PRAYER

Mr Speaker

CONFIRMATION OF MINUTES

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Wednesday, 18th January 2017.
Order of Proceedings: (i) Oath of Allegiance; (ii) Confirmation of Minutes – the Minutes of the last meeting of Parliament, which was held on 20th, 21st and 22nd December 2016.

5 Mr Speaker: May I sign the Minutes as correct? (Members: Aye.)

Mr Speaker signed the Minutes.

PAPERS TO BE LAID

Clerk: (iii) Communications from the Chair; (iv) Petitions; (v) Announcements; (vi) Papers to be laid – the Hon. the Chief Minister.

10 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table the Gibraltar Annual Policing Plan for 2016-17 and the Annual Report of the Gibraltar Police Authority for the year ended 31st March 2016.

15 Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Questions for Oral Answer

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND THE GSB

Q82-87/2017

Public finance – Breakdown of figures

Clerk: (vii) Reports of Committees; (viii) Answers to Oral Questions.

We commence with Question 82/2017. The Hon. R M Clinton.

20 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise whether PwC have completed any audits of Credit Finance Company Ltd?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

25 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 83 to 87.

Clerk: Question 83. The Hon. R M Clinton.

30 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise the total gross debt aggregate debt after application of the Sinking Fund to gross debt, cash reserves and net debt figures for public debt for the following date, being 1st December 2016?

Clerk: Question 84. The Hon. R M Clinton.

35 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise the total liquid reserves figure and its constituents, namely Consolidated Fund, Improvements and Development Fund, Government-owned companies, deposits, contingencies and other funds for the following date, being 1st December 2016?

40 Clerk: Question 85. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise how total liquid reserves are invested/held, giving details of all bank/saving bank accounts and cash held for the following date, being 1st December 2016?

Clerk: Question 86. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide a statement as to its financial performance by individual heads of revenue and expenditure as compared to the 2016-17 approved estimates for the six-month period to 30th September 2016, including Government authorities and agencies?

50

Clerk: Question 87. The Hon. R M Clinton.

55

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise all companies, with the exception of Aquagib Ltd, in which it or the Gibraltar Development Corporation has a joint venture interest and the monetary value that interest and the percentage of the joint venture company owned?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the PwC audit is still ongoing.

The position as regards total liquid assets composition, when, where and how these are invested on a particular date chosen by the Member opposite continues to be as previously stated.

The position of the public debt on 1st December 2016 is as it was estimated on 1st November 2016, except that the cash reserves were then £79 million and the net debt was £367 million.

As regards the estimates of revenue and expenditure for the first six months of the current financial year which I volunteered to provide to the hon. Member, I can confirm that I will provide them to the hon. Member during the course of the month. As previously stated, these half-year figures cannot be interpreted as indicating what the full year result will be.

75

There are no other joint ventures other than the one mentioned in the question.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the hon. Member for his response.

If I can ask him, in terms of the audits of Credit Finance Ltd, which he says are ongoing, could he advise for which financial years they are ongoing?

Hon. J J Bossano: For all the financial years for which they are being undertaken. I think they are being undertaken for all the years since it started, because none of them have been done so far. So we will get them all together, I imagine.

85

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, as I am sure the hon. Member is aware, audits are usually done on annual rotation and you would expect the audit report to be signed within at least six months of the year end. Are there any issues that PwC have identified that are delaying the audits, or is there a delay, or is this actually a planned process whereby four or five years are done in one go?

90

Hon. J J Bossano: No, it is not planned to be done every five years in one go, although we have been doing more than five years in a go because we inherited 15 years of his Government when none were done. So, by this standard, five years is one third of the time.

95

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that perhaps predictable reply. But would he not agree that this company was obviously incorporated under his watch, and therefore he has had complete control over the management and the finances of this entity? Therefore, would he not wish the audits to at least be completed on an annual basis?

100

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, I would wish it to be done on an annual basis but this is what it has taken. I do not know whether it is that accountants and auditors have the same practice as lawyers, which usually is that the longer they take the more they charge. All I can say is that the sooner I have it the better, and the happier I will be.

105

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would perhaps advise the hon. Member to make sure he agrees his audit fee in advance so that we do not get landed with a big bill. In any case, I look forward to seeing the accounts when they are prepared.

Mr Speaker, if I may, turning to the response to Question 86, in which the hon. Member has kindly agreed to provide information – and I understand what he says when it does not 110 necessarily mean that it is on a pro rata basis reflective of what the end-of-year results will be, as there will obviously be tidying issues – in what way does he hope to get that information to me, given that this is a question that I am asking in this House and I would want it reflected in Hansard?

115 Hon. J J Bossano: He will get it the same day as I get it and I will deliver it to him, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may address you, how would we get this information into Hansard?

120 Mr Speaker: There is no way in which a private communication between a Minister and the hon. mover of the question ... there is no way in which it can be entered into the Hansard. It can only be entered into the Hansard if the information is provided here in Parliament.

125 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would it perhaps then be – and I excuse my use of English in this way of saying it – more correct perhaps to wait until February, when the Hon. Minister will have the information to hand and can provide it in this House?

Mr Speaker: If the Minister is prepared to provide the information here in the House, I can be liberal in allowing a question to be put by the hon. Member that will enable the Minister to 130 make the information available here. It is up to him.

Hon. J J Bossano: I am not sure why he is so keen to have it in the House, Mr Speaker, but ... I used to get it the way I propose to provide it to him – that is, when it was ready the Chief Minister's office used to send me a letter giving me the information. When I get it and I am 135 ready ... I am prepared to give it to him as soon as I get it.

Mr Speaker: The other thing, of course, is – 140 Hon. J J Bossano: Unless he wants me to repeat what he has already got here.

Mr Speaker: Apart from that, whether it is in the Hansard or not, that does not stop the hon.
Member from making use of it subsequently, either by way of asking further questions or by referring to that information in the course of any debate.

145 Hon. J J Bossano: Let us clarify that I am not saying that I am providing it to him confidentially and that he cannot make use of it; I am just providing it in the most convenient way.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, on that basis then that will be fine, and then, as you say, we can refer to it in this House later on. I look forward to receiving the information in due course.

150 If I may ask: in his experience, not having seen the previous presentation and information that he used to receive, to what level of detail would this information be? Would it just be headline numbers, or would there be a breakdown?

Hon. J J Bossano: In effect, it is an update of the summary, the pages that we get in the 155 estimates... It is the summary that we get in the estimates by head of expenditure. That is what I used to get, and in fact normally the expenditure ... you can then see which head ... if a lot of money has been spent on that head at the beginning of the year, then you are almost heading to be overspending in that head, because usually it comes in at less than 50% by 50% of the year.

160 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister and I look forward to receiving the information in due course.

Q88/2017

Gibraltar Health Authority –
Efficiency measures; frontier workers

165

Clerk: Question 88. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is the Government planning to introduce any efficiency measures within the GHA?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
Mr Speaker, I will answer this question with Question 89.

175

180

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Government intend to change the employment status of frontier workers employed directly by the GHA as nurses on short-term contract from direct employment by the GHA to placement via the services of a recruitment consultant?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the Ministry for Economic Development is responsible for identifying potential efficiency measures throughout the public sector, which includes the GHA.

As regards contract workers in the GHA, no one is being changed from being an employee of the authority to being an employee of a consultant.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what he has said is that his Department is responsible for efficiencies, and we all know that, but does his Department, or the Minister, plan to introduce any efficiencies in relation to the GHA?

195

Hon. J J Bossano: The plan is to introduce the measures that are identified as producing greater efficiency in the use of existing resources, whether it is in the GHA or anywhere else. It is not that there is a different policy for the GHA from what is being applied in the rest of the public service. As I think I have said before, I welcome any ideas that others may have that will lead to a more efficient use of public funds.

200

Hon. D A Feetham: May I ask the Minister where is he with the plan to introduce possible efficiencies – is this at drawing board stage? Has he been able to identify areas already where there are going to be efficiencies? Has he sat down with the employees and with management in order to consider whether there are any efficiencies to be made? If he can give me more information in relation to where we are at with that potential plan I would appreciate it.

205

Hon. J J Bossano: I am already having monthly meetings with different unions and I am happy to report that they have been very co-operative to date, once I explained to them what it was and they got over the initial anxieties. I have asked them, in fact, to involve their memberships because I actually believe that the people who are doing the job are the people who are best placed to tell us whether the way they are doing it is the most efficient way of doing it, or not, particularly because there is a tendency, I think, in any organisation and certainly in Government organisations that things are initiated and, unless somebody comes back and says 'we do not

215 need to be doing that anymore because it is no longer relevant', people tend to keep on doing the same thing or doing it in the same way until a new instruction is issued to stop it.

220 So the whole idea is that we already started on the process of getting feedback where ... For example, I have been told of particular things that happen in the preparation of the estimates and in the presentation of them to the House and in the work that the Treasury has to be done – and this has come from the union, not from the management, where they have said to me that it involves a lot of man hours being expended on doing something that would save resources if we found a way of getting to the same result without doing it in the way that it is being done. That is one example.

225 I will not be making public specific things that we do, but what I hope is that the results will be seen in the money that we need to spend as the financial year progresses and as the new estimates have been brought in, because the whole idea is, as I have already explained to the unions, that what I am looking for is improvements in the service that we provide or that additional services that are provided should be achieved by better use of existing resources rather than the expectation that every year there will be an automatic increase in manning levels or an automatic increase in the provision of funds. If this succeeds it will succeed in us 230 being able to take on the responsibility of delivering things within the resources that we have got because we are using those resources better.

Hon. D A Feetham: In terms of the plan for efficiencies – and, as I understand it, that is an ongoing situation and it is not definite at the present moment because he is still talking to 235 employees and he has spoken to the union – when does he think that he will be in a position to have that plan or list of actions that he thinks need to be taken? And will that then be presented to the unions and to the employees before the plan of action is executed, or is this on the go – effectively a live plan of action?

240 Hon. J J Bossano: It is intended to be a permanent thing. It is not that we have got a plan, and then we save that plan and then it is finished and then there is no more efficiency needed. That is to say on a daily basis we will be introducing changes that people suggest to us or that we ourselves think can be applied, having first done an exercise to make sure that the effect of the change will not be that we finish up paying more for what we are doing than we were before –
245 clearly, because the whole idea is to be able to make savings in order to be able to do things within the budgets and money levels that we have got today. Therefore, if it succeeds it will be seen to be succeeding because that is the position that Members will find when they are being asked to approve funds in this Parliament. If it does not succeed, then Members will see us having to come back and ask for more money or ask for more man power in order to deliver 250 things because we have not been able to achieve efficiencies.

They were persuaded, Mr Speaker, if I may say so, that the efficiencies potentially were there before I was asked to do something about it, so presumably ... If they have got a plan and they are willing to share it with me, I will be happy to look at it.

255 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, of course success is measured by much more than just simply money; it is also measured by the delivery of service, and we would hope that the delivery of service is not actually affected by the efficiencies. But that is not what I am ...

260 The next question that I am going to ask ... On current predictions at the moment we are spending over £100 million annually in relation to health. My understanding of the situation is if we transposed past increases to the future, we would have rapidly got to about £120 million annually – that is a £10 million per month spending on health. Does the hon. Gentleman hope to have a decrease in the amount that we are spending, or does he hope to have a situation where there is effectively a freeze on any projected future increases of the amount that we spend?

265 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, we will have an opportunity to debate the estimates when the estimates are presented to the House, but certainly in terms of the size of the budget the efficiency is not necessarily going to lead to a smaller budget, but it can lead to a situation where, with the same budget and without a further increase, we are able to do more things or 270 provide the services to more people. So, in fact, let me say that in terms of the introduction that he made, if there was a decline in the service to the public or a decline in the service to the user, there would not be any efficiency involved. Efficiency, by definition, means that you are delivering at least the same as you were before at a lower cost, or that you are delivering more at no higher cost. But there will be a process of identifying things and that will be reflected in the results that we achieve.

275 It is true that the Health Service grows substantially and has grown substantially in the term of office that we were here. I think it is important to recognise that the service that we want to provide is one which meets all the needs of our community but that if one particular Department kept on growing faster than anything else, eventually we would all have to be working in that Department.

280 For the sake of comparison let me say that, in percentage terms, the increase in the first eight years of the GSLP administration between 1988 and 1996 was greater than anything we have seen recently, because we went from £8 million to £20 million, so we actually increased the budget of the Health Service two and a half times in those eight years. We certainly have not done that this time because otherwise we would now be in the £300 million area!

285 I would hope that, given the concerns that Members opposite have previously expressed about the prudential use of public resources, I would enjoy their support in the efforts that I am going to be making.

Mr Speaker: May I intervene to say that of course we are now getting into specific details 290 which are well outside the ambit of the original questions. It is the responsibility of the Minister to what extent he opens himself to further supplementaries, but I also have a responsibility to try to keep the matter within reasonable control.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, turning to the second question – the one about the change 295 of employment status of frontier workers – the position at the moment is that there is a substantial number of frontier workers that work, particularly nurses, at the hospital. A lot of those are on short-term contracts. Although they are on short-term contracts – not permanent and pensionable, if I can call it that – they are ... If I may please ask my question: although they are on short-term contracts ...

300 Does the Hon. Chief Minister want to say something? I will give way to him.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am very grateful to the hon. Gentleman giving way to me. I am having a conversation with Members on this side of the House, which I intend to continue.

305 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, thank you very much. He can continue to be rude.

There are a substantial number of these nurses, my understanding is, on short-term contracts. But short-term contracts are in themselves also recurrent expenditure – it is there, it is recurrent expenditure. Is there a plan from the Government to reduce recurrent expenditure 310 by effectively reducing those frontier workers on short-term contracts working at the hospital and then allow them to be re-engaged via recruitment consultants, which would then of course basically substantially reduce potentially the recurrent expenditure burden on the Government –on the GHA in this case?

315 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman knows I am always happy to answer his questions, but all he has done is ask the original question in different words, and the answer he has already had.

320 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, as always I am grateful for the Minister's interventions in respect of public efficiency. Can I ask him: is this review purely internal? I know he has no love of consultants from outside, and neither do I, but is there any plan to bring in any particular experts in the field of healthcare in terms of identifying any greater efficiencies, or ways or management systems that might produce not just a financial outcome but also a positive healthcare outcome?

325 Hon. J J Bossano: I am glad that the hon. Member and I share the same view of consultants. In my experience they tend to cost more than the savings that they produce, so there is no improvement in efficiency.

330 No, I think the experts are the people working in the system. Clearly, what we want to do requires their co-operation, and I have sent a very clear message that this is in the interest of everybody because we are all taxpayers and we are all consumers of a service.

335 This is not about making people work harder, but making people work better so that the things that do not need to be done we stop doing, or the things that are being done in ways that may require more effort which is unnecessary are done. So it is more an organisational thing than doing anything else.

At the same time we are going to be looking logically at the way we procure things, because all those things are not exclusively within the workload of the Department in the sense of delivering the service to the customer where the service is consumed at the point of delivery.

340 For example, a number of different outfits doing more or less the same thing, we may find that it is more efficient to do it. In my own Department, Members will see that I am making some changes in the structure of my Department, although my budget never goes up. Nevertheless, I believe in leading by example, so I am making some savings in my Department and that will be reflected in the estimates.

345 So, where it has an impact on the way that the work is organised, Members will see it. There may be lots of small things that change, but at the end of the day the cumulative effect of those changes hopefully will lead to a situation where Parliament has the satisfaction of seeing that more is being done for the same amount of money that has been voted, and that is really part of the role that we have, whichever side of the House we are on.

CULTURE, THE MEDIA, YOUTH AND SPORT

Q1/2017

Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority – Update re vacancies

350 Clerk: We now move to Question 1/2017. The questioner is the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Following on from answers provided to Questions 732/2016 and 842/2016, can the Minister for Sport update this House in respect of the two vacancies within the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority?

355 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the selection process for the Centre Manager, grade 5, vacancy was undertaken in late December 2016. The successful candidate has been informed and will start official duties in the new role on 1st February 2017.

The interview board for Assistant Resource Manager, grade 4, will be undertaken in the very near future.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker. We now know that for the grade 5, where the Minister had indicated last month it would be taking place shortly, we now know there has been a successful candidate due to take up the post on 1st February. But in December, in respect of the other post, the assistant admin post, the Minister said that he expected to hold interviews, or the selection board would meet in January 2017. We are now halfway through January 2017. He is not specific on the date in today's answer. He said 'shortly': is it outside the scope of January now, or does he mean January but just in other words than the way he has answered today?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, knowing the efficiency of the GSLA management, I am sure that they will be doing it during January, if not then the first week in February. But the hon. Member must understand that this has been ongoing, all these vacancies, and it is being done in a very efficient way. What I would suggest is that if they have indicated to me 'in the near future', for the GSLA the near future could be a couple of weeks.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, thank you, Mr Speaker.

One small thing I forgot to ask before: the successful candidate for the grade 5 post – was that an internal successful candidate, or is it someone externally now moving into the GSLA?

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, as in the norm, these vacancies are usually internal unless there is no suitable candidate, and then they could be looking for somebody else outside. But obviously people who are SLOs – sports and leisure officers – would like to get the post. It is like being in the Civil Service: if you are an AO you want to be an EO. In this case it is the same thing. It is all done internally and they have been able to get a successful candidate.

Hon. E J Reyes: So, Mr Speaker, can the Minister confirm I am right then in deducting from there that there will now be a further vacancy somewhere down the road because someone is moving up to grade 5? And when will that vacancy be filled and will it just be an internal process first; or is it at such a low grade, for example, that it just goes straight out to the public on the first go?

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, because this is part and parcel of the whole restructure of the GSLA. As the hon. Member knows, we are still working with the unions and the workforce in the GSLA on what is the right manning level. So there might be, for example, people moving up, and therefore at the bottom you might not need ... because we might have over and above what we need.

This is what the GSLA is currently doing. As the hon. Member knows, we started this restructure with the management and it is working all the way down. It could well be that we might not need it. It is part and parcel probably of the efficiency strategy where you might not need an SLO or an SLA at the bottom of the line. But this is ongoing, and again, like I said, the management ... if people go up the ladder and a manning level is agreed, that will be kept, and if at that point we need to go outside we will do.

Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority premises – Details of any further cancellations

Clerk: Question 2. The Hon. E J Reyes.

410 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sport provide details of any further cancellations since the answer provided to Question 845/2016 at any of the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority's premises due to the facilities being unfit for use, inclusive of reasons why the cancellations were necessary and the dates involved?

415 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, since the answer provided to Question 845/2016 there have been no further cancellations due to the premises being unfit for use.

420 Mr Speaker: I am not sure whether I can allow the hon. Member to ask the same question at the next meeting, given the answer to this question. When there is an ongoing process where information can change from one month to another, when we know when it is established that information can change from one month to another, I do allow the same question to be asked essentially, because the answer is going to be different, it is going to be an update. But in this case you cannot just automatically ask a question on the assumption that there may have been cancellations. Does the Member get the point?

425 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, sir. I am quite content with that and I concur with what you said.

430 The reason why I posed this question was, looking at the date of the December meeting when I was given the answer, and seeing that some inclement weather had occurred after that ... I posed this question keeping my fingers crossed that you would see my genuineness in getting the updated information. The Minister was able to provide last time the information up to the date when the answer was tabled in this Parliament, but because there has been bad weather since then I was just asking.

435 Certainly, Mr Speaker, unless something drastic happens – which we all hope in this House does not happen again – then there will be no need for me to pose the question. I know that there are occasionally minor cancellations due to some minor works. The reason for posing this question in December is, as the Minister explained in his answer, it was a rather big job from something that does not happen ... that bad weather does not happen luckily every month. So I do not foresee, Mr Speaker ... and should I have a need, what I will do is via the Clerk I will contact you and say, 'Look, Mr Speaker, what do you think is correct in that case?' But there is no need for us to have any disagreement on this matter; we are both on the same wave length.

Albert Risso House exercise equipment – Accessibility

445 Clerk: Question 3. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain why the installed exercise equipment adjacent to Albert Risso House has been fenced off and made inaccessible for a period of four years?

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the exercise equipment adjacent to Albert Risso House has neither been fenced off nor made inaccessible for a period of four years as the hon. Member asserts in his question.

455

The exercise equipment was installed by the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority in May 2015 at the request of the residents. The area is used on a daily basis by those who reside there. A gate controls access to the area to avoid unauthorised entry, thus reducing the possibility of damage via instances of vandalism etc.

460

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one supplementary. I walk past that gate every single morning. It is locked with a bolt; it is inaccessible. I would like an explanation as to why the residents of Albert Risso House are not allowed to access that. Surely it is in the interests of our elderly to have exercise equipment available to them in that area; it has been put there for their use and for their health and welfare and to promote that. It is inaccessible. I have walked past that area. I walk my dog every single morning at seven o'clock and it is inaccessible, Mr Speaker.

