mandatory requirement for qualifications. Apprenticeships are no longer defined by qualifications, as there are no mandatory requirements. They have moved to a position where there is an end assessment when they assess the skills, and this is the new scheme that has come in in 2015-16 and is due to 910 be completed by 2020. Scotland is carrying on with the previous scheme that they have with their own qualifications, and Wales and Northern Ireland have not yet decided whether they are going to follow England or follow Scotland.

So he says he has done all this research – well, look, I have done the research and the people who are employed in the Ministry in the training area have done their research and they try and 915 keep abreast of what other people are doing. We adapt it to what Gibraltar's needs are, because we find, for example, that if you have got a situation where the qualification is that they want to do an NVQ in plumbing, you cannot find an NVQ in plumbing because in the UK the NVQ is plumbing and central heating. So what do you do? Do you train people for central heating that they are never going to use? If they fail the central heating, they do not get the plumbing. We 920 have got to be in a situation where we are able to meet the demands of the private sector of Gibraltar to ensure that our unemployment is not the result of our people having a deficit of the skills that are required. The skills that are required are not the ones invented by the Member opposite. The skills that are required are the ones reflected in the vacancies opened by the employer. The employer comes to the ETB and says, 'I want somebody with this skill,' and either 925 we are able to provide it or we are not.

So I am afraid that the hon. Member does not know what he is talking about. He did not know it when he was talking about it in the election campaign and he has not learnt anything since, and even when he comes to this House and puts questions and I give him the answers, he then goes on his webpage and puts the opposite. When I told him, in answer to a number of 930 questions that he put to me earlier this year, that I could not agree with the analysis that he said that we had to provide quality skills because he did not tell me what the quality skills were and he did not tell me where they came from, what did he do? He went on to say that we were not prepared to co-operate, that we are not prepared to create modern-day apprenticeships and the alternative training for technical skills. Well, look, what he is saying is not true. It is not true 935 on the website, it is not true in the Parliament and it is not true in the election campaign. So how can he say that he is coming here hoping that we can work together in accepting all his fictional problems, which he claims we do not want to solve? Where are all these people who are crying out for apprenticeships? Why is it that, having told us that they exist and having been asked by me to contact them, not one single person has materialised, not one? Where are they? We have 940 met with the Chamber of Commerce, we have met with the GFSB, we have told them to come forward – nobody comes. So how can the hon. Member keep on saying the same thing that he was saying then, when it is not possible to believe him?

I am telling him that the crying need for apprenticeships from the private sector is a fiction of his imagination and therefore we will not support it, and I am telling the Opposition that, as far 945 as I am concerned, the version of what the motion was about produced by the Leader of the Opposition is something that is acceptable to me and is acceptable to me that in future there will be jobs which require skills that do not exist now because the jobs do not exist now, and that we need to be in a position, when that time comes, to be ready for it. But we do not know what they are going to be and we do not know now, even with less certainty than we might have 950 known before the Referendum, because we really do not know what is the direction in which

that have got to take place over the next three years. Certainly, if there was tomorrow somebody new coming to Gibraltar, I can tell him that there is one particular entity that has come to see me – one – with a proposal which may or may not materialise because, as I have pointed out before, there have been many false dawns with many, many people, but this particular entity wants to come to do a business in Gibraltar which I think is very attractive. It has to do with the maritime industry. They are willing to take on apprentices, they are willing to take them to Scotland to do training in diving, which is what the work will involve, and we have already got an agreement with them that if they proceed with that we will be funding the training and we have already identified 28 people who have expressed an interest if it materialises.

I do not like announcing things. I do not announce them before I do them and I do not announce them after I have done them. I am just telling him to make him understand that if he is genuine about what he is saying, it is not that we are not constantly on the lookout for opportunities that bring new industries and help to diversify our economy and help, preferably, to bring industries, income and employment which is not frontier sensitive. So, if we can get people here who are going to be using Gibraltar as a base for a completely new industry that we do not have at the moment and are willing to – they will have to bring some people in initially, but are willing – to give us the opportunity of providing local people to be trained, we are happy to do that.

For all those reasons, Mr Speaker, I cannot accept that this motion is an attempt to create a cross-party understanding on the basis that we are equally committed to providing skills and providing employment for our people, but in fact a censure of my performance as the person who has been responsible for training since December 2011. It cannot be interpreted in any other way. The hon. Member is entitled to go to an election and censure me and the electorate is the judge of whether they accept that he would do a better job than me or they put me back to do the better job. Therefore, as far as I am concerned, this is what I said to people in the election campaign and this is what I have to deliver, because this is what I asked them to vote for. I did not ask them to vote for his promised manifesto which never materialised, on which they were working at the time. Just to put a picture of Rooke and say this is where the new centre is going to be and this is what everybody is going to be doing [Inaudible] When he was interviewed and he was asked what it consisted of, he said, 'Well, no, we do not know yet what it is,' and when it is a year later in his web page he still does not know what it is. Those are his very words. He says, 'We will have to talk to the unions, we will have to talk to the business community and then we will have to find out exactly what it is.' Well, fine, talk to the unions, talk to the business community, and when you have found out what it is come and tell me and you can take the credit for it, but at the moment all that you tell me is that there is a skills shortage and we are on the cliff. Well, look, we cannot have been on the edge of the cliff last October and we are still on the edge of the cliff now and there is no chance of us going over the cliff. What does it mean to be over the cliff? What does it mean? The collapse of the economy? Is he seriously telling me that the economy that we have got to emulate is the one in the United Kingdom that grows by 1.8% because they are doing things that are making them grow at 1.8% and we are doing all the wrong things and we are growing at 7.5%?

In those circumstances I am afraid I am not going to be able to vote in support of the motion. Therefore, Mr Speaker, I will move an amendment to the motion, which, as you would expect, will delete all the words after the words 'This House'. (Laughter)

I therefore beg to move, Mr Speaker, an amendment to the motion by deleting all the words after the words 'This House' and replacing them with the following:

notes that the skills deficit which existed in 2011 was identified by the Government's skills audit in 2012, which audit has been instrumental in determining the provision of craft apprentice and vocational training and resulted in a huge reduction in the levels of unemployment between 2011 and 2015; welcomes that the Government, in the 2015 General

Election, renewed its commitment to continue with its programme of craft apprentice and vocational training to deliver the strategy of training for employment which is in line with the criteria used in employer-based training in England and in the European Union; congratulates the Government for its commitment to provide craft apprentice and vocational training and reduce unemployment; and calls on private sector employers to co-operate with the Government by providing craft apprentice and vocational training job offers in order to further expand the scope of the training programme and increase the opportunities for residents seeking employment.

1000 That, Mr Speaker, is the purpose of the exercise. The purpose of the exercise is getting people into jobs. Therefore, it is obvious that the hon. Members opposite know and understand this, because they change the speech. The speech changes from the level of unemployment to the level of dead-end jobs. That is to say if you are an unemployed labourer and we train you to be a craftsman, you are in a dead-end job. Well, look, you are in as dead-end a job as a craftsman as you were as a labourer, except that it is a job that earns more money. But if the 1005 hon. Member thinks that he should encourage the people of Gibraltar, the people who come out of school, that it is possible for him in Government to do something that nobody ever has done in Gibraltar, which is to guarantee that nobody will have a dead-end job, well, we are all going to be managers managing other people who will do all the work. What does he mean by a dead-end job? Does the hon. Member not understand that the issue is not whether the job is dead 1010 end or not dead end, but whether you have got a job or you have not got one? And under them they did not have a job!

Therefore we are committed to a policy that is training for employment, not training for unemployment. Again, Mr Speaker, it is something that has to be understood in the context of the limitations that Gibraltar has. In the United Kingdom, and indeed in the European Union, the 1015 philosophy is that you train people. This is why in the European Union the freedom of movement of workers is such an important issue, because as far as the European Union is concerned there is a single labour market and you can be trained to be an electrician in La Linea and if there is no work you finish up in Barcelona, and you can be trained to be an electrician in the north of England and if there is no work you come to London. But in Gibraltar, if there is no 1020 work there is no work – period. We are training for a labour market of 26,000 jobs and all that we can do is monitor those jobs and try and train our people for the jobs that look most effective in terms of the income that they generate. But the bulk of the jobs that are out there are jobs on the minimum wage and those are the jobs that our people prefer not to do, and the skills that we provide for them ... And we provide retraining opportunities even for people who
1025 are in employment so that they can be upskilled. We give people the opportunity of bringing to the Training Centre a portfolio of the work that they do and then they can be assessed, and based on the prior learning that they have had on what they have learned at work they can be regraded. We do that as well, so it is not just limited to the unemployed. We give the opportunity to those even in employment because by increasing the skills set within the 1030 community we are increasing the potential for income generation, and income generation is what increases the GDP. But of course it can only happen if there is an employer willing to pay for those skills. If the employer does not exist, the skills are meaningless in terms of economic activity and in terms of the opportunity we are giving to those who are affected.

Therefore, Mr Speaker, I think that, without a doubt, what the hon. Member claims he wants 1035 to see happening in Gibraltar can only happen if, instead of trying to use this as a political weapon with which to criticise the present administration Lips, he actually does what he claims to be wanting to do, which is to say, 'I am aware of an area of the economy or a group of employers that are desperate for trainees, desperate for apprentices, but they have not gone to see you, they do not want to see you, but they have provided me with the information and I will 1040 provide you with it.' Unless and until he produces somebody who comes forward and demonstrates that that need is there and is there today, then I am afraid he is not going to convince me that there is something that I am not doing which can be done, because until there is an employer willing to commit himself to employing the trainee we are not going to be training people for something that does not exist.

1045 I commend the amendment to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The position now is that all hon. Members may speak on the amendment.
The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

1050 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

May I, for the sake of clarity, come back to a couple of things because other Members present may not be as updated as the Father of the House and I are on this issue.

We are talking about NVQ levels 1, 2 and 3 and so on. Can I make it clear to those Members in the Chamber and those listening behind the Speaker's Chair that in the traditional construction trades everyone starts off training with level 1 and you achieve a recognised qualified craftsman by attaining level 2. However, in the engineering trades – that is those that the Father of the House actually listed as being the mechanical trades, the welders, the fabricators and the electrical trades – there, the level 1 is much, much shorter than level 1 is in the constructions trades, level 2 makes you a quasi-craftsman, but the official recognised craftsman level is the attainment of level 3. There is a bit of confusion for those not acquainted with this sort of education terminology. Of course, the Father is correct in saying that in the construction trades level 3 is what is normally accepted as a chargehand or foreman type of qualification. I do not think we are miles apart, but certainly where the craftsman has the ability I would encourage them to complete level 3 in the same way that as educators we always encourage people who have attained a certain professional qualification to carry on and attain more; otherwise, the Government and the Opposition would not be supporting those who, for example, go on and do a Master's degree. It does not make you a better or worse lawyer if you have simply a Bachelor's in law or a Master's in law, but certainly the higher the qualification the better the academic background the individual has.

1070 Mr Speaker, I want to clarify as well that the accreditation of what the Minister referred to as enrolled nurses via the NVQ route is something that I think – in case he was not sure – has always been supported by this side of the House. In fact, I can vouch for it because I was the holder of the budget between 2000 and 2003. When I was accountable for training funds for the Department of Education, we were actually contributing funds towards helping the GHA. They already had some individuals undergoing NVQs and funding was required, because one of the problems with NVQs is that not only do you need an instructor who delivers that, but you then need to have an assessor and an internal verifier – all these terminologies that will just bore Members, but like the Minister and I know, at the end of the day it is just a money-drawing machine. But certainly, although we are supportive of that NVQ route for those who are not academically minded to follow the degree course ... we are supportive, but I hope the Minister recognises that they were in existence during my party's time in government as well.

1075
1085
1090 The part that perhaps the Minister may not have been briefed on 100% by those involved in the Employment Ministry and so on is that yes, it is true that the apprentice, in order to obtain an NVQ level 2 or level 3 – but let's keep to level 2 – in the craftsman trade had to produce a portfolio. The bulk of the portfolio is actually photographic evidence with very, very small captions. It is the instructor and the verifier who have a longer piece of writing to do, and especially those who do not have the academic ability to be able to read and write properly may even ... the same as I am sure Steven Linares can vouch for me, you can even use a scribe to sit down and do a GCSE exam if you have certain difficulties. For example, a person whose vision is poor can actually do an exam like in an oral basis. So I would urge the Minister, because I know his heart is in the right place ... We can have scribes. (Interjection) Yes, especially I am thinking of teachers who have community care hours to do – they can certainly act as scribes in the Training Centre.

1095 The Minister is right: I did try a few years ago to introduce a certain level of basic numeracy and literacy skills among these apprentices. Certainly numeracy skills come to mind – for example, those who are carpenters, who measure, and they say this is 12 cms, 30 cms and 12 cms, but they need to have at least the basic skill to be able to add that that equals 54 cms.
But there is nothing wrong in having a scribe in that, and as long as they are able to speak, if at least become a little bit articulate, then the handwriting does not have to be good, because 1100 typed out papers are acceptable and it is totally acceptable to be done within any length of time.
It is not like a GCSE exam where you are given one and a half hours. You can actually have someone doing the typing for you if the correct notification is given to the examination board.
So these are areas, Mr Speaker, that I know the Minister will take to heart and proceed on.

I do not know who guided the Minister, but an NVQ level 4 is not equivalent or anywhere 1105 near an honours degree, Mr Speaker. There is a particular chart – I know I had it in my office in the Department of Education and Training. It is more akin to an HND type of equivalent. And again, if someone can obtain the level 4, they certainly receive my wholehearted support. Why?
Because one of the areas that perhaps we can identify as emerging skills – and the Minister already used the words, ‘How can I identify, how can I know what are going to be the emerging 1110 needs of the community?’ ... Well, look, Mr Speaker, one of the exercises, if I may humbly recommend to him, is let’s look at our current work force – let’s say the Housing Works Agency.
Those who are 50 years of age have five years after in they are going to start to count pounds, shilling and pence, as we used to call it, and say, ‘Is it worth my while leaving at age 55, or not?’
and they might leave vacancies which we want to be filled up not only by qualified people but by 1115 qualified and experienced people. I think here the Minister and I both sing off the same hymn sheet. One thing is to have a piece of paper saying you have this level of qualification; another thing is what you learn in the street. The University of Gibraltar is fantastic, but the university of the workplace is at times equally as good, if not even better. It shows you all the little tricks of the trade and so on. I believe – well, I can virtually vouch for it – that at the moment within the 1120 Housing Works Agency we have great craftsmen who have over the years achieved positions of clerks of work, estimators and so on, and that is something that the Training Centre itself ... no matter how good the instructors there are, they can never teach that. That will be taught in the actual workplace.

So, in the same manner that the Minister is trying to say that he would like the private sector 1125 to be supportive of apprentices and so on, I think we should lead a bit by example and maybe both sides of this House can actually ask the Government-owned companies to be leaders as well in taking on apprentices and so on. I believe the Housing Works Agency have had apprentices learning with them, but I am talking now beyond the level 2 and the level 3. The estimators, the clerks of works and so on should also be equally encouraged to do that, 1130 Mr Speaker.

I am surprised, because I know the Hon. the Father of the House is always in love with producing tables, statistics and so on, and I have never ever been able to get quite in one sitting all the correct information that I want to have. I do not know why. Maybe those who have held the portfolio of Minister for Education have always been able to provide, deducting from 1135 questions, how many trainees do we have, when did they start, when did they finish, what accreditation did they achieve – some sort of simple type of chart that has columns at the top.
For example, if I base myself on Question 684, it has columns at the top 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015 and 2016 and then a list of trades: carpenters, how many started level 1, how many started whatever level, how many actually completed and on what date did they complete that level.
1140 Although I am grateful that the Minister said at present in 2016 there are six individuals working towards level 2 in carpentry, I am none the wiser what has happened in the previous four years, how many started, how many completed, how many gave up after level 1 and so on.

I may have missed it, but I do not think I have got anyone down at all in the engineering trades other than in level 3, and I do not have anyone in the construction trades other than in 1145 level 2, other than the Minister making a reference that he was about to take on a 2016 intake

1150 where what they do is they do that initial basic health and safety ... I think it is to do with the multi-trades so that they are able to get a flavour and then they move on to that. If that is going to lead towards quality training, then at a personal level I can be supportive of him. But let's make sure that people who take on these trades take it on because they want to be fruitful in what they do and they take pride behind the job, and that they are not misled under the conception that they once got, where I have had more than one person telling me that in 2011 they were sold an idea by today's Father of the House that if they attended the Training Centre and completed this course they would actually end up in a Government job. That perception seems to still be alive. I know it could be many moons ago – over five years ago – but, like I say, 1155 mud sticks, so that is perhaps something that the hon. Member has to look forward to and spell out clearly. (Interjection) Yes, I will give way.

Hon. J J Bossano: Let me assure him that everybody who comes in is told that that is not the case before they start. So, once they have started they cannot be ... They might be under a 1160 misapprehension before they arrive, but once they arrive I go to talk to them and I make it absolutely clear that we are training for jobs in the private sector.

In terms of whether somebody wants to be a plumber, in fact we give them their first choice of ... We ask them first which they would like. If we are only able to take in eight people for plumbing and there are nine, then they are given the choice of either doing something else or 1165 waiting for the next intake. But we assume that if they express an interest in being in one area they are more likely to do better at it than if they are forced into something else. It is also the case ... I do not know if it was happening in their time, but some people studying one subject then change their mind, and at an early enough stage, because it is multi-trade, they are able to switch.

1170 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, it is something that has happened from time immemorial, even when Her Majesty's Dockyard was in existence you did an entry exam and according to the ratings those were the first ones that went and you chose a trade. If you were candidate 11 and you wanted to be an electrician and there were only 10 vacancies available and they had all gone, 1175 then tough.

But again, Mr Speaker, looking at the figures, and unless the numbers of instructors have changed drastically from the information provided a couple of years ago, I know that the instructor plumber retired and they were training another one, and I believe the Minister told me that in September this year he was supposed more or less to complete the course. But we 1180 will leave that question until January.

In the others, in carpentry there is more than one instructor and there are only six apprentices there. In painting there are two instructors and only two apprentices, so that is a ratio of 1:1, which every school teacher would love and give half their salary for. But anyway, that is beyond the Minister's control as well; it is up to an individual what he wants to do.

1185 My contribution to that was let's open our minds as well and not just think of today's need but the emerging need, if I can go back to that, as well, because if one looks at what Government's programme has been of late ... and what they are saying is going to continue happening is more co-ownership housing projects and so on after the period of which ... Let's take Beach View Terraces at the moment: after that period when there is still a certain warranty 1190 and defects have to be made right, the management company is going to have to assume the general repairs, maintenance and so on. I would really love it for the management company to be able to have local resident workers that they can call upon who would produce good quality work to carry out the repairs in a good, competitive, economic price. I live in a co-ownership estate, and most of the work that has been engaged by the management company does not 1195 happen to be local resident labourers and that is something that I think we should all work together to avoid in the future.

1200 The future is there, the jobs are there, certainly emerging quite soon, and if the other housing projects take place then there is going to be a great demand. So, in the same way that we invest heavily in GCSEs and A-levels to produce the doctors we are going to need for the future, let's do likewise in these grades because they are as honourable a working trade as whether one is a lawyer or a humble teacher like us, Mr Speaker.

1205 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I just wanted to add that I completely agree with what the hon. Gentleman says. I do not want to get into the whole debate, but it is important to understand that what I have tried to do, for example, in GCS where we have a core of young people who are now maintenance workers and they have actually qualified for that, there is a handyman's qualification where they do a little bit of everything – electricity, plumbing, masonry – and they become what we call a manita, a person who is able to do maintenance, and that is a qualification which has an NVQ and there are levels 1, 2 and 3. Those young people who are now 1210 in employment and doing that, so these are very meaningful jobs and this is what we have been trying to do, and we are doing it. Therefore, anybody who is employed now or who wants to do those courses will have the prospect of getting other jobs. So I completely agree, but my emphasis is that it has been happening since 2012 onwards. There are employees, for example, in Kings Bastion now who also get employed as handymen, or women – because there are a few 1215 as well – and then, as employers we send them to train so that they do have a qualification at the end of the day. So it is not only that they are employed to do things; they have the opportunity to become qualified, because ultimately some other private sector management company in the estate that the hon. Member has mentioned wants a person to be able to do a little bit of everything, and with that qualification they might want to get employment there because they get more wages than what they have been getting.

So it is happening and those are very meaningful jobs. That is why I cannot understand either the motion, because there are many, many areas in which I know that the hon. Member, the Father of the House ... I send all the jobs that I need for GSLA, for Kings Bastion, for GCS to him and he sends me young people who want to work and then we do the training with them. So it is 1225 happening. I completely agree with him that this is what we have been doing and this is exactly what these qualifications will do for them, and they are very meaningful.

Mr Speaker: Any other contributor to the debate?

1230 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, very briefly on the amended motion. The Hon. the Father of the House is not one to blow his own trumpet at the best of times, but I have to say that on this particular occasion on the amended motion he has exceeded himself. He realises that it is not possible for us to support what is this blatant ... Well, I was going to call it brilliant; I am not sure that it is brilliant, because it is just a blatant piece of propaganda starting with 'notes the skills deficit which existed in 2011 and congratulates the Government' for what they have done since 1235 2011.

In my contribution I want to make a number of observations. I have listened to the hon. Gentleman and some of what he has said – in fact, a lot of what he has said – I can relate to, and indeed some of the arguments that he has deployed today were arguments that we were 1240 deploying from the Government benches.

One of the points indeed, that I made during the debate – and the hon. Gentleman is wrong when he said the debate, when I was in the Labour Party and my learned Friend was in the PDP ... It was a debate that occurred in 2011 and it was a debate where I was representing the GSD, my learned Friend, Mr Phillips, was representing the PDP and it was Mr Licudi who was 1245 representing the other side, and that was in 2011. One of the points that I made there was that in 16 years of government the GSD had created 8,500 new jobs – total, private and public sector – and there had never been 8,500 unemployed in Gibraltar, so it was physically impossible to fill that amount of jobs just simply with locals, and it is a point in fact that he has made during the 1250 course of his own contribution today to take the sting out of the criticism – or the observation, because it was not a criticism – of my hon. Friend Mr Clinton when he said that if you looked at the employment survey there had been a very low number of Gibraltarians who had taken up jobs within a particular sector.

1255 I think there are three separate strands. I am trying to characterise it as fairly as possible. I am going to just characterise as well our criticism and, I think, the wider community's criticism of the hon. Gentleman's strategy. I think there are three separate strands to this.

1260 The first, rightly, is a strategy of the hon. Gentleman – which I have described and he has agreed with my description – which starts from the skills survey that was done in 2012: let's see what are the jobs, what are the nationalities and let's try and get Gibraltarians into those jobs. That is a valid strategy and I accept that it is a valid strategy, but it is not a valid strategy to just simply look at in isolation. In other words, it needs other things to the strategy, and the weakness, I think, in the hon. Gentleman's strategy has been in taking it too far. That is my own personal view of the strategy, because if you look at the Job Strategy, for example, from its manifesto conception, where it said a training scheme of up to two years, it went from two years to one year, to three months and sometimes less than three months. The criticism that can be reasonably and, I think, credibly labelled in terms of training – not in terms of putting people into jobs; in terms of training – is what can somebody learn in three months. I think that where one can criticise the Government is in an over-focus on the statistics – in other words, getting those Gibraltarians into those jobs occupied by Spaniards, or whatever, which I believe is a valid objective, but to the exclusion of the real training, which is the point that is being made by my learned and hon. Friend, Mr Phillips.

1270 And I come to the second, because you need a second strand, and if you then look, in terms of the second strand, at the training, the intakes – to illustrate my point – into I think it was the Construction and Training Centre and the other Training Centre over the last five years, the new intakes have been one in the year ending 2012, three in the year ending 2013, 11 in the year ending 2014, 26 in the General Election year ending 2015, and 12 in 2016 in the year so far. I think those are low numbers and I think the Government needs to invest more time and more money – and I know it costs money – into boosting those numbers, not only in the wet trades. Again, I accept that it is valid to look at the wet trades, because that is an area that is being undertaken on our construction sites throughout Gibraltar, but also in your plumbing, in your electricians, in your carpenters, and we need to boost the numbers. I think that if one looks at the criticism that is being made by Unite, the criticism that is being made by the Chamber of Commerce, I think it is a reflection of the low numbers – and I am just quoting from the intakes – and therefore what I would urge the Government to do is to examine that and to see whether the numbers can be boosted in terms of intakes into those craftsmen, if I can call it that, craftsmen jobs. Because worthy as the matching Gibraltarians with jobs is, what we have got to also do is ... that those Gibraltarians, or some of them, have the skills that are necessary that will equip them not only for today but also for the future.

1280 The third strand, Mr Speaker, is the strand that I spoke of during the course of my own intervention earlier. I am not going to repeat it, but I think that the hon. Gentleman underestimates the importance of it in a Brexit situation. The hon. Gentleman I know attempts to have an eye on these things and attempts to have an eye on the future, so I was rather surprised at the way that he dismissed it at the end of his intervention. In a Brexit situation we have to ... and I realise that there are difficulties in knowing precisely where the United Kingdom is going, first of all, in relation to Brexit – that is the first question – and then, secondly, whether we are going to be able to go in the same direction as the United Kingdom. That is also an open question as well. I realise there are difficulties, but any prudent, reasonable Government and a Government that is looking towards the future has to be able to look at all the various alternatives and all the various permutations and say, 'Well, look, what is our economy going to look like in three or four years' time, and is it possible for us to do something now in order to make sure that our people are prepared and are trained for that eventuality?'

That is the approach certainly I would urge on the hon. Gentleman. Those are the three strands – there may be more, and no doubt there are more strands: Gibraltarians filling those jobs; your trades training, the training that people go for one, two or three years, depending on the level that they undertake in terms of NVQ; and also looking towards the future.

1305 That is my intervention on the amended motion.

Mr Speaker: Is there any other intervention on the amendment? If not, I will ask the hon. Mr Bossano to reply. The Hon. Mr Bossano.

1310 Hon. J J Bossano: I welcome the contribution that has been made pointing out the areas on the technical side of how the NVQ problems that I have identified can be addressed. I am grateful for that and I will certainly take that on board.

Dealing with the last contribution, where the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is saying that his concern is that we may need to do more, the 26 intakes that he quoted – I do not know whether he thinks that an intake is an individual trainee. As far as I am concerned, an intake is ... For example, if we have taken in 24 trainees to do the wet trades, that is one intake made up of 24. So the intake is the number that start the course in a particular year. (Interjection) Yes. (Interjection) No. I think he mentioned that there were 26 intakes, no? The figures that he was quoting which he thought could be – (Interjection) Yes. The figures that I quoted of the intakes – the breakdown that I gave him is not 26 individuals. If I have said there are 26 intakes it means that in that financial year we had, for example, eight plumbers coming in and that is one intake, eight painters coming in and that is another intake. The intake is the class, not the number of individuals. Obviously, the hon. Member has had the number of individuals previously given to him in previous answers to questions. (Interjection) I think the question was intake and I gave him intakes; that is my understanding. (Interjection) I will give way, yes.

1320 Hon. D A Feetham: No, the question was how many people are currently undertaking level 1 NVQ. That related to people. That is why, when the hon. Gentleman came back and talked about intake, what I am assuming is that when there is one intake it is one person and three intakes is ... which struck me as very low numbers in terms of the people who are being taken on to do the NVQ level 1 in any given year.

1330 Hon. J J Bossano: The figures that I gave for the number of intakes per financial year does not show 26 in any of them. It was one in 2011-12. That is to say there was one intake between December 2011 and March 2012. That was not one person; that was one intake, one class. In 2012-13 there were three intakes. In 2013-14 there were 11 intakes. At the moment, we have got four intakes that are starting now. The four intakes this year is an intake for plumbers, an intake for carpenters, an intake for painters and an intake for the wet trades. The total number of the four, in terms of individuals, is 34 individuals. I mentioned that the numbers ... In answer to the question who is starting with level 1 this year, in level 1 this year, in this month there will be something like 34 individuals spread over four intakes, which is an intake of plumbers, an intake of carpenters and an intake of painters, which will be less than the intake of wet trades, which continues to be a larger class than the others.

1340 So I am sorry if I misled the hon. Member, but the figure is not that there have been 26 individuals, because in fact he knows, from the questions in previous meetings of the House, that we have talked about something like 190 persons or 170 people having done the level 1 and level 2 since December 2011. There could be an intake of one, but it is unlikely to be the case. We aim for an intake of eight and, as I have explained, if we have, for example, more than eight people wanting to be plumbers in the ones that have been interviewed ... I do not know, I have not been given the distribution because they are still in the process of finding out what they would like to do, but if there were nine plumbers then if there was a spare capacity in painting or carpentry they would pick the ones that they think have got the best chance of succeeding and then to the ninth person they would say, 'You have two choices: either you wait maybe for our next intake,' which could be in six months' time, 'or you can choose to not do plumbing and do something else.' At this stage it is quite an easy thing to do, actually, because the bulk of the level 1 creates a basis of skills that then they can specialise in, in level 2. And sometimes when they start doing the level 1 the people who said they wanted to do plumbing change their mind and decide they want to do painting or something else. That is what I explained when I was explaining it previously in my original contribution in support of the amendment.

I appreciate the point that the hon. Member has made, that having congratulated the Government – I have not congratulated myself, I have congratulated the Government – in the amendment and having said that there was a skills shortage then ... Well, look, I think it cannot be denied. The skills shortage that existed at the time was reflected in the skills audit. If we have got a situation where there are 100 people working in the wet trades in the construction sector and seven are Gibraltarians and 93 are imported workers – if that is not a skills deficit I do not know what you call it. I have to say to him the percentage is now better than it was then. It is nowhere near 100, because I think of the different construction trades this one is the least attractive and it is a cleaner job to be doing plumbing, painting or carpentry than to be mixing mortar and building brick walls and doing tiling and that kind of thing. But remember that the emphasis is, as I explained already and as we explain to the trainees ... We say to them, 'Look, the reality of it is that Aerial Farm has finished and 300 jobs have disappeared.' If we are talking about giving people a sustainable job – it may be a dead-end job, but it is a job that will be there – the job that will be there will be the job that was mentioned by his colleague. It will not be in the building of Aerial Farm; it will be in the maintenance of Aerial Farm. What we are trying to do is to ensure that the bulk of the permanent construction workers should be local, so that there will be people there who will be able to look to continuity of work all the year round that will not be seasonal work, particularly because something that has happened in the construction industry which created problems for us from the date that the Frontier opened has been that, by the very nature of specialisation in the construction industry, nowadays one company gets a contract to deliver a site –

1380

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I want to listen to the hon. Gentleman's contribution but there are people on the other side talking and I just cannot focus on what he is saying. I would just ask the hon. Gentlemen to give some courtesy to the Hon. the Father of the House who has the floor. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

1385

Hon. J J Bossano: I will try and speak a little bit louder.

The point that I am making is that in the nature of modern training ... We had a situation, Mr Speaker, on the Aerial Farm housing estate where the main contractor subcontracted the doors. We do not have carpenters making doors anymore. A company comes in and fits a thousand doors in the estate. Training somebody to fit doors is not a quality apprenticeship; nor is it something that we would want to do in Gibraltar, because when that estate is finished the people who come in and fit doors will have gone off somewhere else to fit doors. The industry in the United Kingdom, for example, provided training for bricklayers, but the only thing they did was lay bricks. The bricklayer would work not by the hour but by the number of bricks he would lay. A really good bricklayer would lay thousands of bricks and would have two labourers just bringing him bricks to lay and earn £1,000 a week. But of course for anybody to have a secure job laying bricks there must be an ability to move from building site to building site throughout a nation state laying bricks, which is done. There are people who are professional bricklayers, who can build brick walls blindfold. What do we have to do here? What we have to do here is produce people who will go to maintain the housing estates that we are building and those we want to be local, and there will be the people who will have to be craftsman made, skilled labourers, there will be the people who will be the skilled workers who are doing the maintenance, and there will be the people who have supervisory and managerial jobs. That

1400

1405 structure is the structure that we are trying to build now, and we are trying to build it in anticipation of where the expansion of home ownership will create permanent jobs all the year round. That means, in effect, that the construction industry will have, as I have mentioned, in ball park figures, 1,500 people who come in, build housing estates and disappear, and we have 2,000 people, which is likely to be a growing field the more housing estates that we have. What 1410 we are doing there is something that is planned, that is logical, that is based on figures.

What the hon. Member suggested was not something that we were doing in terms of concentrating too much on this, because having concentrated on this we can see what is achievable. For example, if the Sunborn says they want somebody to help in the kitchen and we are sending somebody who has never helped in a kitchen, we are not going to pay the Sunborn 1415 for three years to have somebody in the kitchen when the job can be learnt in three months.
 This is not an apprenticeship. So there are apprenticeships which lead to a qualification and there is on-the-job training which does not lead to a qualification but leads to the person who says, 'I will not take the man or lady you sent me, because they have never been in a kitchen before.' In order to remove the excuse for rejecting the local worker on the basis that he has no 1420 prior experience and no prior knowledge, we say, 'Okay, we accept that while the guy is learning the job he is not productive, not producing enough for you and may actually be a negative element in the workforce because you may have to have somebody else who is productive being interrupted to explain to the new person how the job is done, but what you cannot have is a three-year apprenticeship for somebody who is a kitchen hand.' A kitchen hand may be a dead-1425 end job. It is a dead-end job that some people who are unemployed will find attractive.
 Members will acknowledge we have had them questioning why was the take-up in the Sunborn not higher, given that they have received support from the Government. We have tried to make it higher, and the same thing applies to local companies that are willing to take people on.

So it is not that I am unwilling to listen to constructive criticism, and if it makes sense I take it 1430 on board and I am grateful for it because I do not pretend to have all the answers, Mr Speaker. I understand that it would be asking too much of the Members opposite to congratulate us in the way that the motion was, but it may be as unrealistic to expect them to vote for the amendment as it was on their part to expect me to vote for their original motion.

1435 Mr Speaker: We will now put the amendment moved by the Hon. Mr Bossano to the vote.

All in favour? (Several Members: Aye.) Those against (Several Members: No.) Carried.

Now, on the motion as amended all Members who have not spoken on the original motion may now speak, if they so wish. If no one wishes to do so, I will then ask the Hon. Elliott Phillips to exercise his right to reply. That is the position.

1440 The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for this debate because I think that it is actually much more fundamental than some of the discussions and some of the comments that have been made by hon. Members opposite.

1445 In fact, I think, starting with Minister Costa when he referred to the unemployment figures, I think he understands by a slight reprimand from the Speaker that this is not a debate about unemployment, it is not a debate about full employment, it is not about the GSD's time in office;
 what it is about is real jobs and real opportunities for young people.

I think what the motion does is try to set out the serious concerns that have been highlighted 1450 by not just the Members in this House and opposite the Government, but the unions, the Chamber of Commerce and people who campaigned outside this House. What Members opposite are trying to do is, to use Mr Isola's words, denigrate the union's views, who even this week have commented in relation to a serious skills deficit. The Members opposite can choose to ignore the unions, the Members opposite can choose to ignore the Chamber of Commerce, 1455 but at the end of the day they will choose to ignore the people outside this House who handed them all leaflets complaining about the lack of apprenticeships. They can choose to do that and they will continue to do that, but what I would say is that the intention of this motion was to show the Government that there are serious concerns about the skills deficit in our community.

1460 Minister Bossano talks to this House about me not knowing what I am talking about. I am not too sure whether he walks round Waterport Place or he walks around Europort, whether he talks to young entrepreneurs who have employees in their business, who are looking at developing Apps, looking at gaming and looking at individual programming and coding. I speak to these businesses and I speak to young men who work in these industries, and their offices are filled with Spaniards. That is the reality that he wants to talk about, that is the reality I am going 1465 to talk to him about, because when I walk into those offices and I am invited to see them, they say they have been to see him, they have been to see Minister Costa (Interjection) but there has been no reply, (Hon A J Isola: Nonsense!) they are not interested...finished!... they are not interested in the modern technologies, they are not interested in growing a workforce to feed that industry. That is a shame. I think we should all be trying to promote gaming, app development, 1470 coding – (Hon A J Isola: Gaming! Are you serious?) (Laughter) It is called gaming. It is not the traditional gaming that you are responsible for; it is another form of gaming – apps, computer games and allied services to the industry that Mr Isola, in financial services ... I think that is what we should be looking at, surely: developing our young people, giving them the opportunity to work in these industries and giving them the tools to do that.

1475 We are looking at apprenticeships, not three-month apprenticeships where we can learn a trade and then be thrown into a job where they have not got the adequate skills and the adequate training to do it. We are not talking about three months; we are talking about a three-year-long process by which these people, in partnership with business, can create apprenticeships.

1480 I commend the hon. Gentleman in relation to the maritime apprenticeships that he speaks of. I know he does not want to commit to them now because he is obviously in discussions with them, but I commend him for that. That is exactly what we should be doing: sending our young people off to get that training and to come back and work those jobs. But I walk around Gibraltar, we all walk around Gibraltar – walk up Waterport Place in the morning and see the 1485 hundreds of people flooding the buildings, who are not from our home. Surely we should be creating an opportunity for those young people in our community who do not go to university – they do not have the opportunity to go to university – who want to do these jobs. Why can't we do that? I think that is really the nub of the Private Member's motion in respect of apprenticeship. It is with the greatest of goodwill that I say to all Members opposite that I think 1490 we should create better opportunities for young people moving forward.

I take the point that he makes in relation to plumbing, electrical engineers, mechanical engineers – of course all of that is required, that is needed; but in a serious threat, which Brexit clearly is to our community, I think we should have a bit more foresight into the future as to what skills will be needed in the future. That is what I am talking about.

1495 We talk about ... (Interjection).

Hon. D A Feetham: Try and just ignore them.

Hon. E J Phillips: Yes, I will do.

1500 He talks about demand led, and I think we have to do more than that, not just be reactive to the market. What we need to do is look at what opportunities there are in the future, surely. I would invite him to walk into those businesses and see them for himself, and I think he will really acknowledge the fact that we are not doing as much as we should be in relation to that.

1505 The hon. Member opposite seems to be fixated with NVQs. It goes beyond NVQs and City and Guilds. An apprenticeship is a long-term experience for these individuals who want to work in industries; it is beyond qualifications. That is what I am arguing for and that is what I am advocating for, and that is what people outside this House, when they are campaigning, are arguing for as well. That is what the unions are looking at. That is what the Chamber of 1510 Commerce is looking at. What you are doing is ignoring the views of the Chamber, ignoring the views of the union, ignoring the views of the people who have commented to me and have written in the Chronicle, and ignoring the views of the people in relation to this issue.

I am just extremely disappointed that they are rejecting, effectively, the Private Member's motion, which is intended to stir debate on apprenticeships and long-term sustainable jobs for our community moving forward, and replacing it with a self-congratulatory statement on what they have done so far and ignoring the genuine concerns of people in Gibraltar about apprenticeships and training.

That is all I have to say. (Banging on desks)

1520 Mr Speaker: I will now put the motion, as amended by Mr Bossano's amendment, to the vote.

Those in favour? (Several Members: Aye.) Those against? (Several Members: No.) Carried.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

1525 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn sine die, but not without thanking the Hon. the Father of the House for his lesson in how to deal with training and debating this afternoon.

1530 Mr Speaker: I now propose the question, which is that the House do now adjourn sine die, and not having received any notification of any Member wishing to raise anything on the adjournment I will put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn sine die.

Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

The House will now adjourn sine die.

The House adjourned at 7.45 p.m.

5 8th November 2016.

Mr Speaker: May I sign the Minutes as correct? (Members: Aye.)

Mr Speaker signed the Minutes.

PAPERS TO BE LAID

Clerk: (iii) Communications from the Chair; (iv) Petitions; (v) Announcements. (vi) Papers to be laid – the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

10

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table the Report of the Principal Auditor on the Accounts of the Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency for the financial year ending 31st March 2012.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Questions for Oral Answer

HOUSING AND EQUALITY

Q771/2016 Glacis Estate – Letterboxes

Clerk: (vii) Reports of Committees; (viii) Answers to Oral Questions.
We commence with Question 771 and the questioner is the Hon. E J Reyes.

15

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing indicate by when the pending repairs or replacement of letterboxes at Glacis Estate will be undertaken?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

20

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the letterboxes that have been procured have a lead-in period of nine weeks. Once received, the installation is estimated to take four weeks to complete.

25

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.
The Minister said there is a lead-in period of nine weeks. Are we talking that she is expecting the stocks nine weeks from now, or...? Just for my own clarification.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Q772/2016 Decanting of tenants from homes

30

Clerk: Question 772. The Hon. E J Reyes.

35

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of how many tenants required urgent decanting from their homes since the answer to Question 601/2016, indicating the reason why, the date when said decanting became necessary, and the date when the tenants were able to return to their home?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

40

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, no tenants have required any decanting from their homes since the answer to the last question.

45

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I do not know if you would allow me, as a sort of a possible lead-up... In the past, the Minister has given me the information of those who have required to return and so on. In most cases, by the time she has given me the answer the majority of them have returned home, but would have she happen, by chance, to be aware of any tenants still outstanding – for example like those of the last couple of months who, for some sort of delay in the repair works, have not been able yet to return to their home? Is she aware?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am not aware, but I recall from the question last month that there were only a couple who had not returned in any event. As per my question last month, of those I do not know who has now returned and who has not.

Q773/2016
Eviction of squatters –
Legal costs incurred

Clerk: Question 773. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing say how much expenditure has been incurred in respect of legal costs relating to the eviction of squatters from Government rental homes since the answer to Question 602/2016, providing a breakdown showing the number of homes involved and to whom payments were made?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there has been none.

Q774/2016
Update re pending repairs

Clerk: Question 774 the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Further to the exchanges of information during Question 603/2016, can the Minister for Housing please now provide a revised answer with updated details in respect of all pending repairs, i.e. still not fully completed jobs to rental homes, indicating the dates when these reports were first made by tenants and stating how many will be repaired by: (a) the Housing Works Agency; (b) subcontractors; and (c) the assigned tenants themselves?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, to date there are 241 pending repairs to rental homes. The dates on which these were reported are as follows. There were 20 in May, 28 in June – these are remaining figures, Mr Speaker, since the last answer – 20 in July, 25 in August, 19 in September, 57 in October, 72 in November.

Thirty-eight of these will be repaired by the Housing Works Agency and 203 will be repaired by subcontractors. Three are on a self-repair basis.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can I then ask the Minister: from the information she has given me, it follows that there are no jobs pending to be completed which were reported prior to 20th May this year – is that correct?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is the information that has been provided to me by the Department. When we were here last month the hon. Gentleman told me that he had spoken to someone and that he thought the works were outstanding for a period longer than that, and I did invite the hon. Gentleman, if he did have details, to let me know. I have not had any of these details, but because of this, in any event I have asked the Department to undertake a sweep just to make sure that nothing has fallen through the cracks. Sometimes there may be human error or something, so they sweep in case there is anything pending that may have been forgotten or maybe hanging on a computer or something is underway in any event. But certainly this is the information that has been provided to date.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I did say to the Minister that I could collate some information and pass it on to her. However, the notice for questions came so soon that we have not had the opportunity to do that. I know the Minister ... I pose the question because it will give her the chance to go back and discuss, obviously, with the staff from the Housing Works Agency and update the information.

I do have at least 10 and a couple more that need further clarification, but I do have information that shows that some repair works are pending now for a period of around two years. In one particular case, someone was even claiming it was reported four years ago, and so on.

Would the Minister think it is best if perhaps we agreed on a mutual date and we met, rather than end up in longwinded correspondence and might clarify better? I am interested in solving the problem for the tenants more than anything, and I am sure the Minister would like to join me in that exercise. So, if she agrees to that and confirms it via you, we can then, when we have a suitable break, look at our diaries and find a convenient date as soon as possible.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I think I made it very clear last month that if there is information which may have fallen through the cracks that I was of course very happy to receive it. Of course, what I said last month stands. If the hon. Gentleman has ... And I see that he has some letters there. If he were to give them to me later on when we have a break, I would certainly send them up to Housing immediately for them to be investigated. And my offer stands, of course, Mr Speaker. I am asked to confirm it here before you, but I have this invitation open in any event.

As I said last month and as I have always said before, Mr Speaker, it is about helping people. If there is something that the system may have missed, then of course, as the person with the responsibility, I would like to know about it. So, if the hon. Gentleman has this information, I would be very grateful to receive it.

Thank you.

Q775/2016

Expenditure incurred

Clerk: Question 775. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of all expenditure incurred since the answer to Question 604/2016 in respect of contracts awarded for making empty homes suitable for reallocation, stating to whom payments were made, how much has been paid, the number of residential homes pertaining to each payment, as well as indicating the type/nature of repair works or cleaning services undertaken?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, one contract has been awarded. This has been to Ace Plumbing for £10,380 for one property.

The works carried out by this company was general refurbishment works, which included plastering walls and ceilings, painting, replacing floor tiles, doors, plumbing, electrical work.

Q776/2016
Housing stock –
Properties vacated by senior citizens

135

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of how many rental homes have been allocated and/or assigned by Government, inclusive of room composition of said homes, from the stock returned or earmarked to be returned by the new tenants who have moved or will be moving into the newly built senior citizens' rental homes?

140

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the elderly citizens' flats have not yet been handed over to them, which means that these occupants' flats have not been vacated and, as such, their flats cannot be returned to the housing stock for allocation to new tenants yet.

145

Hon. E J Reyes: I can understand from that, Mr Speaker, yes, it is probably an ongoing exercise.

150

To avoid me posing the question next month if it is still not going to be ready, would the hon. Lady please give me an indication by when this exercise will be complete and I can then – with your permission, Mr Speaker – time the question to be repeated at that stage?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: In terms of Parliament Questions, Mr Speaker, I think that it would be safe to say, for an accurate answer, not before the January session.

155

Q777/2016
New affordable homes purchased from Government –
Complaints re defects

Clerk: Question 777. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many complaints have been received from the purchasers of new affordable homes from Government in relation to defects in those homes or the estate in which those homes are located, listing the defects complained of?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, any defects arising from the sale of the new affordable homes are tackled as part of the snagging process when the sales are completed. These are not considered complaints, as such. Most defects or snags have now been rectified and only a few remain to be rectified, mainly in the case of the more recent completions.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does she have a list of defects? That is the question.

170

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, Mr Speaker, my answer to the question was that they are not defects, they are snags. In relation to concerns or snags, there have been some concerns that have been raised.

175

There have been things like security issues raised because of the barriers of Beach View Terraces. These have been replaced.

There have been concerns and snags in relation to the communal water pumps, and this is something that we have referred to those who installed the water pumps for maintenance.

We have had reports in relation to the lifts. These have been looked at. We have had advice in relation to the lifts that this was on account of the speed and the power setting to which they were set during the time that people were moving in, given the volume of traffic that we would have had on the lifts and because unfortunately some people were inappropriately using the lifts, but that is something that is not really relevant now because the bulk of the people have moved in.

Mr Speaker, those are generally the concerns that have been brought to our attention.

I met with the committee of Beach View Terraces two weeks ago with the Chief Minister, where we looked at the concerns that they had raised, so anything that may be pending is of course going to be tackled with the team, and I will be meeting with the caretaker committee of the Mons Calpe Estate very shortly.

190

Hon. D A Feetham: So, Mr Speaker, apart from the 'snags', as she calls it, that she has listed, there are no other issues that have been notified to the Minister by GRP in relation to this estate?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Not beyond the general snagging, Mr Speaker.

195

I have outlined some of the issues in relation to Beach View that we have had so far ... had complaints from Mons Calpe Mews, which was some noisy communal mechanical extractors, and these are currently being addressed by the contractor.

200

What we have, Mr Speaker, at the moment is the general teething problems that one would very reasonably expect from an estate that has just been completed and given the size of the estate, but as soon as these are reported through GRP we are looking at the appropriate remedial action, most of which is to refer it to the contractor.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is it the case that a lift in one of these blocks fell two floors down from where it was positioned?

205

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, there was a post on Facebook insofar as the lift, and of course I asked for this to be investigated. There is CCTV both inside the lifts and in the estates, and having checked this what happened was that a trigger in the lift was set, which means that the lift, when the trigger is set, will take the lift and any passengers to the ground floor. It is not as if the lift fell. It is part of the general mechanics of the lift and it is standard safety procedure. That is what happened, and having checked the CCTV we are satisfied that what happened was what should happen in the general course of things. Of course, Mr Speaker, we have checked this and verified it with the Fire Brigade and there have been all sorts of checks.

210

Because of course the hon. Gentleman saw it on Facebook, which is where it was, it was brought to my attention and I immediately checked it. In fact, because people had raised issues about the lift, I rode in the lifts myself quite a number of times, Mr Speaker, just to check that they were fine and I am satisfied that they were.

215

220 Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Lady said that she was currently discussing with the management committee or a committee of tenants certain issues that have arisen. What are those issues that she is now discussing with those tenants?

225 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, Mr Speaker, they are in fact the issues that I just read out. These are issues which are generally latent defects from the construction, which the caretaker committee wanted to discuss with the Government and give our assurance that we would deal with these appropriately with the contractor.

230 Of course, Mr Speaker, if Government has dealt with the defects that unfortunately the tenants at Nelson's View, Bayview and Cumberland inherited – and that is something that we inherited as a Government because those defects were not dealt with by the administration at the time and it is something that we committed to remedy – then of course we are going to remedy any latent defects which may arise from these construction projects, and we have of course given those assurances.

235 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the reason why I asked that particular question was because the hon. Lady divided her answer into two stages. She said there are defects – or 'snags', as she called them – that have already been dealt with, and there are defects that have been left over that are now being discussed with the management or the committee that she mentioned, and it is in relation to those ones that I am asking.

240 Can she give more details in relation to which ones? Because of course, she has in her answer mentioned a number of issues. She then said they had been dealt with, and she then mentioned later on that there have been these conversations, an ongoing dialogue with this committee of tenants in order to deal with outstanding issues. I just want to know what are the outstanding issues, because the hon. Lady saying, 'Well, I have already referred to it.' Yes, you have referred to it, but there are two types: ones that the Government have already dealt with; and I am interested in the ones that are still outstanding.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman – the whole House – will be very happy to hear that we are dealing with really very, very, very, very minor issues.

250 The hon. Lady and I attended the magnificent development at Beach View Terraces, which is now the happy home of so many hundreds of Gibraltarian couples and homeowners, and we found that there is in fact very little of any concern. What we are dealing with are, for example: a fascia that may have not been screwed down properly – it was something that was added after snagging, it needs a little bit of tightening; some of the external doors, because of people having – as we all know Gibraltarians do – done so much work when they have moved in, some doors to the rubbish area have been damaged. Those are the sorts of things that we are looking at. In one particular corridor there was a lot of wind because it is a windy area and water may flow in, when it rains, with the wind, so we are looking at whether it is possible to create some short walls by the doors so that water does not flow into homes – very minor issues that are being dealt with, that the Government is very happy to deal with; the sorts of things that any developer would be delighted to be dealing with after a new project has been completed. Having been involved in my professional career with private developments, very, very minor issues to deal with, compared even to some of the top residential estates developed in Gibraltar for much more expensive accommodation.

260 So, working with the caretaker committee, I think that we have made huge progress already in the work that GRP has done in dealing with the snagging issues, huge progress already in dealing with the minor defects that are left, and the Minister and I were delighted to attend to be able to see for ourselves what the remaining minor issues were. I am happy to tell the House that I committed myself there, having received such a warm and enthusiastic welcome on my arrival at the estate from the happy purchasers, to return before Christmas to see whether these minor issues that remained outstanding had been dealt with. So the House will no doubt be very happy to see that the investment made by these Gibraltarians in their new homes is one that is not subject to any major problems whatsoever and the Government is committed to dealing with the minor issues that remain.

275 Hon. D A Feetham: So can I take it from the answer the hon. Gentleman has given that these issues will be dealt with by the end of the year – or does he envisage any further timescale for dealing with these issues?

280 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, there are some issues that will not be dealt with by the end of the year. For example, one of them is the movement of a vehicle barrier where the tenants want to talk to GRP about the possibility of placing it somewhere else to provide a different sort of security. We have tried two types of barriers: one of them does not have a scissor system underneath, and one does. They appear to prefer the scissor system and one of the barriers that goes out onto Eastern Beach Road may be moved because it may be a better traffic management issue for the estate. We are happy to look at that. That, for example, will not be dealt with by the end of the year; it will require a design and it will require procurement if the tenants decide that they want to go down that route. Other issues will very likely be dealt with long before the end of the year if they are minor and the materials necessary are available; otherwise, they will be dealt with very, very quickly after the New Year.

290 Again, as I say to the hon. Gentleman, I will continue to visit the estate and to ensure that everything has been dealt with and to continue to receive the enthusiastic and warm welcome that I receive when I visit these estates – and not just the ones developed by my administration; also the ones developed by former administrations, where I have sorted out the problems and I have received just as enthusiastic a welcome.

295 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am glad to hear that the Chief Minister and the Minister for Housing have attended on site and are going to return.

Can I ask the Chief Minister ... Maybe he was aware, or if not, on his next visit can he please look out on the actual landings on each floor – so it may have missed the snagging list that the individual tenant or the individual purchaser fills in. It is a communal area along the corridors. If one looks up to the roof, the sort of covering that has been made to the concrete is made of a material that, in my unprofessional opinion, I saw starting to become rusty. It coincides with what the Chief Minister was trying to say that the committee had explained to him – that there is some water that comes in from the side that is going to be tackled, but once a piece of material gathers rust one knows from experience that it just continues, and if we can nip it in the bud ... Perhaps the Chief Minister can commit himself to be in the look out and look up and just ensure that those ... They seem to be a corrugated type of sheets ... so we can tackle that and avoid future problems for purchasers.

310 Hon. Chief Minister: I am grateful for the hon. Gentleman's unprofessional opinion.

Mr Speaker, it is an issue that was pointed out to us at the time that we were there. We were with the contractor, with JBS, who demonstrated that it is not rust; it is actually dirt and it comes off, and the mechanism for dealing with it was explained to the members of the committee. If in some areas it has progressed to rust – and I have no reason to believe that it has – it will of course be dealt with, but it would be covered by the warranty of the material used, and a lot of what we are talking about is going back to the warranty for those who provided the material and they will be the ones replacing any of those sheets or doors that may have suffered rust, if they are in fact suffering rust. But there were very few incidences of that. In a huge estate, as that is, I saw two or three doors which were suffering rust because of the weathering in the area lower down on the beach, which is closer to the saltwater spray, and which had been damaged – therefore the paint had been damaged – as a result of people doing their own DIY etc. The saltwater was then able to get in and create an element of rust, but it is in within warranty and it will be dealt with on a warranty basis.

325 So those are the issues, Mr Speaker. Given the sorts of issues this House has in the past heard referred to in respect of serious defects in other estates, I think the whole House will be very happy indeed that we are dealing with very, very minor issues here and, very will want to congratulate ... I will not say the Government, because the House never wants to congratulate the Government unanimously; it tends to only want to do so on a division of 10-7, or at least 10-6, but will want to congratulate the contractor for the excellent work that they have done in this 330 estate and will want to wish well to all the purchasers who are enjoying the benefit of these affordable homes, a place in which they will build their families and homes which they will enjoy, I hope, for many years.

Q778/2016

Government estate lifts –
Timescale for completion

Clerk: Question 778. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

335 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is there a timescale for completion of installation of lifts in Government estates?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

340 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Yes, Mr Speaker, this goes hand in hand with the refurbishment programme. The programme is currently being revised and will factor the infrastructure works required for the lift installation.

Clerk: Question 779.

345 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, this is a question that was asked at the beginning of ... well, certainly I think it was March or April – not March or April, because we had the Referendum, but it was either before March or after the Referendum – and the answer that came back at the time was that there were various phases in relation to the development, certainly in the Moorish Castle, Laguna and also Glacis Estates.
350

The first phase for completion was September. Now that has not still been completed, and can the Government now give a different completion date, bearing in mind that obviously the answers that were given prior to the summer have proved to be inaccurate, or at the very least the Government has obviously not been able to keep to that?
355

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the completion of the estates was to be phased, and I have provided dates in Parliament in the past. However, completion of the phases is ... What we do is we look at the completion of the estate in percentage terms, and in each phase the majority of the refurbishment is complete, and while there are – (Interjection) Mr Speaker, in any event the dates that I have provided in the past need to be revised. I do not know what the revised dates for some of them are. Not all need to be revised, just some of them, and I do not know what those dates are until I am advised. I am waiting for the outcome of the revision.
360

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, could the Minister advise whether the Government is looking at whether there has been any breach of contract in the supply of these lifts or the installation of these lifts?
365

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, no, because it is not relevant.

370 Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, there is a delay and there is obviously a delay in the installation of the lifts. How can breach of contract not be relevant?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, for a simple reason: because it is not about the supply of the lifts.

375 Hon. R M Clinton: I am grateful for the Chief Minister's intervention. Perhaps just for my information and perhaps for the general public, who is responsible for the installation of the lifts?

380 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not think that is a question that arises from this original question, but to go back to where we were in respect of the question that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition referred to, if he goes back and looks at the Hansard he will understand then, after reading of the Hansard, why it was that the delay arose, and it relates to the installation of the three-phase supply, which is a matter for the Gibraltar Electricity Authority.

Q779/2016

Fire in Government rented accommodation – Care plans re tenants

385 Clerk: Question 779. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon:

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What policy is in place with regard to taking care of individuals and families when there is a fire in a Government rented accommodation?

390 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, when individuals and families are required to be decanted from their homes, alternative accommodation in the form of a hotel or a self-catering apartment is obtained. If hotel accommodation is provided, then the family is given £10 per person per day food allowance, which they can claim by providing the relevant receipts.

400 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I was wondering whether it would be more cost efficient for the taxpayer to have a stock of designated flats or a couple of flats saved up for emergencies, because I can imagine that housing the victims in hotels must be quite an expense, and this was a question I wanted to ask or suggest.

405 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the answer to whether it makes more financial sense is no, firstly and foremost because of the demand on housing stock and because we of course cannot predict when we have a need for decanting. Urgent decanting is not something that we experience often and it is not something that we can predict, because when we require urgent decanting it will be, unfortunately, on account of something that happens drastically, whether it is a fire, whether it is a flooding, and it is just an emergency situation. Usually, those situations are remedied quite quickly in order to accommodate the family. They can be accommodated in two ways, depending on the damage. It is whether we can repair the damage quickly enough for them to return to the original tenancy, or it maybe that we can accommodate them elsewhere,

410 but we are always looking at the most cost-effective way of providing it. The period during which they stay in accommodation is relatively short, so this is the most cost-effective way of providing it in terms of the bigger picture, because it would not be practical or practicable really to have empty flats just lying empty, lying dormant just waiting for cases such as these, and it may be that these cases do not happen.

Clerk: Question 780 – sorry.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much.

Mr Speaker, can the Minister outline what is Government policy in this area? If there is a fire, for example, or if there is a flood but the fault lies with the tenant, does the Government still decant even in those circumstances?

And then, with the next question – I will ask it now, rather than stand up, with your leave Mr Speaker, if I can ask another supplementary – is: does the policy apply, for example, to a situation where somebody is a co-owner in one of the co-ownership estates? It strikes me that you could have a situation where somebody who is a co-owner in a co-ownership estate may, through tragic circumstances, have a fire in their flat and they are not decanted, and somebody in a Government estate who may be at fault for the fire, for example, is decanted. I am just trying to explore with the hon. Lady what the policy is in relation to Government estates and also compare to co-ownership estates.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I will take the last question first in relation to someone in a co-ownership estate, because, when someone is an owner in a co-ownership estate of course the Government is holding the co-ownership part on trust. Those people are private tenants of their properties, so that is not something that the Government would step in... The Government has no duty to step in and decant in those cases.

Now, the Government's policy in relation... The Government has a duty to decant in Government rental estates. Decanting is one thing, and then the expenditure as a result of the decanting is a different thing. It may be that in some cases people need to subsequently reimburse any expenses as a result of the decanting, but that is subject to evidence and police investigations etc.

Q780/2016

Health and Safety Advisory Council – Number of meetings

Clerk: Question 780. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: How many times has the Health and Safety Advisory Council met since its inception this year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Health and Safety Advisory Council has not met since its inception this year.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I do understand that the Health and Safety Advisory Council has been in inception since May, and if it has not met since, how seriously is the Government taking this Council if in the last seven months it has not met?

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, perhaps I may assist the hon. Lady, as I was the Minister for Health and Safety before the new allocation of responsibilities.

460 The hon. lady may recall that the Government introduced an entirely new policy document that had been worked out particularly with Unite the union, which had been driving the agenda in respect of health and safety in the workplace. There had been consultation, of course, with other stakeholders, and there was the original Health and Safety Advisory meeting where the different stakeholders to that Advisory Council met and who are all able to set out their own particular concerns in respect of health and safety.

465 From memory, the Advisory Council agreed that they would nominate certain additional people whom they thought may be important to add to the work and deliberations of that committee. And, again from memory, if I recall correctly I also asked, as chair of that meeting, for the participants to set out in writing and to distribute by e-mail the different objectives, in addition to the ones that had been identified by the Government.

470 In addition to the Advisory Council meeting, I did meet then separately with some of the stakeholders that were the Advisory Council for them to provide me with some additional names. The hon. Lady has a draft additional policy that deals with how management can best address health and safety issues in the workplace, so I think that the next stage would be for the hon. Lady to be able to be briefed as to the different names that the stakeholders have proposed to be included in the Advisory Council to see what participation there has been from the existing members as to what objectives should be met by the Advisory Council, and then at that point be able to progress to the second meeting.

I hope that was of assistance to the hon. Lady.

480 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for the information. So, based on the information that I have been given, can the Government, or the two hon. Members, envisage when and how long, more or less, they expect to have another meeting?

485 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, having taken over this responsibility just recently, now of course I am at a stage where, having had the benefit of the information, I really intend to call a meeting of this Council very shortly to make sure that it is something that continues to be live.

Q781 and 783/2016
Bruce's Farm –
Admissions since January 2012; number of relapses

Clerk: Question 781. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

490 Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government provide statistics of how many people have been admitted to Bruce's Farm since January 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

495 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 783.

Clerk: Question 783. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

500 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is the Government aware of how many people who have undertaken the rehabilitation programme since January 2012 at Bruce's Farm have relapsed into their addiction?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

505 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, 206 people have been admitted to Bruce's Farm since January 2012. Of these, 73 have relapsed.

Q782/2016
Bruce's Farm –
Drugs detoxification programme first stop

Clerk: We now move back to Question 782. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

510 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: How many addicts have started their drugs detoxification programme at Bruce's Farm as opposed to the first stop at Ocean Views?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

515 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, three people.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, may I ask the reason why, despite the policy – which, as I remember, we discussed in fact last month – of the first stop needing to be Ocean Views, why these three cases would have started instead at Bruce's Farm?

520 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Because, Mr Speaker, what we were discussing last time was having Bruce's Farm as a substitute to Ocean View. They are not mutually exclusive, but what we cannot have, Mr Speaker, is someone going through clinical withdrawal up in Bruce's Farm, where we do not have the clinical staff to ensure that we do so in a safe environment. If three 525 people have undertaken detox at Bruce's Farm it is because they have been deemed to be able to detoxify in Bruce's Farm safely.

When we look at addiction, there is a wide range of addiction and there is also a wide range of level of substance abuse. Some substance abuse is complicated. Some substance abuse can be polysubstance abuse, because some people can take tranquilisers mixed with alcohol; other 530 people can be addicted to cocaine, to cannabis. Some detoxification requires a long period of supervision. Some may require a two-week detoxification process at Ocean View and some may require just a day or two detoxification, where literally, because of the nature of the addiction and the substance that is being used, what they require is maybe a day or two to sleep it off under supervision. It all depends on the nature of the drug or the substance that is being taken.

535 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for that information.

Who is the team or the body exactly that takes this decision as to where the patient goes? I understand that the bulk do start in Ocean Views, but who takes the decisions for those who do not?

540 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: The bulk does not necessarily have to start at Ocean View – I need to correct the hon. Lady. Again, depending on the substance and depending on the level, there will always be a medical professional involved, but it will depend on the circumstances and it will also depend on whether the person is known to Bruce's Farm or not. People relapse but a

545 relapse is not necessarily a really bad thing, because some people relapse and are readmitted. A relapse is not a failure; a relapse is a normal... sometimes, unfortunately. Addiction is not an exact science, and nor is rehabilitation – it will depend on the person, it will depend on the 550 circumstances, and sometimes people need to go to rehabilitation facilities three or four times before it is successful. But some people may, for example, be free from addiction for a while, may relapse, and because they are already known to Bruce’s Farm and their personality will be known and their drug of choice is known, in some circumstances it may be deemed to be safe to admit them following an assessment by the Bruce’s Farm team in conjunction with the GP. In 555 other circumstances we may require the GHA psychologist to assess the person, but there will always be medical professionals involved. But it depends on the person, because it is, of course, a person-centred system.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you.

The only confusion I have here is that the Minister corrected me when I said that the bulk, as per previous discussions, start at Ocean Views, and the hon. Lady says that that is not necessarily 560 the case. I do not understand how it is not when we talk about... I have been told that, since 2012, 206 have ended up in Bruce’s Farm. If we are talking about two or three people that the Lady has mentioned starting at Bruce’s Farm, is it not the case that the bulk do start at Ocean Views?

565 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Only, Mr Speaker, if they require detoxification, because not everybody who requires rehabilitation therapy will require detoxification. Some people, actually, who enter Bruce’s Farm... Yes, a lot of people do go to Ocean View – they need to go to Ocean View because of the detoxification – but it will depend on the person, and the statistics vary 570 from year to year. But some people call to be admitted to Bruce’s Farm because they may be people who have been undergoing the programme for a while and they feel that they are going to relapse and therefore ask for admission, so they have not actually been using. And not all drugs require detoxification. It all depends on the nature of the drug, it depends on the nature of the person, it depends on the level and the extent of the problem.

CULTURE, THE MEDIA, YOUTH AND SPORT

Q732/2016

Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority – Vacant posts

575 Clerk: We now move to Questions to the Hon. the Minister for Culture, Media, Youth and Sport. We start with Question 732. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, following on from the answer provided to Question 617/2016, can the Minister for Sports inform this House if the three vacancies within the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority have now been filled?
580

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the vacancy for Assistant Sports Development and Training Officer has been filled with a successful candidate starting employment with the GSLA on the 1st December 2016.

The closing dates for the other two internal vacancies, namely the Centre Manager, grade 5, and Assistant Administration Manager, grade 4, have now elapsed. Candidates will be interviewed in the very near future.

585 Hon. E J Reyes: I am a bit lost, Mr Speaker. Perhaps the Minister can clarify where my error is. Last month I was told that there were three vacancies and that interviews were taking place as we spoke. I am now informed that two appointments have been made with the successful applicants taking posts on 1st December, and there seem to be another two internal... Two and two is four, so perhaps the Minister can explain where I have mistakenly understood his figures.

590 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, it is one and two. The vacancy that has been filled is the Assistant Sports Development and Training Officer. That one has been filled and will start on 1st December – that is one. And then there are another two – that adds up to the three that you asked last month – and the closing dates are in two internal vacancies, namely the Centre Manager and the Assistant Administration Manager, grade 4. These have now, like I said, 595 elapsed. That means that the time for applying and all that has elapsed and now they are in the interview process, which is going to happen within the next week or two, I assume.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, for the two pending vacancies the application deadline date has elapsed and therefore that is now work in progress on the internal vacancies. Then did I 600 understand the Minister correctly saying that two other posts have been filled in as of 1st December? I still end up concluding one. I have heard two were taking posts on 1st December – am I wrong, then?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, for ease for the hon. Member, I said the vacancy for the 605 Assistant Sports Development and Training Officer... It is one post – (Interjection) Maybe the confusion has been because you are thinking it is one Sports Development Officer and then one Training Officer. It is one post.

610 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker. That led me to conclude that there were two. I now seem to have up to date information and I look forward in due course to finding out when the two internal vacancies have been filled.

Q733/2016
Sports-related grants –
Update re payments made

Clerk: Question 733. The Hon. E J Reyes.

615 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports provide updated details of all payments made during this current financial year in respect of any sports-related grants since the answer provided to Question 618/2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I now hand over to the hon. Member opposite an updated schedule in respect of all payments made during this current financial year in respect of sports-related grants.

I take this opportunity to remind the hon. Member that updated information is posted on the GSLA website, www.gsla.gi. These changes are effected on a monthly basis or as and when required. If I just give a little explanation as to what 'as or when required' means, sometimes the hon. Member might see in the post that, for example, it is updated in September and it is now November and the update date is September – the hon. Member might think that it has not been updated for two months. It means that there has not been any change and therefore they do not put a date of when it is revised or looked at.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, that clarification does help, because I posed a question to say it has not been updated for sometime and I thought the staff had not had an opportunity to physically update it. I now understand that concept and that will guide me for future questioning.

Q734/2016
Cultural grants –
Update re awards made

625 Clerk: Question 734. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, all further cultural grants... Sorry!

630 A Member: Answering the question before it is asked! (Laughter)

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, we are such good friends that he knows before I speak what it is I am going to say and ask! (Laughter) I am sure the Speaker will appreciate that friendship that we have, that we can actually mind-read each other!

635 Mr Speaker, Question 734, if I am correct: can the Minister for Culture provide updated details of any cultural grants awarded since the answer to Question 619/2016

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

640 Hon. S E Linares: And here goes the answer: no further cultural grants have been awarded since my answer to Question 619/2016.

I take this opportunity to remind the hon. Member that updated information is posted on the statistics section of the HMGOG website, www.gibraltar.gov.gi on a regular basis.

645 Again, Mr Speaker, I emphasise because it was... and this is the actual example of... You asked this last month. There has been no update, no further payments – therefore the update is shown there – probably October or September – and therefore it is not that it has not been updated; it means that there have not been any payments and therefore there is no need to upgrade the website.

650 It could be that one way of doing it is saying ‘revised date’. I could probably tell the IT department to just say ‘revised date’, and that means that the hon. Member would know that when he goes to, for example, now, November, it has been revised and therefore that is the latest that you would get.

655 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is what I was thinking of, because it could so happen that for two months there have been no grants passed through Treasury and so on and therefore it cannot be updated, but I would be none the wiser whether it is because no activity has happened. But I think the Minister is starting to head in the right direction. We could ask the IT department to say ‘updated as at’, and then... We are not interested in the actual date when the payment was made, just the concept of how much has been given to a particular type of 660 activity, so even if there is no movement, if we just put ‘updated at’, then I know that there is no need... or I could pose a question arising from the information there, but it would save some time in having to entertain my tedious requests for information.

665 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, I can assure you and the hon. Member that it would avoid me having to answer the questions as well, and can I also guarantee the hon. Member that I keep tabs on this so that I do not get the questions every month.

Q735/2016
Play parks –
Maintenance programme

670 Clerk: Question 735. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is there a planned maintenance programme for our play parks in Gibraltar?

675 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the GSLA conducts daily checks and undertakes spot repairs on a daily basis on all parks and playgrounds under their remit.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, on issues of hygiene and health and safety... This was what made me ask this question. I frequent the parks quite often as I have young children and I find that the standard of hygiene and the rubbish left about and issues of health and safety in terms of the odd metal bar sticking out every now and then in different places can be quite a 685 danger for children. So I ask the Minister to please either enlighten us as to whether he is satisfied with the level of supervision that there is through the GSLA, as he has mentioned, or if he would be willing so step it up a notch, because I can assure him that the things I have witnessed are not good enough for our young children.

690 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I encourage the hon. Lady that, whenever she sees anything in a park that she is not happy with or feel that it is unsafe, there is a hotline which you can ring and I can assure the hon. Lady that within, at the maximum, 24 hours there will be a team there to tackle, either to make safe provisionally or to completely fix, whatever is damaged. And the hygiene is the same: if the hon. Lady, who says she frequents the parks, is not happy with any of 695 the services, there is a hotline because there is a team which is there specifically to look after the parks. I can guarantee the hon. Lady that when anybody rings the hotline it is tackled immediately because we do take seriously the health and safety of the parks.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I do not doubt that the Minister and any other 700 Gibraltarian would take seriously such a crucial part of our leisure life, but if there is a hotline I did not know about it and I frequent the parks. Can I ask the Minister to consider, as a matter of priority, putting signs in different parks with the hotline so that parents can call up when they do see something. I do think that that would be a constructive approach.

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, there are in all the parks... I will have a look at it. Maybe 705 they are not as visible as they should be, but I can honestly say that instructions were given... and I have gone to certain parks... maybe not in a visual place, but they are there and I can guarantee... I was the instigator of having a hotline there so that they have a mobile... You ring up and they attend to it as soon as is physically possible.

710 I will take on what the hon. Lady says and I will have a look again, because maybe it has either been missed or is not visible enough.

Q736/2016

Queens Cinema and Hotel – Update re plans for future use

715 Clerk: Question 736. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Are there plans for the theatre complex and other bodies which were planned to be housed in Queens Cinema and Queens Hotel buildings going ahead?

720 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the answer remains the same as set out by the Chief Minister in answer to supplementary questions, to Question 611/2016 last month.

725 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, at the expense of not having done my homework, I have to say that the main reason for my question was actually the concern that I live very close by and I can see it all the time. I have noticed that there have been break-ins, there has been vandalism and it is something that concerns me very much.

730 Of course, the manifesto commitment of completing the project goes without saying, but I was actually coming more from a point of safety. I am not as savvy to find this answer as quickly, but if the answer to that is yes and that there is something in the pipeline, can we, in the interim, ensure that there is some kind of fencing or security to stop any further break-ins or vandalism?

735 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I am sure the hon. Lady is talking about the cinema –(Hon. Ms
M D Hassan Nahon: Yes.) as opposed to the hotel, because with the hotel there are people living there and it is pretty safe anyway.

740 I have had a few calls to me about the safety of that. We do have GCS, who constantly go there and make sure that windows are closed or that, if a window is broken, there is a board put up. So, as far as is possible, if they call we react.

So, again, I ask the hon. Lady, or whoever is worried about that place, to call GCS and they will again react and do something about the safety. I understand – I have had a few phone calls

745 myself saying the window of the Queens Cinema is wide open and they have seen people going in, or youngsters going in. I can assure the hon. Lady that, again, if we get notice of what is happening we will react to as soon as is possible. (Interjections by Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon and Hon. Chief Minister)

TOURISM, EMPLOYMENT, COMMERCIAL AVIATION AND THE PORT

Q786-787/2016

Disability tax allowance –
Number of claimants; beneficial value

750 Clerk: We now move to questions to the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port. We commence with Question 786 and I believe it is the Hon. Mr Trevor Hammond who is asking on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

755 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details of how many taxpayers are currently claiming the disability tax allowance?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 787/2016.

760 Clerk: Question 787.

765 Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government provide details of the effective beneficial value taxpayers claiming the disability tax allowance have actually benefited from in each tax year since 2011-12?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

770 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, under the Income Tax (Allowance, Deductions and Exemptions) Rules 1992 there is no Disability Tax Allowance. Rule 7A of the Income Tax (Allowance, Deductions and Exemptions) Rules 1992 provides an allowance for parents of disabled individuals.

In this respect there are currently 69 taxpayers claiming this allowance.

775 The total beneficial value in respect of this allowance for each tax year since 2011-12 is as follows: 2011-12, £27,771; 2012-13, £23,358; 2013-14, £44,650; 2014-15, £34,460; 2015-16, £11,350; 2016-17, nil.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

780 Clerk: Question 788. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. D A Feetham: Going back to the previous question, Mr Speaker, just looking at those figures – thirty-seven thousand-odd for 2012, £23,000 for 2013, £44,000 for 2014, £34,000 for 2015, and then there is a sharp decline by two thirds to £11,000 at the end of the financial year

785 ending 2016 – can the Minister afford an explanation in relation to why there is that sharp decline for that year, please?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the reason is quite simply that the assessments are still 790 pending. For 2016-17 the assessments are not made. Even though the claim is made by taxpayers, the actual tax assessment for the individuals is not made until after the end of the year and after the employers provide what is called a P8 form in respect of all the employees.
Subsequently, the assessments are made and that is why the beneficial value this year is nil – because those assessments have not been made, even though there are currently 69 taxpayers 795 claiming that allowance. (A Member: £11k.) Well £11k is last year, so there are a number of assessments which are still pending. That is why you see nil this year, £11,000 and then there is a jump, because the further back we go the more assessments will have been made for that particular tax year. For this year no tax assessments have been made because the year has not ended.

800 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q788/2016
Gibraltar Tourist Board –
Workers not directly employed by GTB

Clerk: Question 788. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

805 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose how many workers not directly employed by the Gibraltar Tourist Board are providing services to the Gibraltar Tourist Board during each financial year since the 30th March 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015, 2016 and during this current financial year?

810 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi):
Mr Speaker, the information requested is as follows: 2012-13, 1; 2013-14, 11; 2014-15, 11; 2015-815 16, 7; 2016-17, 6.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q789/2016
Gibraltar Tourist Board –
Subcontracted workers

Clerk: Question 789. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

820 Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government disclose how many subcontracted workers are providing services to the Gibraltar Tourist Board during each financial year since 30th March 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015 and 2016 to date, providing details of roles and duties assigned to each subcontracted worker, the entity of the employer the worker is employed by and the reason for 825 requiring their services?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi):
830 Mr Speaker, since July 2012 the Gibraltar Tourist Board has subcontracted one worker. The individual concerned is employed as a marketing consultant specialising in airline route development. The individual is self-employed. The person was employed to help develop air services to Gibraltar, the results of which are apparent, and to support the GTB's marketing team.