465

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, he might walk with his dog every morning and it might be locked. That does not mean that a resident of ... The residents, what they do is if they want to use it there is a caretaker where they can get the key and open the place – and probably somebody goes and helps them to open the place – in order to use the facilities. I have just answered that in saying that when he walks his dog it might be closed, but he obviously has not gone when somebody is using it. So it is a question of the management there having the key and the people who reside there going to the management and saying, 'Can I have the key? I want to do my exercise.' They go and open the gate, they use it and then they close it again – because of instances of damages or vandalism.

So the hon. Member might walk his dog in front of the gate every day, and if he finds it closed it does not mean it is not being used. The residents have access to it when they want to use it, and all they have to do is go to the janitor or the caretaker, get the key, open the place, use it and then close it up again.

Q4/2017
Victoria Stadium floodlights –
Maintenance programme

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details of maintenance programmes in place in respect of the floodlights at the training pitches at Victoria Stadium?

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority has a maintenance contract with a local electrical contractor which includes quarterly maintenance checks, including periodic replacement of fittings as and when necessary. In addition, there is an agreed callout service for emergencies and ad hoc repairs or replacements.

490

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, is the Hon. Minister aware ... As he knows, I am a regular. I frequent that area three times a week and for the last three months lights have been 495 inoperative at pitches 3 and 4 and there has been low-level floodlighting from two of the six that operate each pitch.

In terms of periodical attendance there has clearly been a failing there. Is he aware of those particular failings and the lack of lighting in the evenings for children's football?

500 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I am not aware, but the hon. Member must be made aware there are times when the flood lights cannot be on. We had the issue with the hockey where ... Remember, we are just beside an airport and the hon. Member, who works for NATS, must know that if an aeroplane lands at a given time, the lights have to be put off. So it could well be the case that when the children were training and all that, aeroplanes were landing or were scheduled to land and therefore the lights were not on. They might put some dimmer lights on 505 in order for training to continue.

I can assure the Member, like I have just said, that there is a maintenance programme and the maintenance programme is that if they are not working they are fixed. So it cannot be the case that you go there training and ... If they are not working, there is a callout system. Somebody comes and fixes it. It might take an hour or it might take half an hour, and maybe that 510 session might have been cancelled, but the hon. Member must understand that these are things that, if they happen, will be fixed as soon as is possible.

I can assure the hon. Member that there have not been any cancellations of allocations. As far as the previous question to do with the stadium inside and outside it is the same case – if not, they would have informed me.

520 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, in relation to the incidents – just to clarify the incidents that I am referring to – within moments of this question being filed it was fixed, so obviously it is effective. We made a complaint, or I may have raised a question which alarmed the individual concerned, maybe your office, and the contractors fixed the lights. But it did take a number of complaints from parents, who approached me as well, to have the lights replaced. It is not a question of flights landing, Mr Speaker. It is a question of them just not being replaced within a reasonable period of time – that is the point made – and it took parents to complain several times and a question put to remedy the situation.

525 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I do not agree with him that it has to be three parents going to complain in order for it to be fixed – that is not the case. If the parents complained, fine, they complained; but even if they had not complained, the management would have realised that the lights were down and they would have made the call and people would have fixed it. So it is not a question of going to complain.

530 Fine, if you want to complain, you complain. You can have 20 complaints. You do not even have to complain – you just probably have to inform them and say, 'Look, the lights are out. Can you please have someone to ...' And like the hon. Member said, within a certain period of time, a short period of time, it was fixed. So I do not know what the issue is, Mr Speaker.

Q5/2017
Gibraltar Music Festival –
Net cost of 2016 event

535 Clerk: Question 5. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the net cost of the 2016 Gibraltar Music Festival?

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, full details of payments and income generated from the 2016 Gibraltar Music Festival have not been finalised. Government will be publishing full details once it has been finalised.

545

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, given that this is a multi-million-pound event, I find it surprising that the Minister, in pretty much the same vein as last year, has responded that he does not yet have the figures available.

550

This was an event that was held in September last year, and somehow ... I would ask the Minister whether he thinks it is acceptable that his Department is unable to tell him whether that event made a profit or a loss.

555

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, it is because this event is a multi-million-pound event that finalising the accounts of it in a way that we can give figures in this House which are ones that we can rely on, which can then be in Hansard and which can then form the subject of debate, takes longer than the hon. Gentleman might wish. The event took place in September. That is last year, of course, but it is four months into last year; it is not 12 months into last year. The figures that the hon. Gentleman has said will be available shortly and a statement will be made reflecting those precise detailed and accurate figures. That is the sort of figure that I would have thought the hon. Gentleman would want to see us bringing to this House.

That does not mean to say that we do not have an idea of what the figures are, that we do not know what the ballpark of the figures are and we do not know what the budget of it was and that there has been strict control of that to ensure that it comes in as close as possible, as with any event, to the budget. Those figures will be made public as soon as they are available.

565

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would ask the Minister to give an undertaking to this House that he will have those figures presented to us by no later than the end of March – before we get handed the Budget Book and then he refuses to answer the questions in this House.

570

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we will give no such undertaking. What we will do is to prudently deal with the finances of Gibraltar, as we have been doing until now, and provide a statement, as the hon. Gentleman has said, as soon as the figures are ready.

575

The hon. Gentleman should have now known – he has been here for one cycle already – that 1st April is a new financial year, that the Government works to that new financial year, that he will have his estimates during the course of April, that he will not be able to refer to them until the Budget debate but that he will have them and that will give him a forecast outturn for the year before.

When the hon. Gentleman asks for undertakings he needs to understand what he is asking for. He needs to understand that it is not relevant to the sort of argument we are having today. The Government will provide the figures as set out in the first answer.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister for his intervention; naturally, he has not been able to shed any light on the matter.

I would ask the Minister again. He must have some idea, or, as the Chief Minister himself just said, some kind of ballpark figure in his head – and I am willing to accept that it maybe not entirely accurate, but would he be willing to share with this House what that ballpark figure is?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I could not disagree more with the hon. Gentleman. I have shed a lot of light on the issue. I have made clear what it is that the Government is doing in respect of these figures and how they will be available. I have also indicated to him that at the 595 very least he will have the forecast outturn by April. It is very likely that before then we will have the detailed statement that he is requesting in the context of the statement that the Government will make. But this is not a place where people are going to be given ballpark figures. This is a place where they are going to be given precise figures that can be relied on and we will not be baited into giving those ball park figures. But I will tell him this, Mr Speaker: if he wants a ballpark – better referred to as an estimate – all he needs to do is open the relevant page of the Estimates Book and he will know what the ballpark was. He has had it for a year.

Hon. R M Clinton: So, Mr Speaker, if I understand the Chief Minister correctly he is saying that on a ballpark basis he expects the Music Festival of 2016 to come in at least at a loss of £½ million. Would I be correct in saying that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not know which remarks I made that the hon. Gentleman heard that might have led him to that conclusion. What I have said is that he should go to the Estimates Book and see what the estimate was for this year, and that is the only legitimate ballpark that he can refer to.
605

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, at the risk of trying your patience, the ballpark net loss of £½ million I referred to came precisely from the Estimates Book he is so fond of. So again I ask him: does he confirm that in his view there would be at least a loss of £½ million on the Music Festival 2016?
610

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, although he has been here already for a full cycle, he does not seem to get it. The Estimates Book contains the forecast outlook for the year before, which is where he is getting that figure from, and then it contains the estimate for this year.
615

What I am saying to him is that in the context of asking for a ballpark AKA, an estimate of what the Festival has cost this year, we gave him in April last year a book that said ‘this is what it cost last year and this is the net cost to the taxpayer and this is what it is going to cost next year’. He has had that information now for almost a year. I know that he will have looked at it. That is the ballpark that he can refer to until there is a detailed statement that tells him exactly every penny that has been spent, how much was recovered and how much was not recovered.
620

It is becoming increasingly clear to me – not that it took much since his statements last year – that he is an enemy of the Gibraltar Music Festival. He does not believe that we should be holding a Gibraltar Music Festival and he is probably therefore not going to want to congratulate the Government for the magnificent deal that we have been able to do with MTV which has been ushered in by the Minister for Culture with the former Minister for Tourism, Samantha Sacramento, doing a considerable amount of work which is now going to produce for Gibraltar, in the context of the Music Festival this year, the advertising value that will be measured in many millions of pounds, because we are going to benefit from exposure on MTV and the advertisement of the Gibraltar tourist product around the world – not just on MTV in the United Kingdom and on MTV in Europe, but also on MTV channels and derivative channels in the United States and around the world.

So, Mr Speaker, I could not disagree more with every aspect of the premise of his question, in particular his enmity for the Gibraltar Music Festival.
635

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, what a wonderful speech! I have no particular aversion to music or even to the Music Festival. What I have an aversion to is the misuse of taxpayers’ money in which last year they blew £2¼ million pounds on the Music Festival and this last year they were due to blow £½ million on the Music Festival – but he cannot tell us how much was actually spent.
640

So, Mr Speaker, I will wait for the Hon. Mr Bossano's half-year numbers to September, and hopefully they will include those numbers. In the meantime, I would ask the Chief Minister to perhaps invest a little bit more time and effort in getting the Music Festival to make a profit.

645 Mr Speaker: No, that question does not arise. We will now move on to the next question.

Hon. Chief Minister: It does not, Mr Speaker, but the hon. Gentleman surely cannot make a speech without having a response. The idea that the Government 'blows' anything is really quite preposterous and unbecoming a Member of this House. The idea that the Gibraltar Music Festival is the Government 'blowing' taxpayers' money does not just betray that the hon. Gentleman is against the organisation of the Gibraltar Music Festival; it betrays that he must therefore consciously be against any spending whatsoever on any matter of culture. Or is it that if the Government sponsors a classical concert in the sum of £1,000 and we do not recover the £1,000, that is not blowing £1,000 on a concert, but if the Government invests in an event which entertains 13,000 people, which attracts people to Gibraltar, which provides an opportunity for businesses in Gibraltar to bring their international boards to Gibraltar, and which projects the image of Gibraltar abroad, then we are blowing taxpayers' money?

665 Mr Speaker, I could not consider that the hon. Gentleman has failed in his duty to the people of Gibraltar more than in the context of what he has said today. It is perfectly proper to look at the detail of every penny that we spent and ensure that it is being spent in a manner that is appropriate and that is value for money. But from that to the statement that the hon. Gentleman has made now I think is just a headline-grabbing attempt by somebody who has failed to demonstrate any imagination whatsoever in the time that he has been here in the context of the way that we invest in culture in our community and how we project the image of Gibraltar abroad. And I must say to him, Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: May I ask the Chief Minister, please, to bring the matter to a close.

670 Hon. Chief Minister: I will round up. I must say to him, Mr Speaker, it would be a pity indeed if he ever had an opportunity to get his hands on the purse strings of Gibraltar and did not continue to organise events like the Gibraltar Music Festival. We would go back to the desert that Gibraltar was under the GSD when it came to these issues. We would go back to the desert of events for our young people, the desert of culture that Gibraltar was becoming under the GSD. I am very happy and very proud of the work that we have done on the Gibraltar Music Festival, and now, in particular, our alliance with MTV.

680 Mr Speaker: I am not going to allow for the rest of this session exchanges of that nature or of that length. I warn hon. Members: they know the attitude that I am going to take. I made a statement at the beginning of the summer precisely as to how I was going to deal with Question Time, but the hon. questioner invited that kind of response from the Chief Minister, so that is why he is getting it, but I am not going to allow any further exchanges of that nature.

We move on to the next question.

Q6/2017
Gibraltar Music Festival –
MTV

Clerk: Question 6. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

685 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, this question may come as a little outdated, given yesterday's press conference on the upcoming alliance with MTV, but I shall ask it anyway.

Can the Government confirm or deny whether there are plans to move the production and organisation of the GMF from our local setup to MTV?

690 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, as announced yesterday in the press release, HMGoG has signed an agreement with MTV as a media partner for the 2017 Gibraltar Music Festival.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): If the hon. Lady would give way before she gets up, the Government respects the convention that if a question is put on a matter that the Government has not yet acted upon, the Government would not act upon it until we answered the question. And so, if the hon. Lady had asked us about something which was local and we had not somehow programmed already, for some other reason, an announcement on a particular date, then we would simply have waited and given the information to her in the Parliament.

When I saw her question come in I realised that in this instance we were going to be unable to do that because the announcement yesterday, as she may have seen from the media, involved members of the company she refers to, MTV, having flown out to Gibraltar, having made the arrangements and needing to move on to other things that they were going to announce elsewhere. Therefore, we were not able to respect the convention in this case, but we meant no slight or disrespect in having done so.

705

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, may I just add that I have been looking at my e-mails, and in order to clarify all this, if there is an issue, we started planning the press conference and the reception we did yesterday way back on 23rd December, so it was not a thing that came out of your question; we were already planning the actual date. I have been looking at the e-mails and we homed in to 17th January way back on 23rd December.

710

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister and the Minister for Sport and Leisure for their explanations, and I have no issue with that at all.

If I may, a couple of supplementaries to this effect: can I just ask who will be the local agent, or who will be the intermediary between Government and MTV?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, there is a company that works for or with MTV that does the production. MTV does the broadcasting, or the television side, and then there is a company that works for MTV that does the production. But I can assure everybody in Gibraltar that most, if not all, the things that the GMF have previously done will be done by probably the same people or agencies that are local, because when MTV moves into, for example, Plymouth, or moves into wherever they go – Malta, for example – what they do is they use the local expertise to do the actual production. They will not fly from London, say, stages, lights or sound equipment. They will get it from where the locals have previously done. So I can assure the people of Gibraltar and I can assure all the people who have been involved in the GMF that they will continue to be involved in the GMF. It is not a question of MTV taking over the GMF. It is an evolution. It is a completely different step that we are taking. MTV will come in and will use all the footage of GMF in order to, as the Chief Minister said, to broadcast the news on MTV in order to expose Gibraltar and put Gibraltar on the map in the question of music.

730

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for that. Can I just ask: can the Government guarantee the same level of local contributions from our very own local bands and artists, or would this be down to MTV? Do we have control over such an inventory or schedule for the event?

740 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as I mentioned yesterday in the press release and I have just mentioned now, the GMF will continue to have the same concept that we have had previously. It has been very successful. That is why it took the attention of MTV itself.

Of course we are going to have local bands. In fact, I am pleased that we can have the local bands playing with MTV watching them and listening to them, which might give opportunities to our local bands to become even bigger. So we always say, and I am convinced, that Gibraltar is 745 full of talent, and having MTV here with us, looking at and listening to our talent is a very, very big plus.

So not only will bands in Gibraltar now have to do their own marketing, but they will have MTV actually listening to them, seeing the act and maybe getting them to become big stars. So of course the local is going to be involved. Not only is he going to be involved in the music sector 750 but he is going to be involved in all the organisation.

Also, the concept of the GMF, which has been very successful, is the fact that it is a family ... and I do not know whether the hon. Member would like to come to it, but it is very much a family festival. Therefore, the whole community enjoys it, because you see parents with prams, grandparents, aunties and uncles seeing and listening to different types of music – music that I 755 like from the 1970s and 1980s to what is current today. That is what has attracted MTV, and MTV has realised the value of the GMF that we have produced with the producers, and therefore the value is intense.

What they will do is, because they have different types of channels in which they have an MTV which have the update, which has the most current musicians that are coming, they also 760 have channels for the retro – that means the bands that I might like that are around – and they will use that footage in another channel. So, basically, whatever the GMF has done has drawn the attention of MTV and they are quite happy to come to Gibraltar, and I am really proud that they are coming here. It is a great thing for Gibraltar. It is going to attract more people. The social media network that MTV has goes to the hundreds of millions of followers, and all that 765 will be exposing Gibraltar.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, thank you for that explanation. Are costs expected to go down as a result of this partnership?

770 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, there will be set budgets to the companies. Will costs go down? In actual fact, they might do, and I am convinced they will do because of the artists. You see, when you have an independent Gibraltar Music Festival like we used to have, hiring an artist costs more because the exposure that the artists are coming here for is one gig and then they go, whilst with MTV it is a completely different kettle of fish because they can attract artists for a 775 better price because the artist is exposed on MTV and its promotion for them. Therefore, we will be able to get not only ... I would not say better, because the line-ups the GMF have had have been brilliant. MTV have actually said, 'Your line up has been excellent', so they were really happy with the sort of line-up we have had. But now they can attract big stars coming here for less money because of the exposure that they get on MTV. The same will happen with all the 780 other things around MTV – sponsorship, exposure, all these issues that can market Gibraltar – so it pushes the GMF to another level.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you. If I may just ask one more question: is the Government confident that we have the resources, in terms of hotels and catering, to 785 accommodate the expected rise in this event-led tourism for this festival?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, to be honest, there are many, many events that we organise, like the darts, like the pool, like the Literary Festival and the snooker. There are many events that we do. It is attracting the sort of tourists we want. We are short of beds, yes. We have 790 about 700 beds available and sometimes we get events that we cannot handle, but it means that the hinterland will get the benefit. That is why we are attracting ... or trying to get investors to do more hotels and more beds, because the more events we do and the more we are attracting people, it means Gibraltar is being more successful. Therefore, the more beds we have the better. Instead of the money going elsewhere, it will come to Gibraltar. So, yes, in a way ...

795 I have had proposals of people wanting to bring the Formula 1 here to Gibraltar, and it is a no-no; we would not be able to handle that. There are many events I get proposals for and, look, Gibraltar cannot handle it. So what we are doing is ... and if you can see the type of events that we have been attracting for the past four or five years are events that we can manage: snooker, pool and darts. These attract 300 to 400 people at a go, and this is what events-led tourism means.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if the Government appoints any intermediaries or local agents ... I understand what the Minister has just said, that it will most likely be the people who have already worked with the GMF, which sounds about fair because they have been fostering this event and growing it; but if there are any new local agents, will that be by direct allocation, or will these positions go out to tender?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady must understand that it is a partnership with MTV, and it is MTV that then procures most of the things of which most of it will be local, like I said. It is not a question of the Government having to go out to tender or anything; it is MTV.

810 This is like a franchise. When you have a franchise you have quality control. MTV puts in the quality control, and therefore it is MTV that contracts their companies. And anyway, the company that MTV is working with does this everywhere else. They go around doing the organisation everywhere else. So it is MTV that decides, it is not us that decide who does it, and then those companies will get all the locals to do all the other things.

815 Hon. Ms M D Hasson Nahon: Mr Speaker, sorry, maybe I just do not understand, but if MTV is deciding, then we cannot at the same time guarantee that it is going to be the same people.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we have put the people who were organising the Music Festival and MTV together and they are working very well together. They could fall out tomorrow and they may not do the festival together, but the Government has appointed MTV to do it for all of the reasons that the Minister has indicated and all the reasons that I gave yesterday – but they have to come to a commercial arrangement.

825 The hon. Lady has to understand what she is saying to us. There was a process by which people have been appointed for some time now and they have delivered a festival, but the people they appointed below them were not something that the Government was responsible for or went to tender for. So, if they decided to have Mr X sell hot dogs or Mr Y sell hot dogs, or Mr F bring the stage or Mr E bring the stage, that was a matter for them. The Government had an agreement with them and they dealt with it.

830 We now have an agreement with MTV. MTV will be delivering the festival, and of course it makes sense that in the context of doing that the people they will want to work with and whom they are already in contact with etc. will be the ones who have been doing it until now, and they are already working together on that basis and the logistical exercise will be one which will be harder for MTV to do without those who have been delivering that festival for the past five years than if they do it with them. It is that simple.

835 What there is no replacement for in this equation is MTV. As the hon. Gentleman has told her a minute ago, and just to put this in context, MTV UK has 2.8 million followers on Twitter social media, which is one of the ways that they will be reaching out to people to advertise Gibraltar and the product. In the United States, the President-elect, Donal Trump, has 19 million Twitter followers. The White House and the Office of the President of the United States each have 840 17 million Twitter followers. MTV has 48 million Twitter followers. That is the reach into which we are buying for the Gibraltar brand and for the Gibraltar product at this time in our history, when we are looking to open up new markets for Gibraltar. That partnership will result in people being appointed in Gibraltar to do certain things. We have put them in touch with the people 845 who were doing it for us. They are working very well together until now and we hope that that will be the way it continues. But it is not possible for us to say that MTV are not able to contract in some parts or in others with parties who have not provided services to the Government of Gibraltar until now and that they may do so in that way produce a saving to the taxpayer, because as the hon. Lady has been told, if we go out and contract artist X for September, artist X

850 comes out with the cost of doing one concert. If MTV contract artist X to do 10 concerts around the world and one of them happens to be ours in September, the cost of that artist in respect of the September gig – to use a term not often used in Parliament – may be much lower and therefore a huge benefit to the Gibraltar taxpayer. That is what we need to be looking for here: the benefit for the taxpayer. If we have a wider reach for the Gibraltar product and we 855 potentially are able to bring some of the artists' costs down also in that context, I think that is a very good thing, and in particular when you layer on top of that the exposure that local bands are going to have to the people from MTV who discover bands etc. and the potential for those Gibraltar bands to form part of the product produced by MTV for its television station ... Well, look, it is going to be like gold dust for a local band to have 30 seconds on an MTV programme 860 and expose themselves.

There is nothing to sneeze at here; there is everything to applaud in my submission.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government tell us whether it is also taking any of the financial risk. Are there, for example, any guarantees in place in relation to the income that 865 MTV will take from this? Or are there any guarantees in relation to the expenditure that the Government might share with MTV?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government is unable to guarantee without coming to the House and asking for a resolution of the House.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, with respect, he knows the drift of my question: is the Government taking any financial risk shared with MTV in relation to this particular event?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister has made it very clear: we have 875 contracted MTV to deliver this product. There is no question of there being a joint financial risk in any way. There will be an estimate of what the concert is going to cost the Government of Gibraltar, and that is going to be it. There is no question of the Government guaranteeing anything with MTV that might produce a financial risk to the Government. It just does not arise. And that is why, whether I catch the drift of his question or not, if he uses the word 'guarantee' I 880 have to refer him to the public finance legislation, which says that the Government is unable to guarantee anything without having a resolution of this House.

Hon. D A Feetham: Effectively, Mr Speaker, what he is saying is that there has been a contract with MTV for a specific price and then MTV take any risk over and above that specific 885 contract price. Is my understanding correct?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is a contract with MTV. That contract with MTV and Neon Angel which was announced yesterday is a contract for the organisation of concert and for the sourcing of artists in exactly the same way as there was previously a contract with a local 890 consortium that did exactly the same thing for us. So we are as at risk now as we were before.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Chief Minister's response there.

895 Looking at the press release, they characterise it as a partnership, but am I correct in saying that this is not in fact a partnership in the legal sense and that this is a simple contractual relationship where party A contracts party B to deliver a service? And can he advise the House for how many years this contract is in place? And in terms of the administration of the concert, is it still the case that all the revenues of the concert will accrue to the Government?

900 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he is referring to a press release and therefore the use of the word 'partnership' in a press release is not used in its legal terminology. So I can confirm to the House that the Government of Gibraltar and MTV have not entered into a legal partnership under the Partnerships Act, but we are describing our contractual relationship, as is common, as a partnership. We have a rolling agreement, so we will renew every year.

905 We are not committed to any particular period and the revenue of the concert will accrue to the Government.

Q7/2017
New stadium –
Location

Clerk: Question 7. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

910 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Has Government made a decision on where the new stadium will be constructed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

915 Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Government is not undertaking construction of a new stadium. Otherwise, the answer remains the same as the answer to Question 705/2016.

920 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, perhaps the Government does not construct the stadium, but surely it has a say or the authority to authorise the location of the stadium in the same way as we saw when it was going to be in Europa Point and when the whole of Gibraltar were up in arms about it it backtracked. The Government had something to do with that as well, so it cannot just say that it has nothing to do with the construction of the stadium. Maybe not per se, but I am sure maybe they could tell us one way or another if they know, or there are any plans for where the new stadium will be held.

925 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the simple answer is that the Government might provide a location for the GFA and then the GFA does its work towards whether they are going to do the stadium there or not. It is public knowledge where some of the locations she mentioned were – one, Europa Point, and we have mentioned Lathbury.

930 This is a decision that the GFA has to take. The Government might be able to provide some ideas of locations where they can put the stadium, but this is a GFA-run project. It is not that the Government is going to construct or contract people to do things. It is a totally independent thing that the GFA is doing.

935 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you. So, Mr Speaker, there are no costs or funds anywhere in this scenario being spent by Government?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, this is public knowledge again about the loans the Government gave to the GFA at the time and all these issues.

940 As far as Gibraltar is concerned, this is a GFA with UEFA and FIFA project which the Government have nothing to do with. There might be loans advanced like what has been done previously, but we can assure the hon. Lady that this is not going to cost the taxpayer money. The stadium is done by the GFA together with UEFA and FIFA.

945 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Gentleman not give me any clues as to where the current location is being looked at for the construction of a new stadium? Yes, we spoke about Europa Point, but I believed that prospect was now done with.

950 Mr Speaker: No – (Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –) No, may I? (Hon. Chief Minister: Sorry.) The hon. Member has already said it is Lathbury. This is where the new stadium is now being considered. That is public knowledge, so there is no need for the Hon. Minister to answer that question –

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, it is –

955 Mr Speaker: – unless I am wrong.

Hon. S E Linares: No, ‘considered’. The word that you said about considered is what should be looked at – 960 Mr Speaker: This is a site that has been identified as a possibility. There is a due process, including the Development and Planning Commission and all that. All that is in due course, but we do not have to deal with that now.

Any other supplementaries?

965 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, on looking at the guidelines one would have realised that an outside broadcasting van cannot get into Lathbury, so it is not even possible to do the stadium there.

970 Mr Speaker: No, no. That is not a matter, who can get in or who cannot get in. Sorry.
(Interjection by Ms M D Hassan Nahon)

975 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady has said that that is not a possibility. I do not think either she nor I am qualified to say whether it is possible or not. This is where the GFA comes in. They bring their technicians, they bring their building surveyors, quantity surveyors, their architects, their engineers and everybody to see whether it is feasible there. What the Government does is say, ‘Right, this is the location that we have available – can you do it or not?’
(Interjection) Exactly.

Mr Speaker: Any other supplementary questions?

INFRASTRUCTURE AND PLANNING

Q33/2017

Segways –

Confiscations by HM Customs

980 Clerk: Question 33. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, in connection with Government Press Release 905/2015 dated 9th December 2015, how many Segways have been confiscated by HM Customs?

985 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, no Segways have been confiscated by H M Customs. However, one was detained, which was imported by a tourist being unaware of its import provision and the visitor was therefore escorted out of Gibraltar.

990 On occasions, HM Customs have stopped visitors and locals who have declared these for duty purposes and, having been informed of the prohibition under the Imports and Exports (Control) Regulations, have not been allowed to be imported.

995 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, given that none have been seized or confiscated and there is obviously a surge, especially after the Christmas period, in Segways, is Government intending to at least regulate them or curtail the use of them, or something? Obviously, they are being used on the roads, in Main Street and in parks, so either we deal with them or we regulate where they can be used or not. I think to just allow an illegal item to be used everywhere and not deal with it is creating a problem, and it also creates a problem in the sense that other children see 1000 Segways and ask their parents, 'Why can't I get one?' Obviously, you try to explain to children it is against the law, but the children are seeing these gadgets being used out there.

So what is Government's intention in dealing with the surge that we have had over the last 18 months?

1005 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, clearly the hon. Gentleman is not talking about Segways.

Mr Speaker: May I, as a dinosaur of a Speaker, (Laughter) have an explanation either from the Hon. Minister or the questioner as to what on earth a Segway is about, so that I know what it is that you are talking about? (Laughter)

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, Segway is a brand name. It is a name for a type of vehicle which is a self-propelled electric vehicle. These are characteristic ones with handles. You move your centre of gravity forward and they go in the forward action and then reverse. They are often used in the US by police officers. The brand Segway also produce other ones where the handles are not so high – they are slightly lower, around this area – but that is a Segway.

Clearly, the hon. Gentleman is not talking about this product, because, as I said, Segways are something which you will not find. I have never seen a Segway in Gibraltar to date. What I think the hon. Gentleman is referring to is other electric toy gadgets which are coming onto the market. They are loosely termed ... Some are called 'sweways' and hoverboards, electric 1020 skateboards and scooters and all these types of contraptions. But that was not the question asked.

Hon. L F Llamas: Sorry for my confusion. Obviously it is from the press release, where it does mention Segways as a self-balancing two-wheeled electrical-powered transport. It does not say 1025 whether it has a handle or not. So, with reference to the press release, are the hoverboards illegal imports?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the hoverboards are classified, I believe, as self-balancing devices. Some of them do fall under the category and the Segways are also self-balancing 1030 devices, so the generic term of all these types of devices are illegal imports. But because these are being developed at such a fast rate in the industry it is important to keep track of the products. Remember, Segway is a brand name. If any other company decided to produce a type of vehicle and they called it a BMW or Mercedes or whatever it was, it would be impossible to legislate for all these types.

1035 Obviously, the Government is aware that there are these electric scooters. How they are defined is something we need to look at. In fact, I recently had a meeting with the Collector of Customs regarding these products and there is also a meeting scheduled with the RGP to discuss and get opinions and see where we wish to take this in terms of policy.

1040 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q34/2017
Mid-Town Car Park –
Cost of zebra crossing

Clerk: Question 34. The Hon. L F Llamas.

1045 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm whether the cost of the recently refurbished zebra crossing at Mid-Town Car Park has been in addition to the overall cost of the project, or not?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

1050 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the works to the recently refurbished zebra crossing did not form part of the original scope of works because in the initial design it was never intended for a crossing to be provided at that location.

A temporary crossing was provided at that location because pedestrian access through the adjacent Mid-Town development is not yet possible. This temporary crossing has now been made more permanent and upgraded to serve disabled users.

1055 The works were carried out by GJBS at a cost of £4,354.04.

Hon. L F Llamas: So is it intended that this zebra crossing will be moving at a later stage? Or what is the plan with this zebra crossing?

1060 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, with the whole development itself, the idea was that people exiting the car park would walk in a southerly direction through the complex itself. I believe the intention is that there will be some shopping facilities within the complex. This will then lead them straight to what we refer to as English Steps and the way into town.

We do not know how the project will develop and how people will decide to walk in the future. It could be that persons parking their cars at Mid-Town development may wish to walk in a northerly direction and we may need to consider that when the time comes. But the reason why the zebra crossing was not part of the project was because it was never intended to be put there. The intention was that people would walk, as I said earlier, south and up the steps into town.

Q35-36/2017
Parking offences –
Clamping; fixed penalty notices

Clerk: Question 35. The Hon. T N Hammond.

1065 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister with responsibility for traffic provide figures for the number of vehicles clamped during the months of October, November and December 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

1070 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 36.

Clerk: Question 36. The Hon. T N Hammond.

1075 Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Minister with responsibility for traffic say how many fixed penalty notices were issued to vehicles for parking offences in November and December of 2016?

1080 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, according to the records held at Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd, during the month of November 2016 a total of 2,731 FPNs were issued. During the month of December 2016 a total of 1,582 FPNs were issued.

1085 Mr Speaker: FPNs being?

Hon. P J Balban: Fixed penalty notices.

1090 Furthermore, Mr Speaker, the records of the contractors of Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd show as follows: during the month of October 2016 a total of 366 vehicles were clamped; during the month of November 2016 a total of 252 vehicles were clamped; and during the month of December 2016 a total of 141 vehicles were clamped.

1095 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, could I just ask the Minister to repeat the figure for fixed penalty notices in December 2016? My hon. Friend cleared his throat at an inopportune moment.

Hon. P J Balban: Sorry, the amount of FPNs or ...?

1100 Hon. T N Hammond: FPNs.

Hon. P J Balban: For the month of December, 1,582.

Q37-39/2017

Mid-Town Car Park –

Sale of additional spaces; renting of additional spaces

Clerk: Question 37. The Hon. T N Hammond.

1105 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, in his Budget speech the Minister with responsibility for traffic stated that 326 parking spaces had been sold in the Mid-Town Car Park. In answers to questions in December, these sales figures had risen to 456. That constitutes an additional 130 spaces being sold. Can the Minister say what prompted the decision to sell more spaces which had previously been available to the public for parking?

1110 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 38 and 39.

1115 Clerk: Question 38. The Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: In his Budget speech, the Minister with responsibility for traffic stated that some parking spaces in the Mid-Town Car Park had been let out, the implications being that it was a small number. In answers to questions last month he stated the number of rented spaces was 131. What prompted Government to rent more spaces and remove them from public use?

Clerk: Question 39. The Hon. T N Hammond.

1125 Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Minister with responsibility for traffic confirm that the claim made in his Budget speech that with the parking in Mid-Town the Government has provided more than 100 additional public parking spaces than were previously available at the Commonwealth Parade and Naval Ground can no longer be substantiated given the sale of an additional 130 of the Mid-Town spaces and the rental of further spaces?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the commitment set out in the 2011 GSLP Liberal manifesto committed the then incoming administration to provide double the number of parking spaces which will be free for residents of Gibraltar. That commitment is more than entirely provided for and complied with.

Following the initial sale of 326 spaces, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar sold two more levels comprising the additional 130 spaces as a result of the high demand from members of the public wishing to purchase parking's.

1140

During my Budget address reference to rented parking, spaces, although allocated, are also considered of public use and these serve members of our community.

1145

Furthermore, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar had a commitment to provide rental parking facilities at Mid-Town to meet an existing demand in the area and to provide rental parking for the people who were originally renting at the Naval Grounds before they were moved onto the ICC car park as a temporary measure whilst Mid-Town was being built. Again, the figures quoted in the past have always taken account of rented spaces that existed previously and therefore there has been a net gain in parking in the town area.

1150

Mr Speaker, spaces sold or rented have all been sold or rented to residents. In the circumstances, the manifesto commitment is complied with, exceeded and something to be proud of.

1155

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, the maths just does not add up. In his Budget speech, the Minister was saying that with Mid-Town they were not providing double the number of spaces previously available, but that 100 more additional parking spaces were available to the public. Last month he effectively stated, and he has repeated that statement, that 130 additional spaces had been sold. So, of that 100, even if we take the rental and the semantics as to whether those are public spaces or not and even if we take the rental out of the equation, that means of the more than 100 spaces that were previously available to the public, over and above those that had been available at Commonwealth Parade and at the Regal House car park, 130 spaces have been sold since that point. So, clearly it is not possible that we now have double the amount of spaces that were previously available. In fact, the maths would indicate that we have fewer spaces available to the public than were previously available to the public to access in their daily commute.

1165 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, as sold or rented parking spaces it does not mean they are lost parking spaces. They are still there for members of the community, and in fact it is the members of the community ... These have not been sold to people outside of Gibraltar; they have been sold to people who are residents of Gibraltar. Hence they are available for them to use, whether they have been rented, sold or free.

1170 Hon. T N Hammond: Clearly, without conducting an audit of specifically who has been sold a parking space it is not possible to determine whether all those parking spaces have gone to different individuals or whether parking spaces have gone to multiple individuals. However, the maths remain as I have stated: there are fewer.

1175 It is the Minister who made the claim, not I, that there were now more than 100 more spaces available than were previously available at the car parks of Commonwealth Park and Naval Ground. To my recollection, certainly the ground floor of Naval Ground and the entirety of Commonwealth Park were free public spaces that could be accessed on a daily basis. They were not sold spaces and they were not rented to anyone. We are now in a position where the 1180 Minister has rectified or adjusted the figures last month that he made in his Budget speech because we asked questions last month on the new situation, the new scenario, and it seems that his claim that in his Budget there were 100 spaces more than were previously available cannot be substantiated because they have sold 130 of those spaces.

1185 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, there are a thousand spaces within the car park. There were 356 spaces, I recall, in the Commonwealth Car Park. And not only that, but clearly these parking spaces are still being accessed on a daily basis by either those who have rented or have decided to purchase, or by members of the public who, with the means of their electronic ID card, manage to access parking spaces for free.

1190 I think it is clear mathematics that what we had there before, the great park that was built, was 356 spaces. But a thousand spaces have been built, and I do not think anyone can dispute that.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Minister – and before I ask the Minister, I 1195 declare that I am the proud owner of one of those car parks in Mid-Town car park: was the decision to release more parking spaces for sale that of the Government?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): It was, Mr Speaker, and it was the Government in the form of the person answering the question who made the decision.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you. So, Mr Speaker, would I be correct in surmising then that the company that is actually selling the car parking spaces and issuing the leases is in fact controlled by the Government?

1205 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, perhaps the Chief Minister could clarify for the benefit of this House how it is that he makes a decision that more parking spaces should be sold to the public, and yet I presume from the answer that he has given that the benefit of the revenue of the sale of those parking spaces does not accrue to the Government. Is that correct?

Hon. Chief Minister: That is not correct, Mr Speaker.

1215 Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, perhaps the Chief Minister, for the benefit of my sanity, would explain to me exactly how the structure works.

Hon. Chief Minister: It is very simple, Mr Speaker: the company that is doing the sales is not controlled by the Government; it is the Government's agent and it sells on behalf of the Government, and therefore the revenue accrues to the Government through its agent.

Q40/2017

Government garage and workshop –
Commitment to funding

1220 Clerk: Question 40. The Hon. T N Hammond.

1225 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Government continuing with its commitment, as set out in the Budget speech of the Minister with responsibility for traffic, to provide funding this financial year to the garage and workshop for new equipment, and also that the garage and workshop will continue to provide a service to maintain the fleet of Government vehicles, including the refuse collection vehicles?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

1230 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Yes, Mr Speaker.

1235 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Minister in a position to say whether that will continue for the next financial year, bearing in mind the request for expressions of interest that were put out reference the Government's fleet of vehicles?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the future of the garage and workshop is currently under review and is being considered with the union, especially in the context of the advertisement for expressions of interest in respect of the Government's vehicle fleet.

Q41/2017

Camp Bay waterfall – Reason for diversion and costs

1240 Clerk: Question 41. The Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government provide the reason for the diversion of the waterfall at Camp Bay; and what costs, if any, have been incurred in the project?

1245 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

1250 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the works to the Camp Bay waterfall are not a Government project. They have been undertaken by the developer of the Buena Vista Development. The developer is undertaking re-profiling works to the rock face to try and reduce the amount of salt water spray that is blown over the top of the cliff and impacts on the development above. The developer has installed pipes as a temporary measure to divert the waterflow while the re-profiling works are carried out.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I may, Mr Speaker, just ask: from that I surmise that there has been no cost to Government.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, none that I am aware of, no.

ADJOURNMENT

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn to Monday at 10 a.m.

Mr Speaker: When we return on Monday, just for the sake of convenience, the Hon. Minister John Cortes will be answering questions.

I now put the question that the House do now adjourn to Monday at 10 in the morning. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.
The House will now adjourn until Monday at 10 a.m.

The House adjourned at 1.21 p.m.

Q20/2017

Climate and Clean Air Coalition – Benefits derived from participation

Clerk: Monday, 23rd January, we continue with the meeting of Parliament and we continue with answers to Oral Questions.

We start with Question 20. The Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can Government say to what extent has Gibraltar participated in the Climate and Clean Air Coalition in the last year and what benefits have been derived from that participation?

10

15

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Yes, Mr Speaker, Gibraltar has had limited but continued participation with the CCAC. This is largely related to the fact that the coalition is initiative led. This said, the benefits include expanding Gibraltar's network of contacts, increasing technical knowledge, and assistance where needed.

20

Hon. T N Hammond: Can I just ask the Minister to expand on his comment reference increasing technical knowledge – what the nature of that might be?

25

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as I said, it is initiative led, so if there is an initiative – for example, a campaign on anything in particular – then we can join in, and if it is relevant to Gibraltar then we will do so.

As far as technical knowledge, a lot of countries are represented there with their own technical expertise, so we are able to call upon it, should we need it, in order to advance any particular area that we may be interested in.

Some of the campaigns have not been related directly to Gibraltar. They have one, for example, which relates to the use of wood fires in African countries – for example, in small huts, where it has a negative effect on health and they are trying to introduce different systems so that there will not be so many particles within such a confined space. Clearly, those are not relevant here, so that is not an initiative we would be involved in. Where there are other initiatives – and there have not been any in the last year or so – which are more directly related to Gibraltar, then we would be able to form part of that and draw on the expertise of the network.

Hon. T N Hammond: So, Mr Speaker, when the Minister said, back in February of last year, that it is a highly proactive organisation from which we can learn a great deal and to whose work we can contribute from our own progress, is it fair to say that we have not quite reached those expectations?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, I do not think it is fair to say. As I say, when there is a particular campaign or a particular initiative, then all those things will kick in. But if they are talking about wood fires in huts in African countries, then that is not something in which we will participate or contribute. It really depends on the initiative that is current at the time.

Q21/2017
European flat oyster –
Re-introduction programme

Clerk: Question 21. The Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Government report on the progress of the programme to re-introduce the European flat oyster to our waters?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the population of the European flat oyster is progressing well, with additional restocking exercises planned for the near future. The Department's dive team continues to monitor selected sites where the oysters were transplanted.