Q790/2016
Tourist information and survey officers –
Numbers employed

835 Clerk: Question 790. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government provide statistics of how many tourist information and survey officers have been employed during each summer season, usually done by students, for 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015 and 2016?

840

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi):
845 Mr Speaker, I believe the hon. Gentleman is referring to Visitor Information Patrol Officers employed in the past by the Gibraltar Tourist Board to give information to visitors during the summer months. If that is what he is referring to, I can confirm that 12 were employed in 2012, 2013 and 2014; 11 were employed in 2015; and none in 2016.

850 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Clerk: Question 791 –

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I may just ask why it was decided not to employ any in 855 2016.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, this is something that was done by the students under the student scheme for the summer, which is in fact something that the Government does on a yearly basis. This year we have had less students than in previous years and the Gibraltar Tourist Board felt that this was a service which was not necessary and therefore we could dispense with this.
860

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in the past, when we say that students have performed this task, is it that students have directly applied to perform this task, or is it that the Government has allocated from a pool of students a number of students in order to undertake this task?
865

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I do not have the full or accurate answer to this. My understanding of the student scheme is that students apply to join the Government and then the Government decides where those students are allocated, whether it is the Income Tax Office, my office ... I have had one or two this particular year. It is not as if those students applied specifically to come to my office this particular year, but they generally apply for the scheme during the summer and the Government allocates them to the different Departments.

875 Hon. D A Feetham: That is my understanding too, and therefore it must follow that it is the Government that has taken the decision not to allocate any students to this particular task. Therefore there must be a reason. Could I ask the Minister for the reason?

880 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, and I gave it in my original answer. The Gibraltar Tourist Board felt that this was a service, which was not necessary.

Q791/2016
Cruise ships –
Number of disembarkations and total number of passengers

Clerk: Question 791. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

885 Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government provide a schedule of how many cruise ship passengers disembarked from each cruise ship arrival, together with the number of passengers on board each cruise ship, since January 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

890 Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Gentleman is contained in the schedule now being handed to him.

Whilst the schedule is being taken over, can I just qualify or explain some of the information that the hon. Member will be getting.

895 The schedule contains for each month since January 2012 the cruise ships that have arrived in Gibraltar. It then contains three columns: number of passengers on board, number of crew on board and passengers of crew ashore. Although the question relates to the number of cruise ship passengers disembarked, this is not actually information that is provided by the cruise liners themselves. We have a total number of people who have disembarked, but amongst those 900 people who have disembarked we will have, clearly, some crew members. So we have an initial breakdown of the number of passengers and the number of crew on board, but in respect of the numbers disembarking they are mixed together and a split is not given. Therefore, I cannot give the hon. Member the number of passengers who have disembarked. I can give the total number 905 of people who have disembarked, but clearly, given that passengers will always be substantially more, in most cases, than members of the crew, the large percentage of the number of passengers and crew on board will in fact be passengers – but I cannot give him to the last person the exact number, because that information is simply not available.

Q792-793/2016

Sunborn* Hotel –

Current total workforce; number of Gibraltarians employed

Clerk: Question 792. The Hon. D A Feetham

910 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what is the current total workforce at the Sunborn Hotel?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

915 Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 793/2016.

Clerk: Question 793. The Hon D A Feetham.

920 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many Gibraltarians are currently employed at the Sunborn Hotel?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

925 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, as stated in answer to Questions 280-283/2016, the information the hon. Member requests is confidential by virtue of the Employment Regulations 1994.

930 Hon. D A Feetham: But Mr Speaker, in relation to the second question, which is the number of Gibraltarians that are currently employed at the Sunborn Hotel, why would that be confidential, when in fact the Government itself in the past has commented on the number of people it was sending to the Sunborn Hotel in order to be employed? The Government talks about the number of people that are sent to the Sunborn Hotel to be employed, ergo – what the 935 Government is saying is, 'We are making an effort to send the Sunborn Hotel Gibraltarians to be employed by them' – is it not reasonable for me to ask how many Gibraltarians are currently employed by the Sunborn Hotel?

940 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the issue is not whether it is reasonable for the hon. Member to ask or not; the issue is that regulation 3 of the Employment Regulations 1994 relates to confidentiality and actually prevents the Government from giving this information. That is the advice that had been given to the Government previously in answer to Questions 280-283/2016. I have taken advice again and the Government simply is bound by confidentiality.

945 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the reason why I raise this particular question is because certainly in my surgeries on a very regular basis I get people who come to see me – Gibraltarians – to tell me that they have applied for jobs at the Sunborn Hotel and they feel that they are being discriminated against, and that there is a preference by this particular employer to employ non Gibraltarians.

950 What is the Government doing to keep tabs on the situation in relation to how many Gibraltarians are being employed by an entity that obviously is in receipt of a substantial amount of money by way of a loan from Credit Finance – £30 million to £40 million pounds – and therefore it ought to be giving something back in employing Gibraltarians?

955 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member seems to believe that because the information has not been provided to him it is not something that we have or that we monitor. Of course we have the numbers. Of course the Government has the numbers, but the Government is prevented through confidentiality provisions in the law. So the law prevents the Government from providing that information. So we do have Gibraltarians employed in the 960 Sunborn.

The hon. Member knows the very extensive efforts that were made, particularly by my predecessor in Employment, in tackling the issue of Gibraltar unemployed and the very successful policy that this Government has pursued – not just the policy but the practice of the hon. Member, my hon. and learned colleague in the past where we have record numbers of low 965 Gibraltarians unemployed. That must count for something. That must count for the fact that the hon. Member did an excellent job in his time as Minister for Employment, that he deployed his resources appropriately, that we deployed a lot of effort in getting Gibraltarians into employment – and those efforts have paid off, and therefore there is no question ... Certainly it 970 would be a serious matter if the Government became aware that Gibraltarians were being discriminated against, there is no question of that either happening or being tolerated by the Government in any way. The Government would certainly take it as a very serious issue. So we are satisfied that that is not the case and we are also satisfied that the steps that the Government has taken in respect of getting Gibraltarians into employment are working and have worked, and that is why we have record low numbers.

975 Hon. D A Feetham: So does it follow from that answer that the Government is satisfied with the number of Gibraltarians employed at the Sunborn Hotel?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am not sure what the hon. Member has in relation to the 980 Sunborn Hotel – whether he really wants it to fail, whether he wants everybody to be without employment. I am not sure what his agenda is, but whether more Gibraltarians can be employed at the Sunborn Hotel or any other employer is something that the Government will always be striving for. Will we ever be satisfied? We will be satisfied when we have zero unemployment of Gibraltarians. Can we ever get to that? Well, that might be something of a difficult task, but 985 what we will certainly do is continue our efforts, not just with respect to the Sunborn but with respect to every employer, our efforts to get Gibraltarians into employment. Those efforts have paid off in the past and will continue in the future.

Hon. D A Feetham: With respect to the hon. Gentleman, the answer is certainly a master 990 class at avoiding the question and evading the question. But the question was is the Government satisfied with the number of Gibraltarians employed at the Sunborn Hotel, not the number of Gibraltarians employed generally. It is not about the efforts that the Government has made generally; it is in relation to the Sunborn Hotel. Is the Government satisfied at the number of Gibraltarians employed by that entity?

995

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member think that Parliament is the right place for the Government to be answerable in respect of individual employers and what they do? No, certainly not. The Government is answerable for Government policy and Government actions and Government information that it can and does make publicly available. That is what the Government is answerable for and that is what the rules provide.

1000

The hon. Member cannot ask me about the actions of a particular employer. We would be here all day if we go through employer by employer, as we could if the hon. Member was able to ask these sort of questions, because then we would be talking about the number of Gibraltarians employed by every single employer in Gibraltar, whether the Government was satisfied or not. That is not the purpose of Question Time. That is not what the rules, in my view, allow for. What I have given is Government policy, Government views and the efforts that the Government has been making in this field. I can tell him – because the hon. Member asked whether the Government is satisfied – the Government is entirely satisfied with the efforts it is making and the efforts that it has made in getting Gibraltarians into employment.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Gentleman not recognise that there is a distinction between the average employer and this particular employer? This is a particular employer that is in receipt of a loan of between £30 million and £40 million pounds of savers' and taxpayers' money by way of Credit Finance, and therefore in those circumstances it is completely and utterly appropriate for me to come to this House and ask the Government whether it is satisfied with the level of employment of Gibraltarians by the Sunborn Hotel. Is that not the case?

1015

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, again I have to wonder what the hon. Member has in respect of the Sunborn Hotel, because he chooses this particular employer – he seems to have an obsession with the Sunborn and almost an unhealthy obsession with someone who is providing a very good service to Gibraltar – and actually failing, because that seems to be the agenda in the hon. Member's mind.

1020

The Government will not get into issues of individual employers and the actions of individual employers and whether those actions are right or not. If the Government has issues to raise with individual employers the Government will do so, but Parliament is not the right place for the Government in any way ...

1025

The hon. Member seems to be almost trying to make the Government accountable simply on the basis that someone has received a loan from a public entity. That does not make the Government accountable for all the actions of that particular individual or employer, and that is not something that we are willing to get into.

Q737/2016

Beaches and bathing facilities – Maintenance costs

Clerk: Question 737. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government disclose the cost of maintenance in each beach or bathing facility for the financial years ending 31st March for each of the financial years since 2012 and the current financial year to date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1040

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is in the schedule that I now hand over.

Answer to Question 737/2016

Total cost of maintenance and capital investments in all beaches

2012/2013	2013/2014	2014/2015	2015/2016	2016/2017
£248,434	£1,224,946	£531,870	£224,683	£186,612

Total cost of maintenance and capital investments in the bathing pavilion is

2012/2013	2013/2014	2014/2015	2015/2016	2016/2017
£0	£0	£20,820	£9,942	£9,569

Mr Speaker: It is not a very long schedule, so if the hon. Member wishes to ask any supplementary now, he can do so.

The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Minister the reason for the significant spike in the year 2013-14, where the costs seem to have risen to £1.2 million.

1050

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not have direct information – Members must recall that I have assumed responsibility for this only in recent weeks – but from memory I suspect that it is because of the marked improvements that this Government made to beaches, in what was essentially our second summer after the experience of our first summer, where we carried out considerable improvements to all beaches, including by way of accessibility and other improvements.

1055

I would have to confirm exactly what the costs were and what the money was spent on, but I suspect it was the year when our beaches were taken up to another level by the then Minister for Tourism, the Hon. Neil Costa.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer.

1060

In re-reading the question, I believe the question is a bit more specific in that we asked the cost of maintenance in each beach or bathing facility and we have a total cost in all beaches. I was wondering if the Minister would be able to provide a breakdown in due course.

1065

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the information is divided into beaches collectively and the bathing pavilion. I have not been provided with a breakdown. Whether that is because ... I seem to recall I was told that for some items they are bought collectively for all the beaches and it is not easy to break them down into particular beaches. However, I will once again ask and confirm whether that is true and I would be happy to ... There is no reason why we do not want to divide it into beaches; it is just the way, I suspect, that the information is recorded. If you buy certain items which are used across the beaches, perhaps there is not a breakdown in the book as to how many go to one beach or the other, but I will enquire and confirm that, Mr Speaker.

1070

Q738/2016

Floating attractions on beaches –
Cost; confirmation of condition

Clerk: Question 738. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

1075 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose the cost of the floating attractions once enjoyed on our beaches and confirm they have all been subjected to vandalism and are beyond economical repair?

1080 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1085 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the cost was answered in Question 590/2016. Of the six attractions purchased, one is usable. The decision to discontinue their use was made due to the high cost of maintaining these, principally because they suffered from vandalism. The five that are unusable are beyond economic repair.

Q739/2016

Jellyfish nets – Cost of provision

Clerk: Question 739. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

1090 Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government disclose the cost of providing jellyfish nets as at the end of each financial year since they were first installed to date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1095 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is in the schedule that I now hand over.

Answer to Question 739/2016

The total cost of providing jellyfish nets is as follows

2012/2013	2013/2014	2014/2015	2015/2016	2016/2017
Nil	£93,230	£48,345	£30,154	£31,850 to date

1100 Hon. T N Hammond: Just for my own understanding of the answer, is it fair to say that the higher cost for the year 2013-14 was due to the purchase of the nets and then, presumably, in the years subsequent to that, the costs have been more to do with maintenance of the nets?

1105 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, essentially they had to be purchased and we needed to get an expert over to advise on the deployment and so on and so forth, whereas in subsequent years it has been replacing particular bits, repairing particular bits and more of a maintenance than the upfront purchase of the equipment.

Q740-741/2016
Gibraltar Tourist Board –
Arrears owed by tourist sites

Clerk: Question 740. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government explain what measures are being taken to recover the arrears due to the Gibraltar Tourist Board in respect of tourist sites?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1115 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 741.

Clerk: Question 741.

1120 Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government disclose details of how many companies, businesses or individuals owe arrears to the Gibraltar Tourist Board in respect of tourist sites, together with the amount they each owe and amount owed by each debtor per financial year?

1125 Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, yes the GTB constantly monitors the amount of arrears owed by these companies and pursues payments, which are effected regularly, to recover the moneys owing.

1130 All operators buying tickets for the tourist sites enjoy a 90-day credit period.
The specific information requested is in the schedule which I have just handed over.

Answer to Question 741/2016

2009/2010 Nil arrears

2010/2011 Nil arrears

2011/2012 Debtor A - £58,835.00
Reported in Return of Arrears of Revenue on 31 Dec 2011

2012/2013 Nil arrears

2013/2014 Nil arrears

2014/2015 Debtor A - £2752.65
Reported in Arrears of Revenue on Sep 2014, Dec 2014, Mar 2015

2015/2016 Debtor B - £119,607.90
Reported on Arrears of Revenue on 30 Sep 2015

2015/2016 Debtor A - £2752.65
Reported in Arrears of Revenue on 30 Sep 2015

2016/2017 Debtor A - £2752.65
Reported in Arrears of Revenue on 30 Sep 2016

2016/2017 Debtor B - £120,940.10

Reported on arrears of Revenue 30 Sep 2016. However this now stands at £93,370.10 as further payments have been made since.

1135 Let me just say, Mr Speaker, there is a footnote in the schedule, which means that there has been a further payment, which makes one of the sums outstanding stand at £93,370.10. I am informed that as of yesterday there had been a further payment of £30,000 made against that, so that will now read £63,000 and so on, and not £93,000 and so on.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer.

1140 I note in the Principal Auditor's Reports for 2015, paragraph 2.12.30, page 29, he refers to the tourist site receipts arrears at 31st March 2016 increasing by £119,194 to £303,110, and then he goes onto say:

The sums of £93,437 and £2,753 owed by two companies were over the credit periods established by the Gibraltar Tourist Board. Before the sums due during the financial period 2015-16 the latter arrears debt was owed since 31st May 2014.

I wondered if the Minister could clarify why there would be a 65% increase in the arrears in one year and how it is that tourist operators are allowed to exceed their credit periods.

1145 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the answer provided has, I think, answered the question. The detail to which the hon. Member has gone in his supplementary would, I think, require notice. I would be very happy to look into the details and to tally one thing with the other, but I cannot answer that without notice, Mr Speaker.

1150 Mr Speaker: The hon. Member cannot expect that a question of this nature, where specific information is being requested in respect of financial ... and the information is provided, that he can then make a reference to the Principal Auditor's Report and expect an answer on the spot. That is quite impossible. Separate notice should be given of that question.

1155 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I appreciate your clarification. I guess what I was trying to do was get back to Question 740, where it says 'What measures are being taken to recover arrears?' and part of the measures to recover arrears is surely to monitor credit limits and excesses.

1160 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, and I am sure ... Again, I have only taken responsibility for this part of the former Tourism Ministry over the last few weeks, but I am certain that that has been done, and the fact that since the answer was prepared there have been two payments of approximately £30,000 each means that this is being recovered.

Q742/2016
Principal Auditor's Report –
Clarification re paragraphs 3.7.13 and 14

Clerk: Question 742. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

1165 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, in connection to 3.7.13 and 3.7.14 of the Principal Auditor's Report 2014-15, can the Government disclose the itemised details of the capital works the Principal Auditor is referring to, together with the three quotes received for each work and disclose the final successful contractor and successful quote?

1170 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, the information is commercially sensitive and cannot be made public, but I would 1175 be happy to provide it to the hon. Member on a confidential basis.

Q743-747/2016
Mount Misery glass lookout; Royal Anglian Way –
Updates

Clerk: Question 743. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government update this House as to when the expected 1180 opening date for Mount Misery glass lookout is?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
1185 Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 744 to 747.

Clerk: Question 744.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government disclose the expected final cost of the Mount 1190 Misery glass lookout?

Clerk: Question 745.

Hon. T N Hammond: Has the refurbishment programme for Royal Anglian Way been 1195 completed? If not, when will they be completed, what works are pending and what is the expected additional cost?

Clerk: Question 746.

Hon. T N Hammond: Does the Government intend to provide any safety measures at the 1200 Royal Anglian Way steps leading to the Windsor Bridge when walking south to north?

Clerk: Question 747.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government disclose the cost of the Royal Anglian Way 1205 refurbishment to date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, in answer to Question 743, we expect to open it before next 1210 spring.

To Question 744, £1,186,772.

The original planned programme, in respect of Question 745, for Anglian Way has been 1215 completed, although further improvements are being considered.

In answer to Question 746, no, sir.

In answer to Question 747, £684,102.

1220 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may, in relation to Question 746, having walked down that path myself it is quite steep and I would imagine at least perhaps the Government is considering putting in some kind of handrail next to those steps.

Also, as a supplementary, what is the provision for exiting for disabled people? There seems to be no way to exit going north to south.

1225 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Upper Rock is a natural area and is an area which ... If we were to look at every single path and every single lookout, at every single cliff that Gibraltar has, not just on the Upper Rock but elsewhere, would we put handrails and fences throughout all the extent of all these areas?

1230 It is a difficult decision and I think that the successive Government have decided that it is a natural space ... People know they are going into a natural space where they are going to access steep paths and steps that have been hewn out of the rocks and cliffs and there are going to be edges off the cliffs and will take the necessary precautions.

If we were to start fencing off everything that could potentially be dangerous, we would end up with, firstly, an extremely expensive exercise, but also an Upper Rock which looks like anything but a natural area. So these are, I think, considerations.

1235 In regard to accessibility from the south, once again it would be well-nigh impossible, because of the lie of the land and the contours, to provide accessibility to the bridge from the south. There is a relatively smooth path to and from the north, and therefore I think that is the access that would have to be used in those circumstances.

1240 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may, I thank the Minister for his answer.

1245 Would the Minister accept that this is not a general area around the Upper Rock, as we are all familiar with; this is a very new specifically designed, I presume, tourist attraction where you do want people to walk around that area in probably a higher footfall than you would have done normally. It is obvious to anybody who has been up there that the Government has made improvements in terms of safety in the area, in terms of putting up railings and safety features, and would it not be a logical extension of that work to finish that work by putting in safety features at the southern end of that path?

1250 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member has rightly said, there has been a massive improvement in Anglian Way and in the safety elements. The handrails have been replaced and there is safe access from the road, particularly to the north, to the bridge and back again. So, anybody with a difficulty in tackling some of the accesses – and there are at least two others – would, to my mind, choose the safe access and not the one that they did not feel they could negotiate. I think we want a similar footfall for the whole of the Upper Rock and not necessarily more for this area. I am satisfied that you can get to and from the bridge safely from one particular direction and I think ... Next time I go there I will look at it with those eyes, but I think that providing fencing and so on to a lot of the other areas there would beg the question why not at the top of the Rock? Why not at Princess Caroline's? Why not Mediterranean Steps – which is relatively safe but not everybody can negotiate Mediterranean Steps and this is a fact.

1260 I will have a look at it again. I do not think we are failing. It is now much safer. It is safe even for people with accessibility concerns, to get them from one direction, but it is at least something that as we continue to improve the Upper Rock, as we have been doing as never before, we will obviously bear in mind.

Q748-753 and 769/2016

Gibraltar Nature Reserve –

Draft management plan, implementation of measures, cost of implementation; management board meetings; management team resources; Europa Foreshore dog fouling;
Upper Rock tourist facilities

1265

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, when will the consultation period be over and the final version of the draft Gibraltar Nature Reserve Management Plan be published?

1270

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 749 to 753, and Question 769, which I believe is the hon. Lady's.

1275

Clerk: Question 749.

Hon. T N Hammond: How often does the Minister expect that the Nature Reserve Management Board, as described in the draft Nature Reserve Management Plan, will meet?

1280

Clerk: Question 750.

Hon. T N Hammond: What does Government have in mind when it says in its draft Gibraltar Nature Reserve Management Plan that it will be increasing resources for the Gibraltar Nature Reserve Management team?

Clerk: Question 751.

Hon. T N Hammond: Would the Minister consider adding dog fouling to the list of issues affecting the Europa Foreshore Nature Reserve in the draft Gibraltar Nature Reserve Management Plan?

1290

Clerk: Question 752.

Hon. T N Hammond: Does the Minister know how long it will take to implement all measures recommended in the draft Gibraltar Nature Reserve Management Plan?

Clerk: Question 753.

Hon. T N Hammond: Does the Minister know what will be the total cost of implementing all measures recommended in the draft Gibraltar Nature Reserve Management Plan?

1300

Clerk: Question 769. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is Government looking to expand tourist facilities in the Upper Rock during this electoral term?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1310 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the consultation period for the Gibraltar Nature Reserve Management Plan will finalise in December.

The final version is expected to be published during the first quarter of 2017. Until such time, the details referred to in these questions cannot finally be determined.

1315 The tourist product has already been expanded by the opening of the new Windsor suspension bridge.

We expect to further expand the tourist facilities in the Upper Rock by the opening of the Mount Misery glass lookout.

1320 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, while I understand it is still a draft Plan and in consultation, is the Minister expecting the plan to be changed so radically that he can provide no information regarding Questions 749, 750, 751, 752 and 753, one of which is actually to ask him to consider adding to the plan the question of dog fouling as an issue at the Europa Foreshore?

1325 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, true consultation must be open to all kind of change, including radical change. A lot of comments have come in and the Department is discussing how it is going to adapt the plan, depending on the comments.

1330 I think we must also bear in mind that because the Government has now rearranged the responsibility for the Upper Rock sites and that passes under my Ministry, as does the Ministry for Heritage, it now adds a number of additional dimensions which perhaps we would now tackle in a different way within one Department. The whole question of resources, for example, and how we can combine those resources to be more effective and more efficient comes into play, and therefore there may be some considerable changes. I do not think I can hold myself to what is a consultation document where additional comments might still come in. Similarly for the question on Europa Point Foreshore, that might still be an issue at the time of the final plan, it might not, so we will see whether that it is incorporated or not at the correct time.

1335 So I think it would be premature to commit to any of those answers, because otherwise it would make a mockery of the word 'consultation'.

1340 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, regarding the Foreshore, I am asking the Minister whether he would consider or not. Is the Minister saying that he would not consider, or is he acknowledging that he is considering the possibility of including that in the final plan?

1345 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I think I have said that any representations will be considered. I think that was clear. Whether we include a line in the section of the management plan on the Foreshore that there is dog fouling there ... It may or may not go in. Hopefully, by that time we will have solved that problem and it will not be made into a consideration, but dog fouling is a potential everywhere. I think we are making a little bit too much ... but if it will solve the problem and save us time, clearly by just having this conversation I am considering it.

1350 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, my question was relating to basics like bathroom facilities and cafeteria, because I have had many, many tourists complaining that there are only these facilities in one part. So, considering that the Minister is assuring us about this consultation, I would hope and expect that these requests that I am putting through will be basic things that will probably be incorporated.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am happy to respond to that. I did think that perhaps the hon. Lady was referring to major new sites, hence my answer.

1360 There are a few things that are going to be happening, like new lighting outside the Great Siege Tunnels, information panels inside St Michael's Cave and a new PA system within the Cave. Clearly, now that this has passed onto my responsibility I will be looking at all the sites and perhaps refreshing them, and certainly suggestions such as I have heard today I would be very, very happy to consider and build into the plan so that we can have an improved product in the Upper Rock – and if the Lady wants to contact me with any further ideas I would be very happy to have the team look at those.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, following on from the hon. Lady's question, I wonder if the Minister would be amenable to answering perhaps a general question about how tourist sites are expanded in the Upper Rock in terms of the decision making process. I appreciate he is new to the Ministry, but is there such a thing as an advisory board or working group in terms of the expansion of tourist facilities in the Upper Rock? I am just curious as to what the decision process is, who decides where to site a bridge, why Mount Misery versus the Signal Station, how are these decisions arrived at.

1370

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, part of the Gibraltar Nature Reserve Management Plan does include the setting up of a board which would consider these things. At quite what level is still to be determined, as I said before, because it is a consultation document.

1375

Until very recently the different Departments – the Tourist Board and the Department for the Environment particularly – would have separate input as to what happens in the Upper Rock. Now that is all going to come under the expanded Department of the Environment, which will include the tourists sites and Heritage, and therefore it will be the team that administers that Department that would come up with the recommendations and make recommendations, I suppose ultimately to me, which then, if they have wider implications, I would refer to Cabinet. But in the first instance it would be the team working within those Departments that would come up with these ideas and discussions.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, with your indulgence ... You may disallow this question, but does each project have to present a proposal with financial implications and the revenue implications for particular projects – whether it will be self-financing or anything like that? Or is it just, 'Here is a great idea – what do you think?'

1390

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if you will allow that question then you will allow me to answer.

I am all for great ideas, but clearly every project has to have design, costing – (Interjection) Absolutely. As an example, for the bridge there was a proposal with sketches, then we looked into it and there was a further design with costings. So, yes, there is a process, Mr Speaker. It is not something that suddenly dawns on one and one gives an instruction. This is done in a responsible manner.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I am pleased to hear that these projects are indeed costed. Where it comes to the recommendations that will ultimately be made in the Nature Reserve Management Plan, the finally published one, will all of those recommendations have been costed?

1400

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Some recommendations will not really have a tangible cost: what is the cost of a board meeting once, for argument's sake, every three months? Others will have long-term costs. Others will be strategies – for example, removal of invasive species – which would take a number of years. But certainly all the ones which can be costed, particularly which would have short-term costs, would be costed.

1405

Hon. T N Hammond: Even strategies can also be costed. Presumably man-hours to remove invasive species need to be accounted for and that has a cost. So the question is: will it all be costed, everything that can have a cost attributed to it; or will they just be aspirations and whether the money can be found for those aspirations at a future date?

1415 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: There is nothing wrong with uncosted aspirations, because if we did not have uncosted aspirations then the world would not progress – let me just make that point. There will be aspirations. Those that have to be turned into operational matters, particularly in the short term, will be costed, but I am not going to now say that unless something is costed it will not go in a plan as a strategy and as a name. I am not going to say that – absolutely not.

1420 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, in similar vein, those recommendations that are contained in the finally published plan, will they have timelines associated with them and will it be clear that those recommendations have all been accepted by Government?

1425 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if it is a Government document then one has to assume that they are accepted by Government.

1430 I forget the first part of his question. (A Member: Timeline.) There will be some that will have timelines and others that will not. For example, I go back to the removal of non-native species: I would like to see that, but that could take many, many years, if not decades, depending on all sorts of things. That will still be there, but there will not be a timeline and maybe not a final costing; that will be an aspiration.

Q754/2016
North Front Cemetery –
Expressions of interest re maintenance

Clerk: Question 754. The Hon. T N Hammond.

1435 Hon. T N Hammond: After issuing an invitation to tender for the maintenance of the North Front Cemetery, how many expressions of interest were received and why did Government choose not to pursue this option?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1440 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, seven companies initially expressed an interest for the tender and four offers were subsequently received. None was considered to provide what Government required.

1445 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I presume that the tenders were quite clear as to the offers. Can the Minister explain why none of the tenders were considered to be appropriate? Was it on the basis of the cost, or was it on the basis of service?

1450 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this is obviously commercial in-confidence information, but if I may just say that it was not considered to be value for money and therefore they were not proceeded with.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can I ask the Minister whether he is aware whether the unsuccessful tenders have been notified?

1455 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am not aware whether they have or not; that is done by Procurement and does not have direct ministerial direction. I can only assume that they have been, from the fact that the Member opposite is asking the question. It may be that he has information that they have not and that would be taken up with Procurement, but that is something for that office to deal with.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am not sure if you will allow this as a question or not, but can the Minister explain why it was felt necessary to issue this tender?

1465

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have no problem with that whatsoever – without pre-empting the motion which is related to this – in order to improve the condition of the site.

Q755/2016
Thinking Green Digest 2015 –
Publication date

Clerk: Question 755. The Hon. T N Hammond.

1470

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, when will Government publish the Thinking Green Digest for 2015?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1475

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I expect the Thinking Green Digest to be published my mid-December, in approximately a month's time.

Q756/2016
Lift to Parliament –
Heritage licence

Clerk: Question 756. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1480

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it has reached a decision as to the granting of the Heritage licence for the construction of a lift to Parliament?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1485

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Government issued a Heritage licence on 18th October 2016 for the construction of the lift to Parliament. However, this has not been acted upon, as Government is further considering options.

1490

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would the Minister be able to elaborate on what he means by 'considering further options'?

1495

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, we are considering options. I have nothing to add. I think the Chief Minister alluded to this at the last meeting of Parliament. Instead of saying I am not answering or referring to that, I have given him that answer in good faith. We are considering options and that is why we have not acted upon the licence, even though we could have done.

Q757/2016
Fishing nets –
Use in British Gibraltar territorial waters

Clerk: Question 757. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1500 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Government take the view that the Nature Protection Act bans the use of all types of fishing nets in British Gibraltar territorial waters?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Government takes the view that the law is clear.

1510 Hon. D A Feetham: Can I just refer the hon. Gentleman to section 10, which is the operative section – it is a section that he himself amended a couple of years ago. The section now reads that there is a ban:

‘any gill net other than a trammel net’

Is it the position that trammel nets are nets that are allowable in British Gibraltar territorial waters – and what kind of nets are we talking about?

1515 Let me just explain. I have had a number of representations from people in relation to this. My understanding has always been that all types of nets have been banned in British Gibraltar territorial waters, but this was drawn to my attention and it actually does seem to me that there is a point there, in that the use of the words ‘any gill net other than a trammel net’ does appear to mean that trammel nets are basically allowed.

1520 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Nature Protection Act bans the use of drifts, seine, and trammel and gill nets. Trammel is a type of gill net. I do not have a copy of the law in front of me, but the exclusion ... If the hon. Member, being a lawyer by profession and experience, reads what it says, it does not say that trammel nets are excluded from the ban; it just refers as to the possibility ... As I say, I do not have it in front of me. It just refers to those in one section, as opposed to in a different section, but it does not say that these nets are not banned. All drifts, 1525 seine, trammel and gill nets ... Hand nets and butterfly nets are not banned, but all others are.

1530 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Gentleman at some stage meet me behind the Speaker’s Chair so that I can take him through the section? My understanding was exactly the same as the hon. Gentleman’s understanding, that all these nets are banned in British Gibraltar territorial waters, but then when my attention was drawn again to section 10 I read the words ... Section 10 starts:

Subject to the provisions of this Part, if any person ... uses ... any drift net, any gill net other than a trammel net ...

he commits an offence. In the logic of what these individuals are telling me, that actually it means that a trammel net is excluded, it did seem to me to have some potency, if I can put it 1535 that way, and I would just like to be able to show the hon. Gentleman the section. Or perhaps he has an explanation now.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, I would want to see it in front of me. I am certain that that is not what that ... It is certainly not what it is supposed to say, but I would be very happy to have the discussion behind the Speaker's Chair to clarify the situation.

Q758-760/2016

Macaques – Spaying

Clerk: Question 758. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, are all macaques selected for spaying being selected by a primatologist?

1545 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 759 and 760.

Clerk: Question 759. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1555 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many macaques have been spayed in the last four years?

Clerk: Question 760.

1560 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, have all macaques selected for spaying had offspring in the past?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1565 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it appears that the Leader of the Opposition is saddened by the fact that I am no longer Minister for Health after he took over responsibility. He is now assuming an environmental role so he can still ask me questions directly. I am honoured!

Mr Speaker, no macaques have been spayed. (Interjection) (Inaudible). Spaying will interfere with the behaviour of the animals and the social stability of the groups and therefore has never been considered as a method for managing Gibraltar's macaque population.

Hon. D A Feetham: I can assure the hon. Gentleman that it is not my intention to stalk him, if that is the allegation that he has made; I am just discharging my duties as a humble Leader of the Opposition!

1575 Mr Speaker, if they have not been spayed ... Perhaps I have used the wrong terminology – sterilised ... If he could just simply substitute the word 'sterilised' for the word 'spayed' in the three questions and provide me with an answer, I would appreciate it.

1580 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there is such a fundamental difference between the two that I should probably ask for notice, but I am not going to do that to him.

1585 Mr Speaker, there is a fundamental difference, which is relevant, because spaying is, to use a medical term, is ovariohysterectomy – it is the removal of the ovaries; whereas what is being done is a ligation of the fallopian tubes. The clear difference is that the implication of removing ovaries on the whole hormonal balance of the animal and therefore on their social status and their social interaction is such that it is much more complex, with much greater implications, than if you cut the fallopian tubes. That is the difference.

1590 In respect to this, Mr Speaker, on the question of a primatologist, a primatologist is a person who studies primates, from whichever discipline, whether it is a veterinarian, a zoologist, an animal behaviourist, an ape keeper, or even a Minister! Therefore, the selection for sterilisation and not for spaying is carried out by the team that work day to day with the macaques and therefore, by definition, they are primatologists.

1595 I think the third question was ... Yes, all the macaques had had young, except for three from the pack that frequents the incinerator, because this is a pack that is beginning to grow and although it is not causing any problems yet we are trying to pre-empt it, so we are trying to reduce the population there perhaps quicker than we need to in other areas.

Q761-763/2016

Learning Support and Special Education Needs facilities – Statistics re use

Clerk: Question 761. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

1600 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide statistics per school year and school of students attending the Learning Support facilities since September 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1605 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 762 and 763.

Clerk: Question 762.

1610 Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government provide statistics of how many students have been attending the Learning Support facilities per school year since 2012 at each individual school where the facility is provided?

Clerk: Question 763.

1615 Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government provide statistics, of how many students have been attending the Special Education Needs facilities per school year at each individual school where this facility is provided?

1620 Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is set out in the schedule which I now hand to him.

1625 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, at the risk of being accused of me stalking the hon. Gentleman, can I return to the question on the macaques? When I changed my question to the use of the word 'sterilisation' he never gave me an answer to the question of how many animals have been sterilised in the last four years.

1630 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I do apologise, it was unintentional: 29, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: And are these spread evenly over the last four years, or is there a particular concentration? Does he have the breakdown?

1635 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, these are all this year. There have been 29 this year, most of which ... I think there may have been an additional two which have been given a contraceptive implant, but these are all this year, spread throughout all the groups.

1640 Hon. D A Feetham: But my question relates to the last four years: does he have the figures for the previous four years, or have there been none?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: There have been ... Again, the question for sterilisation, which is the surgical interaction, which we started this year, so that there has been the use of contraceptive implants in previous years. I do not have that information, because I have collected specifically for the new procedure and that only started this year, so there is nothing in previous years.

1645 Mr Speaker, I am happy to share, if he does remind me, the information on the contraceptive implants over the last few years.

1650 Hon. D A Feetham: And just finally ... I recall the hon. Gentleman answering some questions in the past about this, and one of the points that he made, which perked my interest – because he knows that I share an interest in some of these issues on the Upper Rock etc. – is that no primates, no monkeys that had not had offspring were selected for sterilisation. I thought the word was ‘spayed’ but we know it is ‘sterilisation’, because it could affect that individual’s progress within the group.

1655 I am not an expert, but the answer that he has given me in relation to the question of how many have been sterilised that have not had young has been three, and three in a particular group and that is in relation to the Incinerator. The justification was that this is a big group slightly out of control – we have got to keep it under control, we are making an exception. But surely selecting just simply young females that are sterilised, that have not had babies, may not necessarily deal with the question of controlling the numbers. Well, it does control the numbers, 1660 but why couldn’t you have selected females that have already had young, because there must be females there that have had young, that come from the middle of the social structure, rather than females that have had no young and therefore is objectionable on the grounds that the hon. Gentleman has outlined in this House in the past?

1665 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: These decisions are not easy. I need confirmation as to whether in that group there have also been females with young that have been sterilised. I do not have that information here; I do not have the full breakdown.

1670 There are a couple of things here. One is that this group is not yet giving problems because it is staying within that area; but for a number of reasons, if the group splits and starts to move into other areas – and there are built-up areas in the Europa Point area – it would start giving us the kind of problems we want to pre-empt, and therefore action has got to be taken pretty quickly.

1675 There is also another problem. They are a very wild group, not in the sense of aggression but in the sense of shyness, and therefore the older females are actually very hard to catch and it is much easier to catch the younger ones, and then one has to take a decision. If we do not sterilise them now when we catch them and they are young, they may become impossible to catch when they grow older and then they will start having babies, and then we will have to be in a position either that they are creating mischief in the surrounding built-up areas ... would we have to go – God forbid, if I may say – into consideration of putting animals down, and it is much 1680 more humane, if you look at it in that context, to actually sterilise now and to assume that the fact that they are not going to have young means that they are not going to go very high in the hierarchy but it is the lesser of the evils. That is a decision that is taken based on the knowledge of the animal.

1685 Hon. D A Feetham: My understanding of this particular group is ... Well, not the individuals that are there, but there has been a group of monkeys in that area going back decades, if not even longer. My understanding is that all the way up to where the football pitch is now being planned to be built is one of the areas where there has been continuous habitation by monkeys going back the longest. Is he satisfied that taking into account that the sterilisation of three 1690 individuals that have not had any young, for all the reasons that he has explained to this House in the past, is not going to upset the social structure of a group that goes back so many years?

1695 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Three among that number will cause particular problems in certain circumstances to those individuals, but because it is only a small section of the group I do not think it is going to affect the group as a whole, other than to reduce the long-term number of young produced, which is something that we have to aim for because we do not want this group to do what groups in the past have done in the Laguna area and so on. Therefore, this is certainly a better option in our mind than large-scale culling of a group.

1700 Obviously – and we are still exploring exportation and we are successful, people are interested in small numbers – if we had another situation like we had in Scotland a couple of years ago where they want a whole group, this is the group to try and catch. It is going to be difficult, but this is the kind of group that we would take as a whole group and remove the problem from the area. In the meantime, I think that sterilising a few of the young females is probably a wise move and would not have huge implications as has been mentioned.

Mr Speaker: Are there any supplementaries arising from the schedule to Question 763? No, then Question 764.

Mr Speaker: Perhaps we can deal with Question 765 and come back to 764, if necessary.

Q765/2016
Special Education Needs students leaving education –
Policy for assistance

Clerk: Question 765. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

1725 Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government explain what is the policy and procedure to assist students leaving the education system who have been attending the Special Education Needs facilities full time?

1730 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the senior leadership teams in both schools work with the students and parents to either secure a place at the college to continue their education or to find work through the Employment and Training Board. The procedure normally starts at the beginning of year 10 in preparation for them leaving at the end of year 11, but can be later as some of the students do stay on into year 12 and year 13. The schools engage with the parents and the students through a series of meetings.

Mr Speaker: Any supplementary? No.

Q766-767/2016
Working Committee on Co-Education –
Members of Committee; Bayside School

1740 Clerk: Question 766. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1745 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please reveal the identities of those individuals who are members of the Working Committee on Co-Education, together with the date when they joined the Committee?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1750 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question with Question 767.

Clerk: Question 767. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1755 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Having regard to the Minister for Education's announcement regarding the appointment of a working group on co-education, can the new Bayside School that has been promised be completed within this electoral term?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1760

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the GLSP/Liberals manifesto from the 2015 elections posed the question whether co-education was a good or a bad idea for the comprehensive schools. It went on to say that this must be reviewed dispassionately and on a non-partisan basis by experts. The idea of putting together a group of experts to review co-education was therefore raised in the manifesto itself.

1765

Co-education for the Comprehensive schools was discussed between the Minister for Education at the time, the Hon. Gilbert Licudi, and senior officials at the Department of Education on several occasions both before and after the 2015 elections. In late August 2016, the then Minister for Education, my hon. Friend, was sent the interim report of 2006, which he referred to during the recent debate in Parliament on the motion on co-education. The Minister gave instructions in early September 2016 for the working group to be set up.

1770

The composition of the group is as follows: Darren Grech, Acting Director of Education; Dympna Holmes, Senior Executive Officer of the Department of Education; Stuart Borastero, President of the Gibraltar Teacher's Association; Michelle Barabich, Headteacher of Westside School; Michael Tavares, Headteacher of Bayside School; Kenneth Saez, Headteacher of St Bernard's Middle school; Stephen Reyes, parent; and Angelique Linares, parent.

1775

The Government is confident that it will be able to deliver on its commitments in respect of the new Bayside School.

1780

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for that information, but my question was mainly aimed at the logistics of how exactly can the Government commit to an expensive project of a school for boys, a manifesto commitment that will be completed supposedly within the next three years, while a debate on co-education is going on, in terms of the logistics of the school and the element of the school that will be bespoke, I imagine, for boys, whilst they have not decided yet whether co-education will be taken over.

1785

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am confident that this can happen. I think it is interesting to note that the manifesto of the GSD at the time, which the hon. Member was a member of the last election, had planned to build a new huge co-educational school, where there had been no consultation.

1790

I have no worries at all on this. Clearly the co-education committee is going to be providing its recommendations very soon in the next few months and the planning for the new school, which has already started, will run parallel to this, and if there is a change in the policy on co-education it will be factored in at such a time. I think that the project can very easily absorb whatever the policy is determined in the end.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you.

Mr Speaker, can I just remind the hon. Gentleman that it was not inconsistent for the GSD to, in its manifesto, suggest a co-education school, for example. What I am arguing is that how are we sure that we can build a new Bayside while the co-education argument is going on? But the GSD, in its manifesto, was very clear that this new school was going to be mixed, so the logistics would have taken that into account. I take into account what the hon. Gentleman says and I would just like to ask him when does he believe that this consultation process will be completed – when will we know more about what decision has been taken with regard to whether we are going to see a new high school of co-education, or not, being built within this electoral term?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as I recall, in the debate here just a couple of weeks ago I think my hon. Friend mentioned that the working group would report back in March and then there would be a wider consultation, so we will need to take a decision within this academic 1810 year and that will be plenty of time to make any adaptations to any designs should significant adaptations be required.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: So the Minister is saying that he is confident that in a two-year window we will have a brand-new high school built as per the recommendations of this committee?
1815

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, starting now it is a three-year window. (Interjection) Yes, but the planning process is part of the process and very often is the one that is more painstaking than the actual construction, so I am confident that we will be able to deliver in the next three years.
1820

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, with the exception of Mr Reyes and Ms Linares, both of whom I understand are accountants, everybody else is in the educational field. How were these individuals chosen on the parents side and why was there not an advert or an attempt to cast the net wider in terms of participation by parents – for example, the Parents Association or indeed the Gibraltar Women’s Association, things of that sort?
1825

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, it seems that we are damned if we do and we are damned if we don’t. So we set up a working group, we set the whole process in place, we start working on the issue of whether there should be co-education or not, and then the hon. Member starts complaining about the methodology of how we have come about doing the working group.
1830

This was not a ministerial decision. The manifesto itself made it clear that this had to be reviewed dispassionately by experts. It was put in the hands of experts at the Department of Education, they made a recommendation and I accepted all the names in their list of recommendations. So it was not as if I went round deciding who is going to be part of this and who should be a parent. They were recommendations made by the experts who are knowledgeable in this field. They felt that these two parents were the right persons to approach and to recommend to the Minister that they should be included in the working group. I had no reason to doubt that judgement, that view that was taken by the professionals, and therefore I approved the list that was given to me. It was as simple as that.
1835
1840

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: If I may add, Mr Speaker – and I am grateful to my hon. friend for assisting in the reply – I totally agree, and, having seen the professional manner in which the Department for Education conducts its affairs, they will have been very thorough in making a good choice of working group.
1845

Let me just say that this does not mean that nobody else is going to be consulted. This is a group that will be able to discuss and can consult, and I already myself have meetings planned with the Women’s Association and with representatives of the students to discuss this and other matters, so it does not mean that nobody else will have a say. There will be broad consultation and there will be broad involvement, so I do not think anybody need fear that that is not going to happen.
1850

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have neither used the word ‘fear’ nor attempt to instil any fear. Still less, Mr Speaker, does the hon. Gentleman, Minister Licudi, have to get on his high horse about a question that just simply seeks to enquire about Government policy.
1855

It just strikes me that if the Government has set up a working group that it says is composed of experts and the only two non-experts are Mr Reyes and Ms Linares and there has been no attempt to advertise more widely in order to seek participation in what is a recommending body –and indeed a very important body as far as this particular issue is concerned – I am asking why hasn’t the Government cast the net wider.
1860

1865 Can I ask this: does the Government intend to? Because it is not limited to these people, does the Government intend to? Can I suggest to the Government that it does cast the net wider and perhaps include some of the parental organisations within this group, so that the recommendations that are made by the working group are the best possible recommendations in the circumstances. It is certainly my view that the wider the representation of that working group by reference to interested stakeholders – and parents clearly are; these are just two individuals who have no experience, as far as I am aware, of anything education related ... that 1870 the wider you cast the net by reference to representational groups, the better the recommendations are going to be. That is the only point that I am making.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, first of all, let me say that the two parents in question may have their own views as to whether the fact that they are parents with children in school may not make them have experience in education-related matters.

1875 I do not know whether the Hon. Leader of the Opposition would have liked the Department of Education to have held interviews for the post of member of the working group – I think we are going over the top. I think we have a soundly formed working group which will reach out to all the parties who are interested.

1880 I here and now invite anybody who wants to make a representation on the subject to write in and to submit their views, and if needs be they will be called for discussion. I do not think there is any need to amend the composition of the working group now, but what we will ensure is that everybody who wants to have a say, has a say.

Hon. D A Feetham: And will the Government include any student organisations within this 1885 particular working group?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I said earlier that I already have, in my diary, a meeting with representative of the students.

1890 Hon. D A Feetham: No, Mr Speaker, that is a different answer to the question that I have asked. The Hon. Minister may have, within his diary, a meeting with students or with student organisations. The question is: is he going to include within the working group, which at the end of the day is the body that makes the recommendations to the Government, any students or student organisations?
1895

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this matter was debated at length in a full debate just two weeks ago or less – last week. Therefore, I would refer the hon. Member to Hansard. Most of these points have already been discussed and if there is anything, after the hon. Member has read Hansard, that he is not clear about, then I would be very happy to answer his letters or to 1900 have further questions in Parliament, but I think we are just going over and over ground that we have already covered. In fact, I made a specific point at the time by reminding the House that I was myself Chairman of the then Gibraltar Union of Students and clearly I will ensure that students are involved in the discussion process.

1905 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may, turning back to the original question about the members of the working group, can the Minister advise, given that there is quite a short deadline to report, being March 2017, can the Minister advise the date of the letter of appointment of the members of the committee? I presume the members were notified in writing of their appointment to this working group.
1910

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether there was a letter of appointment. What I know is that I gave an instruction and the hon. Member, my colleague Dr Cortes, has given the timeline of what has happened and how it happened. I gave an instruction. I was given a 1915 recommendation as to a list and I approved that list, and those people may have been called, may have been told – I just do not have the information as to how they were informed or whether there is a letter of appointment.

1920 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not have that information. What I do know is that on virtually day two or three of my having taken over the new responsibilities I was told about this group and its composition.

1925 If I may just comment, Mr Speaker – and this really must not become a debate when we have just had one – the Government was accused during the debate of secrecy and lack of transparency by not even wanting to present the names of the group, which I did not have at the time. Today we have done it and now faults are being picked into the composition. I really do not know where we are going to.

1930 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may come back to the former Minister of Education, he said that the list was approved by him and then he presumes that the members were contacted. Can he advise the House when he approved that list?

Hon. G H Licudi: I just do not know. I know that the instructions were given in early September to set up the working group and at some point a list was given to me and I approved it. I certainly do not remember the date.

Q768/2016
Comprehensive schools –
Security

1935 Clerk: Question 768. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is the Minister for Education aware that at present any member of the public can walk into any of the two comprehensive schools unchallenged?

1940 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1945 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, this is indeed a deficiency which needs to be and is being addressed. This said, it is a longstanding problem that existed even before this Government was elected.

1950 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am grateful that the Minister says that he will be dealing with it. We are living in a very dangerous world, and I come from a perspective, once again, of security. I do have an interest, of course: I have two children, one in Westside and one in Bayside, and I find it amazing how I can go in and out whenever I please, yet the other two children that I have in middle schools, that is not the case. I find that generally middle schools are very well secured, but these high schools, the secondary schools are not – and not only from a point of security, but I understand that there have been moments when parents have actually gone into the schools and been rather abusive to teachers for whatever reason, so I would like to ask will this be dealt with as a matter of priority and urgency, please.

1955 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, already discussions have... even before I took over as Minister for Education I know that discussions have been held as to the way to do it. One does not want the school either to appear to shut its doors to the communities, but certainly people 1960 moving in through the school is not something that we want and different options are being considered, including access to a reception area where parents can legitimately go and not feel that they cannot go if they have any concerns, but that between there and the rest of the school where the children are, and so on, there should be some other facility. So this is being looked at and I do take the matter very seriously, so let me reassure the hon. Lady that this is being looked at.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I move that the House do now recess until 3 p.m. this afternoon.

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess until three this afternoon.

The House recessed at 12.55 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3.03 p.m.

T N Hammond: Can the Government provide a detailed schedule of the commencement date for each subcontracted worker working within Social Services and the Care Agency as at 30th June 2016, together with the role being carried out by each subcontracted worker, the care provider they are employed by, the reason for requiring their services and the area in which they were working?

110 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the information is in the schedule I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman.

115 Again, for the benefit of the hon. Gentlemen opposite and for the benefit of Mr Llamas in particular, he should be aware that I believe it was in 2009 that Social Services and another entity merged to form the Care Agency, so it would not be technically appropriate to call it 'within Social Services and the Care Agency' because the Social Services are subsumed within the Care Agency – just for his benefit.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I return to Question 721?

120 Question 721 is the question about the individuals who are acting for a post which is not the post they were specifically employed to do. The Hon. the Minister provided a schedule, and the schedule basically provides that the Head of Children's Service, a CEO, the Deputy Nursing Co-ordinator, the Senior Social Worker, Head of Service ... are individuals acting as CEO, Head of Service Disability, Head of Service Children, Head of Service Adults, Senior Social Worker, Senior Social Worker and Senior Social Worker ... And then, over the page, in Children's Services there are care workers who appear to be acting in senior care worker posts, some going back to 2011.

125 It just appears to me that there is an awful lot of acting in senior positions in this particular Department. Does the hon. Gentleman feel comfortable with such a level of senior acting in this particular Department?

130 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am afraid that I do not follow the hon. Gentleman, and I will tell him why. The supplementary information that I have in respect of Question ... Is it 722? (A Member: No, 721.) Yes, now I have it.

Hon. D A Feetham: If you look at 721, the schedule, you will see the post, Head of Children's Services, acting post CEO, then Head of Service Disability, Head of Service Children, Head of Service Adult, Senior Social Worker, Senior Social Worker, Senior Social Worker ... All those are acting, and then over the page you will also see that there are five senior care workers acting, some of them going back to 1st October 2011. Indeed, when we were in government the most recent senior care worker started acting on 29th September 2014. That is over two years ago. I was asking the Minister whether he feels comfortable with this level of acting at such a senior level in this particular Department.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I think, for the purposes of Hansard, the first thing to say is that, if we refer to the schedule that I provided to the hon. Gentleman, in respect of the Head of Services of adults and the Senior Social Worker, the date of acting is from June 2016, March 2016, February 2016, and again June 2016 and indeed September 2016. So I do not want the public to have the impression that these senior posts have had people in acting positions since the only date mentioned by the hon. Gentleman opposite, which was 2011. The reality is that these senior positions have persons acting in them since this year.

In respect of the senior care workers, which the hon. Gentleman specifically referred to in the course of his supplementary, which is date of acting of 2011, the hon. Member may recall, as my hon. and learned Friend Miss Sacramento has reminded me, these particular positions are currently the subject of discussions with the unions, the ones relating to 2011.

So, to answer his supplementary, in respect of those senior positions acting, as I have said, they are since this year, and so, having met with the top management team of the Care Agency and discussed, as he can imagine, a series of issues since being allocated responsibility for the Care Agency, they have not raised with me any particular or material issues of concern in this respect.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has referred to four of those senior posts, which are 2016, where this particular post holder started acting, and I will come back to that in a moment. But in relation to the CEO temporarily promoted in 2015, the Head of Children's Services temporarily promoted in 2015, and the Head of Disability secondment date 1st July 2012, it just does appear to me that when you look at this on the whole there are an awful lot of people who seem to be acting.

Is the hon. Gentleman suggesting that there is no concern being expressed to him in relation to such high levels of acting across the board in these areas? It does seem to me an awful lot of people are acting in posts. That is one question.

The other one is: in relation to the ones in 2016 that he quoted, is that the first time that somebody has acted in this particular post? Because of course, somebody could have been acting earlier in these particular posts – does he have that information?

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I am happy to provide further information.

Of course, this needs to be set into context in relation to the vacancies and the acting, because we are talking about an organisation that employs in excess of 300 members of staff, so for a handful of them to be acting, then ... In terms of concern, as the hon. Gentleman has mentioned, if he had a meeting with senior management yesterday and this was not on the agenda then it is not a concern of the management ... then certainly it is clear that it is not a concern.

But the reason why people are acting is because it is the knock-on effect of the person acting in the post of CEO. The person who is acting CEO used to be the Head of Children's Services, so the person who is now acting up for that person used to be the senior social worker in Children's Services and that is the knock-on effect. So, in effect, there is a chain of three people acting up because of the acting-up of one post.

185 Then there is another post of team leader of the Disability Services, which is as a result of the recent retirement of the incumbent and it is by agreement that the current incumbent will be acting in that post for a defined period of time. So that is a planned acting; it is not like it is a disorganised acting in a Department such as this, because this is probably one of the most important Departments that we have. So this is very organised, Mr Speaker.

190 In relation to the other post, that of the vacant Head of Service for the Disability Service, the hon. Gentleman has just explained that while on paper this is a post that has been vacant since 2012, it is a post that has been advertised both internally and externally, and internally there were no suitable applicants. Indeed, when it was external there were no applicants who met this criteria. Of course, when one is leading a service as important as that of the Dr Giraldi Home and 195 St Bernadette's we have to make sure that we have the highest calibre of person discharging that role. It is not a vacant post as such because the incumbent is seconded, so it is not someone who is acting into that post. So, Mr Speaker, there is a perfectly logical and reasonable explanation for these posts, which really are quite short-term posts.

In relation to the care workers, as I have explained very recently in this Parliament, that is in 200 relation to a restructure of the residential services, which, as time progresses and as the service progresses, the needs of the service and the needs of the children who we serve change and develop and we want to make sure that the posts and the job descriptions of those posts are commensurate to the needs of the service as they are today. That is something that we are in negotiations with the union. It is not as if it is something that has been left there; it is something 205 that we are actively working on with management and with the union on behalf of the staff.

Mr Speaker, the question was made to the hon. Gentleman as to whether he is satisfied with the number of acting. The hon. Gentleman has said no, and I agree with the hon. Gentleman because all of these acting posts are, of course, planned and they are controlled and in no way are these services at risk.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, well then, turning to the question of senior care workers, these are acting posts. There are five: there is one from 1st October 2011 – in other words, that person has been acting in that post from 1st October 2011; another one where he or she has been acting from 29th August 2011; the next one is 2nd September 2013; 4th May 2013; and 215 29th September 2014. I hear what the hon. Lady has to say about 'controlled', but why are people acting as senior care workers for so long, when she will agree with me that these are critical areas? I would have thought that the Government would have done everything that it can in order to have settled people in those posts.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, yes, Mr Speaker, because that is precisely what has happened. The people who are in those posts are actually settled, because they are the same people who are acting. They are acting, therefore they are being remunerated accordingly to the responsibilities that they have. And precisely because those posts are important and the people are important – because the people who work in this service are, of course, very important to 225 us, because it is about the continuity that they provide – it is exactly precisely the reason why this service, which is a residential service for children, is being restructured. But, Mr Speaker, this is being done in consultation with the unions, so it is something that is progressing. This is not something that the staff are complaining about. We are working together with the unions to find the optimum outcome for the staff and for the children for whom we both serve together.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am afraid that I do not agree with the hon. Lady about the staff being happy with the situation, because we have received complaints about long-term acting in relation to the care workers.

How can the hon. Lady say that everything is fine, the staff are very happy, there is no 235 problem here, when you have got people acting going back to 2011? What is the reason for that? It cannot be that you are reviewing the situation. When did you begin reviewing the situation? What is this – a review that has taken six years, five years, going back to October 2011? What are the reasons for the delay in making sure that you have permanent people in these particular posts?

240

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, we are just going round in circles here – and I will say the same: this is a ... Perhaps what happens is that the hon. Gentleman does not exactly understand the service that one provides at the residential home, but this service is certainly one that is very fluid and that progresses, and it has particularly changed a lot in the last year to 18 months. So we are working to make sure that we have the right structure in place. I will say once again that we are working with the union that represents these members of staff. We are working together. We will find, I am sure, that the hon. Gentleman and the union will work together to finalise the work that we have been doing for quite a period of time now.

245

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have read comments publicly from the union about ongoing discussions with the Care Agency. My understanding is that it is about also the level of acting in certain posts amongst the care workers. Is the hon. Lady saying that the union is happy with the current situation in relation to acting? Is that what she is saying when she says that she has received no complaints in relation to this?

255

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, no, that is not what the hon. Lady has said. What the hon. Lady has said is in fact that we are meeting ... although there have been meetings and meaningful discussions and progression with the unions in respect of these acting positions.

260

But if I may, Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Gentleman needs to accept that in the schedule that I have provided him there are only two positions that go back to 2011 and the other ones are of 2016 – they are this year. (Interjection) Yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: 2013?

Hon. N F Costa: I have said there are two that go back to 2011, which are the ones that the hon. Gentleman has once again raised when he raised it in the course of his supplementary.

Hon. D A Feetham: Senior care workers, which is the 2011, 2013 and 2014 – there are five.

270

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, okay, but when the hon. Gentleman stood to raise a supplementary he spoke about the 2011 ones, and once again I want to say ... I do not want the public to leave with the impression that there have been acting positions in that schedule since 2011. There are only two of those people who have been acting since 2011. The senior positions, which was his first supplementary to as to whether I was concerned that there were persons in acting positions at a senior level and I explained to him that there have only been since this year and that at my meeting with top management these issues have not been raised with me at my meeting. It may well be that they do raise it with me in slower time in due course when human resources issues are discussed. But I think the point was well made by the hon. Lady when she said that if these issues were, in their mind, urgent and needed to be addressed because in allowing people to act we would place the persons who use these critical services in any risk, then of course at the very first meeting you would have expected them to have raised them with me – and they have not.

275

In respect of the point that he makes about the question of continuity of care, there is no such problem about continuity of care. In fact, it is a double-edged sword insofar as the fact that people have been acting since 2011 means that there has been that continuity of care since that time. So the question, with respect, is not that. The question is why are people acting since that time, rather than is there an issue as to continuity of care, because there cannot be because it is the same people.

285

290 But let me tell the hon. Gentleman that having only been recently allocated with this responsibility it is certainly the case that I will, in due course, have discussions with the top management and with the union, and of course I will naturally seek their views as to these acting positions.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am very grateful for the answer, Mr Speaker.

295 The point about continuity of care was raised in relation to the very senior post that I started asking questions about, and we do not know but I am prepared to accept that in fact there had been no acting prior to 2016 because the hon. Lady has said that this is a question of everybody acting upwards, and I accept that.

300 The questions that I am asking now, and indeed I have been asking in the last two or three supplementaries, have been on those five senior care workers who have been acting since ... two of them in 2011, two of them in 2013 and one of them in 2014. Those are the ones that we are currently on, and in relation to those ... And I know that there have been concerns that have been expressed by the unions in relation to those, because I have seen them and I have also met with people within the Care Agency who are concerned in relation to these posts and other posts in other areas. When does the hon. Gentleman expect that the negotiations with the union will be completed in relation to these five senior care worker posts that have been filled in an acting capacity going back to 2011, two of them, two of them in 2013 and one of them in 2014?

310 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, just yesterday I had a meeting with one of the unions – the union that represents these particular workers – and again it was a meeting where we discussed in broad strokes what the issues were. I have to tell him that in those broad strokes these posts in particular were not raised, but I am meeting with them for a much fuller, longer meeting, and indeed in that agenda, when they do send it to me, these posts may well appear – and if they do, I will get the chance to be able to meaningfully exchange views then. The hon. and learned Lady has just advised me that those discussions in any case are quite advanced, so I am hoping to be able to resolve that finally, and of course if I am able to do so in very short order it will be because of the work that the hon. Lady did, and not myself.

Elderly Care Services – Subcontracted workers

320 Acting Clerk: Question 725. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

325 Hon. Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Q726/2016
Elderly Care –
Policy re outdoor recreational time

Acting Clerk: Question 726. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, within the Elderly Care infrastructure, does Government have a policy to provide outdoor recreational time to residents on a daily basis, weather permitting?
335

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, there is an internal policy which regulates the attendance of residents to outings.
340

Additionally, residents have the possibility to make use of the outdoor facilities available. Relatives, but also staff, provide escort to the residents during these outings.

By way of reference, an approximate number of 150 outings were organised in 2015, including outings to the fair, concerts and beach, amongst others.
345

Mr Speaker: Are there any supplementaries arising from Question 725?

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker. Looking at the schedule, the opening line for Question 725 says 'Can the Government state the commencement date for each subcontracted worker' and the schedule provides the list of who the subcontractors providing the services are and their role – qualified nurse or whatever – but I cannot quite find here the actual commencement date for each subcontracted worker.
350

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is correct, the commencement date is not included for the very same reason – and I hope that we do not revisit the argument – that commencement dates would be included in the terms of engagement filed with the 355

360 Employment and Training Board, and as the Hon. and learned Mr Licudi once again explained this morning in this House, such information is confidential by virtue of the Employment Regulations 1994. But I commend the hon. Gentleman for his astute observation of the absence of that fact.

365 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have to say I admire the hon. Gentleman the flight of foot in answering that particular question – how he has avoided the need to answer the question. But has he himself obtained legal advice that suggests that confidentiality would be breached simply because we are asking not the identity of the subcontracted worker but in relation to the statistics of subcontracted workers, which he has provided, and where they are actually working and in what area, be it nursing or whatever, when they commenced working within the Care Agency etc. on a subcontracted basis, because surely ... I have not looked at the section, I have to say, but my gut instinct is that giving me the date of when these subcontracted workers 370 commenced their placement within the Care Agency is not revealing and not breaching any kind of confidentiality, because the confidentiality must relate to either the employee or the employer.

375 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, when I replied to a question put I believe it was by the Hon. Mr Phillips, I believe it was in relation to GJBS, and I had to reply to the hon. Gentleman not because I sought to be unhelpful but because I was advised that regulation 3 of the Employment Regulations 1994 explicitly states that such information is confidential. I am aware of the Standing Orders of the House, Mr Speaker, that say that we cannot have across the floor of the House a discussion about legalities and whether one agrees with one particular legal opinion or 380 another. However, let me tell the hon. Gentleman that if he refers to regulation 3(1), and indeed (2), he will have the relevant clauses for him to consider.

But, Mr Speaker, it has to be said that we are providing to the hon. Gentleman all the information that he requests – the posts that are being subcontracted etc. – except for the commencement date, so other than that I have been as transparent as I possibly can without 385 breaching the law. But if the hon. Gentleman is concerned to know, I imagine, the posts that are being subcontracted and all that information, indeed the only thing he will not know is since when a particular person has started in a particular post.

390 Hon. D A Feetham: It is not a particular person because nobody has asked for the identity of the person. The issue here for us is that if you have a subcontracted worker who has been placed in a public service position – whether it is in Government or in a Government-owned company or in the Care Agency – and that person has been filling a particular public service post for, say, seven, eight, nine, ten years, it would be a matter ... I am not suggesting that is the position, but just for illustrative purposes it would obviously be a matter of concern that you 395 have a subcontracted individual in those posts for such a length of time. That is why we have asked the question how long have these individuals been placed in those posts on a subcontracted basis. He must understand the relevance and indeed the public interest in the information.

400 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, if I still were the Minister for Employment I would be tempted to just remove those regulations just so that the hon. Gentleman did not make so much mischief every time he stood to ask me supplementaries in this House.

I can assure the public who may be listening in, who may then read Hansard or indeed listen to the audio recording later on the website – as I tend to do to see how we have performed in 405 this House and whether we have been able to remain civil and provide as much information as is humanly possible – that there is no position that I am able to glean from the document provided to me by way of supplementary information ... that there is any person who has been subcontracted for anything more than 2014. So I can tell him without breaching the 410 confidentiality section of the Employment Regulations and end up getting me into hot water for doing exactly what the law does not allow me to do, to say, as a general point that there has been no sub-contraction – and I am double checking for him – since from before 2014.

Q727-729/2016

Dementia Care Centre –

Expressions of interest; awarding of contract; opening date

Acting Clerk: Question 727. The Hon. T N Hammond on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

415 Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government disclose to whom expressions of interest for the Dementia Care Centre were sent and when?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

420 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 728 and 729.

Acting Clerk: Question 728. The Hon. R M Clinton.

425 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if the contract has now been awarded in respect of the Dementia Day Care Centre; and if so, to whom?

Acting Clerk: Question 729. The Hon. R M Clinton.

430 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide an update in respect of the opening date of the residential Dementia and Day Care Centre?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

435 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in respect of the dementia day facility, the GHA approached all known companies registered locally that can provide care services on 7th September of this year.

The GHA has interviewed shortlisted candidates and is in the process of awarding the tender.
The Dementia Day Centre opened the memory clinic component in October of this year.

440 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Minister: in respect of the residential centre I believe that contract was already awarded to Grand Home Care – does he have an opening date? I believe the previous Minister said some time in the autumn.

445 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I recall that I had a question ... because this is a monthly question that the hon.
Member brings and I believe that my monthly reply last time, when I had just assumed new responsibilities, was in fact several months. I do not recall exactly, but it will be in Hansard, and unless my hon. Friend tells me otherwise there has been no change. The last time that we discussed this I think I said it is several months' time, but Hansard will show.

450

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if my memory serves me well – but it may not – I think it was something like five weeks' time, but I am happy to be corrected in due course.

Can the Minister confirm that Grand Home Care is still the provider for the residential dementia facility?

455

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I do not have the information that the hon. Gentleman has asked me for, and instead of trying to recall what my officials told me during the course of this week I would rather go back and ask them and then give him the answer ... I was going to say tomorrow, but it will be Monday now. But if he would excuse me on this occasion, given the recent reallocation of responsibilities, I will definitely write to him on Monday.

460

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I go back to Question 725 a moment? In relation to Question 725, which was when I was asking some supplementaries, can I ask the Hon. the Minister if he could explain the actual table. There are two tables and I would just ask him to explain the difference between the two, which I do not quite understand. The first one obviously tells you that qualified nurses ... there are 20 from Grand Home Care, zero from ADA, zero from S&K, zero from JMF. Nursing assistants – there are 57 from Grand Home Care and three from ADA, zero and zero. And it continues. That I do understand, but what is the interplay between the second table, the ERS SBH ... I presume SBH is St Bernard's Hospital, John Mackintosh Ward is JMW and then Hybrid, but what is the interplay between the second table and the first table?

Mr Speaker, if I may help the hon. Gentleman, the financial guru here to the left has just done one of his calculations and it appears that they may tally in number. So the first table – I would ask him to confirm this – is the profession and the second table is where they are located, and there is a correlation if one does an addition of the numbers. Is that correct?

475

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Mr Clinton is correct.

Hon. D A Feetham: And ERS is where?

480

Hon. N F Costa: Elderly Residential Services.

Hon. E J Reyes: And ERS SBH is St Bernard's Hospital?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, sir.

Hon. E J Reyes: And by 'Hybrid', Mr Speaker? That is the only one where I am lost. The other one is John Mackintosh Ward, but then 'Hybrid'?

Mr Speaker: They are the ones that throw out the papers every evening at 8.30 when they answer the emergency.

490

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, hybrids are people who are not clinical and are not administrative – it is like the industrials. The hybrids referred to at TRS will be the messenger/labourer ... It is a hybrid of responsibilities but it is an industrial post. (Interjections) They will have more than one role.

495

Acting Clerk: Question 730. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, sorry, if I may go back to the Hon. Mr Clinton, to whom I will write on Monday, but having had the opportunity to reread the question that the Gentleman asked me and how I answered, the question that he asked me at 728 is 'can the Government advise if the contract has now been awarded in respect of the Dementia Day Centre', and I said during answer that the shortlisted candidates had been interviewed and that the GHA is in the process of awarding the tender.

505 In respect of the opening of the residential Dementia and Day Care Centre, the question was whether Grand Home Care was still the preferred bidder ... Was that ...? I just want to get it right for when I reply to him.

510 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, yes, just to clarify, Question 729 was in respect of the opening date for each of – i.e. (1) the residential day care and (2) the residential dementia centre – and then my supplementary was: is the chosen contractor still Grand Home Care for the dementia residential unit?

Hon. N F Costa: That is clear now, Mr Speaker, thank you.

Q730/2016
UK nationals working but not living in Gibraltar–
Access to healthcare

515 Acting Clerk: Question 730. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what is the policy in respect of UK nationals working but not living in Gibraltar for access to healthcare in Gibraltar?

520 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, British nationals need to produce their British passport for care under the United Kingdom reciprocal agreement.

525 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, has there been any change in policy recently in this particular area? The reason why I am asking is because I have received two complaints from people who live across the way – UK nationals who are working in Gibraltar – in relation to difficulties that they have experienced accessing health services here in Gibraltar, it appears in relation to the renewal of the card that is produced that they need to renew for these purposes.
530 I just wonder whether there has been a change of policy, or is it just that there are two people who maybe have been unlucky or they have had just simply particular situations in relation to their own cases.

535 Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, there has been no change of policy and I am very sorry to hear that two British nationals have had difficulty in registering. If he were to write to me with the names of those individuals I will make sure that they are attended to straight away.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, may I ask just by way of clarification? a UK national who is working in Gibraltar would not come under the UK reciprocal agreement. I think that the Leader of the Opposition needs to be aware of the difference. That person would be entitled to healthcare in Gibraltar under the good practice medical scheme. The UK reciprocal agreement, correctly, as my hon. Friend has said, will apply to visitors to Gibraltar who are not entitled by way of their employment and contribution in Gibraltar to care in Gibraltar.

Hon. D A Feetham: I will just read the hon. Gentleman the message subsequent to the meeting that I had with a particular individual. This is what she said to me:

I live in Spain and our, my and my husband's, health cards expire on the 14th of this month, so I contacted the registration office in the ICC to remind me what proof of employment forms etc. are required to enable me to do this. It seems I have everything required except that this year the GHA are making it more difficult for frontier workers to access healthcare in Gibraltar without first being registered for health care in Spain.

550 She appears to be indicating that there has been some material change in policy. Having read that to the Hon. Ministers, I wonder whether they can shed some light as to what she is talking about and why would somebody say to her that she first has to be registered in Spain for healthcare before she can be registered in Gibraltar.

555 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I find it interesting that having told the hon. Gentleman that he could write to me with the name of the person and the complaint and I would make sure it is addressed on Monday he still felt the need, for effect, to read the message to me across the floor of the House.

560 I can assure the hon. Gentleman that it has to be a misunderstanding because there has been no change in policy, and I would once again repeat my offer – notwithstanding his theatrics in reading me the message across the floor of the House – that I will personally make sure that the registration happens on Monday. I hope that is to his full satisfaction.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

565 I can assure the hon. Gentleman there were no theatrics intended. It was that after I had asked the hon. Gentleman the question that I remembered that this lady had also sent me a message on Facebook, so I went back to Facebook in order to make sure that I could explain the position further.

Let me say that I have no hesitation in saying that every time I have sent somebody to the hon. Gentleman with a particular problem the hon. Gentleman has always seen that person very promptly and has resolved most of the problems that certainly I have sent him over the years.

Q731/2016
Attempted murder –
Reform to sentencing laws

570 Acting Clerk: Question 731. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Government intend to reform sentencing laws for attempted murder?

575 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Government has noted a recent judgment handed down by the Court of Appeal, as a result of which two sentences relating to offences of attempted murder have been subsequently reduced.

580 The Government is taking advice as to whether the law on sentencing in such cases requires amendment further to these judgments, and, if so, the form of such amendment.

Mr Speaker: Any other supplementary?

ADJOURNMENT

590 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House do now adjourn to Thursday, 24th November at 11 a.m.

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn to next Thursday, 24th November at 11 in the morning.

595 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I just say that I have a very, very longstanding commitment in the diary in the United Kingdom. It is both personal and also of a professional nature. Obviously, I have planned my diary around the third Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of the month and I will not be here on Thursday of next week. It may necessitate me adjourning my questions to next time round, but I will notify Mr Speaker about my intentions.

600 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is indicating he would like those questions not to be Written Answer but to be deferred to the following meeting of Parliament?

605 Hon. D A Feetham: I will give Mr Speaker an answer in relation to it by Monday.

Mr Speaker: Very well.

610 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman could just tell us who is going to be the Acting Leader of the Opposition it might help (Laughter) in case there is any need to liaise between now and then.

615 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, on the Chief Minister's form of wanting to control everything I suppose he will want to do my job as well as his and ask my Questions and answer them himself – but that, I am afraid, is beyond even him.

Hon. Chief Minister: I did his job for the shortest period anybody has ever done it in history before being able to do this job, so I am quite happy for him to choose whoever he wishes to on his side – but he might choose someone one day.

620 Mr Speaker: The House will then adjourn to next Thursday at 11 in the morning.

The House adjourned at 3.55 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Q823/2016

Brexit –

Intention re litigation in English courts

5 Acting Clerk: We continue with questions.
We start with Question 823. The Hon. T N Hammond.

10 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Government intend to follow the example of Scotland and intervene in proceedings currently being litigated in the English courts on whether the UK government can lawfully use prerogative powers to give a notification under Article 50 of the Treaty on European Union of the UK's intention to leave the EU?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

15 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the position at present is that the Government does not intend to intervene in the proceedings.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Government aware that a Gibraltarian is noted as an interested party in the current litigation?

20 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Yes, Mr Speaker, the Government is aware of that.

25 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, may I just ask is the Government intending to provide that individual any kind of assistance in that litigation certainly in terms of his travel to and from the United Kingdom, or any other kind of assistance?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government does not assist litigants in private proceedings.

30 The hon. Gentleman might recall that in the case of Denise Matthews, who went to the European Court of Human Rights, she obtained legal aid – legal assistance, as I think it is termed even by the European Court of Human Rights – in respect of that matter. In this case, all of the litigants are funded by what is known as crowd funding, which is a collection of funding from individuals who might support a particular cause. Neither has the Government been approached by this person, asking us to provide any funding whatsoever.

35 The Government is not intervening itself and is not supporting a Gibraltar who is intervening. The Government is dealing with the issues that arise in Brexit politically in our exchanges with the British government. We do not consider that it is appropriate for one Government to litigate against another. In some instances the Government has intervened as interested parties in litigation, for example in the case of the GBGA versus the United Kingdom government. The Gibraltar Government has intervened but is not taking sides in that case. We believe that, as politicians, we should be involved in political exchanges with the British Government. We would only take legal proceedings in extremis.

45 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, from that answer would I be right to infer that the Government disagrees with the positions taken by the Scottish and Welsh governments in participating in the litigation?

50 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government does not give opinions on the opinions of others. The hon. Gentleman has asked us whether we agree with the opinion of the Scottish government. The Government of Gibraltar – through the Office of the Deputy Chief Minister, who is the Minister with responsibility for Brexit, and through the Office of the Chief Minister – is engaged in negotiating the best possible deal for Gibraltar in the context of the decision of the people of the United Kingdom to exit the European Union. We will continue to do that and I think that the hon. Gentleman might wish to say with the success that we are meeting, but in the case of the matter which is before the courts of the United Kingdom the hon. Gentleman needs to reflect that that case relates to the right of parliamentarians in the United Kingdom to make a decision versus the right of the Prime Minister to make a decision. In other words, it is a question of whether the executive of the United Kingdom engages a particular action or whether it is an action that can only be engaged by the Parliament of the United Kingdom. Therefore, parts of the United Kingdom may wish to intervene in the courts of the United Kingdom in respect of that matter. The legal definition of the United Kingdom does not include Gibraltar and Gibraltar does not have representation in the Parliament of the United Kingdom. Therefore, the Government of Gibraltar does not consider, before even determining whether we would want to take that action, that Gibraltar should be represented by their Government in those proceedings.

65 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one further supplementary in relation to that question: has the Government been approached by any devolved government to participate in these proceedings, or been invited at least?

70 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government has many discussions ongoing with the governments of the devolved administrations of the United Kingdom and the government of the United Kingdom, and we are not going to be giving any indication of what those discussions relate to other than in the press statements that might be agreed between the governments of

75 the devolved administrations and the Gibraltar Government that we should be indicating what it is that we are discussing. I do not think it is in the interests of Gibraltar at all that we should do that.

80 What we will continue to do is continue the excellent work which is being undertaken by the Deputy Chief Minister and by other officials of the Government – in particular the Attorney General, who has built a career around issues relating to European law – and all of the Departments of Government that are engaged to ensure that in partnership with the United Kingdom, not in litigation against the government of the United Kingdom, we secure the best possible deal for Gibraltar out of the decision of the people of the United Kingdom to exit the European Union.