Q22/2017
Junta de Andalucía –
Technical meetings and topics discussed

Clerk: Question 22. The Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, since the first meeting with the Head of the Environment for the Junta de Andalucía in May last year, how many technical meetings have subsequently taken place and what has been discussed at these meetings?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, at the time of preparation of the answer, expecting to have delivered it in the 70 middle of last week, the answer was four technical meetings, but there was another one on Friday so five technical meetings have been held in Spain to discuss various initiatives of mutual interest. The difference from the prepared answer is clearly that we have had a day or two between and there was a fifth meeting on Friday last.

75 Hon. T N Hammond: And could the Minister give us a flavour of what has been discussed at those meetings?

80 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there has been discussion on collaboration in dealing with stranded dolphins and turtles, there have been meetings discussing waste treatment and the different ways in which we deal with waste, there have been meetings discussing the reintroduction programmes of osprey and other species, and the last meeting was one on educational exchange to promote our nature reserve in the surrounding area and to bring some information about the richness of the area of the Straits of Gibraltar to schools and to the general public.

85 Hon. T N Hammond: When the Hon. the Minister says that waste treatment and how we manage it was discussed, and bearing in mind currently most of our waste goes to Spain, could he clarify whether that had anything to do with the current treatment works that are planned?

90 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, not at all, nothing to do with that; just discussing how different technologies are available. We, for example, have explained that we are looking at new low-polluting technologies for our treatment of waste and so on and they were quite interested in that kind of technology because there is no plant of such a type in the surrounding area. Purely technical meetings with no political implications whatsoever.

Q23/2017

Hospital solar panel project – Progress and expected completion date

95 Clerk: Question 23. The Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, what progress has been made on the solar panel project for the hospital and when might we expect it to be completed?

100 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, works have started on site. All materials have been ordered and have scheduled delivery dates within the next few weeks. It is expected that the system will be installed and operational by the end of March.

Q24/2017

Bufadero –

Use as dog park and future intended use

Clerk: Question 24, the Hon. E J Phillips.

110 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government provide details of the arrangements that are currently in place for the use of Bufadero at Lathbury Barracks as a dog park and the intention of the Government for the use of this site moving forward?

115 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there are no arrangements.

120 Hon. E J Phillips: So is it the position that Bufadero is currently being used as a dog park by members of the public?

125 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, not as a dog park. I am aware from conversations with dog owners – of which I used to be one; I now dog-sit my son’s dog occasionally – that the area, like many other areas in Gibraltar, is an area where dogs are walked and exercised. But that is a totally informal arrangement, which I suppose is not an arrangement at all. It is almost like talking about ‘alternative facts’, Mr Speaker! (Laughter)

130 Hon. E J Phillips: Just to confirm then, the Minister has not been approached by members of the public in relation to formalising any arrangement for the use of that site.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that is not what I have said. I have had a discussion with a group of dog owners, who I am aware exercise their dogs in that area, about the possibility of formalising. I have been approached about it, no decision has been taken; that is the situation.

Q25/2017

DNA sampling of dog faeces –

Cost to public purse

135 Clerk: Question 25. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government provide the projected cost to the public purse for the undertaking of DNA sampling of dog faeces?

140 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

145 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there is no expense to the taxpayer for the DNA sampling of dogs and faeces. As I have already stated several times in this House, it is expected that the increase in licence fee from £5 to £30 and any fines will cover the costs.

Hon. E J Phillips: Just one further supplementary question in relation to that: has the Government commenced the sampling process?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I believe so, but I could be wrong. The intention was to start in January. I know that in the first few days of January there were some software issues regarding the database that had to be sorted out, but I believe that the sampling has started. I would have to check in order to be 100% certain, but I am virtually certain. It did not start in the first couple of days in January because the database needed some tweaking, but I believe that it has started already. I would be happy to get the information for him during the course of the morning.

155

Hon. E J Phillips: Just insofar as the sampling and the process is concerned, is it envisaged that we will have a team that will effectively walk around Gibraltar's streets sampling faeces that have been left by owners who have not removed them? Is that how it is envisaged that this will work?

160

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there are a number of different people who work at the Ministry who will be involved. This includes the environmental protection officers, it includes the Environmental Agency, it includes the litter wardens, who will be carrying out these duties and who will all be trained as to the proper way of getting samples and so on.

165

We are not going to start doing that for several months. We want the database to be set up. We have given until March for the whole process of licensing so that it gives more time for the DNA samples to be taken. Then, shortly after that we will start doing the sampling. The people are already in place and have related duties already and they will be trained in order to carry this out.

170

Hon. E J Phillips: Just to be clear: there will be a process of training for those individuals who will be taking DNA samples?

175

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes absolutely, Mr Speaker.

Hon. E J Phillips: So, in other words, Mr Speaker, this has not yet commenced, this process?

180

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The process of collecting faeces has not commenced. The whole programme has. What I meant I was not sure whether they had started was the sampling of the dogs, the taking of the bloods or swabs or whatever, and the DNA profiling. That, I think, has started – that is what I said earlier – but the question of collecting faeces has not yet started and there will be a time lag of a couple of months before we do that.

185

Hon. E J Phillips: The reason why I asked about costs and resources in relation to this particular question, is if we are going to be using the environmental officers and indeed the litter wardens as agents for the Government to effectively test this and they are roaming our streets in order to obtain these samples, is this going to be a full time exercise of their duties? Are they going to be able to concentrate on litter warden duties and other environmental duties? It just seems that if these officers are going to be on our streets sampling faeces and testing them against samples that have been deposited by their owners, surely there must be a need for other people in the area of litter wardens to be introduced. It is just that I am struggling to understand the cost analysis here. (Interjection)

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, yes. I do not know whether to take that, as my hon. Friend has suggested, as a suggestion we increase the size of the Civil Service. I think, on the other 200 hand, the Minister for Efficiency would be very proud of the fact that we are adding additional duties.

No, it is going to be people who are going round on the beat, so to speak, and they will be looking ... They are already looking out for people who dog foul and so on. Part of that work will now involve the collecting of samples for processing. Hopefully it will be very effective, so there will not be a lot to do after the first few months, but time will tell.

Hon. E J Phillips: Just to confirm ... one final question. There will be an expansion of those individual roles to encompass DNA sampling of dog faeces? Thank you.

210

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, the current officers will be doing that as well as the other things that they do.

Q26/2017

Bayside and Westside Schools – Unauthorised entries

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide the number and nature of incidents relating to unauthorised entries by individuals at both Bayside and Westside Schools since December 2011?

220

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, let me start by reiterating the answer I gave at the last parliamentary session: the matter is a longstanding deficiency which is being addressed.

225

Most of the unauthorised entries concern parents wanting to see particular teachers without securing appointments. They are not normally logged. These parents are seen by the headteacher or deputy and advised accordingly. Past pupils have also wandered into school, smoking and behaving inappropriately. These incidents are dealt with by senior management and the Community Constable.

One unauthorised entry, however, has given us cause for concern – a person trespassing into Bayside, claiming to be lost – and the Police was called.

Q27/2017

Hardship funding for students in UK – Operation

230

Clerk: Question 27. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government explain how the hardship grant for students undertaking studies in the United Kingdom operates?

235

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):

Mr Speaker, qualification for hardship funding is based on the full household income of the applicant and family residing in the property. Applicants earning less than £27,000 per calendar year are eligible to apply, although savings, assets and/or dividends or interest are also taken into account.

An application form must be completed and proof of income and bank statements in respect of the student must also be submitted so that expenditure can be assessed for spending patterns on non-essentials. Consideration is also given to applicants who have more than one dependent child studying abroad.

If the criteria are met, then an initial sum of £900 is afforded for the current academic year. The student will need to reapply for hardship funding if he or she wishes to be considered for any further years of study. If the criteria continue to be met, then hardship funding is afforded on a declining scale: £450 for year two and £300 for year three.

Clerk: Question 28. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I? The Hon. the Minister has spoken about a declining scale. Can he explain the policy behind a declining scale? It does appear to me that if you are in need of extra assistance because there is hardship in your family, it should not necessarily decline in years two and in years three.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. I must say that this is not a new system that we have imposed, it is one that has been inherited, but I can give the explanation, and that is that the student is expected to take certain steps themselves in order to better their financial situation. It is well known that students sometimes get jobs in the summer or in the evenings and so on. It is to encourage the student to become more self-sufficient and not to rely entirely on this.

Clearly, should, for any reason, the hardship be so dire that the sliding scale would not be appropriate, this is something that the appropriate board would consider.

Hon. E J Phillips: So, Mr Speaker, there is a discretion based on the board to allow for a further top-up to the full £900 in the event that hardship is demonstrated by the applicant?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: It has never been necessary, but certainly this is something that would be available should the situation be dire, but the student is encouraged to take control of his own situation and is encouraged to take steps in order to become more self-sufficient. It is part of growing up, I suppose.

Hon. D A Feetham: I do not suppose the Hon. Minister has any statistics in relation to the applications of people for top-ups, because the Hon. Minister says it has never been necessary, but it may well be that people simply do not know that there is a discretion on the part of the board and therefore people do not apply.

275

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not have that information. I am happy to find it out, but I do not have it here.

280

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if the Hon. Minister could clarify: when he says it is assessed on household income, how would he define a household?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The answer explains – based on the full household income of the applicant and family residing in the property.

I do not have personal experience of this, because obviously there has not been a new academic year since I took over responsibility for Education. I remember that in assessing this

290 sort of income for sponsored patients it was, I think, a similar process in which the whole family income was included. At the time, it would normally be both parents. I do not think that if there was a sibling with an income that was taken into account, but again that is information that I would need to find out ... I was almost doing a Trump there, sorry! I would need to find out exactly whether, if there is a sibling or an uncle living in the same house ... I think the board would be able to weed that out and be sensible about it.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if the Minister would look at this. Certainly
I have come across an instance where there was a single mother with a child and happened to be living with the grandparents and extended family and they get penalised because they are living with the grandparents and they cannot afford a property of their own. So I would be 300 grateful if you would consider those kind of circumstances.

Q28/2017

Postgraduate degrees and professional vocational training – Monetary funding

Clerk: Question 28. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain its position with respect to monetary funding of postgraduate degrees and professional vocational training?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): 310 Mr Speaker, in implementation of our manifesto commitment, the Government is committed to mandatory funding for postgraduate degrees and professional vocational training. As such, students who complete their first degree can apply for continued mandatory funding to complete a higher degree or attain a professional or vocational qualification, as long as this is related to their initial area of study. If the pathway chosen represents a complete change, then 315 the funding is deemed discretionary and is subject to an application and interview process.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Minister have any numbers in terms of applications that have been successful and applications that have been unsuccessful in relation to this area of funding?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, the question did not ask for numbers so I do not have that information here, but once again it is something that I would be very happy to provide.

I know I have committed today to providing a lot of things, so perhaps if I could get a letter asking me specifically what information is required of these several education questions, it 325 would ease my Department's work and then we would reply in writing.

If specifically you want it stated in Parliament, then perhaps you can ask that in the next parliamentary session and I will very happily give the answer across the floor.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is this an area that the Government is currently reviewing, or does 330 Government policy hold firm and it is not a matter that is likely to be reviewed in the near future?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will not tire of telling him that the Government intends to comply with all of its manifesto commitments and sees no reason why we should not proceed, in particular in important areas such as this where the GSLP, and now the GSLP Liberals, have been consistently leading in respect of the nation's attitude to education. In particular of further education, between 1988 and 1996 we introduced compulsory scholarships for undergraduate degrees and after 2011 we introduced this policy in relation to second degrees, as the world of work has changed and we believe this continues to be an important policy enabling people to get the further qualifications they may now need in a more competitive economic environment.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the reason why I asked the question, and perhaps the Hon. the Chief Minister can enlighten me in relation to this, is because the information that has come to my attention is that in a talk with students the Chief Minister is stated as saying – I was not there, so obviously I cannot confirm this – that if the economy took a downturn, this would be the first area that would go, this area of postgraduate funding.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, his information is not just wrong, it is absolutely and completely woefully and completely incorrect and untrue.

Heritage Management Plan for Gibraltar working group – Membership and number of meetings

Clerk: Question 29. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise who are the members of the working group for the development of a Heritage Management Plan for Gibraltar and how often has it met since the announcement of its creation in November 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the group has not yet been set up. A draft plan is being prepared internally, which will then be discussed once the group meets.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer. Does he have any idea in his mind as to who would form part of this working group?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, certainly. The composition will probably be quite similar to the Heritage Advisory Committee that is going to be created with the new Heritage and Antiquities Act, again broadly similar to the Heritage Action Committee, which will include all stakeholders including the Heritage Trust for example.

I have tasked the preparation of a draft internally, and then, when that is ready, the group will start working on it. Rather than getting a group together and doing a draft after that I think it makes much more sense to have something concrete to work on, and that is the plan.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, you may or may not allow this kind of supplementary, but maybe the Minister will indulge me. Would the Minister envisage that the management plan would also make some kind of provision for properties that are currently owned by the MoD?

380 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I think that the management plan should be as inclusive as possible, which I think it should include ... What we cannot get the MoD to do is not relevant to having a management plan that we would like to see as the way forward. But as I say, I cannot really say much more because I have not seen a draft, Mr Speaker.

Q30/2017
Archaeologists –
Number of full-time professionals employed

385 Clerk: Question 30. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how many professional archaeologists are currently employed by it on a full-time basis?

390 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, one professional archaeologist who is currently on a sabbatical until August.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Minister's answer. Could he perhaps elaborate as to what is meant by a sabbatical; and how long has this sabbatical been for?

400 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the sabbatical is until August; I have just said that. He is still providing advice remotely. He is also required to attend several times a year to Gibraltar – he will be here next week. Of course, the Government has access to additional archaeological advice – the Gibraltar Museum, for example, employs two archaeologists and also provides the Ministry with advice. So, if the hon. Member is concerned that we do not have archaeological advice, I can assure him that we do.

Hon. R M Clinton: Again, Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister. When he says 'until August', can he tell us when the period started; and is it his understanding that, once the sabbatical ends, the individual will return to full-time employment in Gibraltar?

410 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it started a year before it is due to end. I think I actually said it was for a year. (Interjection) No, I did not, 'a sabbatical until August'. It is for a year.

Whether that particular individual decides to return or not is something for him to discuss with the Government and that discussion will take place at the appropriate time.

Q31/2017
Moorish Castle –
Progress re excavation

415 Clerk: Question 31. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise what progress has been made on the archaeological study or excavation of the Moorish Castle complex?

420 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

425 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Moorish Castle complex can be split into two parts: the Tower of Homage, which is open to the public; and the old prison complex. With regard to the former, there is no current plan for study or excavation. The old prison complex has been surveyed and its future use is being considered. The whole area has been made safe and rubbish removed.

430 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if the Minister could elaborate on what he meant by 'surveyed'? Was that an archaeological survey, architectural survey or structural survey?

435 Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, if I could assist the hon. Member, the Minister said it was split into two, which is the actual Tower of Homage and the prison. When I was Minister for Heritage, what they did was, when it was looked at, it was not only archaeological but on the structure of the buildings and a survey of all the area in all its aspects – engineering, the lot. So it was not just looking for things of archaeological interest.

440 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, perhaps the Minister could advise the House as to what the next steps would be in respect of the old prison complex in terms of opening up to the public or excavation?

445 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as I have said, the future use is under consideration. We have no firm plans one way or the other. We are looking at the best use for the site.

450 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does he not agree with me that – in the light of the fact that this is a national monument, effectively – the best use is to attempt to open it up to the public so that it is enjoyed by the public and not any kind of commercial use, in the sense of commercial use as we see in Spain, for example, where these things are turned into hotels, for example. That is not something that the Government is considering ... or is the Government open minded across the board in terms of its use?

455 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I do not know whether there might be some niche tourism which would enjoy spending the night in what used to be a prison cell! (Laughter and interjection)

I really cannot expand further, other than to say that clearly it will be consistent with the heritage value of the site, but it is too early for me to commit any further than that.

Q32/2017
Certificate in Gibraltar Law –
Government satisfaction with operation

Clerk: Question 32. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

460 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is Government satisfied that the Certificate in Gibraltar Law, which is in its second year and is a requirement in order to practise law in Gibraltar, is being run smoothly?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

465 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, as the Government well knows, this is a new Government policy that was legislated here in the last couple of years where law graduates are obliged to take this course, yet it still has not been organised to start and it has not taken off for this academic year, which means that in order for it to finish when it must, by the time that it starts there is no doubt that the lessons will have to be crammed in. Many of these students have lives and are training and have jobs and it is causing an inconvenience, given that it still has not started and there is no clear picture of when it will start.

475 Is the Government aware of the inconvenience that this is causing to the many trainees who are still waiting for dates of commencement?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, yes. Not just law students but all students have lives, but I understand what the hon. Member is saying.

480 The course is due to start on 16th February. The requirement is 48 hours of training. The course is expected to take 24 weeks and, as I say, it is due to start on 16th February. Everything is in place and we are confident that it will be more than adequately catered for in this academic year.

485 Clerk: We now move to Question 73.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have more questions but they are not being asked and nobody – 490 A Member: Mr Llamas is not here.

Mr Speaker: Perhaps I should explain at this stage that, owing to the absence of the Hon. Mr Llamas, the decision that he took was that he preferred to have Written Answers.

495 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I was not aware. I just wondered whether perhaps I had missed something or I had to make myself available at some other time.
Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Q73/2017

Housing waiting lists –

House size requirements of applicants awaiting allocation

500 Clerk: We now proceed with Question 73, and the questioner is the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing provide details pertaining to the house size requirements in respect of applicants who joined any category of housing waiting lists prior to 8th December 2011 and who have still not been handed keys to a new home, inclusive of dates of joining said lists?

505 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there are 266 applicants who have not yet physically received their keys.

510 The house size requirements range from 1RKB to 6RKB and these applicants joined the list as follows: between 1999 and 2004, 26; between 2005 and 2010, 144; and in 2011 up to 8th December 2011, 110.

515 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, in respect of the house size requirements, the Minister obviously has given me the full range. Does she by chance happen to have any breakdown of how many from those would be just the 1RKB category and how many would be the larger-size houses?

520 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, more than half relate to 1RKB: there are 167. As the hon. Member may recall, there was no commitment in respect of the 1RKB flats. For the 6RKB there is only one, and for the 5RKB there are five.

Hon. E J Reyes: And the date ranges? The Hon. Minister said from 1999 to 2004 – that is a five-year period. Does she have a little bit more of a breakdown of that?

525 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: I do not have it, Mr Speaker, but I did ask why there were people on the list dating back to 1999 and there are only 26 people in this five-year period. It seems like there are people who, for some reason, have been on this list for a long time, are continuously offered houses and continuously reject them. So it may be that I have to look at the policy – which surprises me, because the policy has always been that you are offered three chances and if you do not accept it you are removed from the list. But these people, between 1999 and 2004 ... It was GSD policy. I am aware that that was the GSD policy at the time and I need to look at if there are special circumstances as to why they are not applied.

530 ... It was GSD policy. I am aware that that was the GSD policy at the time and I need to look at if there are special circumstances as to why they are not applied.
I was surprised when I looked and saw that these was someone ... There was only one person on the list from 1999, the others are more recent, but I thought it strange so I need ... It is an internal thing I have to do to look and see why these people have been there for so long. Clearly, in respect of the person from 1999, when I looked at that particular file that person had been made a lot of offers and had rejected them because that person wants a particular flat in a particular area. Apparently, that is the case for quite a number of the historic applications, so it may be that those need to be reviewed and policy may need to be reviewed.

Housing waiting lists –
Updated details

540 Clerk: Question 74. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide updated details in respect of the number of applicants on all Government housing waiting lists, inclusive of the pre-list and social and medical lists, as well as indicating the room composition entitlements and dates when these applicants joined the respective lists?
545

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, by way of update, the following are applicants who joined the waiting lists, inclusive of the pre-list, social list and medical list, since the last answer to this question in September 2016: 76 have joined the 1RKB, 10 the 2RKB, 11 the 3RKB, 6 the 4RKB, and 1 the 6RKB.
550

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, perhaps I did not quite get it –

555 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Sorry, Mr Speaker ... And since that date, 40 people have been allocated a flat and accordingly have been removed from the waiting list.

560 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, a couple of things. Firstly, in the latter part the Minister just said that 40 have been allocated the flats. Does that mean that they are now already in possession of the keys to the property?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, and they have been removed from the waiting list.

565 Hon. E J Reyes: And the other part, Mr Speaker: at the very beginning the Minister started to answer questions referring to figures she had given me in the past. That has given me a bit of confusion. What I have asked for is updated details in respect of the number of applicants. Does that mean that, as we speak today, there are 76 applicants for the 1RKB or there are 76 plus some other figure? I am not entirely certain.

570 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, in September the hon. Gentleman asked this question and now he has asked for that answer to be updated, so I have updated it since the last question. So I have told him who has come in and who has gone out.

575 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, but the reason why I ask this question is because, since we have dealt with it before and have had figures, in trying to do my mathematics – and you know, as my past teacher, I am not the brightest of mathematicians – I wanted to get an accurate picture today. So it is 76 plus some figures, and although one can look it up in Hansard there is a human error in adding up and a misunderstanding. I did not refer to any other previous question. I just said I wanted updated details in respect of the number of applicants on the housing list, thinking I would get an answer as we speak today or as of last week, whenever the figures were provided to the Minister – how many people are actually in the category of 1RKB, 2RKB and so on, so that there is no confusion. Perhaps we can get to that stage, Mr Speaker.

580 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, I also prefer English to Maths, if we are talking about it like that, so when I was asked for updated details what I did was I updated the last answer. If what the hon. Gentleman wants is an up-to-date list, then if that is how the question is phrased on the next occasion ... It is now my understanding that what he requires is an up-to-date list as opposed to an updated list, so if he asks me for an up-to-date list on the next occasion, then I will provide it in that format. What I have done is I have replied on the basis of 590 the way that the question was formulated.

Hon. E J Reyes: Would Mr Speaker then give me leave to ask at the next session, using the wording 'up-to-date lists', and now that the Minister knows would I have it? Would we will be able to settle this?

Mr Speaker: Yes. The only thing is, draw my attention to the fact that it is the same question for this reason. Okay?

600 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: In fact, Mr Speaker, if I could assist: if the hon. Gentleman just asks for the list, there is no need to use the words 'up-to-date' or 'updated' because automatically the information provided will be the current information, so it will always be up to date.

605 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady is not necessarily wrong, but I will let her know that part of the reason why the word 'updated' came in is because when one looks at the Government website it is February 2016 when the figures were last updated, so therefore I do not think I am wrong in using the word 'updated', because it is now 11 months since the website provided any updated details.

Q75/2017
Empty Government housing –
Details of properties

Clerk: Question 75. The Hon. E J Reyes.

615 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide a list showing the total number of homes which are currently empty, providing a breakdown of pre-war and post-war properties, indicating the room composition, locations and dates as from when these homes have been empty?

620 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there are 11 pre-war flats and 47 post-war flats which are empty and currently undergoing the refurbishment process, of which there are 6 1RKB, 22 2RKB, 16 3RKB, 12 4RKB and 2 6RKB.

625 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, in my question I put location. I do not want the actual particular address but location. One can accept a general nomenclature such as Laguna Estate or Upper Town, or something. Can I have some indication of the geographical location?

630 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I do not have the geographical information, other than, obviously, that these are in Gibraltar. What I can do is I can get the breakdown by zones, the south district and the north district, and that may be helpful for the hon. Gentleman. I will forward that to him.

Another part of the question which I forgot to answer is that these flats have been under refurbishment for different dates since February 2016.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful, Mr Speaker, that the Minister is going to try and get the location. Can I ask her, if possible, can she get her staff to be a bit more generous, not just north district or south district but more in keeping with the example I gave – whether we are talking of the Upper Town or which housing estate? Given that a very big number of flats are on a particular housing estate, it should not be that difficult to pull them in together as the example I gave – Laguna Estate or Varyl Begg Estate, or something like that.

640

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, other than people will then go hunting the 6RKB that is in, for example, Laguna Estate or the Upper Town. But I have realised that as part of my supplementary I do have the information; I just looked at the wrong page. There are 12 in the North District, 14 in the South, 24 in the Upper Town and 15 in the West District.

645

Hon. E J Reyes: I know she is trying to be as helpful as possible, Mr Speaker, but given that we are talking about Government rental, by the West District as opposed to the North District where would one classify places like Glacis, which is really to the west of Gibraltar but most people perhaps call it north? Is there anymore accuracy in that respect?

650

655 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am happy to write to him and explain to him where these are. It is just that, as you know, there are only a few houses with these compositions. The last thing I want is people going on a treasure hunt looking for the empty house. He has been in Government – he knows what it is like when people want houses.

Q76/2017
Government rental homes –
Outstanding repairs

660 Clerk: Question 76. The Hon. E J Reyes.

665 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of how many jobs in respect of repairs to rental homes are currently pending, that is still not fully completed, indicating the dates when these reports were first made by tenants?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

670 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there are a total of 324 pending repairs and these were reported to us as follows ... remaining, and of course these are remaining because we provide these almost monthly: one in May 2016, nine in June, five in July, 11 in August, eight in September, three in October, 138 in November, 149 in December – and all these are 2016.

675 Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful, Mr Speaker. May I, with your leave, ask the hon. Lady ... I know we have spoken in the past and she very generously agreed to look into issues because I said I had some constituents who said that they had pending jobs for a long time back, and I forwarded her that information. Is she now satisfied that those jobs have been completed and therefore those who were on the list that I had forwarded to her have now been fully settled?

680 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, they are not here, so I am assuming that they have been. Certainly we spoke a couple of months ago and the hon. Gentleman gave me works which I passed on to the Department and asked that they be processed accordingly.

685 As I was telling the hon. Gentleman, some of the works did not appear in our system so it may be that people may have referred it and there may have been an error in the system; or, as of late, unfortunately people think that the appropriate way of reporting things is reporting it on a Facebook page and assuming that someone is going to check it, or maybe the fairy godmother of Facebook is going to come and undertake the works. Mr Speaker, I am not being flippant; it happens very, very regularly. People seem to think that it is normal, instead of reporting a problem to the Housing Department, to report it on Facebook and expect someone to see it.

690 There are, of course, circumstances where – of course, we are dealing with a huge volume of works – some works sometimes fall through the net, as happens and unfortunately does happen, but as soon as those are brought to our attention they are obviously expedited.

695 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I understand, Mr Speaker, what the Hon. Minister is trying to say. As a result of those exchanges that we had I know one tenant reported back that after months of nothing happening someone actually came round to their flat, looked at what works needed to be done and said, 'We will get back to you.' They waited for I think it was another two months and then I know the hon. Lady must have done some chasing up because someone eventually turned up again and said, 'The old measurements we took seem to have been lost,' 700 and they say that the works were due to start before the end of January. Therefore, I am grateful for the action that has been taken but I would still classify that as one of those I was requesting and is still not fully completed. That seems to be a rather long time outstanding job and it is still not fully completed.

705 May I, Mr Speaker, just say: would the hon. Lady please agree that she can ask someone in her Department to look it up, just to ensure that people keep to their word? I know she gives it out to Gibraltar General Construction and so on, and as far as the Housing Works Agency is concerned the job is well in hand, but it is not quite fully completed and these are where occasionally they slip through the net. So would the hon. Lady please agree with me that she will look into this and update this House if need be?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, of course, because, as far as I am concerned, my understanding was that they had been done. So if they have not been done and they have not been provided to me in this question I will follow it up in more ways than one, Mr Speaker, and that goes beyond ensuring that the works are repaired.

Q77-78/2017

Government rental homes –
Urgent decanting of tenants

715 Clerk: Question 77. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of how many tenants required urgent decanting from their homes since the answer to Question 884/2016, indicating the reason why, the date when said decanting became necessary and the dates when the tenants were able to return to their homes?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 78.

Clerk: Question 78. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of how many tenants who required urgent decanting from their homes at any time in the past, are still waiting to be able to return to their homes?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

735 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, none.

Q79/2017

Government rental homes –
Eviction of squatters

Clerk: Question 79. The Hon. E J Reyes.

740 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing say how much expenditure has been incurred in respect of legal costs relating to the eviction of squatters from Government rental homes since the answer to Question 885/2016, providing a breakdown showing the number of homes involved and to whom payments were made?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

745 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, none.

Q80/2017

Government rental homes – Works to make suitable for reallocation

750 Clerk: Question 80. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of all expenditure incurred since the answer to Question 887/2016 in respect of contracts awarded for making empty homes suitable for reallocation, stating to whom payments were made, how much has been paid, the number of residential homes pertaining to each payment, as well as indicating the type/nature of repair works or cleaning services undertaken?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

760 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, since Question 887/2016, Prestige Builders was paid £12,200 for one property, Avanti was paid £12,434 for one property, Ceprano Ltd was paid £13,470 for one property, and Ace Plumbing was paid £16,360 for one property.

The works carried out by these companies were general refurbishment works, which included plastering walls and ceilings, painting, replacing floor tiles, doors, plumbing and electrical works.

Q81/2017

Government rental homes – Outstanding arrears

765 Clerk: Question 81. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide updated details of outstanding arrears in respect of Government rental homes?

770 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, as of 1st January 2017 the level of outstanding arrears in respect of Government rental homes stood at £5,189,641.67.

COMMERCE

Q42/2017

Crypto-currency Working Group second report – Reason for recall

Clerk: We now move to Question 42. The Questioner is the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain why the Crypto-currency working group's second report of 22nd February 2016 was recalled?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice on behalf of the Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the email dated 22nd February 2016 under the heading 'Working Group on Virtual Currencies proposal for a regulatory framework' was not recalled as has been suggested. Should the Member opposite furnish me with further details, I will happily look into the matter. It may be that the question arises as a small number of emails were returned undelivered. Where this occurred, we amended the email address and resent.

HEALTH, CARE AND JUSTICE

Q45-47/2017

HMP Windmill Hill – Mandatory drugs testing of prisoners

Clerk: We now move to Question 45. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Further to Question 524/2016, can the Government confirm that the Superintendent of Prisons has now issued the requisite notice for the mandatory drugs testing of prisoners at HMP Windmill Hill?

I should add that it should read Question 525 from my record of Hansard – apologies.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 46 and 47.

Hon. E J Phillips: Further to Question 524/2016 – which should read 525/2016 – can the Government provide details pertaining to the number of mandatory drugs tests conducted on prisoners at HMP Windmill Hill?

Clerk: Question 47. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Further to Question 524 and 525/2016, can the Government confirm that it is the Prison Service itself that prefers voluntary drugs testing arrangements as opposed to the exercise of the power to conduct mandatory drugs testing of prisoners at HMP Windmill Hill?

815 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Prison Superintendent has not issued an authorisation under section 48 of the Prison Act.

No mandatory drug tests have been conducted at Her Majesty's Prison Windmill Hill to date.

820 The view held by the management of the Prison is that both voluntary and mandatory drug testing are necessary components of an overall drug strategy for the prison. Each of these programmes have different aims and objectives and it is by having them working in tandem that can achieve the most desirable impact on tackling the problems of drugs in prison and rehabilitate offenders.

825 To be clear, Mr Speaker, it is for the Prison Superintendent and for the Prison authorities to decide whether and when to exercise the statutory authorisation under section 48 of the Prison Act.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Minister help me with a supplementary question relating to this matter? My understanding is that the delay in providing the mechanism for the section 61 mandatory testing of prisoners related to the calibration of the machinery available to the Prison Service so that they can conduct these tests, and there was an issue, I believe, with the GHA at the time relating to the calibration of that. My understanding from the answer to the question that I put to the former Minister for Justice related to the fact that he did confirm that 830 the arrangements are now in place for mandatory drugs testing.

835 The question that I have is that if we do have this power available to us, given the fact that drugs are a problem in society in any event and they are also a problem in the Prison, why can't we now engage the Prison Service to ensure that mandatory drugs testing does take place? Although there is a requirement in the law for that to happen – and I understand the Superintendent's view as to voluntary testing – surely we should move towards also mandatory testing to try and tackle drugs at both these levels.

840 As described by the learned and Hon. Leader of the Opposition in relation to that, there are three strands to this. One, obviously, is the voluntary testing, but also the mandatory testing. I would ask the Minister to clarify the position in relation to mandatory testing, so that we can have that strand running in tandem with the voluntary arrangements at the Prison Service.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I agree with everything that the hon. Gentleman has said. In fact, I would go even further: I think that there should be a public-sectorwide policy in terms of drug testing and I have discussed that with the hon. Lady, the Minister for Drugs, in respect of introducing a public sector policy, indeed from the Minister down.

850

In respect of the mandatory testing in prisons, I know, having spoken with the Superintendent, that it is his view that there has to be mandatory testing working in tandem with voluntary testing, and he is right in saying that my predecessor, Mr Gilbert Licudi, did mention the benefits of voluntary drug testing and the compact made between the Prison Authorities and the inmates and the benefits that has for the rehabilitation of the offender while in prison.

855

Having calibrated the GHA machinery properly to be able to do that, it is certainly a matter for the Prison Superintendent to issue the notice under the statute. He has no direction from me other than that he should proceed to do so as he sees fit. So, whenever he sees fit he is certainly in a position to be able to do so.

860

Hon. E J Phillips: Does the Minister also agree with me that it should be part of the Prison Service duties to make sure that these are conducted? Drugs are a problem everywhere in society, including in the Prison, and therefore would he agree that we should be encouraging at least the Prison Superintendent to engage that part of the law which provides for that notice to be issued so that he can engage in this tandem process? I believe we are ad idem in relation to that. Would he commit to approaching the Prison Superintendent in order to recommend that we pursue that tandem process of voluntary and mandatory drugs testing?

870 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, yes, and once again I would like to go further than the hon. Gentleman. He also raised in the last session of Parliament the fact that the Parole Board has not introduced a condition as to drug testing as part of the licence, and when I meet with the Superintendent of Prisons I will also raise with him the fact that section 61 has not seemed to have been activated either.

875 So, given that we all agree, in this House and outside, that there should be mandatory and voluntary drug testing at the same time, I will ask for the Superintendent's views on when he intends to engage section 61 in respect of mandatory drug testing, and I will be very happy to write to the hon. Gentleman in that respect after my meeting with him.

880 Hon. E J Phillips: I am grateful for the response, and if he could also commit to setting out the response from the Prison Superintendent in this House it would also be helpful. I am grateful.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I would be obliged to do so.

885 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just to place my question in context, the mandatory drugs testing is something that was introduced by the then GSD Government, both the mandatory drugs testing in prison and also the drugs testing as part of the parole process. I think everybody listening to the exchanges agrees that they are worthwhile measures.

I listened to the Hon. Minister's answer where he is effectively saying that both the Government and the Superintendent agree that mandatory and voluntary drugs testing ought to proceed in tandem, and yet I am curious as to why the notice has not been issued yet. What is the reason for the delay? I have never understood, I have to say, why voluntary drugs testing can take place but why mandatory drugs testing, as a matter of technology, cannot take place. It seems to me that it must be the same technology. But secondly, this issue with the recalibration – although I do not understand how it works, because as I say I think they must be the same – has been sorted out sometime ago. Why hasn't the Superintendent of Prisons issued the relevant notice under both sections?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in a way, the issue of the calibration of the machine is outdated because, as the hon. Gentleman knows, the Royal Gibraltar Police have the ability to drug test people who are driving, so there is no need for that machine in any case. In any event, now you have the portable test that you can conduct on site.

900

I think the key in understanding my answer is that it is a statutory power vested in the Superintendent of Prisons. It is not for me to tell him when and where. I have certainly communicated to the Superintendent of the Prison my view and it is also his view that there should be mandatory and voluntary drug testing in tandem.

905

Given the exchanges we have had in this House, at my next meeting with him I will be specific as to my questions and say to him that if it is his policy that there should be mandatory drug testing along with voluntary drug testing, then he should feel free to exercise his statutory power whenever he thinks it is appropriate to do so. But I am not going to tell him how or when to do it; that is a matter for him to do so.

910

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I understand that. I understand that the power vests in the Superintendent, but he is the Minister responsible for the prisons and having told this House that both the Government and the Superintendent of Prisons both believe that this is a policy that ought to operate in tandem, and bearing in mind that none of this has actually happened over the last five years, I would have thought that the Hon. Minister would have asked the Superintendent 'Why haven't you issued the notice yet?' It does not appear to be a dispute 920 about the policy, and that is what I am asking: what are the reasons for the delay? But if he hasn't asked ask the Superintendent I would urge upon him that he should ask the Superintendent, because bearing in mind that we all agree that this is a very worthwhile policy it ought to be instigated as soon as possible.

915

Q51/2017
Dementia Daycare Centre –
Contract details

925 Clerk: As Mr Llamas is not in the Chamber today we move to Question 51. The questioner is the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, is the Government in a position to advise to whom the contract has been awarded in respect of the Dementia Care Centre and for how much?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Government awarded the contract in respect of the Dementia Day Centre to Medoc for £712,779 per annum.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his response. Perhaps he could advise what track record this company has in providing such services in Gibraltar?

Mr Speaker: I do not think it arises from the question.

Hon. D A Feetham: Of course it arises!

Mr Speaker: The track record does not arise. What may arise is to ask is the Minister satisfied that this company is able to carry out the work for which they are contracted. Yes, that is a valid question, but to give details about their track record has got nothing to do with Government.

945

The Government does not have, in this House, to provide details of the track record of any company established in Gibraltar. Given that they have awarded a contract to this company, it is perfectly acceptable to ask whether the Government is satisfied that they can carry out the necessary task.

950

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker, I will rephrase my question. Could the Government advise what due diligence they undertook on the successful tenderer in terms of their experience in providing such services?

955 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman heard my answer to that last week in the Viewpoint programme. (Interjection) Then he was not listening to me.

At the time it was my formidable predecessor, Dr John Cortes, who headed the GHA. There was a competitive tender board set up. The GHA sought quotes from all the existing care providers in Gibraltar. If memory serves, I believe there were six. Of the six companies that were approached, only three submitted quotes. Of those three that submitted quotes, they were, of course, interviewed by this tender board, as a result of which there was a recommendation made to the Minister. As a result of that, the Minister came to this House to announce that Medoc, a private provider, had been made the preferred bidder. Following that, there were direct negotiations, as is usual, between the GHA and the preferred bidder to finalise the details of the contract.

I am working entirely from memory, but I think that my recollection is correct (Hon. Dr J E Cortes: It is.) – but my hon. Friend will assist.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):

970 Yes, Mr Speaker. As soon as the board had considered ... I believe it was two proposals that were the favoured ones, there was a great deal of interchange with them, asking for all sorts of credentials, membership of ... who the people they were going to be engaging or had engaged were. So there was a great deal of toing and froing from the people running the selection board in order to ensure that this was the best available option.

975 I have very clear recollection of how incisive and how insistent the selection panel was in order to obtain all the necessary guarantees.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful to the Minister and the former Minister for Health for their answers in this respect.

980 Can I ask: in terms of their due diligence, do they also carry out any due diligence as to the ownership of Meddoc, and can the Minister advise who are the beneficial owners of Meddoc?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am afraid that I do not have that information with me.

985 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would the Minister be willing to come back to this House and provide that?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, unless I am mistaken, the beneficial ownership of the company would be reflected in the documents found at Companies House, so I would have no difficulty in relaying to this House what is available in a public document, none at all.

995 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I understand what the Minister is saying, but in fact a search of the company at Companies House will indicate that 50% of it is owned through a nominee company. So, if I file a specific question on that, would the Minister be comfortable in answering that question?

1000 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Mr Speaker, the Government always insists in knowing who the beneficial owners of a company are when they grant any agreement in relation ... or any contract. We do not accept that we should simply be told who are the registered shareholders of a company. So, if a question is put then I am sure the information will be brought to this House.

St Bernard's Hospital escalators – Cost of purchase and installation

Clerk: Question 52. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1005 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how much the escalators to St Bernard's Hospital cost to purchase and install?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1010 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, each escalator cost £54,110.16. The installation and design cost was £91,290.86.

Hon. R M Clinton: Sorry, Mr Speaker, I may have misheard the Minister: did he say that the design cost was £91,000?

Hon. N F Costa: Installation and design.

Hon. R M Clinton: So £91,000 was the total cost of purchase, installation and design?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, each escalator cost £54,110.16, so that amount times two. And then, in addition, the installation and design cost was £91,290.86.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Hon. Minister. Again, I presume ... it is a question of some more maths just to make sure I have got the right numbers: so the total cost of purchase, design and installation for both escalators would come to £195,000?

Hon. N F Costa: It is £199,511.18.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, in the last meeting in December I brought to the Minister's attention that the escalator was not working, and in his answer he said that he was hoping that it would be operational by the end of the week. That was 21st December. Last week I went to have a look at them and they were not working. I would be grateful if the Minister could advise what the problem is with the escalators, given that they cost the taxpayer £200,000.

1030

Mr Speaker: No, you do not have to answer that question. It does not arise from the specific question about installation and cost. If the escalator is not working it should be the subject of a separate question.