85 We will continue the excellent work that we have been doing with Minister Walker of the Department for Exiting the European Union and with Minister Duncan of the Foreign Office and the technical and administrative teams that they have composed to do the work that needs to be done to navigate this very difficult moment in the history of the United Kingdom, in the history of Europe and in the history of Gibraltar, through partnership and in an attempt to 90 ensure that we get the best possible deal for Gibraltar in respect of all of the areas that are now up for discussion. We do not believe that that is an avenue best pursued through litigation.

INFRASTRUCTURE AND PLANNING

Q784/2016

Parking management company – Financial incentives

Acting Clerk: We move to Question 784. The Hon. T N Hammond.

95 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the private company contracted to manage parking offences on behalf of the Government receive any kind of financial incentive for the number of fixed penalty notices it issues or clamps it places?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

100 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): No, Mr Speaker.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND THE GSB

Q794-799/2016

Project Search and Supported Employment Company Ltd – Terms and conditions of employment

110 Acting Clerk: We move to Question 794. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose in what inroads have been made towards Project Search or any other framework of Supported Internship?

115 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer this question, Mr Speaker, with Questions 795 to 799.

120 Acting Clerk: Question 795. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose which departments, companies, agencies or authorities are the employees of Supported Employment Company Ltd providing services to?

Acting Clerk: Question 796. The Hon. L F Llamas.

130 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain what leave and sick leave entitlements are extended to the employees of Supported Employment Company Ltd?

Acting Clerk: Question 797. The Hon. L F Llamas.

135 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain what pension plans have been offered to the employees of Supported Employment Company Ltd?

Acting Clerk: Question 798. The Hon. L F Llamas.

140 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose what hourly rate is paid to the employees of Supported Employment Company Ltd; if employees are on different rates, then provide a schedule detailing the number of employees on each rate?

Acting Clerk: Question 799. The Hon. L F Llamas.

145 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose how many employees are employed by Supported Employment Company Ltd, together with a schedule detailing when each employee was employed?

150 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
Mr Speaker, I would remind the hon. Member opposite, who might not be aware of it, how badly the 15 years that his party was in government compares with what is being provided now. I would like to remind him of what was provided up to December 2011.

155 The individuals now employed by Supported Employment Company were individuals in the so-called Vocational Training Scheme. Some of them had been there for many years. They were paid an allowance of some £400 a month, which translated into an hourly rate of £2.50, roughly half of the national minimum wage. They had no employment rights and therefore no entitlement to sick or annual leave, nor did they have social insurance cover for old age pension or industrial injury.

160 As the House was informed in 2012 and on several occasions since then, those involved were transferred on 1st February to the Employment Training Company and together with other individuals then being paid the same amount as vocational trainees. A few months later, the Supported Employment Company was especially created for the benefit of those it was felt would not be able to enter into mainstream employment. A number of individuals were therefore transferred to this company and others have joined since. They were given indefinite contracts of employment. At the end of September the numbers employed by the company was 68 and the start dates of their employments were as follows: 1998, two; 1999, three; 2000, one; 165 2001, two; 2002, one; 2004, two; 2005, one; 2006, two; 2007, one; 2008, six; 2009, five; 2010, six; 2011, four – these are the ones that were then transferred – 2012, twelve; 2013, eleven; 2014, two; 2015, seven.

170 As can be seen from the figures, 36 of the 68 were already in the discredited Vocational Training Scheme prior to December 2011.

175 These employees are placed in the Care Agency, the Employment Service, the IT Department, the Environmental Agency, St Martins, the Air Terminal, the Tourist Office, the Education Department, the Electricity Authority, the Post Office, the Port Department, the MOT Centre and several private sector businesses.

180 Mr Speaker, as the Parliament has been informed and is public knowledge, employees of the training companies have been paid the national minimum wage since February 2012. This applies equally to employees of the Supported Employment Company on exactly the same terms as the other employees and as is the case with a very substantial part of the private sector.

185 The terms and conditions of employment of all the EDEC companies, including Supported Employment, are also those that apply generally in the private sector, namely the statutory terms. Like every other employee with an employment contract, those in Supported Employment will be eligible eventually, on retirement, to a social insurance old age pension and will also be able to access payments from the charity Community Care Ltd.

There are no plans to introduce any measures for which there is no manifesto commitment.

190 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, before going into the detailed analysis of all the answers being provided, I do not seem to have received an answer on the Government commitment on Project Search or Supported Internship in terms of how far the Government has progressed in that area, given that there is actually already a provision in the Estimates Book from this year to commence on that – there was a £10,000 budget there for it. Is the Government able to disclose 195 how far in the project it has actually achieved so far?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the Project Search concept in the United Kingdom operates on the basis that those involved are given six months unpaid placement with an employer who hopefully will employ them. I think that is inferior to what we already have in Gibraltar, and 200 there is no manifesto commitment to replace what we have got with what they do in the UK in Supported Internships, which is the only information that I have related to the comparison between what we are doing and what Project Search in the UK constitutes.

Hon. L F Llamas: So does that actually mean that the Government will not be going ahead 205 with Project Search as indicated in the Budget this year?

Hon. J J Bossano: Anything that is done in that area will not be in replacement of what we are doing in the Ministry for Economic Development in providing employment; it would be in terms of additional provision which may be done with private entities. But it will not involve the kind of 210 support that we give now to people who are not able to obtain employment in the market.

I think I have mentioned before in a previous question that the hon. Member put to me – or Miss Nahon put to me – that in the cases of persons with difficulties for a variety of reasons, which includes persons with disabilities that make employment more difficult, our first option is to find them employment in the public sector, and in order to do that we provide more financial 215 support than we would provide to a trainee who comes out of school but has got no problem really in finding a placement. It is only when we exhaust those possibilities that we then put them in the system that we have created in the new training company for supported employment provision, half of whom are in the private sector. But the hon. Member will see from the figures that the bulk of the intake happened in 2012 and 2013 and that in fact the 220 figures compare favourably with the average numbers that were entering in previous years.

So, to what extent is there still a gap that needs to be filled by undertaking something else in the Project Search? Frankly, I am not very clear that such a need exists – other than perhaps to supplement or complement what we are already doing.

225 Hon. L F Llamas: Well, the main gap, which is what I am being told by various people, employees and professionals, is the actual follow-up of the employees on what they are doing, the support that they should be getting in terms of where will they be in five years' time, can they progress any further, is it the right job for them. That, at the moment, does not seem to be happening, and it would be something that would be happening if the proper framework, such 230 as Project Search or a supported internship department were actually in place. So that is the main area that I feel is being overlooked by the Government and I would be grateful if the hon.
Member would disclose if maybe this area could be improved.

Hon. J J Bossano: I can tell you what we do have is a number of volunteers from the persons 235 who are over 60 and working as community officers, who are allocated the 68 that we have, and who therefore, under the community care system the work that they take on is in fact to keep in touch with the persons we have got in employment.

There have been a number of people who have been able to move from supported employment into mainstream employment in the four years that the system has been in place, 240 but I do not think there would be more than maybe four or five people who have moved on. So to my knowledge there is no desire from the people who are there, no indication and no feedback to me that they want to move on from where they are. In fact, sometimes we have a problem in that somebody in the private sector who might have been accommodating in being willing to provide a placement – which does not cost them any money but nevertheless means that they have got a certain responsibility, and they have to have the capability to do it and we monitor that they are doing it ... but sometimes they tell us that for some reason or another to do with the way the business is performing they are no longer able to provide us with that service. Once a person has been in an area like that for a number of years they tend to resist moving elsewhere. So, if there are people who want to move on and if they think that we are not doing enough to help them move on, then I would be very happy to know who they are and deal with it specifically, but from the staff who deal with monitoring this and ensuring that the 68 employees are being properly treated and are happy where they are, I have not had that feedback.

Hon. L F Llamas: A couple of weeks ago I had the pleasure of meeting a lady from the UK who works for BASE, the British Association for Supported Employment in the UK, as did the Hon. Minister Costa. It was very interesting, because obviously the main argument and the model that they use in the UK that actually works very well is that these employees are usually employed in the private sector and they are actually not employed directly by Government. This does provide a lot of incentives and it actually improves businesses and they actually start to receive business revenue out of employing people with disabilities or learning disabilities, because they are seen as good employers and it has benefits for them in the same way.

But one of the things obviously that maybe the Hon. Minister would like to take on board is also what Supported Internships do in the terms of the follow-up. The Hon. Minister has said that the follow-up and the keeping in touch is done by the employees of the Community Care, and I would beg the Government to actually think about other ways of keeping in touch and following up with people who are actually professionally qualified in assessing these situations and monitoring them. Would the Government be able to at least look into this area whilst the Supported Employment Company is still in place?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member seems to have forgotten what they were doing for 15 years. For 15 years they had a system which was incredibly inferior to what is happening now, and therefore it is all very well to come and say that we should be doing more than we are doing.

The people who are qualified to assess them in terms of their medical problems are not the people from Community Care. The people from Community Care are just going to make sure that they get a regular visit, that the person is not having problems at work and that the employer is actually maintaining the person in the kind of work they were promised to do originally. This is predominantly something that is perhaps necessary in the private sector. Clearly, since half of them are in the public sector, we know exactly where they are because all we need to do is call up the head of department. Some of these individuals have been there for many, many years –remember that the oldest one is from 1998 – and they have been doing the same task for many years in some of these areas, particularly in the public sector. The feedback I get from those who have been dealing with them for many years and have known them for many years is that if one of the individuals for one reason or another is not happy there, then we get told that and we find them an alternative placement. But the reality of it is that our experience in the four years that the scheme has been in operation is that they resist movement. Even when the Department in the Government or the private sector employer may feel that they are not really able to accommodate the person, the person still wants to be there because that is what they have been doing for a very long time. Usually, the people who have some of these learning disabilities have problems adjusting to change. The familiarity is a big, important part of their being happier where they are.

295 The internship in the United Kingdom, as I pointed out to the hon. Member, is something that, from the point of view of wearing my hat as being responsible for improving the efficient use of public money, might be a better solution, because the Government does not spend any money in the UK – it gives somebody an internship for six months unpaid. I do not think there are going to be many volunteers to move from getting the national minimum wage in Gibraltar, which is not what people get outside Gibraltar. We have got 9,000 people in Gibraltar in the private sector working for the national minimum wage and 68 of them with indefinite contracts 300 for life working on that, with the conditions that the 9,000 have.

If there are any individuals who feel, or their family feels could do better and if there is anything the Government can do so that they move out of supported employment and they move into the normal employment market, that is fine. I can tell you that some of the people we have got in the Government ... sometimes their family lobbies so that they should be paid as civil servants and not paid as being in the private sector, but they are not occupying a post in the Civil 305 Service which would exist if they were not there. The 50% of the 68 who are in the public sector are supernumerary to what the Department is, and therefore it is not that they are occupying an existing post and are getting paid the minimum wage.

I have not had any representations made to me, and if they have been made to somebody in 310 my Department it has not reached me. If the hon. Member has got any information that he is willing to pass to me that will enable me to investigate what he is suggesting, then I am willing to do it if it is for the benefit of those affected, which is the only thing that really matters.

Hon. L F Llamas: I can certainly say that obviously my attempt at trying to be constructive, 315 providing the Government with constructive criticism of what is failing, is because ... I accept that obviously that there are instances where employees would not want to move and they have become accustomed to a certain job and they may actually like the repetitiveness of it and that is what they thrive on. But many of these cases may be unable to express that they are unhappy, and if they receive a phone call or somebody goes into the office and does not have the 320 professional background to be able to know whether that person is generally unhappy because that person is unable to express themselves ... That is why I was raising that question.

Moving on to my next supplementary, I wanted to also ask whether there are cases which are evaluated of these employees who perhaps are doing very similar or equal jobs to people who are actually employed directly by Government, or the company or agency, but are actually losing 325 out because they are being paid the minimum wage and are receiving minimum benefits such as annual leave and sick leave – whether this could be assessed perhaps individually on a case-by-case basis in terms of if Government is actually reaping a benefit because they might be working at the same rate as an AA, for example, but not having to employ an AA.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I think I have already answered that question, Mr Speaker. If there is 330 somebody in a place where there are two AAs and this is a third person, that third person is there because it is assumed that there is not work for three and that there is work for two; and if, in fact, there was work for three then the person from Supported Employment would not automatically get the job because that would then be getting into the Civil Service through a 335 different entry point.

Given the numbers of people who want to be in the Government, we would suddenly find a huge increase in people wanting to be in Supported Employment in the first instance as a means to an end. So the answer is that if a particular Department needs more staff, that is assessed, and if they need more staff and it has to be recruited, it should be recruited in the normal 340 procedure. Nobody in the Supported Employment Company is denied the opportunity of applying for any job that comes out, but I have told the hon. Member that in the four years I think we have actually had something like four persons who were with us actually applying for other jobs and leaving this company and getting the other jobs. Everybody has got the opportunity to do that and they get whatever help and assistance they need to be able to do it,

345 but what we cannot do is say that because we have got somebody who has been in the Post Office, for example, since 1998 – I do not know whether the ones from 1998 are there, but to give the hon. Member an example we cannot say, ‘Well, okay, because they have been working in the parcel post since 1998 we are now going to create a new job in the parcel post and give it 350 to one of them and pay them Civil Service rates.’ That is not the way to deal with the situation. If the job exists and they apply in competition with other people, they would not be disadvantaged by having been there before – they would have an advantage by being there before, but the job has to exist.

Hon. L F Llamas: I am not actually referring to creating further posts or for these people to be 355 able to –

Mr Speaker: May I point out that these exchanges are now acquiring more the nature of a debate to and fro, rather than to urge the Government to take action and seek information.
What you cannot be doing is expressing different points of view, because then it becomes a 360 debate.

Hon. L F Llamas: Okay, so will the Government look into perhaps increasing annual leave and sick leave entitlements beyond the minimum statutory requirements, so that it regularises positions of employees employed under Supported Employment to its peers who are employed 365 directly by Government? There seems to be a parity issue there, and obviously the employees of Supported Employment, who should actually be receiving at least the same benefits as their peers, could be regularised and therefore they would be in a much better position.

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker. For 15 years they were getting no employment rights 370 whatsoever. They now have the employment rights that are enjoyed by something like 15,000 people in the private sector. I have told the hon. Member that half of the Supported Employment individuals are placed in the private sector, so is the hon. Member saying if you are in the public sector you get one set of conditions and if you are in the private sector you get another one? The reality of it is that if I followed the advice that he is giving me, it would mean 375 that half of them would be getting Government conditions and the other half would be getting private sector conditions. How long does he think it would take for the half in the private sector to say ‘I want to be put in the public sector’? He is going contrary to what he started off with when he was recommending the movement into supporting them in the private sector. That is how we started and now he is suggesting the very opposite. He must understand that he is 380 asking me to introduce a system where the employment company would discriminate in the conditions of employment as between the placement providers. If I were to do it in the private sector, then the situation would be that the people who are in normal employment conditions in that particular establishment would then be saying, ‘Why should the person who has been placed here be getting more than me?’

385 The reality is that the system we have got is a vast improvement on what was there before and is better than they have outside Gibraltar. In the United Kingdom, as the hon. Member recognises, the Government does not pay anybody anything. They give them unpaid internships for six months and then the private sector employs them. The private sector does not employ them in the United Kingdom on Civil Service terms and conditions; it employs them on private 390 sector terms and conditions. We are making sure that the Supported Employment Company is giving the same conditions as private sector companies do and the same conditions as are given to the trainees in construction training, in engineering training and in the other fields of training.

The only reason we took them from what were the training companies ... We put everybody from the VTS into the training companies and then I had representations from those or from the 395 families of those affected that maybe we should give the people we had put in the companies greater security than annual contracts, because after all the people in the training companies 400 were having annual contracts because it was a stepping stone to another job, but the people here were likely to be there for all their lives. Therefore, on the basis of that – and something that was at the time supported by the Leader of the Opposition and welcomed by him when I did it, which was three or four months after the first move – we gave them indefinite contracts. So you have got a situation where they have got a job for life and they are guaranteed in that job for life that they will never be worse off than if they were working in the private sector, where two thirds of the population is working, and on the conditions of the private sector. They have the same choice and opportunity of moving into the public sector as anybody else in Gibraltar has, but what I do not think we can really commit ourselves to doing is to give somebody, 405 because they have got a disability, more than they would get if they did not have the disability.

Hon. L F Llamas: My last supplementary, Mr Speaker.

410 The reason for the shift was obviously because I was under the impression, given that there was a mention in the Budget, that there would be a quicker move towards Project Search starting, and that was why I shifted my argument. I just wanted to know exactly what the position was. It was not that I shifted my personal opinion.

415 Just a statistical supplementary: how many employees are actually in the public sector and how many employees are providing services in the private sector? I do not think I have been given that figure.

Hon. J J Bossano: I think it is about 50-50.

Mr Speaker: Before we move to Question –

420 Hon. E J Reyes: May I, Mr Speaker? Just one thing. Can I please ask the hon. Member to clarify. Right at the very beginning of his answer he was giving us a recollection of how some conditions have improved. Did I hear correctly the Minister say that when they were registered as trainees of the VTS scheme, there were no social insurance provisions? Did the Minister say that? 425

Hon. J J Bossano: That is indeed the case, and in fact I think we had to make a provision to do a backdated payment for the Social Security because they were getting an allowance – they were not treated as employees, they did not have a contract of employment, they were not covered by the Employment Act, they were not protected against unfair dismissal. Not just these, none of the VTS, because they were all treated as not being in employment – to the extent, in fact, that I represented somebody, when I was in opposition, who challenged that in the tribunal and the tribunal ruled that it was not a contract of employment for somebody who had been seven years in the college library. 430

435 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, perhaps I need to talk further later on with the Minister, because I understand what he is saying about not being an employment contract but I can guarantee to him that social insurance contributions were being made by the employee as well as if it were an employer – the training unit as such, because it was an ESF funded project, were actually paying the equivalent of what an employer was paying, precisely so that these individuals, although technically still a trainee, were already starting to acquire rights for future old age pension. 440

445 He may not have been given the full correct information, but certainly looking back – because I do not want those individuals concerned to lose out in the future, because for x number of years there was an employer equivalent an employee contribution towards that fund, which will be for the trainees' or now employees' benefit in the long term when it comes to old age pension.

But it need be, Mr Speaker. We will not waste our time here. We can exchange views later, because I think we are both mutually interested in helping the individual.

450 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I think what happened was that they were at one time, and then they stopped being later on because there was a change from them being treated as employees. In the earlier part of the 15 years they were treated as employees, and then an agreement was done, in which I think Mr Montiel was involved on the union side, and then they were taken out, and then they had to be put back retrospectively.

455 Mr Speaker: Before we deal with Question 800, the Hon. Trevor Hammond has indicated he would like to ask some supplementaries arising from Question 785, the schedule that was provided.

460 Hon. T N Hammond: Thank you, Mr Speaker, yes, if I may refer back to the question, some of the figures are quite noteworthy, the figures that we have been provided.

For instance, and to give some background to the question, the number of fixed penalty notices issued in September 2014 was 1,360; for September 2015, 1,018; and for September 2016, 2,652. Likewise for October, for 2014, 970; 2015, 1,087; and 2016, 2,817. This constitutes almost a 200% increase month on month in the issuing of notices.

465 Can I ask the Hon. the Minister if he could advise whether any instructions or guidelines have been given to the company issuing these notices and whether there has been any change in policy on Government's part?

470 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, as we discussed in detail last time, there has been no change in policy whatsoever. The instruction given to the company in question is to follow the law itself, and the law states that where cars are indiscriminately parked a fine is applied to such vehicles.

475 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the law being applied universally in all areas of Gibraltar? Has the company been instructed to target any areas in particular, or indeed to target less other areas?

480 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the company will actually police in the areas they feel necessary. They are instructed to police all areas of Gibraltar. They themselves will perhaps note that there is an acute problem in certain areas over other areas, so it is up to them as to where they police.

Obviously, they know that there are areas in question... I will give an example: Water Gardens is one of those areas in question whereby the amount of indiscriminate parking and causing obstruction to the flow of traffic is rampant, so they will probably police that area more than they would police, say, a parking lot. So they use their better judgement in that respect.

485 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the company employ an expert to determine which areas are particular hot spots? For instance, I would not consider Grand Parade to be a particular hot spot in terms of obstruction to vehicles, and yet I have witnessed myself a veritable army of clampers and wardens handing out tickets there. On what basis does the company determine which are the particularly critical areas that need to be targeted and which areas are less important?

490 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, they use their own judgement. If there is a street-cleaning campaign, for example, there are days in Grand Parade where, yes, they will be there in force, and if vehicles have not been removed by their respective owners you would expect an army of officers there in that given moment in time.

495 If you allow cars to park just indiscriminately, I am sure the hon. Member would not be asking questions as to why we allow them to be clamped. I do not see what the hon. Member is getting at. It is either ... Are we doing too well, or are we not doing well enough? I just do not know what 500 the point is.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, what I am getting at is that there does appear to have been a change, in the methodology at least if not the policy, insofar as the fact that the number of notices has gone up dramatically and the unsuspecting public is certainly feeling the influence of that change. Even though it is not a Government policy in itself to effect that change, it is clearly 505 a policy or is clearly an effect that has come about from the introduction of this company.

Is the company liaising at all with the Royal Gibraltar Police, who I would have thought would be the subject matter experts in this particular area, to determine which areas should be targeted and which should not?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, is the hon. Member actually saying that perhaps we are placing too many FPNs and we should perhaps take a more lenient approach, turn a blind eye and allow people to park indiscriminately?

If we look at the figures and we analyse the figures that I passed on to the hon. Gentleman, if I take the largest figure, which is 2,817 for the month of October this year, and we divide that by 515 30 days on average, there are about 94 FPNs placed per day. If you divide that by the amount of officers out there, around 10 officers, we are talking about them placing nine or 10 FPNs each per day. I can drive out of my house and see, within a question of minutes, 10 cars badly parked.

Perhaps what the hon. Gentleman is referring to is perhaps before – maybe the amount of FPNs being placed was not acceptable. I did not want to go into figures pre 2011 because we 520 have said that we really should not be looking back, but I am happy to do so, if the hon. Gentleman would like, as a comparison. I will look at, for example, May 2015 – 210 – and divide that by 30 days, and it was about seven FPNs per day. So each officer is placing 0.7 FPNs a day. Would the hon. Gentleman be happy with that? Is that more acceptable in that respect? I just do not see ... The law states that cars that are indiscriminately ... Remember what is happening: cars 525 are parking on footpaths, and they may be aggrieved because they have been fined but those mothers who are walking their prams and have to go onto the road ... I do not know what the issue is.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I will try to explain. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) The Chief 530 Minister is completely correct and has my support on that one.

Mr Speaker, what my hon. colleague was trying to say ... We are not querying the numbers being too high or too low. What was being asked by this last supplementary was ... The hon. Minister explained, yes, there may not have been a change of policy, other than this is the law being implemented and so on. The hon. Member actually asked specifically is there a specific co-535 ordination, and we think if there is then there has certainly been some improvement in that co-ordination with the Royal Gibraltar Police, who are the ones I think one would be considered to be the experts on the issue. That is –

Mr Speaker: That question was asked by Mr Hammond and you are now asking it again.
540

Hon. E J Reyes: No, we have not got the answer, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Right, well, we will give the Minister an opportunity to answer. Is there any co-545 ordination between the Police and the company?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, of course the company liaises with the Police; they work together. The Police will seek assistance from the company and vice versa, so they work together as part of the overall package of parking enforcement. But is the actual PMOs, as we call them, who place the FPNs and also, in liaison with the Police, will support events and 550 functions like Memorial Day with the removal of vehicles. So they work hand in hand; they work symbiotically.

Q800-811 and 813-820/2016

Finance

Mr Speaker: Question 800. The Hon. Roy Clinton.

555 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a summary of the amount of proceeds paid into the Improvement and Development Fund by Government-owned or controlled companies, including the Gibraltar Development Corporation, in respect of related party property transactions, namely purchases of property from the Government, for each of the following financial years: 31st March 2012, 31st March 2013, 31st March 2014, 31st March 2015 and 31st March 2016?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

Acting Clerk: Question 801. The Hon. R M Clinton.

570 Mr Speaker: Effectively, other than Question 812, the hon. Member should pretty well stand up and ask all the questions on the Agenda Paper.

575 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I will of course do that with what is becoming my usual protest at having to lump so many questions together. I am sure, Mr Speaker, you will indulge me, when I come to ask supplementaries, to be given more time to consider the answers from the Hon. Minister.

580 Can the Government provide a summary of the amount of stamp duty paid into the Consolidated Fund by Government-owned and controlled companies in respect of related property transactions, namely purchases of property from Government or purchases of property from other Government-owned and controlled companies, including the Gibraltar Development Corporation, for each of the following financial years: 31st March 2012, 31st March 2013, 31st March 2014, 31st March 2015 and 31st March 2016?

630 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it has had confirmation from the Attorney General that the General Sinking Fund (Establishment) Notice 2012 (LN 2012/189) allows for the payment of interest in addition to capital?

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the purpose of Gibraltar General Construction Company Ltd?

Acting Clerk: Question 815. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Acting Clerk: Question 819. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the contractual terms of the call deposit by Credit Finance Company Ltd with Gibraltar Investment (Holdings) Ltd, specifically interest payable and notice for withdrawing of said deposit?

680

Acting Clerk: Question 820. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

685

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, has the Sunborn Hotel paid any capital off a loan provided to it by Credit Finance Company Ltd?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

690

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I&D receipts from property sales to Government companies have been £90 million in 2012-13, £37.1 million in 2013-14; £26.4 million in 2015-16.

695

Consolidated Fund stamp duty receipts have been £7,140,000 in 2014-15.

It is impossible to say at any given moment in time whether there is or there is not at that specific moment a Government company or GDC company whose current liabilities exceed its current assets or vice versa, or where both current assets and current liabilities are identical.

The Gibraltar Development Corporation owns the following companies: GDC (Directors) Ltd, Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd, Credit Finance Company Ltd (Ordinary Shares), Economic Development and Employment Company Ltd. The latter has the following subsidiaries: Gibraltar National Exploration of Minerals Gas and Oil Company Ltd; RMB Investments Company Ltd; Zero

Carbon Footprint Company Ltd; Skills Enhancement Training Company Ltd; Supported 705 Employment Company Ltd; Graduate Research and Development Company Ltd; Employment Training Company Ltd; Gibraltar General Construction Company Ltd; Construction Training Company Ltd; and Gibraltar National Mint, which owns, in turn, the Gibraltar International Mint.

As has been previously explained in Parliament, the costs referred to by the Principal Auditor related to the planned expansion of the Gibraltar Savings Bank prior to the creation of the 710 Gibraltar International Bank. Any future expansion plans have not yet been finally decided.

All the investments or deposits shown in the statement of investments of the Savings Bank Fund that I provide the hon. Member with are made because the Savings Bank has decided to make them. I will not be providing any further details beyond what is already included in that statement.

Credit Finance Ltd redeemable preference shares do not have a fixed maturity date.

715 The position as regards the investment of GSBA is as stated previously in answer to this question.

The Government is satisfied that the General Sinking Fund allows for the payment of interest and is not in conflict with the Constitution.

720 There were no Capital Bonds redeemed in the financial year ending 31st March 2014 and no bonds issued on 1st September 2014.

GAR Ltd purchased the Mount property as an investment and paid for it from resources available to it.

I suppose, Mr Speaker, that the purpose of Gibraltar General Construction Company Ltd was to conduct general construction.

725 Total liquid reserves came down by £160 million in the financial year 2014-15 because the Government invested this amount in Gibraltar for the benefit of its people.

The position as regards total liquid reserves composition, when, where and how these are invested on a particular date chosen by the Member opposite, continues to be as previously stated.

730 The position of the public debt on 1st October 2016 is as it was estimated on 1st September 2016, except that the cash reserve is now estimated at £59 million and the net debt at £387 million for that month.

Credit Finance Company Ltd call deposit is at 6.5% interest and repayable when required.

735 The position as regards loans provided by Credit Finance Company Ltd continues to be as previously stated.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I will obviously have to beg your indulgence as I trawl through the answers. It is quite a substantial list of questions and answers for me to absorb all in one go, 740 but I will hopefully, one by one, address each of the questions, but it may take me a bit longer than if I had been able to get the answers individually.

If I can take the hon. Member to Question 811, I was specifically interested in the terms of these capital bonds. He tells me that none were issued or redeemed in that financial year, but I actually have the Principal Auditor's Report that ... unless I have made a mistake, but I doubt it.
745 Yes, Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Member has got the better of me. It should have been 2015 in the Capital Bonds, but I wonder if he might be able to indulge me and explain what the terms are of these Capital Bonds.

Hon. J J Bossano: From memory, I think the terms were that what would have been the interest, had they been paying interest, was accrued and added to the capital value of the bond 750 on redemption when they were redeemed. So if it was 6% a year, for example, then it was repaid at 106%.

755 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Member for that explanation. Would he be able to explain why this particular structure was decided upon as opposed to a traditional bond or a coupon?

760 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, because I am not going to answer any of his questions when he asks me why I do something. The Government governs. I have been there and I have been here, and I can tell him there are things that you do there and there are things that you do here, and they are not the same things. We take policy decisions and we are required to explain what we are doing, but we are not required to explain why we are doing it. We are doing it because we think it is the right thing to do or because we believe it is an advantage to do it. But that is something that the hon. Member has to understand: no Opposition has had the benefit of being able to require somebody to give him an explanation of why. Why do I open my office at seven o'clock in the morning and close it at eight o'clock at night? I suppose because I am a workaholic. The issue is that whenever he asks why we do things, it is because we have taken the decision to do it.

770 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I will ask just one final supplementary on Question 811, and that is if the hon. Member could just confirm to me – and I think we probably have the same understanding – that, given the way this note was structured, the yield or the return on this note is not deemed traditional interest.

775 Hon. J J Bossano: I fail to see what the question is. Whether it is deemed or not deemed, how does that arise from a question in which he asked me why something was redeemed on a date? And in fact he got that date wrong. That was the original question. He then puts a supplementary and I give him what I believe is correct, but I told him it was from memory. I have not gone back to check that as it was not in the original question.

780 I suppose that if you have got a capital bond then increasing the value of the capital is not deemed to be interest, but I do not see why it is relevant to anything else in the question.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I could direct the hon. Member to Question 803, I have requested an organogram: is the Minister willing to provide that to the House?

785 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member requested an organogram in an answer to be given orally; I do not know how to give organograms orally.

Mr Speaker: Whatever it is, the Chair needs to be elucidated. For the benefit of the Chair, what are these queer objects? (Laughter)

790 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, it is quite simple. It is not something I indulge in – organograms are not my favourite area – but it is something that the hon. Member can do for himself. He seems to want Government Ministers to be doing his work. I have given him what company is the owner of other companies, so what the organogram does is ... He has the name of the company and then a little line which shows all the companies that are below that. I have given that verbally in the oral answer that he requested. What I cannot do is verbally draw a structure in the air, as if it were dealing with virtual reality, so that he would see a picture which can only be given in a written answer.

800 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am, as always, grateful for the hon. Member's answer; and yes, I accept I can actually draw it from the information he has given me.

Mr Speaker, if I can move on to Question 804, in respect of the costs incurred by the Savings Bank, would I be correct in saying that the teller machines and other equipment have now been written off?

805 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, nothing has been written off because I have told him we have not yet taken a decision on what we will be doing.

We have actually taken some steps on something that was intended to be done when we were planning the original development of the Savings Bank and were not anticipating that Barclays Bank would suddenly decide to go and we would need to do something very quickly to be able to replace that as a credit institution. The hon. Member knows the industry better than I do and I do not need to point out to him the kind of chaos we would have had if 17,000 people had been made 'bankless' the next day, particularly the many small businesses that are dependent. So we stopped what we were doing with the Savings Bank and decided that we needed a licensed credit institution to take over the staff, the accounts and the customers.

815 But some things have already been started and therefore ... For example, one of the things we have done is migrated the savings accounts so that we have got them now electronically, which we were doing for the expansion but which we decided to do anyway. We have not given up the possibility that we may be able to use plastic cards and ATMs for people to take money out of their accounts, but we would not be issuing things like credit cards or payment cards – but we might go down the route of actually making it easier to withdraw money from the bank by retaining the ATMs.

The answer is that the expenditure we did has not been written off but some of it has been recovered through some money that we were able to get in respect of some of the investments that we made. Other things have been expenditure that have been reflected in certain improvements in the Savings Bank in terms of our record keeping, which were ... The bulk of the money is in debentures and bonds and so forth in terms of the amount of cash, but in fact there are more customers in the Savings Bank ordinary account. Even though that is only something like £83 million we have got something like 15,000 customers. That has now been computerised and migrated, and that may mean that we are able to produce a more efficient service in that area, so some of the investments which we might not have made had we not been planning to do something else, we have actually put to good use. And there may be some further good use to which things that we have invested in but we are not using at the moment will be used in the future. I think that is taken care of by my final sentence, where I have told the hon. Member that any future expansion plans have not yet been finally decided, so it is still an ongoing process.

835 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, may I first of all congratulate the Minister for what appears to have been a seamless migration. It is rare that you manage to get a migration without your customers finding out ... or there being any glitches, whereas it would appear that it has been a successful migration and I congratulate the Minister for updating what obviously was an outdated system.

If I may, finally, on this particular question, just ask: does the Savings Bank still retain the four automatic teller machines, or has it perhaps sold them to somebody else?

845 Hon. J J Bossano: No, I believe we have still got them.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I can now move on to Question 805 in respect of the shareholding in Visa. If I recall correctly, I did ask some time ago about the debit card system in this House earlier this year and was advised it had been abandoned, and the cost was about £1,000, I think, at that time. Would the Minister be able to advise me if I am correct in saying this is a shareholding which is similar to the Gibraltar International Bank, in which it has to acquire some kind of participatory interest in Visa in order to participate in the Visa network?

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, I believe that is the original reason for it. Yes.

855 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, finally, given the Minister's previous comments as to not having completely settled the future plans for the Savings Bank, would I be correct in saying that for the foreseeable future, at least until those plans are finalised, that shareholding will be retained, or is required to be retained?

860 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, no, I think, given the fact that we made the investment, we are retaining it because it is a good investment to have. If we had not been planning what we were planning, we might not have done it. It is like what we have done with the investment in the ATMs. If we had not been planning to do what we were, we might not have bought the ATMs. Having bought them, we need to put them to use. The position is that there was a requirement
865 at the time, so it was not a decision that we took to invest in this as opposed to the kind of investments that we do, but it is a good investment and that is why we are keeping it.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am not sure if I actually picked up the answer to Question 806, in terms of maturity dates and deposits placed with the International Bank by the Savings Bank. Was I correct in understanding that the Minister said they will make whatever 870 investments they wish? Again, I did not catch any maturity dates – or is the Minister not willing to give me that information?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, what I have told the hon. Member is that I give him a detailed breakdown every month, because he wants to see it, of all the investments that the Savings Bank Fund has, and I am not prepared to give him more information on that list than the information that is already on the list.
875

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I move on to Question 807 in respect of the £400 million preference shares held in Credit Finance Company. I believe the Minister said that they have no maturity date. Can the Minister perhaps advise me are they callable on notice by the Savings Bank?
880

Hon. J J Bossano: I am sure that if we wanted to we would be able to do it, Mr Speaker.
885

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may now move to Question 808 in respect of GSBA Ltd. I do recall the answer the Minister gave in respect of this previously, in that earlier in the year I asked him what GSBA Ltd did and he said that they held real assets. I then did a search at Land Property Services in respect of the Treasury building which he had managed had been 890 purchased, but I found that that only accounts for about £5 million, of the £11 million that GSBA Ltd has invested in it. I then asked what has it done with the remaining £6 million, and the Minister indicated that he did not have to give a blow-by-blow account to me.

Mr Speaker, I was wondering if the Minister would be willing to acknowledge that GSBA Ltd is now the proud owner of the North District Post Office and the former South District Post Office?
895

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member first asked me what GSBA was buying and I told him that I would not give him a breakdown of the investments beyond what the Savings Bank investment list is. He then wants me to tell him whether somebody is selling something to GSBA, which is asking the same question but from the seller's point of view instead of from the buyer's point of view. Well, the answer is I am not willing to either confirm or deny the question that he has asked me.
900

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I produce documents from Land Property Services showing that GSBA Ltd did in fact purchase the 22 Scud Hill property and the Glacis Post Office a couple 905 of years ago and those are now actually being advertised in the Chronicle today for sale, would the Minister be able to say whether these documents are correct or not?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, what I am able to say to him is that his question is out of order because he is not supposed to be asking me questions on information that is already in the public domain. That is what I am able to tell him. So he is wasting my time, his time and the time of the Parliament.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I now move on to Question 809 in respect of the Sinking Fund. I would be grateful if the Minister would elaborate on ... I presume he has legal advice from the Attorney General in writing as to why there is no conflict with the Constitution.

Mr Speaker: No. (Hon. R M Clinton: No?) No. (Hon. R M Clinton: No?) I advise the Government have stated in the answer that they are satisfied that the Gibraltar Sinking Fund allows for payment of interest ... is not in conflict with the Constitution. The Government are under no obligation to make public, to release, what legal advice they have received from the Attorney General. That is purely a matter for the Government and that is a ruling that I am making. It is a matter that came up in the Parliament of New Zealand some years ago and I have got a record of what transpired, and the Speaker's ruling was that legal advice given to the Government is for the Government and not for Parliament. I abide by that ruling and I implement it here.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for your guidance, although Question 809 did not refer to the interest; it was referring to conflicting with the Constitution. Mr Speaker, perhaps you could enhance your ruling as to whether I can ask whether any legal advice has been given.

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not know, Mr Speaker, if amongst his many abilities the hon. Member opposite also happens to be a constitutional lawyer. I am not, but I find it inconceivable that any Member of Parliament should think that it is possible for the law draftsman to be drafting legal notices which are in breach of the Constitution –

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): In the Attorney General's office.

Hon. J J Bossano: – in the Attorney General's office, and that he should have omitted if there was the remotest possibility that there was any credibility in the assumption that the hon. Member is making. So, clearly, I can only assume that he is reading the Constitution as a layman and not as a lawyer, and therefore that explains why he is asking silly questions like this.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, of course I am a layman; I certainly am not a lawyer. Can I infer from the hon. Member's answer that in fact if it is drafted by the Attorney General's office that there is an assumption that it is in compliance and there is not any specific advice?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member must understand that just because he thinks that civil servants are not doing their work properly or that civil servants cannot count, or that civil servants do not know how to draft legislation, we do not go rushing off to the Attorney General in case he happens to be right.

This is not something that is done in the Cabinet by the politicians; this is being done by the people who are employed to do the job. They know their job, they have been doing it for many years, they do it well and everybody praises them for how they do it as professionals, so I do not see why I should have to spend any of my time questioning their professional ability to do the work for which they are employed. The people he thinks might be getting it wrong have been longer involved in preparing legislation and in dealing with the Constitution than he has, and I 960 have been longer in politics than he has and if I were to make a judgement I have no doubt that it is not in conflict, but I would not say it is a legal opinion.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I can now move on to – and I will pass by Question 810 – Question 813, the purchase of the Mount from the Government at £8.2 million, the proceeds of which, as the hon. Member will know, was credited to the General Sinking Fund, and he advised that GAR Ltd obtained the money from general resources. Can the Minister please advise why it is considered to be an investment and what kind of return GAR expects to get on this investment from ...? I presume they are now leasing it from the Government, or the Government is leasing it from GAR.

970 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not know why he keeps on asking me why when I have told him why I will not reply to his why! (Laughter)

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the hon. Member's response (Laughter) as to why he will not say why. Oh, why, I ask myself.

975 Moving on to Question 814, where he, tongue in cheek, says 'I assume the purpose of General Construction is for general construction', can he advise what types of contracts this company is involved in and who decides the contracts that are channelled through this company?

980 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the original question was the purpose for which Gibraltar General Construction was set up, and I said I supposed it was set up to conduct general construction, because it was not set up by me – it was set up by the previous Government and we inherited it as an operational company with employees.

985 As I have in fact already explained in Parliament previously, perhaps before he arrived, the employees finished their contracts and then the company was retained without employees and it acts in order to distribute the maintenance work that is being done from 31 Town Range for the refurbishment of housing estates. That is the work it does.

990 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can I move on to Question 815. If I recall correctly, the Minister said reserves fell by £160 million 'because we are making investments for the community'. Could he elaborate what he means by 'investments'?

995 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member does not seem to understand that when the previous Government increased the level of liquid reserves through companies and through the Government, they made it clear at the time that this was in order to have the money available to them. I think at the time there was concern that there might be difficulty in obtaining money in future and that it was a good juncture. I did not ask them why, but there was a judgement that was made then and therefore they deliberately raised funds in anticipation of spending them, and that is something that Governments do. That is to say that if we have got a high level of liquidity in the Government at any one time, it is normally because we have not yet spent money on things that we are committed to spend on in our manifesto. If we come in with a manifesto in 2011 which inherits projects that were in the pipeline and we have got projects in the pipeline from our own commitments of what we want to do in addition to what is already happening, then the logical thing is that as these projects are done, which are capital projects, there are big sums that move out of the liquid reserves and that is why liquid reserves go down and that is why they go down every time they go down. When there is little capital works, normally the reserves get stronger because there is a flow of money that comes in all the time. If the hon. Member looks, for example, at what we do every year and what was done before every year, that part of the surplus is moved to the I&D Fund, then he will realise that if the I&D Fund is lower in terms of its spending, then there would be more money remaining in the Consolidated

1015 Fund and cash reserves would be higher. That is the way the balance goes. Why did it go down? Because if the money was invested in things which we may think are for the benefit of the people and he may think they are not the right things to do because he happens to be on that side of the House, well that is fine and we may differ, but the mechanism is the mechanism that has always existed.

Hon. R M Clinton: So, Mr Speaker, if I understand the Minister correctly, what he is saying is that I presume the bulk of the money would have gone on capital projects.

1020 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, that is exactly what I am telling him.

1025 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, moving to Question 819 in respect of the call deposits by Credit Finance with Gibraltar Investment Holdings, I would be grateful if the Minister would consider whether, given the fall in liquid reserves as per my earlier question which we have just dealt with, to £134 million at 31st March 2015, and given that Credit Finance placed a deposit with Gibraltar Investment Holdings of over £300 million, and given his answer that the money was repayable when required, how would Gibraltar Investment Holdings be able to repay that money if total liquid reserves at 31st March were only £134 million?

1030 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, I am saying that it is repayable when it is required, and it was not required on the date that he has given so the question is hypothetical.

Mr Speaker: Are there any other supplementaries?

1035 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may carry on the same line of questioning, in a non-hypothetical question is the Minister comfortable that Gibraltar Investment Holdings would be able to repay in full the over £300 million placed with it by Credit Finance, when required?

1040 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am confident.

Mr Speaker: Any other supplementary arising from the number of questions asked? Does any other Member have any supplementary questions?

1045 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I may just ask, I do not think we received a response to Question 820. I am fairly certain that Question 820 was asked.

Mr Speaker, I apologise but no one on the benches on this side appears to have heard the answer. Would the Minister indulge me and just provide the answer once more.?

1050 Hon. J J Bossano: The position as regards loans provided by Credit Finance Company Ltd continues to be as previously stated.

Q812 and 828/2016
GCP Investments Ltd – Barclays Bank loan; City Hall mortgage

Mr Speaker: Question 812.

Acting Clerk: Question 812. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1055 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, how much is owed to Barclays Bank in total by GCP Investments Ltd at 31st March 2016 and what is the maturity date of the loan?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

1060 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 828.

Acting Clerk: Question 828. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1065 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise why the City Hall was mortgaged by GCP Investments Ltd to Barclays Bank on 29th November 2013 and how much was borrowed?

1070 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the Barclays Bank loan matures on 21st December 2025 and as at 31st March 2016 the balance was £17.1 million.

1075 On 29th November 2013 nothing was borrowed from Barclays Bank using the City Hall as security.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer.

May I ask: if nothing was borrowed, then why was the City Hall mortgaged to Barclays Bank?

1080 Hon. J J Bossano: Given the look of confusion on the hon. Member's face, I am going to make a concession and answer his 'why' on this occasion, but I do not want it to be taken as a precedent. The answer why is because the Gibtelecom offices across the road wanted to buy the Haven in order to expand – (Hon. Chief Minister: The Treasury building.) which was where the Treasury building was, yes, and Gibtel was on the top – and the Treasury building had already been included by the previous Government in a loan that they raised from Barclays Bank for £20 million, and they mortgaged a lot of Government buildings to get this money in order to invest in a private sector development.

1090 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): They mortgaged the Treasury with Barclays Bank.

1095 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, and in order to facilitate the acquisition by GibTel of that building, Barclays Bank agreed to switch the portfolio and take the City Hall building as opposed to the building that was opposite. All that we were doing was tidying up the process that had been started by his party before us. That is why I am giving him the answer to why. (Laughter and banging on desk)

Q821-822/2016
Training in trades –
NVQ levels 1, 2 and 3

Acting Clerk: Question 821. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

1100 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, how many individuals have actually been taken in for training at NVQ level 1 at the two training centres in each of the last four years?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

1105 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer this question with Question 822.

Acting Clerk: Question 822. The Hon. M D Hassan Nahon.

1110 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Could Government give a breakdown of the number of young people who have successfully completed levels 1, 2 and 3 of the various trades as presented in the Employment and Training motion of the October session of Parliament?

1115 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the number of individuals starting level 1 training in the last four years have been: 2012-13, 4; 2013-14, 83; 2014-15, 143; 2015-16, 67.

1120 The number of persons who have successfully completed levels 1, 2 and 3 of the various trades discussed in the motion last month are as follows: level 1, 275 trainees; level 2, 282 trainees; level 3, 104 trainees.

1125 Hon. E J Reyes: May I, Mr Speaker? The Hon. Minister, in reply to Question 821, has given a figure which I take it is a collective figure for the two training centres. Would he happen to have a breakdown of the construction centre as opposed to the engineering training centre, which combined would give me the totals that he has provided?

1130 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I think, if I am right, that the level 1 is not done in Gibdock, so the figures for level 1 are all Construction and Training Centre and there are none in Gibdock. They go in at level 2. That is my understanding.

1135 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am not trying to catch out the Minister, or whatever. From my recollection, what the Gibdock training does is it gives the underpinning knowledge of level 1 but does not bother sitting for an exam, but rather pushes them straight through to level 2, because, as we spoke about last month, the qualified craftsman in engineering trades is considered to be level 3, so there is no need to hold that level 1 certificate.

1140 I am grateful. The answer does satisfy me, because then there has not been any change and they do not actually sit down for examinations in level 1. So, unless the Minister has heard of any change, then I am quite happy with that and take these as being all under the Construction Training Centre.

1145 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, I think the answer that I have given him is on that basis: they are all construction training workers because they are not given a separate level 1 certificate.

Mr Speaker: If there are no other supplementaries, the House will recess to this afternoon ... at?

1150 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Yes, Mr Speaker, with the information ringing in our ears that the party opposite mortgaged the Treasury, (Laughter) I propose that we recess now until 3.30 this afternoon.

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess until 3.30 this afternoon.

The House recessed at 1.28 p.m.

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 3.45 p.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. A J Canepa GMH OBE in the Chair]

[CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: P E Martinez Esq in attendance]

Questions for Oral Answer

Procedural –

Q822/2016 supplementary question to be taken later in sitting

10 Mr Speaker: I understand that, due to the rather rapid exodus before lunch, the hon. Lady was not able to ask a supplementary that she would have liked to ask, given that Question 822 was hers. The Hon. Marlene Hassan.

15 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): I understand that the supplementary is to Minister Bossano who is not here, so what I agreed with the Clerk would be sensible, if the hon. Lady agrees, is that when he is here she takes her question or perhaps at the end of my questions when I explain –

Mr Speaker: She could ask the question – pass it on to the Hon. Mr Bossano and then the answer can come back. He does not have to attend.

20 Hon. Chief Minister: No, but as it is in the nature of a supplementary rather than – (Mr Speaker: It is a supplementary.) Because the hon. Lady may wish to ask something else arising from that, I have no difficulty with giving way, when Mr Bossano comes in, after whichever question I am on and allowing her to put a question, if she wishes.

25 Mr Speaker: This is a supplementary arising from Question 822. The Hon. M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Sorry, did we not just agree that I would be coming back to that when the hon. Member comes back to the House? Thank you.

CHIEF MINISTER

Q824/2016

Mobile telephones –

Posts held where bills paid by the taxpayer; cost

Acting Clerk: We continue with the questions and we continue with Question 824. The Hon. L F Llamas.

30 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a full list of detailed posts which have mobile telephone bills paid directly or indirectly by the taxpayer, together with the bill accrued as at the end of each financial year ending 31st March for each of the financial years 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015, 2016 and the current financial year?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

35 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the information requested is too voluminous to provide within the timeframe available, and neither does the Government consider it appropriate or reasonable to provide every single officer's phone bill.

Q825-826/2016

Bluewater and Coaling Island projects, Rooke development, Bob Peliza Mews and Hassan Centenary Terraces – Update on contracts

Acting Clerk: Question 825. The Hon. R M Clinton.

40 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the current status in respect of contract negotiations for the Bluewater project, the Coaling Island project and the Rooke development?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

45 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this questions together with Question 826.

Acting Clerk: Question 826. The Hon. R M Clinton.

50 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, has the Government signed contracts for the construction of Bob Peliza Mews and Hassan Centenary Terraces?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

55 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the answer remains as set out in answers to Questions 691 and 693/2016.

60 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, Question 691/2016 basically says the position remains as set out in Question 435/2016, and in answer to Question 435/2016, in which I asked about the Bluewater project, the Coaling Island project, reclamation projects and the Rooke development, the answer was:

Negotiations on these projects are currently ongoing and are at an advanced stage.

Mr Speaker, in today's New People, my favourite publication, it says:

Although finalisation of the agreement to develop the Bluewater project is taking longer than expected, the Government is confident it will be signed soon.

65 I would be grateful if the Chief Minister could indicate whether he is indeed confident that the Bluewater project will be signed soon, and could he perhaps put a timeframe on what he thinks 'soon' might be, given that when I first asked about this project, earlier in January, he was reaching a climax.

70 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave a few moments ago.

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, obviously we are no further.

75 If I can move on to Question 826, he again refers back to the answer he gave to Question 693, which in turn referred back to Questions 534 and 535/2016 – and basically that was in respect of Bob Peliza Mews and Hassan Centenary Terraces – and he answered then:

These projects are still progressing as planned and the Government expects construction to commence soon.

Mr Speaker, I would ask the Chief Minister to advise the House, and especially the people who sent in expressions of interest, what he means by 'commencing soon'. Is that going to be before Christmas?

80 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the answers I am referring to, in case the hon. Gentleman has not looked at them, are answers I gave him in the last House. There is a rule that you do not ask the same question within six months. Mr Speaker has generously allowed these questions to be put, despite that. The hon. Gentleman is going to get the same answer if he asks me again next month, if he feels he has to, because in the interim he might see an announcement from 85 the Government in the media when we are ready to make an announcement in respect of these matters. So I would say to the hon. Gentleman that he is going to hear with the rest of Gibraltar when we are ready to make an announcement in respect of both the East Side reclamation proceeding and the Sir Joshua Hassan and Bob Peliza Mews projects commencing. He need not ask me every month the same question. It is outside the bounds of the rules and he is going to 90 get the same answer.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would obviously bow to any ruling that you gave, but I always thought that –

95 Mr Speaker: It is not a ruling that I gave.

Hon. R M Clinton: No, Mr Speaker, I have not finished.

Mr Speaker: It is not a ruling that I gave.

Hon. R M Clinton: No, I know. I have not finished.

Mr Speaker: It is a Standing Order of the House that you do not ask the same question within a period of six months.

105

Hon. R M Clinton: I accept that, Mr Speaker. But I also understand that you can ask for updates on positions, and that is not the same question but obviously I will abide by any ruling.

110 Mr Speaker: Sometimes what happens, because we are all human, is that a spate of questions arrive and it is a matter of grave urgency. Initially, the Clerk will have a look at the questions, and if he has any doubt about any of them he refers them to me. Obviously, sometimes they get through the net. The Clerk may be under pressure or I can be under pressure and we may not realise that pretty well the same question has been asked before.

115 In fairness, I tend to be liberal where the information that is being requested changes over a period of time. If the question that is being asked is of a statistical nature, then I tend to allow it and the Clerk has instruction to allow it because the answer is going to be different, but where it is the same subject matter then that question should not be asked within a period of six months.

120 Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, I will obviously abide by your ruling, but I must say that the people of Gibraltar are asking me constantly when these projects are going to start and they expect me to ask these questions.

125 Mr Speaker: Yes, but the people of Gibraltar do not make the rules you see; the rules are made by Parliament and the people of Gibraltar are not Members of Parliament. Only 17 from amongst the people of Gibraltar are Members of Parliament.

130 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is in fact exactly a year ago today that the people of Gibraltar were given the option of either pursuing the course for the future of our nation that hon. Members proposed in a short pamphlet or that which we proposed, and by a margin of seven out of 10 they determined, on the last Thursday of November 2015, that we should proceed with our projects for the East Side and our projects for Sir Joshua Hassan Terraces and Bob Peliza Mews in the lifetime of this Parliament, and that is what we will do, Mr Speaker. And when we do, we will make an announcement as we are ready to explain what progress has been made in respect of each. That is going to continue to be the position however much we may be asked, because the people of Gibraltar stop me in the street too and they tell me what a fantastic job we are doing. They encourage me to continue not to be deterred by the repeated questioning that they think puts us off our job. They are supportive of the work we are doing on the East Side, on housing, on health and on every other matter.

140 A Member: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: If I may, I am going to take the opportunity to explain to the House what views I have always had as a Member of this House, and which I continue to have as Speaker.

145 Firstly, five working days is insufficient. I have always taken that view. Whether I was on the Government side or sitting in opposition, I have always considered that five working days' notice is insufficient where questions are concerned – more time is required. I have always advocated that it should be seven working days. That is a view that I formed in the 1970s. Forty years on, the position remains the same, so you take it or leave it.

150 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I might be of assistance, hon. Members now have the advantage that they know there is going to be a meeting every month unless we agree that there is not going to be, as we have had at the early part of this year. They know they can put questions every month and they can deposit the questions with the House as soon as they know what they want to ask.

155 The notice that is issued by the Government of convening the meeting tells them when the deadline for questions is, but they can start sending questions at any time. Those questions can be sent from the Parliament to the Government and work can start in preparing answers at any time – and I would encourage them, if they wish to do so, to deposit questions whenever they wish.

160 The House very helpfully allows the Government, of course, to have the questions as they come in. So, if a questioner sends his questions in a minute after the notice, we receive them a minute after the notice and then we have six and a half working days. If it is received on the limit, then we have exactly five days to work on the question. But the Member could now think that there is a question that they might wish to put: they could simply write it up, leave it with the Clerk and it could be put to us, and then we have 20 days to prepare an answer.

Mr Speaker: Let me elaborate on that if I may, because I think it is important. Why are five working days insufficient? First of all, the questions go to a civil servant, who is expected to draft an answer for the Minister. The Minister has to see that draft answer. The Minister may be away from Gibraltar at the particular moment. Nowadays, it is possible to contact people, but all the same ... Then, the Chief Minister, at least in my time and probably the practice continues, should have an opportunity – if he so wishes, and he ought to because they are of a political nature – to look at the draft answer in case he considers that an amendment is required.

All that within five days I think is unfair on all concerned. And, may I add – and this is why I insist that I have a word now – it is most unfair on my staff. I know my staff here are working until very very late in the evenings because of the short period of time allowed for questions, and it is not fair.

Hon. Members have an opportunity, if they so want, to change the rules, and it is about time somebody took the initiative and changed the rules and allowed more than five days. That is a straightforward – (Interjection) No, he should not just indicate that it is for the Government. It is for the Opposition as well, because the Opposition may not be interested in allowing more than five days, so they have to come forward and say, ‘We consider that five days is not enough: Chief Minister, we invite the Government, with our agreement, to change the rules and to allow more than five days.’

In any case, and this is why the attitude that I adopted when I was Leader of the Opposition for four years ... the rules remained five days but we always in practice gave seven days’ notice. We used to send in the questions beforehand, regardless of the rules, and I commend that attitude as well. You do not have to be bound by the rules. Send the questions in earlier and you are likely to get better answers.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I honestly do not know what the issue is with five days versus seven days. I was about to stand up and respond to the Chief Minister when you intervened. If there is a logistical issue, I am sure nobody on this side of the House has any problem with resolving it via the Select Committee when that is convened. The Clerk of the House can perhaps advise me when the last adjournment of the last session was, but I believe it was only within seven days’ notice that we had of this session. So, really, in practical terms, we could not have got our questions in any faster than we did on this occasion.

But beside that, Mr Speaker, the reason I am standing up is in response to the Chief Minister. I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his answer, because it is now patently different to the answers that were given differently. I can now go to the people of Gibraltar and say the Chief Minister has confirmed it is within the lifetime of this Parliament.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not think that the hon. Gentleman has asked a question, and neither do I think he has read the previous answers that he was given. Neither do I think he has listened to much of what we have said in the lifetime of this Parliament so far. These are manifesto commitments we are committed to delivering in the lifetime of this Parliament. He did not need me to get up to tell him that. This demonstrates, Mr Speaker, that perhaps he is asking every month because he forgets the answers he has been given before. I commend to him that he should read the Hansard of the questions that he has asked in months before, before he puts pen to paper next time, however much notice he intends to give us of his questions.

Q827/2016
Tax legislation –
Process and timing for enactment of budget measures

Acting Clerk: Question 827. The Hon. R M Clinton.

215 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise the process and timing for the enactment of budget measures into Gibraltar tax legislation?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

220 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the process for the enactment of budget measures into Gibraltar tax legislation is a two-stage process. First, the measures are administratively implemented with immediate effect as per the date announced in the Budget. Secondly, the legislative amendments involve close liaison with law drafters from the Gibraltar Law Offices, experts from other Government Departments and relevant interested stakeholders. The timing of the legislating of such measures is dependent on the complexities of the subject matter.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that answer.

I wonder if the Chief Minister could advise at what stage and which year we are up to in terms of actual enactment into tax legislation?
230

Hon. Chief Minister: I think we are complete up to 2014; and in respect of 2015 and 2016, budget measures are in their final stages of drafting and will be published shortly.

Q829/2016
Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd –
Funding of capital projects

Acting Clerk: We move to Question 829. The Hon. R M Clinton.

235 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise to what capital projects does it envisage using part or all of the £300 million loan raised by Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd and why are these capital projects not being directed via the Improvement and Development Fund, which would be subject to the scrutiny of Parliament?

240 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government will announce what projects it intends to fund via the company structure, a funding methodology introduced by the former GSD administration, as and when it is ready to do so.
245

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, does the Chief Minister consider the Improvement and Development Fund redundant?

250 Hon. Chief Minister: No, sir.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, then why is it that capital projects are not being directed through the Improvement and Development Fund?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this morning we had a masterclass on why we in the Government do not have to answer why; but on this occasion, as on the occasion that the Hon. Joe Bossano explained to the hon. Member how it was that it was the GSD that had mortgaged the Treasury and that therefore the mortgaging of the City Hall was just in replacement of the GSD's mortgage of the Treasury, I will explain to him that it was the GSD that introduced the concept of funding capital projects through the company structure. And as to why, Mr Speaker, I will direct him to the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, who will perhaps be able to indicate to him why it was that he came up with that structure.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would the Chief Minister confirm that, in the past, the funding of these companies would come via the Improvement and Development Fund?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman knows that that is not the case, because he asked a question this morning to which he got an answer which reminded him that the capitalisation of the company structure has included the raising of a mortgage in the sum of £20 million for investment by the former administration.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, given the quantum of the size of money that the Government has raised, £300 million, does the Chief Minister honestly believe that it is not pertinent for capital projects to be presented to this House for approval?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman does not just seem to want to ask the same written question every six months, he wants to ask the same supplementary every month with a different spin in order to have the same debate. That question has been asked and answered on a number of occasions.

The £300 million investment in Gibraltar demonstrates huge confidence in Gibraltar, even in the light of the Brexit vote. I will put it this way to him, Mr Speaker. He likes to say it is not an investment, it is a loan. He likes to say that this is a liability, not an asset. Well, Mr Speaker, he is somebody who has practised as a banker. Doesn't he realise that if a banker lends you £300 million he has great confidence in you and your ability to repay it?

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would the Chief Minister confirm to this House that it is, in fact, not a single bank that has lent this money to Gibraltar Capital Assets Management, but it is in fact a securitised loan and that various tranches of loans have been bought by various investors, and therefore we are not really talking about the same thing?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Gentleman care to pause for thought and realise that people who lend money apply exactly the same sort of criteria whether they are pension funds or whether they are banks. They look at exactly the same sort of issues as to the ability to repay etc. Therefore, wouldn't he agree with me that this is a huge demonstration of confidence in Gibraltar and of our stewardship of the public finances of Gibraltar? If he does not, Mr Speaker, he does not seem to understand lending and he does not seem to realise why it is that the people of Gibraltar returned us, exactly a year ago today, to office with such a huge majority compared to the paltry number of votes that they gave them.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, it remains to be seen whether in three years' time he will be returned at all, if even with the same majority, (Several Members: Ooh!) given that he has mortgaged £300 million worth of housing estates.

Now, Mr Speaker, I put it to him: what bank lends you money on the basis that it is just your own good name, which has happened in the past, and now requires security? Whereas in the past people were happy to lend to the Gibraltar Government with no security, now he has had to hock the Government's housing estates in order to raise this loan.

305 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we will indeed learn in three years' time whether we are returned to office or not. And do you know what, Mr Speaker? We will not take one vote for granted. I said on the night of the election, the night that we were returned to office by seven out of 10 votes, that we would not take anybody for granted, that we would ensure that we had three watchwords for the lifetime of this Parliament: humility, humility, humility. That is exactly 310 how we are ensuring that we retain the confidence of the people of Gibraltar.

But another way that we retain the confidence of the people of Gibraltar is to demonstrate that the hon. Members opposite just do not know what they are talking about. And you know, Mr Speaker, in some instances they might be forgiven because some of them – indeed, nay, most of them, save the Acting Leader of the Opposition, Mr Reyes – have absolutely no political 315 experience whatsoever. They have not been in this House, and therefore I might refer to things that they know not about, but in his case he has spent the whole of today and most of the months leading up to today hearing me remind him of the £20 million loan taken by the GSD Government secured on Government properties. So for him to get up now and say that, before, they lent on the good name of the Government alone without properties having to be 320 mortgaged and now you have to hock things to have a borrowing is either absolutely careless in terms of remembering what he was told a moment ago or an attempt, which I will not impute to him, to mislead the House and those listening.

Hon. R M Clinton: And so, Mr Speaker, I presume, although I do not know if the Chief 325 Minister is willing to confirm this or not, that they actually we repaid that £20 million.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is not a supplementary that arises from this question.
The hon. Gentleman just wants to have a rolling debate. If he wants the answer to that, he should put a question.

Q830/2016

Chief Secretary's salary – Fixed percentages that determine certain salaries

330 Acting Clerk: Question 830. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise what are the fixed percentages of the Chief Secretary's salary that would determine the salaries of each of the Chief Minister, Financial Secretary, Leader of the Opposition, Speaker, Ministers, Members of 335 Parliament and the Attorney General, and who determines that percentage?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, in line with the resolution of this House dated 340 8th December 1998, the salaries of the Chief Minister, Leader of the Opposition, Ministers and Members of Parliament, including the Speaker, are increased annually by the same percentage as the increases from time to time in the established salaries of the offices of the Attorney General and Financial Secretary.

The salaries of the Financial Secretary and the Attorney General are increased annually by the 345 same percentage that is awarded to civil servants in the annual pay reviews. The last increase was 2.7% in line with the August 2016 pay review.

Since the representations made by the Principal Auditor, the salary of the Principal Auditor and the Chief Secretary were made identical and the relativity with the salary of the other officers no longer exists.

350 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer to that question.
May I remind the Chief Minister that I have a letter in on the increase in salary for the Financial Secretary and I would be grateful of an answer in due course.

Hon. Chief Minister: I think it is in respect of the Chief Secretary, but yes, he will have an 355 answer to that as soon as I am able to.

Q831/2016
Financial Secretary –
Expiry of contract and recruitment of replacement

Acting Clerk: Question 831. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise when the Financial Secretary's contract expires and what steps are being taken to recruit and train his replacement?
360

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, I am afraid that whilst he is a Member of this House he cannot apply, but the Financial Secretary was appointed in September 2014 on the 365 basis of an initial term of three years.

With regard to the steps being taken to recruit and train for a replacement, the Government will, in the first instance, be inviting applications for suitable candidates for the post of Assistant Financial Secretary.

The post will, however, remain one directly appointed by the Chief Minister and there are not 370 to be any expectations that anybody would be entitled to be appointed as Financial Secretary because they had been Assistant Financial Secretary.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that response.
If I could just clarify: the advertising will be external to the Civil Service, or both?
375

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think that the intention is that it should initially be internal to the Civil Service.

Q832-838/2016
Public Service –
Vacancies; recruitment; allowances to union convenors; acting posts; retirements during

380 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, further to Question 267/2016 can the Government provide an updated list, together with additional detailed information such as grade, post and Department for each vacant post?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.
385

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer the question together with Questions 833 to 838.

Acting Clerk: Question 833. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

390

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, further to Question 268/2016, can the Government provide an update as to the external recruitment of administrative assistants in the public sector?

Acting Clerk: Question 834. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

395

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, further to the answer to Question 445/2016, can the Government now disclose the allowances given to union convenors, detailing the name of the convenor, the value of the allowance and the union they represent?

Acting Clerk: Question 835. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

400

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, how many permanent and pensionable public servants are currently acting in posts across the public service, setting out details of the post, Department and the date they started acting?

405

Acting Clerk: Question 836. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government state since January 2012 which employees in the public sector have retired whilst being temporarily promoted, providing details of the officer's grade and the post/grade which they have retired from?

Acting Clerk: Question 837. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a schedule as at 31st October 2016 of how many subcontracted workers from recruitment consultants were providing services within the public sector, together with individual additional information such as date of commencement, grade/post being undertaken and reason why they had been subcontracted?

415

Acting Clerk: Question 838. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

420

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, how many individuals under contract with recruitment consultants are currently covering posts which are vacant across the public service or are undertaking jobs which would normally be undertaken by public servants had those posts not been vacant?

425

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will now hand over a list of vacant posts within the civil service in respect of the answer to Question 832.

Therefore, any information provided at the time when the answer is prepared would be subject to change on a daily basis. In addition, it should be noted that the information requested is not readily available and we would need to engage with all Government Departments in order to provide an accurate reply. Taking this into consideration, I should be grateful if the Hon. Member would be more specific on the information requested.

445 A list of officers who have retired from the Civil Service since January 2012 whilst being temporarily promoted is in the table I now hand the hon. Gentleman.

450 Mr Speaker: I would suggest that we now move on to Question 839 and hon. Members of the official Opposition can consider the schedules and tables that have been circulated to them and ask any supplementaries which they may wish to ask later on.

Q839-841/2016
Devil's Tower Road hostel –
Total capacity; delay in completion; cost of refurbishment

Mr Speaker: Question 839.

455 Acting Clerk: Question 839. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What will the total capacity of the new hostel in Devil's Tower Road be?

460 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 840 and 841.

465 Acting Clerk: Question 840. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What is the reason for the delay in the completion of the new hostel in Devil's Tower Road?

470 Acting Clerk: Question 841. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What is the cost to refurbish the new hostel in Devil's Tower Road?

475 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the new hostel has a capacity of 158 beds. There is no delay in completing the new hostel on Devil's Tower Road as this became operational on 26th September 2016. I note that the hon. Lady has asked us questions in future terms, but it is already open and we are answering in present terms for that reason.

480 The works to the new hostel on Devil's Tower Road have cost a total of £2,242,048.65. This includes the cost of adding two new floors and the existing building.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can I just ask the Chief Minister: was a feasibility study done on the new hostel; and, if so, would it be possible to see it?

485 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the question of a feasibility study I do not think arises. I do not know what the hon. Lady is trying to ask me. A feasibility study is something that you would do in a different sort of situation. What is she trying to get at? I will see if I can help her in some way to have the information that she wants.

490 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for offering to help me out here. I understand there has been some concern by future tenants, or present tenants, whether the capacity of the hostel would have been enough to cater for all the tenants or prospective tenants, so I was just trying

495 to get to the bottom of whether the project and the capacity aspect has been well planned out and thought through to cater for all the tenants who are due to slowly trickle in. I understand there are still some who have not. Perhaps you can correct me if I am wrong: have all the tenants been housed already or are there some in the Queen's complex who have to get there?
If so, once everybody who is due to be housed, will there be capacity for everybody?

500 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I can assure the hon. Lady that there is absolutely no question of the project not having been well thought out; it was well thought out. She will see, in fact, that already the other hostel has been knocked down. We are already seeing another expression of confidence in Gibraltar going up, which is a new hotel going up in Devil's Tower Road in the place where the other hostel was.

505 There is one issue which is slightly sensitive in respect of hostels and on which I am quite happy to give her some information behind the Speaker's Chair, because then she will understand that the numbers we are dealing with are not the numbers we are dealing with. But I would rather not say more, and share the information with the hon. Lady – not on pain of imprisonment or anything like that, but just confidentially!

510 Hon. E J Reyes: May I, Mr Speaker? I am grateful to the Chief Minister, who has expressed his willingness to meet with the Lady behind the Chair. If that does take place, would he mind informing me so that I can also be present at this listening brief?

515 Hon. Chief Minister: But with him, Mr Speaker, on pain of imprisonment! Not at all,
Mr Speaker, it would be an absolute pleasure to share the information with both of them.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may?

520 Minister for Commerce (Hon A J Isola): What, you as well? (Laughter) Will he go behind the Chair?

Mr Speaker: Is there enough room? (Laughter and interjections)

525 Hon. R M Clinton: No, Mr Speaker, I do not wish to go behind the Chair – I have enough being in front it!

Mr Speaker, referring to the Chief Minister's answer in respect of the cost of refurbishment in answer to Question 841, and he says, I believe, £2.2 million for the two new floors plus the existing building, can he confirm he means refurbishment of the existing building? Obviously, in 530 the press release of January 2014 the building was bought for £3.25 million.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, it is the addition of two floors to the existing building that cost the £2.2 million.

535 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, with your leave, shall we come back to the Questions that were answered before?

Mr Speaker: Yes. Any supplementaries arising from the schedules and other information?

540 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes. If I can take the Chief Minister back first to the schedule in answer to Question 834, there is a list of convenors identified as A, B, C, and so on.

Hon. Chief Minister: Sorry, which one is it?

545 Hon. E J Reyes: Question 834.

Mr Speaker: The allowances to recruit.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes. I note that in C, F and G, where the allowance is per annum, there is a figure plus another figure. Perhaps there is a very simple way of explaining that, but rather than having one total we have got two subtotals. Can I be enlightened?
550

Hon. Chief Minister: I think it is allowances, Mr Speaker. I think it is facility time and allowances which are allowed, and therefore that is why it is given separately. Instead of being given as one figure, I think what is set out ... and this is from memory, this is not from the preparation of the answer, but that is why I was not surprised when I saw it. I thought it was that part is salary and part is allowances related to salary.
555

Hon. E J Reyes: Okay, so in that case, if that is correct – and I tend to think like the Chief Minister – one is the basic salary and the other one is the allowance that the individual was receiving, for example a shift disturbance allowance. But if it has been inconvenient and they are no longer undergoing shift work, is that allowance still applicable?
560

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not an expert in trade unionism and I can assure the hon. Gentleman that I have not changed anything that was the practice before. But I am quite happy, if he does not know what the answer was in his time ... although I can assure him it has not changed, I can find out, but it is not something I know the answer to.
565

Hon. E J Reyes: Okay, thank you, Mr Speaker.
And then, on I the 'GGCA – Facility Time 100%', obviously the word 'currently' means because that is the person who is currently undertaking that and it changes. But J and K do not have any percentage on them, whereas L and M already go back to two percentages, hence why the note 'current value ranging from ...' So, on J and K that information has not been provided, therefore neither the Chief Minister nor I are any the wiser whether it is 100% or whether it is not. What I find strange is if you bothered to put 100% for I, then in the absence of that notice for J and K could it be anything different?
575

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I can tell the hon. Gentleman that I have been given exactly the same information in the table, but I have been given a note and I can tell him that from the note I can see it is 50%. In respect of J and K it is actually 50%.
580

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.
In the schedule for Question 832 we have got the list in respect of the vacant posts. I know that the Chief Minister before, in his reply in respect of the AA posts, said that that was due to the efficiency review and so on, but I note here that there are some posts, such as Senior Officer, Senior Customs Officer, even the Commissioner of Income Tax. Would those advertisements of the post, are those expected to come through imminently or are those also going to be subject to the efficiency review and therefore there will be a longer delay?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, no. In terms of, for example, the Commissioner of Income Tax, the last indication I had from the Chief Secretary was that that one is literally with Human Resources, the Income Tax Department and him in terms of advertising. In Customs, for example, I think the Senior Customs Officer is something which the Department is dealing with. So most of the senior ones are either already about to be advertised or are in the context of discussion between the Chief Secretary and whoever in that Department is looking at the job descriptions and whatever tweaking has to be done there, and I assume in discussion with unions where that may be relevant. It is not with the Government; it is not stopped by the Government.
590

600 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, just in respect of Question 836, and because I am entirely unfamiliar with Civil Service procedure, can the Chief Minister clarify: when a civil servant retires acting in a higher grade, do they acquire the pension rights of that higher grade or do they revert to their actual grade?

605 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, without being held to the answer I am going to give for absolute accuracy, because I would need notice of the question – if the hon. Gentleman is going to hold me to the accuracy of this, I put it to him he should put me a question – I believe if the person has been acting for a particular period then he carries his acting into his pension, but not otherwise.

610 Mr Speaker: Any others? No. That concludes Question Time.

615 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know that the hon. Lady had a supplementary that she wished to ask, although the Hon. Minister has not returned to Parliament in time to take it. Can I invite her to put that supplementary by way of a letter, or a phone call even – I know she has a convivial relationship with the Hon. Minister and can phone him. And if she wishes to do it any other way, I will give way to her now if she wants to say anything.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for that, Chief Minister. Yes, the Hon. Father of the House and I go back a long way – and long may it last, I hope. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

620 I am sure that this supplementary is one that perhaps the Minister for Education or your good self could probably answer, so I will just fire it off now. The question was in relation to Question 822, about the breakdown of the number of young people who had successfully completed the levels in various trades. My supplementary was: is there any liaison with the schools so that potential trainees could be identified at a younger age in schools, rather than perhaps forcing those more suited to this route to have to go through the academic route?

625 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I would need to take advice as to what the actual fact is now, but one of the things that certainly I am looking at with the Department of Education is to be able to identify young people who are not academically minded but who have other skills, to be able to identify them at an early stage in order for them to be directed in other directions, be it vocational training or whatever.

So, again, without having all the information with me, this is certainly the intention and I will certainly research it and I would be very happy to assist the hon. Lady when I have that information. But that is certainly the intention.

630 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to table the answers to Written Questions – (Interjections)

635 Hon. L F Llamas: Apologies. Just one supplementary in relation to Question 832. Just going through the schedule, there appears to be obviously the public sector, and then towards the end there is a company, Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd – this is the question to do with vacancies. It is just a little bit odd that obviously we see that there are Government companies which have been included in the list, but on the other hand we do not see any authorities or agencies having been included. Is there a particular reason why? Is it that we have got a bit more information than we should have, or maybe they have left out the other agencies and authorities?

640 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the only places where there are vacancies because the only places where there are complements are in the departments of the Civil Service, and therefore the agencies and the authorities would not be here. The hon. Gentleman has rightly spotted that 645 Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd is in there but that does not have a complement, so they can safely disregard that. I am going to thank him for pointing that out and I shall reprimand whoever it was who allowed this to remain on the list, because there is not a complement. They may be asking for those posts, but they are not posts which are in complement and therefore cannot be deemed to be vacant.

Thank you.

650

Hon. E J Reyes: And likewise, Mr Speaker, when the Chief Minister is chasing this one up, my understanding was that the employees of Gibraltar Tourist Board, although public servants, tended to be GDC employees rather than civil servants – one Upper Rock site officer – so again it may be something that in an original draft ... I think this table had been prepared using Excel, and this cut and paste has not quite worked accurately for the Tourist Board.

655

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful. I know that this answer goes through various iterations in order to make sure that we reach the right area which is the right area in complement. So I would invite the Hon. Members to make hay whilst the sun shines and relish the information that they have been provided, because they can expect it will not be there next month.

660

Questions for Written Answer

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): And so, Mr Speaker, I have the honour to table the answers to written questions numbers W60/2016 through to W65/2016.

RECESS

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour that the House should now recess until 5.15 p.m.

665

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess until 5.15 p.m.

The House recessed at 4.35 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.15 p.m.

Order of the Day

BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Fire and Rescue Service (Amendment) Bill 2016 – First Reading approved

Acting Clerk: The Order of the Day. Bills – First and Second Reading.
A Bill for an Act to amend the Fire and Rescue Service Act.

670 The Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi):
Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Fire and Rescue Service Act be read a first time.

675

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Fire and Rescue Service Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

680 Acting Clerk: The Fire and Rescue Service (Amendment) Act 2016.

Fire and Rescue Service (Amendment) Bill 2016 – Second Reading approved

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi):
Mr Speaker, I beg to move that the Bill for the Fire and Rescue Service (Amendment) Act 2016 be read a second time.

685 This Bill amends the definition of ‘fire hazard’ in section 3 of the Fire and Rescue Service Act. Currently included in the definition of a building that is a fire hazard is any building which exceeds two storeys in height and in which the floor of any upper storey is more than 4.5 metres above ground level. Effectively, the height indicator of 4.5 metres is the height at which it was considered acceptable for someone to jump out of the window or out of an opening in case of a fire when the floor of a flat or a single-family dwelling is above ground level.

690 The Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Service, in consultation with fire safety officers and an expert in the field of fire safety of buildings, considers that 4.5 metres is too high for someone to jump out of a window without risk to injury and has recommended 3.5 metres as the required height. This puts the Act in line with the new fire safety part of the Building Regulations which we have already published quite recently. This change will, in fact, only affect newly built flats and dwellings and will not affect any of the existing buildings.

695 Mr Speaker, I have given notice by letter to you, dated 17th November, of an amendment to clause 2 which I will be moving during the Committee Stage, which clarifies and in fact makes it clear that this will only apply to new buildings and not existing buildings.

700 I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Fire and Rescue Service Act be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

705

Acting Clerk: The Fire and Rescue Service (Amendment) Act 2016.

Fire and Rescue Service (Amendment) Bill 2016 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

710

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill 2016 –
First Reading approved

Acting Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Partnership Act and the Trustee Act to impose criminal penalties for the failure to maintain proper books of accounts or records identifying settlors, trustees and beneficiaries; and to amend the International Co-operation (Tax Information) Act 2009 to impose a criminal penalty in respect of breaches of confidentiality and provide an exemption from the requirement to notify the subject of a request of a notice issued under section 8; and for connected purposes.

715

The Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

720

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Partnership Act and the Trustee Act to impose criminal penalties for the failure to maintain proper books of accounts or records identifying settlors, trustees and beneficiaries; and to amend the International Co-operation (Tax Information) Act 2009 to impose a criminal penalty in respect of breaches of confidentiality and provide an exemption from the requirement to notify the subject of a request of a notice issued under section 8, and for connected purposes, be read a first time.

725

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Partnership Act and the Trustee Act to impose criminal penalties for the failure to maintain proper books of accounts or records identifying settlors, trustees and beneficiaries; and to amend the International Co-operation (Tax Information) Act 2009 to impose a criminal penalty in respect of breaches of confidentiality and provide an exemption from the requirement to notify the subject of a request of a notice issued under section 8, and for connected purposes, be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

730

Acting Clerk: The Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Act 2016.

Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill 2016 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi):
Mr Speaker, I beg to move that the Bill for the Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Act 2016 be read a second time.

740 As hon. Members are no doubt aware, the OECD Global Forum on Transparency and Exchange of Information for Tax Purposes conducts periodic peer reviews of Gibraltar to assess compliance with the International Standard on Transparency and Exchange of Information.

745 Following a phase 1 review of the legal and regulatory framework in 2001, the OECD conducted an exhaustive phase 2 review of the implementation of the standard in practice in 2014, as a result of which it rated Gibraltar overall as largely compliant. This rating puts Gibraltar on a par with jurisdictions such as the United Kingdom, Germany and the United States.

The Government is committed to implementing the recommendations made by the OECD in the phase 2 peer review report. This Bill implements those recommendations in the report by amending the Partnership Act and the Trustees Act to impose criminal sanctions on trustees and partners where they fail to maintain proper books and records of accounts.

750 To further strengthen Gibraltar's compliance with the OECD standards and the information exchange regime, the Bill amends the International Co-operation (Tax Information) Act 2009 to impose criminal penalties for breach of confidentiality under the Act and widen the Authority's powers when notifying requests subject to civil tax matters. Under the existing regime for civil tax information requests, the Authority must request subjects of issued notices without regard to delays or risks caused to an investigation. This Bill allows the Authority to determine whether a notification to a request subject would undermine or unduly delay an investigation and take action to postpone the notification until the identified risks subside.

Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House.

760 Mr Speaker: I put the question: does any Hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Partnership Act and the Trustee Act to impose criminal penalties for the failure to maintain proper books of accounts or records identifying settlors, trustees and beneficiaries; and to amend the International Co-operation (Tax Information) Act 2009 to impose a criminal penalty in respect of breaches of confidentiality and provide an exemption from the requirement to notify the subject of a request of a notice issued under section 8, and for connected purposes, be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

770 Acting Clerk: The Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Act 2016.

The Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Act 2016 – Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi):
Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all Hon. Members agree.

775 Mr Speaker: Do all Hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Mr Speaker: The Chief Minister.

780 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should resolve itself into Committee to consider the following Bills clause by clause: the Fire and Rescue Service (Amendment) Bill 2016 and the Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill 2016.

In Committee of the whole Parliament

Fire and Rescue Service (Amendment) Bill 2016 –
Clauses considered and approved

785 Acting Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Fire and Rescue Service Act.
Clause 1.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

790 Acting Clerk: Clause 2 as amended.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi):
Mr Chairman, the amendment is to clause 2.

795 Mr Chairman: It is clause 3(2).

Hon. G H Licudi: No, the amendment is to clause 2, Mr Chairman.

800 Mr Chairman: That is not in the notes that you have given.

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, the letter says:

The amendment is to add, after 'Gazette' in clause 2, the following ...

and there is a form of words at the end of clause 2.

805 Mr Chairman: You have two amendments in that case, I think. You have given notice of two amendments.

Originally, on 21st June, you gave notice of an amendment in clause 3 to substitute 'in the definition of "fire hazard"', and now the more recent one, which is for clause 2 and is dated 17th November.

810 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Chairman, the one I am dealing with now is clause 2, so we are dealing with clause 2 before we deal with the amendment to clause 3.

815 Mr Chairman: Clause 2. Hon. Members have received the terms of the amendment. Does anybody wish to speak on the amendment? I then propose that the amendment be carried. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried. So clause 2, as amended, stands part of the Bill.

Now, clause 3: what happens?

Hon. G H Licudi: There should be a further letter. So substitute 'in the definition fire hazard' –

820 Mr Chairman: Again, there is a very small amendment to clause 3(2). All agreed? We take it that clause 3(2) is amended in the terms of the notice given by the Hon. Minister, and therefore –

825 Hon. E J Reyes: One very small thing –

Mr Chairman: Yes, indeed.

Hon. E J Reyes: Would that be as the Bill stands here? As printed on the Green Paper, it says:

In section 2(b), for every instance that "4.5" appears,

830 and in the amendment it is 'for (b) substitute ...' Does that refer to that line, or does it refer to another line? Are we talking the amendment ... Are we removing that '3.5' and putting in that place in the definition of fire hazard? Is that what we are doing, amending this Bill with that?

Mr Chairman: It is not 100% clear.

835 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, essentially what we are doing is where '4.5' appears in section 2(b) we are amending it by substituting '3.5' for '4.5'.

840 Mr Chairman: The Bill as originally drafted ... there is an amendment to 2(b) where for every instance '4.5' appears, substitute '3.5'. Apart from that, the Hon. Member gave notice on 21st June in clause 3(2) again for (b) substitute 'in the definition of "fire hazard"'. Is it clear what that is referring to?

Hon. G H Licudi: I am trying to get hold of the Bill itself – sorry, the Act.

845 Hon. E J Reyes: If I may, Mr Speaker – otherwise you would read 'In section 2, in the definition of "fire hazard"'. That is what is printed here. This is why it does not make sense to me. It may to lawyers, but to us mortal school teachers ... we still cannot let go of the red pen, Mr Speaker.

850 Mr Chairman: If you look at the inverted commas, the amendment seems to be the words 'in the definition of "fire hazard"'.

855 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Chairman, because 2(b) relates exclusively to 'fire hazard', so either ... It works both ways, because 2(b) relates to 'fire hazard', so either, for clarification purposes, we just include 'fire hazard' or we just leave it as 'in section 2(b)' because section 2(b) is all about fire hazard. It is about nothing else.

Mr Chairman, I would suggest that we leave –

Mr Chairman: Leave this one for the next meeting?

860

Hon. G H Licudi: No, we leave the Bill as it is – clause 3. We leave it as it is in the original without the amendment.

Mr Chairman: Without the amendment. Okay.

Hon. G H Licudi: The amendment is just for clarification but is not, strictly speaking, necessary, because the amendment that is going to be made to section 2(b) is going to be in the definition of 'fire hazard' where '3.5' will be substituted for '4.5'.

870 Mr Chairman: Right. So clause 3 stands part of the Bill, as it is in the Bill.

Hon. G H Licudi: As it is.

Mr Chairman: Very well.

875

Acting Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill 2016 –
Clauses considered and approved

880 Acting Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Partnership Act and the Trustee Act to impose criminal penalties for the failure to maintain proper books of accounts –

Mr Chairman: You do not have to read the whole of the long title. The Bill is at Committee Stage. It is being referred to as the Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill 2016. Okay. So that is the title.

885 Clause 1 stands part of the Bill.

Call Clause 2.

Acting Clerk: Clauses 1 to 5, Mr Chairman.

890 Mr Chairman: [Inaudible]

Acting Clerk: The Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Act 2016.

Clause 1.

895

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

900 Hon. R M Clinton: May I make an observation on clause 2? Mr Chairman, I would ask the Government whether any thought has been given – I appreciate the importance of this amendment – into any transitional provisions, because obviously from one day to the next there will be criminal sanctioning.

905 Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): There is no need for transitional provisions. We are, in fact, implementing a recommendation by the report of the peer review of the OECD. We believe that it is right and proper. The obligation itself to maintain proper books and accounts already exists in the Acts. What the OECD review picked up on was that there was no sanction for a failure, so the primary obligation, the substantive obligation, exists; therefore, there is no need for a transitional provision, because the substantive requirement is already in legislation.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you very much.

Mr Chairman: Clause 2 stands part of the Bill.

Acting Clerk: Clause 3.

915

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Acting Clerk: Clause 4.

920

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Acting Clerk: Clause 5.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

925

Acting Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: The very long title stands part of the Bill.

Fire and Rescue Service (Amendment) Bill 2016 –
Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill 2016 –
Third Readings approved: Bills passed

930 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the Fire and Rescue Service (Amendment) Bill 2016 and the Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill 2016 have been considered in Committee and agreed to with amendments and I now move that they be read a third time and passed.

935 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that the Fire and Rescue Service (Amendment) Bill 2016 and the Partnership, Trustees and Tax Information (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill 2016 be read a third time and passed. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Mental Health Service –
Care in the community for discharged service users –
Debate commenced

Acting Clerk: Private Members' Motions. The Hon. R M Clinton.

940 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

This House:

Is concerned at an apparent lack of care in the community of discharged service users of Ocean Views and other Gibraltar Health Authority Mental Health Services; notes that continuity of care needs to be co-ordinated between Social Services and the Gibraltar Health Authority; considers that more should be done to help the most vulnerable in the community, including the provision of sheltered accommodation; and calls on the Government to undertake a review of care in the community to include public consultation with all stakeholders and professionals to provide and publish recommendations to ensure care in the community for service users is adequately provided.

Mr Speaker, I have brought this motion to the House as a consequence of feedback I was given by service users and families of service users in undertaking research for the recent Viewpoint programme on mental health in which a former Minister for Health, Dr John Cortes, and representatives from the Mental Welfare Society and Clubhouse Gibraltar were on the discussion panel.

This motion could perhaps be seen as a type of petition to this House, although not in the formal sense as envisaged by Standing Orders, as it has its origins in the views of ordinary citizens, and in that sense I stand here as a rather inadequate mouthpiece; inadequate in that I freely admit that this is not an area in which I have any personal experience or professional experience, and I accept any criticism from the Government benches in that respect. But then again, no one in this House is a professional in this field, which places upon us a greater responsibility to understand and research the issues raised in this motion.

This motion is not – and Members opposite may not believe me – meant to level criticism at any Government Department or person, but merely seeks to ensure that service users and families of service users receive the level of support that they need and is indeed their right. Nor have I been prescriptive as to the nature of the review the motion suggests – but more on that later.

Both sides of this House have acknowledged that Mental Health Services have been the Cinderella of the Health Authority. The previous GSD Government and this Government have both been playing catch-up in both the provision of new physical infrastructure in the form of Ocean Views, which finally opened in February 2015, and the recent Mental Health Act 2016. The Community Mental Health Team based at Coaling Island has no doubt played a major role in these improvements, including relevant professionals in the Gibraltar Health Authority, but a new clinical facility and legislation, while laudable, are not sufficient in themselves to provide the complete care that service users and families of service users need.

There appears to be a gap in the provision of aftercare for service users and their families. One family member of a service user told me that this was pretty much left to the family to cope as best as they could and, in their words, they ‘found that everything is a struggle and depressing’. In their view, and shocking as it may sound, a cancer or heart patient would receive more support, community sympathy and care than a Mental Health Service user. They see no continuation of care between the GHA and Social Services.

If I may, I would like to quote the views of one such family member of a service user, who happens to be a professional in the field and who describes the relative as follows:

He is stuck in a revolving-door syndrome where he just goes in and out of Ocean Views without a safety net in the community to evaluate his needs. There are no adequate reviews, no care plans, no pathways to recovering, to leading a life in the community and further afield. There is no future. His life has been brutally punctuated to a full stop.

As a Member of this Parliament, I cannot let such an indictment to our mental health care system go unexamined.

The same family member does, however, offer practical solutions as follows:

Surely social care reform with regard to mental health needs to include provision of community services for the person suffering from mental turmoil and also support for their families. Hence we need a holistic 365 all-day service which provides risk assessments, needs assessments, shelters, budgets for care plans, carers, therapists, social workers, mental health workers, all outside Ocean Views and in the community after a section has been lifted. I am asking for a robust recovery pathway for the service user to remain outside Ocean Views and to offer support to families of service users to maintain the carer and service user relationship.

Again I will confess to being no expert in this field. I have sought to identify those resources the GHA may have outside the Ocean Views facility from publicly available information.

980 From the annual Estimates of Expenditure for 2016-17 I note the GHA employs one consultant clinical psychologist, two clinical psychologists and two senior mental welfare officers. There must, of course, be other staff, but I cannot see Mental Health Services as a separately identifiable section in the same way as, for example, Elderly Care Residential Services are.

985 I had hoped to turn to the GHA's annual report for more information and statistics, but I found the last report on the GHA website is for 2012-13, before Ocean Views was completed, and the only useful statistical information was the bed occupancy levels in Mental Health, which peaked at just over 45 in 2013.

990 I was surprised to learn from the Clerks of the House that the last GHA annual report and accounts tabled in this House was for the year ended 31st March 2009 – tabled, in fact, on 29th April 2010. I trust the Minister will take note of this and table the latest GHA report and audited accounts as soon as possible, in accordance with section 15(5) of the Medical (Gibraltar Health Authority) Act.

995 And so I am unable to form an independent view as to the resources made available in the provision of mental health services in Gibraltar, let alone in respect of the activities of the GHA in this area for recent years, nor for the Community Mental Health Team. This information will, of course, be available to the Government and I would welcome an analysis of staffing and resources by unit, if they are so minded to publish it.

1000 I did, however, find that the minutes of the meeting of the GHA board for 21st September 2016 did include a report from the Unit General Manager, Mental Health Services, for the period January to June 2016. This is what was said in its introduction, and I quote:

Although patients' mental health is our primary aim, central to this wellbeing is an understanding of patients' physical health and the link physical and mental health have on one another. With this in mind, the MDT made a conscious decision to concentrate and focus on our patients' wellbeing and physical needs in conjunction with their mental health with the aim of recovery at the beginning of 2016. This has meant developing further links with other care services, being the Primary Care Centre and St Bernard's Hospital, in order to facilitate further the philosophy of patient recovery.

1005 This is no doubt a sensible approach, and the report provided some statistics, namely that over the four months from January to April 2016 the Community Mental Health Team had an average of 204 monthly patient clinic contacts and 103 monthly community visits. But despite this volume of work, the report then goes on to say the following, and again I quote:

As previously described in earlier reports, despite many community activities, both in terms of consultant contacts, nursing visits to patients' homes and the psychological/counselling intervention provided, some patients will continue to need admission to Ocean Views for periods of time. The mental health teams have continued to provide an ever-improving service to those who need it when they need it and how they need it. In order to continue in the development of the service and in response to patient need, we have during this period focused not only on the mental wellbeing but also on the physical needs of patients.

It appears to me, as a layman, that the focus of the GHA Mental Health Service is in clinical outcomes and not necessarily supporting service users in the community, which is perhaps, probably, the role of Social Services. And I really do find it of concern that the Mental Health Service itself considers it inevitable that, and I quote:

...some patients will continue to need admission to Ocean views for periods of time.

1010 If service users are discharged from Ocean Views with an appropriate care plan, then surely regular readmission to Ocean Views should not be seen an unavoidable outcome for some of these users. It would be interesting to see statistics on readmission rates to Ocean Views.

1015 I have also had occasion to discuss the mental health system with a service user. Their observations were as follows: firstly, GPs were perhaps too quick to prescribe anti-depressants rather than refer the patient to counselling; and secondly, they saw mental health support in the community as being disjointed and not user friendly, the service user needing to be in a critical condition before action was taken – the onus was on the service user to make and keep appointments with the Community Mental Health Team at Coaling Island with no follow up. That is the experience of a service user as reported to me.

1020 I have in my research for this debate drawn heavily on the Mind website in the UK, for which I am grateful and I freely acknowledge. On their site there are numerous documents and information surrounding the treatment and care in respect of mental health. One item in particular caught my attention in respect of the UK Mental Health Act that appears to have been omitted from our own recent Act. That is section 117, 'Aftercare'. Mind, the charity, describes it as follows, and I quote:

The aim of section 117 aftercare is to help people settle back into the community and to prevent them from going back to hospital for treatment of their mental health problems. Under this section, health and social services have a joint duty to arrange aftercare for certain people when they leave hospital.

Mind goes on to say:

There is no right to any specific services – it is up to health and social services to assess your needs and decide what they think your section 117 aftercare should include – but these could be, for example, somewhere to live, social care support, home help, or using a day centre.

1030 I can find no such equivalent provision in our new Mental Health Act and I hope the Minister can point to other legal mechanisms where the service user is provided with such aftercare support in the community; otherwise, we do risk a revolving-door syndrome at Ocean Views for lack of community aftercare support.

1035 To highlight the seriousness of this debate, I want to draw this House's attention to a recent local press report. In fact, it was reported in the Chronicle yesterday, on 23rd November, that a man who had a history of mental health issues was involved in a disturbing standoff with Police while wielding knives and threatening behaviour in a domestic setting. The court found that the defendant was suffering from a mental health condition that meant he was unfit to stand trial. The judge made a hospital order stating that he should be conveyed to Ocean Views within 28 days, if not immediately, as a patient. I can only imagine the distress to the man's family. If he had mental health issues, had he had adequate support in the community, or was it that it took a crisis for action to be taken?

1040 I know that Clubhouse Gibraltar and the Mental Welfare Society do their very best to lobby Government on these issues and look after their members. I am calling for a review of community care or aftercare in the community because I believe there may be a real gap in care.

1045 Mr Speaker, this House is very, very quick to create commissions and select committees on matters that affect itself, be it constitutional or political reform. I have yet to hear of a commission or select committee on health or educational issues, or indeed on any matter that affects the wider community at large. We seem to be self-absorbed in this House.

1050 If the Government is so minded to support my motion, I leave it to them to decide as to the best way to conduct such a review, be it external or internal, via a commission or select committee. The method is not important so much as an undertaking to conduct a review with a view to taking evidence and the making of recommendations to Government and/or Parliament as to whether the service is indeed adequate or needs improvement and further resources.

And so, Mr Speaker, I have nothing further to add, other than to thank sincerely those service users and families of service users who have had the courage to come forward and share their experiences with me.

1055 Mr Speaker, I commend my motion to the House. Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Hon. Mr Clinton.

The Hon. Neil Costa.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, it will not surprise anyone in the House, or indeed anyone listening to the debate, when I say that the Government will vote against the motion and that I will move an amending motion at the conclusion of my contribution. But I have to say that I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for having brought the motion to the House in the terms that he has drafted it, given that it will become immediately apparent to the House, and indeed to the astute people of Gibraltar, the incredibly meaningful – and, if I may say, in only five years – unparalleled strides that we have taken on care and, in particular, mental health care. (Banging on desks)

The language of the hon. Gentleman's motion does bear consideration. He starts by saying that the House is concerned at the 'apparent' lack of care in the community of discharged service users and that the House notes that continuity of care needs to be co-ordinated between Social Services and the Gibraltar Health Authority. Mr Clinton speaks of an 'apparent' lack of care. That therefore must mean that he is uncertain over whether or not there is a lack of care; and Mr Clinton, when he rises to speak in this House, talks of 'possible gaps', but in the motion he does not talk about the possibility of improvements, the possibility of better co-ordination; he speaks of lack – and lack, in the ordinary definition of the English language, means the absence of care. I have to tell the hon. Gentleman that there is no lack of care, although of course this Government is always in a process of continuous review to improve the quality of the services that it provides.

Let me continue by setting out the various and many improvements of which the hon. Gentleman is clearly not aware. The Community Mental Health Team delivers a five-day 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. comprehensive and accessible community-focused service which works in partnership with persons and their carers to meet their needs and which also respects their rights. The team, as you would expect, Mr Speaker, is multi-disciplinary, consisting of consultant psychiatrists, community psychiatric nurses, occupational therapists, mental welfare officers, counsellors and psychologists. The team provides both in-reach and outreach services, assessments and treatments, using a holistic approach which takes into consideration the person's physical, psychological and social needs. So I must tell the hon. Gentleman opposite that when he spoke before about the absence of assessments and treatments he would in fact be fundamentally mistaken.

Prior to leaving Ocean Views, discharge support packages are, in fact, put in place for service users and will, of course, vary with each person, based on their individual needs and his or her available support network. This may range – because, of course, a one-size-fits-all will not be appropriate – from daily contacts, daily visitations, to weekly or fortnightly meetings with their care co-ordinator and may also include a number of departments and agencies working in partnership. The aim of the service is to enable the service user to live as independently as possible, if possible, so that over time, as the service user improves, the input required is assessed and gradually reduced, if appropriate.

The care co-ordinators – and the hon. Gentleman will realise that they are called 'care co-ordinators' and the secret is therefore in the name – are registered mental health nurses or very experienced enrolled nurses who oversee the complete package of care provided to the service user. Our very competent and dedicated nurses are responsible for ensuring that all elements of the person's care are in place, are properly co-ordinated and that reviews at all stages are carried out. Care co-ordinators also ensure that there is adequate communication and information sharing between all the relevant professionals and agencies involved and in partnership with the service users and their carers.

In order to facilitate the delivery of the service, an extensive refurbishment and extension programme was carried out at the Community Mental Health department. This has included 1090 increased clinical capacity, office space, new safer storage facilities for service users and a general beautification of all areas giving the environment a very homely and therapeutic feel.

Unfortunately, and I now turn to the hon. Gentleman's point that he made that sometimes the service is not seen to take care of certain persons. Unfortunately, despite community support and interventions and all of the ones that I have listed just a few moments ago, both in terms of consultant contacts, nursing visits to service users' homes and the psychological intervention provided, some service users opt not to engage with the service, and in these situations staff members will attempt to make contact with them by phone, try to visit their homes or even by physically going to areas that they know the person frequently visits.

1100 Regrettably, Mr Speaker – and the hon. Gentleman opposite must really, I am sure, now wish that he had not said this – regrettably, at present, given that the Mental Health laws under the Mental Health Act 1968, to which the GSD made no amendment whatsoever in their 16 years, none at all, (A Member: Shame!) there are grave and severe limitations to care in the community from a legal perspective. What I mean by that is that the services can only intervene with service users who do not wish to liaise with the service when they are in crisis and in need of admission. In other words, presently, under the statute under which the GSD operated for almost their 16 years in Government, a person who requires care but who refuses care cannot be assisted. They cannot be assisted by law unless they are assessed to be a danger to themselves and to others. And they seek to admonish us, Mr Speaker, about laws and regulations when they presided over an archaic piece of legal architecture that prevented and hamstrung the very professionals they now seem to care for! (Banging on desks)

1105 Mr Speaker, this must have been the Act, surely, because words show what they cared about when they were in Government. This must have been the Act that they were 'apparently', to use the hon. Member's word, 'apparently' happy ... The new Act, which as I said, will come into operation in the next quarter, also uses the appropriate term 'mental disorder' and replaces the terminology, with which obviously they were comfortable with operating for 16 years as, 'subnormal'. They used to operate under a law that called people with mental health issues as 'subnormal', and they are standing there, moralistically trying to lecture us about the importance of mental health care, but kept calling people who needed the care as 'subnormal' and they were happy with it? (A Member: Shame!) Please, Mr Speaker!

1120 Critical, therefore, to the overall improved service being offered to service users has been the need to review and update the Mental Health Act. I am advised that the Bill did present certain challenges because of Gibraltar's uniqueness, but as the House is aware, the Bill was passed in Parliament and will come into effect in the first quarter of next year. And it is well worth making the point, in our view, that the Bill was the product of over two years' work by a multi-disciplinary team composed of nurses, consultants, psychiatrists, mental welfare officers and other professionals, and all of these professionals, which, according to the hon. Gentleman, when one takes his speech in the global ... he seems to suggest do not really exist or do not really talk to each other, or are completely unaware about Mental Health Service users. Mr Speaker, you could not be making these things up!

1130 The Mental Health Act Group continue to meet on a regular basis and are at the final stages of producing the code of practice to accompany the new Act. Once this code has been completed and approved we will see tremendously important improvements, including the reclassification of conditions and the introduction of the community treatment order, which will assist in supporting risk-of-relapse service users in the community.

1135 Let me explain that to the hon. Member opposite. I have explained that in cases where a past service user or somebody who is assessed by the service to perhaps present and experience mental health issues, unless the service decides that the person presents a risk to himself they are not allowed by law to take any steps. However, under the new Act, if the service considers that the person does experience mental health problems, then even if that person does not present an immediate danger to himself or to other persons, the law will allow the health professionals to intervene. So the legal architecture that my hon. Friend, Dr John Cortes, brought in is precisely designed, precisely designed to cater for the issues that the hon. Gentleman complains of today, but during the course of which in 16 years the GSD decided were not important enough to do anything about. (Banging on desks)

1145 And so, Mr Speaker, once the new Act comes into effect, service users who are considered to be at risk of relapse or who the service considers are in need of care will be able to be placed on a community treatment order as part of their discharge package. This will assist the teams in ensuring engagement and hopefully reduce the need for emergency crisis admissions, whilst in turn helping to support families through very difficult periods.

1150 Further, the Mental Health Services work very closely with a multitude of departments and agencies, support groups and NGOs in an endeavour to offer the best possible tailor-made care to service users, and depending on the service users' needs these may include drug and alcohol detox programmes in conjunction with Bruce's Farm, weekly consultation clinics, visits to the prison, twice-weekly memory clinics in partnership with the Care Agency, in-patient mother and 1155 baby assessments in conjunction with the Care Agency teams working closely with the Department of Education to ensure the welfare and support of child or adolescents with mental health issues and their families. There is also close collaboration with the Royal Gibraltar Police in a number of areas, from conducting assessments when required to attending multi-agency public protection arrangement meetings, and regular meetings with the Youth Advisory Council, 1160 Adult Disability Board, the Housing Department and even further, when required, the visiting consultant child psychiatrist has visited sites in the Care Agency and worked together with social work professionals so as to advise on care plans and services provided.

So you see, Mr Speaker, that there is great integration already – without, of course, being complacent, and always more can be done – but that there is of course already great multi-disciplinary integration between the Care Agency, the Mental Health Services and the GHA already operating.

1165 Further, non-Government agencies – in other words, civil society – are a hugely important part of our case and they too work closely with the Mental Health Services, including, as I am sure the hon. Gentleman knows, the Clubhouse project, Childline, Narcotics Anonymous and the 1170 Mental Welfare Society.

Further still, the House will be pleased to know that the Government is in active discussions with a service provider to provide an adult helpline which will specifically assist people who may be experiencing mental health issues.

1175 Therefore, for the hon. Member to even suggest that perhaps, perhaps we on these benches lack the heart and the dedication to take care of persons experiencing mental health issues is, in our view, unfair and, we think, entirely a partisan political attack with no substance.

Indeed, unless I misunderstood the hon. Gentleman, I seem to recall that he mentioned two particular cases. He discussed two particular cases and he brought to this House two quotes, and, as a result, on those two quotes he built a case, and I would say he built a house of cards 1180 whereby he tries to denigrate the entirety of the work conducted by the Police, by the Department of Education, by the Care Agency, by the GHA, by the youth workers, by all of these professionals working together, on the basis of two quotes, or rather two cases which he brings.

Mr Speaker, everyone can see through the fallacy of wishing to try to attack an entire system on the basis of two individual cases. It really does beg the question that if the GSD now pretend to be so very concerned about mental health care issues, why doesn't the hon. Gentleman write 1185 to me? Why does he not tell me immediately, with concern, who those persons are, who the families of those persons are? 'How can we help them? They are in need. This is urgent. We must help them.' But no, Mr Speaker, of course not, because it is a party political ploy; because they would rather put it down in a speech so as to say it across the floor of this House; because 1190 to try to help people behind closed things does not get them political points.

Of course, it does remind one about Samuel Beckett and the Comedy of the Absurd and that wonderful masterpiece Waiting for Godot, where one character says to the other:

'We always find something, eh Didi, to give us the impression that we exist?'

That is what they seek, (Laughter) the impression that they exist, because politically they are resoundly defeated! (Interjection and banging on desks) (A Member: Que Bueno! Que Bueno!)

1195 Therefore, Mr Speaker, to proceed with the hon. Gentleman's non-motion, (Hon. Chief Minister: Brilliant) he says, as if having discovered an entire new world, that this House considers that more should be done to help the most vulnerable – as he did, of course, by writing to me immediately and telling me, 'Neil, we need your help' – in the community, including the provision of sheltered accommodation.

1200 Mr Speaker, we go from the absurd to the sublimely ridiculous. It is surely a statement of the self-evident, not to say the bleeding obvious, that more can always be done in the provision of care. Of course! Of course more can be done, and more is being done. More has been done by this Government in five years than they did in 16! Don't they know that? Aren't they embarrassed to bring this motion? (Banging on desks) To exhort the very Government, to exhort 1205 my hon. Friends, Dr John Cortes and Samantha Sacramento, who have been the most engaged, the most caring, the most active, the most willing to significantly invest in mental health and care and to base mental health policies and laws on professional advice, rather than what the chief at the top used to choose at any particular time, is a rather peculiar path for the hon. Gentleman to tread, unless it is his intention to try to strike a difference between the old GSD and them. (Several Members: Ah!) They want to highlight their deplorable neglect of health 1210 services, the deplorable neglect of mental health issues, and therefore they think, 'As a political device, let us start to mark the difference between their neglect and what we would do if we were elected into office,' which is not very likely, because seven out of ten people in Gibraltar saw through all of their fallacies and saw through all of their political devices and resoundly elected us (Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly a year ago.) exactly a year ago. (Banging on desks) (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: And that is why.)

Mr Speaker, has the hon. Gentleman not been alive to the many improvements in mental health care over the past five years? Is he blind? Is he blind to the great legal, regulatory, infrastructural, capital and human resources advances in the past five years? Is he unaware that 1220 in Dr John Cortes the Health Services and, in particular, Mental Health Services has advanced in leaps and bounds? Is he not aware of any of that? How can he bring a motion to the House that says lack of care in the community, lack of co-ordination? It is not the case! It is patently false!

And indeed, it does give me the opportunity, though, to tell him what we have done more so.

The whole of Gibraltar knows ... and I really could not believe it when I heard the hon. Gentleman say that there were no care plans. How does he think we have operated in the past 1225 five years – without care plans? Do you think that we divine one day in the office who needs help? How does he think that we work? There are care co-ordinators, there are mental health nurses, there are mental health welfare officers. They exist: does he not know that?

We inherited from them an incomplete plan for the mental health facility – and it does say something, doesn't it, Mr Speaker, that they should not have done anything on the mental 1230 health facility for 16 years, and when they come close to their last mandate in the last election they decide then that something has to be done?

Of course, it was our first priority to conduct an extensive review – always in partnership with professionals, service users and relatives – to create a facility that was fit for purpose.

1235 The King George V Hospital was adapted in 1971 to be a provisional mental health hospital with a suitable facility being built, and for the following 45 years, other than the addition of bars to all the windows, minimal work was done to the building, which of course resulted in a dilapidated and indeed dangerous environment. The unit was split into two wards. Acute and long-stay patients would sleep in Nightingale-style open dormitories, with no privacy as there 1240 were no partitions or curtains between the beds. There was a total of four side rooms in the facilities and only a bed in them. Due to the lack of investment and repairs over time, the furniture began to break, resulting in patients' wardrobes, bedside tables and many armchairs

1245 having to be removed for safety reasons. For over a decade patients would have to keep their belongings in refuse bags or plastic bags, storage boxes purchased by their relatives – and he says that we do not care about persons with mental health care problems! This was the Government that allowed the former mental health facility to deteriorate to an extent that it was dangerous, that they could not have the heart to replace furniture that was falling apart and that the service users had to have their belongings in plastic bags – and he stands here today and tells us that we do not care! You just could not make this up! We certainly would have spent 1250 money immediately on being able to make sure that people at least had the dignity of having their clothes in a drawer rather than in a plastic bag, but they did not care. They did not care! Why would they care? They did not.

1255 Indeed, Mr Speaker, if it was just that patients had to keep clothes and their personal possessions in bags, as terrible as that was, if that had been the only thing one could almost – obviously not, but one could almost – forgive them. But the worst thing about this was that, as a result of the layout of the ward, which as I explained was a Nightingale-style open dormitory, all patients, irrespective of their condition, presentation or stage of recovery, would be nursed in the same area. This inevitably placed the more settled and frail patients at risk. Mr Speaker, the House and, I think, the public will want to pause and reflect on what that would have meant for 1260 service users and for the staff – that an admission, independent of his or her state, would have had to have been dealt with, with other service users in the same room. What kind of care was that, Mr Speaker? What kind of co-ordination was there, Mr Speaker? What kind of care package was there, Mr Speaker? What kind of assessment was there, Mr Speaker? None! None.

1265 If this were not so serious, we could laugh about his motion; but it is serious, and they should be ashamed for having brought it.

1270 Queue forward to the New Dawn of 9th December 2011, when we immediately realised that we absolutely needed to radically change our approach to mental health issues. As someone who had visited the KGV, and recently visited the new excellent facility of Ocean Views on a bright new day since 2015, I cannot stress enough the exceedingly high quality of the finish of the new building and the staggering difference in the quality of the mental health care provision.

1275 As you would expect from this Government, the Ocean Views project was undertaken in full partnership with all the clinical teams, carers, service users, non-Government organisations and other professionals. During this period, numerous consultation meetings took place and ... if I may, Mr Speaker, congratulate Dr John Cortes that the building does capture what was needed for the new facility, which is how to provide the best and optimum care in such an environment. Through the design phase and the construction period, 275 people had the opportunity to visit the site to see for themselves the extent of the works and were able to comment or make suggestions during the process. Do you imagine for one second that the GSD would have invited one, let alone 275 people to give them advice on what to do, to make suggestions on what to do, when everything was done by somebody at No. 6? (Interjection) 1280

1285 Mr Speaker, they just open themselves up to be reminded that under this Government we do genuinely engage, we do genuinely consult, we actually care about the stakeholders – we know their names, we know their surnames, we know what their concerns are – and we insist from our professionals that they do co-ordinate, that they do speak to each other, that they do share information and that always, always front and centre is the main concern of making sure that a person who is experiencing mental health concerns is properly taken care of.

1290 Following the opening of Ocean Views in February 2015, the service has seen a number of major improvements as it settled into a more conducive environment with patients, carers and staff participating in the continued positive changes to the way services are delivered. The design of all wards and departments has dramatically improved the manner in which care is provided. Amongst the many improvements we are experiencing the most tangible is the change of setting, providing a modern, therapeutic and recovery-focused environment to adults experiencing mental health issues with privacy and in relaxed and comfortable surroundings.

1295 Mr Speaker, let me take the opportunity, as this seems to be in vogue today, of quoting some of the staff members. First quote:

The new environment is so much better than the previous KGV and this has made a huge difference for service users. Their surroundings are much more comfortable and pleasant, which gives them more dignity. The facilities are much improved: the garden, the reception area for visitors and the rehab flats. Overall, the patients have benefited immensely from the new facility.

Second quote:

Intact building, not falling apart like the KGV, safer environment, more homely, less institutionalised, much more service-user centred.

Third quote:

More appropriate service-user mix – in other words, all dementia of a similar level together.

Fourth quote:

Greater complexity of physical care'

– which apparently was missing –

and registered mental nurses learning new skills from duly qualified staff.

1300 The last paragraph of his motion says that the House calls on the Government to undertake a review of care in the community to include public consultation with all stakeholders and professionals and publish recommendations to ensure care in the community is adequately provided for. Mr Speaker, I have spent, since I have been on my feet, in fact speaking as to how 1305 the Government is engaged continuously in reviews with professionals. And despite, despite all the great improvements to the Mental Health Services, Government, as I have already said, is never complacent, is far from complacent, and is determined to continue to develop and improve the services available in Gibraltar. And with this saying a review of the community health services as a whole by external professionals has already been factored into the Mental Health Service's three-year strategy and is reflected again in the estimates bid for 2017. Once 1310 recommendations have been received, work would commence in addressing any and all improvements suggested. And of course, as with the Ocean Views project, the crucial piece of work would be done in full partnership with all stakeholders.

Government has never denied the need for supported accommodation. But, the hon. Gentleman will surely appreciate the uniqueness of Gibraltar, but he should know that we are 1315 exploring available approaches to develop a tailor-made model suitable for Gibraltar's needs. These are being reviewed and addressed and it is envisaged, Mr Speaker... I do not want to pre-empt the recommendations that the report may make, but it is, I suppose, possible that they may request that the hours of the facility is open further.

In an endeavour to pre-empt some of the recommendations that this report may make, work 1320 was undertaken at Ocean Views to incorporate a rehabilitation accommodation component within the facility in order to better support service users' reintegration to the community and independent living.

The Government is constantly on the lookout, constantly on the lookout to improve and further develop the provision of services available to the population as a whole. It must be kept 1325 in mind that, despite all of the advances both in the environment and the services available, the Government will continue to invest in the infrastructure, human resources and capital needs of the Mental Health Service.

1330 And so, Mr Speaker, it is with great pleasure, that I suggest the following amending motion. In order to follow a venerable convention in this House, I will suggest that the motion is amended by removing everything after the words 'This House' and say as follows:

Notes the strides in the provision of mental healthcare since the election of the GSLP Liberal Government on 9th December 2011; notes and congratulates the creation and delivery of an entirely fit-for-purpose mental health facility, establishing an optimum environment for patients, carers and staff; acknowledges the many improvements in mental healthcare arising from the new facility, which provides a modern, therapeutic and recovery-focused environment to adults experiencing mental health issues in privacy and in relaxed and comfortable surroundings; laments and condemns the GSD administration for 16 years of neglect and chronic lack of investment in the provision of mental healthcare in general and, in particular, the shocking and deplorable state of the King George V Hospital, which was wholly unsuitable and dangerous for mental health patients; records that the GSD in 16 years of Government spent a total of £73,356 on external aesthetics, with only £5,000 on furniture and with no financial provision for mental healthcare; notes and welcomes the radically new approach by the GSLP Liberals in ensuring a focused, multi-disciplinary professional support, factoring advice from all relevant medical professionals in respect of in-reach and outreach services, assessments and treatment, placing firmly as the most important overriding consideration an individual's mental, physical and social needs; notes that the Government's commitment will rightly be judged by how we take care of the most vulnerable among us; commends the GSLP Liberal Government to continue to relentlessly pursue the improvement in mental healthcare provision by basing its policies on the best medical advice and working hand in glove with professionals and civil society to design and deliver optimum support for persons with mental health issues and further commence the amalgamation of the provision of health and care under one newly created Ministry.

Thank you Mr Speaker.

Several Members: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

1335 Mr Speaker: I now propose the amendment in the terms moved by the Hon. Neil Costa. Does any hon. Member wish to speak on the amendment?

1340 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I will be proposing my own amendment, so if you could just guide me on what stage – (Interjection by Mr Speaker.) I intend to propose my own amendment, so I would appreciate your guidance on what stage we are at, at the moment.

1345 Mr Speaker: I will tell you what the procedure is. The procedure is that you have to speak on this amendment now before the House – (Hon Chief Minister: If she wants to.) if you want to, and in the course of your ... Strictly speaking, you ought to comment about the amendment before the House. It is now Mr Neil Costa's amendment which is before the House. This is now the motion for consideration. You may not wish to say anything about it, if you do not want to, and you can move your own amendment. If you do move your own amendment, then I will invite hon. Members to speak on your amendment and then put it to the vote and we will see then how things transpire. That is by way of guidance. You are able to stand now and speak.

1350 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Can I get up just to assist but not to speak on the motion?

1355 Mr Speaker, in order to assist Members opposite, because I know only one of them has been here when we have done a lot of these before, this amendment is obviously going to pass because it enjoys the support of this side of the House, so I would suggest that it may be that if the hon. Lady wants to add anything to what it is that the House is going to say, she wait for the House to pass this amendment, and then with this being the motion, if necessary, she can make amendments to it here, because I assume she has got amendments at the moment to what is the original motion. So I think it is probably better for her to allow this part of the debate to happen and then, once this motion is on the Order Paper and is the one being debated, she can then come in and try and include here anything which may still be relevant to the amendments she might have wanted to make to the original motion.

Mr Speaker: I imagine the hon. Lady, not having seen this amendment ... the purpose of her amendment, I imagine, is not to amend the Hon. Neil Costa's amendment –

1365
A Member: Not at the moment.

Mr Speaker: – and therefore, the only way that she could do it would be by again deleting every word after the word 'House' in the Hon. Neil Costa's amendment and moving her amendment. I imagine that is not what she wants to do. I would imagine that her amendment relates to Mr Clinton's motion. Am I correct in saying that? In that case, I think you ought to proceed as the Hon. the Chief Minister, the Leader of the House, is advising you. You will have an opportunity. The stage will be reached when you may have an opportunity to do precisely that. The other thing for you to consider is whether your amendment to Mr Clinton's motion is a small, relatively cosmetic amendment, amending some part of it, or whether it is a wholesale amendment deleting every word after 'House' and proposing your own amendment. That is another aspect you have to take into account.

Does anybody want to speak on the Hon. Neil Costa's amendment? (Interjection by Hon. R M Clinton) You can do so now, straight away, yes. You are able to speak on this amendment. (Interjection by Hon. R M Clinton) Eventually, you will have your right to reply, but that will be on the amended motion. You have not got a right to reply on Mr Neil Costa's amendment. You can speak on it now, on this amendment, and any other Member can speak on it, but no right to reply on this amendment. Eventually, if this amendment is carried through and it becomes the amended motion before the House, you will have the last word.

1380
Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if I may – I am sorry, I am new to this; I feel like I am in a bit of a Monty Python situation here. Have I missed the chance to speak on Mr Clinton's initial motion by Mr Costa raising the amendment?

1390
Mr Speaker: Well, Mr Clinton's original motion is not now before the House. What is before the House is Mr Costa's amendment. When ... if Mr Costa's amendment is carried through and that becomes the amended motion, you are able to speak on that. Well, we say here in Parliament that it is Mr Costa's original motion, but strictly speaking, in essence, it is not, because it has been entirely amended.

1395
Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think for the hon. Lady's purposes, when she gets up to speak on the motion as amended she will be able to speak about the motion that was originally put and the motion as it is now amended and tell us what she thinks about Mr Clinton's original motion and what she thinks about the way it has been amended by Mr Costa. She will be able to speak on the whole thing; she is not limited to being able to speak only on the motion then amended. You can give us your views on all aspects of the debate – that is absolutely acceptable.

1405
Mr Speaker: But having said that, I have not seen your amendment and therefore I am not able to advise you. It will be, therefore, for you to consider whether you think that your amendment can amend Mr Neil Costa's amendment, because that is what will be before the House. Okay?
Mr Clinton.

1410 Hon. T N Hammond: I was just going to ask, Mr Speaker, surely if the hon. Lady – (A Member: Stand up.) Sorry. Surely, if the hon. Lady files an amendment which suggests that everything after this House should be amended on the current amendment that we are reviewing, that then becomes the motion. Am I correct?

1415 Mr Speaker: I can see there is a practical difficulty. There is a motion on the Order Paper, which any Member is considering, on the Opposition side ... In her case, being an independent Member, she had in mind to amend it, and therefore had Mr Costa not intervened when he did, had she intervened beforehand, she would have spoken on it and proposed her amendment. That is no longer possible, because Mr Costa has spoken and the amendment that we have is the one of which he has now given notice. It is a practical difficulty and how hon. Members proceed, and in particular the hon. Lady ... She has to take into account – and hon. Members of the official 1420 Opposition – what has happened. She has told us that her intention was to move the amendment. She does not have to speak now. If she wants to, she can. She can react now to Mr Costa's amendment, if she wants to speak on that, and then later on she can express whatever views she had on the original motion. Now how she gets in her amendment, seeing that I have not seen the nature of it, that is another matter. I find it difficult to guide unless I 1425 have seen it.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, doesn't therein lie the fundamental problem we have with amendments that entirely change the original motion? We could end up, on the one hand, talking about a motion on mental health, and because a Member decides to file an amendment 1430 which changes the original motion, we could end up talking about pigs flying, with nothing whatsoever to do with the original subject. So, if the hon. Lady were to now file her motion, saying 'Everything after "This House" is amended', she could even, if she chose, revert back to the original motion, presumably, or file her motion in its entirety, and Government would then have to obviously vote her motion down, but we would not take a vote presumably –

1435 Mr Speaker: That is what she had in mind. If what she had in mind was to say ... If the intention of her amendment was to delete everything after the words 'This House', she can do so now, but if her amendment was of a more minor nature – adding a paragraph here or amending some of the words in Mr Clinton's motion – that is another kettle of fish altogether. This is the difficulty.

I would suggest, if I may, that it may be helpful if I were to see the hon. Lady's amendment and advise her.

1445 Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. Lady is indicating that she wants to wait and see what the House does and then consider any amendments to this part of the motion, because this is the motion that is going to proceed.

Mr Speaker, the reality is that the Opposition have put a motion, the Government have put a countermotion and this countermotion will be the motion that the House is debating in a few minutes, because – [Inaudible]

1450 Mr Speaker: The reality is that a Member of the Government, the Minister responsible, has done what we usually expect a responsible Government to do: he has immediately replied to the motion and has moved an amendment. That is not unexpected. (Interjection) No, I would say that is par for the course. But obviously the hon. Lady does not have the experience of many years in Parliament. Parliament has not had many motions over the period of time, in any case, to see how the wind blows. (Interjections)

What is now before the House is the Hon. Minister's amendment.

1460 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I am just going to say a few words on the amendment because it is a pity, I find, that when we move these motions ... and the Hon. the Minister accused us of only doing so for party political reasons – I certainly assure him that that was not the intention. The intention is to raise the particular issue on the political agenda. The Minister will have known through his years in Opposition that people do come to the Opposition and ask these questions. In some areas we will write to Ministers, and I have indeed written to the Hon. 1465 Minister himself and he has been very helpful; and there are other occasions where we, often in conjunction with the individuals, decide that it is appropriate to bring these issues to Parliament for a debate such as this.

I do find it unfortunate that the Hon. the Minister chooses to amend the motion in such terms that are clearly going to be unacceptable to the Opposition so we can never, ever find 1470 consensus. (Interjection) So then discussion and perhaps a middle ground can be found where the whole House can find consensus, possibly. That may not be possible on all issues, but just occasionally it would be nice to think that we could indeed find consensus. But clearly that will not be possible on the amended motion, which is very politically pointed indeed, and therefore I have to say those on this side of the House cannot possibly support the amended motion as it 1475 stands.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is becoming for the Government also the endemic issue with the Opposition. Hon. Members have been told repeatedly in this House that if they want to move a motion because they say they generally care about a subject, then they should be in 1480 touch with the Government to move a motion in a way that is agreeable to both sides of the House.

The Hon. Mr Hammond's words sound, I must say to him, entirely hollow, coming from a Member of the side of the House that has moved a motion that starts with: 'The House ... is concerned at an apparent lack of care in the community'. (A Member: Exactly.) Now, Mr 1485 Speaker, if we want to do things in a collegiate way, if we want to express the concerns of the whole House and if there is an issue coming to hon. Members ... This is the age of e-mail, the age of WhatsApp, the age of Messenger, the age of Twitter messages, the age of easy communications, and yet hon. Members opposite appear to find it impossible to pick up the phone and call their opposite number and say, 'Listen, why don't we move a motion that deals with issues relating to mental health in a way that both sides can feel that they can support it?' 1490

The hon. Gentleman has just told us that when he writes to the hon. Member he finds that he is able to work with him. Well, in that same vein I have said before, until I have been proverbially blue in the face, that if they want to put motions which are not just doing politics, which is what we believe they are doing with these motions ... I believe they must have had an edict from his lordship Mr Feetham, who is not here today: 'Two motions every Parliament on 1495 any subject, the first two past the post are the ones that are allowed.' It is not difficult to work out that that is what they are doing. They are doing it politically, they are doing it in a way that is designed to raise their profile and in a way that is designed to embarrass the Government. That is politics. We have all done politics, we are all in the game of politics, but this is not an area for politics. This is an area for genuine concern together, (A Member: Yes.) and therefore if you start with 'is concerned at an apparent lack of care in the community', what you are going to get back is the bible according to the New Dawn. (Hon. N F Costa: Absolutely.)

Mr Speaker, I come now to the things I want to say about the outstanding remarks we have heard this afternoon from Neil Costa and the way he has been able to deal with the few points 1505 that have been raised by Mr Clinton in a way that is not just erudite but also passionate and has explained to the House exactly what fantastic work was done by his predecessor, John Cortes – and Samantha Sacramento, because this is an area of interplay between Social Services and Health.

But I must say, Mr Speaker, that I want to start with a personal reflection, because it is 1510 something that has marked me for the rest of my life. On 1st January 2012, as Gibraltar's shiny, bright new Chief Minister, with his then shiny, bright new Minister for Health – and the Environment, one must never forget – we went to visit KGV, and we have done so every year since then, continuing a tradition from the days that the GSLP was in Government. It was not a tradition that had been pursued in the 16 years that the GSD – the letters that they represent – 1515 had been in Government.

A Member: This is right; they had not.

Hon. Chief Minister: There had been no visits by a Chief Minister on New Year's Day to KGV, in the time that they had been in Government, by the man who they say is the greatest 1520 Gibraltarian of all time.

That day, Mr Speaker, I walked into KGV for the first time and swore to myself that it would never stay like that again, that the Government that I led would not put people into the KGV that they put people into. I have no compunction in saying that John Cortes wept, that Fabian 1525 Picardo wept, and – I say this with respect – Jesus wept. Because the conditions in which hon. Members opposite – and there are two of them who are still in this House, Mr Reyes and Mr Feetham – kept those who were suffering from mental illness was so disgraceful that even a GSD Minister for Health described the KGV that they administered as the Cinderella of the Health Service. It is a word that came out of the mouth of a GSD Minister for Health, but they did 1530 nothing about it – not one penny of investment, other than painting the outside of the building. That is to say 'the Cinderella of the service, but I wash its face so that I am less criticised and inside I spend nothing' – £5,000, Mr Speaker. It is to their eternal shame and political discredit, (Hon. N F Costa: Absolutely!) that what Neil Costa has said is a massive truth. Patients had to keep their belongings in waste-disposal bags, in black bin liners. (A Member: Shame!) Do you 1535 know what it is like to be told by a patient, 'Mira, Fabian, ahí meto yo mis cosas' – 'Look, Fabian, that is where I have to store my things'? These are people who are not well. They lived, literally, in open wards. Mr Speaker, to be implored, entreated, by the nurses there to please help them was like visiting one of those awful places in the old Eastern Europe where we see children in an orphanage in a Panorama programme and we say 'How can that happen?' That was here. That 1540 was Gibraltar. That was the care that the GSD afforded those who had mental health issues in Gibraltar.

To bring this motion in these terms is not just to ignore that but to ignore the absolutely magnificent and truly vocational work that is done by the professionals in that service, not just at the old KGV, not just at the magnificent new Ocean Views, but in particular at the Community 1545 Mental Health Clinic. (A Member: That's right.) This motion is not just an attempt to chivvy political points, it is not just an attempt to kick the Government because that is what they think they have to do; this motion discredits the fantastic, the fabulous, the second-to-none vocational work done by the people who are those who do the follow-up care, those who do the care in the community, and their motion starts by saying that there is an apparent lack of care in the community of discharged service users of Ocean Views. (Interjection) Don't they know that 1550 there are many thousands of people, even in a community the size of ours, who benefit from the service of the Community Mental Health Group? Don't they know that the people in that clinic are some of the unsung heroes of our Health Service, indeed of our nation? And aren't they ashamed that they did nothing for them in the time they were in office, other than hem them in to where they were and take away some of the services that they could provide to the public? And does this motion not heap further shame on the initials 'GSD', because they have proposed that there is an apparent lack of care in the community and Mr Clinton has come here not having picked up the phone to try and work with his opposite number ... although I lose the notion of who is doing Health. I thought that Health was being taken by the Hon. the Leader of 1555 the Opposition, but this motion on Health is being taken by the Hon. Mr Clinton. To not have picked up the phone, to not have worked collegiately on the subject, to have put a motion which is so partisan as that motion, to have spent £10 million on a hole in the ground where the 1565 Theatre Royal was before moving KGV but to have spent only £75,000 on KGV, to have spent £84 million on the new airport before spending a penny on the new mental health hospital ... Mr Speaker, they say that I have to prioritise things and not do No. 6 Convent Place, because I spent £5 million-odd there, and yet they spend £84 million on a new airport and did not spend a penny on mental health. Well, look, to come now with a motion and expect not to be reminded of all of that is really quite something.

1570 This is not politics; this is the one-way politics of 'We'd like to come to the Parliament just to point out things that we think are wrong today in order to gain a few points, but can you please not remind us of what we did wrong.' This is nonsense. And to get up Jeremy Corbyn-style and say, 'Evelyn from Croydon has written to me to say that they have got a problem with a member of their family' ... This is a very sensitive area. That member of the family is an individual who deserves respect, who may or may not agree with those members of the family who are talking to him. They are entitled to be treated as individuals and their care plans are for those 1575 individuals and not necessarily to be shared. Although in Gibraltar we have extended family set-ups – the 35-year-old, the 40-year-old, the 50-year-old is not el niño, other than in the lexicon of a loving mother or father (A Member: That's right.) – and the first thing you need to do in order to understand how to do mental health is to treat patients with respect and to treat them as 1580 individuals, and not to always consider that they have to be in somebody else's loco parentis.

Therefore, Mr Speaker, to have to hear in this House that we are releasing patients without a safety net in the community, without care plans and without reviews is just not true. Now, assuming that the hon. Gentleman has not set out to mislead the House – and I give him the benefit of the doubt that he did not intend to do that – and if the Hon. Mr Costa, as Minister for 1585 Health, has now demonstrated that what he said is not correct, I would expect that he will take it back and he will realise, just as we have had the issue before with others, that they cannot simply come to this House and say 'I have been told ...'; they can ask 'I have been told ... Is this true?' and we will tell them no, it is not true. But he has come here to do something different. He has come here to assert that that which he has been told is the truth, and we have 1590 demonstrated that it is not. And anybody who knows what Ocean Views is like – and I dare say that if he knows anything about Mental Health Services it is current, and therefore he might know something about Ocean Views but he knows nothing about KGV – will know that Ocean Views is designed to produce for everybody a new narrative for life, not to represent a full stop in their life, to introduce them back into community living. There is an apartment inside Ocean 1595 Views in order to be able to show people what it is like to get back into normal life.

I have not heard him say either today or in the lead-up to today, or his Leader in the lead-up to today, that the right thing to do was therefore to create, because of the interaction between Social Services and Care in the Community and Health, a Ministry of Health and Care, but I will take it that they actually support the fact – although the hon. the Leader of the Opposition 1600 reshuffled his cabinet before I had reshuffled mine, so he does not have shadows exactly for the positions as they are today. I will take it that he recognises and congratulates me for having created the Ministry of Health and Care.

Mr Speaker, all of the things that the hon. Gentleman is telling us to do of course – the flats for people to be able to be reintegrated etc. – some of which we might agree with, as the Hon.
1605 Mr Costa has indicated, all of them, cost money, all of them. And given the penny-pinching attitude that he has demonstrated to everything that is done by this Government, I will be surprised if he does not, when we do it, come back and say, 'Why is it costing so much? It should not be costing so much.' Look, things cost money and the provision of care costs money, and we are happy to spend money on the provision of care, in particular on the provision of care of 1610 those most vulnerable in our community.

And so I rise not just in support of the amendment which the Hon. Mr Costa has put, but in defence of the excellent record not just of the Government that I lead but in particular of John Cortes as the Minister for Health, which has the lead in respect of these matters, and of Samantha Sacramento as Minister for Social Services, and in defence of the reputations, sullied

1615 by the hon. Member, of every single one of the professionals of the Gibraltar Health Authority working at KGV, working at Ocean Views, and in particular those most sullied by his motion – those who are in the Community Mental Health Clinic who are responsible for the care in the community, which is not lacking, not even apparently so. (Banging on desks) (Several Members: Hear, hear.)

1620 Therefore, Mr Speaker, in answer to the things he has said in answer to the things that Mr Hammond has said, it is abundantly clear that this is just a game of motions, that all we are seeing is the presentation of motions in order to have their voices heard. If I may be less eloquent than Mr Costa, one is reminded of the concept of such and ‘I think, therefore I am’ has become in their mouths ‘I speak, therefore I must be’ politically, because there is no apparent reason why they would have done motions in this way and not picked up the phone and tried to seek consensus.

1625 I must say that when it comes to the public, when it comes to the way that the Hon. Mr Clinton has presented in the course of his address the way that the public has come to him, I must tell him that the public of Gibraltar is the most discerning and the most understanding and the most able to see through an attempt to score a cheap political point. And that is why, to me and to Mr Costa and Miss Sacramento – and, I am sure, soon to Neil Costa – the comments and the affection and the understanding of people, in particular in this area of mental health, from parents, from the users themselves and from the families are those of deep recognition of the achievements of this Government and understanding also that we do not pretend that things are perfect. We do not pretend that things will not need further improvement in the future, but that things are one million per cent better absolutely everybody is agreed on that and they would have to be as blind as hon. Members politically are to suggest the opposite.

1630 Can we do more? Always, Mr Speaker – that is why there is a review and that is why we are acting in anticipation of a review. Is the GSD the legitimate advocate of those who say that we must do more? No! No! No! Are we leading on doing more? Yes! Yes! Yes! And that is why, Mr Speaker, I commend the motion as amended to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Does anybody else wish to speak on the amendment?

The Hon. Mr Clinton.

1645

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, it is sad to see, yet again, the essence of one of my motions being completely erased.

A Member: It is the language!

1650

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I believe I am on my feet, (Interjection) and therefore I think I should be allowed to speak.

Mr Speaker: You will.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you – completely erased, Mr Speaker, yet again.

1660 Unbelievable as it may be to the Members opposite, especially the Chief Minister, this is not a cheap political point-scoring exercise. Of course, what he fails to understand is the bible according to the New Dawn that he is so proud of may not necessarily deliver everything that he claims is in it. He talks about much weeping, much theatrics – and he accuses us of theatrics. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) Yes, well you said it.

1665 Mr Speaker, what I find surprising in the amended motion – and I will speak to the motion – is that they have fallen into the trap, of their own making, of congratulating themselves on the mental health facility, being Ocean Views, which in fact was a project started by the GSD and they have to acknowledge that. (Interjections) Mr Speaker, they have to acknowledge that, and if they do not acknowledge that I can easily produce –

1670 Mr Speaker: Let me make one thing clear: all the speakers who have spoken so far in this debate have done so without interruption. I expect Mr Clinton not to be interrupted, because there are a number of other Ministers who can participate in the debate and answer him, and of course Mr Costa has the final word on the amendment and he will be able to take him up on any other point.

Hon R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1675 Their own manifesto acknowledges that the Ocean Views facility was started by the GSD – and yes, they did complete it; that is undeniable – but my original motion is not talking about the Ocean Views facility, it is not talking about the facilities provided within that facility. My motion was specifically looking at the care outside that facility.

1680 The Hon. Mr Costa has been very quick to produce his own quotes about how wonderful this facility is, but again this is not what my motion was about. Indeed, he has produced quotes from members of staff. I would like him to produce quotes from service users and families of service users on aftercare, not on the facility but aftercare.

1685 Mr Speaker, I will obviously not address the full motion at this stage, but I would say, quite simply, that the contributions of the Chief Minister, who seems to find the opinions of service users and families of service users so ‘amusing’ – dare I use one of his words... I can only see it as disrespectful. This is just not what my motion was about. My motion was about aftercare, not about the Ocean Views facility. Indeed, we could probably have a complete debate and motion about Ocean Views and recent events up there, which is not something I wanted to debate in this House, as it is in fact subject to an investigation.

1690 So, Mr Speaker, I personally cannot support this motion. It has changed the language of my original motion into something that is completely partisan and is completely against the original thrust of my motion, and so, for those reasons, I cannot support this amendment. (Banging on desks)

1695 Mr Speaker: Any other speaker on the amendment?
The Hon. Mr Isola.

1700 Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I did not have any intention of contributing today to this motion, and indeed I do not think there is any real need for me to do so because I think my colleagues, Minister Costa and the Chief Minister, have already dealt with a lot of the issues; and of course, I echo, in every sense, every word that they have said. But I think the real point that is missing here today is that in order to provide care, you have to care, and the real truth of the 16 years of Government of the other side is they actually did not care. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) I have never seen a more demonstrable number than the 1705 £75,000 spent on the KGV facility in 16 years, which was decrepit for very much of that time in terms of the condition. When you think about the word ‘care’, it is part of the DNA of the GSLP and it always has been, and it is indeed today part of the DNA of the GSLP/Liberal Government.

1710 In 1992, part of the main thrust and substance of what the GSD was telling the people in the election campaign was caring for the community. It is a very simple set of words, which embedded absolutely everything that the GSLP did between 1988 and 1996. Indeed, in every single sphere of the public service, whether it was health, whether it was social services, whether it was education, housing – in all of those areas, the one thing that the GSLP is able to say proudly is that care is part of the DNA. And what we have seen in the last five years of this Government, in the hands of my colleague John Cortes, in the hands of my colleague Samantha 1715 Sacramento and in the hands of my colleague Mr Neil Costa, is that each and every one of them cares.

So, when Mr Hammond gets up and says it was not the intention that this should be political, it echoes what Mr Phillips said last week. He said he wanted his motion then, on skills and 1720 training, to be taken in the spirit they were intended. Well, we did, because they were intended to be brutally political. How can you seriously come to this Parliament and say ‘this is intended to be by consensus, partisan; we have the best interests of the community at heart’, and use words like ‘the state of our skills and training is at a cliff edge’? It is just not credible, it is just not real and it is just not serious. As politicians I think we have a duty to be genuine in what we say when we come to this Parliament and not fall into the trap – and I know Mr Clinton mentioned 1725 the word trap, and I would throw it back – of simply playing politics on each and every occasion, with every single matter that comes before this Parliament.

Mr Speaker, I sincerely believe... and I recall, at my by-election in 2013, being shown round the facility and understanding then, for the first time – because, in honesty, I had not before – that this project that the hon. Member Mr Clinton says that they started, is certainly not the 1730 project that was finished, (A Member: Hear, hear.) because if we had finished what they intended when they started that project, I think they would not come to this House with this motion today – indeed, they would be embarrassed and humiliated by what they had started to do. It simply was not fit for purpose.

Indeed, Mr Clinton also said that we only are interested in setting up committees of working 1735 groups on political issues or constitutional issues, nothing on health or education. Well, you just heard – obviously, you were not aware – that there is indeed a group doing a review into health issues, and he should be aware that just two or three weeks ago we had a debate in this Parliament about co-education, where you were told about 15 times that in fact there was a working group already set up, already in operation and already studying the issues linking to co-1740 education.

So, Mr Speaker, I think a little more preparation and a little more listening would go an awful long way to making the time of this Parliament very much more effective, and I regret that more time and more care is not spent in doing those things.

To conclude, it gives me enormous pleasure and pride to be working with a team that cares 1745 and that has continued to care from the day this party started – almost 40 years ago, coming soon – and will continue for the many years to come.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Several Members: Hear, hear.

1750 Mr Speaker: Is there any other contribution before I ask the Hon. Neil Costa to reply?
The Hon. John Cortes.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon Dr J E Cortes): 1755 Mr Speaker, I would like first of all to thank my hon. Friends, the Chief Minister, the Hon. Neil Costa and Albert Isola, for their kind words of support.

It is impossible to comprehend how a Member of the Gibraltar Social Democrats can have the audacity to bring this motion to this House – impossible to comprehend, given what we have heard already today about the state of mental health care in Gibraltar in 2011.

1760 My learned friend and fellow thespian, the Hon. Neil Costa, quoted Samuel Beckett’s Waiting for Godot. Many years ago, I took part in Endgame and it must be the endgame of the GSD that they have the audacity and they have the ability almost to expose themselves to the tirade that they are getting from this side of the House, because they deserve every word that they have heard. (Banging on desks) (A Member: And more.)

1765 Mr Speaker, I could not believe when the Hon. Mr Clinton got up in his last intervention and said the words ‘it makes me sad’, referring to the way we conduct some business in this House.
The Hon. Mr Clinton does not know the meaning of the word ‘sad’. Sad is what we saw on 1st January 2012. Sad is this young lady sitting in a room probably not much larger than your own desk, Mr Speaker, with a loved one in a bed, with the walls falling to bits and the 1770 possessions in a black bin liner – and suddenly he passed away not long afterwards. That is sad,

Mr Speaker, and that is what the Chief Minister saw, that is what I saw and that is what the hardworking staff in KGV put up with day in, day out. That is what the residents in KGV put up with and that is what the family had to bear. Please, Mr Speaker, let not the word 'sad' be used in this motion, other than to give thought to what we saw that day. And I do not know whether I 1775 heard wrong, but there seemed to be almost a criticism of the fact that the Hon. Chief Minister admitted – as if there was anything wrong with that – that we were weeping. The Chief Minister was sitting on the bed weeping and I was watching him, weeping too. Mr Speaker, there is nothing to be ashamed of.

If I may now go to recall other events, I was General Manager of the Health Authority up to 1780 1991 under the previous GSLP administration. I invested a lot of money in bringing the KGV, which was 20 years younger even than in 2011, to bringing it up to standard. When I went back into 2011 to KGV, I could not believe how it had deteriorated in those 20 years. We have heard there was no investment whatsoever – £73,000 or £75,000 in 16 years! At the first Cabinet meeting after 1st January, we approved £70,000 which was spent in three months, not in 16
1785 years, to bring it at least to an acceptable standard. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker, many things have been said. I am not going to go over all the ground that has already been covered, but certainly a lot more importance is given now to mental health – they have their own unit manager, the registered mental nurses are in fact in the Estimates Book although they appear as staff nurses because they are that grade, and other things that have not 1790 been mentioned. We inherited two psychiatrists; now we have three full-timers and one part-time psychiatrist, so we have increased the complement there. And let me, please, mention once again the hard work, the committed work, of the team of Community Mental Health. They are extraordinary professionals who are so dedicated to their work. I do not have to repeat that, I don't think.

Mr Speaker, I am going to round up now, but I cannot fail to mention the new Mental Health Act, which had not been brought to this House by the previous administration. That Act, as the Hon. Mr Costa mentioned earlier, included the community treatment orders. That was the work of a full team of mental health professionals. The draft was published as a command paper and discussed with the NGOs in Mental Health, so we have those teams that are alluded to in the 1795 original motion. That Bill was published prior to the last election, but lack of parliamentary time meant it could not be taken then.

But I have to mention one thing, just to expose what the thinking of the GSD – at least that GSD – which they sometimes tend to try and fold as part of their own and sometimes try to push to one side. We expected that Bill to be taken in Parliament some months before the General 1805 Election. As I say, the election was called and we had to postpone it; and it was passed recently. The greatest Gibraltarian of all time, the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana, spoke to me behind the Speaker's Chair – we were having a tea or coffee, as one does – and actually said to me, 'John, I must tell you that I never wanted to bring that Bill to the House, because of the question of community treatment orders, because I do not really think that people with that sort of problem should be housed in the community; they are better off staying in a residential unit.' I just could not believe what I was hearing. I would not even have mentioned it ever, except in my memoirs 1810 perhaps, (Laughter) but I have been forced to reveal that today.

I think that I need say no more. I totally support the motion as amended. (Banging on desks)

1815 A Member: Hear, hear.

A Member: Resign! Resign!

1820 Mr Speaker: Any other contribution?

Hon. Chief Minister: They should resign.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Samantha Sacramento.

1825 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I feel compelled to contribute, (A Member: Of course.) given what I have heard from the opposite side of the House this afternoon, because I have to say I am appalled at what I have heard.

The Hon. Mr Clinton said that it was sad. Well, I have to say it is disgusting to have heard what we have heard. What is disgusting, Mr Speaker, is what we found and Mr Clinton is trying to, I think, deviate the attention by saying that his motion is not about the facilities, because we are saying we are reminding people of the appalling facilities that existed, and it is right that we do. And how dare Mr Clinton say that we have had to hear theatrics from the Chief Minister! Anybody who experienced the old KGV would have reacted the same – anybody with a heart and with a soul, and anybody who cared. (A Member: Hear, hear.) Because I went to the KGV 1835 some seven years ago in my professional capacity and I could not sleep that night after having been in the building and having witnessed and having experienced what I did, because I honestly never thought that those things, those places, existed in Gibraltar. Thankfully, under the leadership of Dr John Cortes, that place no longer exists.

If the Hon. Mr Clinton wants to talk about and wants to criticise the help in the community, 1840 everything that Mr Clinton was referring to really is the situation as it existed before 2011. Honestly, I do not know where Mr Clinton has been in the last five years, but has he not seen the development in health and in care? Has he not heard? (Interjection) He says that he has heard from the families of two individuals. Well, clearly, he was never in touch with people before 2011, because more than two families certainly came to us with complaints and with concerns – 1845 and we did not even need the families to come, it was obvious for everyone to see. Is he really trying to really rewrite history, Mr Speaker?

I know that Mr Clinton has only been in this House for a year, but that does not mean that the GSD, which is the GSD that he forms part of, started to exist a year ago. It is the GSD that is responsible for the failures in the whole for the 16 years that they were in Government! It was 1850 them who did not give this important sector of the community the priority and the importance that they deserve. How dare Mr Clinton come and criticise the Government and the people who are working to deliver to vulnerable people! It is the vulnerable people we are here to serve, and it is the vulnerable people whom we are now able to serve – vulnerable people who find themselves in institutions such as Ocean Views and vulnerable people who now receive help in 1855 the community which was never available to them. They are inextricably linked. You cannot talk about community help without talking about the facility, because we have to talk about the person. It is us who introduced person-centred planning – the person can be in a facility, can now be at home with support and may well return to the facility. We have to talk about everything when we talk about mental health. It just shows how little Mr Clinton knows. I am 1860 sure that Mr Clinton is a good man and he is doing this for the right purposes, but he just has not bothered to do his research properly and look at the information and look at the reality.

Let's talk about help in the community. Let's talk about how, since 2011, the Health Service and Social Services now work together. They used to work in complete silos before, and it was not easy, when we started in 2011, to get them to work together, because such was the culture 1865 that had been ingrained in them that they had to defend their patch and their silos and their very limited budget. They were not used to working together, it was more like a scramble, but we have sorted it out. Everything that we do now, in respect of vulnerable people in particular, is at a multi-agency level. And it does not just concern the Health Authority and Social Services – we now involve other agencies such as the Police, such as Housing. We are training other people 1870 in these disciplines so that they are aware of how different people with different needs need to be treated. That is the true inter-agency working that we have introduced.

So let's talk about continuation of care beyond the facilities in the community, shall we? One of the things that we did some three years ago, if I recall, was we increased the complement of Social Services by a growth post for a social worker in the adult team to work specifically with 1875 the hospital. Why? So that there was continuity of care beyond the hospital. What did we do in respect of assisting in the community? While, of course, the Health Authority has its structure, because it has a department that is called Community Nursing, so where it is appropriate to have community nurses you have the community nurses and you have the Community Mental Health Team.... It is in the name, Mr Speaker. But beyond that what did we do? Another 1880 example: we increased the budget for domiciliary care from just over £½ million, which is what the budget was when the GSD were in office ... And I know Mr Clinton does not like spending money, but we spend money where we need to, and we increased the budget from just over £½ million to £2½ million pounds on domiciliary care. Domiciliary care is the title that we use when we offer help in the community for a variety of reasons, but some of the people who 1885 receive domiciliary care are, of course, people with mental health issues, because they are vulnerable people in the community and that is what the budget is for. So Mr Clinton on the one hand says one thing ... Maybe if the GSD were in office and they did not want to spend the money they would not have had the same budget, but I tell you, Mr Speaker, that with £600,000 per annum on domiciliary care you cannot really help a lot of people and it certainly does not 1890 reach vulnerable people with mental health issues – but it now does.

Actually, an anecdote on domiciliary care, which is one of the very pivotal manners of support that we have introduced: when we came into office and I asked for an assessment of the domiciliary care that was being offered, there was not even a database. Perhaps Mr Clinton does not know how the GSD managed domiciliary care? Well, I will tell him: the database was a 1895 plastic bag from Morrisons with papers stuffed in the bag and placed on the floor under somebody's desk. (A Member: Disgraceful). That is the disgraceful state of affairs, of how vulnerable people in Gibraltar's community were treated. And it was just an administration exercise. There was a budget of £600,000, and, as a social worker has described it to me, it was just filling dead men's shoes. Somebody died, they left a couple of hours, and the next person 1900 was allocated the hours – regardless of the priority or the need, with no planning, no aftercare policy or strategy whatsoever. Nothing!

How does it happen now? We have professionals assessing people. We have social workers who assess people, assess their needs, assess their priorities, preparing care plans. I honestly do not know where Mr Clinton gets the notion that there are no care plans and no aftercare. The 1905 GHA, on the whole, refers people to Social Services. Social Services assesses the situation, prepares a care plan and arranges for the delivery of the care. That is how it works. That is how it works now. What we were hearing from Mr Clinton really is an analysis of how it worked before. That is what is so worrying. So, when Mr Clinton said he was sad, I think now he is going to be even more sad when he is hearing the truth and not what he thinks is the truth or what he 1910 wants to pretend to be the truth, or the history that he is trying to rewrite. Does he think everybody else is stupid? Does he think that people do not remember? Mr Speaker, this is a very serious situation. People's mental health and people's welfare is very serious.

Let's carry on reminding Mr Clinton of the reality of how things have changed and how people are now supported in the community. For example, we work alongside Clubhouse. Who 1915 does Mr Clinton think is the principal source of funds for Clubhouse? Well, it is the Government.
 Of course it is the Government! It is this Government, because their Government did not help them. (Interjection) I will tell you that one time in the summer of 2012 I dropped in to visit friends at Clubhouse for a cup of tea. Back then, they were in the premises that had been 1920 allocated to them by the GSD at the Toc 'H' Mr Speaker, which I can only describe as a dungeon – an archaic, historic, dilapidating building which, as you entered, had a cavernous room to the right which was full of damp, full of mould and stinking. Then, Mr Speaker, I walked through the corridor to another room. It was in the middle of summer – it was boiling hot, and while I had my cup of tea with my friends from Clubhouse, within half an hour one of the members fainted from the heat. That is the help and the support that the GSD gave Clubhouse in the community.
 1925 And how many members did they have back in 2012? No more than a handful, Mr Speaker.
 Since then, in the last three years, Clubhouse has alternative premises which are a hundred 1930 times better than the Toc 'H' and Government is working with them to find them suitable alternative premises. But they receive an annual grant – previously from my Department and now will receive from Minister Costa – and in the last three years they have received ... The first grant that I gave them, which I think was in 2013, £25,000; and then in the last two years, £35,000 in each financial year. In addition to that, there have also been two additional payments of a further £35,000 and, in addition, there are seconded members of staff. How do they think Clubhouse operates? It would not operate were it not for the support of the Government. But which administration? This one, because it assists people in the community. It is all part of the plan, Mr Speaker. There is now a plan, which is the difference. There was no plan before. Before, you go to KGV, you put your clothes in a bin bag...

1935 That, Mr Speaker, is what made me go into politics: when I saw the state of Social Services, when I saw how vulnerable people were suffering in our community, so neglected by the GSD; and, as Minister Isola said, people who did not care. How disgusting!

1940 Really, Mr Speaker, at this stage I do not think there is more that I could add, given what my wonderful colleagues have already contributed to this debate, other than of course I will support the amendments to the motion, because this is what it is, and not the motion that is proposed by Mr Clinton. I cannot really put it eloquently because I do not know what planet Mr Clinton is living on when he says the things that he is saying. He does not live in reality, he cannot, because 1945 it is not a true reflection of Gibraltar now. He is talking about the Gibraltar of over five years ago: the Gibraltar where vulnerable people were neglected by the Government. That is not the case today, Mr Speaker.

Thank you. (Banging on desks)

1950 Mr Speaker: I call on the mover to reply, the Hon. Neil Costa.

Hon. Neil Costa: Mr Speaker, if I may first address the comments made by the Hon. Mr Hammond. The Hon Mr Hammond during the course of his brief intervention, at least conceded that every time he has called me and asked for assistance I have been able to assist 1955 him, and I have always attempted to assist any hon. Member opposite who does contact me, because of course they do so on behalf of people who go to them for whatever issue it is that they are facing.