1035

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, £200,000 of taxpayers' money for a system that is not working ... Surely the supplementary must be relevant.

1040

Mr Speaker: No, it does not matter. The cost could be a million pounds. You have asked a specific question. You have wanted to know how much has the escalator cost and how much has it cost to install, okay? That is what you are asking for.

Obviously you expect to get value for money, but that is another matter. But to ask a specific question about the reason why on a particular date the escalator was not working ... That is a separate matter.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, would you like me to assist the House?

Mr Speaker: If you want to. I will allow the Minister to answer if he wants to, but he does not have to.

Hon. N F Costa: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Just to put the hon. Gentleman's mind at rest, I was also not impressed that the escalators were not working by the time that I indicated in this House that they should be working. But subsequent to the session in the House I was informed that a particular critical piece had been unfortunately destroyed because of the flooding; it was not at all operational. Because, of course, the piece is under warranty, we will be able to claim for the amount that it has cost to replace it, but I am assured that the escalators will be operational by the 27th of this month.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his response. Thank you.

1060

Mr Speaker: And I would be grateful if the hon. Member takes note of the guidance that I am giving him. All right? He may have been in time: if the escalator was non-operational last week he could have asked a specific question on the matter.

Q53-56/2017
Primary Care Centre –
Waiting times

Clerk: Question 53. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1070 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide details of average waiting times at the Primary Care Centre on a monthly basis for the last six months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1075 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 54, 55 and 56.

Clerk: Question 54. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1080 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide details of the longest a patient has had to wait to be treated at the Primary Care Centre in each of the last six months?

Clerk: Question 55. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1085 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide details of average waiting times for non-urgent referrals from the Primary Care Centre to consultants or doctors at the hospital for each of the last six months?

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide details of average waiting times for urgent cancer referrals from the Primary Care Centre to consultants or doctors at the hospital for each of the last six months?

1095

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in respect of the last six months the information is as follows.

1100 The Primary Care Centre offers a range of services, and for ease of reference waiting times at the PCC have been broken down by service providers.

Dermatology: urgent cases, two to six weeks; routine cases, 10 to 12 weeks.

Dental department: varies depending on the treatment and clinician, nine to 21 weeks.

Audiology: no waiting time for initial appointment for hearing tests; for the issue of new hearing aids, 16 weeks.

Physiotherapy: urgent cases, two to four weeks; routine cases, 10 months.

Physiotherapy paediatric: acute referrals, within a week; routine referrals within two months.

Children with developmental delay/neurological problems: within a month.

Occupational therapists: routine referrals, 20 weeks to nine months.

1110 Diabetes: annual review check-ups, four months; review, one to two weeks; newly diagnosed, five weeks.

Mr Speaker, service users have access to our GPs on a daily basis for appointments on the day, emergency care and to a 48-hour appointment system. Further, no service user has made a specific verbal or written complaint in respect of any of the waiting times over the last six months.

1115 In respect of the last six months the information of average waiting times for non-urgent referrals from the PCC to consultants or doctors at St Bernard's Hospital is in the schedule I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman.

1120 In respect of the last six months, from the moment a patient is referred as an urgent possible cancer case the patient will be seen by the relevant consultant or doctor within two weeks in accordance with NHS best practice. The National Institute for Health and Care Excellence Guidelines state that suspect cancer presentation at primary care are to be referred to the secondary care consultant within two weeks.

1125 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, these questions asked for details of each of the last six months on a monthly basis. Am I right in saying that therefore, from the answers, the Government does not have the statistics for each month, or is it that the average that he is giving me is a constant average in each month of the last six months?

1130 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, the information as explained to me represents an average in respect of each of the specialisms that I have mentioned to him. If he looks, for example, at the schedule that I provided to him, in respect of referrals to cardiologists, geriatrics and respiratory he will also see that there are urgent referrals and routine referrals.

1135 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I know. I understand that. It may well be that the statistics cannot be converted in the way that I have asked for them – I do not know. But let me give the hon. Gentleman an example and why I have asked it in this particular way.

When one looks at the report provided to the GHA board in terms of statistics of bed occupancy, very helpfully they are divided in months and for a period of six months it shows bed occupancy going up from 103%, then the next month there is 105%. Individually in each month it gives you the actual statistic, so it allows you to see a trend, which in that case was upwards for the period that was examined, and that is really what I want to see: whether there are trends in the last six months, whether the waiting lists are actually going up or whether they are going down. This just gives me an average over six months. Does the Government have the statistics in the format that I want them?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker. In the first place, the hon. Gentleman is absolutely right – what he does have are averages. The system is not wired to be able to provide that statistical information that he requests.

1150 Of course, whether a person waits for two weeks or more, or less, will depend on a whole variety of factors, and the programme as currently configured does not provide that information. I am not at all certain whether the new programme will be able to – (Interjection by Hon. Dr J E Cortes) Yes, Dr John Cortes, my hon. Friend, is telling me that in fact the new electronic program will be able to provide those statistics, but as currently configured the programme that we have only provides average waiting times. So I will not be able to tell him, for example, that a particular individual on a particular date, awaiting for example a dental appointment, took three weeks.

1160 Hon. D A Feetham: And I take it from that that the Hon. Minister – bearing in mind that he has come into his Ministry quite recently and one of the things that he would want to do is what I am doing as well, which is looking at these statistics and looking at trends; that is precisely why I am asking them – he has not been able to check these averages, or has he, these averages as against averages in the past, to see whether, for example, routine referral waiting times are actually going up, going down or whether they have been static. Is this something that the Hon. Minister has done?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, in preparing the information I asked my officials to answer the hon. Gentleman's question so that the information that I have provided to him relates only in respect of the last six months. We have not looked in respect of these six months and compared them to the previous six months.

1175 Hon. D A Feetham: Is he therefore satisfied or not satisfied that actual waiting times are going up? This is precisely the type of exercise that I would have expected the Minister to have done in order to see whether waiting times are going up or are going down, and I would urge the Hon. Minister to conduct this kind of exercise to see whether the service is improving or whether it is static or whether it is not improving.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, whereas I have not been able to conduct it in the time frame between the questions being asked and attending Parliament, I have of course instructed my officials to do exactly that kind of exercise.

1180 Hon. D A Feetham: I am very grateful. And can the Hon. Minister indicate to me – so that then I can come back to this House and perhaps ask further questions on it, because I do not want to bombard the Minister with statistical questions that really will not take it very much further from my point of view – when the exercise will be completed, so that I can then ask the Minister whether he sees any trends in the statistics?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I envisage having discussed this issue with various staff members ... perhaps four weeks.

Hon. E J Phillips: I just have one question after looking at the answer to the question that the Minister has handed up. One thing that obviously shines out quite brightly in relation to routine referrals is the orthopaedic department's routine referrals of between 12 and 14 months. Can the Minister explain the duration? It seems to be a lot longer than other routine referrals in the GHA and I assume there is a good reason for that or there are reasons that the Government can explain for over a year for routine referrals in relation to orthopaedics.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, perhaps I can assist. Orthopaedics are a very special kind of medicine, and I am not aware of the detail of the current waiting list but certainly when it comes to surgery, because orthopaedic surgeons are the ones who are called in whenever there is a trauma case – something as serious as a traffic accident or somebody falls at home and breaks a hip or an ankle or whatever – they tend to interfere with routine clinics and surgeries more than other types of surgery. Therefore, without commenting on the particular situation now because my information is a few months old, normally you will find that orthopaedics have longer waiting lists or longer waiting times because the surgeons are often involved frontline, dealing with emergency cases, which deals to other operations and clinics having to be put off.

I just say that by way of assistance.

1210

Hon. E J Phillips: I thank the Minister for that answer and for clarifying the position, but would he agree with me that we should try to target this and bring this time down because it does appear to be a fairly long time, 12 to 14 months, to see an orthopaedic surgeon for routine referrals. It would be helpful to see if we can reduce and get a better target time for those that need that care and attention.

1215

I appreciate the fact that there are trauma clinics, and the Minister has tried to explain that, but it would seem like a long time to me, particularly when you are looking at other specialisations such as gastroenterology or surgical departments that have two weeks to three months on average for routine referrals.

1220

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, I do agree with the hon. Gentleman and, as no doubt he would have expected, I have in fact sought the reasons why the referrals are over a year and what we can do to make sure that we reduce that more consistently in line with other non-referrals, which in some specialisms are only one month and three months. But I agree with him, there is certainly work to be done in that respect.

1225

Hon. D A Feetham: I am very grateful to the Hon. Minister for the candour of his answer. What about gynaecology, where that also seems to be out of sync? Gynaecology in the middle of 1230 the schedule, that six months routine referrals to all three doctors seems to be higher than all the others. Obviously it is way below orthopaedics, but still six months is a long time to wait for a referral. Does he have any answer in relation to that, why that seems to be out of sync with the rest of the waiting times?

1235 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman will have seen, there are three specialists for gynaecology and he will also have seen that next to the routine referrals there are urgent referrals. Any patient who presents with an urgent case is seen by one of these three gynaecologists between one to two days. Then, of course, any other referral which is not deemed urgent is then referred within six months. Remember that this is an average; it does not necessarily take every patient to the six months.

1240 I think it is also fair, Mr Speaker, to make the point as well that in respect of the orthopaedics department, whereas routine operations I agree are too high at 12 months, if there are any urgent referrals we are looking at between one to two weeks. So, in other words, any matter that presents as urgent will be seen by a gynaecologist between one to two days.

1245 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: If I may assist, Mr Speaker, again using my own memory of that, we are looking at six months for gynaecologists. I do recall several years ago it was between 10 and 12 months, so it is actually going down. It depends on what you compare it to, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q57-59/2017
Accident and Emergency –
Waiting times

1250 Clerk: Question 57. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide details of monthly average waiting times for people waiting to be treated at the Accident and Emergency at the hospital during the last six months?

1255 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Yes Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 58 and 59.

1260 Clerk: Question 59. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: You mean 58?

1265 Clerk: Sorry, I beg your pardon, yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide details of the longest a patient has had to wait to be treated at the Accident and Emergency department in each of the last six months?

1270 Clerk: Question 59. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: I want to thank the Hon. the Minister as well for not bunching all 20-something questions together and breaking them into these very sensible segments.

1275 Can the Government please provide details of how many patients have been placed or been admitted to the Accident and Emergency department in each of the last six months and have had to wait for over an hour before their admission to a ward within the hospital?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1280 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in respect of the last six months the information is as follows: 16th July, two hours and four minutes; 16th August, two hours and 10 minutes; 16th September, two hours and 28 minutes; 16th October, two hours and 34 minutes; 16th November, two hours and 31 minutes; 16th December, two hours and 28 minutes in respect of average waiting times.

1285 In respect of the longest waiting times: 16th July, 12 hours and 39 minutes; 16th August, 10 hours and 55 minutes; 16th September, 14 hours and 13 minutes, 16th October, 11 hours and six minutes; 16th November, 18 hours and 25 minutes; 16th December, 28 hours and six minutes.

1290 Mr Speaker, in respect of the longest a patient has had to wait to be treated at A&E it is critical to note that of the last six months the only patient who was not admitted sooner due to the lack of a bed was in December.

1295 As the House will know, the GHA experienced a surge of patients of over 75 years of age who presented with critical illnesses, and 83 out of 338 patients seen required admission. The surge in patient admissions with critical illnesses and over 75 years of age is the highest ever recorded. As a result, the very good work of the GHA to prepare for the seasonal influx faced unexpected and unforeseeable increase.

As the House will know, the Hon. and learned Chief Minister announced in his New Year message that the Dementia Residential Home will open its doors this quarter. This House will also remember that I announced an additional 24 beds for elderly residential stay. I am currently considering additional measures.

1300 Further, the Medical Director and clinical nurse managers have confirmed to me that the addition of a qualified social worker as an integral part of the bed management team, the increase of such meetings to weekly and the introduction of a rolling discharge process have vastly improved discharges and, just as importantly, the avoidance of unnecessary admissions.

1305 The preparation of individual care packages has been instrumental in achieving the highest number of bed availability in January, which is ordinarily the busiest time.

In respect of the other longest waiting time, i.e. July to November, the reasons related to other factors not connected to bed availability.

1310 In respect of patients having to wait for over an hour, the new electronic system is not currently configured to provide this report. In this respect I have asked one of the GHA's unit general managers to investigate with a system administrator the possibility of reconfiguring the current reporting system to provide the report.

1315 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just turning to Question 58, there are some very startling statistics that are emerging from the answer that the Hon. the Minister has very graciously provided: 28 hours, somebody waiting – the top waiting time, 28 hours – to be treated at Accident and Emergency. Obviously it is something that the Hon. Minister must have looked at. Does he have a reason why somebody waits 28 hours at Accident and Emergency? It is really way off the scale of what I would have thought was the highest waiting time.

1320 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, a few things. As I noted, and understandably, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has focused his supplementary on the last fact that I provided to him, which is the December statistic, but I did alight in my original answer that over the last six months, the five months before December where there were higher waiting times, the wait was not due to any lack of bed availability, it related to individual –

Hon. D A Feetham: I am not asking that.

Hon. N F Costa: No, I know that he is not asking that. I appreciate that he is focusing his supplementary just on the December fact, but he needs to understand ... I hope that he did not misunderstand my answer to mean that the person was waiting outside of A&E. What happened was that the person was in A&E on a proper bed receiving adequate medication, doctors' rounds being carried out, food and drink being provided, open visiting for relatives, shower and toilet facilities provided and all adequate nursing, so that the person was in a proper bed with proper care awaiting for admission to a ward. I hope that he does not leave the House with the image of somebody waiting outside of A&E, sat without proper care. It was simply waiting in a bed whilst the bed management team made arrangements for the person to be admitted into the ward.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, I focused on 28 hours because it is, as I said, way off the scale. But in November it is 18 hours, in October it is 14 hours and in August it is 12 hours. These are very, very high figures indeed.

The Hon. the Minister said 28 hours, yes, but the person is on a stretcher or –

1350

Hon. D A Feetham: On a bed. I beg your pardon, on a bed. But if the Hon. the Minister is saying this has absolutely nothing to do with bed availability, which is the answer that he has given me, but then he is saying to me in the same breath that that person is on a bed waiting to be sent and admitted into a ward, well the system must be failing in some very, very material way if there are beds available and yet somebody has got to wait 28 hours in Accident and Emergency.

Hon. N F Costa: Will he give way?

No, Mr Speaker, I think he misunderstood my answer to his first supplementary. I said that in respect of July to November the waiting times did not relate to a bed shortage, but that it did relate to a bed shortage in December. I hope that that is clear now.

1360

Hon. D A Feetham: I am grateful for that because I had not understood that to be the case. But what about the 18 hours that a person had to wait in November? Has the Minister enquired as to why that person had to wait 18 hours? I presume that if it is not related to admission to a ward, that is 18 hours outside waiting.

1365

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, I think it is important that I explain the situation properly because I do not want anyone listening in to Parliament to think that the statistics that I have given relate to people waiting outside of A&E. These are people who have been admitted to A&E, are on a bed and are receiving care: doctors' care, nursing care and so on. Right?

Hon. D A Feetham: Will you give way?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: The original question – and if there is any confusion it arises out of the answer, but the original question is: can the Government please provide details of the longest a patient has had to wait to be treated at Accident and Emergency? To be treated – that is the question.

1375 Hon. N F Costa: No, I am sorry – No, Mr Speaker, the question was ‘had to wait to be treated’ at A&E. Then my answers to the House are incorrect. Those answers would not be correct. They would be receiving medical care and nursing care the moment they had been admitted into A&E and would be receiving treatment then. The waiting time is between being admitted into A&E and waiting for a ward.

Hon D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that is how I understood it just a moment ago, and the question therefore still stands. I will ask the question next time round because he has not understood the question.

1385 Let me take a step back. First of all, I want to know what is the longest time that a person has had to wait at Accident and Emergency before he is treated, because the complaint from people is that they are waiting four hours before they are treated. The hon. Gentleman has provided me with these statistics. Now he is saying – (Interjection) I understand. Now he is saying to me no, that is not waiting to be treated because they are already being treated waiting to be admitted to a ward. But if they are waiting to be admitted to a ward it must be because there is a bed shortage problem. (Interjection) Well, on what basis does somebody ...? Because if that is not 1390 the case, then the system is failing very badly because I could understand that there are no beds.

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, this is why I said during the course of my original answer that from July to November the reasons did not relate to a bed and the information that has 1395 been provided to me in respect of July, August, September and October in respect of the longest waiting time relates to very individual circumstances and without making or revealing any details that may identify the person.

For example, in July there was a person who was admitted into A&E and received nursing and medical care, as a result of which the person is not eventually admitted into the ward. So it is 1400 not that there are no beds, there were beds; it is just that the doctor decided that in fact there was no reason to admit the person into a ward.

In August there was an elderly person who came in and was admitted eventually, not because there was any medical indication but because the hospital was concerned about the absence of support and proper care at home, but it was not because there was a lack of a bed. In 1405 September, once the doctor and A&E diagnosed the person they called in a psychiatrist and further to treatment at A&E again the person is not admitted. It had nothing to do with the absence of a bed.

And it could continue. The only time that it related to an absence of a bed was in December. As I explained to the hon. Gentleman, there was the highest recorded number of persons over 1410 75 years of age who presented with critical illnesses. There were around 330-odd, 83 of them were admitted and that caused an issue in December.

But I can assure him that it is not due to the concerns that he has raised, that there is awful bed management or an awful management of the system. These were individual cases that because of medical indications there were no reasons to admit those persons initially and 1415 therefore that is why they were there at A&E.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the hon. Gentleman provide me or ask his staff to provide me with details of the maximum somebody has had to wait at Accident and Emergency before being 1420 treated? That was my question.

We have been exchanging these exchanges across the floor of the House unnecessarily because this information is not the information that I wanted, helpful as the December one may be because there was a strong demand in December.

I want to know what is the longest that somebody has had to wait before being treated at Accident and Emergency. In other words, sitting there waiting. That is the problem that is 1425 constantly coming back to me, the complaints from people, and that is what I want to know. If the hon. Gentleman does not have the statistics there, will he undertake to provide me with those statistics during the next week, which should be available quite easily to the Hon. Minister?

1430 Hon. N F Costa: But, Mr Speaker, whereas I agree with him that I have misunderstood the nature of his second question and what we are talking about is people admitted to A&E to receive treatment, I have given him the answer in respect of average waiting time. The average waiting time for a person before being seen at A&E is an average of two hours.

1435 Hon. D A Feetham: Two and a half here.

Hon. N F Costa: No, it depends on the month. Two hours and four minutes. He always takes it to the edge of the worst. (Hon. D A Feetham: No.) Yes, he does! (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Yes, he does! (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) Yes, two hours and four minutes, 1440 two hours and 10 minutes, two hours and 28 minutes, two hours and 34 minutes. It is – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Yes, but it is also close as well to two hours. So persons waiting to be seen at A&E will wait around two hours and I think it is fair to say that I think that A&E department should certainly be congratulated if Gibraltarians are able to attend A&E and are seen within two hours. (Banging on desks)

1445 Hon. D A Feetham: I certainly congratulate the staff at Accident and Emergency who work under very, very difficult circumstances, including under a system that is not fit for purpose, (Interjections) and I do wholeheartedly congratulate staff for that.

1450 But the question that I asked, Mr Speaker, was will the hon. Gentleman undertake, bearing in mind that he has not misunderstood this question that asks for –

Mr Speaker: Does the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition continue to have to repeat? Because I have understood what your question is – 1455 Hon. D A Feetham: But he hasn't.

Mr Speaker: – and I think the Minister, from the reply that he has given, has understood what you are after. It is established. I think we all understand what you are after. You cannot get the information today. You have asked whether you can get it within seven days. Surely you do 1460 not have to repeat the question.

Hon. D A Feetham: But he has not told me that I can get it within seven days – that is the point.

1465 Mr Speaker: But that is what you have asked.

Hon. D A Feetham: Of course I have, and that is why I am asking him again – because he has not told me, he has not committed himself to providing the information.

1470 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has said something during the course of what was clearly a speech and not actually a question, which the Government does not agree with and we will take issue with repeatedly if he decides that he wants to say it again. That is that the system of accident and emergency that is in place in Gibraltar is not fit for purpose. The Government believes that the system –

1475 Mr Speaker: I am not going to allow ... I will allow the Chief Minister to reply to that point but I am not going to allow here today a debate on whether it is fit for purpose or not. I will give the Chief Minister the opportunity to reply to that, and that is it – we do not deal anymore with that issue.

Hon. D A Feetham: But you will give him the opportunity?

Mr Speaker: Of course, because you have asked – you have made the point.