This is why I have said, Mr Speaker, that it is not credible for the Hon. Mr Clinton to stand in this House and pretend that he brings the motion as a result of concern, because as I said, if he were truly concerned about the people whom he quotes, he would have picked up the phone, he would have sent me an e-mail and he knows, from speaking to his colleagues, that I would have moved immediately to be able to resolve any issues, if indeed any of those issues were issues that had to be addressed. But of course – and I have made the point before in this House – how do the hon. Members opposite expect us to be able to have a meaningful discussion with 1960 them when they just give us a quote – without, of course, giving us the names across the floor of the House, because it would be highly inappropriate to do so. But if he had written to me, if he had asked me to assist, if he had given me the details, if he had actually been concerned, we may have been able to have either drafted the motion differently, or – which I hope was a reason why he mentioned them at all – actually help them, if there was a need to do so. But he did not do that. It is all theatrics, it is all politics, it is all partisan. He does not know what he is talking about. The language bears consideration. He says there is a lack of care. Had he said that there was room for improvement, that processes may have to be reviewed in this particular aspect, that perhaps we should employ an additional mental welfare officer, then that is something we could have worked with – we could have worked on the language. But he talks of 1970 a lack of care as if to suggest that there is no care provided in the community. We have spoken about the post-facility care – has Mr Clinton not been listening? I have read to him three or four pages written to me. Does he think that I invented these things?

1980 I read to him what the professional staff wrote for me in respect of the post-facility community care that is provided. I gave him names, professionals, multi-disciplinary teams, locations, care plans, assessments, reviews, processes – and he stands up and he says again that we have not dealt with his motion. But I have just told him! Has he not been listening? That is why I say, Mr Speaker, that it is all a farce for them. It is sad indeed that something as serious, something that merits meaningful, discreet discussion, meaningful consultation behind the Speaker’s Chair, in private, should be instead ventilated by this very general motion that makes 1985 generic comments with no substance.

And then, Mr Speaker, what would be funny, except of course that it is not, is that he pretends to be mortally wounded that we should remind him about the state of the KGV, that we should tell him how we have drastically improved the post-facility services in the community.
I do not know why he is so upset. He has set himself up to be reminded of everything they failed 1990 to do and everything that we are doing. Does he not realise that that is what he is setting himself up to do? Of course, Mr Clinton is an intelligent man: he has to know that he is setting himself up for that. That is why I therefore come to the conclusion that there has to be some hidden political mechanism of wishing to mark a difference between the time of Sir Peter Caruana and their time now, as if to pretend that there is some magical, ethereal disconnect between the 1995 GSD that they represent and the GSD that was in government for 16 years. It is just not credible.
It is just not honest. It is theatrics. It is partisan.

And then I heard him complain – I could not believe this – that I should have sought and quoted the views of the staff. Do their views not matter? Are they not important? Why must he take issue with a fact that I quoted ... And I only made four quotes. I had an e-mail this long this 2000 morning with all of the quotes, and because of prudence I decided only to mention four. If the hon. Gentleman really wants me to obtain quotes from service users, the Hon. the Chief Minister has already received one during the course of this intervention; but, unlike him, I will not talk about service users because it is confidential, because it is private, because it relates to their families and individuals, because we care about protecting their identities.

2005 Hon. Chief Minister: You can share with him that it is not complimentary, what they have said.

2010 Hon. Neil Costa: Mr Speaker, my hon. and learned Friend Samantha Sacramento has made the point that some of the associations and civic societies that we deal with, in particular Clubhouse, do receive material support from this Government because they do excellent work in the community and they really care. And the way that a Government – as the hon. Gentleman made the point before – which does not enjoy professional expertise in mental healthcare ... the 2015 only way to be able to show our support is by providing financial, material support, which is why we fund Clubhouse to the degree that we do, which is why we have invested so much in capital and infrastructure, which is why the Hon. Dr John Cortes spearheaded and led and gently pushed the Mental Health Act team to work diligently to bring in an architecture that would, for the very first time, enable community treatment in statute, in black and white. We brought that!
They did not! They had 16 years in which to do it, and to somehow absolve them of that neglect 2020 he gets up and says, ‘But we started Ocean Views.’ Oh, well done, after 16 years, for starting a project which was, I can assure him, if anything, at its most nascent stages and which the professionals have told me personally the little that they did they entirely disagreed with. Of course, Dr John Cortes took the advice of the professionals and that is why we have an excellent facility today for mental health issues.

2025 So I leave the hon. Gentleman with a thought: that although he clearly did not listen to my contribution, because his reply to my amended motion proved exactly that, he will at least rest easy knowing that tomorrow he will have his two-inch columns in the Chronicle. (Banging on desks)

2030 Mr Speaker: I now put the amendment to the motion in the terms moved by the Hon. Neil Costa. Is a division required? No. Those in favour? (Severall Members: Aye.) Those against? (Severall Members: Nay.) The motion is carried by a majority.

The position now is that the amendment becomes the motion, and there are Members who have not spoken who are able to speak if they so wish. If not, I will call upon Mr Clinton to reply.

2035

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I would like to start off by commending my Opposition colleagues for lending their weight towards drawing attention to the issue of mental health services in Gibraltar. It was barely a month ago that I stood here, seemingly on my own, asking questions of the Government on precisely this important matter. I am therefore encouraged to see them follow my lead in pursuing this further. (Severall Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks and interjections) (A Member: It is not the first time.) (Hon Chief Minister: She is leading.) (Hon Miss Sacramento: Again!)

2040

Today, for me, Mr Speaker, is not the time to point the finger at where our local mental health services might be failing our community. Instead, and after much extensive research with mental health professionals and users, it is a chance for me to offer reflections and helpful suggestions on how we can upgrade the process. I think this is a perfect opportunity to propose clear solutions and strategies and suggest how improvements can be made. It is not for me to pick holes but to find ways to fill them. It is the difference between being critical and being constructive.

2045

I would like to engage with Government to ask them to consider the views of these professionals, all in the interest of formulating strategies to develop local services further, all in the benefit of our community. It is in this light, Mr Speaker, that I decided to propose an amendment that avoids vague targets but that instead presents purposeful and pragmatic suggestions that would lead to an already effective and efficient Mental Health Service taking even further steps in the right direction. These steps try to meet the precise demands of a challenging issue, posing clear objectives and measurable targets. I hope that the unveiling of my ideas will receive the support of my parliamentary colleagues and that of the community at large. My amendment is as follows:

2055

This House acknowledges the efforts of this Government in improving and developing services in mental health; asks Government to immediately consider making public the mental health data gathered and collated to assist stakeholders in using this data to assess how mental health issues are affecting Gibraltarians while also enhancing accountability; recognises that Government currently employs a structured and multi-agency approach to mental healthcare and that it partially uses the care programme approach NHS(UK) model, but invites Government to consider implementing it in its entirety, in the same way as the approach works in the United Kingdom in order to achieve maximum efficiency of care; notices the existence of the Educational Psychologist department, but asks Government to consider placing a mental health specialist within the department and to explore the possibility of establishing a bespoke school-based mental health support programme as per current UK models; asks Government to establish a direct crisis line system for the patient who may need it when in crisis and which leads the patient or his/her family to the dedicated care programme as a matter of urgency.

I shall expand on my amendment now and the reasons for the points I have raised.

Mr Speaker, the statistics make staggering reading. Over 850,000 school children in the UK – that is three in every classroom – suffer from mental health problems. Suicide is the biggest killer among men aged between 18 and 45. Dementia is now the biggest cause of death in Great Britain, accounting for one in every eight deaths. The implication is simple but no less terrifying: mental health is the silent wolf that stalks modern society. It is the taboo of the new millennium, the unspoken reality that we try to deny to ourselves, because to do otherwise would mean accepting an unbearable and frightening truth. But pretend we must not. It is not an issue that will go away on its own, but one to be understood, to be acknowledged and to be confronted. We ignore it not just at our peril, but also at that of future generations of our community.

2070 It would not be fair to accuse the Government of ignoring the issue. Indeed, I must rightfully recognise their commitment to tackling this complex question. The Government is right to be proud of the Mental Health Act, the completion of Ocean Views and other commitments that we will hopefully see come to fruition soon, like the much-awaited Alzheimer's and Dementia Centre. But just because some initiatives may promise many improvements, it does not mean there is not much more to be done, and in matters of mental health it is imperative that we get 2075 on with newly identified priorities as soon as we possibly can.

Mr Speaker, I have spent the last few months engaging in a productive discourse with professionals from the mental health field. They have shared with me their thoughts and observations about the current service. They have enlightened me on the strengths of the structures presently in place, while drawing attention to their weaknesses. These conversations 2080 have formed the basis for my amendment, which shares these reflections with those here present. As a Member of the Opposition it is my duty to critique, but I should not do so for its own sake. Anyone can highlight a problem, but it is far more constructive to the democratic process to suggest solutions – solutions which take on board the views of those who are in the trenches and who are most affected by these problems. If these suggestions go some way 2085 towards bettering the life of just one person, then we should consider this process more than worthwhile.

Some of these proposals deal with prevention rather than cure, to curb problems at the root before they become an increased strain on the individual, on families, on the Health Service and on public finances. They call for Government to consider appointing a mental health specialist as 2090 part of the Educational Psychologist department with the specific brief of providing support to the students with mental health issues. The current staff does an admirable job dealing with barriers to learning, but this is a very wide-ranging focus that does not fully address the greater prevalence in mental health issues among young people.

Our youngsters are growing up in a complex world, where factors such as family breakdown, materialism, increased social networking, body image, bullying, cyber-bullying, early sexualisation, the media, violence and exam pressure, as well as many others, are all combining to impact on young people in many different ways. A lack of specialist support in early years could exacerbate the problem in future years, while a targeted approach would not only help deal with prevention but also make individuals affected more likely to access them in future, 2100 should it be necessary.

Early diagnosis and support is key and we should provide our children with the right professionals to help them through the world they live in and the many challenges it can throw in their paths. And while I recommend the appointment of a mental health specialist within the Educational Psychologist department, there is also the angle of referring to counselling services 2105 available in schools, to once again prevent future problems by providing mental health support to children at a young age. Such an in-house service will enable educationalists and counsellors to liaise and adopt appropriate strategies for students, thereby delivering a supportive environment that will impact on all aspects of learning and formation.

While counselling services are offered to local students by the GHA and other external agencies, these can be restricted in terms of accessibility, continuity in care and the finger on the pulse of what is happening inside schools. Counsellors can deal with issues on a more urgent and proactive basis, especially given that difficult situations can regularly require instantaneous involvement by mental health professionals, rather than by teachers. The best service currently offered focuses more on behavioural issues and deals with underlying mental health issues only 2115 where these affect student behaviour. Deeper and wider problems do not tend to be tackled by BEST, but could be by a counselling service that focuses on the needs of affected students.

2120 A preliminary contact has already been made with one of the directors of a leading mental health charitable organisation in the UK that offers similar services in schools across the UK. Interest has been expressed in exploring the possibility of establishing such a presence in 2125 Gibraltar schools, with the organisation able to provide training and resources. At the very least, a study visit could be arranged in order to ascertain how an organisation of this type could benefit local schools, enabling affected students to access a counselling service that could help increase awareness.

Earlier on, Mr Speaker, I quoted some statistics to place mental health issues in context.
2125 These figures apply to the United Kingdom. Unfortunately, I was unable to provide statistics with a local relevance, essentially because they are simply not accessible. I can say for a fact that at the moment the statistics office does not provide data relating to mental health issues. These relate to, for example, hospital admissions and re-admissions on mental health grounds, rates of suicides and attempted suicides, amount of individuals receiving long-term treatment, national 2130 diagnosis statistics, etc. As a result, it is difficult to obtain a detailed picture of how mental health issues are affecting Gibraltarians. This picture is important in gauging the impact of mental health services, as well as providing valuable data for budgeting and resourcing. Statistical trends can be more closely monitored, leading to further investigation where necessary. Additionally, access to more information will greatly aid mental health professionals 2135 and organisations in how they consult the Government on these issues. By extending this further to include appraisals, results of complaints procedures and user valuations, the service can benefit from quality assurance and, where necessary, be held accountable for underperformance.

My amendment therefore proposes that the Government considers more precise and 2140 comprehensive recording, publication of and access to statistics related to mental health issues, enabling all relevant stakeholders to take maximum advantage of the benefits of this data, while providing these parties with a comprehensive snapshot of the context and progress of mental health services from a local perspective.

Furthermore, at this moment it is felt by some members of the mental health profession that 2145 current structures offer inadequate long-term care programmes for patients. The present situation is seen somewhat as inconsistent, unstructured and often on an ad hoc basis, dependent on the individual care worker. As a result, this leads to a revolving door where problems perpetuate themselves. Long-term continuity of care can be limited and patients can encounter problems with returning to reality after treatment. These problems often cause the 2150 initial mental health issues to resurface. Therefore, a structured and co-ordinated multi-agency approach, similar to the care programme approach offered by the UK's NHS, should be made available in its entirety here in Gibraltar. And, while I do acknowledge that currently parts of the UK CPA model are being adopted here, we should aim, as I said, to adopt the plan here wholly. By fully taking on this CPA, specific services can be assessed, planned, co-ordinated and 2155 reviewed, with the programme serving as a one-stop shop for stakeholders. Bringing the service offered by all associated agencies under one umbrella will minimise confusion and enhance communication, providing a more supportive environment for patients. This will help to prevent reoccurrences, with individuals less dependent on health care services while reintegrating more successfully.

2160 Lastly, Mr Speaker, I ask and urge Government to establish a direct 24/7 crisis line system for the patient who may need it when in crisis, and which would lead the patient, or his or her family, to the dedicated care programme as a matter of urgency. At the moment, the mental health patient in crisis does not have a dedicated help line which would direct them accordingly. If that were introduced, then it could direct the patient swiftly to the relevant next point of 2165 assistance and care.

I feel, Mr Speaker, that the proposals I have presented are constructive and viable as a starting point towards a better package for mental healthcare. They benefit from prolonged dialogue with mental healthcare professionals, service users and families, all of whom have a legitimate interest in improving the services which they either provide or on which they rely.

2170 This discourse has led to the exchange of ideas to examples of successful practice being shared with me and to me gaining a thorough understanding of the needs of these stakeholders.

The proposals are not intended to undermine current practices but indeed complement them and enhance them, so I hope that my amendment can find some middle ground with Mr Costa's own amendment and that we will be able to work as a team here in Parliament on such a vital 2175 and sensitive subject, which we all want to get right in our community.

I therefore urge both the Government and the GSD Opposition to vote in favour of them for the benefit and betterment of our community –

RECESS

2180 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Before the hon. Lady finishes, would she just give way, just for a moment?

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Yes.

2185 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know that she was coming to the end of what she was going to say and I would not interrupt her in the context of a motion if it was not for a reason, but the hon. Lady's proposed amendment has got our attention and there is a lot in it that we think we may be able to support. So, what I would do is I would suggest that, if possible, the House recess for 10 minutes before the hon. Lady sits down so that we can discuss with her,
2190 before she has finished her speech, what the terms of the amendment might be, because she might find that she is pushing at an open door with the Government and that some of what she is proposing – in fact, a lot of what she is proposing – may be accepted by the Government in the context of our own motion being amended with some of the less palatable aspects, that she might find she was not able to support, removed, and some of that included.

2195 So, Mr Speaker, if the hon. Lady just indicates to me that she is agreeable to that, I would move that the House recess for 10 minutes to consider the terms of the amendment.

Mr Speaker: I think the hon. Lady should finish her contribution so that the amendment is formally before the House.

2200 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on a procedural point –

Mr Speaker: And then, if there is a consensus, somebody else can move the consensus. She cannot do it.

2205 Hon. Chief Minister: She cannot do it. That is why I was proposing –

Mr Speaker: If there is a consensus, once she finishes, an attempt can be made to have a consensus of motion and some other Member can propose it.

2210 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is another way of doing it and I have no difficulty with that, but we are going to get into amendment-to-amendment territory (Mr Speaker: Yes.) and I wanted to avoid that. But it is absolutely also possible to do it in that way.

2215 If the hon. Lady wants to finish, we recess for 10 minutes and we may be able to come back with an amendment to her amendment that she can support and we can support, and perhaps even others might be able to support. But she has got our attention: it is entirely up to her whether we do it one way or the other.

2220 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I was pretty much finished. I was just trying to say ... and I appreciate why the Chief Minister has asked to be given way, but I was just hoping that the Government and Opposition would go with my points and vote in favour of my amendment, because I believe that effectively it is a win-win strategy and points for the whole of the community and not just this Parliament.

2225 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, she has finished her speech. I propose that the House should now recess –

2230 Mr Speaker: Before you do, what the hon. Lady is proposing now would be an amendment to the motion as it has been amended – in which case, after her, anybody else can speak on this amendment.

2235 Apart from endeavouring, trying to come to a consensus motion in a short period of time, I should point out to hon. Members that there is another avenue of approach. The other avenue of approach is to defer any further consideration of the motion to another meeting. There are precedents for that. There have been precedents when it may not be easy to arrive at a consensus in 10 minutes, but if there is an animus negotiandi something can happen over a longer period of time. As I say, there have been precedents where a motion was left for another meeting of the House and then taken up where it left off; it is deferred to another meeting.

2240 May I also comment that, given the reaction of the Chief Minister that there is a possibility of a consensus, it would have been far better if the hon. Lady had spoken and moved her amendment before Mr Costa took part in the debate. I am saying that for guidance if on another occasion something similar develops, because if the reaction of the Government is that there is quite a lot in the hon. Lady's amendment that they could have agreed to, perhaps if she had tabled the amendment beforehand it might have been easier either to have accepted it or to have added a few paragraphs. I think that would have been a better procedure than where we are now. But definitely, no problem, the House will recess.

2245 Hon. Chief Minister: I think, Mr Speaker, that it is possible that we may be able to reach an agreement in respect of the parts that we accept quite quickly and I think that if we start that process we may be back by 8.15 and we will be able to proceed today.

2250 Mr Speaker: Very well, we will do that. The House will now recess to 8.15.

The House recessed at 8.00 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 8.15 p.m.

Mental Health Service –
Care in the community for discharged service users –
Debate concluded; amended motion carried

Mr Speaker: Following the recess, I understand that the Chief Minister wishes to propose a further amendment on the basis of a consensus.

2255 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, we have been able to reach a consensus with the hon. Lady in respect of the things that she said that we felt we could agree.

There is one aspect of what she said in relation to the Educational Psychologist aspect which my hon. Colleague Mr Cortes, the Minister for Education, will speak on.

2260 We will therefore propose to the House what, if I may say so, is a composite motion between the motion as it was after the amendment by Mr Costa and parts of the motion that the hon. Lady put, which I said had got our attention, and which I think produces a rounded motion that 2265 deals both with the issue that we passionately believe must be reflected, which is the work that has been done since we were elected in December 2011 in respect of which we have already, I think, in a fairly cathartic way, spoken, and also reflects the issues the hon. Lady has put, and takes out some of the more partisan aspects of what we had proposed in our original motion in deference to the way that the hon. Lady has proposed that the House should consider these issues. But at the same time it does recognise the work that has been done and is being done by the Government, which the hon. Lady said in her speech she was prepared to accept and therefore it made sense to us could be reflected.

2270 I think hon. Members now have the proposed amendment to the amendment, which includes much of what was in the hon. Lady's amendment. I do not propose to say more than that, but I would say that it would be a fine thing indeed if this motion could be accepted by the whole House. Hon. Members opposite, of the GSD Opposition, have not indicated whether they are able to support it or not. I would urge them to support it, although it does reflect the excellent work that has been done since December 2011. In politics what you cannot do is go against reality, and this is an important issue on which the whole community will, I think, commend us if we are able to come out with a unanimous consensus; otherwise, at least there will be an element of consensus across the floor.

2280 I therefore move the amendment to the amendment in the terms which have been circulated to hon. Members, which, given the hour, I do not propose to read out.

Mr Speaker: What it would seek to do, effectively, is to delete everything after the words 'This House' and replace it by the consensus which has been arrived at.

2285 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, may I just add very briefly an explanation as to how we have agreed on one particular paragraph, which is the penultimate paragraph of the hon. Lady's original amendment, which recognises the fact that there are some steps already being taken in improving child and adolescent mental health – for example, the training of a third educational psychologist and other steps taken. The hon. Lady has kindly agreed to reflect that in that paragraph and hence the consensus is that that paragraph is slightly amended from her original one.

2295 Mr Speaker: Any hon. Member from the Opposition wish to participate now on the amendment to the amendment?

2300 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, Minister Isola said something before which made me think – and it is true, of course, and it is a beautiful play on words that in order to provide care you have to care. So, if the GSD Opposition side of this House cares – and I know that they do, because everybody cares and everybody has their own different reality ... perhaps their own different appreciation of what each party has done in the past and what they have meant to do or their intentions. We all have good intentions, but at the end of the day this motion aims to look forward and to take notable strides in mental healthcare. It is only positive and constructive and that is why I urge both sides of the House – obviously, the Government side will be supporting it – but I urge both sides of the House, in the interests of real care, to please go with this motion because it can only be constructive for the community and there would be no reason to really oppose it if you really care.

2310 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, while of course everybody in this House no doubt identifies with the sentiment expressed by the hon. Lady, as much as we would like to support this consensus motion between the independent Member and the Government ... and I did attempt 2315 to arrive at a consensus position with the Government, although there did not seem to be much appetite to consider it, in that certainly elements of this motion are blatantly partisan. Now, if those partisan elements were removed, we might be in a better position to, as the hon. Lady says, provide something that shows that we all care, on paper. But this paper reflects a political reality in which, unfortunately, the Government are stating their political position at the expense of ours. For those reasons, we cannot really support the motion in the terms worded.

2320

Mr Speaker: Any other contributor to the amendment? The Hon. Neil Costa. (Interjections)
Sorry, I caught the eye of the Hon. Neil Costa beforehand.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, once again – and I hope 2325 it is the last time – I rise to disagree with the hon. Gentleman, Mr Clinton.

I do not know how he can say that the creation and delivery of Ocean Views, which is entirely fit for purpose, is partisan or political. It is, as far as we are concerned, a question of fact.

It also notes that the motion will commend the Government for amalgamating healthcare and social care. The hon. Gentleman will of course reflect that, as he protested a few minutes 2330 ago, his main points he said were about co-ordination for community care, and of course it makes sense therefore, given the synergies between the provision of healthcare and social care, that there should be one Ministry amalgamating those responsibilities.

So, given the contribution made by the hon. Gentleman, I do not agree that this is a partisan or political motion, other than the fact that it is made in the House of Parliament, which is 2335 ultimately partly political, to the extent that all contributions will be drawn from political sides.
Therefore, Mr Speaker, I am very grateful to the hon. Lady for, I have to say, a breath of fresh air in being able to bring a motion that talks about improving where we can and about wanting to be constructive with the Government and working where we can. She knows that I always extend to her my hand of friendship and of support in whichever way she feels she can be of 2340 most effect to the people who go to see her.

For all of those reasons, Mr Speaker, I commend the composite motion to the House.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

2345 Hon. T N Hammond: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I stand here a little disappointed, because I think an opportunity has been missed by this House to indeed find a consensus position. I think Mr Speaker's suggestion before the recess, that perhaps the motion was deferred, would have allowed time to find a position which both sides of this House could indeed have agreed upon. Because of course, were the Members of the 2350 GSD sat on this side of the House to vote in favour of the motion, we are indeed voting in favour of the entirety of the motion, and I regret to say we are not able to do that because of certain provisions within the motion. I do believe that perhaps we have missed an opportunity and with a little more time available to us ... bearing in mind it is already late at night and we are not here to rush or bustle things through – we want to make sure that the words of motions are correct 2355 and reflect the opinions and views of those in the House, and certainly a motion that is passed unanimously must reflect the views and opinions of everyone in this House. Unfortunately, we have not quite reached that position with this motion. Perhaps, given more time, we could have reached that position with this motion, but as the motion stands at this moment it is just simply not possible for the Members on this side of the House, excepting the hon. independent 2360 Member, to support the motion as it stands.

Mr Speaker: If there are no other interventions, then I will call on the Chief Minister, the mover, to reply.

2365 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes, I agree with the Hon. Mr Clinton: this is a missed opportunity; it is a missed opportunity for the GSD Opposition. It is a missed opportunity because they came here with a motion and they had obviously come here without realising, I imagine – otherwise, they would have been absolutely volent – that they were going to get the reality of the past five years of work and the reality of the former 16 years put back at them.

2370 They need to do more research before they bring motions. They should not just bring motions for the purposes of hearing their voices. They need to contact us before they put motions, so that if they want the opportunity of the Parliament working together they have our opinions, because at the end of the day when they put a motion what they want is our vote. They want us to vote for their motions; otherwise, they are putting motions which they are going to lose, and those missed opportunities have been, as they have been in respect of their other motions, entirely of their own doing.

2375 This is not a cheerleading motion on the Government anymore, as it is proposed, because the hon. Lady would be uncomfortable cheerleading the Government; but she, rightly, I think, is comfortable recognising some aspects of what the Government has done and she calls upon ...
2380 and the Government will support some of what she calls upon us to do, which is to further what is, in their view, the partisan aspect of this motion – I think they say it is the first two lines – which is actually the reality of what has happened on the ground. That is why our mobile devices are ringing with the messages of support from the people who have been through KGV and Ocean Views now, and the Social Services before and during the time that we have been in Government. That is why, Mr Speaker, I commend the composite motion as it is to the House.

Mr Speaker: I will now put the consensus amendment to the vote. Those in favour? (Several Members: Aye.) Those against? (Several Members: Nay.) The motion is approved with the Government and the hon. Lady voting in favour and the official Opposition against.

2390 We are now at the situation where we have the original motion as amended before the House. If there is no other speaker, I will call on the Hon. Mr Clinton to exercise his right to reply.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, after a long debate I can say I am actually glad that we have had this debate and we have discussed the very serious issues surrounding mental healthcare in this House. And whereas as much as I would have loved to support a composite motion, we on the official Opposition could not support the motion as worded for reasons I have already stated. However, having said that, I am glad that we have on the public record now the views of the Government and the stated policies of the Government as to what they believe is being provided to this community, to service users and to the families of service users.

2400 I brought my original motion in good faith, as much as the hon. Members opposite may think it was just in search of soundbites or columns in the Chronicle, or anything else, but as I freely admitted, when I stood up, in my opening address, this is not my comfort zone and this is not an area in which I have cumulative knowledge. So when I brought this motion it was because I had genuine people who have said to me, 'Look, these are the issues.' I stood as their voice. If they could not get satisfaction from the normal channels, I will obviously try and reach across the floor and speak to the Hon. Mr Costa to see if they can get some help. But that should not be the way things happen in Gibraltar. There should be a system in which people can go through that system and get the help they need without recourse to those of us in this House who have the power to do things or move things along. There should be no need for Members on this side to consult or to tell people on that side, 'Look, can you see so and so, because they need your help?' The system should work on its own two feet without any political interference from anyone in this House, including the Minister for Health.

2410 Mr Speaker, the former Minister for Health made a great play of the introduction of the Mental Health Act, and I believe he said that he missed getting this in before the election because he ran out of parliamentary time. Well, I just find it a bit surprising, seeing as this was so far up his agenda and so important to this community, that in fact this was only gazetted on 27th April 2016. In fact, I have gone back to the parliamentary agenda for the very first meeting of this House, on 18th January 2016, and the only Bill standing in his name is a Bill to amend the Animal and Birds Act. This Mental Health Bill was so important to the Minister for Health at the time that for him amending the Animal and Birds Act was more important than the Mental Health Act. (Interjection) I am sorry, but that is the reality. If he said to this House that this Bill was ready for passing, and the very first thing he did not do was put this on the agenda ... (Interjections) That is a fact: gazetted on 27th April 2016.

I still have not heard anything from any of the Members opposite in respect of the section 117 aftercare which exists in the UK, and I trust no doubt they will enlighten us and the community in due course.

The Members opposite seem to think that I live in a time warp, in that the people I speak to are reliving events of five years ago. No, these are people who are living events here and now and today, not five years ago. The system needs to improve.

I find it surprising that having made this Mental Health Act such an important piece of legislation – and which we freely supported when it came to the House; it is an important piece of legislation ... But again, the new Minister is saying hopefully it will come in in the first quarter of 2017 –

Hon N F Costa: I did not say that, Mr Speaker. I said it will come into effect in the first quarter, not hopefully, which is an entirely [Inaudible].

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, either way it was still three months away from implementation –

Hon N F Costa: Better than 16 years.

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, look, you could have brought it in on the very first day of the Parliament.

Mr Speaker: Please, do not talk across the floor of the House unless you are prepared to give way.

Hon. R M Clinton: And so, Mr Speaker, in terms of priorities they seem to have slightly missed the boat on this one. Mr Speaker, there was one comment which, and again, if we were given more time to achieve a consensus motion, maybe we could have come up with something that we could have all agreed on. There was one comment which I heard in this place for the first time, and that is that there will be a review undertaken – which in fact was the basis of my original motion. So I would encourage the Government to make public the process for this review: how this review is going to be undertaken and by whom; when is the report due; and, of course, no doubt this report will be made public. Because at the end of the day, as the hon. Lady has quite rightly pointed out, we seem to be sadly lacking in information and statistics. It is very hard on this side of the House without access to the information that the hon. Members on that side have, to determine whether in fact we are meeting the needs of our community.

And so, Mr Speaker, it is really unfortunate that we could not arrive at a consensus, but at the end of the day we have aired the topic and we have given it justice, I believe, tonight; and so, Mr Speaker, I have nothing further to say. Thank you.

Mr Speaker Before we take the vote, I am going to read out the motion which I am putting to the vote, because otherwise it will not appear in the Hansard.

This House:

Notes the notable strides in the provision of mental healthcare since the election of the GSLP Liberal Government on 9th December 2011; notes the creation and delivery of an entirely fit- for-purpose mental health facility, establishing an optimum environment for patients, carers and staff; acknowledges the efforts of this Government in improving and developing services in mental health; asks Government to immediately consider making public the mental health data gathered and collated to assist stakeholders in using this data to assess how mental health issues are affecting Gibraltarians, while also enhancing accountability; recognises that Government currently employs a structured multi-agency approach to mental healthcare and that it partially uses the care programme approach NHS(UK) model, but invites Government to consider implementing it in its entirety, in the same way as the approach works in the United Kingdom, in order to achieve maximum efficiency of care; notes the existence of the Educational Psychologist Team; welcomes the fact that a third educational psychologist is being trained and asks the Government to continue to consider additional ways of dealing with child and adolescent mental health issues and to explore the possibility of establishing a bespoke school-based mental health support programme, as per current UK models; asks Government to establish a direct crisis line system for the patient who may need it when in crisis and which leads the patient or his/her family to the dedicated care programme as a matter of urgency; notes that the Government's commitment will rightly be judged by how we take care of the most vulnerable among us; commends the Government to continue to relentlessly pursue the improvement in mental healthcare provision by basing its policies on the best medical advice and working hand-in-glove with professionals and civil society to design and deliver optimum support for persons with mental health issues; and further commence the amalgamation of the provision of health and care under one newly created Ministry.

2465 Mr Speaker: I put this motion to the vote. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? (Members: Nay.) The motion is supported by the Government and by the hon. independent Lady, and the official Opposition are voting against.

North Front Cemetery – Maintenance –
Amended motion carried

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

This House:

Laments the present poor condition of the North Front Cemetery and believes that the place in which our loved ones are laid to rest, as a sign of the respect in which we continue to hold those loved ones, must be better cared for and maintained.

2470 Mr Speaker, I assure the Hon. the Chief Minister we do not have a quota of motions which we have to get in every parliamentary session, and indeed the reason we, as an Opposition, are tabling these motions is very much on the advice of Mr Speaker himself, who has demonstrated his aversion to Question Time turning into a debate, and therefore these motions allow us an opportunity to genuinely debate issues that have been raised with us, issues of public concern, 2475 and a wide range of different issues indeed.

No one can dispute the truth that the cemetery at North Front is a place unique in our community; a place where, as a community, we give expression to emotions of grief and sadness nowhere else felt; a place where we lay to rest our loved ones, and in doing so are subjected to that singular sensation of sorrow that can be felt only on these most desperate of occasions; a 2480 place where we return time and again to express a continued love and respect we have for those loved ones – mothers and fathers, wives and husbands, sons and daughters, family and friends – people who, in their absence, continue to have a special place in our hearts and who deserve to have a special place in which we can show our love and respect.

2485 Herein lies the crux of this motion and the reason for lament, because at present the only thing especially unique about the cemetery is its state of decrepitude and dilapidation.

2490 I would be both surprised and disappointed should anyone in this House argue the contrary to anything I have said thus far, because the weight of public opinion would be very much against them. I receive complaints almost daily about the condition of the cemetery. Indeed, there have been petitions against the condition of the cemetery. Many of the complainants ask me if I can do anything about it. I see concerns expressed on social media, I see petitions being raised asking for improvements, and yet I see no significant steps being taken to affect that improvement.

2495 As leaders of this community, we all share to a lesser or greater degree the shame of having allowed this situation to arise, and I am proud to move this motion as a positive action in at least getting this House's acknowledgement that this is an issue, that many people feel let down and that improvements must be made.

2500 I was recently in Trafalgar Cemetery for the Trafalgar Memorial Service, a very moving service when placed in its historical context. It was an appropriately gloomy day, so the cemetery was not at its verdant best, but still one had the sense that with its well-manicured pathways, tended shrubs and shade trees it was a place well looked after, kept in a condition appropriate to its status and hopefully out of respect for those who lie there, rather than simply because it lies on the tourist trail.

2505 Compare and contrast with the cemetery at North Front, with its sun-bleached and broken pathways, damaged drains and leaky taps, unkempt and uncared for vegetation. While Trafalgar Cemetery has an air of quietude and solace, North Front conjures a sense of desolate abandon. We cannot allow this to remain.

2510 So what can be done to change this? Well, firstly, of course, we must acknowledge and accept that North Front Cemetery is not as we would wish it to be. We cannot live in denial of the palpable facts there to see by anyone taking the time to do so. Having acknowledged and accepted the disservice to our community that the present lamentable condition of the cemetery represents, I do not believe that lavish sums need to be expended to bring about improvement. Indeed, this should be avoided. However, more effective use of the available resources needs to be considered and we need a plan – not one that will take four years to formulate, but one that can be swiftly actioned to set about changing the ambiance of North Front Cemetery into one of appropriate dignity.

2515 Mr Speaker, I hope to receive unanimous support in this House for this motion without amendment. It will show our community that its politicians are listening and do hear their concerns, and significantly both care about those concerns and will act upon them.

2520 Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the motion in the terms moved by the hon. mover.
Does anyone wish to...? The Hon. Dr John Cortes.

2525 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Thank you, Mr Speaker.

2530 I am afraid to disappoint the Hon. Mr Hammond in one respect, as I am going to be proposing an amendment; but not in another, as I am not happy with the state of the cemetery. I have never said that I am happy with the state of the cemetery and it is certainly not as I would wish it to be. It is, however, very much a work in progress. At least there is work in progress, which there had not been before we came into Government, because the complaints about the cemetery and the state of the cemetery go back for decades, right through the time of the previous administration.

Mr Speaker, many things contribute to the state of the cemetery, not just workforce issues, not just vegetation management issues, but also legislation and structures which were in place. 2535 For many years, North Front Cemetery was abandoned. In fact, the Superintendent of Cemeteries who was appointed at the time of the GSD was almost sent there as an outcast into a backwater and given very little, if any, support by that administration, despite the fact that he is dedicated – and certainly the aspects in relation to burials, to being available virtually seven 2540 days a week and almost 24 hours a day is something that is not cause for complaint and there are very few cemeteries anywhere in the world as accommodating to respond to the distress of families who are bereaved in ensuring a speedy burial is effected. So there are lots of things that come into play in this.

If I may, Mr Speaker, just refer to the complexity of North Front Cemetery, the cemetery complex consists of a perimeter wall, the footpaths leading to the various plots, the public toilet, 2545 freshwater points in a number of locations, and so on. I am pleased to report on that in recent years we have, in fact, invested more in the cemetery in a certain number of respects. The materials, tools and equipment budget of the cemetery was around £10,000 and it is now nearly £20,000 every year. The perimeter walls are regularly painted – as we saw, they were particularly painted after a regrettable instance of vandalism that we had a couple of years ago. 2550 The footpaths are maintained and whenever there is need to remove some of the footpaths to access the vaults at the edge of the plots, these are immediately reinstated. The toilets are also well maintained and clean at all times. We have also introduced the marking of the plots, so they are all designated and therefore much easier to find – and the map at the entrance, which is also very helpful to the users. We have also increased the number of cemetery keepers to two, as 2555 opposed to one that was in place in 2011 when we came into Government. All the water points are now working – we do not go to taps anymore and find that there is not any water, and if there is it is very quickly repaired – and the drainage is currently being upgraded.

The problem perhaps is twofold: the clearing of growth around the vaults – you cannot compare the maintenance of the windswept, sandy North Front Cemetery to Trafalgar 2560 Cemetery, which is in a sheltered area and is much more similar to what you would need to do in the Alameda Gardens, and therefore much easier to maintain than North Front Cemetery because of the climatic conditions and the poor nature of the soil.

The question of maintaining of vegetation is the one that causes the greatest of concern. The vegetation maintenance was carried out – and this was instigated by the previous administration 2565 – by a small group of workers from the then community projects. These workers have now largely left the organisation and, as was mentioned here not a week ago in Parliament, the Government put out a tender in order to see whether it could carry out the maintenance of the cemetery in a different way. Unfortunately, none of those tenders were considered to provide value for money and the Government then started to look at other alternatives. So it is not that 2570 nothing has been done at the time. The alternative has included extending the duties of people who look after the burials to cover vegetation management, and for a period of time it seemed to have been working relatively well. In the last year or two, because of increased pressure on burials and other changes in the organisation, this has not quite worked so well, so we have tried to get other bodies of workers to deal with it. At the moment, the situation is that we are 2575 actively considering a management programme which will either be using existing resources working elsewhere for the Government, or the possibility of issuing a new tender, which will be structured in such a way that will allow seasonal work, rather than a [Inaudible] and that might actually bring down the costs and increase the value for money element. Let me explain, Mr Speaker. The critical time for the growth of vegetation is now, just after the first rains, and 2580 therefore there will be more work, for example, in the autumn than if it is being properly maintained in the summer, because there will not be that much growth to work with. Therefore, we are working on the possibility of either redeploying current resources to there with that management programme, or issuing a tender with that management programme, because I do 2585 repeat that has to be tackled. I am not happy with the state of the cemetery – let me insist on that.

There is another issue, Mr Speaker, which is one that people may not realise, and that is the question of dilapidated vaults. The Government is not responsible for those vaults, but it is the leaseholder who is responsible and this is stated under the Cemetery Act, and Government may only intervene and demolish these vaults when they exceed 100 years. In such cases, the remains within the vaults are placed in a common grave and recorded as such. So the Government, similar to the fact that it could not act in certain areas of mental health because it was restricted by the law, cannot deal with certain vaults until they are of a certain age, and therefore it is something that the Government cannot act upon.

2595 The Cemeteries Act, Mr Speaker – or Ordinance, as it was when it was passed – is not dating from 1968, like the Mental Health Act that we were discussing before; it actually dates from 1889 and is 127 years old. I am glad to be able to say that we are finishing a process of consultation in which we are going to shortly be publishing a command paper with a revised Cemeteries Bill, which will deal with a lot of these issues. One of the issues will be the question of when Government can intervene to deal with a vault not being properly maintained, which it now cannot do.

2600 Among the changes that the Act will bring is that it will not be limited to the cemetery at North Front, but will be able to apply to other cemeteries in Gibraltar which are under the control of the Government, and a Cemetery Authority will be created, which will be responsible for the general management and supervision of the cemetery and the registration and control of burials.

2605 The board of visitors, when I came into office, had not met for several decades. I was told, incidentally, by one of the appointees of the former board that when he enquired as to how often they would have to meet when he was approached by a former Government, he was told 'Don't worry, you are not expected to meet, but I have to have names in the Gazette.' So, Mr Speaker, it had not met for decades. I reconstructed that board of visitors. Sadly, the Chairman who was appointed, David Hoare, did become ill shortly after that and was ill for a considerable period of time, which rather upset the work, and sadly, as we all know, David passed away quite recently. It has now got a new Chairman, and with the new Acts it will no longer be known as the board of visitors; it will be known as the Cemeteries Board, which will have the ability to be involved in directing and advising on all aspects of the work of the cemetery.

2615 Mr Speaker, the definition of burial rights and who may construct a grave or vault is also going to be dealt with, and offences will not be taken as lightly as they are. You can imagine that in 1889 fines were not as high as you would want them to be. Any person who creates a disturbance or nuisance, for example, at this point in time would be afforded a £5 fine; this is going to be increased to a level 3 fine.

2625 So, as you see, Mr Speaker, there is a lot of work going on in the background in and around the cemetery. Because of all the different things we have tried, particularly from the point of view of management, we are not there yet; I absolutely accept that. Work has to be done and it is my intention that before this term of office is out the work will have been completed.

Therefore, Mr Speaker, I am proposing that we amend the motion as follows, and I hand this over to the usher.

Replace after 'This House':

Recalls that North Front Cemetery is the place where our loved ones are laid to rest; considers that there has always been room for improvement to the condition of North Front Cemetery and that this has been the case under successive Governments; notes the importance of continuing maintenance and to the state of the cemetery, recognising the efforts presently being made in that direction; and supports the Government's plans to review relevant legislation and to provide a management programme for the maintenance of the cemetery.

2630 Mr Speaker, this, I am hoping, will allow us to work towards a cemetery that our community requires, demands, and in fact deserves, so I commend the amendment to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now propose the amendment in the terms moved by the Hon. Dr John Cortes.

2635 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I entirely identify myself with the comments made by the Hon. Minister: I think that we all know that North Front could be a much better place.

I will let my hon. colleague Mr Hammond give his view as to the official Opposition's position on the amended motion, but there was one comment that the Hon. Minister made in respect of the legislation of the Cemeteries Act, and certainly it does date back to 1889 – with consequential amendments, of course. He said that he may have been told – and I am not sure 2640 this is right, but that the burial vaults the Government had no ability to do anything about and that they had to be more than 100 years old before they could be touched. I cannot find anything in the legislation that says that. In fact, under section 6(1) of the Cemetery Act it actually says – and this is something the Minister may want to consider in preparing the Bill for the new Cemetery Act. It says, under 'Powers of Superintendent for maintaining good order and 2645 appearance of the cemetery':

- 6.(1) The Superintendent may for the purpose of maintaining the good order and appearance of the cemetery exercise the following powers:–
- (a) to remove stones, bricks and other material of monuments and memorials of the dead, which have fallen from their places;
  - (b) to remove rails which surround or form part of monuments and memorials of the dead, which are in a ruinous condition;
  - (c) to arrange the materials of monuments and memorials of the dead, which have become ruinous or dilapidated so as to render them less unsightly in appearance.

And so, Mr Speaker, I would ask the hon. Member to perhaps go back to his source and double check the point about something having to be 100 years old before they could be put right. Again, as a layman reading that, it would appear that the Superintendent of Cemeteries already has that power and no doubt that will be reflected in the new Act.

2650 Though there is room for improvement in the cemetery and we all recognise that, certainly we will give good consideration to his proposed amendment.

Thank you Mr Speaker.

2655 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Well, Mr Speaker, I am very glad that I did not take the Hon. the Chief Minister up on his suggestion to defer this motion, because the amendment that the Hon. Dr Cortes has proposed would appear to me to be perfectly acceptable, and therefore I think we are in a position where actually we can achieve consensus in this House.

2660 We all appear to agree that the cemetery is very much a work in progress. I would ask perhaps that that work is accelerated as far as possible. I appreciate the resource issues, but it is a place that the people of our community do, on sad occasions, congregate to and it is a place where, clearly, when people are there and they look around themselves they feel, at the very least, disappointment at its condition.

2665 But in terms of the constituent parts of the proposed amendment, there is absolutely nothing objectionable to those on this side of the House and I very much feel that we can support the amended motion.

2670 Mr Speaker: Any other contributor?
I call on Dr John Cortes to reply.

2675 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, first of all, I am grateful for the comments of the Hon. Mr Clinton. This is the advice I have been given by the appropriate civil servants. It may be that that is covered by the rules rather than the Acts – I would have to go back to that – but certainly there will be provision in the new Act, which, as I say, will be published as a command paper with ample time for comments.

2680 There have been issues, curiously enough, and the Hon. Mr Clinton will appreciate that – certainly before my time – in which the Heritage Trust was concerned at what the Superintendent of Cemeteries may or may not do with certain monuments, and that will be covered as well.

I must say that when I reconstituted the board of visitors I included a representative of the Heritage Trust and of the National History Society as well as other denominations, including non-Christian denominations, as members of the board.

2685 I am particularly pleased to hear the response from the Hon. Mr Hammond, and in view of the fact that we are expecting consensus without amendments to amendments to amendments, I have nothing further to add and commend that this amendment now be put to the vote.

Mr Speaker: I will now put the Hon. Dr John Cortes' amendment to the vote. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried unanimously.

2690 That now becomes the motion as amended and therefore I will ask is there any other person who wishes to speak on the motion as amended; otherwise, I will call upon the Hon. Trevor Hammond to exercise his right to reply.

The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

2695 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, like the Hon. the Minister, I will not take up much of this House's time now.

2700 I think we very much are singing from the same song sheet here. The Minister has expressed that he is not happy with the present condition. He has said it is a work in progress. I think we have all acknowledged that responsibility is shared throughout, through previous administrations – just the North Front Cemetery has not been a focus of attention.

2705 I thank my hon. Friend Mr Clinton for his contribution with respect to the Act, and if indeed if that is what the Act says perhaps we can speed things up. If it is indeed secondary legislation that is preventing improvements being made in terms of the tombs themselves, then perhaps secondary legislation can of course be amended directly by the Minister. But of course when the Government eventually bring a new Act to this House I certainly hope that we will be able to also support that Act.

So, on that note and on that note of consensus I end my intervention. Thank you Mr Speaker.

2710 Mr Speaker: Before I put the motion to the House, may I comment that I am glad to see that hon. Members have been guided by the principle de mortuis nihil nisi bonum.

I will put the motion to the house. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried unanimously.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

2715 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, exactly one year after the last election we are in this House dealing with issues, some by consensus, some not, but I think we can all agree that it is appropriate to deal with a motion on the cemetery on the graveyard shift.

At almost nine o'clock this evening, Mr Speaker, I move that the House should now adjourn sine die.

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn sine die.

The House adjourned at 9.06 p.m.

Q844/2016
Cultural grants –
Details

Clerk: Question 844, the Hon. E J Reyes.

50

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Culture provide updated details of any cultural grants awarded since the answer to Question 734/2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

55

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, since my answer to Question 734/2016, two further cultural grants have been awarded, these being: Gibraltar Heritage Trust – Publication of book by Manolo Galliano, £4,370; Child Line Gibraltar – Publication of book, £3,245.

Q845/2016
Gibraltar Sports Authority's premises –
Cancellations due to being unfit for use

60

Clerk: Question 845, the Hon. E J Reyes.

65

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports provide details in respect of all cancellations at any of the Gibraltar Sports Authority's premises which were due to facilities being unfit for use, inclusive of reasons why the cancellations were necessary and dates involved?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

70

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, due to damage suffered as a result of the current storms and in particular, that caused by high winds, it was necessary to cancel the use of the Victoria Sports Hall on the following dates due to water ingress: Monday, 21st November, from 4 p.m. onwards; Saturday, 26th November, from 3 p.m. onwards – earlier sessions unaffected; Sunday, 27th November, all day; Thursday, 1st December, from 4 pm onwards; Sunday, 4th December, all day.

75

Given that the rain in that period was considered the worst for some time and that in the neighbouring areas life almost came to a standstill, these disruptions must be set in context. Nonetheless, works are being undertaken to repair the problems giving rise to these cancellations.

80

Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker. The Minister ended up by saying that works ... are they to be undertaken or have already been undertaken? I did not quite catch that.

85

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, they are already ongoing actually. They have already started looking at everywhere that the water ingress came from and the contractor that fixed certain other ... Remember, we are talking about the old Victoria Sports Hall, because I can inform the hon. Member that not a single drop came into the Tercentenary Hall because already refurbishment had been done previously and the contractor had actually fulfilled their mandate not to allow water to come in. But unfortunately some came in through the old sports hall.

90 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I am grateful and concur with the Minister that with the Tercentenary Sports Hall, we seem to have at long last seem to have solved the minor issue, the ventilation shafts in the newer Tercentenary hall sometimes because of the direction of the wind it did allow a bit of water ingress in that one.

95 In respect of the Victoria Sports Hall does the Minister expect this to be a huge expense that will require additional supplementary funding in favour of the Sports Authority or does he hopefully expect that it will be covered in the ongoing maintenance provisions that they have?

100 Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, it will be on the ongoing maintenance and it will be covered with their own costs. Because of the type of rain we had, there was a lot of water ingress but it might just be one particular place and that can be covered with the normal maintenance.

Q846/2016
Garrison Gymnasium –
Intended use

Clerk: Question 846, the Hon. E J Reyes.

105 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Sports inform this House what is the intended use for the Garrison Gymnasium?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

110 Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the intended use for the Garrison Gymnasium is for the whole of the sporting community and allocations to be made via the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, once this facility is refurbished to meet health and safety standards and it has adequate changing and showering amenities.

115 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I asked that question, Mr Speaker, because in the last session the Minister kindly gave me the schedule of locations and I had picked up that there were no allocations made for the Garrison Gymnasium.

120 Does the Minister have any possible date when these facilities will be put back for public use so that bookings may be made in the same manner as all the other facilities?

125 Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, I do not have any specific dates but the hon. Member must understand that we are trying to do that as quickly as possible because the Garrison Gym, as he well knows, was in a very, very sorry state of affairs and therefore we did have some monies, as the hon. Member knows, in the estimate. So we are working at that, we are talking about the gymnasium, so yes.

130 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister inform us, I know that it requires a fair amount of work and so on. Is one of the problems in respect of repairs that asbestos has been found within the facilities?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, not that I know of. As far as I understand it, there is no asbestos, but again if there is asbestos we will deal with it.

135 Hon. E J Reyes: I would be grateful if the Minister can take a personal interest because the word round the sporting community, and they are not always 100% accurate, is that it has been out of action for some time because of the implications to health and safety that comes about in carrying out repairs to the asbestos.

140 So although I know the Minister will not be able to have an answer now, I would be grateful if he were able to pursue this so that in future, we may exchange views and put this much needed facility back into community use as soon as possible.

Hon. S E Linares: Okay.

ENVIRONMENT, ENERGY, CLIMATE CHANGE AND EDUCATION

Mr Speaker: We will move on to the next question.

Q848/2016

MidTown Car Park and Royal Anglian Way Suspension Bridge – Signage

160 Clerk: Question 848, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide an update as to when the signs for the MidTown Car Park and the Suspension Bridge at Royal Anglian Way will be put in place?

165 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the signs are planned to be placed after the festive season.

170

175 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can I ask the hon. Gentleman what is the delay? We asked this question two months ago and the answer given was that especially the MidTown parking one was imminent and it was already ordered. I think people listening, especially the sign manufacturers will understand will be asking what can take six months of planning to put a sign up?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I can answer in relation to the Upper Rock. They are two very different areas, I have answered both in order not to split a rather simple question into two.

180 In relation to the Upper Rock, my latest information is that the signs have been ordered and there are quite a whole lot of signs to revamp the whole of the Upper Rock and that is part of that consignment.

I am not aware of the specific details of the MidTown signs; maybe my colleague may be able to provide that information.

185 Mr Speaker: Clearly we have a situation here where a question is addressed at two different... and dealing with two different matters. I think it has escaped the notice of myself and the Clerk. This should have been two separate questions. MidTown Car Park has got nothing to do with the Upper Rock. The responsibility of one Minister is for MidTown Car Park and another Minister for the Upper Rock. So it should have been two shorter questions. Keep it in mind for the future.

Hon. L F Llamas: It was just, Mr Speaker, because last time it was answered in one – 195 Mr Speaker: Well, we slipped up. (Interjection by Hon. L F Llamas) Let us all keep that in mind for the future, okay.

Q849-853/2016

Upper Rock Nature Reserve; Windsor Suspension Bridge; Devil's Bellows; Mount Misery – Daily visitor statistics; security guards

Clerk: Question 849, the Hon. L F Llamas.

200 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a schedule with the daily statistics showing how many visitors have entered each attraction on the Upper Rock Nature Reserve during the last five years?

205 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 850 to 853.

210 Clerk: Question 850, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a schedule of daily statistics with how many visitors have visited the Windsor Suspension Bridge since its inauguration?

215 Clerk: Question 851, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, is the Government content with the working conditions under which the security guards at the Windsor Bridge and Devil's Bellows have been working since they have been placed?

220 Clerk: Question 852, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, what has been the cost of having security guards at Windsor Suspension Bridge and Devils Bellow's since placed at each location?

225 Clerk: Question 853, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, what has delayed the opening of Mount Misery from October 2016 to before Spring 2017?

230 Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, the data in relation to Question 849 is not available as requested. The information 235 available is as presented in the answer to Written Question 67. In other words, we do not have a breakdown as has been requested, but an overall figure which the hon. Member will be able to see in the Written Answer and then he may want to ask again in the future.

In relation to Question 850, the statistics are not kept.

In Questions 851 and 852, the security officers at these sites form part of larger contracts, 240 move between sites and therefore the specific cost of security at Windsor Bridge cannot be determined.

The officer at Devil's Bellows is part of another contract for the Upper Rock which is held within my recently acquired portfolio for the Upper Rock tourist sites and therefore again the specific cost is difficult to identify.

245 Both guards have access to facilities at Jews' Gate.

The main cause of the delay has been severe weather.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, given that obviously Gibraltar is a popular tourist destination and having seen especially the security guard down at Devil's Bellows with a beach umbrella and 250 a Portakabin, working in very warm conditions, does the Minister intend to continue this practice or is it a possibility that perhaps a more permanent building or facility will be provided in the near future?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it clearly is as we have been having a bit of a conversation 255 here, we have to be careful how much money we spend in presenting facilities which could go over the top.

However, I am aware of what the hon. Member has said, but whatever steps we take, and there are various things here. Clearly the employing firm has a responsibility to look after the conditions in which their workers work and I am not aware of any requests made to Government 260 in respect of that.

Secondly I think we need, in taking over the Upper Rock sites I am reviewing the whole question of access to the Upper Rock and obviously this will all be considered. But clearly there is no, as I said earlier, it may be that the hon. Member is encouraging us to spend large amounts of money on very plush facilities and if that is the case and we do provide them, which I suspect 265 we will not provide very plush facilities, then clearly we will not be criticised.

But I know what the hon. Member is referring to and in analysing what we do with access to the Upper Rock this is part of the different areas that we are looking at.

270 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, perhaps the hon. Member could just expand a bit on his answer and advise whether there is any intention to move the ticket office or establish a ticket office at Devil's Bellows?

275 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am not able to reply to that. I took over responsibility for the sites just weeks ago really, six weeks ago or something like that and I am looking at the whole Upper Rock product. This is something that we need to look at but I am not in a position at this stage to give any details, no decision has been taken.

280 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I thank the hon. Member for that. Can he advise, or is he aware, whether any architects have been instructed at all in respect of the Devil's Bellows sites regarding proposals?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I am aware that no architects have been instructed.

285 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, just coming back to Questions 849 and 850, I understand that the statistics as requested are not kept. Would the Government perhaps look into keeping these types of statistics in order to have an insight of what sites are performing better, what sites are not being attended to and the performance of the general Upper Rock?

290 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am one to like having statistics as information but not for the sake of having it and if keeping statistics for every particular part of the Upper Rock means, for example, having a person stationed there for 24 hours or at least during daylight hours with additional pay and so on, I think that that money can best be used for other things or not used.

295 So we have to be careful that we do not obtain statistics for every little corner of the Upper Rock or anywhere else just for the sake of having them. So this is part of the exercise of what we would need the statistics for. How important it is to know how many people are crossing the bridge, I am not sure. It is a bridge I'll cross when I come to it.

300 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I am not implying that specific people are actually placed; I am more referring to for example, St Michael's Cave, the Suspension Bridge where there are already people placed, the Great Siege Tunnels, in attractions where there are already employees working on those sites. Perhaps they could just keep an estimated record or at least maybe in order to just know how many people are coming, I think it is a useful statistic that will provide an insight on how the attractions are actually performing.

305 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, in trying to make a question out of that, I will agree that they would be useful statistics. Whether they are necessary statistics and whether they would warrant additional expenditure in order to achieve them is a decision that will have to be taken when all the information is available.

Q854/2016
Gibraltar Tourist Board –
Update on arrears

310 Clerk: Question 854, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, further to Questions 740/2016 and 741/2016, can the Government provide an update on the arrears position in relation to the Gibraltar Tourist Board?

315 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, further to the answer to Question 741/2016, the arrears are: Debtor A, £2,752.65; Debtor B, £106,672.70.

320 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can I ask: are there any interest penalties or any additional anti-debtor strategies being put in place in order to curtail this behaviour and to try and avoid this sort of trend that we are seeing?

325 Obviously the figures are quite substantial and these are users going up to the Upper Rock who are benefiting from taking tourists up, so there is no reason why they should have this delay in paying their entry fees.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am not aware, I would have to ask the Member, it is a new Department that I have taken over, I can find out the information.

330 I think to put it in context, in relation to Debtor A, the sum is identical to what it was when I answered about a month ago.

In relation to Debtor B, we must remember that two payments of about £30,000 had come in in fairly rapid succession which had reduced it to £93,000 more or less, and obviously that has now increased by £13,000. So it may be that some other payment has not come in or has not been processed yet, but we are aware what is owed and there may be a bit of a time lag.

335 So I think it is worth waiting for another month to see where we are and I will enquire as to what system the Department has to discourage debts. But I do not have that information available.

Q855/2016

Public toilets at Cathedral Square – Closure

340 Clerk: Question 855, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain why the public toilets at Cathedral Square have been closed for the past few months?

345 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the toilets have been closed because of a fault in the plumbing which has resulted in them being out of order.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, are the repairs being undertaken and does the Minister know when these toilets will be reopened once again?

355 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, my information is that the matter is being looked into. Remember, it is a very old toilet and in all likelihood with old metal pipes and so on, it may be more complex than it appears from my answer.

Also the cost of having the plumbing redone is being looked at. So it is being looked at but no decision has been taken. There are other facilities nearby – there is a pay toilet in 360 Commonwealth Park and there is the Leisure Centre – but as I say, we are looking into the extent of the problem and to see what costs will be involved in repairing this.

Q856/2016
Temporary power turbines –
Total cost since 2012

Clerk: Question 856, the Hon. T N Hammond.

365 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister say what the total cost of the temporary power turbines has been since January 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

370 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the total rental cost of the power turbine since January 2012 has been £12,849,567.42.

Q857/2016
Gibraltar's energy needs–
Percentage from renewable energy sources

375 Clerk: Question 857, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: What percentage of Gibraltar's energy needs is currently being met from renewable sources?

380 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

385 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the percentage in the grid is approximately 0.05%. This, however, does not include solar thermal installations which can be considered as 'non-usage' for which figures are not available.

390 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, bearing in mind the figure of 0.05% does the Minister still believe it is possible that we will achieve the 20% target that is established in their manifesto and of course by EU requirements by 2019-20?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, absolutely sir.

395 A Member: Hear, hear.

Q858/2016

Gibraltar's energy needs –
Expected change by 2019

Clerk: Question 858, the Hon. T N Hammond.

400 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, does Government expect there to be any change in the energy demand between now and 2019 and if so, what is the anticipated change?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

405

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Government expects electricity demand for Gibraltar to increase by about 1.5% between now and 2019.

Q859/2016

Bayside Comprehensive students decanted to Victoria Stadium – Reasons

410 Clerk: Question 859, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain the reasons for decanting students from Bayside Comprehensive to Victoria Stadium for the purposes of holding lessons which fall outside physical education?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

420 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, this was necessary in order to accommodate the increasing number of students on a wide choice of optional subjects.

425

Hon. E J Phillips: Just one further supplementary: how many students have actually been decanted into Victoria Stadium?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not have that figure. It was not asked so therefore it has not been provided in my reply. I am sure that if the hon. Member writes to me I can get the information from the Department, but I do not have that figure here.

430 Hon. E J Phillips: One further question: what measures are going to be put in place in order to avoid that decanting into obviously clearly an unsuitable site for the education of children?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there is a manifesto commitment regarding Bayside School and new schools and we will take this into the planning.

435

Hon. E J Phillips: Just to confirm that Victoria Stadium will still be used and continue to be used until the new schools are built?

440 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have to assume so. Again, I have not got the information, I do not know whether the school has looked at alternative venues but clearly if we have to accommodate students we will find accommodation for them in order for the lessons to proceed.

The alternative is to not have those options available and I think that educationally we will agree that it is better to walk across the road and have the class than to stay put and not have it.

Q860/2016
Bullying in school –
Minimisation measures

445

Clerk: Question 860, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government set out what measures are in place to minimise the incidence of bullying in schools?

450

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes)
455 Mr Speaker, firstly let me start by saying that a single incident of bullying in or out of school is an incident too many, I am sure we all agree.

As such, we take a very serious view of bullying, which is tackled in two ways: first, through the delivery of a comprehensive Personal, Social and Health Education programme in all the schools where bullying and the consequences of bullying are openly discussed. Every attempt is made to make sure that bullying is reported and, furthermore, that victims feel safe in the knowledge that they can speak to someone in confidence and that something will be done.

460 The programme also strives to educate and teach children to celebrate their differences, to be respectful and tolerant of each other and to never be afraid to speak out when they see injustice.

465 Secondly, despite all of this it is of course regrettable that sometimes bullying still happens. All schools take a zero tolerance view at this stage and will deal with reported incidents swiftly and diligently in accordance with their discipline protocols.

470 I would, however, like to remark if I may on the positives. Only a few weeks ago I witnessed with my colleague, the Hon. Samantha Sacramento, 1,000 boys locking hands in solidarity with the victims of domestic violence, particularly women and girls. This is the education I am referring to and I am immensely proud of the work being done in schools by teachers.

Financial Services Ombudsman Act 2016–
Bringing into effect

Clerk: Question 861, the Hon. R M Clinton.

475

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise when it intends to bring into effect the Financial Services Ombudsman Act 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

480

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, we intend to bring the Financial Services Ombudsman Act into effect on 1st April 2017.

485

Hon. R M Clinton: I thank the Hon. Minister for the answer. Has there been any start to the process to recruit or identify the Ombudsman?

Hon. A J Isola: Yes, Mr Speaker, there has.

490

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, may I ask the Hon. Minister how that process has commenced? I do not recall seeing any adverts in any local papers.

495

Hon. A J Isola: No, there have not been any adverts, Mr Speaker, because we are not looking at recruiting a specific team. We would hope that the hon. Members opposite would welcome a setting up of an Ombudsman's office using current resources from other Departments and other agencies which would serve the purpose it would require under the Act.

500

Hon. R M Clinton: So, Mr Speaker, if I understand the Minister correctly, he is looking to staff and resource internally within existing resources, presumably within the GDC or the Civil Service and not to recruit externally?

Hon. A J Isola: Well, Mr Speaker, we are looking at using existing resources by agreement, whether internal or external, to carry out the functions that we require. We would hope that you would welcome this and not seek the recruitment of further people into the public sector.

505

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, maybe I misunderstood the Minister. He said existing resources whether internal or external. Perhaps he could clarify what he meant by external.

510

Hon. A J Isola: Well, Mr Speaker, it is questionable whether certain agencies within the Government are internal or external.

Hon. R M Clinton: Perhaps the Minister could then perhaps... just a final supplementary on this one. If I understand him correctly, then, by external he means potentially other Government agencies, but not for example third party private entities such as law firms or accountancy firms?

515

Hon. A J Isola: Yes, exactly.

Q862/2016

New Statutory Regime for Financial Services and Professional Services – Update on introduction

Clerk: Question 862, the Hon. R M Clinton.

520

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide an update on the introduction of the New Statutory Regime for the Financial Services and Professional Services

Market announced in its press release 43/2015 dated 27th January 2015 and the legal costs incurred to date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

525

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the Legislative Reform Programme (LRP) encompasses the development of policy and the drafting of legislation for: new consolidated primary and secondary legislation relating to financial and professional services; transposition of financial and professional services directives; the implementation of elements of EU regulations through statutory amendments; and other Government initiatives to amend financial services law such as the implementation of a new regime for pensions.

530

To date the LRP has delivered on financial service legislation, including European Directives and Regulations. In terms of the new primary and secondary legislation, significant progress has been made in the drafting of the legislation and we expect to be able to consult on the new consolidated legislation in the second half of 2017.

535

We assume the reference to 'legal costs' is to the costs of the drafters. Details of those costs incurred to date can be found on the Government's website and I am advised and pleased to report that we are on target to complete this work on budget.

Q863/2016

Double taxation agreements – Negotiations

540

Clerk: Question 863, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise with which jurisdiction it is currently concluding a double taxation agreement and has the UK agreed to enter into one with Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, Gibraltar Finance officials have been negotiating Gibraltar's first double taxation agreement since the beginning of this year. The negotiations have turned out to be more protracted than anticipated due to the very technical nature of these agreements and the final draft is now with a private sector working group which has assisted Government with these matters. Government expects to conclude this process and arrange a signing early next year. I will happily disclose the name of the jurisdiction to the Member outside the Chamber.

The draft DTA takes into account the OECD's BEPS Programme and Action Points that have become the standard for international tax reporting and which are designed to prevent the erosion of national tax bases and impede the shifting of profits to lower tax jurisdictions. Gibraltar is in the process of transposing the EU equivalent of BEPS.

555

I am pleased that we are now close to delivering an important manifesto commitment with respect to DTAs in partnership with the private sector. We now hope to build on this by developing a network of double taxation agreements going forwards, on terms similar to the draft referred to above, in full compliance with the OECD BEPS action points.

560

We are in discussions with Her Majesty's Government and our desire to enter into a DTA with the United Kingdom.

565

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for that answer. In respect of the jurisdiction, although he may... he obviously will not identify these jurisdictions, would he be able to say whether it is a European jurisdiction?

570 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I am happy to inform the hon. Member of the name of the jurisdiction behind the Speaker's Chair if that will help.
The answer is no.

575 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, talking about – if I can ask the Hon. Minister about the double tax agreements, the negotiation as he will know from this one double tax agreement that has been negotiated with the help of a private sector working group, is quite a protracted affair, and the development of a huge double taxation network will be an ambitious one, have any thoughts been given to piggy-backing on the UK Government's double tax treaty network?

580 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the issue of DTAs is one that we have discussed in Parliament before. We did have two DTAs ready to go with two different jurisdictions to the one I have referred to earlier, but of course the introduction by the OECD of the BEPS action plan and action points, has almost derailed that entire process and I believe that there is now going to be an entirely new regime of DTAs signed across the world which have to comply now with the 585 OECD BEPS action points.

So this is the first one and I fully believe that the future of DTAs will very much be in line with this format. This will now become the standard procedure and the jurisdiction with whom we have entered into or about to enter into the first DTA had a representative on the OECD Committee on BEPS and therefore their input has been extremely helpful in understanding the full implication of the BEPS programme.
590

We have discussed with the UK and will continue to talk to them about our own DTA with them and what other possibilities may arise as a result of that.

Q864-866/2016
Bitcoin/Cryptocurrency –
Working group, challenges and regulation

595 Clerk: Question 864, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm whether a Bitcoin/Cryptocurrency working group has been established and if so, who sits on the group?

600 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 865 and 866.

605 Clerk: Question 865, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government set out what challenges it sees in relation to the regulation of Bitcoin/Cryptocurrency in Gibraltar?

610 Clerk: Question 866, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm what steps it is taking to regulate Bitcoin or other forms of Cryptocurrency in Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

615

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, a Cryptocurrency working group was formed in July 2014 by the private sector with our support. The working group included Paul Astengo, David Parody, Joey Garcia, Albert Yome and Nicholas Gomez, as well as representatives from local and international firms. The private sector group approached Government in summer

620

2014 and offered to set up a group at no cost to Government, to consider and report on these issues. The working group produced its first report in December 2014 which was circulated by Gibraltar Finance on 24th December 2014 for consultation by the Finance Centre Council to its member firms and direct to contributing firms and individuals who were not part of the Finance

625

Centre Council. After considering the multiple responses to the consultation, a second report was published in January 2016 which was circulated by e-mail on 22nd February 2016 for consultation by the Finance Centre Council to its member firms and directly to contributing firms and individuals not part of the Finance Centre Council. This second report contained the views of the working group on a proposed regulatory framework, for firms engaged with virtual currencies. In answer to Question 865, HM Government of Gibraltar is not seeking, nor has it ever sought, to regulate Bitcoin or any other Cryptocurrency in Gibraltar.

630

And in answer to Question 866, Government is not taking any steps to regulate Bitcoin or Cryptocurrency.

635

By way of assistance I would add that HM Government of Gibraltar is seeking to establish a regulatory framework via the Gibraltar Financial Services Commission, for firms not otherwise subject to regulation that use Distributed Ledger Technology for the transmission and storage of value. Virtual currencies are recognised as one application of DLT. This is work in progress and we will inform our thoughts and decisions in this area and an announcement of our progress will

640

Hon. E J Phillips: Just one further question. I thank you for that comprehensive answer. Can the Minister just explain what DLT is and how it differs in the context of digital currency? I am not too clear on what DLT is. I am grateful.

645

Hon. A J Isola: Well, Mr Speaker, quite simply, Distributed Ledger Technology is technology. So for example blockchain is one type of DLT. A virtual currency – and a Bitcoin – is regarded as a sort of Cryptocurrency. So when the hon. Member asks if we are going to be regulating Bitcoin or virtual currency, the answer is no, because we are not going to regulate the currency like we do not regulate fiat currencies or even commodities like gold and silver. But we are going to regulate what is not already regulated: those that touch or engage with it. So that is the difference really between DLT and the currencies themselves.

650

Q867/2016
Business with Hong Kong firms –
Economic benefit to Gibraltar

Clerk: Question 867, the Hon E J Phillips.

655

Hon. E J Phillips: Further to Question 199/2016, can the Government confirm what real business is being done between Gibraltar and Hong Kong firms in which Gibraltar derives direct or indirect economic benefit?

660 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the use of the Hong Kong Office has enabled a significant number of Gibraltar companies and organisations as well as Government with its trade missions in financial services, shipping, education and trade, to have access to real and significant business opportunities in Hong Kong.

665 Furthermore, the Hong Kong Office is now also assisting trade missions to mainland China having facilitated and attended visits with Ministers Bossano and Isola in recent months, with further visits planned in early 2017.

670 There is no question that serious business has been conducted between Asia and Gibraltar since the launch of the Gibraltar Government office in Hong Kong and engagements with huge state owned enterprises continue both in China and Gibraltar. The investments currently under discussion are substantial and are ongoing.

675 Mr Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to thank Mr Jason Cruz, our man in China, for having significantly raised the profile of Gibraltar in Asia and worked tirelessly and professionally to deliver real business and opportunity to all of our firms in the private sector, as well of course as Government.

Hon. E J Phillips: I am grateful for the answer and obviously we will get to Mr Cruz later on in Question Time. But in relation to the question that I put to him about the real business opportunities, I will just remind the hon. Member of what he said in relation to the answer to Question 199. He said:

I think I answered that in my original question where I said that the reports I get from the private sector is that real business is being done and indeed a public announcement will be made in the coming quarter of other work that is coming to a fruitful conclusion.

Can the Minister explain a bit more about that and what type of public announcement he expects, given that it was some time ago that he made that statement.

685 Hon. A J Isola: Yes, Mr Speaker. The statement that I was referring to at that time were ongoing negotiations for a very high profile Hong Kong firm which had 800 staff in Hong Kong and 3,000 worldwide, that was in the process of finalising its position to open its office in Gibraltar.

690 The little matter of the announcement of the Brexit vote in early 2016 put that on hold and unfortunately did not proceed following the voting on 23rd June this year.

TOURISM, EMPLOYMENT, COMMERCIAL AVIATION AND THE PORT

Q868/2016

Queen Elizabeth class carriers – Works necessary for berthing

Clerk: Question 868, the Hon. D A Feetham.

695 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Government know whether operating one of the new Queen Elizabeth class carriers from Gibraltar will necessitate any works to any of the Moles or the Port?

700 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, it is anticipated that the new Queen Elizabeth class carriers will berth at the South Mole within MOD property when they call at Gibraltar. It is understood that MOD staff are looking into any work required on the infrastructure here in Gibraltar to support these ships and they will be better placed to provide any details.

705 There is no expectation that the carriers will berth elsewhere in the Gibraltar Port.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, will he also join me in stating in this House how welcome it will be for one of these Queen Elizabeth carriers to be operating from Gibraltar, and does he expect or has he had any information from the MOD as to what extra economic activity that may bring to Gibraltar, which again would be very welcome indeed as a consequence of having this carrier operating from Gibraltar?

715 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, we are certainly very happy to state that we welcome the arrival of this new class of aircraft carriers to Gibraltar. They will be very, very welcome indeed. Matters to do with the works are clearly for the MOD. We anticipate that it will be possible for those carriers to be berthed in Gibraltar and certainly with a large crew like is expected with this class of carriers, it is anticipated that when they call it will generate economic activity for Gibraltar.

720 It is impossible I think to quantify what that economic activity will be but it will be most welcome – not just from the point of view of the economics of what Gibraltar will derive from such visits, but from the point of view of the continuing link with the United Kingdom, the continuing close link with the MOD and the use of the Gibraltar facilities which will always be available for the MOD to maximise its use and to make use of Gibraltar to the best way possible, in partnership obviously between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom as we have always done.

725 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much for the answer.

Mr Speaker, the Government will obviously not have a final answer in relation to this because he has already indicated to me that the MOD are undertaking their own surveys, but of course if the surveys indicate that substantial work will be necessary to the South Mole, that is also going to be a very welcome generation of economic activity here in Gibraltar.

735 But the question I want to ask is, is it something that the Government has discussed with the MOD that having this class of carrier operating from Gibraltar may also lead to the need for a reconsideration perhaps of the MOD's stance in relation to the staff and workers that it may need here in Gibraltar and the proposed voluntary redundancies going forward? Is that something that has been discussed between the Government and the MOD?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes at the very highest level between the Chief Minister and the Minister for the Armed Forces.

740 Because the position of the Government of Gibraltar as the Minister has said, is that bringing the Queen Elizabeth class to Gibraltar and indeed the Queen Elizabeth itself to Gibraltar, is not just a demonstration of the continuing relationship between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom in all matters, but in particular in relation to sovereignty, but is a sign that Gibraltar is the home of the Royal Navy in the Mediterranean Sea and that in that home there must be a forward mounting base that is able to support Her Majesty's Armed Forces as required at any particular 750 time – in particular given these dangerous times in which we live, which former Prime Minister David Cameron was right to say, demonstrated just how dangerous it was to live on the shores of the Mediterranean. And, Mr Speaker, those who work in the Ministry of Defence today are fully assured of the support of the Gibraltar Government and know that they will have all our support to demonstrate just how important their work is and will be in the future in particular, with the Queen Elizabeth class calling here.

755 And I have made that point directly to the Minister of the Armed Forces, Mike Penning, who if I may say so has demonstrated in the time that he has been Minister for the Armed Forces, that he is an excellent supportive friend of Gibraltar in every post he has held and in particular, in this post in which he himself has said is the post that he wished most to have of all the ministerial offices available. So, Mr Speaker, the House can rest assured that the Government has made those points and many more in support of our employees in the Ministry of Defence.

760 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I welcome that statement, on behalf of the Opposition.

Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you. It was a statement on behalf of the Government, not on behalf of the Opposition.

ENVIRONMENT, ENERGY, CLIMATE CHANGE AND EDUCATION

Q847/2016

Principal Auditor's Report 2014-15– Supplementary question

765 Mr Speaker: Is there a supplementary arising from Question 847?
The Hon. Lawrence Llamas.

770 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, just one supplementary arising from Question 847/2016. On the second page of the schedule handed over by the Minister for the Upper Rock, there is one item, Refurbishment of Upper Rock Areas – a total sum of £95,000. Is the Minister able to provide a breakdown, because obviously the reference of Upper Rock areas is quite broad, is it possible to provide a breakdown of what the works have actually been on this occasion?

775 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): I am sure it is. I do not have the information. I have given the headings. If I were to have broken down every single one of them, obviously that would have been quite an onerous task, but once again I would be happy to do that by exchange of correspondence. I am sure that if the information is available, there will not be any problem in providing it.

HOUSING AND EQUALITY

Q884/2016

Government rental homes – Urgent decanting of tenants

780 Clerk: We now move to Question 884, the questioner is the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing provide details of how many tenants required urgent decanting from their homes since the answer to Question 772/2016, indicating the reason why, the date when said decanting became necessary and the date when the tenants were able to return to their home?

785

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, none.

Q885/2016

Government rental homes –
Eviction of squatters

790 Clerk: Question 885, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing say how much expenditure has been incurred in respect of legal costs relating to the eviction of squatters from Government rental homes since the answer to Question 773/2016, providing a breakdown showing the number of homes involved and to whom payments were made?

795

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, none.

Q886/2016

Government rental homes –
Repair works pending

800

Clerk: Question 886, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Further to Questions 603/2016 and 774/2016, can the Minister for Housing please now provide a revised answer with updated details in respect of all pending repairs. That is still not fully completed jobs to rental homes, indicating the dates when these reports were first made by tenants and stating how many will be repaired by (a) the Housing Works Agency; (b) sub-contractors; and (c) the assigned tenants themselves?

805

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

810

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, huge progress has been made since the days that Members opposite were in Government and there were thousands of outstanding/pending repairs to rental homes.

To date, there are 288 pending repairs to rental homes and these are as follows: 14 in May 2016; 23 in June; 15 in July; 18 in August; 10 in September; 47 in October; 141 in November and 20 in December.

(a) 32 of these will be repaired by the Housing Works Agency; (b) 256 of these will be repaired by sub-contractors; and (c) two on a self-repair basis.

820 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I wrote to the hon. Lady saying that some tenants had reported to me that they had pending works prior to May and she was going to look into those. I think from today's answer she again quotes pending works going as from May. Has she been able to find out the veracity of those claims to have works outstanding prior to May?

825 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, and I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman opposite for giving me a list of tenants who had approached him. There were a number of names there, Mr Speaker.

On the whole, all of those have now been progressed; some have been completed; some of them, as happens ... one of them had reported and then someone else in the household had cancelled the report which is why it was not reflected in my answer because it was not pending.
830 In other cases there was no report at all, so sometimes people do not report according to the channels.

But again as I said I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman of course we are dealing with huge volumes of works, it is a system which may from time to time give rise to human error and there are only a couple of the works that the hon. Gentleman forwarded to me that had not been 835 actioned but they have now. So I am grateful for that.

Q887/2016

Government rental homes –
Expenditure on refurbishing empty homes

Clerk: Question 887, the Hon. E J Reyes.

840 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of all expenditure incurred since the answer to Question 775/2016 in respect of contracts awarded for making empty homes suitable for reallocation, stating to whom payments were made, how much has been paid, the number of residential homes pertaining to each payment, as well as indicating the type/nature of repair works or cleaning services undertaken?

845 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, one contract has been awarded and that was to A J Windows for £11,355 in relation to one property. The work 850 carried out by this company was general refurbishment including plastering walls and ceilings, painting, replacing floor tiles and doors, plumbing and electrical works.

Q888/2016

Government rental homes –
Outstanding arrears

Clerk: Question 888, the Hon. E J Reyes.

855 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of outstanding arrears in respect of Government rental homes, providing a breakdown by month since February 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

860 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the information on arrears is as follows since the answer to Question 383/2016 it is as follows: on the 30th June, the balance was £5,433,274.03; 31st July, £5,391,027.42; 31st August, £5,363,754.45; 30th September, £5,320,899.92; 31st October, £5,306,588.97; 31st November, £5,248,007.90.

So, Mr Speaker, just under £5.25 million.

865 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Lady kindly repeat the figure for August? Five million three hundred and something, I missed that part. (Interjection) The schedule is coming, then I am grateful for that. Thank you, Mr Speaker.

870

Q889/2016
Bruce's Farm admissions –
Number who have relapsed in last 12 months

Clerk: Question 889, the Hon. E J Phillips.

875 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm how many of those people admitted to Bruce's Farm in the last 12 months have relapsed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

880 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, of those who have undertaken rehabilitation in the last 12 months, Bruce's Farm is aware that there are currently nine who have relapsed.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, out of the total, what is the total of those who have been admitted or have undergone a period of rehabilitation?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the number of admissions so far are 49.

Hon. E J Phillips: Within that 12-month period, that is correct, thank you.

INFRASTRUCTURE AND PLANNING

Q890/2016
Zebra crossing from Midtown parking to Reclamation Road –
Accessibility for wheelchairs and pushchairs

890 Clerk: Question 890, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, does the Government intend to make the only zebra crossing from the Midtown parking to the pavement opposite on Reclamation Road, wheelchair and pushchair friendly?

895

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

900 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Highways Section of the Technical Services Department assessed the said crossing in August 2016 following the completion of the Midtown Coach and Car Park and recommended that this zebra crossing be made accessible. It is Government's policy to provide adequate accessibility for all facilities, particularly those that are Government projects. Thereafter, the design work was prepared to ensure that the existing zebra crossing would meet the requirements of wheelchair users. The works order was placed and I am pleased to confirm to the hon. Gentleman that preliminary works to the pavement commenced last week.

Therefore, Mr Speaker, I expect for the works to be completed before Christmas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, from that answer I understand that the Government actually looked into the situation post building the parking area and obviously I think, from what Government has been campaigning in the last couple of weeks, to do with accessibility and the Disability Bill, it would have been far more well-thought if Government would have actually included the accessibility to this parking before actually completing the project. It is things that obviously should arise as part of common sense.

If the Government brings over a specialist from the UK to talk about accessibility, but yet in implementing new projects which are so recent as this fail to understand that these things need to be factored in through the planning process, I would like to ask the Minister if it would be an additional cost and why it was not actually factored in at the time of the actual planning for the Midtown parking?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I would have to ask my Department the specific question. I think, if I am not mistaken, that they were considering different options for a zebra crossing within the road itself. Because it was not easy because of the way, I think, that cars and motorbikes parked in the area to find the best crossing point.

So I would need to ask my staff exactly why but I think the reason was that they built a zebra crossing the best they could at that time, until they had fully assessed the area. That is my understanding.

Hon. L F Llamas: So does that mean that the zebra crossing is moving its location or is it still going to be in the same location?

Hon. P J Balban: No, Mr Speaker, the decision was taken that that was probably the best location and that is why the works have been carried out. It would be useless to actually put a zebra crossing there if the intention was thereafter to move it to another location.

Hon. L F Llamas: The only other question which I asked was: is this an additional cost to the Taxpayer or is it encompassed within the actual project?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I will have to find out and revert to the Gentleman.

Q891/2016
Speed cameras –
Date to become operational

Clerk: Question 891, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, since the law has now been amended to allow for their use, when does the Government believe that the speed cameras will become operational?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, it is expected that this project will go live shortly. A further visit from the contractors is necessary before the project goes live and final arrangements are in place for the company to complete the commissioning and training in late January.

Mr Speaker, without wishing to commit to a date for obvious reasons, I envisage the speed cameras should be in operation sometime during the first quarter of 2017.

Q892/2016
Midtown Car Park –
Number of spaces and number sold

Clerk: Question 892, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, what is the total number of parking spaces in the Midtown Car Park and of that total, how many have been sold to individuals or companies?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the total number of parking spaces is 1,011; and the total number of completed sales to individuals or companies is 456.

Q893/2016
Midtown Car Park –
Serviceability rate for machines

Clerk: Question 893, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister provide figures for the serviceability rate for machines in the Midtown Car Park since it became available for use by the public?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, since Midtown Coach and Car Park was opened to the public, Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd have encountered several issues as follows: coins jamming within the mechanism of Pay Station No. 2 – the coin readers were replaced under warrantee and at no cost. Pay Station No. 2 also encountered a software issue as a result of a faulty motherboard – the motherboard was also replaced under warrantee and at no cost.

Pay Station No. 2 was out of order on three occasions as it was out of change. These situations were promptly addressed by the contracted security company for the car park and replenished as necessary.

Initially the coin readers to both Pay Stations No. 1 and No. 2 encountered issues where some series of £1 coins would be rejected. This is a common issue that manifests in coin readers installed within pay stations, ATMs, pay phones and other platforms.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for that answer, and it is a comprehensive answer. However it does not quite give me the information I was after, which is really how often the machines have been out of service as a ratio to the time they have been open. And I raise the question because the concern has been raised directly or the frustration has been raised directly with me by members of the public who have encountered problems.

990 So the frequency from their anecdotes, if you like, would appear to be relatively high rate of unserviceability and I wonder if the Minister could just clarify.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, it would be impossible to give the hon. Gentleman an exact idea of the frequency because there are certain issues that happen unfortunately quite frequently, which are the issues we are experiencing with certain £1 coins. That I think is one of the biggest matters that come to my attention and on occasions the coins slip through.

995 So again, if you change the coin it works and this happens throughout. You often see, on machines you may see scratch marks on the side and that is because sometimes people think that by adding some friction to the coin, it will accept it. Sometimes the coin is accepted.

1000 So I say, it is unfortunately something that happens quite frequently which is beyond our control in that respect, but we are looking at the actual issues as to why it happens to see where this can be corrected.

1005 It is also important to note that Gibraltar, although not totally unique in this respect, because other areas have this issue, but because we accept coins, UK Pounds sterling and we accept Euros, the hoop that is in the machine, the actual mechanism within, has to know and accept different weights and measures for particular coins. That is also something which is also a lot more complicated for machines technically than just a machine which deals in one currency. So that is another factor that we encounter.

1010 Hon. R M Clinton: Once again, I thank the Minister for what was a comprehensive answer, one final question because he referred to certain £1 coins. Has it been identified which particular coins? Can people be advised to use a particular kind of coin in these machines, whether it be a local coin or a UK coin as a preference?

1015 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, we are actually having difficulty to find out which coins. It seems that there are some of the local Gibraltar coins but not all of them. We have checked their weights and they were identical and the variance by law is miniscule, so miniscule that the weighing component of the machine would not be able to pick it up.

1020 So they are so specific it could be to do with a particular design which is perhaps on some of our coins and not on others. It is something that is not only experienced in our car park machines but is experienced in other machines unrelated to Government throughout Gibraltar.

Q892/2016
Midtown Car Park spaces –
Supplementary questions

Mr Speaker: Let us go back to – sorry.

1025 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, may I go back to 892 which is on the Midtown Car Park.

This is a question asked by my hon. Friend about how many parking spaces had been sold to individuals or companies in the Midtown Car Park and out of 1,011 car parks 456 had been sold to individuals or companies.

1030 Does the hon. Minister have the information as to how many have been rented out to individuals or companies, as opposed to just simply just sold?

Hon. P J Balban: Yes, Mr Speaker, we are currently letting out 131 spaces.

1035 Hon. D A Feetham: And does the Minister also have the information as to how many, if it is on top of that 131 and the 456 that have been sold, have actually been retained or required by the Government itself or Government owned companies or entities?

Hon. P J Balban: Not that we are aware of, Mr Speaker.

1040 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, thank you.

1045 Still on Question 892, the quick calculation I am doing is 1,011 parking spaces, 456 were sold, 131 on hire gives us a figure of 424. Is that the figure available now for daily use by the public or are there some parking spaces assigned for coaches. For example as you drive in you know that the ground and first floor are for coaches. Does that form part of those 424 or not?

1050 Hon. P J Balban: No, Mr Speaker, when we spoke about car parking spaces, we referred exclusively to car parking spaces and not coach parking spaces. The ground floor as you are aware are for the big 50 plus seaters and the first floor are for the mini coaches that operate the rock tours within Gibraltar.

When we were speaking the question from your side was targeting the actual car parking spaces and that is the reply that was given.

Q893/2016
Midtown Car Park machines –
Supplementary questions

1055 Mr Speaker: Arising from?

Hon. R M Clinton: Question 893.

1060 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I followed with interest the exchange with my colleague, the Hon. Mr Hammond and the Minister in relation to the problems with the coins going into machines. And purely perhaps as an aside, I would like the Minister to confirm whether he is aware that in March next year there will be a new 12-sided pound coin. This is obviously going to cause havoc throughout Gibraltar, and whether there are some plans in preparation for that.

1065 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, yes we are well aware on this side that there is a new £1 coin coming out and obviously we will prepare in advance for that eventuality. I believe the normal £1 pound coins, the round ones when they arrive at the bank or are taken to the bank, they will be held back and I would presume that probably the only logical way of progressing will be at one stage at one point in time, is to stop accepting the round £1 coins and only accepting the new 12-sided ones. Otherwise, we would end up with many currencies to accept and that will just throw machines off for sure.

1070 Hon. R M Clinton: And, Mr Speaker, and I really do risk incurring your wrath. The logical extension to the argument is obviously the Government itself locally will look to introduce the 12-sided local £1 coin. Obviously the Minister may not be able to answer that question.

1075 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, that is correct, the National Mint is looking at that so that our coins will be exactly the same as those in the UK.

Q894/2016

Parking area opposite Mid Harbours – Opening for public use over Christmas period

Clerk: Question 894, the Hon. T N Hammond.

1080

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, while the area lies fallow, has Government considered opening the parking area opposite Mid Harbours for public use during the Christmas period and beyond, if the area is not to be immediately developed?

1085

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, at present there is no intention for the area to be made available as parking.

1090

The area was ear-marked for a concert on 3rd December that was subsequently cancelled due to the heavy rains and it is intended that this be rescheduled in due course.

This area will also be used to help support the construction of the Three Kings Cavalcade floats during the next few weeks.

1095

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker. The Minister may or may not be able to answer this question, but is it envisaged that the ground will be broken at that site any time soon?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the answer remains as set out in the answers to an almost identical question at the last meeting in relation to that site.

1100

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, and to some extent the Minister may have answered this question already, but once the postponed concert has taken place and after the Cavalcade on 5th January, would the Government then consider perhaps allowing the parking area for use by the public?

1105

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is unlikely that that area will remain vacant for very long.

Q895/2016

Parking fees – Increase

Clerk: Question 895, the Hon. T N Hammond.

1110

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, has there been a rise in the parking fees paid to Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd or any other Government-owned company or agency for the renting of parking spaces and if so, by how much of the fees risen for each of the areas for which Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd or any other Government-owned company or agency is responsible?

1115

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, to date the answer is no. However, subscribers have recently been given written notice that fees shall be increased as from 1st February 2017.

1120 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister indicate how much of an increase fees are anticipated to rise as from 1st February 2017 as a percentage of the fees currently paid?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, this is in line with the cost of living increases. So we have taken –

1125

Mr Speaker: Then it is practically nothing. (Laughter)

Hon. P J Balban: So as I said, it is to do with the cost of living increase.

1130 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, the cost of living generally has been increasing by less than 1% or at around 1%. So can I infer from that, that the rise will be approximately 1%?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the rise will take into consideration when the prices were set originally. So the new rates of parking will take into account the cost of living from that point in time over the years, so it is accumulative.

Hon. T N Hammond: In which case, Mr Speaker, can the Minister clarify for me, from which point of time I can refer back to?

1140 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, when they were originally set. I do not think I have the exact date they were set, but these were set ... in fact I do, 2009. So it is since 2009 that they were last set by the previous administration.

There has been no increase since then so the increases are in line with what would be expected due to the cost of living increases since that date.

1145

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, my understanding is that the costs will therefore be somewhere between 20% and 30% of what is currently paid. Is that correct? (Interjection)

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, round about roughly around 10%.

1150

Q896/2016
South District parking provision –
Plans for additional facilities

Clerk: Question 896, the Hon. T N Hammond.

1155

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, what additional parking facilities does Government intend to provide in the South District and when does it intend to provide them?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

1160

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, there are currently a number of plans to provide additional parking spaces in the South District. The Government is reviewing expressions of interest received in June of this year from developers, investors, or organisations for the development of a plot of land at Rosia Lane. It is expected that this would lead to the creation of additional parking in the area.

1165

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Minister know perhaps approximately how many additional parking spaces that may provide at Rosia Lane?

1170 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, we are currently looking at all the expressions of interest to come to a final decision so we are not in a position to know – (Interjection) and there are different combinations, different options available. Some will provide more parking spaces, some will provide less parking spaces but the expressions of interest were actually set out in that way. What the Government wanted was to be able to have parking spaces that would contribute to what is available in the area.

1175

Q897/2016
Residents' parking scheme –
Roll-out programme

Clerk: Question 897, the Hon. T N Hammond.

1180 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the Minister describe the next phase of the roll-out programme for the residents' parking scheme and which area the roll-out programme will affect?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

1185

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government is currently working on a residential parking scheme for the area of Alameda Estate and Grand Parade. The scheme will see the introduction of a combination of exclusive residents' parking areas, free parking and pay-and-display areas. The intention of the scheme is to improve the chances of parking for residents of the area, whilst at the same time recognising the needs of visitors and other users of the area.

1190

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, a Utopian vision of parking, I must say. But can the Minister apply any more detail as to how that is going to be achieved? Because yes, that would be an ideal solution clearly in helping visitors, allowing residents to find parking, all the things that everybody wants.

But can the Minister provide any detail as to how that will be achieved and indeed when it will be achieved and where. Because I understand the plan is not to implement it over the entirety of Gibraltar in one go but to take measured steps. So could the Minister describe those steps please?

1200

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I think that this is as close to Utopia as we can get. If we compare this scheme to the one that we saw back in 2011 which we actually had to put a stop to because of the complaints that we received and the comments regarding the lack of visitors parking, we thought that was very relevant.

1205

The old scheme did not provide parking space for people who wanted to come and visit and we have gone through this on a number of occasions – family members wanting to come and visit, commercial vehicles that wanted to deliver etc. So in terms of Utopia, we will not strike Utopia with parking. It will be a very difficult balance to actually get right, that we are clear about.

But at this moment in time we are not in a position to be able to give you further details. This is something that is extremely complicated, we have been at it very thoroughly, a lot of work has been done with the plan and we will make an announcement very shortly when we are ready to do so.

Q898/2016
Road resurfacing programme –
Outline for next six months

1215

Clerk: Question 898, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the Minister outline the road resurfacing programme for the next six months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, a tender for the current phase of the Government's resurfacing programme was authorised in late September 2016. The tender is currently being reviewed and an award is expected shortly with a view of works commencing in the New Year.

1225

This phase of works will see the complete resurfacing of the northern end of Cumberland Road as well as of the Sundial Roundabout. During the current year to date, resurfacing works have been carried out along Queensway and Reclamation Road by the Mid-Town Car Park and along Europort Avenue from Charles Bruzon House to its junction with Queensway.

1230

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the Minister recognise that certainly with the recent rains in particular, a lot of the road surfaces have been very badly damaged by that rain and will remedial action be taken? I refer in particular to the area between the runway at the Frontier now which is very much falling to pieces quite frankly, there are large potholes there and indeed up to the Sundial Roundabout which I understand is to be programmed.

1235

There are many other areas that need to be looked at. Is there any way that an acceleration of a programme can be implemented or some remedial action taken with some urgency to fix some of these areas? Because really, if you are on two wheels for any reason, whether that be on a moped or a bicycle, currently many of the road surfaces are virtually impassable.

1240

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, rains in Gibraltar of that type, although not uncommon do often catch us by surprise and the devastating effects that these rains have on our roads is clearly evident. It is impossible for us to be able to rush out and fix everything in one given moment in time but remedial works have been carried out already to date of those areas which were exceptionally bad and we will continue to do so.

1245

That is not part of our highways resurfacing programme, that is something that can happen in December, it can happen in February, and that is taken more in terms of emergency works and we fix and repair these dangerous or uneven potholes as and when they surface.

1250

As I say it is an ongoing process where we attack the worse potholes first and move on from there as we have been doing.

Q899/2016
Chief Minister's G1 Tesla –
Servicing and repairs

Clerk: Question 899, the Hon. R M Clinton.

1255

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise who currently has the contract to service the Chief Minister's G1 Tesla and are the repairs and servicing undertaken in Gibraltar and at what cost?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

1260 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, all repairs and services are performed in Gibraltar by Bassadone Motors in conjunction with Tesla Motors. The cost of repairs will vary, depending on the works required from time to time.

Clerk: Question 900, the Hon. R M Clinton.

1265

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, may I return to Question 899 just briefly, a supplementary? (Interjection by Mr Speaker) Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Coming back to 899 in respect of the Tesla, is there any other service provider in Gibraltar who would be able to service the Tesla?

1270

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member must realise that such an advanced car has a system whereby most of the issues surrounding the Tesla are diagnosed remotely and fixed from wherever Tesla fixes the car and I think the closest place is Bordeaux in France, if I am not mistaken. So most of the issues can be looked at and investigated on line.

1275

In fact Tesla knows exactly where that vehicle is, what is happening, if that Tesla suffers an accident or if it has any issues whatsoever with components, electrical components or whatever. The moment that car rolls into the garage, the mechanics know exactly what the issues are with it.

1280

Hon. R M Clinton: So, Mr Speaker, would I be correct in interpreting what the Hon. Minister has said is that Bassadone Motors would be the only service provider in Gibraltar able to service the Tesla?

1285

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, Bassadone Motors are the suppliers and the agents of the vehicle so it is logical to assume that it would go back to them for any works required.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND THE GSB

Q900/2016

Retail Price Index –

Reason for October increase

Clerk: Question 900, the Hon. R M Clinton.

1290

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain why the Retail Price Index at 1st October 2016 has risen to 1.5% whereas it was 0.1% at 1st January, 0.4% at 1st April and 0.5% at 1st July 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

1300 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Yes, Mr Speaker. It is because in the third quarter of last year, there was a 0.5% drop in the index, whereas in the same quarter of this year, there has been a 0.5% increase. The annual rate is therefore from a lower base. The 1% difference in the quarterly rate in 2016 compared to 2015 explains why the 12-month rate goes up from 0.5% in July to 1.5% in October.

1305 Hon. R M Clinton: I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for his answer. He is obviously aware of the various components of the Retail Price Index. Is there any particular component in there, because obviously it is very difficult for me to work out what the impact is of any particular increase if I do not have the weightings of the various components in the Retail Price Index?

1310 Is there anything in there, alcoholic drink, tobacco, clothing, footwear, durable household goods, food, housing, other goods, services, transport and vehicles, which in his view, or in the view of the Statistics Office, has actually contributed to this increase in the Retail Price Index?

1315 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I think there have been two factors. One has been the value of the pound and the other one has been the price of the oil which fell dramatically earlier and has now recovered to something like $50 a barrel. So transport costs is one area that has actually gone up, the prices in transport and vehicles went up by 1.8% between July and October and that compared with a decrease of 2.5% in the preceding year. So a significant part of the minus 0.5% and the plus 0.5% has been that change. If you think in that particular component, that is 1.8% up this year and it was 2.5% down last year. I think the biggest element in the total has come from that area.

1320 But currency effects – taking into account, for example, given that our main imports come first from UK and then the second biggest supplier to Gibraltar is Spain and other Eurozone countries, the exchange rate makes a big difference independent of the level of prices that are going up at source.

1325 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for that. Does he have any feel for whether inflation is going to creep up any further or is there any kind of indication that there might be increases in costs coming ahead. It may be difficult with these obviously retrospective statistics whether he has any feel for the current statistics?

1330 Hon. J J Bossano: I do not have any formal input from my statistics office on this but my own view is that inflation is likely to be higher in 2017 than it has been in 2016. That is what I would expect.

Q901-908/2016

Gibraltar Savings Bank –

GAR Ltd property purchase; Public Accounts and Public Debt

1335 Clerk: Question 901, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, has the Government used or intends to use GAR Ltd as a vehicle to raise external borrowings secured on its property?

1340 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer this question, Mr Speaker, with Questions 902 to 908.

1345 Clerk: Question 902, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide a list of all properties purchased by GAR Ltd from the Government or Government-owned companies and the consideration paid for each?

1350 Clerk: Question 903, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise when it intends to Gazette the audited accounts for the Gibraltar Savings Bank for the year ended 31st March 2016?

1355 Clerk: Question 904, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise when the audited accounts of the Gibraltar Savings Bank for the year ended 31st March 2015 were gazetted?

1360 Clerk: Question 905, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise how total liquid reserves are invested/held, giving details of all bank/savings bank accounts and cash held for 1st November 2016?

1365 Clerk: Question 906, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise the total liquid reserves figure and its constituents, namely Consolidated Fund, Improvement Development Fund, Government Owned Companies, Deposits, Contingencies and other Funds, for 1st November 2016?

Clerk: Question 907, the Hon. R M Clinton.

1375 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide the total Gross Debt, Aggregate Debt after application of the Sinking Fund to Gross Debt, Cash Reserves and Net Debt figures for Public Debt as at 1st November 2016?

Clerk: Question 908, the Hon. R M Clinton.

1380 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise what dividend has been paid to the Government and the Gibraltar Savings Bank by GibTelecom in respect of the respective holdings of A and B shares for its Financial Year ended 31st December 2015?

1385 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, as regards the total liquid reserves composition, where, when and how these are invested on a particular date chosen by the Hon. Member opposite, the position continues to be as previously stated.

The position of the Public Debt on 1st November 2016 is as it was estimated on 1st October 2016 except that the cash reserves are now estimated at £77 million and the net debt at £369 million.

1395 The audited accounts of the Gibraltar Savings Bank will be published in the Gazette after the annual audited accounts of the Government have been published.

The Government does not provide details of the commercial activities of Government companies.

1400 As regards the dividends, in 2015 £4 million was paid to the Gibraltar Savings Bank and £2.1 million was paid to the Government.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the hon. Member for his answers and again, Mr Speaker, I beg your indulgence while I go through his answers.

1405 In respect of the Gibraltar Savings Bank, do I understand the Hon. Minister correctly that the audited accounts for 31st March 2015 are not going to be gazetted but yet the Principal Auditor's Report has already been published with the accounts for that year? I know the Principal Auditor has actually completed his audit for the 2015 and 2016 accounts as he says in his report, so am I correct in saying that the 2015 accounts of the Savings Bank have not been gazetted?

1410 Hon. J J Bossano: They have not been gazetted, no. They will likely be gazetted in early 2017. But of course they are public and available because the audited accounts were tabled recently in the House.

1415 Hon. R M Clinton: Does the Hon. Minister not find it somewhat inconsistent that the Principal Auditor's report will come out before the audited accounts are available in that, I know the Act itself says 'as soon as practical after the Principal Auditor has finished his work', but does he not have a time period in mind, given the public interest in the Savings Bank, of say three or six months to actually gazette them, as has been the practice in the past?

1420 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I do not think it is inconsistent because the fact that it is public ... I do not think people go round avidly waiting for the Gazette to find out what is in it. Maybe he and I do but I doubt that there are many other Gibraltarians doing it.

1425 The answer is there is no limit laid down in the law. There is a limit to the time after the Auditor has audited that I get it and the policy I have adopted is that when the whole of the accounts are made public, it is after that date that I think it should go into the Gazette.

But there is no limit. In the past, I can tell the hon. Member that these things have never been overlooked, and years have gone by before they were gazetted because there is no time limit.

1430 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would invite the hon. Member to consider whether to introduce an amendment into the Savings Bank Act to set a time limit, not just for this Government but for any future Government so as to make it perhaps more applicable to the modern age we live in?

1435 Hon. J J Bossano: I would think, Mr Speaker, that in the modern age we live in, things would not be put in the Gazette at all actually. (Laughter) And certainly, if it was necessary to do it earlier, they had an opportunity to put it in there for 15 years and even if I put it there, there would be no guarantee that if they come back they would keep it there, since they chose not to have it in the 15 years they were there before.

So the answer is no.

1445 Hon. R M Clinton: Finally, Mr Speaker, (Laughter) on the subject of the Savings Bank, by all means certainly posting them online would be good, but does the Minister have any intention of producing any glossy type financial statements as was produced at the time of the General Election for the Savings Bank?

1450 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I do not necessarily agree that it was glossy compared to what other company accounts are like. I try to make mine as modest as possible and as economic as possible. But it is the intention to send a copy to all the depositors, yes. It is just that we have not got around to doing it but it is going to happen.

1455 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, just coming back to GAR Ltd, having looked at the properties that have been transferred into it, am I correct in saying that the Minister will not give any further information in respect of any property holdings it has and is he saying that he will neither confirm nor deny whether GAR Ltd may or may not be used to raise external finance?

1460 Hon. J J Bossano: That seems to me a reasonable deduction from the answer that I have given him.

1465 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, moving to Question 908 in respect of GibTelecom, can the Minister advise, as he indicated that the A and the B shares seem to have received a different level of dividend, have the memorandum and articles of association of the company been changed, to his knowledge, so that they have different rights or is this just a dividend declaration that decided that a certain class of the shares should receive a higher dividend? My understanding was that they ranked equally.

1470 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, the reason why the figures that I have given the hon. Member are the way they are is because the calendar year, which is what he has asked for, does not coincide with the financial year and therefore the dividend that is paid to the Government is ... I have given him the answer to the question that he asked in the way that he asked it.

1475 Since he wanted the information based in the year to December, in the year to December that is the dividend that was received respectively by each side. But he needs to understand that the way that GibTel pays its dividend is that it actually pays the dividends in arrears and not in the year when the profits arise.

So there is no other particular significance.

Q909-911/2016

Government construction projects – Numbers and categories of workers

Clerk: Question 909, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1480 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state how many (a) Gibraltarians; (b) resident non-Gibraltarians and (c) foreign non-residents are working in Government construction projects, either on behalf of a Government contractor or their sub-contractors?

1485 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question with Questions 910 and 911.

Clerk: Question 910, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1495 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please state how many (a) Gibraltarians; (b) resident non-Gibraltarians and (c) foreign non-residents are working in the Laguna, Glacis and Moorish Castle Estate Government projects, either on behalf of a Government contractor or their sub-contractors?

Clerk: Question 911, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1500 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide a list of Government contractors and their sub-contractors working on Glacis, Moorish Castle and Laguna Government projects?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

1505 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the Government does not keep a record of where construction companies have their employees classified by nationality, residence or indeed at all. Except that when a specialist Spanish sub-contractor undertakes works, they normally bring their work force who also are Frontier Workers.

1510 As is publicly known, the main contractor of the three estates is GJBS who currently have 19 Gibraltarians, four residents and one frontier worker on site.

The sub-contractors on site are Endash Ltd; General Lifts; Workforce Ltd; Jamena Ltd, In-line Framing Construction Ltd; and Fill-a-skip Ltd.

1515 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in the light of the answer that the hon. Gentleman has provided, how does he keep tabs on the number of Gibraltarians that are actually working on these three Government flagship projects, given that it is obviously desirable that as many Gibraltarians as possible are working on Government projects?

1520 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the tabs are kept through the approved contractor list. With the approved contractor list, what we try to do is maximise the number of Gibraltarians and other Gibraltarian residents, which is what the policy is and what the policy was when it was announced in 2010 by their administration.

1525 And it is not on which side they happen to be. We do not keep tabs because construction companies move workers from one site to another unless they are specialists. If somebody is coming to do a specialist work on a site, then they come in, they bring their workers, they do the work and they disappear.

1530 If we are talking about general construction work, then the reality of it is that if any of these sub-contractors that are private companies have got a mix between local and frontier workers or between Gibraltarians and non-Gibraltarians, on any one day, this is the most recent figure taking a spot photograph of who was on the site that day. The next day there could be more people or less than the day before that because it is not that people are fixed on the site all the time, they move them between sites, obviously within their trade.

1535 Hon. D A Feetham: No, I understand that, and of course one of the indicators would be the number of Gibraltarians that are employed by the approved contractors on the approved contractors list which we introduced and they continued.

1540 But is he satisfied, looking at the proportion of – because he must have these figures – Gibraltarians employed by those approved contractors, to foreign workers and in this case probably frontier workers, that the proportion of Gibraltarians has increased or that the proportion of Gibraltarians is satisfactory, certainly in the time that he has been in charge of this particular area.

1545 Hon. J J Bossano: Well I think it is information that the hon. Member already has from the employment survey reports and the employment survey reports show that since October 2011 in the subsequent years, independent of the fluctuations in the size of the construction industry, the Gibraltarian component has been moving only in one direction.

So for example the percentage is deceiving because of course when the construction sector has shrunk, it has shrunk by losing frontier workers. The percentage of Gibraltarians have 1550 sometimes increased dramatically because there have been less Frontier Workers, not necessarily because there has been more Gibraltarians.

But the trend is that in the cycle of the construction industry, for example I expect that this year's October figures for the construction sector will be less than last year's, because the area [Inaudible] knows are the areas that have been completed. But I suspect that that reduction will be predominantly in frontier workers and that therefore the proportion of Gibraltarians in the construction industry is certainly higher now than it was in 2011 and will continue in my view, to be higher when the October 2016 figures show than they were previously.

1560 So the answer is the trend goes in that direction but as I have explained to the Member opposite, the main emphasis both of the training that we do and of the companies that take on the trainees, is in maintenance rather than in new-build and for a very simple reason: new-build has a start and a finish and if people were engaging new-build in a place like Spain or in the UK people specialise and if they are brick layers they only lay bricks. When the bricks are laid on one side they just go to another and do brickwork.

1565 We are training our people to do maintenance because the more buildings there are the more there will be a maintenance industry in construction which will be growing because the pool of buildings to be maintained gets bigger all the time. We believe that is where predominantly the resident workforce will have to be and that is what we are training them for, to be there.

1570 Hon. D A Feetham: In relation to the approved contractors on the approved contractors list, is there a proportion of locals that are required to be employed by those companies in those lists? How is that basically determined? How does the Government look upon that and deal with that?

1575 Hon. J J Bossano: We are carrying on with the scheme that they initiated, so there was never any proportion introduced in that scheme in the first place and we have not introduced a proportion. Nor do we think that rationally it is possible to determine a proportion because it depends on the nature of the work that the company is doing.

1580 What we have is a situation wherein Government contractors on the approved contractor list would normally not be allowed to take on unskilled workers if there are unskilled workers unemployed and registered as seeking employment and willing to work in the construction industry. They would normally be required to take on people who have already done their Level 1 and are doing their Level 2 but there we are constrained by the content of the course that the trainees are required to follow. So the people who are now doing Level 2 for example in the wet trades or somebody is doing Level 2 in carpentry, has got to actually do the kind of work on the site that is laid down by City and Guilds.

1585 So the influence we can exercise on our side is determined by the suitability of the employer that can provide the kind of work that the apprentice needs to demonstrate he has done so that the assessor goes on site and sees the work that has been done and that is a portfolio of his work and that is how he then gets his Level 2 in construction.

1595 But in overall terms, if it unskilled or semiskilled then there is no minimum percentage or maximum percentage. As far as we are concerned if we have got the people that is what they are required to take on. And people are co-operating but frankly, I think it is not a straightforward exercise because if people are willing to take them on and the effect of that is that the apprentice is going to have problems in completing his Level 2, the apprentice is not very keen to go there and we are not very keen to put him there.

1600 We have got a particular problem where certain companies in Gibraltar employ almost entirely one nationality and there is a language problem. Therefore an apprentice that does not speak a third language other than English and Spanish, I do not want to pinpoint the company, has a problem of communication so they are not very keen to be there, even though the company is happy to accept them, the trainees are not keen to be in a context where they have got a problem of communication like that.

So far we have not found an answer to that problem.

1605 Hon. D A Feetham: How does he explain, and this is not intended as a criticism of Government policy, everybody really tries their best in relation to this. I know they were very critical of us, we would say we tried at the time and I accept that the hon. Gentleman tries himself in relation to this and indeed feels passionately, as I do about this issue.

1610 But how does he explain, for example, that I get people that come to my surgeries and tell me, 'Look, I am prepared to work anywhere and I am prepared to work in construction sites', and I had a kid say to me, 'I open the windows every morning at Moorish Castle and I see foreign workers working on the site – all I want is to have a job and to be able to help my mum over Christmas'?

1615 How does he explain that somebody like that and there are a number of people who are willing to work in the construction industry, cannot actually get into the construction industry, not necessarily as trainees, completely unskilled, in circumstances where they are willing to do it and in circumstances where there are many frontier workers working in Gibraltar in those sites?

1620 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, the simple answer is that it should not be happening. It is as simple as that. We require an approved contractor that opens a vacancy for a labourer to take a labourer that is unemployed that is resident or a Gibraltarian or another nationality, but certainly we do not allow contractors to work on Government contracts – not just in the construction. For example, if there is a security company and the security company wants to employ non-Gibraltarian labour which they frequently do, then we require them to put in the contract that that worker will not be used on a Government site if we have got available workers and they have not taken them on.

1630 So the answer is that the hon. Member has actually approached me directly in some cases and I have immediately acted on it and made sure that the person concerned was given the opportunity to be taken on by different construction companies and in some cases, what we do is, we actually provide a financial incentive. If there are people that have got personal problems which are considered to limit their opportunity for getting work, sometimes because in a place like Gibraltar, as we all know, everybody knows everybody and somebody then carries his whole history with him in Gibraltar whereas somebody can come across the frontier and be a serial killer and nobody would be any the wiser here. So what we do is, we actually say, 'Well look, let us say that you are going to give him training to become a semi-skilled worker and we will then provide you with funding for two or three months in order to make it financially more attractive but you take the local one'.

1635 But certainly, I am quite open to any ideas that I have not thought of and put them to the test if it will increase the take-up, because as far as I am concerned, the commitment is 100%.

1640 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the hon. Gentleman ... ? The young boy that I spoke to him about, he has not received a call and I would appreciate it. It would be a wonderful Christmas present for him and his family if he did receive a call.

1645 Hon. J J Bossano: Certainly I will first find out why it has not happened, because I was under the impression it had happened already.

Q912/2016

Calpe House building in Norfolk Square – Discovery of asbestos

Clerk: Question 912, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1650 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Does the Government have any intention of launching an investigation into the circumstances surrounding the discovery of asbestos in the new Calpe House building in Norfolk Square, after the purchase had already taken place?

1655 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): No, Mr Speaker.

1660 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I ask this question because it appears that there are some very serious discrepancies between Mr Albert Poggio's words on this matter. On the one hand we have a non-intrusive survey which took place, because we were told by Mr Poggio that the survey was restricted due to regulations and yet on the other hand, when we look at the Health and Safety Executive Guidelines, they say quite the opposite.

1665 The HSE highly recommends that, when buying a Grade II listed building, that intrusive and thorough checks take place with regard to asbestos management and I quote, 'a very much higher standard of care must be applied.'

1670 So there are questions, Mr Speaker, which concern an entire community which spends most of its time during the year raising money for Calpe House, who have raised a lot of money for our very sick patients who end up in Calpe House and all of a sudden we find that it seems that a purchase was made at any cost without the proper checks. Questions such as 'who was restricting the survey?', because apparently it would have been the duty holder who had the duty to ensure that an intrusive survey took place.

1675 I think these discrepancies are of huge public interest and I think the Government should reconsider sending someone from Gibraltar like a project manager from No. 6 to find out exactly why a purchase which affects the entire community was made without the thorough checks.

1680 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I am of course very close to Calpe House as the hon. Member may know, because the initial idea was launched way back in 1988-89. We are all giving £100 a month of our money to Calpe House, so we have got a personal interest in making sure that that money is being well spent for what it is intended.

1685 But of course this is a private charity that is independent of the Government and it is not the Government that has to do an investigation because that would imply that we do not trust the trustees, we do not trust the people who are doing it and that they require to be investigated. In fact, when the matter was brought up with the trust, the trust did carry out its own investigation. The level of asbestos is the kind of level of asbestos that you would expect in any building anywhere in London and it has been identified and it has been put right and it has cost I am told, £125,000 which means that in the cost of the building of £9 million, there could not have been much asbestos there because it was £125,000.

1690 Nevertheless, the people that are engaged professionally by the trust are looking into the matter to see if there was any negligence amongst the professionals that they engaged to do this work and the £125,000 can be recovered if there is a legal case for recovering it. But the charity has carried out a thorough investigation itself and it is satisfied that there is nobody that can be held responsible for not having found the asbestos at an earlier stage in the construction.

1695 Sometimes you have to decide whether you are going to spend a lot more money doing a much more thorough thing and you then take advice and the advice that you get is look, it will cost you £x to do a survey of this level and twice £x ... and if the risk of finding asbestos is considered to be below a certain level then a judgement is made to do a less thorough assessment because it would have cost us considerably more than the £125,000 it has cost to 1700 put it right, if we had done a Rolls Royce assessment from day one on the building.

And when I say 'we', I mean the Calpe House people and that is the explanation that they have given me because I have obviously contacted them in order to be able to provide any further information which I am only able to provide because they have been good enough to give it to me. But they are an independent charity, I can say that I continue to support them, I 1705 continue to urge people to support them and I continue to put £100 out of my own pocket every month. I believe it is still worth supporting the charity, notwithstanding that they have had to spend £125,000 out of the £9.5 million put in, by the asbestos thing.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, it is absolutely worth supporting and this is exactly 1710 why I have such a concern about the discrepancies raised by the very person who was engaged in making this purchase and this is why things do not add up.

The other thing that does not add up is that in the architect's website, it says that the client is the Government of Gibraltar and the Calpe Charitable Trust and in the amendment of the lease, it says that this purchase is supported by HMGOG and the Calpe House Charitable Trust.

1715 So there is no way that the Government can shirk off responsibilities of a purchase which was made full of discrepancies and doubts, and it is precisely because it is such a worthy cause that I am bringing it up. And when we talk about risk, I think that there should be zero risk. The irony –

Mr Speaker: The hon. Lady must realise that although this is a matter of great public interest, 1720 we cannot have a debate at Question Time.

I have allowed her to make lengthy explanations and preamble because it is a matter of interest, but I think she must direct a question to Government. Having regard to the fact that she has mentioned that in the something or other the Government is mentioned, she is quite entitled to pursue that and ask the Government, 'does the Government therefore not consider 1725 that they have some kind of public duty?' But what we cannot have is exchanges which are by way of a debate. We can have questions and we can have answers.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, sorry about that and thank you for your intervention.

1730 Basically the question is: considering the fact that we are sending our most vulnerable, most of which we are sending cancer patients to a property which was ridden with asbestos, the irony of it I think merits an investigation so that these type of discrepancies and purchases which could affect our very vulnerable do not happen again.

1735 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, certainly it will not happen again because we are not going to have a third Calpe House being bought, certainly not for a very long time. And in any case, the hon.
Member seems to be rather ignorant of how this works. We are not actually sending patients into a building site at the moment; we are sending them into the existing Calpe House which has no asbestos that we know of, although we never did an asbestos survey in 1988 when we 1740 bought it. People were not as sensitive in 1988 as they are now and if it has asbestos then it has had asbestos since 1988 and our patients do not seem to have been affected.

Because you can have asbestos in a building and as long as you do not touch it, you are okay.
It is only when you start removing asbestos that people require to have special protection because the asbestos that goes into the air is the asbestos that goes into your lungs. So it is in the process of demolishing things that sometimes you find that there is asbestos where you did 1745 not expect it to be.

1750 When you do an initial survey of a building, then you look at where there is probability that there may be asbestos and you do a survey of the building and you look in all the places where you would expect asbestos to be and that will cost you £x. You can say, 'Well look, I want to do a survey that makes it impossible for there to be asbestos without my knowing beforehand' and then instead of spending £x you spend 20 x £x.

1755 The way that most people that do buildings operate is that they do a survey that is reasonable to do and then if they come across the unexpected, they spend money putting it right. The money that has been spent to putting this right has been £125,000 and it has taken something like three weeks to put right. So it is not that the place was riddled by asbestos as the hon. Member opposite seems to think from what she has read about it, because in fact if that were the case, then the cost would have been considerably higher and the time taken to put it right considerably longer.

1760 So what I am telling her is that the Government will not launch an investigation, because an investigation has been carried out by the trustees and the trustees are satisfied with the result, they have produced the necessary evidence, they are now looking only to see if the cost that has been incurred can be attributed to insufficient professional activity from the people that were engaged to do the surveys initially, or the people who were engaged to the contraction and if the responsibility can be, if the finger can be pointed at who made the mistake at an earlier stage and did not identify it, if it was possible to identify, then they will take the necessary legal advice as to whether somebody can be pursued for the recovery of the £125,000.

1770 As far as the Government is concerned, the Government is satisfied that the trust has done everything that it needed to do to make sure that the little amount of asbestos that was found has been removed and that there is no risk at all that there will be a finished Calpe House receiving patients, full of asbestos, which will result in the patients getting sicker by going into Calpe House than they were before they left Gibraltar.

1775 It is complete nonsense to suggest that is a potential risk resulting from the fact that in the basement of a building you found asbestos when you were doing the building. That has no connection with where the patients will be when the building is finished in the future. When the building is finished in the future, there will be no trace of asbestos anywhere in the building.

1780 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, is it of no concern to the Minister that the agent buying this property on our behalf said that he was restricted by surveys when the Health and Safety Executive specifically recommends that intrusive surveys have to be made on Grade II listed buildings in terms of how we do our things and how we carry out our business?

1785 Hon. J J Bossano: Well I do not pretend to be as knowledgeable about construction or asbestos as the hon. Lady appears to be. I am relying entirely on what the people engaged to do this work report and on the results of the investigation. And the results of the investigation are that they have concluded that the level of asbestos that was found was identified, it was put right, it was removed and that it has cost £125,000.

1790 The argument of the hon. Lady is 'why was it not found earlier?' Well, partly because it would have cost more to do a more thorough search than what it has cost to put it right. But it has nothing to do with what is going to happen or not happen to patients that are sent to Calpe House in future when the place is finished and ready to be occupied.

1795 So whatever it is, if there was anybody in danger, the only people in danger were the construction workers in the building which is when the asbestos was found in the course of construction. This is not a unique situation; it happens in many old buildings that where you least expect it, you find asbestos. It happens everywhere in Gibraltar when you go to a building that is over 100 years old.

But the fact is that the people who are responsible for health and safety require protection to be provided and action to be taken when it is discovered. Because when it is discovered is when you have got to say you cannot just barge in and start. It happens, we have had situations very 1800 recently where in one particular site people were taking on frontier workers who had been taking off asbestos sheeting and dumping them on a lorry as if it did not make any difference, putting their own health at risk and the risk of health of everybody in the vicinity because this stuff goes into the air.

1805 But this building is being done in the United Kingdom, under the United Kingdom controls on the laws that apply to building sites and nobody has suggested that they were breaking UK law and no Health and Safety Inspector in the UK has come in and reported anybody for breaking the law.

1810 The reality of it is that it would have been preferable if there had not been this asbestos found because the £125,000 would not have been spent, but I think it is being blown out of proportion by the way this thing was actually put into the public domain. And it does, you are not doing anything for the benefit of the charity by suggesting that we are going to be sending patients in the future into a building that is ridden with asbestos but which will have been finished with the asbestos still in it and would have been allowed by the authorities in London to have continued to be operating and housing people with asbestos.

1815 Even if we wanted to do it, which would be a very stupid thing to do, we would not be allowed to do it by them. So you know the entire concept of people being at risk is entirely hypothetical and in fact completely false and wrong.

1820 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, with respect I feel like the hon. Gentleman is not answering my question. Instead he is diverting on a message that I am suggesting that people are going to be housed in a building full of asbestos and suffer another type of illness.

1825 What I was saying was the irony of the fact that we are supposed to be caring for our sick, while we buy a building without doing the proper checks and balances, and my question is again, which the hon. Gentleman has not answered, is he satisfied about the way that we carry out our business in a way which is contravening to the recommended guidelines on a matter of such public importance?

1830 Hon. J J Bossano: I do not accept that that is what she is asking. That is what she has just asked now, because she has talked about sending the patients there in a place where there is asbestos.

1835 And I do not accept that the Government has got a responsibility to supervise the building, because we have full confidence in the trustees and in the charitable trust and in the fantastic work they have been doing over the years for patients from Gibraltar.

1840 As far as I am concerned, what she wants me to do is to put in doubt the professionalism or the integrity of the people concerned and I will not do that because I do not agree with her. And I will not carry out an investigation because it has already been investigated. I trust the people that have investigated it and I believe the results they have come out with and there is no asbestos there any more. So what is it that she wants us to do? I think she is just stirring it up for the sake of getting attention.

1845 Mr Speaker: Any other supplementaries?

1850 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just on this particular issue, and indeed may I say before I ask the question, I think that at some stage, or it may well be that it is still there, that some estates like Varyl Begg for example had asbestos and as long as one did not attempt to remove it or work with it, people lived there and nobody was decanted.

1855 But the question is this: is it that the survey that was originally done in relation to the new building did not pick up the fact that there was asbestos in the building and therefore presumably that could potentially lead to a professional negligence action against the people who did the survey, or was it that they never undertook the type of survey that would have picked it up?

There is a difference between the two. And of course in relation to the former, I take the point that the hon. Gentleman has made that if it is going to cost you £125,000 to instruct lawyers in London to take proceedings in relation to that, it is going to cost you much more and that has got to be weighed up. But I am not clear which one it is, the former or the latter.

1855

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I think if it was missed out then probably there is somebody who did not do the job as thoroughly as he should have done, and therefore if it is not pursued it is because the cost of pursuing it would be more than what we would eventually get if we won. When I say 'we', I mean the charity. So I think that is the way they are looking at it. But they are considering that possibility but that depends on the professional and technical advice that they get, whether the survey that was done should have picked it up.

1860

What I can tell him is that from my own knowledge of how these surveys are done, having been in the construction myself, amongst the many things I have done, the reality of it is that when you employ somebody to do that kind of survey you decide how high and how thorough you want it to be and there is a price to be paid.

1865

Therefore you get advice that 'Look, we can look in every nook and cranny and spend six months and that will cost you a million quid; or, we can look at where it is 90% likely that if there is it would be in such and such a place and that will cost you considerably less.' What they did was what was standard for that type of building with that age in that location. No more than the standard which is what was recommended at the time and that is what was done. It was not that somebody recommended something and it was overruled or anything like that, because then there would have been a record of that having happened. To my knowledge, there is no such record.

1870

So, it is regrettable that it was there, it can happen with any building unless you decide to spend more on the investigating if there is asbestos than you spend on the building itself, which is not recommendable and it has been identified and it has been put right. Therefore the investigation has been carried out by the trust as far as I am concerned it has been investigated successfully and with a successful result, the removal of the asbestos at a relatively low cost compared to the size of the contract for the building.

1875

There is nothing left to investigate and we are not going to re-investigate what has already been investigated once.

Q913/2016

Calpe House building in Norfolk Square – Government role in purchase

Clerk: Question 913, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government clarify the nature of its role in the acquisition of the new Calpe House premises in Norfolk Square?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the Government's role in the acquisition of the new Calpe House premises in Norfolk Square has been to give the charity whatever support and assistance they require, including financial support, to which I referred in my Budget speech in 2015.

1895 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, once again I draw attention to the architect's website where it clearly states that the client is HM Government of Gibraltar and the Calpe House Trust and to the amendment to a deed which again says HM Government of Gibraltar.

Therefore I ask whether the Minister might want to review that answer, given that on print it says differently.

1900 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, the Government approved the purchase, we agreed a soft loan, the Financial Secretary was involved in the advising of the purchase negotiations, the Chief Technical Officer of the Government of Gibraltar was fully briefed on the refurbishment and the GHA, the Occupational Therapy and the Sponsored Patients' Departments were fully engaged on what the project was intended to achieve. That is the whole of the involvement we have had.

Ultimately, we are involved in something that is an independent charity.

1910 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Minister, the nature of this soft loan, was it via the Improvement and Development Fund and maybe I can find it if I look for it? And secondly, is this loan secured on the property?

1915 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, there was an initial loan which was without security and that has been replaced by a loan by a bank in the United Kingdom secured on the property. And what we have provided in the I&D Fund which I asked the Members opposite to support in the Budget of 2015 was a provision and I said parallel to that that we do when we provide soft loans for the housing estates, for home owner estates, where what we do is we provide the difference between the commercial rate of servicing the loan, and the soft loan element being that we in effect contribute to the cost.

1920 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am not sure if I understood the hon. Gentleman correctly. The commercial bank that stood in and is now providing the loan secured on the premises, that loan is to whom, to the Calpe Trust or to the Government?

1925 Hon. J J Bossano: It is not to the Government, obviously. (Interjection by Hon. R M Clinton) No, no, I mean if it was to the Government, they would not need to be securing on anything. The Government is so strong that people give us money without security. (Laughter)

1930 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman. But I was trying to understand I guess, is there still a soft loan in place between the Government of Gibraltar and the Calpe House Trust?

1935 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, originally, the loan was in anticipation of the finance that will be provided by a bank in London, because they needed money initially to pay costs but they had not yet acquired the property.

Remember that we have got a situation where the existing property, the existing Calpe House is quite a valuable property which will become available to be sold once the new one is ready to be occupied. So that in itself is expected to come back and provide a great deal of the repayment cost of the existing building.

1940 So we in a way provided, if you like, a bridging loan until they close the deal which they have got at quite a reasonable rate. I think they are only paying something like 2.5% for the loan for the building because, for a loan on a building like that which is a valuable property in a valuable part of London, there is no problem with getting money from institutions in London.

1945 Therefore the only help that we now give is any help in the servicing of the loan, in meeting the interest costs of the loan because in effect it depends ... The money that is being raised is the money for the capital investment, not the money to pay the interest.

1950 Initially the support that we gave them was greater because in fact they needed the money without having the asset to secure the loan. Now they have got the loan secured, it is at a good rate and is fixed for a number of years. The rate of interest is fixed so they are protected against interest rates going up in the future if they do.

So we are happy that the arrangements are reasonable and that the level of support they need for us is not going to be escalating.

1955 Hon. R M Clinton: I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for that answer. I guess I would say that it will come as a great comfort to him and the people of Gibraltar that a commercial bank would be willing to lend on the property, which indicates the confidence that a lender will have in the quality of the property.

1960 Hon. J J Bossano: It is quite a well-known big bank in London that is putting the money up, yes.

Mr Speaker: Any other supplementaries?
Next question.

ADJOURNMENT

1965 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn –

1970 Mr Speaker: May we do ... ? I have one final question here with me: it is for the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister to answer, and that might mean that he does not need to be here first thing this afternoon.

Hon. Chief Minister: We are not going to come back this afternoon, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: We are not?

1975 Hon. Chief Minister: No. So I move that the House do now –

Mr Speaker: Can we then please do this final question?

1980 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, the Deputy Chief Minister and I will be here together at the next –

Mr Speaker: You are the Leader of the House –

1985 Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you. For no reason other than, Mr Speaker, that I know that everybody else has commitments now with the Royal Gibraltar Police, who have an organisation ...

Mr Speaker: Adjourning till when?

1990 Hon. Chief Minister: Tomorrow at 2.00 p.m.

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn until tomorrow at 2.00 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

HEALTH, CARE AND JUSTICE

Q869/2016

Care Agency –

Number of social care workers

Mr Speaker: Perhaps one should explain to hon. Members that a lockout has prevented Parliament from meeting at 2 p.m.

5 Clerk: We continue with answers to Questions. We start at Question 869 and the questioner is the Hon. L F Llamas.

10 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, as at 9th November 2016, can the Government disclose how many social care workers employed by the Care Agency were physically working as social care workers at each of the following establishments: Dr Giraldi Home, Children's Home and Rehabilitation Services?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

15 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I am uncertain as to what the hon. Gentleman means by this question of whether social care workers are physically working as social care workers. Is the hon. Gentleman asking whether social care workers work remotely by digital means?

20 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, what I am asking is of the social care workers who are employed by the Care Agency, how many were physically in attendance at those establishments on that particular day.

25 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, that is not what I understood from the hon. Gentleman at all. If he wanted a headcount for a particular day, that is not what I had read the question to ask me. If what he wants is to know how many care workers were actually at Dr Giraldi, the Children's Home and Rehabilitation Services, I will get that information for him.

Mr Speaker: I think it is obvious, but could I suggest in the first place that Hon. Ministers, or whoever in their Departments first sees questions, if they are not certain about the meaning of 30 the question and they are not able to contact the hon. Member of the Opposition who has asked that question, that they inform my staff here in Parliament and we will endeavour, by any means, to ascertain what is behind the question immediately. If there is a need to rephrase it, we will exercise our good offices in that respect. I think it is obvious, but perhaps it is something 35 that is worth keeping in mind. Okay?

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Gentleman not have the actual complement of social workers in each of these three institutions –

A Member: That is not the question.

A Member: It is the headcount.

Hon. D A Feetham: It is the headcount, yes.

45 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, no, the hon. Gentleman is asking me how many people were physically working there on that day. I will get him the headcount. He is not asking me for the complement, and if he is it is in the Budget book. (Interjection)

Mr Speaker, if what they want is a physical headcount as at 9th November, I will ask my staff to actually go to the records and determine how many people were physically working. If they 50 want to know what the complement is, they can look at the book of estimates.

Indeed, Mr Speaker, at the last Question Time, notwithstanding that the answer to the question of the hon. Gentleman is in the book of estimates, I gave the answer to the Hon.
Mr Trevor Hammond. They asked me a question which I should have answered by saying 'Look to the public document.' I do not do that. I actually prepare the documentation and I give it to 55 them. They asked me the same question but as at a particular date, and they want the information again.

Mr Speaker, we have to be serious about the business we conduct in Parliament.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Every month they ask the 60 same questions.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am sorry but this particular question has never been asked before, and if I have been –

65 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, it has.

Hon. D A Feetham: This particular question has been asked before?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, it has.

70 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Every month.

Mr Speaker: It was asked by the Hon. Trevor Hammond on behalf of the Hon. Lawrence Llamas.

75 Hon. N F Costa: Only last month.

Mr Speaker: Only last month.

80 Hon. D A Feetham: But not on this particular date. Mr Speaker, I have used the term 'complement' and if I have used the term complement wrongly I apologise, but the actual question is clear on the face of the question. I was just asking whether the hon. Gentleman had the actual figures. If he does not have it, he will have to ask it next time round, but I have to say to the hon. Gentleman, with respect, nobody has intended to start this meeting on a bad footing. He should not take it so personally that I have made a comment using the term 'complement' the way that he has taken it.

Mr Speaker: May I enter a comment? I am sure the Hon. Neil Costa feels a bit hot under the collar, having delayed the sitting of Parliament and having to come here in a rush.

There are a number of questions here which I perceive could be – I want to phrase the thing very diplomatically, as diplomatically as possible – which could give rise to some exchanges, let us say, so let's see whether we can start off on a good basis.

The main point is this: if there is any doubt on the part of a Minister, or whoever is drafting an answer on the Minister's behalf, when that person sees the original question ... If there is any doubt, inform the staff here in Parliament. We will try to clear up the doubt immediately and then the question can be rephrased by the Clerk or even by myself, sometimes. I was here last time, dealing with the questions. The question can be rephrased in order to make it absolutely clear as to what it is that the hon. questioner is after.

So let's see if we can keep the temperature down for the rest of this meeting.

Q870/2016

People with disabilities – Numbers attending establishments in Spain

Clerk: Question 870. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details of how many people with disabilities attend establishments in Spain on a daily basis and for what purpose?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I am afraid that the way that the answer is drafted may raise the temperatures slightly more.

I am afraid I am also unable to answer this question, as we are not in a position to inform this House who, whether, when or for what purpose persons with disabilities attend establishments in Spain. The Care Agency does not have access to data or records in respect of the type of information the hon. Gentleman requests.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I am not asking for specific details of who actually attends services. Perhaps if I rephrase in a supplementary, the Minister will be able to answer.

Are there any service users, who would normally attend establishments here in Gibraltar, who do go to Spain on a daily or weekly basis to another centre across the border?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am afraid that I would not know if service users of Gibraltar use other establishments in Spain. I do not know the answer to that.

Hon. L F Llamas: Therefore, Mr Speaker, is the Minister then saying that there are no service users who are being funded access to go to other centres across the border?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, no, I am not saying that.

130 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, therein lies the point. I quite understand that the hon. Gentleman may come to this House and may say 'I don't know who is using services in Spain if the Government doesn't fund it, because it is an entirely private initiative by private individuals'; but if the Government is funding, then of course the Government must know.

Does he not have any information as to how many service users are actually being funded in order to use institutions in Spain? That is something that the Government ought to be capable of answering.

135 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I have again, in the last session of this House, answered the question of how many adults with learning disabilities receive care outside of Spain, and within the information that I have provided to the Hon. Mr Hammond in the absence of the Hon. Mr Llamas, I noticed that there was one adult with disabilities who received care in Spain, and that is in Estepona in Spain.

Q871/2016
Respite care –
Availability of beds

140 Clerk: Question 871. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, further to Question 717/2016, can the Government confirm the three available beds for respite care have always been available during the past five years; if not, on how many occasions and for how long have they not been available?

145 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in the first instance I refer the hon. Gentleman to Answer 717, to which he himself refers. In my answer, I noted that there are four available beds for respite, comprising of three beds and one bed for emergencies.

Further, Mr Speaker, please note that the following dates highlight periods where less than three beds were available for respite care: during January of this year to March of this year there were two beds available for respite; and during the end of November 2016 to date, two respite beds are available for respite.

155 If I may just add, Mr Speaker, anticipating the supplementary question of the hon. Gentleman, the hon. Lady, Samantha Sacramento, has very kindly been able to provide to the Disability Services a satellite flat in the community so that, I am told by way of supplementary information, that by 23rd December, in two days' time, there should once again be the four beds available for respite.

Q872/2016
St Bernard's Hospital escalators –
Number of reported accidents

160 Clerk: Question 872. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how many accidents have been reported in respect of the use of the escalators to St Bernard's Hospital since their installation?

165 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, one incident has been reported.

170 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for his answer. Can I ask him if the escalators have been permanently shut down for safety reasons? Certainly I tried to use them the other day and they were not operational.

175 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first instance I would suggest to the hon. Gentleman that he walks up, because it is good exercise. In the second place I would tell the hon. Gentleman that the escalators are not permanently off, no.

180 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, the Minister has come to this House in a mood of jest this afternoon. I tried to use the escalators because I was going for an X-ray for my foot and therefore I entered as a patient; but since he tells me I should walk up since it is good exercise, maybe he will tell that to the rest of the people of Gibraltar.

185 Mr Speaker, I noticed that the Senior Citizens' Association have an issue with the escalators and are trying to meet with the Minister in order to discuss an alternative of a lift. I would ask the Minister: is he seriously considering replacing the escalators with a lift and therefore removing the escalators, or is he proposing to install a lift somewhere else; and would he therefore agree that the escalators were perhaps a bad idea in the first place?

190 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place I had not realised that the hon. Gentleman had to use the escalators because he had suffered an injury in his foot, in which case of course the lift would have been more suitable in the circumstances.

The hon. Gentleman is right: I believe it is the Seniors Association who have asked for a meeting. In fact, I bumped into Mr Ruiz today. We are meeting – if I recall correctly, but please do not quote me – in the second or the third week of January.

195 In the event that the GHA were to accept the proposal of a lift, it would be additional to, and therefore no, we do not think that it was a bad idea to include the escalators. Whereas certainly having an accident is regrettable, I do not think that the fact of one accident diminishes the benefit and the amenity that the escalator has meant to the many patients who use it.

200 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for his answer. Can he indicate what the problem is with the escalator? Will it be back in operation soon, or is it operational today?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the escalator should have been operational yesterday, and they were not today. They assure me that it will be operational by before the end of the week.

Q873/2016
Dementia Day Care Centre –
Awarding of contract

205 Clerk: Question 873. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government now advise to whom the contract has been awarded in respect of the Dementia Day Care Centre?

210 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, a preferred bidder has been identified and notified. The GHA is in discussions and I expect to make an announcement shortly.

215

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Hon. Minister: when he says 'shortly', could he be more precise?

220 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I recall the time when I asked, as a Member of the Opposition, what 'shortly' meant, and I will refer the hon. Gentleman to Hansard and the answer that Sir Peter gave me at the time. But I will be infinitely more helpful and tell him that I expect to be able to make announcement in the first week of January.

Q874/2016
Dementia Care Home –
Contract holder

Clerk: Question 874. The Hon. R M Clinton.

225 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that the contract for the residential Dementia Centre is still held by Grand Home Care?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

230 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the contract in relation to the Dementia Care Home is ... to answer his question in the affirmative, yes.

Q875/2016
Dementia Care Home and Day Care Centre –
Opening dates

Clerk: Question 875. The Hon. R M Clinton.

235 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, does the Government have an anticipated opening date for the residential Dementia Centre and the Dementia Day Care Centre, and why have there been so many delays in their opening?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

240 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the delays in respect of the Dementia Care Home have been as a result of the building not being handed over by the contractor.

245 I am delighted to note, as I said in my previous question, that I will be in a position to announce the opening of the Dementia Day Centre shortly – as I have just revealed to the hon. Gentleman, in the first week of January.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for his answer.

250 Can I ask: when he says the building is not handed over by the contractor, is that in respect of the residential centre, but the day care centre has been handed over? If he could perhaps illuminate on that point.

255 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is why I prefaced my answer by saying that the delay in respect of the Dementia Care Home has been as a result of the building not being handed over by the contractor, and then separately we will be announcing the opening of the Dementia Day Centre shortly. So the delays in respect of the contractor relate solely to the Dementia Care Home.

260 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister. The obvious question, really, is: has the building now been handed over to the Government in respect of the dementia residential centre?

Hon. N F Costa: I am afraid not, Mr Speaker.

265 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, this is somewhat concerning to hear that it has not been handed over, since you obviously have a contract for the service provider and yet the building is not ready, and then conversely you have the building ready for the day care centre but no service provider as yet.

270 What is it that has caused the delay for the contractor to hand over the Dementia Centre? This is something, as we all know, of great concern to service users or potential service users and their families, and I find it somewhat concerning to hear today that the building itself has not been handed over, whereas I was, perhaps mistakenly, under the assumption it was a question of putting together the services and the support staff necessary for the operation of the centre. Can the Minister advise what the problem is with the building?

275 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the information that I have for him is that the contractors will hand over before April and we should be in a position to proceed with the services then. So we are talking about, latest, April of this year.

280 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for the answer. I would invite him to perhaps communicate this – or maybe if he has not communicated already – communicate to the relevant stakeholders in respect of the residential care, because there is obviously an expectation in the community that ... I think, as per the Viewpoint programme, he said hopefully some things would be open in January. I had not appreciated that this was solely in respect of the day care centre. I would invite him to advise the relevant stakeholders so they can manage their expectations accordingly.

Thank you.

290 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes, the cynic in me notes that April is obviously after 31st March, which is the end of the financial year. Is the fact that this is going to be handed over in April to do with the fact that the Government has spent so much money over the last five years, £750 million in capital projects alone, that unfortunately there is not enough in the kitty for this to be opened earlier?

295 Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker. He is a cynic, but I can assure him that the information that has been passed on to me from the professionals at ERS and at the GHA is that it is only to do with the handing over of the building by the contractors; it is nothing to do with finances. On the contrary, I am, as he can imagine, being intensely pressed to open as soon as is humanly possible. As he can also imagine, that is also the desire on this side of the House.

300 Surely he should be happy that his cynicism should be dispelled, if only for a few hours this afternoon.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, coming back to the question of the residential dementia centre and the fact that Grand Home Care have the contract, can the Minister confirm that the Government is not paying any form of retainer until the period at which the building is handed over to the Government? Otherwise, you are also going to be paying for a service which cannot be used by anyone.

And how does he expect Grand Home Care to manage in the interim, in terms of recruitment?

310 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, he has asked me two supplementaries. In respect of the first one, I will need to check the documentation but I would find it incredibly odd if we were paying Grand Home Care anything, and certainly –

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
315 Not in my time.

Hon. N F Costa: My hon. Friend Dr Cortes has said certainly not in his time, and I can assure him certainly not in my time either, but I will certainly get back to him in any event to assuage his concern and, now that he has raised it with me, to assuage my own concern that we are not effecting any payment whatever until the opening of the Dementia Care Home.

In respect of whether the contractor will be in a position to be able to recruit sufficiently quickly to be able to ensure that services may be provided, whereas I did not sit on the selection board, I very much suspect that one of the primary questions put to the contractor would be that when it is open, by the time that we tell you, within a certain lead-in period you would be in a position to deliver so many nurses etc., and the answer surely must have been ... because 325 whereas I do not have the information with me, there will have been various companies that will have bid for that particular, and the board, I need to assume, would have been extremely rigorous, and one of the main issues would have been 'Would you be able to provide these professional staff to be able to deliver these services once the home opens?' I can see that 330 Dr Cortes is nodding next to me, so we can also be assured of that.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I can just confirm that I have understood the Hon. the Minister correctly, he is suggesting that services will commence the day after the building is handed over by the contractor, so presumably all other provision will be in place for that date.

335
Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I did not say the day after the building is handed over; what I said was what I had read out, which was that we would be able to proceed straight after that. In other words, the recruitment and the systems that need to be in place, with equipment and so on, will be in place by then, and we just need to make sure, of course, that when the building is handed over there is ... I do not want to misquote my officials ... that essentially when the building is handed over there has to be cleaning, furnishing and that sort of thing that you do to a building to make sure that it is safe and that the work that has been contracted to be carried out has been carried out very shortly after the building is handed over to the Government.

Q876/2016
Parental Alienation Syndrome –
Specialised training

Mr Speaker: Next question.

345

Clerk: Question 876. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, does the Government agree that we need to look towards targeted and specialised training for social workers, the judiciary and legal profession, so that we can ensure that we recognise cases of Parental Alienation Syndrome early on?

Clerk: Answer the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will be happy to know that the Children's Services already work under the auspices of the Children and Families Court Advisory and Support Services (CAFCASS). The Children's Services continue to work in accordance with CAFCASS best practice.

355

The Court Welfare Team has both developed and administered the co-parenting programme to deal with parental alienation. This was researched, created and produced and presented to the Supreme Court for its perusal and recommendations in 2004. The co-parenting programme ranges from six to 10 sessions for each client depending on necessity – acrimony/level of alienation – has been assessed.

360

Sessions are structured and run individually with each client, and further consist of joint work with both ex-partners at the beginning and at the end of the programme. The context of mediation is focal.

365

Sessions initially present the purpose and importance of co-parenting and, importantly, the impact and abusive nature of acrimony and alienation for the child or children involved. This is re-enforced throughout each session.

The Therapeutic and the Court Welfare Team work together and deliver the co-parenting programme to families involved in acrimonious separation and divorce cases. They have been delivering this programme for almost 14 years. The courts make recommendations for such programmes to be delivered to families.

370

The programme continues to be reviewed and updated by the Care Agency's social worker and psychologist. Both have significant experience in this field. It is important to highlight that the social worker attended further mediation training in September.

375

Both practitioners recognise that there has been an increase in the Parental Alienation Syndrome. The Care Agency is therefore in the process of arranging a meeting with the Supreme Court judges to discuss these issues.

I should further note, Mr Speaker, that the psychologist as well as the social worker are aware of what constitutes emotional abuse as a result of parental alienation. Emotional harm per se is already a huge component of the safeguarding training. The Care Agency psychologist has been delivering this training to frontline professionals approximately for the past 10 years.

380

A Supreme Court judge's ruling in the two most recent acrimonious and complex cases commended both social workers and the psychologist involved for their assessments, evidence and recommendations.

385

Further, training for lawyers may curb the increasing trend in parental alienation through a better and more thorough understanding. I will seek to raise the issue with the Bar Council at our next meeting. I also intend to raise this issue with the Hon. the Chief Justice at our next meeting.

390

Finally, the Care Agency has advised me of a sure way to decrease parental alienation, a proposal which the hon. Gentleman may well dislike, and it is as simple as implementing a cap on legal assistance for divorce proceedings. The premise of the advice is that unlimited legal assistance results in cases of parental manipulation and, in some instances, some lawyers' inability to prevent cases from escalating.

395

Hon. E J Phillips: I thank the Minister –

Hon. N F Costa: If I may just add that that is not a proposal that I am seeking to implement. I want to make that clear.

A Member: We would not want to be unpopular ... [Inaudible] [Laughter]

Hon. E J Phillips: I am not too sure I want to comment on an unlimited cap in relation to those matters, but I think it is right and I welcome the suggestion that the Chief Justice will be contacted. I also welcome further training for family lawyers in this field, because those are the ones particularly at the front line when it comes to divorces and issues affecting young children.

I have it quite regularly now – I would not say on a daily basis – from fathers who approach me with this issue, and the heartache clearly from them is that when their children come to them for access there is this vitriol which has been transferred from the mother, in this particular example, to the father, which causes very difficult access arrangements between the father and the children.

410

My understanding is we are not doing enough as a community to deal with parental alienation syndrome. That is why I have raised it in Parliament; that is why I have raised it outside this House as well in order to improve awareness in relation to parental alienation syndrome. In the United Kingdom, for example, I understand that between 11% and 15% of divorce cases have parental alienation syndrome. I would welcome very much further training for our judiciary, particularly the family judge.

415

I just wanted to know, really, when this meeting will be arranged with the Chief Justice. Do you have any idea as to when that will happen?

420

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place to say to the hon. Gentleman that although it has now – I cannot believe this – been five years since I was in private practice, I do personally recall acting as a family practitioner and there being clear instances of parental manipulation. Unfortunately, in my case it happened to be the dads who would suffer mostly, because they would be the persons who did not have children with them at home and therefore contact arrangements had to be arranged. I do recall witnessing that particular emotional heartache and I agree with the hon. Gentleman that it is right to therefore have raised it. But, as I have also said, the Care Agency also confirmed to me that there has been an increase in parental alienation syndrome and this is why I have agreed, further to the hon. Gentleman raising it by way of his own article, to raise the matter with the Hon. the Chief Justice at our next meeting. I will seek to include in the agenda, subject to his blessing ... I will discuss it with him and I am sure that he will be happy to do so. Similarly, I have various meetings pending with the Bar Council in respect of separate matters, but at the very first meeting with them, although a meeting to discuss certain items, I will also seek to add that item for training in relation to lawyers.

425

I have to say that I did try to politely enquire as to whether or not Supreme Court judges have sought any additional training in respect of parental alienation. They have not. That does not mean to say that they would not welcome it should it be offered, which is why I seek to raise it with the Hon. the Chief Justice when we next meet.

435

Hon. E J Phillips: Just one point: to be helpful, I am quite happy to work with the Hon. the Minister in relation to that, and quite happy to attend the meetings as well with the Chief Justice if it helps.

445 It is a matter which I think is really important, particularly when it revolves around the sensitive issue of children and their ability to access either one of the parents who is being alienated. But I would say as well that there is a link here, a very strong link, towards parental alienation syndrome and the failure of a certain parent – particularly the father, in many instances – to pay maintenance. I wonder whether the Minister has had any thought as to how we can enforce those arrangements and have greater protection for the mothers who are not being paid their monthly maintenance awards, either through the courts or through agreement.

450 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, it is almost as if the hon. Gentleman read my mind when I was giving him my answer to his supplementary question. I always used to advise my clients that if there was a certain amount that the former partner or the former spouse was asking, that to show good will and good faith that they should try to exceed that amount where those personal circumstances allowed.

455 There are already mechanisms in place through the magistrates' courts, and if you recall correctly it was the former Minister for Justice, when he introduced the Children Act, who introduced those mechanisms. So the legal mechanisms exist; the question is are they being enforced. That is certainly something that I would be more than happy to look into.

460 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, we are not just simply talking about parents, we are also talking about grandparents because often there is fallout in relation to the grandparents and any parental alienation towards the father, for example, is often translated also to the grandparents.

465 That is one of the reasons why in the Children Act we included – and our law differs from the United Kingdom ... from England, I beg your pardon, and Wales ... not Scotland; Scotland is the same as ours – we included as well the right for grandparents to apply for access to their grandchildren, which does not exist in England and Wales. So I would invite the Hon. the Minister for Justice to obviously extend that to them as well, because here, in a small community like Gibraltar where grandparents play such a pivotal role in the extended family, that they should not be alienated.

470 Having said that, let me turn it into this question: parental alienation is multi-faceted and it is something that I grappled with when I was Minister for Justice and one of the reasons why we introduced the Children Act in 2009. It not only needs training but it also needs the facilities as well, and a critical and crucial facility in order to allow Social Services to help with the question of parental alienation is a family centre.

475 Very often what happens is that the alienation gets to such an extent that the children simply do not want to sit and see the father or the grandparent. So the only way that they can have any kind of contact is in a family centre. We asked in January about the family centre and when that was coming on line, and we were told that it was going to be imminent. I wonder whether that is something that the Hon. the Minister for Justice can also shed some light on, because that is absolutely critical in a situation where the children simply do not want to see the father and obviously there is no other way of doing it other than through, unfortunately, supervised access.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, yes, the hon. Gentleman is right that sometimes there needs to be a neutral ground for parents to see the children with whom they have contact. He is right; to say that it has to be a family centre exclusively is not correct, though.

480 While we have already announced in the Parliament that we are in the process of having a family centre, we already have, as I have said in Parliament before, alternative premises which we are using for those purposes. So, while the hon. Gentleman is right in saying what he is saying, in answer to that, by way of assistance to my hon. Friend, that is already happening, and I have already mentioned it in this Parliament before. We have a premises which we are using akin to a family centre, which is outside the Social Services building. Of course the Social Services building itself within it has now rooms which we have refurbished, so they do not look like they did before – they look more comfortable and warmer and less institutional. So that is perfectly acceptable for these purposes as a neutral ground, but even beyond that we have other Government premises and facilities which we are using, which are quite anonymous, and it is not widely known that they are used for these purposes, other than the people for whom they are being used – for obvious reasons, because of course as part of this we wanted to be discreet.

In addition to that and further to that, we are nevertheless developing another premises which we have identified for this purpose.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the reason why I mentioned the family centre is because if you read the Children Act, the Children Act refers to a statutory obligation in terms of a family centre. It is not ‘some other kind of building’ – it is a family centre.

Further, the reason why I mentioned a family centre was because I was asked about this during the last election in the Mackintosh Hall. There was a discussion in relation to this and the Government has consistently said that that family centre will be provided online, compliant with the Children Act, imminently, we were told in January. I just wondered how imminent that was now, having reached December 2016.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the statute is not prescriptive in the sense that it says there has to be a room that is this size and has this, that and the other. What the statute provides for is that the Government provide a facility for a family centre. The hon. Gentleman, I am sure, knows that a family centre is more of a concept than a physical building, but in any event we provide both already in a location that we have that is using a Government premises that is used by Social Services.

If you recall, Mr Speaker, in response to this question the hon. Gentleman suggested that while they were in government they were considering having an area in the leisure centre. Certainly when it was my responsibility I did not feel that that was an appropriate location and that it should be somewhat more discreet. We are using more discreet premises at the moment and I am certainly satisfied that we are providing for what needs to be done under the requirement of the Children Act. Of course, we are not looking at vast numbers of children who require the service, but nevertheless what we are planning is something that will enhance the facility which we already have.