Hon. D A Feetham: The Minister has –

Mr Speaker: You have made the point that it is not fit for purpose. The Chief Minister is going to answer that and I am not going to allow a debate on whether it is fit for purpose or not. That is my responsibility, surely, not to allow a debate.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

The Government stands by the professionals in the Gibraltar Health Authority, in particular those at the sharp end, the Accident and Emergency Department of St Bernard's, who do a job that is not just fit for purpose – using a system that is fit for purpose, which incidentally is not a system we introduced but is a system they introduced when they moved the hospital from old St Bernard's to new St Bernard's. It is a sterling job where there are some instances when people may have to wait longer than any of us might wish, where we have to assist them to be able to do better, but where they do a better job than most people in this room, myself included, do in the jobs that they do, with greater responsibilities because their responsibilities are life and death.

To see a local politician get up in this House and say that what they do is not fit for purpose is utterly disgraceful, Mr Speaker, and if the hon. Gentleman –

Hon. D A Feetham: A point of order, Mr Speaker!

Hon. Chief Minister: If the hon. Gentleman –

Hon D A Feetham: A point of order, Mr Speaker!

Hon. Chief Minister: If the hon. Gentleman –

Hon. D A Feetham: A point of order, Mr Speaker!

Hon. Chief Minister: If the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker –

Hon. D A Feetham: A point of order, Mr Speaker!

Mr Speaker: A point of order to you both!

Hon. D A Feetham: A point of order!

Mr Speaker: Sit down and keep your tempers, and do not stand again like that, shouting at me 'Point of order!'

1525

Hon. D A Feetham: I have –

Mr Speaker: Do not shout at me again.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, a point of order.

1530 Mr Speaker: So keep your tempers, because otherwise I will suspend the sitting, and that is the end of the matter.

Hon. D A Feetham: A point of order, Mr Speaker.

1535 Mr Speaker: Let us see if we can carry on at the temperature that we had prior to you raising the question of whether it was fit for purpose or not, and I am not going to allow any further comments on that. I am only going to allow the Hon. Minister to reply on whether he can have the information available within seven days or what the period might be, and then we are going to move on.

1540 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: If hon. Members carry on in this way, if they carry on in the way that has been established in the last five minutes, I will suspend this sitting. So grow up and behave like what you are, representatives of the people of Gibraltar, and not like children in a playground!

1545 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is a grown-up discussion about the most important thing affecting our community: the Health Services. I am going to finish the sentence I was embarked upon, which is to say that if the hon. Gentleman believes what he is saying, he should better inform himself by perhaps looking at what the criteria in the United Kingdom is for people to be treated at accident and emergency departments, where the time where people are expected to be seen, in keeping with the instructions of the British government, is four hours and in the United Kingdom they do not hit that average. Here in Gibraltar he has seen today that the excellent people who care for our community at Accident and Emergency manage to do that in half the time, Mr Speaker, in two hours, and he needs to put his comments in that context.

1555 Hon. D A Feetham: Is Mr Speaker going to hear my point of order, or is Mr Speaker just simply going to allow –?

1560 Mr Speaker: No. What is your point?

Hon. D A Feetham: My point of order is he has completely mischaracterised what I said and he is not entitled to do that, Mr Speaker. I did not say that the work that the staff did at Accident and Emergency was not fit for purpose; I said the system was not fit for purpose, and Mr Speaker, who was listening to the debate, must agree with that because it is in Hansard.

Mr Speaker: I understood that perfectly well –

1570 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: – but the point that you were making was that the system was not fit for purpose. I allowed the Chief Minister an opportunity to reply because this is an issue of great public interest. Anyone who puts the news on in the UK knows that the NHS is the subject of daily comment and it is going to become like that in Gibraltar, as I can see.

1575 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman –

Mr Speaker: So I am giving the Chief Minister the opportunity to deal with whether the system is fit for purpose, to answer that, but then I am not allowing a debate.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has made a point of order and I intend to reply to the point of order before you determine how to rule on it.

1585 The hon. Gentleman said the system is not fit for purpose. Well, Mr Speaker, they implemented the system and the people who run the system are the people who are subject to the criticism that he makes. He cannot get away with trying to divide the people who administer the system that they introduced and the effects of that system, because it would be politically hypocritical to say 'I am not criticising you, I am criticising what you are doing and the way that you do it.' Mr Speaker, anybody will see through that, and that is why he has got the response that he has got.

Mr Speaker: Now the Hon. Neil Costa on the issue of the information that the Leader of the Opposition is asking for.

1595 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman can ask me the question at the next session of the House and I will be happy to provide it to him.

Mr Speaker: Don't speak to yourself, speak to the ...

1600 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I will be happy to provide the information to the hon. Gentleman when he asks.

Mr Speaker: Right, we move on to the next question.

Q60-61/2017

St Bernard's Hospital operations – Waiting times and number of cancellations

Clerk: Question 60. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1605 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide details of average waiting times at St Bernard's Hospital for all operations during each of the last six months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1610 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 61.

Clerk: Question 61. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1615 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please state how many cancellations of operations there have been at St Bernard's Hospital in each of the last six months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1620 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the information is available on the Gibraltar Government website.

Mr Speaker: Was it available at the time that the questions were ...? Very well.

Q62/2017
Xanit Hospital –
Number of in-patients receiving treatment

1625

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide details of the monthly number of in-patients being treated at Xanit Hospital in Spain for each of the last six months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1630

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in respect of the last six months, the information is as follows. Xanit in-patient admissions: July, 71; August, 74; September, 79; October, 79; November, 93; December, 83.

1635

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, these are very, very high numbers. I cannot calculate on my feet the actual proportion in terms of the proportion of beds at St Bernard's Hospital, but it must be a very significant proportion when viewed in terms of overall beds at St Bernard's Hospital. Does the Government and the Minister have an explanation about why there are such high levels of in-patient admittance to Xanit Hospital?

1640

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the explanation provided to me are that instead of sending patients to the UK, as they would have been sent, clinicians have decided to send these patients to Xanit instead, not just because of the specialisms that they offer but of course because they provide convenience to the patient and to the family members. As opposed to having to get on a plane and go to the UK they can just drive up to Xanit.

1645

Hon. D A Feetham: So is the Hon. Minister saying that these are all in respect of patients that would have otherwise been sent to the United Kingdom? So we are talking about, for example, cancer patients or patients who require very specialist operations, who would normally have been sent to the United Kingdom?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, it goes further than that. This is a decision that we all took together in Government and it is important that the community understand it.

At the time that the GSD were in government, Bernard Linares led on an issue where I think he was absolutely right, where he said that there were some in our community who would benefit from not having to go to the United Kingdom for care but being able to go to Spanish hospitals for care, in particular those who might have been more elderly and who wished to have their families around them whilst they receive care. This concept was introduced of people going into Spain if they wished to or if the clinician thought there was better care there. They were closer to Gibraltar and the whole family was able to visit while they were suffering their illnesses.

As austerity started to bite in Spain the GHA found that the care that was afforded to Gibraltar patients in the Spanish public health system was suffering considerably. The matter was brought to the Cabinet's attention and the Cabinet made a decision that, if necessary and in certain disciplines in particular, we would ensure that we sent Gibraltar patients to Spanish hospitals only when we were satisfied that the care that they would have would be the care of the standard that we wished Gibraltarians to have.

1665

In those circumstances the numbers that hon. Members are seeing are the pooling of numbers first of those who are choosing not to go to the UK, those who are referred to Spain because that is the better clinical decision, and all of those who would have been all over Andalucía in different hospitals – in the hospital in Cádiz, in the hospital in Malaga, in all of those

1675 other areas – except for specific disciplines where we would still send people to some public health hospitals in Spain ... are now at one particular private hospital in Spain. This is a private hospital within driving distance of Gibraltar where relatives are able to visit, because people choose to be treated in Spain or it is better to treat them in this hospital, and it is a Rolls Royce service, which we all agreed we should provide, given how austerity was biting in the public healthcare system in Spain.

1680 That is not to say that when we sent people to the public healthcare system in Spain we did not pay for it. Of course we did pay for it, but we paid for it in a different way. Xanit is a private hospital that invoices direct. The public health hospitals in Spain would invoice for Gibraltarian patients through the United Kingdom and the European Union on a reconciliation involving the E111 and those rights, and so the numbers would have been seen in a different way.

1685 But that is the way that these numbers are determined and it is something which I think our community can be justly proud of, that as austerity bit in the Spanish public health system we were able and right to send our people to the Spanish private system, where possible, in a further development or evolution of the policy introduced by Minister Linares – Minister Bernard Linares – when he was on this side of the House.

1690 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it follows from that answer that none of these numbers actually relate to services that were previously provided from St Bernard's Hospital that over recent times are now being effectively services rendered by Xanit Hospital. These are all services that have always been dealt with through UK hospitals or other hospitals and not from Gibraltar.

1695 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, if I might just comment, I have no recent information. In my time there were rare occasions in which there was an emergency where, for reasons of perhaps the theatre being in use and so on, in order not to delay it they may have been sent to Xanit, but those were exceptional and only in order to assist a patient who for some unique reason could not receive the treatment they would have otherwise received here. But as I say, those would have been very, very rare and I have no knowledge of the present situation, but if somebody came in with an urgent condition and for some reason or another it could not be done here, then rather than make them wait they would have been sent over. Pero, as I say ... Sorry. But, as I say, on the fingers of one –

1705 A Member: Bilingualism!

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Bilingualism, yes.

1710 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, yes, in addition to what the Hon. Dr John Cortes said, in explanations with clinicians it was explained to me that Xanit provides a variety of specialised tertiary care services which cannot be provided in Gibraltar, which cannot be provided in Gibraltar. The main tertiary care provided by Xanit are cardiology, cardiovascular, neurosurgery, neurology, nephrology and oncology.

1715 Hon. E J Phillips: Just picking up on the last answer to the question in relation to tertiary care, is it not the case though that when we look at healthcare and developing our healthcare system and the facilities at the hospital that the Government would undertake a cost-benefit analysis of how we bring back those services or introduce those services within our health authority? I appreciate it is a very, very careful balance, given the fact that we are spending huge sums of money on the Health Service, but has the Government conducted that cost-benefit analysis in respect of bringing those services to Gibraltar and providing them here? Obviously we spend a lot of money, millions of pounds, sending patients to Xanit, and I appreciate that the Government's view is to have a Rolls Royce service, but has the Government at least conducted

1725 that process to see whether we can offer those services within a particular budget? I am grateful.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman asks me a question on what is a huge, huge subject. I think the hon. Gentleman will recall that my hon. colleague Dr John Cortes did, in fact, during the course of his tenure repatriate many services to Gibraltar – chemotherapy, if I recall correctly, being the last one, (Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes.) but a dermatology service as well during 1730 the first few years, and other services. I myself have, very recently after being made Minister for Health, asked for certain specialisms that could be provided in Gibraltar and have asked for that cost-benefit analysis.

In respect of the patients we have sent to Xanit that we would have sent to the UK, my 1735 information and my explanations are that we are in fact saving money when we do send a patient, who would ordinarily be sent to the UK, to Xanit for, as I said tertiary care that is not provided in Gibraltar. But the hon. Gentleman asked me the right question. There certainly has to be a cost-benefit analysis on whether these specialisms could be carried out in Gibraltar and whether it is possible to have, for example ... The hon. Gentleman will know that neurosurgery is 1740 a very specialised field and in order for a neurosurgeon to be able to continue practising, his license must be kept up to date with skills. It may not be possible for a neurosurgeon to be based in Gibraltar, because he may have maybe one or two operations during the course of the year and that would, in effect, de-skill him and he would not be able to operate anymore. So the question arises as to whether we can have neurosurgeons visiting the GHA and whether having a 1745 visiting team of neurosurgeons would in fact mean more cost effective than sending every patient to Xanit, and that is an analysis that he is right to flag because it is being conducted.

Hon. E J Phillips: I am grateful for the response, and in fact I would have expected that process to be underway. But if you look at cardiology, for example, one could argue that if we 1750 had a team of two cardiologists here rather than spending the millions that we do spend on Xanit ... I am sure the Government is looking at this and I am grateful that the Government will obviously commit to informing us that that process is underway and there will be a conclusion as to whether bringing cardiologists here rather than sending patients to Xanit, but clearly I think, I respectfully ask for your view on this as to whether we should develop the Health Service in that 1755 way in the future.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, without going into each individual specialism but to limit the discussion to the question that the hon. Gentleman has asked me, cardiology is in fact one of the specialisms that I have discussed, and the issue that arises is whether there would be able to 1760 be somebody based in Gibraltar, given the number of patients who would require that kind of surgery, and that whether it would even be feasible to have a visiting consultant, because of course the visiting consultant may not come at the most opportune time for the patient requiring the surgery. So even with the best will in the world in having a visiting consultant for cardiology, it may not be possible for that surgeon to operate because for medical/clinical 1765 reasons we may have had to have sent that patient to Xanit or the UK before the visiting consultant does visit. So it is not as straightforward as just a cost-benefit analysis, although I agree that a cost-benefit analysis is one of the strands that is being considered.

Q63-66/2017
St Bernard's Hospital –
Number of patients by ward; bed occupancy; additional beds

Clerk: Question 63. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide details of the monthly number of patients in each ward at St Bernard's Hospital for each of the last six months?

1775 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 64, 65 and 66.

1780 Clerk: Question 64. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide details of monthly average bed occupancy levels at St Bernard's Hospital for each of the last six months?

1785 Clerk: Question 65. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government confirm how many additional beds have been added to wards in the last two months in order to cater for patient admissions at the hospital?

1790 Clerk: Question 66. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government confirm that the GHA has placed beds in the hospital gym in case it needs extra beds for admissions?

1795 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1800 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in respect of the last six months I hand over to the hon. Gentleman the schedule with the information he requested, detailing the monthly number of patients in each ward at St Bernard's Hospital. I would also like to note that at the time of drafting the answer to the question, we currently have the highest number of bed availability recorded for the month of January. (Banging on desk)

1805 In respect of the last six months the average bed occupancy levels were as follows: July, 105.5%; August, 105%; September, 105.5%; October, 100.6%; November, 102%; December, 107%. However, it bears pointing out to the House that had the previous administration kept to the same level of beds as at 2004 when the old St Bernard's Hospital was moved to the new St Bernard's Hospital, the average bed occupancy would have been as follows: July, 98%; August, 95%; September, 99%; October, 96%; November, 98%; December, 98%. It is therefore incontrovertible and indisputable that as we on this side of the House noted from the Opposition benches on numerous occasions at that time, it was indeed a grave mistake to ignore 1810 clinicians' advice to maintain the same number of beds.

Further, Mr Speaker, in total four additional beds have been added to two wards in the last two months.

1815 The Gibraltar Health Authority has temporarily refurbished and commissioned the cardiac rehabilitation gym into a seven-bed ward and this has been operational since Monday, 9th January. To date, seven patients have been transferred. Mr Speaker, it should have been added in the answer to the question that it relates to elderly residential care in the cardiac rehabilitation gym.

1820 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman provided the bed occupancy rates in answer to Question 64, and I will be corrected if I am wrong but the answer for December was 107%.

1825 Bearing in mind what the hon. Gentleman has been at pains to say, both publicly and indeed in our earlier exchanges to this House, has been that there was a surge in bed demand in December, this does not actually bear that out – perhaps there is an explanation – because when you look at these statistics, in July it is 105%, the next month it is 105%, then again 105%, then 106%, then 102% and then 107%. That is actually just 2% higher than in the first three months of those six months and only 1% higher than 106%. So how –

1830 Mr Speaker: It is not 106%; it 100.6%.

Hon. D A Feetham: Oh, sorry, I beg your pardon.

Mr Speaker: October, 100.6%.

1835 Hon. D A Feetham: Just so that I get this right, is it 105% or 100.5%? My understanding was it was 105%, 105%, 105%, then 100.6%, then 102%, and then 107%. That is correct. They do not appear to indicate that there is a huge surge in bed demand for December. Indeed, if you look at the six months prior to this period you are looking at a range between 103% to 111%, so it is actually even greater prior to these six months. Yes. You can have a look at it in the statistics 1840 provided to the GHA report, which provided statistics right up to the month just before I have asked in this House. That is a range of 103% to 111%. It is in press release exchanges that I have had with the hon. Gentleman in recent weeks. That does not indicate that there has been a huge surge in demand in December, and I just wonder whether the hon. Gentleman can comment on that and explain those statistics.

1845 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is right in saying that I had noted that there was a surge in admissions. That is the information that has been provided to me by A&E and the clinicians, that they had the highest number of elderly patients of 75 years of age or older presenting for critical illnesses, which happened in December of this year.

1850 Hon. D A Feetham: But Mr Speaker, how does the hon. Gentleman reconcile that with the fact that earlier than these six months there was 111%. I think it was in June or May of 2016 that it was 111%, and that is actually higher than the 107%. It is just simply that the statistics do not

1855 appear to indicate that there has been a massive surge of beds in December, bearing in mind the bed occupancy levels of 107%, which is just barely over the other figures that he has provided me for these six months and lower than the ones for the six months before that.

1860 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman I do not think is putting into his analysis the fact that I noted to him that over the past few weeks since I was made Minister for Health there has been an increase in the discharge process. We have included a qualified social worker as part of the bed management team. There used to be a meeting of the bed management every two weeks; now bed management meets much more frequently. There are now the possibility of care packages. So a person being admitted will not necessarily stay for as long as they would 1865 have in the past, because there is now a qualified social worker who is able, with the bed management team, to be able to decide on a rolling basis whether a patient could be admitted with a care package. So that is what I think he is not factoring into the question that he is asking me.

1870 Hon. D A Feetham: I am afraid I still do not understand it, but I will move on because we are talking about bed occupancy rates and that is the question, and the bed occupancy rates appear to be fairly static over the last six months with just an increase of 2% in December.

But am I right to also say this – and I will ask the hon. Gentleman to comment on this – that not only have we had four extra beds in wards and seven beds that are being used in the physiotherapy gym that are now being used as an extra small ward, but also there have been 1875 extra beds that have been created at Mount Alvernia, so presumably there have been people who have been decanted from the hospital to Mount Alvernia but still there has been a need for all these measures that have been introduced by the Government?

1880 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, to be clear, what I said in my answer to his question was that there has been a total of four additional beds, two in one ward and two in another – (Interjection) that is right – so it is four plus seven; and as I have also said, the refurbishment and the cardiac rehabilitation gym is a seven-bed ward for elderly residential services. (Interjection) Yes.

1885 Hon. D A Feetham: So we are talking about long-term elderly are being placed in the gym, thus releasing seven extra beds elsewhere in order to be able to treat patients.

But am I right as well that, in addition, the opening of the beds at Mount Alvernia has also been effective, it has started, so there have been patients who have been moved out of the hospital into Mount Alvernia? No?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker. I think that the hon. Gentleman – (Interjection) What I announced in the press release was that the Government will be adding 24 additional beds at Mount Alvernia.

1895 The whole idea, of course, as I noted to Mr Clinton during the course of the debate, was that we need to move to a position where we have 24-hour care for elderly persons at the appropriate elderly residential units, so that you have one entity that takes care of elderly persons, whether with dementia or not, and there is proper nursing care in that entity, and that we also need to move at the same time at making sure that the hospital in fact remains a hospital for pre and post-operative care.

1900 So the policy of the Government is to move in that direction. So, although the GHA and the Care Agency and ERS are now integrated under my Ministry and we are looking at efficiencies and better reallocation of resources in terms of nursing, skills mix and so on, the policy of the Government is to move towards having St Bernard's Hospital as an operating hospital, which of course is the very purpose of its existence, and also having dementia and elderly residential 1905 separately.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that makes absolute sense and that is something that ought to have been done, in my respectful view, far sooner than the hon. Gentleman has sought to get to grips with it.

1910 But am I also right in saying that there have been patients who have been moved to Ocean Views since December and there has been that extra effort that has gone into trying to move elderly care patients out of the hospital, because quite rightly it is a hospital that needs to treat patients, post-operative care and also medical patients, rather than long-term elderly?

1915 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, unless memory fails me I believe that having elderly residential within the hospital was a GSD (Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Absolutely.) (A Member: No, no, no.) present which the Hon. Dr John Cortes received.

A Member: It was an old people's home.

1920 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, so I think – (Interjection) Just to set the record straight.

As I explained to him in the course of a previous answer, I think that, having spoken with the clinical nurse managers and the clinicians, in their view the most important step that we have taken over the past few weeks is having the qualified social worker based 24 hours at the hospital, because not only is a social worker able to determine whether a medically discharged person could go back to their home with their family or not, with appropriate packages of care – so therefore it makes sense that that should be done as seamlessly as possible – but also having the care worker based at the hospital, as far as they are telling me, has in fact stopped unnecessary admissions. So you have a situation at A&E where a person is being treated and the question becomes, 'Well, this person should not really be admitted into a ward because there is nothing medically wrong with this person, but we are concerned about allowing this elderly person to go home without any care,' because perhaps that person is not supported or lives alone. Having the social worker there has meant that they are able to move back home as a result of the care packages that are being provided.