I cannot give a specific date – of course, I am no longer involved with that – but I am sure that the coming on line of the new facility which will be used for a family centre cannot be far off.

Hon. E J Phillips: I understand that obviously you are trying to meet the needs of your manifesto commitment where you state:

We will continue to ensure that the Social Services Court Team are better resourced to be able to deliver the requirements of the Children Act including the setting up of a family centre as required by the Act.

So your commitment still is to set up, as it states at page 93 of your manifesto, a family centre, albeit it seems to be slightly different to what you are saying now in terms of the resources that you currently have, and working towards that? Just to clarify.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, just to clarify, what I have said is that while we prepare the family centre, which is the building that we envisage to be used as the family centre, we already provide alternative premises which are being used for the purposes of a family centre at the moment. It is just that the one that will come on line will be even better. I am saying that what we are doing now with the new premises that we have ... are already compliant both with the manifesto commitment and with the responsibility under the legislation. It is just that we will have another one and a different one coming on stream not far away.

Q877-880/2016

CCTV –

Policy re use in public areas; complaints; civil liberties;
sharing with law enforcement agencies

Clerk: Question 877. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain their policy for the use of CCTV in 500 public areas in Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this 505 question together with Questions 878, 879 and Question 880.

Clerk: Question 878. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm whether or not it has received complaints 510 regarding the use of CCTV from members of the public and can the Government give details of those complaints?

Clerk: Question 879. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government explain what measures are in place to ensure that the 515 use of CCTV does not infringe civil liberties?

Clerk: Question 880. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government explain how CCTV still images and video are shared 520 with law enforcement agencies?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Government's policy 525 objectives as set out at paragraph 4 of the 'Public CCTV Code of Practice' and the basis for the processing of data are to enhance community safety, reduce the fear of crime, deter and detect crime, and deter and detect acts of anti-social behaviour.

Complaints against police officers made by members of the general public are lodged with 530 the Police Complaints Board (PCB). All complaints made to the PCB are fully investigated and logged by the RGP's Professional Standard Department. The Royal Gibraltar Police has not logged any complaints against police due to misuse of the public CCTV system.

Government's public CCTV system is managed by the Royal Gibraltar Police from New Mole House. In its management of this system the RGP applies its Public CCTV Code of Practice. The 535 aim of this policy is to provide a clear framework for the operation and control of all public CCTV systems in Gibraltar, highlighting what it will be used for and ensuring that evidence is secured, retained and made available as required so that there is absolute respect for everyone's rights.

Furthermore, the CCTV system is designed to ensure it blocks out any potential intrusion by 540 automatically blacking out areas of the video feed where a camera angle could potentially intrude into a private dwelling or other location that is private. The operating system was accredited by the Office of the Data Protection Commissioner before being launched.

The public CCTV system is operated by the Royal Gibraltar Police, which is the primary law enforcement agency in Gibraltar insofar as the use of the public CCTV system applies and 545 therefore the need for sharing does not ordinarily arise. If there is a need to share upon request from another of the Gibraltar law enforcement agencies, this will be done in strict compliance with the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, the Data Protection Act and the RGP's Public CCTV Code of Practice.

550 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I might just ask the Hon. Minister ... I am aware that the Department of the Environment does, or certainly has sent out CCTV images when fining people for littering, for instance, particularly in residential estates. Is it the case that the RGP routinely share CCTV images with the Department of the Environment, and how does that Department obtain those images?

555 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Dr Cortes will speak to his question in respect of whether the Environmental Agency shares the information, or whether the RGP shares with Environment.

In respect of whether we routinely share, just to remind the House of what I have just said, which is that the system is operated by the RGP, which is the primary law enforcement agency insofar as the use of our public CCTV system applies, and the need for sharing does not 560 ordinarily arise. If there is a need to share upon request, then the sharing is done in strict compliance with the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, the Data Protection Act and the RGP's Public CCTV Code of Conduct.

565 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, if I may assist, the Department of the Environment and the Environmental Agency have specific targeted cameras which target, for example, litter hotspots and that sort of thing, and that is processed separately using all the legal frameworks, so the system we use is the same. I do not believe we have ever shared with the Police, because we have never identified 570 anything of another nature that needed to go to the Police. Otherwise, obviously we would have a duty to report it if we saw any crime performed in front of one of these cameras. The system runs pretty well in parallel and, as I say, they are specifically targeted at the hotspots and the like.

575 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, in which case, as there appear to be two separate CCTV networks in operation here, is the Government aware of any other Departments which have their own separate CCTV networks operating in public places?

580 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, given that the question was specific about the RGP's code of practice and so on, I do not know the answer. If there is additional CCTV around Gibraltar, I suspect it will probably be from private estates or indeed security companies and so on. Certainly as far as I am aware, the answer is no, and my hon. colleagues could jump in to contradict me if I am wrong.

585 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, with your leave, just one further question. The reason why I asked that set of questions before, of course, was relating to the incident with the Guardia Civil at the Frontier, where they pushed the car right across back on the Spanish side and one of the issues was that this CCTV footage came into the public domain. Clearly there must have been some ... Yes, I think there was some form of breach. Was there an investigation in relation to the 590 use of that CCTV and the posting of it on Facebook and other social media?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, Customs is my responsibility and it is a matter that led to an investigation into the whole issue of whether disciplinary proceedings should be taken or not.

595 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just arising from the Chief Minister's answer to that question, is it the fact that the RGP have linked CCTV footage to Customs in those particular sites? And if that is the case, then (Interjection) is there a different CCTV system relating to solely Customs?

600 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman should give notice of that question; I do not think it arises from the question. I am going to give an answer which may or may not be correct.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, with respect, I do not think that is right. I said:

Can the Government explain how CCTV still images and video are shared with law enforcement agencies?

605 Quite clearly there is a sharing of CCTV footage between the relevant law enforcement agencies, which is a good idea, but that was the nature of the question and therefore it is within the remit of the answer.

610 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the supplementary is not about that; the supplementary is about the CCTV systems the Government has. The Government, I can tell him off the top of my head, has a CCTV system surrounding No 6 Convent Place which does not belong to any of the enforcement agencies, but if something goes wrong in the area around No 6, it is provided to the law enforcement agencies. The hon. Gentleman's supplementary is 'What CCTV systems does the Government have?' Well, in order to give him an accurate answer – I am not saying we are not going to answer it – he needs to give notice of that question.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, certainly Customs have their own system – and I would classify Customs as law enforcement; can he confirm that? I think at least he can confirm that.

620 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful for the concession from the GSD that Customs is a law enforcement agency, because for the 16 years that they were in government Customs found that they were not regarded as a law enforcement agency. It was a big issues of contention – (Interjections) Well, I understand, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Gentleman takes a completely different view, now that he is the Leader of the new GSD, to the position he used to take when he was a Minister for Justice responsible for law enforcement in the GSD about what is or is not a law enforcement agency. But I have come to the conclusion that this chameleonic approach to every policy subject is one that we have to expect from the hon. Gentleman.

Customs is a law enforcement agency and it has CCTV systems.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q881/2016
Gibraltar Health Authority –
Staff moral survey

630 Clerk: Question 881. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Government plan to conduct a staff morale survey within the entirety of the GHA or parts thereof?

635 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in the first place, I wish to reiterate that obviously I have the highest respect for all clinicians and the incredible vital public service that they provide; there can be no question of that.

640 As I have also said, I intend to leave no stone unturned and spare no effort in ensuring that I build on my predecessor's formidable legacy and improve, where we can, the quality of the services that we deliver. I am currently engaging as widely and thoroughly as possible with all stakeholders to make sure that we get things exactly right.

645 I am currently systematically meeting with all levels of management, and until I have concluded all of my meetings I will not be in a position to determine if there is a need for another survey. What I can assure this House is that I intend to make sure that all genuine concerns brought to my attention are investigated and appropriate action is taken.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Gentleman accept that there is a morale problem, particularly at the hospital, amongst staff?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, we have ventilated these issues in public via our press releases, but if he wants to do it in the House I am delighted to engage.

655 In the first place, the hon. Gentleman in his press release, which was delightful by its brevity but for no other reason of content, failed to mention that the sample of doctors consulted did not include the GPs. He must accept that if there is going to be a morale survey of an institution and we want to know how people are feeling in terms of morale, then you need to include the consultants and the GP doctors, and it does not make sense to have an informal documentation that only asks the question of a particular group. So there were 30 people asked out of a total of 660 82 people, but he fails to mention in his brief press statement that, notwithstanding what is said, 61% of the 30 doctors who were asked the question said they did not feel low on morale.

665 I genuinely do not want this to become a partisan issue, because I think he and I both agree that the Health Services provide an excellent service. They have to be non-political to the extent that both he and I will need medical care at many different points in our lives and the care has to be provided to the best quality irrespective of political strife.

Since I took over as Minister for Health I am meeting systematically, methodically – it is going to take some time – to meet with all levels of management and also clinicians, nurses and everyone who will clearly have an opinion as to how the GHA is working.

670 I also need to make the point that my Ministry is not the GHA. My Ministry is separate to the GHA, although of course my Ministry and the GHA have to work hand in glove in respect to how medical services are delivered.

675 I am going to leave it there, because I do not want to get into the type of questions that were asked, how they were asked and whether they would elicit a different reply had they been phrased differently. So I will conclude to say that in a Government entity as large as the GHA there will undoubtedly be pockets where people will not be entirely satisfied with the way that management has dealt with them. I think it was James Neish in an opinion piece who said that management does have to walk sometimes an impossible tightrope between the demands of the patient and perhaps what professionals and clinicians may be willing to be able to provide at any particular point, for perfectly good reasons, and management needs to always strike that 680 balance between clinicians, professionals, nurses, allied professionals and the demands of the patient.

685 So, as I say, I do not want him to leave the House thinking that I have dismissed the idea of another morale survey. All I am saying is that until I conclude my own meetings with all clinicians and allied services and nurses, I cannot commit to that because it may be that the issues that they raise with me are issues that can be dealt with without one.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much for the answer.

690 The point about the survey conducted by the doctors I think has been lost on the hon. Gentleman, because when he says that it is only a sample of 31 doctors out of a total complement of 80 or 81 the reality is that it was a survey conducted of the doctors at the hospital, not the entirety of the GHA, and it was never represented as a survey of all the doctors within the GHA. It was a survey of the doctors at the hospital. Even if it had been otherwise, 38% – or 36%, I cannot recall the exact percentage of what it equates to – is a very high sample indeed. Does he not think at the very least that the fact that doctors have gone to the extent of 695 conducting and participating in a survey of this nature at the hospital does indicate that perhaps there is a level of discontent amongst doctors at the hospital that obviously is something that needs to be looked at?

I will ask him some more supplementaries and move on to more substantive issues in a moment.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, on the basis that I did come into this House hot under the collar, given that I arrived late, I will allow the hon. Gentleman to have said to me that a point has been lost, but that is the only one I am going to allow him today.

705 The point has not been lost on me, because I told him that notwithstanding that in my view the results have to be skewed, and we accept at its highest this informal documentation ... Let's say that he and I agree that it was perfectly proper for this doctor to simply consult the 30 consultants and leave everyone else out – (Interjection) Yes, hospital, but I do not agree that he should have done so leaving the GPs out. But let's say that I agree with him, for the sake of argument. He seems not to want to remember – and he certainly left it out of his press release –
710 that of those polled, and irrespective of my concerns as to how the questions were asked ... because he knows, as a barrister, that if you want to put words into somebody's mouth he you ask a closed question. Yes, you ask a closed question. The question was not asked: how would you portray morale at the GHA – excellent, very good, good, get me out of here? That is not how it was portrayed, and any reputable polling company will tell you that to achieve an accurate 715 assessment of anything you need to ask open questions, because the moment that you ask a skewed, loaded question, you are more or less telling people what to say. And, apart from that, doesn't he accept that if there is a particular doctor who is clearly not entirely satisfied with something and those questions have been done face to face, not anonymously with open questions in a proper scientific methodology, which I am sure the hon. Gentleman –

Mr Speaker: May I tell both hon. Members, both the Minister and any other Member of the Opposition who wishes to ask supplementaries, that I am not going to allow exchanges or a debate on the appropriateness of this survey. It is the subject of the question. The matter has been amply ventilated outside Parliament. I am allowing a certain latitude in the exchanges, but 725 we are not going to have a debate about whether certain questions were appropriate, the manner in which the survey was carried out, or even its authenticity or what have you. I am not going to allow a debate on that. I think the Hon. Minister should stick to the question that he has been asked, because I am not going to allow the Opposition either to widen the ambit of their questions.

730

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I did say in my first answer that I wished to steer entirely clear of looking into the methodology etc. of the survey. And so, having said what I have said, and after your intervention, Mr Speaker, I will leave it at that. But the point I was getting to was that even accepting the survey at its highest, 61% of those polled said that they were not low on morale – 735 not part of the supplementary question to me, not part of his press release.

Mr Speaker, there has never been more engagement and consultation between management and the doctors than under my predecessor, Dr John Cortes. Doesn't he know that the Medical Advisory Committee, the statutory creature made specifically to consult doctors and consultants 740 and surgeons and nurses and allied health professionals, did not meet under the GSD? Did he not know that?

Mr Speaker: No, but that has got nothing to do with the matter under discussion. (Hon. N F Costa: No?) (Laughter) You have been asked a supplementary question: whether you accept that there is a problem with morale. That has got nothing to do with how many meetings the Medical Advisory Committee ... [Inaudible]

Hon. N F Costa: Then, Mr Speaker, the answer is no, sir.

750 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I have to say that I find the answer difficult, bearing in mind that you have this survey that indicates that 94% were dissatisfied with management at the GHA and 74% thought that morale was low amongst doctors within the hospital.

Perhaps moving on to potential solutions and looking towards the future, and bearing in mind that we are spending an awful lot of money on the Health Service ... I think projections are likely to reach about £120 million a year, which is £10 million per month, and therefore we should be getting much more higher satisfaction ratings for the amount of money that we are actually spending – and well spent, because that is an area where we should be spending money. But does the hon. Gentleman envisage that the Government might conduct in the future some kind of root and branch review, particularly of what is happening at the hospital to see what areas can be improved to make sure that the public gets value for money and to make sure that there is a better morale at the hospital amongst staff than is at present the case?

765 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman clearly did not care to listen to my answer. I said that I was currently engaging as widely and thoroughly as possible with all stakeholders to make sure that we get things exactly right. I also told him that I am currently systematically meeting with all levels of management, and until I have concluded all my meetings I am not in a position to determine if there is a need for another survey. I have also told him that if there is any concern or any issue that any clinician has, all they need to do is write to me to make sure that I fully investigate any such concerns.

770 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q882/2016
Primary care frontline desk –
Staff manning as principal duty

Clerk: Question 882. The Hon. D A Feetham.

775 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many (a) public servants and (b) employees subcontracted through recruitment consultants have as their principal duty the manning of the primary care frontline desk?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

780 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question with Question 883.

Clerk: Question 883. The Hon. D A Feetham.

785 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many employees have as their principal duty the manning of the primary care frontline desk?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

790 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to Answers 352 and 353/2016.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, prior to asking this question I have obviously looked back at the questions that I have asked. I cannot recall asking this particular question, unless the hon. Gentleman has answered it tangentially in relation to another question that has arisen.

795 Perhaps he could draw my attention to the substance of the answer that was given, so that if there are any supplementaries I can ask them during this session of the House.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman asked in Question 353, to which I have just referred to him, on 29th June, so we are within the preceding six months. He said:

Mr Speaker, how many workers employed by Government, Government-owned companies, authorities and agencies are currently working in the Primary Care Centre?

The Hon. Dr John Cortes gave the answer and I equate that question with his question:

Can the Government state how many employees have as their principal duty the manning of the primary care frontline desk?

800 They are in all respects exactly the same. And then, in his previous question, he asked:

Can the Government state how many public servants ...

which has to mean Government employees. So, he asks in Question 882 how many public servants and he has asked in Question 883 how many public servants. And then he says:

and (b) employees subcontracted ...

And he asked in Question 352:

How many workers not employed by Government, Government-owned companies, authorities and agencies are currently working in the Primary Care Centre?

805 They are, with respect to the hon. Gentleman, exactly the same in substance – exactly the same.

Hon. D A Feetham: With respect to the hon. Gentleman, unless the answer is this ... But they are not the same, and I will tell you ... unless the answer is as I am going to tell him.

810 That question related to all employees in the Primary Care Centre. This relates to the manning of the primary care frontline desk. It would be the same if all the employees working at the Primary Care Centre also manned the frontline desk. That is a perfectly acceptable answer, but is that what the hon. Gentleman is telling me the position is? The questions that I asked originally were about how many different types of employees were working at the Primary Care Centre. The question today is about the manning of the primary care frontline desk – unless everybody works at the frontline desk.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I think the issue here is that we read his questions differently. The question asked by Mr Feetham at 353 was:

How many workers employed by Government, Government-owned companies, authorities and agencies are currently working on the Primary Care Centre counter?

820 I read that as meaning primary care frontline desk, and therefore that is why I say the question has already been answered.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I please ... because I can clarify this quite easily by just referring to my supplementary. The supplementary to Question 353 was this. I said:

So he could not tell us how many of those 11 are actually covering short-term maternity or long-term illness that he has outlined and for other reasons.

825 And I said:

What I am obviously getting at ... Is he satisfied that we do not have a situation here where there are non-public service employees almost working on a permanent basis in these jobs at the counter in the Primary Care Centre?

And then the answer came back:

Mr Speaker, they are temporary engagements. As I have explained before, I do not have a breakdown. I was asked for figures, I have given him figures, I do not have a breakdown.

The point was that I asked in this question for overall figures. I never asked about the frontline desk, except in a supplementary and the hon. Gentleman was not able to give me the answer because he did not have a breakdown. That is the point.

830 Other than obviously obtaining the statistics and seeing how those resources are being utilised, there is no point having an exchange across the floor of the House in relation to this. If he can provide me with that information I would appreciate it, but it has not been provided yet – unless the answer to the question is that everybody who works at the Primary Care Centre also works at the frontline desk. That could be the position – I do not know.

835

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, if that is what he wanted to ask, then this should not be the question either. The hon. Gentleman should know that an official will have a job description, but, whereas that is the case, that official may be required to do things that are not necessarily their main primary function, but may that day or during a week or whatever be at a particular counter.

840

If what he wanted to know was how many of the 11 are actually covering short-term maternity, that is an entirely different question.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am asking how many employees, public servants or employees subcontracted through recruitment consultants have as their principal duty the manning of the primary care frontline desk. That is not a question I asked in June, because in June I was asking how many employees were there in the Primary Care Centre.

845

Hon. N F Costa: No – the Primary Care Centre counter.

850

Hon. D A Feetham: No, that was in a supplementary.

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, the question –

855 Hon. D A Feetham: All right, is the answer then that there are 11? That is fine – is that the answer?

860 Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, it is not fine. Let's please clarify, because one could not make this up. The hon. Gentleman has stood for three supplementary questions and asked me an entirely different question, and he has disputed with me that the question he is asking now was not the question he asked in June – and with the greatest of respect, it is the same question. The question is –

865 A Member: It is the same again.

Hon. N F Costa: – can the Government state how many employees have as their principal duty the manning of the primary care frontline desk. How many workers employed by Government are currently working in the Primary Care Centre counter – not the Primary Care Centre, the Primary Care Centre counter.

870 The next question is: how many public servants or employees – in other words, he is asking the same question again in the other one – have as their principal duty the manning of the primary care frontline desk.

875 And he asks: how many workers employed by Government, Government-owned companies, authorities and agencies not employed by Government are working in the Primary Care Centre counter?

They are exactly the same questions. (Banging on desk)

Mr Speaker: Hon. Members should keep in mind that the Hon. Dr Cortes, in his answer to Question 352, said:

Mr Speaker, I have taken the liberty to include counter in the plural as there are many counters in the Primary Care Centre and it was not clear which one was being referred to.

880 Hon. D A Feetham: Obviously it is all of them.

Mr Speaker: This is obvious. Anyone visiting, going as a patient to the centre, will see that in each of the coloured areas and elsewhere in the building there are reception counters which are being manned by nurses and so on. It is all over the Primary Care Centre. That is what Dr Cortes was pointing out.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, thank you very much, Mr Speaker, for the – 890 Mr Speaker: But my view was that the question should be allowed because it was not entirely clear from our assessment here, the Clerk and myself, that we should rule it out, and therefore I tend to give the benefit of the doubt usually to Members of the Opposition – though they may not always think that I do, of course! (Laughter) And then I expect the Minister, if he thinks it is the same question, to say so in the answer.

895 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the reason why I am arguing the point is only because he stood up to argue with me. I really do not want to quibble. If what the hon. Gentleman actually wants to know is what he asks in his supplementary, then I am perfectly happy not for him to have to wait until the next Question Time. I am perfectly happy to write to him to give him the answer.

900 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, thank you very much. The position is that all I want to know is how many employees are manning that frontline desk. That is all I want to know. And I want to know what the division is between public servants and employees of recruitment consultants. That is all – it is very simple – and if he could provide me with that information I would be very grateful because, reading the answers that were provided by Dr Cortes, I am not sure that he has in fact provided me with the answer, except that overall it is 11.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is exactly correct. What I am telling him is that the question he is asking me in the supplementary today is the same question he asked of Dr Cortes also by way of supplementary, but the questions he asked in the Order Paper within the last six months and today are also the same questions. In other words, he asks questions in the Order Paper which are answered by the Hon. Dr Cortes. He is not satisfied with that answer and he therefore asks for a particular breakdown in the supplementary, which obviously I read before I came to the House. But if that is the information he wants to have, I am happy to give it to him by way of writing.

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Q914/2016

Hong Kong office –
Total running costs

Clerk: We now move to Question 914. The questioner is the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm the total cost of running the Hong Kong office by reference to salaries and benefits, rent, expenses including flights and all other costs relating to Gibraltar's representation in the region?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the total cost of running the Government of Gibraltar office in Hong Kong is £400,000 per year. This includes salaries, benefits, rent, expenses and flights.

Hon. E J Phillips: Just one supplementary question: does the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister agree with me that, in light of the answers by the Minister for Financial Services and Commercial Affairs yesterday relating to the pulling of certain contracts relating to inward investment, that £400,000 is an awful lot of money to be spending on a Hong Kong office in the region which is supposed to be bringing work and inward investment to our jurisdiction?

Could he also explain why, in relation to that particular point, the original question, in relation to this House on the cost of Mr Cruz of £250,000, the increases – do they relate to rent and also flights for Mr Cruz to move back and forwards from Gibraltar?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, my hon. Friend the Minister for Financial Services will answer your question.

The Government does not agree with the hon. Member's assessment, but I should explain that for administrative reasons the Hong Kong office has been bundled together with Brussels and with London and comes under the Office of the Deputy Chief Minister.

But really, in terms of the work that it does ... London and Brussels are obviously far more political and Hong Kong is mainly commercial, so it is really the Minister for Commerce who deals with the substance of what the office actually does, and he will be happy to answer your question.

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the Opposition seem to have some sort of obsession with Jason Cruz, with the Hong Kong office and with everything else relating to it – and I do not understand why. If they understood anything about marketing, if they understood anything about what the private sector is asking Government to do ... this is precisely what they are asking us to do and precisely what we are doing.

950 If the hon. Member is suggesting that £400,000 is too much of a cost to have an office open in China, the biggest powerhouse probably over the next 10 to 15 years, then I struggle to understand how they could possibly have come to that conclusion – unless, of course, they have an obsession with Jason Cruz in the Hong Kong office. It must be the cheapest office internationally in the world, and Gibraltar would be going in the opposite direction to Jersey –
955 which has an office in Mumbai, in Delhi, in Hong Kong, in China – to Guernsey, to the British Virgin Islands. Even the Isle of Man has got an office in all of these countries and the Opposition is telling the private sector today that for £400,000 Gibraltar should not have an office in Hong Kong. I think it is absolutely incredible. (Interjection) Yes, you have. And you mentioned that the Hon. Minister for Financial Services said yesterday, of contracts ... I did not. I said about one 960 transaction that did not come through because of Brexit, but of course there are many other transactions that have come through and that have happened, and there are businesses all over Gibraltar today working with Hong Kong and China that were not before we opened the office.

So I think the hon. Members should think before they open mouth, and engage brain before they do that, Mr Speaker, because it is absolutely striking that at £400,000 this Government has 965 a representative for the whole of China – and they think that is a bridge too far. Absolutely staggering, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, everyone in Gibraltar wants Hong Kong to be a success. Of course we do. We all want inward investment.
970

Hon. A J Isola: You want to close it!

Hon. E J Phillips: No, of course we don't want to close it! What we want to do is to make sure that the money going into this project delivers results for this economy. That is all we want to do.
975

Hon. D A Feetham: Absolutely. Hear, hear.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, that did not sound to me like a question. That sounded to me like an attempt to wriggle of a hook that the hon. Gentleman had made for himself. He has had to face the inexorable logic of what the Minister for Financial Services has told him, because after Brexit ... is it that they do not realise that we will not be able to trade so easily with the rest of the European Union and that we will have to trade with the rest of the world, and that one of the biggest opportunities for trade is with China and that having an office 985 in China is exactly what we should be doing?

If they are saying that it should cost less than £400,000, Mr Speaker, I will bring to this House next time, if they like, anything they did which cost less than £400,000 – because they did not do anything in England or in the United Kingdom that cost less than £400,000. The furniture that they bought for some of the rooms in Gibraltar House in London cost more than £400,000! Or is 990 it that they do not realise the legacy that they are carrying into this House? Mr Speaker, a hole in the ground where there used to be a theatre cost £9 million. That is the sort of education that we have to take from them in respect of cost.

Mr Speaker: May I suggest to Hon. Members that we move on to the next question? Really!

CHIEF MINISTER

Q915/2016

Ministerial and parliamentary allowances –
Update on Parliament website

995 Clerk: We now move to questions to the Hon. the Chief Minister.
We commence with Question 915. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1000 Hon. R M Clinton: Can the Government please advise what are the ministerial and parliamentary allowances for 2016-17 and why have these not yet been updated on Parliament's website?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1005 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the information requested has now been uploaded on the Government website. Nevertheless, I now hand over a schedule with the information requested by the hon. Gentleman. That's a waste of £400,000, if I ever saw one.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister for the schedule and information, and I am gratified that the parliamentary website has been updated.

1010 Just to confirm my maths, the Chief Minister and everybody else in this House has had the standard public sector pay increase of 2.75%

1015 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I believe so. I believe that is the way it is applied across the board and that is the way it has always applied. And I believe, just to confirm my maths, that given that we are here, on average, three days a month and that we do not sit in two months of the year, that would make about 30 days, which means that the Leader of the Opposition is earning about £2,000 a day that he comes to Parliament. Apparently, from what I heard on City Pulse, he thinks that is part-time wages.

1020 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I fail to see what that has to do with my question, and I take it maths of course is not his strong point, so I will not ask him any more questions when it comes to calculations.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it may not be my strong point according to him, but I realise that he does not think I have any strong points – but 30 x 2 is one I can do quite easily.

Q916/2016
Election manifestos –
Upload to Government websites

1025 Clerk: Question 916. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would the Government agree that it is inappropriate for political election manifestos to be uploaded to Government or Government agency websites?

1030 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1035 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, it depends on the circumstances. For example, if the Parliament were to upload the manifestos of all political parties contesting an election, that would seem appropriate. Once a party wins an election, their manifesto in fact becomes a programme for Government – although I have heard some people say that manifestos are just a wish list, but I am speaking for myself and my party. There might be a good argument, in fact, to suggest it should then be uploaded to the Government website so that citizens can check that the political party that won the election is delivering on its commitments. There could be other relevant circumstances where it might also be appropriate and some where it might not be.

1040 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Chief Minister's answer. I wonder whether he would think that having the 2011 GSLP manifesto on the GHA website is appropriate. I can direct Members to the GHA website now as we speak: gha.gi/media/general-publications. I would be grateful for the Chief Minister's opinion.

1045 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, my answer remains exactly as I set out, and if that decision has been made in order to set out what our agenda for the GHA was in 2011 I think it is a point well made, and in fact I did not realise until the hon. Gentleman asked the question that we had not uploaded the 2011 and the 2015 manifestos to the Government website. I think it is in the interests of citizens that they see that the Government elected in 2011 has delivered on its programme and that the Government elected in 2015 is delivering on its programme, and I shall ensure that the election-winning manifestos of all parties that still provide them online are uploaded to the relevant Government website as soon as possible.

1055 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I take it then that the Chief Minister agrees that it is entirely appropriate for the GHA to have a political manifesto on its website and that the Government has no intention of removing it.

1060 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman seems not to want to hear the answer that I am giving him, but in fact what I am saying to him is that I am grateful that he has pointed it out, because I am going to have uploaded to the Government website and to the GHA website the election-winning manifestos of all the political parties that have them available digitally, which means that people will see that when the parties on this side of the House win elections they deliver against their manifestos, and when the parties on that side of the House ... I have said 'parties', of course, out of deference to the hon. Lady but she has not been in Government yet. She may yet do what she says, if she ever wins an election. When the party on that side of the House has won elections it has regarded its manifestos as what the Hon. the former Chief Minister, known to some on that side of the House as the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, said that manifestos were a wish list, and people will be able to see on the GHA website, on the Government website and on every other website that the Government has – that we deliver and they do not.

1070 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can I just ask is this common practice in other western democracies? Does the UK provide their manifesto on government websites? How does it work exactly?

1080 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the position in other democracies is not something I can answer for right now. It may be that some do and some do not, but this is a simple democratic issue and I am very grateful that the hon. Gentleman has brought it up because people are voting for something and during a general election campaign it is just party political material; it is out there for people to choose. That is why I have suggested that at general election time, what we should do is have all the political manifestos uploaded to the Parliament website, and in my view the Parliament website might be very appropriately updated by providing pdfs of all the political manifestos of all time, so that people can see what has been said before.

1085 When a party wins an election, that manifesto – which is the manifesto of the political party – in our view, becomes the programme for Government. It becomes the route map for Government. Therefore, I think it is entirely appropriate that people should then be able to look at it; hon. Members should then be able to look at it without the party that is responsible simply getting rid of it from its website and hoping that people lose the hard copies and not being able to hold us to account.

1090 Hon. Members obviously have access to our magnificent manifestos – both the first one, which is the 'New Dawn' manifesto, and the second one, 'The Strongest Foundations' manifesto. I promise them an even better one for the next General Election. They ask us questions about that manifesto. Why would they object that the general public should have easy access to what we have said we are going to do, so that the general public, and not just they, can then point out that we may be failing, or actually point out that we are delivering? Why should something live on the ether and not be easily accessible?

1095 Mr Speaker, I am quite happy, in fact, to also upload Opposition Member's manifestos so that the public can have access to them, not just on the Parliament website but also on the Government website, because then people will be able to go back and see some of the nonsense that people have defended at a general election.

1100 A Member: May I suggest to the Chief Minister that he also publishes the lovely glossy pictures in his 'magnificent' – so described by him – of the schools on the Bayside website. (Interjection by Mr Speaker)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am delighted to do so, because it will be a much better copy than what they provided on Rooke.

1110 Mr Speaker: It is nothing to do with the subject of the question.
Next question.

Q917/2016
PAYE October 2016 –
Drop in collection amount

Clerk: Question 917, the Hon. R M Clinton.

1115 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please explain why PAYE collections in October 2016 fell to £6.59 million as opposed to the average of £10.91 million per month for the previous nine months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1120 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, according to the monthly statistics published by the Income Tax Office in relation to the amount of PAYE tax collected per month in 2016 – which are available on Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar's website – the amount of PAYE tax collected in October 2016 amounted to £9.35 million. Although not significantly below the 1125 calculated year-to-date average of £10.91 million, there are nevertheless a number of factors that contribute to variances in the amount of the PAYE tax collected. Examples include changes in remuneration and staffing levels within employers in Gibraltar, in addition to the timing of when payments of PAYE are made.

1130 Under the Income Tax (Pay As You Earn) Regulations 1989, employers are required to settle their PAYE tax deducted from employees on or before the fifteenth day of the following month and therefore changes in employer payment patterns would offset the collection yield for that month, with a corresponding increase being noticeable subsequently.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for that answer.
1135 So, given that the reduction represents something like a 39% reduction month-on-month, is the Chief Minister or the Income Tax Office satisfied that there is no underlying problem in respect of PAYE collection?

1140 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it can only represent a 39% fall if we take the figure that he has provided. If you take the figure that I have provided, I do not think it represents 39%.

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, I hope I am using the same statistics as he has, which I downloaded from the Government website, updated 3rd November 2016 – source: Income Tax Office. It shows gross receipts of £10.79 million in September and gross receipts of £6.59 million 1145 in October, and that is the reduction I referred to. My question is, is there any concern in the Income Tax Office that there is a problem?

1150 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Gentleman needs to listen to what I have said. The figure that I have been provided with to give to the House is £9.35 million and I have then given an explanation, so it is not £6.59 million.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, may I ask whether the Chief Minister's update is 1155 3rd November or was it dated later, or has he just been given a number directly by the Tax Office? As I say, I did download this schedule from the Government's website only a couple of weeks ago.

1160 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am going to read what I have been given again, so that the hon. Gentleman has the benefit of hearing it again. According to the monthly statistics published by the Income Tax Office in relation to the amount of PAYE tax collected per month in 2016 – which are available on Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar's website – the amount of PAYE tax collected in October 2016 amounted to £9.35 million. That is what I have been given.

1165 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I have just been handed the updated schedule by my colleague, Mr Llamas. It looks like the statistics on the Government website were updated on 15th December, which then reflects the number the Chief Minister has referred to of £9.35 million, and then in November £10.7 million, so I apologise to the House if there has been any mistake on my part but certainly those were the numbers that were on the Government website as at 3rd November.

1170 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q918/2016
Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd –
Professional advisers for meeting with the Opposition

Clerk: Question 918, the Hon. R M Clinton.

1175 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please name the professional advisers with whom the Chief Minister is trying to arrange – or has arranged – a meeting with the Opposition in respect of the £300 million loan raised by Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1180 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the professional advisers will include the Financial Secretary, the Directors of Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd and the company's legal adviser.

1185 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister for his answer. From that list then, I take it there will be nobody from James Stocks & Co, the merchant bank or investment banker?

Hon. Chief Minister: I did not envisage bringing them, Mr Speaker, at huge cost to the taxpayer, just to have a chat with Members of the Opposition.

1190 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I note that in a press release he said he was 'trying to arrange to gather together all the individuals.' The Financial Secretary is obviously at his disposal; the Directors of the company, I presume, are at his disposal; and his legal advisers, I presume, are one, namely, Hassans, which I presume are also in Gibraltar. I wonder what was the difficulty in arranging the meeting?

1195 Mr Speaker: No, I am not allowing that supplementary. It is nothing to do with it. The dates on which the meeting is and any problems that there may have been in arranging the meeting have nothing to do with the persons that the Chief Minister has stated are going to attend that meeting.

1200

Hon. R M Clinton: I apologise, Mr Speaker. May I ask the names of the legal advisers who will be present?

1205

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman seems to have a very low regard for the level of complexity of the work that the people who I have referred to do and their travel schedules, because, for example, the company's legal adviser is the founder of the GSD, Peter Montegriffo, who has a considerable practice at Hassans which takes him out of the jurisdiction often, and he is not somebody who can be available at the drop of a hat to meet with retired bankers.

1210

The Directors of Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd include James Levy, for example, who as we all know is one of the engines of the Gibraltar economy all on his own. The Financial Secretary, of course, the hon. gentleman is at my disposal, but I respect people greatly and I do not expect them to behave as if they were serfs. With my busy diary and their busy diaries, finding a vector which allows all of us to be present has not been easy.

1215

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his answer. When he says 'legal advisers', he has mentioned just one person. Is that the only person to be present from Hassans?

1220

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, James Levy is going to be present from Hassans; Peter Montegriffo is going to be present from Hassans. I do not know whether he has junior people working with him on this matter, but, look, I am not going to ask him to bring all his juniors. I think that between Peter and James they will be able to field hon. Members' questions. And, of course, the Leader of the Opposition, I have been told, will also be present and he is also from Hassans.

1225

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, my final comment on this observation is that I am grateful to the Chief Minister for the participants of the meeting. I notice that all of them are residents in Gibraltar and I hope they all continue [Technical interference].

1230

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government is not responsible for the residence of people – and I did not detect a question – but I am delighted that the hon. Gentleman at least agrees with me that all those I have mentioned are resident in Gibraltar. I do not know where his line of questioning is going or whether he just wants to make it a habit of getting up and ending a line of questioning with a comment, which of course would be entirely outside the Rules of the House.

1235

Q919/2016
Financial performance to 30th September 2016 –
Ministerial statement

Clerk: Question 919, the Hon. R M Clinton.

1240

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, will the Government undertake to make a ministerial statement in January 2017 in respect of its financial performance as compared to the 2016-17 estimates for the six month period to 30th September 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1245

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will make a statement to this House on the Government's financial performance at Budget time and otherwise when I consider it appropriate to do so.

1250

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, may I remind the Chief Minister that his hon. colleague, Joe Bossano, undertook to give to me updated positions in January in respect of the positions up to September, but I thought it would be more appropriate for that to be in the way of a ministerial statement, but if he so wishes I will table the question. Is that his preferred approach?

1255

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, whatever he considers appropriate or not appropriate is a matter entirely for him. What Joe Bossano has agreed to do – and all of the Government thinks is appropriate – is that they should have the information that we were given on the six-monthly basis because he asked the question, and that is exactly what we will do.

1260

What we are not going to do is make statements when he thinks that we should make statements, outside of Budget time, in relation to the financial position of the Government. The last time I did that, Mr Speaker, was when I was faced with the Doomsday memo from the former Financial Secretary and I had to explain to people the dire situation which they had left the public finances of Gibraltar.

1265

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q920/2016

Gibraltar Home Loans Ltd – Licence as mortgage creditor

Clerk: Question 920, the Hon. R M Clinton.

1270

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, has Gibraltar Home Loans Ltd applied for and obtained a licence from the Financial Services Commission under the Financial Services (Investment and Fiduciary Services) Act in respect of acting as a mortgage creditor within the meaning of the Financial Services (Mortgage Credit) Regulations 2016?

1275

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, Gibraltar Home Loans Ltd has not applied for a licence.

1280

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if the Chief Minister could perhaps confirm our understanding on this side of the House that this entity ... I believe, the Hon. Mr Bossano mentioned that at least one mortgage had been granted by this company. Would he not agree, then, that he needs to apply for a licence?

1285

Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely not, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, may I ask him on what grounds?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the company is giving mortgages to its employees and therefore it does not have to apply for a licence.

1290 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, my understanding was that Gibraltar Home Loans had no employees. Is the Chief Minister telling me now that it has employees?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is a vehicle through which the Government provides loans to its employees. It is perfectly normal for any employer that is offering this sort of financial benefit to be able to do so through an SPV, and that is what it is doing.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, has the Chief Minister received advice in respect of that particular point? I will not ask what the advice is; I am just asking if he has had advice?

1300 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government does not reveal the content of its advice and therefore does not need to reveal whether it has taken advice, but I would refer the hon. Gentleman simply to the Financial Services (Mortgage Credit) Regulations 2016. He might care to read them and then he would realise that anybody who reads English would not need legal advice in order to reach the conclusion I have reached.

1305 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is there a reason why the Government is treating this particular company differently from other Government-owned companies, because really what he is saying is that, for the purposes of the provision of loans to public servants, there is no difference between the Government and its Government-owned company, namely this particular company. Now, we have had exchanges across the floor of the House on many, many occasions and his main defence to all the political points that we have made in that respect has been, 'It is a Government-owned company; it is not the Government.' Ergo, for example: the debt of those companies has nothing to do with the Government. In this particular case he is choosing to treat the company as if it were the Government.

1315 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he mischaracterises the position the Government has taken in relation to that debate. He is giving it the characterisations he wishes to give it. That is not the position the Government has set out and therefore the rest of his analysis is not one on which I need to comment.

1320 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, on what basis does the Government treat this particular company as an emanation of the Government, because that is what it is doing in this particular case? The only reason he has proffered for this company not requiring any kind of licence is he is saying, 'Well, these are public servants and the loans have been provided to public servants by this company, and because they are public servants they are employees of the Government; therefore, it is providing loans to its own employees.' Well, they are not loans to its own employees; they are loans to the Government. Now, what basis does he treat this particular company as the Government?

1330 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not think the hon. Gentleman has ever detached himself enough from himself to hear what he says in the context of the debates that we have had. All of the companies that we are talking about – the ones that he likes to talk about and characterise in a particular way – all of them are Government-owned companies. Who has ever said that they are not Government-owned companies? The whole debate is based on the fact that they are Government-owned companies.

1335 Mr Speaker, when he alights on that point he might realise the answer that he is asking for now is one that becomes quite obvious.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, with respect, he has not answered the question.
1340 Of course they are Government-owned companies. This is a Government-owned company; those are Government-owned companies, but he is treating this particular Government-owned company as if it did not exist; as if it is just simply some kind of agent of the Government or something of that nature, or piercing the corporate veil, which is a term that he will understand.

1345 A company has separate corporate personality, a separate entity. That is the arguments that he has used on many, many occasions to the Government. Now, what basis does he treat this particular company as an emanation of the Government? In other words, the Government for the purposes of providing loans, which would then mean that it would not require a licence.

1350 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, years from now when he and I sit around as friends and have coffees, re-reading the Hansards of the battles that we had in Parliament, he will feel ever so faintly ridiculous when he reads back that supplementary.

1355 Why am I treating this company as if it does not exist? Well look, Mr Speaker, at least I understand why it is that he had to remove all those chairs from the Charles Hunt Room in order to pretend it was full and why it is that he will not conduct a morale survey in the GSD. (Laughter) Mr Speaker, a Government-owned company giving loans to Government employees is what we are dealing with. It is that simple, Mr Speaker. Then, Mr Speaker, we will have a brandy chaser after the coffee and he will say, 'Mira, en esa tenías razón, Fabian' – 'On that one, you were right, Fabian'.

1360 Hon R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may return to the original thrust of the question: my understanding, from the explanation given by the Hon. Mr Bossano for Gibraltar Home Loans Ltd, was that no one in Gibraltar would be left without a mortgage if they so needed one, given the potential constriction of mortgages in Gibraltar by lending banks.

1365 Would the Chief Minister agree with me that if any applicant to Gibraltar Home Loans Ltd was not an employee of the Government, it would not be able to give such a loan until they obtained this licence?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in principle, yes.

1370 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I think that is all I needed to know. Thank you.

1375 Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you for that last passing comment, which did not include a question, Mr Speaker. (Laughter) You see, Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman had then wanted to develop the issue and say, 'Can we therefore be happy to note that nobody has been left without a mortgage and that Gibraltar Home Loans has not needed to even be asked by people who are not employed by the Government to grant loans', I would have been happy to get up and say, 'Yes.'

1380 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, so in order to provide the people of Gibraltar –

Mr Speaker: Are you going to ask a question?

1385 Hon. R M Clinton: I am going to ask the question. (A Member: Wahey!) Wahey, yes! (A Member: At last! At last!)

In order not to leave the people of Gibraltar without a loan from this wonderful company, from the wonderful programme that this wonderful Chief Minister has offered to the wonderful people of Gibraltar, will he apply for a licence in the event that people will need such a licence?

1390 Hon. Chief Minister: In principle, yes, and I am grateful the hon. Gentleman has recognised, in time for Christmas, how wonderful things are.

Q921/2016
Financial Services (Money Lending) Act –
List of licenced money lenders

Clerk: Question 921, the Hon. R M Clinton.

1395 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a list of money lenders licensed under the Financial Services (Money Lending) Act as at 30th September 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1400 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, my answer remains as set out to Questions 389 and 442/2015. The details requested are not in the public domain, but I am again prepared to provide these details on a strictly confidential basis, if the hon. Member agrees. There are currently 19 money lending licences currently in issue. I remain happy to consider making a provision to publish the list generally in future.

1405 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister.

I would bring his attention to the Money Lending Rules in respect of the application for licence, and it actually requires the application to be Gazetted and the application actually to be filed as a Gazette. Therefore, an applicant's name is public and yet there is no register of licence holders.

1410 I can find nothing in the Money (Financial Services) Rules of Money Lending that says that such a list of licence holders should not be made public. I would therefore invite the Chief Minister to consider whether perhaps it would be appropriate to make such a list public.

1415 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, that is a question he did not need to ask me if he had his ears open when I answered his first question, because the last sentence I read says, 'I remain happy to consider making provision to publish a list in future.'

1420 My answer to Question 389/2015 ended with, 'I think it would be proper that this should be publicly available somewhere where the public can have access to it, perhaps on the Government website and renewed every year as the licences change or do not change.' I have absolutely no difficulty with that issue being dealt with in a way that is one that gives access to the public, because the public are the ones who have the service of borrowing money offered to them by these companies. Many of them may or may not advertise their service, so I see no reason why there should not be a provision that this should be published. In the same way that the hon. Gentleman says there is nothing to stop us from publishing a list, there is nothing requiring us that we are going to publish a list or advertising to lenders that we are going to publish a list.

1430 I think the conclusion I reached when I last discussed this with Members opposite ... It was then Damon Bossino – one is tempted to say one of the three doctors who has left the GSD since the last General Election, and another once since the last General Election as well, Miss Hassan Nahon, so that is four out of seven: a much worse ratio than three out of 85, but anyway.

The way I left it then, Mr Speaker, was that I was quite happy to discuss with a Member Opposite in the anti-chamber how to give effect to a mechanism to publish this list. I think it is appropriate and should be something that we do.

1435 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister.

Would he then undertake to publish such a list within the lifetime of this Parliament?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, because we are a different political generation, I do not envisage – and we do not work in the same firm when we are in practice – that he and I will be 1440 having coffee and brandy in the future. Perhaps, we will – who knows. We have enjoyed drinks in the past, when we were both students in the Students' Association. But I think, again, he will want to look at the Hansard and see what I have said and understand that his question, I do not think, is one that is relevant, because I have said I am quite happy to discuss with him in the anti-chamber how we might be able to do this, so I am not going to give an undertaking to do 1445 something that he and I have not yet discussed how we might do.

The word 'undertaking' has a particular meaning to a lawyer – at least to those of us who mean what we say – and therefore I am not going to give an undertaking, but I am quite happy to agree to discuss it with him in the anti-chamber and to try and find a mechanism to give effect to the idea that there should be a list published.

1450

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, as much as I am flattered by the Chief Minister's regard for my opinion, I do not see what discussion he could possibly have with me that would make it easier for him to publish a list. I therefore do not see any point in meeting in the anti-chamber, but again I would ask him to consider publishing this list sooner rather than later.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there are times when one feels like just banging one's head against the table. Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave a few moments ago – I think that is the appropriate term of art in a parliament elsewhere.

Q922-925/2016

Expressions of interest for vehicle fleet – Details and policy

1460 Clerk: Question 922, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, is the Government satisfied that 10 business days with a submission date of 22nd December 2016 is sufficient time for interested parties in expressing an interest to submit a proposal to lease its vehicle fleet and, if so, why the urgency?

1465

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): I will answer this question together with Questions 923 to 925.

1470

Clerk: Question 923, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please identify the media outlets in which the official notice inviting expressions of interest for the leasing of its vehicle fleet were placed, including the number of days placed and the dates?

1475

Clerk: Question 924, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise why it is seeking expressions of interest in respect of the leasing of its entire vehicle fleet, comprising over 400 vehicles and motorcycles and 90 specialist vehicles?

1480

Clerk: Question 925, the Hon. R M Clinton.

1485 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise what was the policy decision to be taken on the 'future of the Garage and Workshop' referred to by the Principal Auditor in a conversation with the Chief Executive Officer of the Technical Services Department in paragraph 3.5.4 of the Principal Auditors' Report for 2014-15?

1490 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government does consider that 10 business days is sufficient for interested parties to register an expression of interest with regard to leasing the fleet – and one would have assumed that to be an obvious answer given that is the time the Government has allowed.

1495 The advert was for the expressions of interest for the leasing of the Government's vehicle fleet and it was published in the Gibraltar Chronicle and Panorama on Tuesday, 22nd November 2016.

1500 Mr Speaker, as a consequence of the Garage and Workshop Section Collective Agreement and Early Exit Scheme, agreed by the previous administration, the operation of the Department has become extremely difficult due to the drain of skilled staff. As a consequence, we are looking at other models to deliver the service. One such model that would ensure that HMGOG has a safe, fully operational fleet would be the leasing of vehicles from the private sector.

1505 A leasing option would include the full servicing, repair and replacement of the whole fleet, ensuring that public sector employees have the possible resources to carry out their duties. We are currently in discussions with Unite, the union, on how best to introduce these changes in a way that will not have a negative impact on the workforce.

The future of the Garage and Workshop has been under review for a considerable number of years in order to identify the most efficient model for the future.

1510 The current expressions of interest recently advertised for the leasing of vehicles also form part of the overall review of the Garage and Workshop. Once these are received, the Government will be in a better position to decide on what option will provide the most efficient and best value for money.

1515 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister for his answer.

In terms of this transaction – I know he is loath to characterise anything, but – it would appear to be a sale-leaseback. Would it be correct that the first stage of this transaction is that the Government would de facto sell their entire fleet to whoever was the successful tenderer and then leaseback the same vehicles on whatever terms are agreed in future?

1520 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not know what the expressions of interest will result in. That may or may not be one of the ways that it is proposed by those who express an interest that matters should be dealt with.

1525 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would the Chief Minister not accept that in the first instance the Government should receive a sum of money for its 400-odd vehicles?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is one way which it may happen. It may happen in another way.

1530 Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, does the Chief Minister have an idea what that other way might be, because I frankly cannot see how you would effectively dispose of your entire vehicle fleet for no consideration?

1535 Hon. Chief Minister: Because the Hon. Chief Minister thinks there may be other ways of doing this other than disposing of the fleet.

1540 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, coming back to the expressions of interest, I actually have a copy of the terms and one of these specialist vehicles includes 'VIP vehicles', including the Chief Minister's vehicle. Since we established yesterday that there is only one provider in Gibraltar that can service the Chief Minister's vehicle, are we not really talking about one provider that has already been identified and hence why there is only 10 days in which to express an interest?

1545 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, because different providers could deal with taking that vehicle to the provider that provides the servicing for that vehicle. The hon. Gentleman may realise that the Government's vehicle fleet is very wide indeed and there are some vehicles there that are provided by other providers – which is not that provider that he seems to have wanted to identify – and the provider that provides the service may have to go to other providers in the context of servicing. It is not just the G1 Tesla that can only be dealt with by one particular garage. There are many vehicles that the Government has that can only be provided 1550 for in one particular garage, and in particular the modern vehicles.

If the hon. Gentleman wants to put his thinking cap on for more than the moment that it took him to try and come up with that, he might realise that some of the other VIP fleet are Mercedes which are provided for by another provider, and the only person that is going to have the computer that is going to go into the Mercedes is the Mercedes dealer.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would the Chief Minister have an idea as to when he may want to put into place this type of transaction? Is it within the first quarter next year; the second quarter? Does he have a timeframe?

1560 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have an idea but I am not here to answer for my ideas.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, does he have a concrete date as to when a decision will be taken as to whether the expressions of interest be accepted, or maybe none at all?

1565 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, 'Does he have a concrete date for when he will take a decision?' is not something that I think leads the House anywhere other than just to hypothesis and speculation as to when something might happen. When something happens, Mr Speaker, there will be an announcement and then the hon. Gentleman will be able to quiz us on what has happened, but until then he cannot ask us for a timetable which we impose upon ourselves so 1570 that he can then check us on it.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I will take a slightly different line on my supplementary now: in terms of the Garage and Workshop, how many jobs are at risk?

1575 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the number of jobs at risk is really not something that I can answer. It is a question that he should ask the man who has been referred to by some on that side of the House as 'the greatest Gibraltarian of all time' because the Collective Agreement that gave rise to redundancies was the one signed by them, I think a few days before they called the General Election of 2011.

1580 It is the Collective Agreement between the Gibraltar Government, Unite and Gibraltar Mechanical and Electrical Services Ltd, which provided for people to leave on an early-exit basis and for those who were employed in a Government Department to be moved to a company. So really, Mr Speaker, the Government is not envisaging any particular number of redundancies or anything like that. We are left with the agreement for redundancies that they signed.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, returning to the question about the fleet, the Hon. the Chief Minister was implying – perhaps I have got it wrong, and I am asking him about this – that what might be envisaged is a transaction involving Mercedes going to one particular garage or a deal 1590 with one particular garage in relation to Mercedes; in relation to the others, a different garage.

1595 Is that what the Government is considering, or is what he is saying that it will go to one particular entity and that entity will then have carriage of sending a Mercedes, for example, subcontracted to the Mercedes garage?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I was not envisaging anything. I was dealing with the 1595 hypothesis that was put by the hon. Member to his left. I am waiting to see what the expressions of interest provide, as other people who have proposed this to the Government from inside the Government, and to see what is proposed and what is best for the taxpayer. Once that happens, we will be in a position to make an assessment of what is in our best collective interest.

1600 What I was dealing with was the point the hon. Member, his colleague, was making to suggest that there was only one potential provider of these services, because one vehicle has to be serviced by them, and I gave them the example of five vehicles that have to be serviced by somebody else.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, this will be my last supplementary. If the Government 1605 receives no expressions of interest, what is its fall-back position? Will it be to just continue as it is with its own garage and its own fleet control?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is a hypothetical question and I do not think it is 1610 appropriate for me to get embroiled in answering hypothetical questions.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in relation to the question of the redundancies ... And, of course, if the Gibraltar Government, the new administration coming in in 2011, felt that there was something unfair in the Collective Agreement that had been negotiated by the GSD administration, it was always open for them to try and renegotiate.

1615 Mr Speaker, obviously I would have envisaged that any early retirement that had been taken by people under that Collective Agreement would have probably been taken shortly after 2011, 2012, 2013. Is he saying that there are still individuals that can take up the terms of that Collective Agreement that had been negotiated in 2011, or is he saying that there is nobody 1620 employed by the Garage and they are all employed by a company? I have not understood the answer that he has provided. Could I ask him to clarify it?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, you would have to give me specific notice of some aspects of that question, but I can tell him that nobody is employed by the Garage because 1625 when he was Minister for Justice they all transferred to Gibraltar Mechanical and Electrical Services Ltd.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I understand that, but the hon. Gentleman, in an answer that he provided to my hon. friend, Mr Clinton, referred to this Collective Agreement. Now, unless what 1630 the hon. Gentleman is just simply doing is making a political point – which would be cheap at that, I have to say, because it does not take matters any further – there must be some relevance to the Collective Agreement and the position today. Because the question, as I understand, that was made by Mr Clinton, was does he envisage that there is going to be any forms of redundancy, loss of jobs? It is not in the Garage, but it is in this particular company. Therefore, there has to be a link – unless there is none and he just simply wanted to mention the Collective 1635 Agreement that we negotiated – between the position today and the Collective Agreement.

I just wonder if we can return to the original question which was, how many, does he envisage that there are going to be any people that are going to be taking up redundancies or are there going to be loss of jobs within this particular company?

1640 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, to provide a political answer to a political question in a Parliament seems to me to be exactly what we have been elected to do and are here to do. It does not seem to me to be a cheap shot to remind the hon. Gentleman that they signed an agreement in relation to this particular Department which then saw all employees transferred to a company. But, look, it does seem to me as if it is becoming clearer and clearer that he had very 1645 little idea of what it was that was happening a floor above where he used to work, Mr Speaker.

The reason why it has been referred to is because the first question – not supplementary – that was put in relation to this subject was, ‘Can the Government advise why it is seeking expressions of interest?’ Well, Mr Speaker, we are seeking expressions of interest for the reason
I read out in my first answer which relates to the fact that this has denuded the Garage of all 1650 employees who have moved to a company and a lot have gone on an early-exit package. Well, Mr Speaker, that is the position. If he does not like the answer, he should not ask the question.

Let’s be clear: I am not envisaging anything at this stage. I have asked for expressions of interest. Once we receive those expressions of interest, we can make an assessment of those expressions of interest – and I have already said that we are doing so with the unions. I do not 1655 understand where it is that he thinks he is going.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, Mr Speaker, where I am going is I am trying to understand the answers that the hon. Gentleman has provided, and he has said something now in answer to my supplementary which I think takes the matter further. I do not know whether it is a slip of the 1660 tongue or not, but what he has just told me is, because of this Collective Agreement, there was a denuding of employees at the Garage – they went into a company; there were employees that took up early retirement in accordance with the Collective Agreement – and because of labour shortage – this is the implication of what he is saying – really, the job cannot be done properly in relation to the servicing of the fleet of cars. And that is the reason, as I understand it, why the 1665 Government is now effectively looking at expressions of interest in order to do that.

If that is true, then of course we then have a situation – and whether it is not true, we have a situation – where those employees in that company that formerly were involved in the servicing of these vehicles or working with these vehicles obviously would be, effectively – in inverted commas – redundant, because they would not be doing the job that they are doing at present.
1670 Therefore, my question is, well, what does the Government envisage is going to happen with those individuals if this particular initiative reaches fruition and a company is in fact engaged by the Government in order to service these particular vehicles?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, everything that he has said I disagree with, even the idea 1675 that people could, in effect, become redundant because of what the Government is trying to do.
That is completely contrary to the position the Government expects will be the case. But we are waiting to see what the expressions of interest say.

He started his supplementary, Mr Speaker, by saying ‘Now I have taken matters further by saying that the numbers have been reduced and the operation has been denuded by the early-1680 exit scheme.’ Well, Mr Speaker, I have only taken matters further in that respect if he did not hear what I said in respect of my first answer, because what I said was this: ‘As a consequence of the Garage and Workshop Section Collective Agreement and Early-Exit Scheme agreed by the previous administration, the operation of the Department has become extremely difficult due to the drain of skilled staff. As a consequence, we are looking at other models to deliver the 1685 service.’ So I started with that and that is exactly what I said now. I did not take matters further – although, perhaps he might have perked up his ears and started listening late in the day.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q926/2016
'Project India' –
Progress

1690 Clerk: Question 926, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Further to question 199/2016, can the Government confirm what tangible progress is being made to the so-called 'Project India'.

1695 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, a considerable amount of work has been undertaken in respect of developing the relationship between Gibraltar and India. Specific announcements will be made when appropriate.

Hon. E J Phillips: I take it from that response that he means within the term of this Parliament.

1705 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, yes, although it may be that some of these things relate to things that will occur through the term of this Parliament and future Parliaments and I or others may be making announcements about them, but for the good of the future of Gibraltar those announcements, I hope, will be welcomed by Members opposite, whether they are opposite or not.

1710 Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Government envisage that it is going to be opening some kind of office in India or in that area in order to service any business emanating from that area?

Hon. Chief Minister: If we do, we will make an announcement, Mr Speaker. If we do not, we will not.

1715

Hon. D A Feetham: And if he does, Mr Speaker, will he undertake that it will be advertised and he will not shoehorn in any GSLP activists in the same way that he did with the Hong Kong office for £400,000?

1720 Mr Speaker: The Chief Minister does not have to answer that question because I am ruling it out of order.

Go on to the next question, please.

1725 Hon. Chief Minister: I am grateful to Mr Speaker. If I had had an opportunity to answer, I would have reminded the hon. Gentleman that appointees to represent the Gibraltar Government abroad are always appointed by the Chief Minister. It is not a process of advertisement. I reminded him when he made those points that he likes to make about a man he used to, I think, consider a friend, until he changed parties, Mr Speaker. All ambassadors are appointed not as a result of interview processes, and although we do not have ambassadors, we have commercial representatives, and they are appointed in the way that they were appointed under the GSD now that the GSLP Liberals are in power – except, Mr Speaker, that it seems, when they do something, it is a perfectly proper and appropriate conduct of good Government and, when we do something, we are 'shoehorning people into positions' even though they are extraordinarily capable Gibraltarians who have demonstrated abroad that they are world-class at what they do.

But, you know, Mr Speaker, that sort of hypocrisy is what delivers the sort of low morale that he now sees amongst his supporters. That is why he has to create a runway in the centre of the Charles Hunt Room to pretend that it is packed and that is why there are more doctors at the GHA than there were people in the Charles Hunt Room for your last General Meeting.

Q927/2016
Government consultants –
Accuracy of published list

1740

Clerk: Question 927, the Hon D. A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: His fall will be sharp and speedy indeed when it comes, I have to tell him that.

1745

Hon. Chief Minister: I hope so!

Hon. D A Feetham: It will.

1750 Is the Government satisfied that the list of consultants retained by Government and published on the Government website is accurate?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1755 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, when my fall comes, it probably means that I will go and become one of his partners because I think his is going to come before mine – but never mind.

Mr Speaker, yes, sir, if there is any reason why we should not be, perhaps he could share that with us.

Q928/2016
Gibraltar Consultative Committee –
Appointment of ad hoc members

1760

Clerk: Question 928, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state whether the ad hoc members of the Gibraltar Consultative Council have been appointed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, an announcement will be made when the ad hoc members of the Gibraltar Consultative Council are appointed.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does he intend to Gazette, for example, the appointment of the members of the Consultative Council?

1775 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether there is an obligation to Gazette or not Gazette in the legislation. We recently passed it, but I do not have that level of detail. Gazetting is something that is usually done as a requirement, but otherwise this is something that can be done by way of public statement.

1780 I have no view whether something should be just a Gazette statement or a public statement. It is important that the people who form part of this very important consultative body should be known to the general public so that they realise just how eminent the people that I hope will be a part of it are – and I have no views one way or the other.

1785 Hon. D A Feetham: Has the Hon. the Chief Minister approached anybody in relation to potentially being an ad hoc member of the Gibraltar Consultative Council, or is that something that he has not got to that stage and therefore is something that he is going to be doing early next year or next year?

Hon. Chief Minister: I have, Mr Speaker.

1790 Hon. D A Feetham: So I take it from that answer that he has identified the people that he wants as ad hoc members of the Gibraltar Consultative Council?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have identified them. I have not spoken to all of those who I have identified.

1795 Hon. R M Clinton: Sorry, Mr Speaker, if I may just ask the Chief Minister perhaps two supplementaries. One just to confirm that the Consultative Council, even though it does not have the ad hoc members yet, has not met? If it has met, when did it meet?

1800 Secondly, the ad hoc members: would the Chief Minister confirm that he will be writing formal letters of appointment and not just a phone call?

Mr Speaker: The Chief Minister does not have to answer. My common sense tells me that you do not have to answer the first question. If the ad hoc members have not been appointed – (Interjection) I have not understood it? Well, please repeat it then.

1805 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, you have not understood it because the point is that you do not need to have the ad hoc members in order for the Consultative Council to meet.

Mr Speaker: The answer is that, since I am an ex officio member, I can answer the question myself and therefore we can carry on with some other business. Can we?

1810 I am an ad hoc member. I have not been called to any meeting. I have not attended and therefore the answer is that it has not met.

Can we get on with the second part of your question?

1815 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, with respect, you are not an ad hoc member; you are actually a standing member.

Mr Speaker: I am an ex officio member – 1820 Hon. R M Clinton: But not ad hoc.

Mr Speaker: – given the position I have occupied in the past.

Hon. R M Clinton: Yes, exactly, but that is not an ad hoc member.

1825 Mr Speaker: The hon. Member is wasting the time with what I regard as a nonsensical question. Can we please get on with some common sense?

1830 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would like to consider myself as a person with some common sense, but my question was asking has the Consultative Council met without the ad hoc members? It is as simple as that. You may be there in your own capacity, but my question is directed at the Government.

1835 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, you are absolutely right, in particular now that the question has been clarified: if the Council had met without the ad hoc members, you would have been the first to know because you are a post-holder member and therefore you have clarified to the Opposition that there has not been a meeting of this Council.

Mr Speaker, I am happy to deal with the second limb of what the hon. Gentleman said before. The whole thing will start with a phone call and it will end with a letter.

Q929/2016
Income Tax –
Notices to non-compliant taxpayers

1840 Clerk: Question 929, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1845 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, since the hon. Gentlemen opposite have been in Government, how many taxpayers have been sent notices in writing of the Commissioner of Income Tax's intention to publish details of their failure to comply with their legal obligations to pay tax?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1850 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, from December 2011 to date 169 taxpayers have been sent notices in writing in relation to the Commissioner of Income Tax's intention to publish details of their failure to comply with their legal obligations to pay tax.

1855 Hon D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I take it from the fact that there has not – to my knowledge, any way – been any publication of details, that the fact that this notice has been sent has had the desired effect in all 169 cases?

1860 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I understand that 45 of these letters have gone sometime this month as part of the routine the that Tax Office has got into since we were elected. The time for settlement of outstanding liabilities is Friday, 13th January 2017 for those 45. The hon. Gentleman therefore cannot make that assumption about those 45, but I think he can safely make it about the balance.

Q930/2015
Prison Service –
New recruits

Clerk: Question 930, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1865 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state whether there have been any new recruits within the Prison Service this year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1870 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much for the answer. Can the Hon. the Chief Minister state how many recruits there have been within the Prison Service this year?

1875 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, two, sir.

1880 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, have they been recruited from the wait-listed individuals that were wait-listed for six months prior to March of this year? Then I think that the then Minister for Justice wrote to me and said that the wait-listing had been extended for another three months. I may have it wrong whether it is three months or another six months, but can he answer whether they have been recruited from those people that have been wait-listed as opposed to outside that list?

1885 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is not a supplementary that arises from this question. If the hon. Gentleman wants that answer, he can ask me and I will get the information.

Q931-932/2016
Public Service vacancies –
Number and details

Clerk: Question 931, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1890 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many vacancies were there across the Public Service, inclusive of Government-owned companies or public authorities, as at the end of November 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1895 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question 932.

Clerk: Question 932, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1900 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state, as at the end of November 2016, how many employees in the public sector, Government-owned companies, authorities and/or agencies were currently temporarily promoted, detailing acting posts, date temporarily promoted and the Department?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1905 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have again reviewed the answers provided by the Human Resources Department and I am still not confident with the answers provided. Nevertheless, I am willing to give the hon. Gentleman a copy behind the Speaker's chair of the information as it has been provided to me. I will ensure that there is a satisfactory answer available for the next sitting, because I think it is important that we get to the bottom of what is wrong with this, and if he agrees I will provide him, on an off-the-record, without prejudice basis, the information that I have been provided and I will explain to him why it is that I am not satisfied with the answer.

1915 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, nothing that I will say will move the Chief Minister to provide me the information in any event, so I am left with no alternative but to accept the offer that he has made. Obviously, Mr Speaker, I will ask your indulgence when it comes to next time round, to ask exactly the same question, so that the answer is provided if it has not been provided in writing beforehand.

1920 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I accept that the hon. Gentleman should be able to answer that question even though it is going to be within the six-month period because I am saying it will be available in that time.

1925 The hon. Gentleman says he is 'not going to move me' and that he 'has no choice but to accept', but remember that the choice I am giving him, Mr Speaker, is that I am going to give him the information as it has been given to me, in confidence and on what he and I would understand is a without prejudice basis.

Mr Speaker: Yes, it will become public at the next meeting.

1930 Hon. Chief Minister: But in any event, I am now very confident that it will be something that we can publish at the next meeting, because I expect to be able to get to the bottom of the issue.

Q933/2016

Gibraltar Private Sector Workers and Pensioners Association – Proposals for Government assistance

Clerk: Question 933, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: With reference to the public announcement made by the Gibraltar Private Sector Workers and Pensioners Association in the Gibraltar Chronicle on 1940 13th December, whereby they claim that Government has failed on its manifesto commitments both in 2011 and 2015 leaving them in 'hardship and misery', what does Government propose to do to assist this Association and earn its trust once again?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1945 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, we will comply with our manifesto commitment of 2015.

1950 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I appreciate that. According to them, the Government has already not complied with their manifesto commitment of 2011 and, furthermore, they have not complied as per this communiqué that the Government sent on 1st April 2016, on the morning before their AGM, promising universal credit and an update to be issued by no later than Friday, 29th April – which is about eight months ago – and they still have not heard.

1955 Furthermore, Michael Crome promised that whatever figure was agreed as extra financial assistance would be implemented in this financial year, so we have two commitments that have still not materialised. What would the Chief Minister have to say about that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, first of all, I would counsel her not to mention the name of civil servants in the context that she has today – or not civil servants but public servants. I understand that she has not been long in this House. The appropriate way to deal 1960 with it is to say, 'a member of his staff' rather than mention the name, but I entirely accept that is not something that she has done intentionally.

Secondly, Mr Speaker, I think it is not true to say – and I am not suggesting that it is her that is in any way incurring an untruthfulness – that they have not heard back. In fact, we have had 1965 meetings with them since, as I understand it, although we have not, perhaps, written – but then again my mind may be playing tricks because a lot has happened since April 2016.

The manifesto commitment, Mr Speaker, does not just depend on the Government, and this is perhaps an opportunity to highlight the independence of Community Care. Community Care is a part of what the Government is trying to structure in respect of this, but Community Care is independent and has its own views and needs its views taken into consideration and accepted.

1970 Finally, Mr Speaker, what I would say is that this is a collective of people that has the Government's sympathy and it retains the Government's sympathy, despite the fact it has issued an advert against the Government, but we have great sympathy for their plight. We are the only Government that has ever picked this issue up.

It is true that we have taken longer than we anticipated to deal with some of the concerns 1975 that they have but we continue to be the only Government in the history of Gibraltar that is prepared to deal with the matter of how individuals in the private sector find themselves – if not destitute then certainly without a generous pension provision in old age. That is why we will continue not just to deal with the problem that they have but also with the problem in the future for those who are employed in the private sector today, to deal with the issue of 1980 compulsory pensions in the private sector – again, something that is only in our manifesto.

I sincerely expect, Mr Speaker, that before the next General Election this collective will not just by then have been happy to see how the Government has dealt with this matter, but long before then, and they will be very happy in fact with the way that we approach resolution, to such an extent that I hope to be able to persuade them to place an advertisement in the 1985 Gibraltar Chronicle and any other newspaper that will carry it congratulating the Government for having been the only political Government in the history of Gibraltar to address these issues.

If I may say to the hon. Lady, with the very greatest of respect, I think this is the most political question asked today and I am surprised that she is the only one on the Opposition benches to have picked it up. When I hear people say that she is our cheerleader, I worry that they do not 1990 realise that this is not cheerleading politics; this is very embarrassing politics indeed. The Government considers that this is an issue that must be dealt with and it will be dealt with.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, thank you.

I was having visions of myself with a pair of pom-poms, so thank you for redeeming me from 1995 that visual.

I still ask the Chief Minister, once again: the Association has implored on me to bring this up because they claim that they have not heard anything since Friday, 29th April, which was the promise. I ask the Chief Minister, perhaps, if he could contact them or make a commitment in this House to get in touch with them. Does he not consider it a very sad state of events that this 2000 Association has had to resort to a public announcement, talking about 'facing another Christmas of hardship and misery' and also asking about the fact that, because of the lack of communication from Government, a lot of them have actually had to resort to taking funds out of their debentures? They term the effect of having to take out their funds from the debentures as 'crucifying the savers' because of the penalties that they have had to withstand.

2005 Can the Chief Minister give some kind of definite, timely commitment to speak to these people and give them some trust that they will actually abide by their promises?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am going to forgive her for confusing crucifixion and Christmas, but they are completely different holidays.

2010 Mr Speaker, the first thing is that I do not recognise that there is anyone in Gibraltar in this collective that is suffering 'hardship and misery' by the measure that anyone else in Europe

2015 would understand that. There are some people in Gibraltar who are not going to have as abundant a Christmas as others and there are some people in Gibraltar who are in hardship and in misery. I do not think that this collective genuinely, when it considers the position it is in, can say that they are in hardship and misery, although I do not say that there are some who might not be. Certainly those who have briefed her, in my view, need to take the view that, if what you are talking about is debentures, there are not many people in hardship and misery that have debentures.

2020 What the Government wants to do is put in place a system so that people do not have to dip into their savings, so that they are able to have – as I think we have set out – an income which is dignified in their old age.

2025 She needs to know that when we started the discussions, what we were being asked for was that people who did not have a private pension scheme should by the Government be given the equivalent of Government occupational pension schemes – of the sort of final salary schemes that the hon. Lady and I have had cause to debate across the floor of this House – even though they had not been employees of the Government.

We have moved on a lot since then. That is why Community Care has come into the equation. I can tell the hon. Lady that I know that we had a communication with this collective on 2030 30th September of this year, so I do not accept the date of April as the date of final communication.

I can also tell the hon. Lady that I know and have a very high regard for the people in the committee that I am referring to, and that I meet them on occasions in other guises, and have discussed these issues. Therefore, she has the Government's commitment that we will comply with our manifesto obligations.

2035 This is not an issue where the Government is trying in any way to avoid providing the additional income that we are committed to providing, but there are reasons why we cannot do it from the Government because we do not think that is prudent. I ask her to refer in her mind to the reasons why Community Care was created and she may then understand why Community Care may be relevant and why there is now a third party in the equation that has to get comfortable with what the Government might propose. Therefore, I am going to crave her indulgence in respect of this matter, but this is very much an issue on our agenda and one that will be dealt with.

2040 If I can just end, Mr Speaker, by saying that I do not think that it is appropriate to look at her as a cheerleader in any way, but there are some who might be best described as cheerleaders for Gibraltar's failure and they do not look very good in pom-poms either.

2045 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, one final supplementary, if I may? Thank you for that information, Chief Minister. Can I just then have a confirmation or not, that as per this Government official what I have been told by the Association, is the Government willing to confirm that extra financial assistance for low income pensioners will be implemented in this financial year, as told by this official?

In case it is my last time to speak today, I want to take this opportunity to wish all the Members of the House a very merry Christmas.

2055 Thank you.

Hon Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there are still motions to go. I look forward to hearing her views in respect of the motions, and the Government has every intention of dealing with those before the end of the calendar year, so I am sure that we will still have an opportunity to hear her, although, of course, I reciprocate on behalf of this side of the House.

2060 Mr Speaker, 'in this financial year' seems to be the sort of target that we should be aiming for and she has my undertaking – something I am not usually willing to give, she knows – that we shall certainly be doing our very best to ensure that we do comply with that commitment, because this is a collective that continues to have the Government's sympathy.

2065 I still think it is appropriate to highlight that we are the only Government that has cared. We are the only party that has carried a commitment, and I might have said it is a bit unfair therefore that we should be hauled over the coals, but when people are, if not in hardship and misery, certainly in need, then I am quite happy to be hauled over the coals and reminded that I have a commitment to do something because I am committed to delivering on this.

2070 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I have listened to the exchanges with great interest and the contribution by the Chief Minister on this subject. I had, by pure coincidence, a meeting with such an individual who is affected by the scenario of being close to retirement but not having a pension as they would have had in the public sector if they had been employed by the public sector. My question is this: to somebody in that scenario who may be one year away from 2075 retirement, am I correct in understanding from what the Chief Minister has just said, that people in those circumstances, where they will not benefit from a private sector pension that a 20-year-old might enter into tomorrow ...? Is my understanding correct or is the Chief Minister saying that the alternative means in which to assist these members will be some kind of arrangement with Community Care, but that it would be inappropriate, as he has said, for the Government 2080 itself to stick its hand in its pocket?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, various things arise from that remark from the hon.
Gentleman. The first is that I assume he is such a person, as I do not understand that he has ever worked in the public sector – so he is such a person. And he does not seem to me to be either in 2085 hardship or misery or penury, and therefore he should not be, I hope, asking out of a vested interest that there may be some extra pennies coming his way.

What we are proposing – and it was set out in our manifesto – is that in partnership with Community Care, a new additional financial support measure for pensioners will be brought in.
Mr Speaker, the target is the pensioner who needs that additional financial support, and I 2090 thought we were quite explicit and had answered the question that he poses simply by referring to the manifesto – that one would have thought he would have read during the context of the last General Election contest. I am surprised he seems not to have read that. It is true to say, Mr Speaker, that there is likely to be that provision in the context of the time that I have indicated to the hon. Lady, we are looking at.

2095 Their pamphlet at the last General Election did not contain provision in that respect and therefore he might want to tell the gentleman or lady that he met that the Government will be providing that additional financial support measure for pensioners in those circumstances that he described, but not in his circumstances. I hope that I have made clear our continued commitment to comply with that obligation.

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 4.05 p.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. A J Canepa GMH OBE in the Chair]

[CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: P E Martinez Esq in attendance]

Tribute to Solomon ‘Momy’ Levy GMD, MBE, ED, JP, FRICS, former Mayor of Gibraltar

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am afraid I bring the sad news to the House, which I think all hon. Members are now aware of, that Momy Levy has passed away after a 5 blessedly short illness.

Momy will be remembered by everyone in this place for all the reasons that he touched all of us. But indeed, he will also be remembered of course professionally, if I may put it that way, for being the first of the Mayors under the new Constitution; the first of the Mayors that in 2006 were able to take that important municipal and civic post without having to be Members of this 10 House. I think there was widespread admiration for the way that he took that role and made it his own for the year that he was able to call himself Mayor of Gibraltar.

I think that there is, in the context of how a person discharges the office that he may be elected or appointed to, one thing that comes across to me as perhaps most striking and most important, and that is whether that person is proud to hold the post. Momy was somebody who 15 was proud indeed to be able to say that he was Mayor of Gibraltar and he said so explicitly every opportunity that he had.

His work in trying to bring religions together did not start when he was Mayor, but he used the time that he was Mayor to try and use that office to once again demonstrate the great respect that there is in Gibraltar between all religious denominations and all cultures. I cannot 20 think of a more beautiful tribute to him than to say that he did a sterling job and a photographic representation of that exists with all the religious denominations smiling around Momy with the robes of office that you now bear.

Mr Speaker, I have heard Momy described as a local character, I have heard him described as an all-round good egg and I cannot think of Momy ever having stopped me being irate; most of 25 the time he was just happy to be alive – and on Gibraltar whilst he was alive. But there was one thing that would make Momy very, very irate indeed and that was the idea that anybody might get in the way of the Gibraltarians choosing who their sovereign might be and that we might not be able to freely and democratically wish to continue to stay British. That really did bring out the strength of character of the man, whether down Main Street or in the letters of national 30 newspapers, or international newspapers, where he was never afraid to make the point.

He is a man who was proud to have been in the GDF, then the Gibraltar Regiment and now the Royal Gibraltar Regiment, and was always proudly remembering that and demonstrating the service that he had given; and, in that way, demonstrating the service that so many in Gibraltar had given around the world with Her Majesty’s Armed Forces. He was not just proud to have 35 been Mayor, he was not just proud to have been in the Armed Forces, he was above all else a proud father and grandfather and a proud Gibraltarian and this place will miss him.

I would ask that the House observe a minute’s silence on his passing, Mr Speaker.

A minute's silence was observed.

40

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know that Momy had many other friends in this Chamber, and indeed I recognise that the hon. Lady is a relative of Momy, and through her I extend to the whole family the condolences of the Government; and not just of the Government, I have no doubt of all Members of this House, and I am sure others will want to join in tribute.

45

Indeed it is my honour and privilege to extend condolences to her and to Momy's family on behalf of the people of Gibraltar. (Banging on desks)

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I start by associating myself with the words of the Hon. the Leader of the House.

50

Momy was quintessentially British but he was also Gibraltarian to the core. I think that he was a microcosm of what it is to really be a British Gibraltarian in Gibraltar. But he was above all, Mr Speaker, a very, very close friend of mine and I just want to share with this House one of the most beautiful experiences in my life that involved Momy Levy.

55

In 2006, I received a phone call from Momy and he said to me that it was his 70th birthday and he was having a large bash at the Rock Hotel. He said to me, 'I am going to have you at the top table with the Governor and with the Chief Minister, Peter Caruana. It is going to cause me all end of problems but you are going to be on the top table.'

60

A few days later I travelled to Toledo with my wife and we went to the Synagogues in Toledo which are now museums – there are two Synagogues. And of course, being in that Synagogue made me think about my friend Momy, and as I was coming out I said to Julia, 'I just do not know what I am going to get Momy for his birthday.' There I am, I am going to be at the top table creating him all sorts of problems and I do not know what I am going to get him for his birthday.

65

There is an antique shop just next to the Jewish Synagogue there and Julia said to me, 'Let's go into that antique shop and see what there is.' I went into the antique shop and explained to the owner of the antique shop that I wanted to get something for a Jewish friend of mine, and he said, 'Well, I think I have got just the thing. I have got a silver cover of a Torah, of the Jewish Holy Book, which had been produced in 1850. It had been produced by somebody whose family had been forcibly converted into Judaism by the Catholic Monarchs, somebody who travelled Europe in the 19th Century just copying pieces from museums, coming back to Toledo and then reproducing them in silver in Toledo.' And I said that was the perfect gift.

70

I came back to Gibraltar with this gift for Momy's 70th birthday. I opened it in front of him in his office and when he saw it he started crying, and he said to me, 'I have just spent thousands of pounds having a Torah transcribed by hand for my 70th birthday and I did not have the cover for the Torah!' I think that was one of the most beautiful moments in my life, that a chance visit to a Synagogue in Toledo and a chance visit to an antique shop in Toledo had actually made me buy this gift that dovetailed with what was to him an extremely important thing that he had bought for his own 70th birthday.

75

Both the Torah and its silver cover are now on display there at Momy's Jewish Synagogue. I think it is one of the moments in my life where if I felt that there was something like destiny that was it, and I think it illustrates the strong bond and the friendship that I held with Momy. He will certainly be sadly missed by me, as I know he will be sadly missed by a lot of people here in Gibraltar, and may his soul rest in peace, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

80

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, I would like to add a personal tribute to the words that have already been spoken.

Momy was I think one of Gibraltar's great characters. He was a personal friend and also a family friend – my family and my parents – so he is somebody we have known for very many years. I think it is a mark of the affection and the regard with which he is held by the community

90 generally, that the event that was held at Grand Battery to mark his birthday a few months ago was so packed and so well attended by all sectors of the community.

I know that, as a present, my wife painted a portrait of him and my daughter painted a lesser, smaller portrait and I know that he appreciated them both because he stopped me only a few weeks ago to remark on how much he was touched by the fact they took the time to actually 95 paint pictures of him.

He was a person who was larger than life, I think. He had a genuine passion for Gibraltar and a passion for Her Majesty the Queen in particular. I remember the huge banner he had outside his office to mark the Jubilee of Her Majesty the Queen a few years ago.

I think he will leave a huge gap to those who know him and particularly, obviously, to his 100 friends and certainly to his family. I would like to add my most sincere condolences on his loss.
(Banging on desks)

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, sir, may I at a personal level as well make a contribution in memory of our friend, Momy.

105 It was in the mid-1970s, where a very young Captain Solomon Levy was serving in the Volunteer Reserve Branch of the Gibraltar Regiment and, much to Momy's amazement, the MOD in its wisdom disbanded the Heavy Troop – that is the big 9.2-inch guns in the Upper Rock. But Momy was Momy and therefore the Regiment really wanted to find a role for him and they gave him a more admin task in making him the PR Officer for the Gibraltar Regiment.

110 So on trainee evenings like Thursdays, Momy would have to report to Regimental Headquarters, where I was a junior NCO at the time, and he in a typical Momy style came along with his hand of friendship and said, 'You know, we officers are just the show part, it is you ordinary soldiers who are the ones that are real workers.' He said, 'As my introduction of friendship to you ...', and he introduced me to the first of many cigars which became a very 115 regular thing on a Thursday evening.

Momy, being of the Jewish faith, had a strict dietary requirement, that is after dinner he could only have black coffee, without milk; but the cookhouse would only produce ready-made coffee with milk and so on. So in exchange for a cigar I used to secretly feed Momy his coffee every Thursday evening.

120 Of course, as Mr Speaker knows, like us he was a supporter of the Arsenal Football Club, (A Member: Very much.) for good or for bad, like in a marriage. But Momy, despite his love for the Queen and everything, he even found a spot outside his offices to have the Arsenal banner so I hope it will stay there for many, many years to come.

As a last memento, only a week ago, Minister Sacramento and myself were in attendance at 125 the CPA Conference just on the South Bank of Westminster. During the formal dinner on the Wednesday night the slides were coming up on the screen showing all the different participating countries and when it came to Gibraltar's turn, not only was there a picture of John Mackintosh Square which showed this Parliament and City Hall where Momy, during his ten years as Mayor had his seat, as such, but there was one particular photograph – a close-up of Momy dressed in 130 his Gibraltarian colours.

So unknown to all of us, that is the memory that I wish to treasure, Momy through and through a Gibraltarian and a loyal subject to Her Majesty. May he rest in peace. (Banging on desks)

135 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, today Gibraltar has lost its most loyal Briton and Gibraltarian. Momy Levy has worn every hat that there is to be worn to represent Gibraltar. First Civic Mayor, Justice of the Peace, Chairman of the Jewish Community Association, Royal British Legion President, auctioneer, estate agent, and the list goes on and on. But what people will remember him most for was his love for his community and his desire to bring it together. This 140 was his passion and his strongest mission statement during his time as Mayor.

Momy was Gibraltar's true ambassador. His family and friends will miss him dearly and I think it is safe to say that Gibraltar will be a lot emptier without Momy walking up and down Main Street. His radiant smile and his larger-than-life personality will be sorely missed.

145 For me, I have lost my eldest first cousin and my father's eldest nephew who supported and loved him like a son throughout his life and his career. I spent my childhood in his house which was a haven for me, away from the busy politically charged household I lived in, where I would move from the political world to the world of soldiers and the pride for the Crown.

I take with me the warmest memories of my dear cousin, who will be sorely missed.

150 His Excellency the Governor gave me some words a few moments ago which I would like to share with this House, 'A true and fabulous British Gibraltar gentleman that has given us so much and now he leaves us with the example to follow.'

Rest in peace, my dear cousin and passionate Gibraltarian, Momy. (Banging on desks)

155 Mr Speaker: Momy Levy was a man of deep and profound faith. More than once he told me that he was still waiting for the coming of his Messiah, and I have no doubt it is my firm conviction as a believer, something that I share with him, that earlier this afternoon he came face-to-face with his Creator.

160 I had a lot of regard and affection for Momy, as we all did, but there is something above all that I also had for him and that was great admiration. Great admiration about the way that he bore his very serious illness with all that chemotherapy implies, and also by the way in which he also faced life as one must, having lost a daughter as he did.

This evening at his funeral, I will also paying a tribute to him by my presence wearing that other hat which he also wore, that of Mayor of the City of Gibraltar. (Banging on desks)

165 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I imagine you and I are the ones – other than his family – that shared most of what Momy represented in Gibraltar. He was there when we started in 1972 and it is difficult to think of Gibraltar without Momy. He has been an omnipresent individual in our community; and the one thing that can be characterised above all else is that his views on the relationship between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom, and his commitment to ensuring that there would be no betrayal of our relationship with the UK by people in London, was there from the first day I met him to the last day I spoke to him. It has been a constant theme in his life.

170 There are so many things that he did that other Members can point to, but in the area where we are all committed to defend Gibraltar's rights, the rights of the people of Gibraltar and the relationship with the UK, he was the one that did that almost as a one-man operation, single-minded, never-ending, telling everybody – you could not cross his path ... And if anybody came here in any delegation, CPA or whatever, the one person they remembered when they left, and I am sure have never forgotten since, was Momy.

175 Gibraltar has lost a fantastic advocate and I doubt that we will ever have anyone like him again. So may he rest in peace and I am sure that his family are consoled by the knowledge of how much we all loved him. (Banging on desks)

180 Mr Speaker: I think it would be appropriate if the Hansard of these expressions were to be conveyed to his family. We will arrange for that to happen.

185

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I agree and I think that what we have seen today is a rare moment of true unity in this House, which I think is therefore a demonstration of the value in which Mr Levy was held by all.

Employment issues –
Statement by Hon. J J Bossano

190 Mr Speaker: Before I call on the Chief Minister, I think the Hon. Mr Bossano wished to make some clarification arising from a question.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition raised, when we were dealing with employment 195 issues in Question Time, a particular case that he had asked me to look into and which I thought had been resolved.

I undertook to go back and check and I am glad to say that in fact I was right that he had already been seen and found employment, and that the only delay was because we are using EU 200 funding in his case. What I have been told is that he actually started work yesterday.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful to the hon. Gentleman. In actual fact, that same afternoon after Question Time, the gentleman in question sent me a message telling me that he had been called up and that he was starting the next day. So I do not know whether it was as a consequence of the hon. Gentleman's statement, or whether it was already in the 205 pipeline, but he started the day after the exchange that we had. I am very grateful to the hon. Gentleman that he has been able to employ this young kid just before Christmas, because really he was having a very, very tough time. I commend the hon. Gentleman for his kindness.

Order of the Day

GOVERNMENT MOTIONS

Standing Order 19 suspended to proceed with Government Motions

Clerk: (ix) Order of the Day – Government Motions. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

210 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name which is as follows.

I beg to move under Standing Order No. 59 to proceed with the suspension of Standing Order No. 19 in order to proceed with Government Motions.

215 Mr Speaker: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Select Committees on Parliamentary Reform, Constitutional Reform and 'Brexit' – Amended motion carried

Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name which reads as follows.

220

'THIS HOUSE:

RECALLS the establishment of Select Committees on Parliamentary Reform, on Constitutional Reform and on the UK and Gibraltar's planned departure from the EU known as "Brexit";

HEREBY notes that the composition of these Select Committees shall now be as follows:

(a) in relation to the Select Committee on Parliamentary Reform, the appointment of The Hon F R Picardo, The Hon Dr J J Garcia, The Hon N F Costa, The Hon S Sacramento, The Hon D Feetham, The Hon R Clinton and The Hon M Hassan-Nahon;

(b) in relation to the Select Committee on Constitutional Reform, the appointment of The Hon F R Picardo, The Hon Dr J J Garcia, The Hon G Licudi, The Hon J J Bossano, The Hon D A Feetham, The Hon E Philips and The Hon M Hassan-Nahon;

(c) in relation to the Select Committee on "Brexit", the appointment of The Hon F R Picardo, The Hon Dr J J Garcia, The Hon Dr J Cortes, The Hon A Isola, The Hon D Feetham, The Hon T Hammond and The Hon M Hassan-Nahon.'

Mr Speaker, this motion is a motion simply providing the names of those who will serve on the Select Committees that have already been established and I have given notice that I intend to move an amendment to limb (b) of the motion which is to replace the Hon. G Licudi where that names appears, with the Hon. Dr J Cortes, given that when we have looked at the possibility of setting the first meeting and looked at the diaries for next year, and given that Mr Licudi now holds the portfolio of Tourism which requires him to travel considerably, and conversely the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister and I tend to travel together, it was starting to become very difficult indeed to find dates when we would all be in Gibraltar.

So with reluctance we have had to agree that Mr Licudi will not be able to serve as a named member of that Committee. As all members of the Government they will be able to provide input in the context of the work of that Committee, but it is therefore going to be Dr Cortes who will also form part of that Committee with Dr Garcia, with myself and with Mr Bossano on behalf of the Government.

Other than that, this is just a naming motion to set out who will serve on those Committees.

Mr Speaker: Without further ado, I am going to put to the House the Chief Minister's amendment, namely that in paragraph (b) the name the Hon. G Licudi be deleted and substituted by the Hon. John Cortes. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Does anybody wish to speak on the Chief Minister's motion? Okay. I will therefore put the motion in the terms moved by the Hon. the Chief Minister. Those in favour? (Members: Aye) Those against? Carried.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION

Public sector senior executive pay – Amended motion carried

Clerk: Private Member's Motion, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name which reads as follows:

'This House notes that the Government in the 2016/17 Budget estimates indicated that both the office of Chief Secretary and the office of Principal Auditor were to be awarded pay increases of 28.21% from £123,219 to £157,978 each.

This House further notes that other office holders originally on the same pay scale namely the Attorney General, the Financial Secretary, the Commissioner of Police and the Chief Technical Officer have been given the standard civil service increase of 2.75% in 2016/17 from £123,319 to £126,608.'

I think there may be a typo there, it should be £123,219.

'Notes that the Government has in recent months created a department for Public Sector Efficiency and such an award seems inconsistent and potentially inflammatory to the wider Civil Service.

Calls on the Chief Minister to explain to this House why the offices of Chief Secretary and Principal Auditor merits pay increases that equate to more than ten times that of the agreed Civil Service pay award of 2.75% in 2016/17.'

250 Mr Speaker, the subject of senior executive pay, whether in the Government sector or private sector is rightly an area of public concern and public interest. Invariably the UK press has focused on the pay of FT100 Chief Executives who it is said can earn more than 129 times the average UK annual salary.

255 Mr Speaker, it is an area of focus to the extent that Theresa May herself pledged that she would consider the findings of a high pay centre, which is a UK think tank monitoring pay at the top of the income distribution scale. The political thinking of this group is that the growing gap between rewards for those at the top and everyone else is hard to justify at a time when economic uncertainty is intense and UK corporate performance mixed.

260 We live in increasingly uncertain times and the concerns in the UK and elsewhere on the level of executive pay relative to the average worker is just as relevant in Gibraltar, especially as regards the public sector and its most senior grades. The question as to the management of senior pay awards in our Civil Service only came to my attention during the Committee Stage of the 2016/2017 Appropriation Bill debate on 8th July when I asked the Chief Minister if it was correct that the Chief Secretary was getting a pay rise of 28% from £123,219 to £157,978.

Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister's response as per Hansard paragraph 295 was as follows, and I quote:

Yes, Mr Speaker. I think this was giving effect to a commitment of the former Chief Minister in respect of the salary of the Principal Auditor, which is connected. These salaries are all connected, they are all in a grid – the Attorney General, the Chief Secretary. They are all connected under the former administration and this is a historical undertaking that had been given by the former Chief Minister which was given effect to.

I continue:

I can write to him and let him have the details if he likes, because it was something that was brought to my attention, I think, by the Auditor or the Chief Secretary himself on behalf of the Auditor; and with the consequent effect which he explained to me also that his own salary would rise as a result of it, and he was transparent at the time.

But I am quite happy to let you have a note that sets out how it arises.

265 Mr Speaker, I wrote to the Chief Minister on 31st August 2016 asking for that information justifying the 28% pay rise, not just as it first appeared to me for the Chief Secretary, but also for the Principal Auditor. Alas, Mr Speaker, despite reminding the Chief Minister in this House of unanswered letters as recently as 24th November this year, I still have had no response and thus I have seen fit to bring this motion to the House to elicit a response.

270 Mr Speaker, let us put into context these two senior Civil Service pay rises. As per the GSLP Liberal Manifesto on page 13, the public sector pay increases agreed historically were described as follows: 2.7% in 2012/13; 2.9% in 2013/14; 2.5% in 2014/15; and 2.75% in 2015/16. With inflation running at around half a percent at the time of the Budget, the 2016/17 increase of 2.75% was, of course, above inflation.

275 The increase in the minimum wage for the private sector announced during the Budget was just half a percent or barely just inflationary. And again, Mr Speaker, to put this into context in the wider world, the Korn Ferry Hay Group 2017 global salary forecast, which was published only recently on 6th December this year, was that for workers around the world it would see a real wage increase of 2.3% – which, to be fair, more or less matches that for the public sector in 280 Gibraltar of 2.25% after we adjust for inflation.

Mr Speaker, the 2015 Employment Survey reports the average gross earnings in Gibraltar as of October 2015 as being £28,090.78. Against this backdrop the percentage increases for these two senior grades seems out of line by a factor of ten for the public sector and represents a ratio of 5.6 times the average Gibraltar salary.

285 I have undertaken an analysis of the pay awards for seven of the most senior civil servants and the Chief Justice going back six years including 2016/17. The results were revealing and, Mr Speaker, I have available copies that with your permission I would ask the Clerk to distribute. It will be easier for Members to have these numbers in front of you when I talk about them.

Thank you, Mr Speaker and thank you to the Clerk.

290 This analysis which I have extracted from the Annual Estimates Books clearly shows that seven senior civil servants were on the same pay grade since 2013/14. Namely, the Chief Secretary, the Principal Auditor, the Attorney General, the Financial Secretary, the Commissioner of Police, the Puisne Judge and the Chief Technical Officer in the sort of grid referred to by the Chief Minister in the Hansard of July this year.

295 Mr Speaker, what I find puzzling is that if the Chief Secretary argued as the Chief Minister stated, that his pay had to increase because it was the same grade as the Principal Auditor, then why not the other five including the Financial Secretary, Attorney General, Commissioner of Police, Puisne Judge and the Chief Technical Officer who, this year, just obtained the public sector standard increase of 2.75%? Are they no longer on the grid, somehow less worthy civil servants and downgraded relative to the Chief Secretary and the Principal Auditor?

Mr Speaker, what is the merit for a 28% pay rise in this day and age? Do these two civil servants have recently increased responsibilities or have they perhaps committed to markedly increased productivity over and above that expected of their grade? Who benchmarked these salaries, and against what? These two Civil Service grades at £157,978 now earn more not just 305 than our Chief Minister who earns a paltry £132,696, but also that of the UK Prime Minister who, it was reported in The Times today, she earns £149,440. How is this justified? They also earn more than the Chief Justice who gets a miserly £135,771 in comparison. The margin of increase over and above the public sector pay increase of 2.75% which equates in real terms to an amount of £31,370 each would pay, together, the annual salaries of at least two teachers or 310 three nurses.

Now, Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister makes reference to promises made by the previous Chief Minister and yet, if true, it has taken him five years to implement. Why is that, I ask? Now, there is obviously a lack of transparency in the pay award process at the very top of our Civil Service and it may be that this Parliament should consider introducing some form of semi-autonomous body to make recommendations to Government on pay awards and benchmarking 315 and performance targets for the most senior grades, since we have obviously moved beyond parity.

Mr Speaker, we could perhaps be persuaded by the Chief Minister that the incumbents deserved the increases because they are jolly nice fellows and they were about to retire anyway.
320 But, Mr Speaker, from my reading the Estimates Book, these are not personal to holder awards. These are a permanent change in the pay structure that will benefit future holders and distort the sacred grid at the top of the Civil Service. But I could be entirely wrong because I have read today in today's New People – my favourite publication, which the Chief Minister assures me always speaks the truth – and I quote:

Roy Clinton is moving a motion this week on the pay rise of the Chief Secretary, etc. We understand that these arrangements are personal to holder to the individuals.

325 So, Mr Speaker, I have seen no evidence of that in the Estimate Book and certainly the Chief Minister made no reference when I first asked about it, but maybe we will hear more about that in due course.

But I have gone through the Estimates Book on the appendix pages and there are 19 grades which are quite clearly marked PTH or 'Personal to Holder'. There is no such marking against the Chief Secretary or the Principal Auditor. And so in the absence of any contrary evidence, I can only assume that these are permanent changes in pay grade for these particular posts.

330 Now, Mr Speaker, I have had occasion to read the UK Guidance on Civil Service Pay for 2015-16 and it had this to say in respect of senior staff under Section 5.4 of Appendix B and I quote:

Senior civil servants ... are not included within the civil service pay guidance. However, senior staff have an important leadership role in demonstrating the need for pay decisions to follow public sector pay policy. Therefore any annual pay increase or decision to award performance-related pay to such staff must be considered alongside and according to the same principles as the pay remit of the rest of the organisation.

Mr Speaker, I repeat, 'according to the same principles as the pay remit of the rest of the organisation' – 28%, 2.75%, I do not know that they are the same. The public sector pay award of 2.75% for 2016-17 and these two grades have obtained 28.21%, ten times more. Are these really awarded according to the same principles?

335 And so, Mr Speaker, it would appear that some civil servants are more equal than others when it comes to the senior grades. The sole decision on pay awards would appear to be in the Chief Minister's gift. In the glaring light of the newly created Department of Public Efficiency, the taxpayer needs to be assured of the added value to the public service that these 28% pay rises will afford. Such awards seem inconsistent and in fact potentially inflammatory to the wider Civil Service, if not the public.

340 So I bring this motion to the House not in any form of censure, but a request for transparency from the Chief Minister as to the merit of these 28% pay awards which this House needs to know, the taxpayer has a right to know and the public wants to know.

And so, Mr Speaker, I commend my motion to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in terms of the motion moved by the Hon. Roy Clinton. Does anyone wish to reply?

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, I have never in the time that I have been in this House read, or rather heard, such an unveiled imputation of ill motive to senior civil servants as I have in the context of what I have heard today; because the hon. Gentleman may want to go back and reflect on some of the ways that he has put his motion.

355 I will accept of course that he has not had a detailed answer to his letter, but to have jumped from that to the things that he has said during the course of this intervention about the two most senior civil servants in the hierarchy of the Civil Service is really quite something.

360 In fact, Mr Speaker, this is a strange attempt to single out individuals. Strange, because I do not think in the history of the House there has been such a spotlight shone on a particular set of individuals, these two individuals. The post holders, of course the hon. Gentleman will say, are not the people he is concentrating on, he is concentrating on the posts, but he has attempted to zero in and magnify that issue. He has done so on the pretext that he is attempting to ensure 365 that something which might be inflammatory to the Civil Service should not occur, when in fact what he is doing is trying to light the match of inflammation under the Civil Service.

Now look, Mr Speaker, if he wants to do that it is perfectly alright, it is a matter entirely for him, but he should not pretend to be doing the opposite. He should be getting up here and say, ‘I want the Civil Service to revolt against these two salaries’, because that is what he is 370 attempting to do, and he should not try and hide behind a veil of pretence that he is doing otherwise. But he does so from the position of defending a political party that gave willy-nilly 16% pay rises on the basis not of the whim of the former Chief Minister, but on the cusp of a general election. As far as I know, Mr Speaker, Mr Clinton is not someone who has joined the GSD in the last few years; Mr Clinton has been a card-carrying member through thick and thin 375 from the days of 23% to the heady days of just about over 50%, and Government and not Government.

Therefore during the General Election campaign of 2011 he was very much a part of the GSD
– in fact I understand he was not thrown out of Europort for reading the New People until well into that campaign. And the 16% pay rise given to GJBS after the General Election had been 380 called on a visit of the former Chief Minister to their premises was not done just as a whim, it was done in utter desperation. But there had been previous 12% pay rises given on the creation of authorities and agencies, and nobody from that side of the House got up and said when they were in Government, ‘This is an inflammatory measure in respect of the rest of the Civil Service.’
No, no, in those days double-digit pay rises were a very good thing in the interests of the 385 Taxpayer.

Today’s article in The Times that the hon. Gentleman refers to, Mr Speaker, sets out the pay for the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom and he is right to say it is £149,000. It also sets out – and the reason for the article – the pay of two senior political advisors, not civil servants, which is £140,000. It also sets out – but it is not in his interest to make his case and that is why 390 he has not told you, Mr Speaker – that there are 400 members of the public service in the UK who earn more than the Prime Minister. Some of them as much as £275,000 because they are experts in their field, but that does not fit into what he wants to try and conject today so he does not pretend to have read that part of the article, Mr Speaker. I can guarantee him it is there, I read it this morning on the Privy Council.

395 The fact is that when he comes here and talks about prudence, the only prudence he can represent is the prudence of the party opposite, the prudence of the GSD as he represents it, and that is what we are going to look at this afternoon. That trail of alleged prudence which is in fact a trail of Hansel- and Gretel-like treats and largesse and excesses which will lead us to the pay of the Principal Auditor and the Chief Secretary as it is today.

400 It will then lead us to where it will be in the future and will perhaps lead him, Mr Speaker, to that other ‘p’ – patience. Because he might in future want to wait for an answer to his letters, unless of course he thinks because he sends his letters with little stickers that say ‘Urgent Parliamentary Business’. I mean if something is urgent you tend to get it electronically these days, Mr Speaker, not brought by a donkey to your front door.

405 There is some very urgent parliamentary business going on and that is the small matter of the United Kingdom having decided to leave the European Union and, since 31st August, I have been dealing principally with that issue and not with satisfying his desire for bean-counting data that he can go away and add to his abacus. But I am going to tell him all the things that I would have put in that letter if I had had time to reply to it.

410 Mr Speaker, I was going to start telling the House a story of what happened in 2006 in the Gibraltar Health Authority. In fact, the hon. Gentleman’s speech has enticed me a little further back to 1998, I think, when this House dealt with a motion on Members’ remuneration.
Everything we have heard is about executive pay and how you set executive pay and all the rest of it. The hon. Gentleman has not reflected on what some non-executives get paid ... aka them 415 and the Leader of the Opposition, none of which are executive positions by any stretch of the imagination.

Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman cares to produce a grid like the one he has produced this afternoon that looks at the pay of Members of this House before the GSD arrived and the pay of Members of this House once the GSD was in office by a motion changed by them here, I think by his standards of 'brown-hair-shirtiness' he would be scratching all afternoon.

Mr Speaker, the pay of the Chief Minister when Peter Caruana brought a motion to this House, a motion which is now on the website of this Parliament, saying it was not enough, the pay was £41,175, it had been less when Joe Bossano was Chief Minister but by then it had gone up to £41,175. It went up as a result of the motion in this House overnight and contrary to the vote of Members from the GSLP who were opposite, it went up to £56,000. Not overnight, over a show of hands where the people who got the pay rise were the ones who voted in favour of it – a 36% increase. That is the prudence he represents in this House. That is the prudence that Members opposite represent in this House, except of course for the hon. Lady who cannot be fixed with those sins.

Ministers, and it is widely recognised that the first GSLP Government was one of the most motivational and aspirational that changed Gibraltar; and even the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, as the Leader of the Opposition sometimes calls him, recognised in his last speech here that Joe Bossano had transformed the Gibraltar economy with his team of Ministers after 1988. Well, that transformation was carried out for a sum that would have been less than, but in the region of, £27,450 each of them.

The morning after the GSD's vote in this Parliament against the GSLP, that salary went up to £42,000 an increase of 53% a few hundred times – a few hundred times – the increase granted to the Civil Service in that year. Of course this largesse was not limited just to the Government, this was a largesse for everyone in the House. The Speaker went from £20,500 to £21,900 an increase of 6%, and Opposition Members went from £13,735 to £15,000 an increase of 9%. Well, I suppose not bad if you can get it, Mr Speaker, but hardly 36% or 53%. And that is the prudence that the GSD represents, that the hon. Member is defending in this House, and that I am now going to deal with.

I was going to start in 2006 as I said, but I thought it was important for the community to be reminded of who it is that is now making speeches about pay rises, and what they consider to be excessive, although they pocketed 36% for their top bloke and 53% each for their Ministers. Inflammatory to the Civil Service you might have thought, Mr Speaker. Yet the salaries in question today are salaries, which this House unanimously voted for in the Budget and in the estimates in July.

So Mr Clinton is giving a speech about something he voted for. He has in fact this afternoon spoken against something that he voted for. If we go back and look at the Hansard, Mr Speaker, we will find that the Opposition did not vote against the estimates or the Appropriation Bill, did not vote to abstain on the Appropriation Bill, they voted in favour of the Appropriation Bill and it was the Appropriation Bill that approved that figure. So it is not the Chief Minister who is the only arbiter of what these salaries should be, this House voted unanimously that that should be the salary going forward. He did ask me for an explanation, but he voted in favour of it, Mr Speaker.

Now, before I get into the substance of what I am going to say next, I think the best way to ensure that the House understands the argument is not to give it a grid but to give it an amended motion. If the usher could kindly distribute these to hon. Members, I am moving an amendment to the motion which I will read out to the House and which will explain the argument that I am going to make. I will wait for Mr Speaker and Members to have it. I think Members on this side have not yet had it. There we are.

Mr Speaker, I am going to move that the motion should be amended by the deletion of every word after 'This House', and the inclusion of the following words therefore:

'This House considers it is appropriate to set in context the increase in salary of the Chief Secretary and Principal Auditor.'

Notes and entirely condemns the decision of the GSD when in Government to raise the salary of the top official at the Gibraltar Health Authority from £55,986 in 2004 to the sum of £106,000 plus rent and rates amounting to £8,549 which was paid by the Gibraltar Health Authority, paid to Dr David McCutcheon when he was recruited in 2005 which amounted to a percentage increase in remuneration of 104.6%.

A Member: And entirely useless.

Further notes, that on that salary, the GSD further agreed that Dr McCutcheon should be taxed at the reduced special rate applicable to the taxation category of a higher executive possessing specialist skills, PEPS.

Additionally notes that this sum did not include the cost of annual return flights to Canada for Dr McCutcheon and his family which may be quantified as a further sum of several thousand pounds per annum.

Considers that the creation of the role of the Chief Executive Officer of the GHA added cost but no other value to the front line of care affecting patients and nurses, doctors, consultants or allied health professionals.

Welcomes the approach of the GSLP Liberal Government in reducing the pay of the Chief Executive Officer of the GHA when the post was taken by a civil servant, by 15% to £133,770 upon the departure of Dr McCutcheon in August 2012 when the latter was earning £153,713 being a salary of £144,164, plus rent and rates amounting to £8,549, totalling the £153,713 which would have amounted to a 174.5% increase in salary from the former remuneration of the most highly paid official in the GHA whilst in addition continuing to be taxed at the rate applicable to the taxation category of a higher executive possessing specialist skills and having annual return flights to Canada for himself and his family. (Hon. N F Costa: Que poca verguenza!)

Notes that it has also long been historically agreed under successive administrations, that the Principal Auditor was an officer that should be pegged at the same salary as the Chief Secretary and further notes that the agreed position changed in 2003 when it was agreed by the former GSD administration that the Chief Secretary would be the highest remunerated officer in the Civil Service by a 4% differential from all other Civil Service officers including the Principal Auditor.

Recognises that in agreeing that the salary of the Chief Secretary and the Principal Auditor should be above the already reduced salary of the civil servant who became the Chief Executive Officer of the GHA, the GSLP Liberal Government has been giving effect to a historical agreement.

Further agrees that it is right that given the retirement of the last Chief Executive Officer of the Gibraltar Health Authority, that the said post should not be replaced and that any necessary legislative changes be effected as may be required in this respect and therefore considers and accepts as absolutely correct, the decision of the Chief Minister that the adjusted salary of the Chief Secretary and Principal Auditor should revert upon the retirement of the existing post holders, to that formerly provided for as annually adjusted and which will then once again be at those rates, the highest remunerated officers in the Civil Service.

And condemns the insensitive and improper statement on the City Pulse programme on the Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation by the Leader of the Opposition, that the sum of £59,831 which is the salary paid by him, to him, is tantamount to a part-time salary for a full-time job, given his commitment is on average to be in Parliament no more than 30 days a year which results in a remuneration of approximately £2,000 per day or, in this calendar year 2016 when the House has met only on 20 full days, although he was absent on some occasions, approximately £3,000 per day.

And therefore considers an unpardonable insult to those who work in the public sector every working day of the year for lower remuneration, the statement by the Leader of the Opposition as to his almost £60,000 salary.'

Well, Mr Speaker, in that very fully argued amendment, hon. Members will see the reality of what happened and where the link is occasioned. They imported to the Gibraltar Health Authority a Chief Executive who was paid an eye-watering 104% more than the person he replaced. Not 28% – we have heard what 28% is, we have heard all sorts of adjectives describing how huge 28% is. Well 104% is almost four times 28%, so four times – yes sure, yes work it out, get the calculator. Because it must be four times worse, Mr Speaker, four times worse than everything that he has said.

But, Mr Speaker, not for the Principal Auditor and for the Chief Secretary, for a new post brought in above everyone else and frankly a post that it is absolutely right we should discontinue. The existence of a Chief Executive in the Gibraltar Health Authority has added nothing but cost, but it has added nothing in the context of front line care for patients and assistance to professionals, nurses, doctors, consultants and those allied health professionals who should be getting the resources of the Gibraltar Health Authority. And by the time that person left, his salary would have been 174.5% more than the amount of the person he replaced. Why do I say that, because of course all salaries would have gone up at the time, because the only way you can get to a 28% increase, Mr Speaker, is if you do the calculations wrongly, incorrectly, and you do not apply to the other categories of salaries which you are comparing, the 2.5% or the 2.75% increases.

Mr Clinton has taken the figures he wants and compared them to the salaries he wants and not in the year in which he should have compared, if he had he would have realised that he would have worked out a 24% increase not a 28% increase, and 104% is more than four times 24, Mr Speaker. Perhaps a calculator might assist him with that also.

In June 2012 I met with the Chief Secretary and the Principal Auditor, so in other words it is not that during a General Election campaign I went to their offices, I told them all I loved them and gave them a 16% increase. It is that they had been asking to see me and I agreed to a meeting. The request for the meeting had come about by the fact that the Chief Executive of the GHA had become a civil servant. A civil servant had taken the post and therefore the commitment which they had from third parties, from the former Chief Minister in particular, and historically from even before the first GSLP administration, then kicked in.

In fact I am reminded that there were instances in the Department of Education, where some officer's salaries had been frozen, because if they had not been frozen they would have gone above the Chief Secretary, Principal Auditor, Financial Secretary and one other, I will come to that in a moment – and the Attorney General. Mr Speaker, this is therefore an entrenched principle and one that I was persuaded had to be respected. The four posts, Mr Speaker, were that of Chief Secretary, Financial Secretary, Attorney General and Principal Auditor, only two of those are presently not on contract. Only two of those are presently civil servants.

So we were able to agree looking at the salaries as they were, the £133,000 plus the on-call allowance, that after the increase of 2.75 in that year would be close to over £145,00 I believe, and the additional four percentage point differential between the Chief Secretary and others, that the salary should be pegged at £150,000.

Mr Speaker, the concession that the Chief Secretary himself should have a 4% differential between him and the next senior civil servant – the next group which was Principal Auditor, Financial Secretary and Attorney General – was a concession not extracted from me, or indeed from Joe Bossano. In fact, Mr Speaker, my abiding memory of a good photograph of Joe Bossano is him clutching a banner which says 'No Concessions', so you are unlikely to ever get a concession from him, in particular, on pay.

That concession was made in 2003, and in case hon. Members have not worked it out in 2003 it was the GSD that was in Government. So you have a historic situation where four are agreed

515 to be at the top of the pegging order of salaries in the Civil Service and a GSD situation where the Chief Secretary earns 4% more and the GSD situation where they bring in a Chief Executive at 104% more than the previous incumbent, and then a civil servant taking that post with a 520 reduced salary under the GSLP Liberals. So if you just keep that picture in your mind, Mr Speaker, all of the increases are agreed by the GSD, the hammer falls with the GSLP Liberals and the salary of the Chief Executive of the Gibraltar Health Authority goes down under the GSLP Liberals but a civil servant takes the post. Therefore the commitments to these gentlemen kick in.

So again, not just the Chief Minister, but the Chief Minister in consultation with the Chief Secretary and Principal Auditor who sought the meeting, and with full disclosure to the Attorney 525 and to the former Financial Secretary and the Financial Secretary, agreed to peg the salary of those civil servants at £150,000 at that time and the figure quoted now by the hon. Gentleman is that figure with the increases since then. Because of course the book for this year does not carry increases because the increase is calculated in August. So if he goes to the book which is the Draft Government of Gibraltar Estimates for 2016-17 he will see that that figure does not carry 530 the 2.75% increases.

So, Mr Speaker, cut forward to a date after August, in fact probably less than a month and a half ago when we receive the news that the current incumbent, a civil servant, of the post of Chief Executive of the Gibraltar Health Authority wishes to retire. The House will be very happy to know and will have seen from my amendment to the motion, that the Government has taken 535 the decision that we will not replace the Chief Executive of the Gibraltar Health Authority for all of the reasons that I have already indicated, and I have already hinted that it may be necessary to make an amendment to a piece of legislation which creates the post in order to ensure that we are able to remove it.

The situation you have is that, with a civil servant taking the post of Chief Executive, the 540 commitment to these civil servants that they will earn the most kicks in, the Chief Secretary has a 4% differential but importantly – importantly, and to the great credit to the person who is presently in the post of Chief Secretary, a man known to all of us and highly appreciated by every Member on this side of the House at least – he says, ‘I am prepared to forego this 4% lead because I consider that the role I discharge under the new Constitution is as important as the 545 roles discharged by others.’ And so, when the hon. Gentleman sees the Principal Auditor and the Chief Secretary earning the same, already the Chief Secretary has foregone a further 4% in doing so.

And so, Mr Speaker, having been accused of so many things in the context of the hon.
Gentleman’s speech, I am left thinking, ‘Well, hang on a minute, what has really happened 550 here?’ What has happened here is that when they took the reins of Gibraltar in 1996, the first thing they did was put up their salaries, Ministers by 53% and Chief Minister by 36%. They took the Gibraltar Health Authority and added to the cost of it by taking somebody who earned £55,000 and putting their salary up 104% and then increased that until the increase in salary was about 174%. Wow, that must surely have been inflammatory to the Civil Service.

555 We then arrive ... oh, by the way, they agreed a 4% differential for every Chief Secretary going forward, and we have all inherited from the mechanisms that were in place and the structure of the Civil Service that these four postholders should be the four highest paid, and they then give a distinction to a Chief Secretary.

560 So what is it that I am guilty of, Mr Speaker? I am guilty of giving effect to historic agreements that every Chief Minister has given effect to. I am guilty of accepting the Chief Secretary honourably handing in a 4% differential which the former Chief Minister had awarded them. I am guilty of reducing with my parliamentary colleagues – John Cortes was the Minister for Health at the time – the pay of the Chief Executive from over £150,000 down to £133,000.

565 I am guilty therefore, of accepting a calculation done not by the length of my foot on the shop floor of a company the days before an election, but by the Principal Auditor – by the Principal Auditor, Mr Speaker – with the consent and oversight of the current and former Financial Secretary and the Attorney General, none of whom had anything to gain because I will come to the book in a minute; and now, having saved the GHA at least £20,000 in respect of the salary of the Chief Executive, getting rid of the post and being able to say now that the post goes, the two postholders that were civil servants that held the issue of having the right under the agreements done previously to be paid the same or more than the highest paid civil servant, will revert when the current incumbents leave the post to the salary scale that would have been their salary scale which is Attorney General, Financial Secretary, Principal Auditor and without differential – and without differential, that is the humility of the man – the Chief Secretary. That salary will be £130,000 which is the salary set out for Attorney General and Financial Secretary in the book, plus the 2.75% increase which is calculated in August, not before. So the four will be back to where they were.

Now, Mr Speaker, salaries have gone up in Gibraltar, we are at parity plus, but that was not of our doing, that was of their doing and they persuaded us that in the interest of the Gibraltar economy it was a good thing. But I hear that the Hon. Mr Clinton is in effect telling us that parity plus seems to be a bad thing, that he thinks salaries are too high. Well, Mr Speaker, that may be his position, that may be his position and I would be interested to hear what he has to say.

But, Mr Speaker, all of this self-flagellation that salaries are too high from the party that brought the motion to raise their salaries by 53%; and if they come back at me, Mr Speaker, saying, 'Well, that was 1998, that was not us, that was the old GSD not the new GSD' – because one no longer knows which GSD one is dealing with, even when one has them sitting in front of one!

I was put in mind of a quote I cannot quite get rid of, Mr Speaker, and in order not to be unfair to the Leader of the Opposition, I thought I would get the whole quote out. But what we have heard today from Mr Clinton, we have heard from the GSD led by Daniel Feetham the current GSD, the new GSD, that does not like the things that were unpopular about the old GSD, but likes the things that they think were popular. So if he is going to tell me that he would not have agreed with the salary increase, I am going to read him what the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition said on City Pulse and why it is therefore absolutely apposite and relevant that it should be in the amended motion because that is absolutely and without doubt certainly inflammatory to the rest of the public sector and to the Civil Service as a whole.

Johnathan Sacramento was having a chat with the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition. Mr Sacramento has now become the News Editor of GBC for which he has no doubt been congratulated. I have congratulated him personally, but I take the opportunity of putting on the record of Hansard my congratulations to him. He said this, 'I mean, you could be in a way a full time Leader of the Opposition if you wanted to,' he asked. Mr Feetham says 'Yes, but ...'. Mr Sacramento comes back, 'You can survive on the salary of a Leader of the Opposition.' 'Yes', says Mr Feetham, 'but it would be very difficult'.

Mr Sacramento, no doubt in that moment with a flash of that banner that I sometimes see Joe Bossano holding, the 'No Concessions' banner, says 'And like Joe Bossano did it for 15 years, he was a full-time Leader of the Opposition.' And Mr Feetham said this, 'That is true, that is true, on a part-time salary. And that is true. But of course then if you get into that argument, you are never going to be able to get a professional to leave his profession to go into a job on a full-time basis being paid on a part-time salary, it is very, very, difficult.' Well, Joe Bossano did not find it very difficult and Joe Bossano is a professional; and what a professional he is, Mr Speaker.

Mr Sacramento comes back and says, 'It is a big pay drop', and Mr Feetham comes back, 'I mean I think it is something that in the future, since this has to be looked at because if you really want to attract good people, you have got to sort of, look, accept what is the reality of the situation and the reality of the situation is that certainly the Leader of the Opposition is not part-time it is full-time'. Well it is also true that we have not got good people I suppose, Mr Speaker.

Full-time, Mr Speaker? Three days a month? Three days a month, an average of two days a month this year, perhaps a few more; £2,000 a day for three days a month for ten months of the year, £3,000 a day this year. Well look, Mr Speaker, if that is not inflammatory to civil servants to 620 public sector workers, what is? Most civil servants and public sector workers ... nay, everyone under the rank of SEO, goes to work these days full-time – full-time for less than £60,000 a year.

I think they are very good people and we get very good professionals, people who have gone and done degrees, some of them two, just like him, and they give their best for Gibraltar.

625 So if I am going to be told that it is inflammatory of the Civil Service to have given effect to agreements of former Chief Ministers, to have reduced the salary of the Chief Executive when we first got our chance to do so, to have abolished the role of the Chief Executive now which will produce a huge saving, and to make these salaries revert to where they should be when the postholders leave ... well then, Mr Speaker, I know that history when it gets out its calculator, will see that our figures speak for themselves and that we have acted entirely properly. I think 630 the hon. Gentleman now realises that, it has dawned on him, and he wishes he had been patient and waited for my letter.

In particular, Mr Speaker, it has dawned on the Leader of the Opposition that he has to be more careful with what he says is a part-time salary and a full-time salary, with who he says is good is not good; and with the motions that the hon. Member to his left might shoot off, that might at first blush seem attractive, but actually have a sting in the tail that come back to bite 635 them.

So, Mr Speaker, I think that the only way for the House to really reflect on the record of Hansard, the reality of what has happened in this situation, to realise that we have moved always to save money for this community to ensure that we get value for money, and that we put resources at the GHA on the front line for the nurses, the doctors, the allied health 640 professionals and the consultants and not at the hands of Chief Executives ... is this Government, that is what we have done.

That must be reflected on the record of Hansard, not the motion that the hon. Member has moved; and the way to do that, Mr Speaker, is for the House to adopt the amendment that I now move in the terms of the notice that I have given.

645 I commend the amendment to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now propose the amendment in the terms moved by the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Does anybody wish to speak on this amendment? The Hon. Roy Clinton.

650

Hon. R M Clinton: Sorry, Mr Speaker, can you just clarify the rules of speaking on this amendment? Could you clarify for our information the order of speaking?

Mr Speaker: You are able to speak on the amendment and then once the amendment is put 655 to the vote, assuming that it is carried, then you also have the right to reply because you moved the original motion. So you can have two bites at the cherry.

Hon. R M Clinton: I am sorry, just to clarify, the Chief Minister as mover of the motion would also have a final say on this motion, then? The Chief Minister as the mover of this amendment 660 would also have a right to reply?

Mr Speaker: The Chief Minister has a right to reply on the amendment but then not on the original motion, yes. (Interjections)

The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

665 There is one other thing of course, that sometime over the years has happened and perhaps I should explain. Sometimes Members rarely speak on both, obviously they do not get two bites of the cherry but there have been occasions when this happens: you get an original motion, it is amended in the terms which we have seen today and an hon. Member speaks from one to the other and, provided he does not pretend to come back again, the Speakers have exercised their 670 discretion and will allow that to happen, and I will do the same. Okay?

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, today's argument I am afraid, reminds me of that expression 'two wrongs do not make a right' and this is what much of what we have heard today reflects.

675 I think Gibraltar is truly fed up with the, 'You did this, so I can do that'. The real integral question still remains and has not been answered in a way which will be clear and accepted by the public. The question is: why is it that the Chief Secretary and Principal Auditor have been singled out for a colossal pay rise of 28%? Why them, why not others, why just them and why this year? Because, Mr Speaker, with all the surrounding digs and jibes at the GSD record we still have not heard the real reasons why these particular increases to these particular individuals 680 have been awarded away from ... 'because Peter Caruana did it like that and now Fabian Picardo does it like this'.

Gibraltarians, including myself, are simply none the wiser right now and, Mr Speaker, respectfully, who cares what the Chief Executive at the GHA once got erroneously, unjustifiably or otherwise? Who cares, Mr Speaker? That was then and this is now. A new dawn Government, 685 a stronger foundations administration, reminding us constantly of the last six years in a motion which is absolutely unnecessary and inappropriate for the purposes of this discussion, in the same way as was the statement of what the Leader of the Opposition may have said on a chat show a few weeks back.

Personally, I remain flabbergasted by the lack of substance and huge waste of ink on spin on this amendment to the original motion, which does not go far at all to justify in real terms this 690 increase for these two individuals.

Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Any other contributor? The Hon. Trevor Hammond.
695

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I have to thank the hon. Lady for her contribution there (Laughter) because it echoes my own feelings on the substance of what the Chief Minister said; and to some extent I have to thank the Chief Minister for his intervention also, because it does demonstrate how out of touch he has become (Laughter) with what the people are thinking in 700 Gibraltar.

Yesterday we had the intervention where £400,000 for the Hong Kong office, and £250,000 salary package associated with that office, was described as peanuts. Well, of course, certainly to most people, it would not appear to be peanuts. Today we have this nonsense amendment, quite frankly, which goes into all kinds of ridiculous details in which numbers do not even add up 705 or are not realistic. I am not going to go into the detail as I am sure my hon. Friend, Mr Clinton, will go into the detail on that.

One point that does need to be made is with reference to the salaries of the Chief Executive, although why it is raised in this particular motion I do not know. The Chief Minister has omitted the fact that when the Chief Executive of the GHA became a civil servant, whilst he includes his 710 salary, he does not include what his pension package is also. As a whole I suspect that, combined with his salary, would be considerably more than the previous incumbent would have been earning as Chief Executive of the GHA.

Then the Chief Minister also said it is strange that the Hon. Mr Clinton should choose to single out individuals which, I might add, is precisely what he has done; not only singled out but 715 named individuals in his own motion. The reason why the Hon. Mr Clinton singled out these individuals is because the Chief Minister effectively singled them out himself by permitting this pay award to proceed, a 28.21% pay award.

I must admit when I read it I thought it must surely be a typo, perhaps the decimal point is in the wrong place but no, sure enough, it is not a 2.821% pay award it is a 28% pay award. It is 720 utterly obscene. People do have the right to know why these individuals were awarded a pay award of that level; the taxpayer has a right to know that it is getting value for money for this. I really wish that the Chief Minister had stood up and just answered the motion with an 725 explanation. Perhaps workload has increased, perhaps terms and conditions increased, perhaps something has changed to warrant such a pay award, but nothing in the Chief Minister's intervention, nor his motion, have indicated that.

730 As I say those pay awards may indeed be merited, I do not know. It would have been a far better tactic, and shown much more that the Chief Minister is in touch with what people are thinking, if he had adopted that approach rather than the tactic that has now become usual, which is to rake over 20-odd years of history as he sees it and decisions that were made in the past.

735 The hon. Lady is right, we do not live in the past, we live in the present and people want to know why these pay awards were made to these individuals on such a scale, bearing in mind, as has been stated already, that the minimum wage was increased this year by half a percent. So the lowest earners received virtually nothing and certainly as part of the monthly salary, it really is virtually nothing; and yet the very highest earners in our community receive, effectively, a £34,000 increase. Do not quote me on that because my maths... I have just worked that out very quickly, but what looks to me like a £34,000 increase.

740 So when we are talking about the alleged part-time salaries of those on these Benches, well for most of us that equates to precisely almost what we earn on these benches. And the reality is, as the Chief Minister and those in the Government benches know, the work of Opposition does not just take place on two days of the month in Parliament or three days of the month in Parliament. The work of Opposition is ongoing all the time.

745 We do work hard, as I am sure the hon. Gentleman worked hard when he himself was in Opposition. It is a fact and it is an important part of our democracy that we do. We do not just work on the days that we are here in Parliament, we work every day of the week – every day of the week – to deliver as strong an opposition as it is possible to deliver.

750 So I would ask that the Chief Minister consider the motion that he has laid before this House and consider actually giving an appropriate response to the original motion which will satisfy the general public and the taxpayer of Gibraltar, and will demonstrate to this community that he is genuinely transparent and that he does want people to know the reasons why certain things are the way they are – rather than trying to hide that in a raft of statistics which are, frankly, historical and largely meaningless.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

755 Mr Speaker: Does anyone else wish to speak on the amendment?

The Hon. Roy Clinton.

760 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, bean counting data indeed! I am sure the Financial Secretary would be delighted with that use of terminology by the Chief Minister.

We are talking about the real pay of real people with real money, which is extracted from the taxpayer. All I have heard from the Chief Minister today in his amended motion is a smoke screen, a complete diversionary tactic by the Chief Minister.

765 I recall, and the Hon. Joe Bossano will be able to correct me, that when he first came into power, and I remember this because it made an impression on me, one of the first things he did when he got into No. 6 was he cancelled the lift that had been ordered on the basis that it was a waste of money and could not be justified.

770 Mr Speaker: May I correct that? That is incorrect. I cancelled it during the three months that I was Chief Minister. (Laughter and banging on desks) Hon. Chief Minister: It was fitted the minute the GSD arrived!

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, I apologise if that was indeed the case, my memory is obviously hazy. In any case, unnecessary expenditure when it is identified is obviously where you can not incur it and certainly where you do not see the justification or the logic for it.

775 All the Chief Minister has argued in his motion is that a particular logic should be followed because that was the logic of the previous administration and he is only following that logic. He has no discretion. But, Mr Speaker, as you have just demonstrated there is discretion for administrations that come in. Who says these grids are set in stone? Who says that whatever is said before is what has to go in the future?

780 There is only one thing in his motion which I found of value, and only one other thing that he said, in fact. He said, in his motion:

therefore considers and accepts as absolutely correct, the decision of the Chief Minister ...

– the decision of the Chief Minister, mark you –

... that the adjusted salary of the Chief Secretary and Principal Auditor should revert upon the retirement of the existing post holders, to that of their formerly provided for as annually adjusted ...

785 Now that, to me, Mr Speaker, and the Chief Minister no doubt will correct me, means that the New People was in fact correct today, that these salaries are personal to holder, which is not evident from the Estimates Book. And for that, if he confirms that, I am grateful. But then again it still raises the question, why pay them these higher salaries for the remaining period of the time they are in the Civil Service? I believe both of them have indicated they are going to retire. I do not see the value to the taxpayer in this.

790 All I have heard today is what appears to be wage inflation driven by jealousy and nothing else. Why has the Chief Minister not referred to the Head of Gambling Regulation who earns £204,000? Okay, he is employed by GDC. What about the Finance Director of the Gibraltar Development Corporation? He gets £156,000. And what about one of the other Jimmys, as we all know in the Finance Centre – Senior Finance Centre Executive, Insurance – and this is on the Government, £165,000? So where is the linkage to them, what is the logic, why pick on the GHA? Why say hey, I have abolished the post therefore we are going to go back? It is a constructed logic; this is the fabrication of an argument and he knows it.

795 I have not heard a single word in his motion or today, that actually justifies to the taxpayer why these two postholders should, albeit for a limited period of time, merit these pay awards. If he had come to us and said, ‘Well, this House should recognise the exceptional effort these postholders have made and therefore just for them, personal to holder I am going to give them an extra amount because they are such great people’.

800 But no, he has not said that. All he has said is, ‘Well, the GHA Chief Executive got this, and now he is a civil servant and he got that; and these guys did not like it so they came to me and said, “No, no, we want more than him”, and therefore I thought okay that is fine’. Mr Speaker, that is completely ridiculous. It does not happen in the private sector, I do not see why it should happen in the public sector.

805 The one comment he made, and perhaps he could clarify to this House, when he said, ‘Well, I consulted with the Financial Secretary and the Attorney General and they were fine with it, because the other two were not on contracts’. What does he mean, ‘not on contracts’? Is the Attorney General on a contract? is the Financial Secretary ... although we know he is on secondment? But is the Attorney General on a contract? What does he mean by that? Is that the reason why they are not jealous because they have got signed contracts and therefore for them they do not care?

815 So, Mr Speaker, this motion is absolute bunkum and in fact, in a peculiar kind of way, I am grateful to the Chief Minister because he has just made a complete pig’s ear of addressing my motion, in that all he has done is demonstrate that the pay of the Civil Service is complete nonsense. There is no merit to these increases; all it is, is relativity. ‘He gets more, I want more; he gets more, I want more too’.

820 The taxpayer does not live in this world, at the top of the Civil Service where they feel automatically entitled just because ‘A’ gets this I should get this too. What world are they living in? This is not the world that the average Gibraltarian lives in. Somebody on the average salary cannot go to his boss and say, 'Well, the next company down the road gets this and I want much more'. This is just does not happen. And if they are so unhappy well let them leave, frankly. If they are not happy with their salaries, go get a job in the private sector and let's see how much 825 they get paid. (Interjection) Yes, yes. These posts are the most senior civil servants, or one of the most senior civil servants in Gibraltar, and they should be setting an example, and not basically encouraging wage inflation based on what would appear to be relativity and jealousy.

So, Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if the Chief Minister would just address two points for me, because I obviously cannot support this motion. Two points, Mr Speaker. One is: are these 830 increases personal to holder for both those grades? Secondly, what were these two contracts he referred to in respect of the other senior civil servants?

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Is there any other contributor to the amendment? If not, I will ask the Chief 835 Minister to reply.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I was going to start by replying to the hon. Lady. In order to take the contributions as chronologically as possible, I want to reply to the hon. Lady who delivered the speech that she had written before I had spoken magnificently well, with 840 passion and with eloquence. She is growing into the role but, Mr Speaker, I had actually and fortunately dealt with all the points in her speech during the course of my contribution.

Now it is all very well to say it is just the GSD versus the GSLP, etc. and it is populist to say that. But actually I had addressed all of the points that the hon. Lady raised, and I addressed all of the points that arose in respect of how we had brought down the salaries of the Chief 845 Executive of the GHA and how we have removed the Chief Executive of the GHA.

And frankly therefore, when she looks back on her contribution today and she looks at what I said before she got up to speak, I think she will find that I did not engage just in, 'GSD did, well 850 GSLP Liberals will do now'. I engaged in, 'GSD did, historically all Governments have agreed, this is what the GSLP did to undo and reduce the cost to the taxpayer'. Because we are the ones who represent the working classes of Gibraltar; we are the ones who want to reduce the cost of doing business in Gibraltar for businesses and reduce the bill where it is unnecessary.

I have given an example, Mr Speaker, of how we have done that in respect of this particular post of the Chief Executive of the Health Authority in the context of everything I said before she got up to reply to me. And I explained why it was that these two – in fact, four, but I will come to 855 the issue of why it is only two – had to have, in honouring an agreement, and the Government must always honour its agreements, whether it likes them or not, if there is an agreement, and with the civil servants the agreements are sometimes conventions, and why these two had to get those increases.

But I will tell her, Mr Speaker, although I thought she was eloquent in the way she did it, I 860 was very disappointed in the logic that she brought to it because it fails to understand everything that I had put. But she demonstrated one thing: she demonstrated that the next person I am going to address was utterly foolish in the things that he said about her on Monday, because I did not see her bringing out the pompoms to support me. In fact I thought that she probably did a better job of attacking us than he did.

Mr Speaker, to have heard Mr Hammond say that we are out of touch ... well, absolutely 865 everything that Mr Hammond says in the context of the political debate in Gibraltar has to be seen through the eyes of the campaign he led – and I say he led it because the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has given him the credit for leading it – in respect of the LNG facility at the North Mole. He was telling us before the last election that we were out of touch with the 870 concerns of people in the area, that we were putting our community at risk, that we were creating a terrorist threat for our community.

Well, Mr Speaker, it is clear that the person who was completely out of touch was him. He was so out of touch, he is now out of touch with himself, because I think he has been told either by his leader or by his priest, never to say the words 'LNG' again – or maybe by his conscience. 875 Because if anything that he had said before the last election rang true to him, he would be the first one to have been chained by the gates of the facility before it was erected. Yet we do not hear him utter the words 'LNG', so he does not have a clue about LNG and he goes off and pontificates about it. It seems to me that he lives in a world where it is possible to hold down a job and come here and say that you are doing politics as a full-time job and not see the contradiction! (Laughter) Well, Mr Speaker, look, his employers might have something to say for 880 it. (Interjection) I know he is not employed by the MOD, but there are lots of people who are employed by the MOD who were Members of the GSLP in Opposition in this House, who were able to marry both jobs and they were trade unionists to boot.

But in all of what they have done, and the hon. Lady is not guilty of this, but they are. In all 885 that they have done, he comes back and on top of that exacerbates matters and says, 'Yes, actually we are not well paid'. It just does not make any sense. He says, 'This is a full time job, we work so hard it is not just three days a month'.

Well, Mr Speaker, I just do not understand, he is left having to traduce what we say in order to try and win the argument. He is left having to suggest that we said that £400,000 was 890 peanuts. Those words did not cross our lips. We said it was probably the lowest cost to any government to operate an office in China. It does not mean it is peanuts, it does not mean that we are not going to look after every single penny. But you cannot go to China and set up a barraca (Laughter) with a white sheet and four rods and say, 'This is the Gibraltar office'. It is hugely representative of us and the beach that we all love, but that is not what the Gibraltar 895 office can be, Mr Speaker. And if you want an office and you want someone to man it and you want a secretary it is going to cost you that sort of money. Peanuts come into it, Mr Speaker, but only in the context of, if that is what you pay you get monkeys.

Peanuts were first mentioned in this House by him in relation to that cost, not by us; and he is not going to get away with suggesting that we have said that £400,000 is peanuts. We have 900 not and we never would, Mr Speaker. We never would. We said it was the cheapest cost of any government operating in China, probably. Because if you think, that the offices of other overseas territories in China cost less than that from the discussions we have had, they cost much more than that.

Hon. Members try and catch us in a vice which moves so illogically and so slowly that it never 905 catches us. They tell us to do things but then they tell us those things should not cost money. 'When are we going to have the lifts in Rodney House; and in here, and in there?' 'Why are you spending so much on lifts?' I mean, Mr Speaker, if Benny Hill had had any dialogue in his sketches he might have been able to borrow it from the Hansards of what they have said in this House.

The hon. Gentleman mentioned the gold-plated pension of civil servants and said, 'You have not added that to the calculation'. No, I have not added that to the calculation because if we add it to the calculation, we have to add it to the calculation of every single salary in this book in respect of the Civil Service. So if he wants to talk about that, let's take any salary in this book and let's calculate what the pension is in respect of that. Let's calculate it just at the rates that Joe 915 Bossano has rightly brought in in respect of commutations; let's multiply it by 12, that is the value of the Civil Service Pension Scheme. One, by the way, that I will not forget them trying to claw their way into less than a year ago (Laughter) although they got rid of it for everybody else – they had got rid of it for everybody else; and I am sorry to say that to the hon. Lady, but they got rid of it, Mr Speaker. One day I am not going to mention what the GSD did in Government and she is going to get up and accuse me on that day and say, 'The hon. Gentleman behaves as if 920 history will teach him nothing.' Well, look, Mr Speaker, in some instances history teaches me what the political trajectory of this community has been.

925 The hon. Gentleman is right, I may have failed; I may have failed in one particular respect. I could have made an even better argument if I had calculated the 25% gratuity in respect of Mr McCutcheon's wage, which I did not calculate. I did not look for that and I will look to see whether he was entitled to it, because every single officer that they recruited from outside was also entitled to an annual 25% gratuity. So I may have got my figures wrong, the increases may have been even higher that they presided over!

930 He says that we are out of touch because people do not care about this. Well look, Mr Speaker, we know different people. It appears that I know 68% of the people and they know 32% of the people, and the 68% of the people that I know are very interested indeed every time that we uncover some of the things that they got up to whilst they were in Government ... the things that their Leader, who was a Minister in the Government, was responsible for doing.

935 The hon. Gentleman talked about the minimum wage and what the increase in the minimum wage has been, only 0.5%, hardly nothing in the pay packet, and I am grateful that he did that. Not because it embarrasses me but because I had forgotten to deal with it in the context of the opening speech by Mr Clinton. I have done the exercise, Mr Speaker, in the context of a question that the hon. Lady asked me. She rightly has not raised that issue because she had the answer from me that in the five years since I have been Chief Minister the minimum wage has gone up 15%, and public sector salaries have gone up 14%.

940 I do not know if the hon. Gentleman was not here that day, maybe that day he could not marry his other full-time job with this full-time job and did not get the memo about the answer I had given. Well, look, Mr Speaker, it is one thing to cancel a lift ... you want a lift or you do not want a lift. These days in a Government building you are probably likely to need a lift because the building has to be accessible to people with disabilities. There could be a disabled Chief Minister in the future, there is no reason why there could not be and he needs to get to his office.

950 Adolfo Canepa decided that there should not be a lift when he was Chief Minister, Mr Speaker now. Joe Bossano when he was Chief Minister, the hon. Member thinks that it was also put to him. (Interjection by Hon. J J Bossano) The Civil Service is sometimes relentless, Mr Speaker, when it wants a lift (Laughter) and he said no too. I did not have the choice, Mr Speaker, when I arrived at No. 6 Convent Place there was a lift. Now I do not mean to incur the hon. Lady's wrath, but if it did not happen when the GSLP was there and it was there by the time the GSLP got back, it must have happened when the GSD was there.

955 Look, what you cannot do is be accused of things and then not say, 'Well, hang on, you did them too!' And the hon. Lady needs to understand that in the context of this reply I am not saying, 'You did it too and that is why I can get away with it', which is what she was implying. I am saying as much in a reply to Mr Clinton as to her, they did it and we are undoing it. But in the context of undoing it we are obliged to comply with the agreements entered into by former Governments.

960 I have given effect to agreements when I was elected with which I did not agree except for one particular instance. One instance where I believed that there was bordering an illegality. I took the matter to Cabinet and I told them this has been promised to a person who has been a former Minister and it is outside the policy rules; but there is a signed agreement and I am not prepared to give effect to it. And the Cabinet agreed that we should not. I went back to that person and I was threatened with legal action, but we prevailed because we were right. But where there is an agreement with the Civil Service, we have given effect to those agreements. We represent trade unionism and these agreements have sometimes been won by trade unions and it has got nothing to do with Luis Montiel, Mr Speaker, it was another Minister.

970 And that is why this is not a case of, 'You did it, therefore we will do it too'. This is a case of, 'You did it; we are undoing it'. We are getting rid of the Chief Executive, we are getting rid of that huge cost but there is this agreement in respect of civil servants and therefore we must honour it – and this answers Mr Clinton's question, although I had answered it already – but only on a personal to holder basis. And that kicks in after the book is printed, because the Chief

975 Executive is going to retire much, much earlier than expected, and therefore we have the opportunity of undoing the increases for future postholders of the posts of Principal Auditor and Chief Secretary, and therefore they are personal to holder. The Principal Auditor has already indicated that he is retiring, the Chief Secretary has not yet done so, but these salaries are personal to holder. Another thing that the hon. Gentleman can notch down to the New People 980 having told the community correctly.

When the hon. Gentleman talks about the Head of Gambling and the Finance Centre representative, these people are not civil servants, Mr Speaker. Therefore the civil servants have not made the argument based on the agreement that equates them with other civil servants.
That is why we are not making it with the £204,000 salary of the Gambling Commissioner. That is 985 why we are not making it with those who work in the Finance Centre Department; and that is why we are not 'picking on' the GHA, we have a situation in the GHA where a Civil Servant took a salary in a job that had to be equated.

But for him to say, that it does not happen in the private sector is an absolute joke. It is an absolute joke, Mr Speaker. It might not happen in public companies with activist shareholders 990 but I can tell him it happens in very many private companies, some of which I am aware, some of which I have been involved in, people get huge pay rises. But I am not surprised that in all his time in the private sector he never had one.

I am not surprised because if this is the standard of work that one can expect, this sort of lack of research, this apparent opportunity of having a shot which then turns out to be a blank, well it 995 is a dud. Frankly it is unfair, Mr Speaker, in particular for him to have got up because he is angry with me, and said that this is wage jealousy; to have spoken as badly of the Civil Service, at least of senior civil servants as he has, to have declared himself as he has ... and I have no doubt that once I sit down the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is going to get up, he is going to get up, they are going to try and have a go and they are going to try and undo all the damage. But he 1000 has declared himself today an enemy of the Civil Service.

And, Mr Speaker, frankly, to have said that two people of the calibre, postholder and individuals in post, of the Principal Auditor and Ernest Gomez, have acted out of wage jealousy, is absolutely unbecoming of who I thought he was. We may be at political loggerheads but I really did not think that the bitterness of losing an election had corroded him to such an extent 1005 that he would get up here and say that those two postholders, those two individuals, had acted out of wage jealousy. I have only seen a tongue so out of control before in the mouth of the current Leader of the Opposition, and it does not behold him to continue down that path.

To say that I have made a pig's ear of a debate where I have demonstrated that the things that he wanted to prove are unprovable, shows to me that the frustration and the desperation 1010 has got to him to such an extent that he has nothing left in the tank. He has carried out a direct attack on these two senior civil servants to such an extent that it has culminated with what I think is the most disgraceful suggestion I have heard in this House since I have been here, and I have heard many – because the man they sometimes call the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, sometimes said some things that I think even he regretted when the red mists lifted.

1015 He has said let them leave if they do not like their salaries. Well, look, Mr Speaker, the world today is full of argument about why populism in politics is the wrong thing. If he thinks he is going to ride a wave that is going to lead him into Government simply by agitating on the salaries of these two senior civil servants and saying senior civil servants act out of wage jealousy and they do not live in the real world, that is not the Gibraltar that there is out there. Mr 1020 Speaker, he and I live in a different Gibraltar.

In a different Gibraltar because most of the people I know are on very low salaries. None of them disrespect the Chief Secretary and the Principal Auditor when they are in the Government service in the way that he has today. Because it is also true, Mr Speaker, that apart from Mr Llamas who is himself a civil servant, and I think that Mr Reyes is now a pensioner, the only 1025 Member on the benches opposite who is actually entirely full time is him. Now, Mr Speaker, he gets to work a couple of days a month, does what he wants as a Member of the Opposition the rest of the time, when I happen to see him it is usually enjoying a coffee, whilst the Chief Secretary is hard at work and whilst the Principal Auditor is hard at work at their relatively high salaries, and whilst the people who are less than him and less than the Principal Auditor are either opening up a road or doing the work that they do hard at their desk. And he says, if they do not like it and they are acting out of wage jealousy let them leave, the whole of the Civil Service pay scale is just based on relativity.

Well, Mr Speaker, I think that the contempt he reflects for the Civil Service is a contempt that the Civil Service will reflect to him. I think it will reflect to him and this Hansard will mark a seminal point in his political career, one from which I predict he may never recover.

So the position that I have set out in the amendment to the motion is the only position that I believe accurately reflects the position, not just because it shows what the GSD did and why therefore we are able to do what want to do, which is to reduce salaries, but why it is right, proper and appropriate to do what we have done; and why the hon. Lady, if she took an objective view and was sitting on this side of the House after the 2011 election, in delivering a new dawn and building the strongest foundations, would find that she would have done exactly the same thing.

For that reason, Mr Speaker, I commend the amended motion to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now put the amendment in the terms moved by the Chief Minister, to the vote.

Those in favour? (Several Members: Aye.) Those against? (Several Members: Nay.) The amendment is carried by a Government majority.

So we now have the motion as amended before the House –

Hon. Chief Minister: Can I rise on just a point of order?

I am loath to do so, but I said something and I now have the answer and I will just tell the House that in fact Mr McCutcheon was entitled to a 25% gratuity on top of the amounts that I have delivered.

I will just say that by way of information. Tax-free.

Mr Speaker: So I will now put the motion as amended, that is now before the House. Anyone who has not spoken on the original motion may now speak.

As there is no contributor, I will call on the Hon. Roy Clinton to exercise his right to reply.
The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Today we have seen the proof that has been long sought as to whether Father Christmas exists; I believe we have him personified in the Chief Minister himself.

The issue I raised in terms of the senior pay grades of the Civil Service, he has completely failed to address, and in this amended motion which completely sidesteps the issues I raised. These are issues not of my imagination, these are issues which also in the UK Civil Service has obviously exercised their brains because they realise that the most senior civil servant sets an example to the rest of the Civil Service. And it is a bit rich for those at the top of the pyramid, so to speak, I will quote Hansard where the Chief Minister said on 24th November 2016 at paragraph 345:

Since the representations made by the Principal Auditor ...

So these civil servants went to the Chief Minister, cap in hand, and said, 'Well, Mr Chief Minister, you know this is grossly unfair I believe I need to have more, please will you give effect to this?' And yet the Chief Minister tells us that this is something that was agreed by a previous administration and it has taken him five years to get to it – five years, Mr Speaker. (Interjection) Mr Speaker, may I continue?

Mr Speaker: Yes, of course, continue.

1080

Hon. R M Clinton: – five years, Mr Speaker, and his only excuse for that is, ‘Oh, well, there was a civil servant who took up a post in the GHA and somehow that threw everything out of kilter.’ Mr Speaker, in terms of the pay of the senior civil servants what difference does it make? Are they going to do more in their current job, what is it that they are going to give to the taxpayer to justify this pay increase?

1085

It may be that the Chief Executive, the current incumbent civil servant who took over the role of GHA Chief Executive, and funnily enough the Chief Minister has chosen this very peculiar route to announce to the GHA that he has just abolished their chief. I do not know what the world will be like tomorrow in the GHA without their chief. But frankly, perhaps this civil servant had specialist skills for the GHA, as indeed perhaps the previous incumbents had; as indeed perhaps the various people employed within the Gibraltar Development Corporation. And I would point out to the Chief Minister that the Finance Centre Insurance Executive is actually listed as a civil servant in the Estimates Book, at £165,000.

1090

I have not heard anything that the Chief Minister has said in recommending this motion as to why these types of pay increases are merited. There is nothing that tells the taxpayer what it is that they are getting in return. What is the return to a taxpayer of this increase? I have not heard it. Neither has the Chief Minister, or perhaps he has conveniently forgotten to tell the House, what were these other two contracts he referred to in respect of the four senior civil servants and they did not mind about this type of increase? Presumably they had contracts, but he has not come back on that. No doubt it is a subject that perhaps we will come back to at some future point in time.

1095

Mr Speaker, he then goes on to muddy the waters with his motion and his speech by talking about, ‘Well, the Members opposite get this, and they did this, and this was done then.’ But, Mr Speaker, that has nothing to do with my original motion. And besides, the subject of remuneration will be discussed in the Select Committee which we have set up this afternoon, on parliamentary reform. It is my personal view that the salaries of Members of this House should not be set by ourselves. It is obviously a huge conflict of interest and it should be done on the basis of external recommendation, without pre-empting the work of the Select Committee.

1105

By the same measure I would argue that those at the top of the Civil Service should accept the same yardstick, and there should be somebody set up to determine what it is that these people should be paid, benchmarked against perhaps posts in the private sector or in the public sector in the UK, some other means of measuring what it is that the job they are doing is worth.

1110

Mr Speaker, in a way I am grateful that the Chief Minister has clarified that these posts are now personal to holder and yet on the other hand with one the Chief Minister has already admitted to is going to retire, it does seem rather convenient. And I say that with measured words.

1115

I have not attacked the Civil Service. (Interjection) I have not and I will have it on Hansard that I have not attacked the Civil Service. What I have attacked is the lack of a meritocracy at the top of the Civil Service; whereas it is the Chief Minister’s gift, and I use that word loosely, to give whatever salary he sees fit to whoever walks into his office. He says, ‘Oh, well, this House approved these salaries’. Well, Mr Speaker, we may have approved the Budget as a whole but I did raise in Committee a question about this salary increase and he offered to give me the information. I wrote to him and he did not give it to me. He did not give it to me in the House then, he has not given it to me subsequently and he has not given it to me now. So the only way to get the Chief Minister to somehow react to my letters, which he so much loves, is to present a motion to this House.

1120

I put him on notice now, that for every letter I write to him and he does not reply I will bring a motion to this House. (Interjection)

1130 Mr Speaker: Order.

Hon. R M Clinton: Because he loves my letters so much. In fact he loves my letters so much I can just imagine him handling them with such love and looking at the envelope and saying, 'Oh, look, Parliamentary, Urgent – ha, ha, ha'. Well, no, Mr Speaker, if he asks me to write to him and I write to him, I expect a response. And if he cannot write and give a response then he should not be Minister for Finance, resign that position and let somebody else do it who can, because obviously he cannot. (Several Members: Ooh!) He may not have the time to do it, so give it to somebody who can. (Interjections)

1140 Mr Speaker, the public will remember that he has not given an answer today and I want Hansard to reflect that he has not given an answer. He just said, 'Well, the GSD did this, the GHA did that ... blah, blah, blah ... the Members opposite get paid this'. No answer. He has set up a perfect smoke screen, a barrage of completely irrelevant information in respect of the original motion.

1145 Well, Mr Speaker, if that is what he wants to do, if that is what he believes the people of Gibraltar will believe and are happy to accept from this magnificent Chief Minister we have opposite, this worker of miracles – then fine, let him try. But I can tell you it will not be me who will go down in history today as having attacked the Civil Service. It will be him who will go down in history as having been the Chief Minister who has taken the taxpayer for a ride.

1150 Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I will now put the motion as amended to the House. Those in favour? (Several Members: Aye.) Those against? (Several Members: Nay.) Carried by Government majority.

ADJOURNMENT

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should now adjourn, but I do so conscious that we started on a sorrowful note today, conscious that this is a festive season, it is the Christmas of the Christian, Catholic religion, it is the Hanukkah of the Jewish religion, it is a time for us of Merry Christmas and for them of Happy Hanukkah, and for many others of Season's Greetings and I extend sincere Season's Greetings to all Members of the House.

1160 I extend all the very best for Christmas and for Hanukkah and for whatever relevant season, to all members of the community and I wish that we all have the opportunity of enjoying this joyful time with our families.

I shall look forward, Mr Speaker, to meetings next year, a year that I hope will be a very good year indeed for Gibraltar, although that is not to say that it is not going to be a complex and difficult year that we will navigate together.

1165 Mr Speaker, I extend all of those wishes also to the Chief Secretary and the Principal Auditor, at least on behalf of this side of the House and I move that the House do now adjourn sine die.

Mr Speaker: May I ask hon. Members to sit for a moment because I would like to extend my best wishes and those of the members of my staff to all hon. Members. May they have a very happy and peaceful Christmas and I wish them every blessing in the New Year. In spite of whatever headaches they may sometimes give me which sometimes elicit a loss of temper, I do enjoy being here enormously and I really look forward to seeing you all again in 2017.

1170 Thank you very much. (Banging on desks)

Several Members: Hear, hear.

1175

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn sine die.

The House adjourned at 6.26p.m.