1935 Hon. D A Feetham: Quite rightly I am reminded that in fact Ocean Views is not the right place to also treat long-term elderly patients, but am I right in saying that there have been patients who have been decanted from the hospital and placed in Ocean Views in order to release beds at the hospital? Elderly patients?

1940 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I sincerely, sincerely doubt it. I will certainly ask, but I sincerely doubt that would have happened because, as he rightly says, it would just not be appropriate unless, of course, it is medically indicated; but it would not be because ... What I can tell the hon. Gentleman is that I am not certain whether that has happened, but what I can assure him though is that if there has been any decanting from St Bernard's to Ocean Views it would be on a clinical decision and not because of bed management issues. That I can assure him.

1950 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just one final question. Does the Government intend to introduce any plans for domiciliary care, or greater domiciliary care, in relation to elderly patients? Part of the problem here is that of course the strategy cannot be one dimensional; it cannot just simply be Mount Alvernia when, for example, the more appropriate path for treatment or for taking care of an elderly person may actually be within somebody's home with the appropriate levels of care.

In terms of cost, I do not know what the cost is but having long-term patients, elderly care patients, blocking beds at St Bernard's Hospital must come at a considerable cost to the taxpayer in any event.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, perhaps I have not been entirely clear in my replies to the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition. The purpose of the qualified social worker being based all the time at St Bernard's Hospital is precisely to provide care packages. By care packages I meant domiciliary care, and in that respect it is important to note that the budget has gone from ... I believe we received £600,000 and we are now almost touching £3 million in terms of the domiciliary care that we provide to elderly members of our community to also include home support. So, to answer his question, yes, we are investing, I think rightly, in being able to allow medically discharged elderly people to go back home with the right care provided to them, of course at the expense of the Government.

But, Mr Speaker, if I may, we have gone beyond that. As the hon. Gentleman knows, we opened the Dementia Day Centre only last week. The Dementia Day Centre by the end of this quarter will see 90 persons who present with dementia being able to use that facility during the course of any given day. I think that the Dementia Day Centre will in fact alleviate some of the budget of the domiciliary care and home support because family members will, I think, feel very comfortable dropping off an elderly loved one during the course of the day because of the memory clinic and all the other therapeutic services that will be provided to make sure that persons who present with mild to moderate dementia are stimulated and there is as little loss as possible of cognitive function and there is as little progression as possible of the very different strands of dementia – because of course dementia is not just one disease, it covers many different diseases.

But apart from the Dementia Day Centre, in addition to the £3 million in care packages the hon. Gentleman also needs to remember that we have for the first time the John Mackintosh Wing. The John Mackintosh Wing was designed specifically and wholly with dementia patients in mind, so that you have a floor specifically designed for persons that present with dementia. And of course in addition I only recently announced the extension of Mount Alvernia to add 24 beds which would come onto stream over the next four months, and I will certainly be taking GAD's lead in that respect to make sure that the furniture that we buy, even at Mount Alvernia, should be dementia-friendly furniture, because of course an elderly person who may not initially present with dementia may, during the course of their stay in Mount Alvernia, eventually do so, and if they do then of course the right furniture and the right equipment should be available for them to make their life as pleasant and as comfortable as possible during that time.

St Bernard's bed occupancy rates – Dementia and elderly long-stay patients

Clerk: Question 67. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide details of both the numerical and percentage bed occupancy rates at St Bernard's Hospital by sufferers of dementia and elderly long-stay patients in each of the last six months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in respect of the last six months, the information the hon. Gentleman requests is as follows.

July of this year: dementia long stay 22, which represents 17%; elderly long stay 35, which represents 27%.

2000 August of this year: dementia long stay 24, which represents 18%; elderly long stay 32, which represents 25%.

September of this year: dementia long stay, 25, which represents 19%; elderly long stay 35, which represents 27%.

2005 October of this year: dementia long stay 23, which represents 18%; elderly long stay 34, which represents 26%.

November of this year: dementia long stay 26, which represents 20%; elderly long stay 33, which represents 25%.

December of this year: dementia long stay 31, which represents 24%; elderly long stay 29, which represents 22%.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, looking at again these very significant statistics, when we take into account the very large percentage of bed occupancy for dementia and also for elderly long stay is the hon. Gentleman satisfied and confident that once the dementia unit opens, which will provide I think it is 54 beds, and also with the advent of more beds at Mount Alvernia, that this very significant statistic – which at times has been over 50% by my calculation, certainly very close to 50% anyway – will be a thing of the past, hopefully, so that we can all progress to having a hospital that basically treats patients who are ill?

2015

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in respect of the dementia residential home, as the Hon. the Chief Minister announced during the course of his New Year Message, he has given his personal commitment that it will be open during the course of this quarter. That would represent 52 beds, and of course therefore the number of dementia long stay in the hospital will be catered for.

2020

But he will also remember that I said, during the course of my supplementary answer to his supplementary question, that the 24 additional beds at Mount Alvernia need to be equipped and calibrated in a way that also accounts for elderly persons who may then develop dementia or Alzheimer's, and it makes absolute sense to us that as we move forward and we add additional capacity at Mount Alvernia, or indeed official capacity for any additional dementia residential homes, that there should be equipment and furniture that caters for elderly persons by way of having furniture and equipment that is dementia friendly.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, bearing in mind again the statistics – 35, 32, 35, 34, 33, 29 – for the last six months, long-term elderly patients, can he explain why the decision, which appears to me to be a very sensible one, I have to say, to open a further 24 beds at Mount Alvernia has not been taken sooner in the five years that the hon. Gentleman has held office and has formed part of the Government?

2035

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, dementia as – 2040

Hon. D A Feetham: Long-term elderly.

Hon. N F Costa: Long-term elderly, okay. Well, in respect of long-term elderly, as the hon. Gentleman will know from reading any newspaper, that an ageing population is a fact of life in Western Europe and also in Gibraltar.

As I have told the hon. Gentleman, we will be adding 24 beds and I want the hon. Gentleman to know that that is not the only thing that is presently under consideration. That is the one project I have been able to announce because it is moving forward, but we are also not staying still in that respect but are obviously looking at additional measures that we need to take.

The numbers fluctuate between 30 to 35, so of course the capacity has to hit that level. I think it is a little bit unfair for the hon. Gentleman to suggest in his supplementary that my hon.

and formidable predecessor did not tackle the issue. (Interjection) The hon. Gentleman did incredibly good work at St Bernard's Hospital. One of the staggering statistics that I found when coming in to St Bernard's Hospital was that, for instance, in 2010 the GSD had a cancellation of elective surgeries of 20% and Minister Cortes in 2013 had elective surgery cancellations of 8%.
2055 So an incredibly vast improvement to the number of operations being conducted, and of course it was the Hon. Dr Cortes who brought in the day surgery ward, which was not something that St Bernard's had catered for before.

I think, Mr Speaker, that the Government is moving swiftly in being able to deal with the issue of elderly long stay in the hospital, and, as I have told him during the course of various 2060 answers to his various supplementaries, I am intent in making sure that the policy of the Government is moved forward so that the hospital is a hospital and that elderly residential units are just for elderly residential units.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the reason why I asked this question is they have been in 2065 power for the last five years and it only seems when this has become a political issue, in the sense that it has been raised by the Opposition, that there is a reaction by the Government to open extra beds at Mount Alvernia.

In relation to the Mount Alvernia initiative, is this something that has been in the pipeline 2070 prior to the hon. Gentleman becoming a Minister for Health with responsibility for health, or is this something that the hon. Gentleman has himself come up with as an initiative – for which, of course, I commend him greatly because it does appear to me to be a very good initiative indeed.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Of course, Mr Speaker, one is left thinking, after those 2075 remarks: if it was such a good initiative why didn't they do it in 2011, in 2010 or in all the many years that they were in Government?

Mr Speaker, what we are able to point to on behalf of the whole Government – on behalf of the current Minister for Health, on behalf of the former Minister for Health and on behalf of the former Minister for Social Services and Elderly Residential Care, Samantha Sacramento – is that we identified this issue as an issue that was one of concern upon our election and we started the 2080 process of ensuring that we provided the additional care that was necessary.

And so, in the five years that the hon. Gentleman is referring to he will have seen the increase of domiciliary care from £600,000 to just shy of £3 million that the hon. Gentleman has referred to. He will have seen the development of the old John Mackintosh Wing at the old 2085 St Bernard's Hospital, he will have seen the addition of a number of wards down at Europort Hospital which are elderly residential wards, and now he is seeing the addition of these 24 beds at Mount Alvernia. All of that incremental provision made in our time. He will have seen the bold steps that we took to ensure that the dementia residential facility was fit for purpose and which at that time – (Interjection by Hon. Miss S J Sacramento) I just said that – Minister Sacramento 2090 led on and we soon expect to be opening, and of course the additional provision of the Bella Vista daycare facility which we recently opened and other daycare provision provided down at Waterport Terraces. So all of that is what has happened in the past five years, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Members need to realise that in the time that they were in office there was no increase in the provision and in these five years there has been all of that increase in the provision and perhaps a further increase in the provision, if necessary, in the future as we continue to look at 2095 how we deal with this growing problem, which is a growing problem not just for Gibraltar but for all of Europe, but which in Gibraltar – given the numbers we have seen today, in particular the periods in which people are at our hospital etc. – is one which is probably better managed than it is in other parts of Europe. I am quite happy to commend the former Minister for Health, the current Minister for Health and in particular the former Minister for Elderly Residential Services 2100 and Social Services, Samantha Sacramento, who had specific responsibility for that, for the sterling work that they have done in the past five years and the money that we have invested in this particular area – although of course, Mr Speaker, they do like to say that we spend too much money and then urge us to spend more or ask us why we did not spend it earlier.

2105 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he still has not answered the question. Nonetheless, implicit in the answer and avoiding the question is that this is a new initiative. Therefore it begs the question: bearing in mind that nearly 50% of bed occupancy at the hospital is being occupied by either dementia or long-stay elderly patients, why hasn't the Government done something 2110 about it earlier? (Interjection) It has not prioritised the dementia unit. Five years after it first got elected into office it still has not opened, and it is only now, as a consequence of the election ... or the appointment, I beg your pardon, of the Hon. Mr Costa as Minister for Health, that there is an initiative in order to open further beds at Mount Alvernia, which would have seemed, looking at the statistics, to have been an obvious alternative to have been done earlier, which would have helped to deal with what is a very difficult situation with bed occupancy at the hospital.

Mr Speaker: I will allow one further answer to that question and then we are moving on.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, from a sedentary position I think the former Minister for Health has best expressed the answer to that, but I will develop it in this way.

2120 This is not avoiding answering a question, this is answering a question in a complex way because this is a sophisticated area and perhaps he is finding difficulty in understanding it. Let me take him through it again.

When we were elected there were closed wards at St Bernard's. Does he know that, Mr Speaker? (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: One ward.) Because he was a Minister in the 2125 Government that had the closed ward. We opened the ward at St Bernard's that was closed by them and we opened it for elderly residential services; it is called Calpe Ward.

We converted what they were doing up at John Mackintosh Wing, the old St Bernard's Hospital, and turned it into elderly residential care. He does not seem to remember that,
Mr Speaker. He was a Member in the Government, a Minister in the Government that was doing 2130 the opposite. We turned that into elderly residential care.

So, just before I carry on, let me just pause there so that he understands it and realises I am not avoiding his question but answering it in a complex and sophisticated way. Those are two facilities for elderly residential care that we added: the ward at St Bernard's and Old St Bernard's 2135 Hospital, which they were going to use for another purpose. Then we went down the route also of doing the daycare facility. That is already open, which means people do not have to go to the hospital. In addition, instead of prison cells for people with dementia, which is what they were developing up at the Old Naval Hospital, we changed the way that that was done and developed it properly with advice – in particular with advice given to the hon. Lady, who was then 2140 responsible for elderly residential care – for the new dementia residential facility, an additional thing that was done. And now we are converting also ... In addition to all of those things that had already been done to meet demand, which they had done nothing about until December 2011, we have now taken the decision to turn a wing of Mount Alvernia which they used only for administration also for these purposes in order to be the Government that has most delivered in 2145 respect of this particular area of Government under the respective Ministers who have been doing the job.

Now, Mr Speaker, why didn't we do that earlier? Well, we did not do the Mount Alvernia thing earlier ... He now is going to get a direct answer in respect of the sophisticated and complex answer I have given him, so that he better understands it, Mr Speaker. Why didn't we do that thing that we are now doing in relation to Mount Alvernia and those 24 beds earlier?
2150 Because we were doing the Calpe Ward thing earlier, because we were doing the daycare facility earlier, because we were doing the John Mackintosh facility earlier. If he looks, therefore, at the number of beds that we have added every year since we were elected, I think he will find that 2155 we have probably added in the region of 10 beds a year, if not more, since 2011. That is why we did not do it earlier: because we were doing those things. Now we are doing this and next year we might do something else, all of which it is much more than they did.

At least let us just look at that narrow bit of time when he was a Minister in the GSD Government – and, Mr Speaker, if things carry on as they are they will be the very narrow period of time in his life and the history of our community when he will ever have been a Minister.

Nurses –

Number directly employed by GHA

Clerk: Question 68. The Hon. D A Feetham.

2160

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government say how many nurses are currently employed by the GHA directly?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 69.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government say how many nurses are placed within the GHA through the services of a recruitment consultant?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

2175

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the GHA currently employs 524 nurses directly. Seventeen registered nurses are sourced through Medoc. Two nursing auxiliaries are sourced through Grand Home Care.

2180

Mr Speaker, I am sure that the hon. Gentleman opposite will be happy to hear that 20 trainees completed their induction programme last week as nursing assistants. There will be 20 pupil nurses commencing on 27th February this year, who will undertake the 18-month course that leads to registration with the Gibraltar Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors Registration Board, as well as a QCF Level 3 qualification. This group undertake work-based learning and are employed as nursing assistants.

In addition, there are currently 14 nursing assistants undergoing the enrolled nurse training course who are due to qualify at the end of February 2017. At the end of the course the enrolled nurses will acquire two qualifications: enrolled nursing and registration with the Gibraltar Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors Registration Board Qualification and Credit Framework Level 3, an internationally recognised qualification.

2190

In addition, the School of Health Studies has a pathway for enrolled nurses to become registered nurses. After successful completion of the programme an application can be made to St George's University of London at Kingston, University of London, to undertake a three-year registered nurses programme. Thus far we have two enrolled nurses doing this, who are due to qualify in September of this year.

Q70/2017
New dementia facility –
Breakdown of costs

2195 Clerk: Question 70. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government say how much the new dementia facility has cost and can they provide a breakdown of the costs?

2200 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have read the hon. Lady's question as referring to the costs of the Dementia Day Centre. The day centre has cost £5,786,801.14. A breakdown of costs is in the schedule I now hand over to the hon. Lady.

Answer to Question 70/2017

2205 Mr Speaker: Is there any supplementary arising from this schedule?

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, could I ask the Minister for Health whether he is satisfied that they stuck to budget in general?

2210 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am afraid I do not know the answer to the hon. Lady's question, but I will ask and I will write to her.

2215 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, are these all the total costs of the dementia facility, both including the costs that were incurred when we were in Government and the cost post when they have been in Government? Is this the total cost of the dementia facility? That is the question?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will know that the Dementia Day Centre was a GSLP Liberal administration commitment. It was not – 2220 Hon. D A Feetham: It is just the day centre?

Hon. N F Costa: It is just the day centre.

2225 Hon D A Feetham: It is just that the question said the 'new dementia facility'.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, okay, my mistake.

Hon. D A Feetham: Oh, right, okay, 'new dementia' as in the day centre.

2230 Hon. N F Costa: No. I did say in my answer: 'I have read the hon. Lady's question as referring to the costs of the dementia day centre.'

2235 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am sorry, I do not want to sound nit-picking but I have added the amounts that have been provided in the schedule and it is £1.5 million out. Is there anything that the Minister could enlighten us regarding this, please? One million ... No, I am sorry, I stand to be corrected.

Mr Speaker: You pressed the correct keys?

2240 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Yes.

Mr Speaker: Check again.

2245 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: No, I think it is actually okay. I forgot to add the bottom ... No, I think it is fine.

Can I ask what 'provisional sums' refers to?

2250 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am going to read her exactly what has been provided to me. The preliminaries provide a description of a project that allows the contractor to price costs which, whilst they do not form part of any of the package of works required by the contract, are required by the method and circumstances of delivering the works. In this project they comprise predominantly of the following: GJBS site management and supervision; temporary accommodation, site cabins and welfare; temporary power and electric for both the site accommodation and works; scaffolding, external and internal; plant and equipment such as tower crane and mobile crane; office equipment such as computers, phones and fax lines;

2255 security measures, hoarding and fencing.

2260 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may. Studying the schedule myself, I notice the variations amount to about what would have been 18% of the original contract. Can the Minister advise the House: was there anything special in the variations that caused what seems to be a large variation number of about 18%?

2265 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I did ask exactly that question but it has not been provided to me in my supplementary information, so I commit to writing to him when I go back to the office. I apologise for that.

Mr Speaker: Any other questions?

Q71/2017
Mental health crisis line –
Progress

Clerk: Question 71. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

2275 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Minister for Health state whether there has been any progress for the setting up of a 24-hour crisis line to man and care for emergency mental health issues as per the mental health motion of the November sitting of Parliament?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

2280 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the GHA currently have an out-of-hours service. Mental welfare officers are available at any time to offer advice and support to persons over the phone when required. They will physically attend to a person in cases where they consider this necessary and are responsible to contact the on-call psychiatrist for any emergencies.

2285 In addition to this, as the hon. Lady knows, we are currently exploring a number of possible options in an endeavour to find a tailor-made solution fit for Gibraltar's needs. It is important to note that this is of course a serious undertaking, and as a consequence it is vital to take the necessary time to ensure that ultimately the proposed service is fit for purpose and staff are trained by suitably trained personnel.

2290 To date, the Community Mental Health team have met with one local charitable organisation and are making enquiries with established UK providers in order to be able to be in a position to make an informed decision.

2295 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for that answer. I appreciate that there is an ongoing conversation about this and that they are trying to find ways, but can we have a deadline by which the Minister can commit to this motion, which we all agreed on and I think is very urgent in the sense that the sooner we can have this designated line the sooner we could potentially be saving lives. So I would like to commit the Minister to some sort of deadline for this to happen.

2300 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as the House will recall, the hon. Lady and I agreed that this is a vitally important service. I cannot today give a commitment as to the date by which I expect this crisis line to be up and running because it is still not in a position where I can say with any reasonable certainty by when everything will be in place. But if the hon. Lady were to ask me in the next session of Parliament again, I will make sure that by then I will try my hardest to be able to give her a reasonably realistic estimate of by when the crisis line will be up and running.

CHIEF MINISTER

Q90-91/2017

Chinese investors – Benefits for Gibraltar realised thus far

2305 Clerk: We now move to questions to the Chief Minister. We commence with Question 90. The questioner is the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Government say what technology for local improvements to the environment have been brought to Gibraltar by the Hong Kong company Good Resources Holding Ltd since the Government's announcement on 21st January last year?
2310

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question 91.
2315

Clerk: Question 91. The Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, has the partnership with Chinese investors claimed by the Chief Minister in a press release in January of last year been formalised in any way and what fruits has that partnership borne for Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the partnership is not claimed, it is actual. We are in the process of finalising various arrangements in myriad fields, including opportunities which can be environmentally beneficial. Announcements will be made when appropriate.
2325

Clerk: Question 92. The Hon. R M Clinton.

2330 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I realise there may be commercial sensitivities here, but if the Chief Minister could perhaps give a little flavour of what these myriad deals are. Are we still talking about primarily LED, which was the initial purpose of the press release last year; or have we moved into other areas? Is LED still part of that deal?

2335 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it includes other areas too.

Q92/2017

Leasing of Government vehicle fleet – Expressions of interest

Clerk: Question 92. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how many expressions of interest were received on the submission deadline of 22nd December 2016 in respect of leasing of its entire vehicle fleet, comprising over 400 vehicles, motorcycles and 90 specialist vehicles?
2340

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2345 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, one expression of interest was received and it is currently being technically assessed.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his answer. Could he advise the House when he will be in a position to advise the name of the ... well, if he goes ahead with the tender, when he would expect to make a decision?

2350 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not able to give the House any indication which is binding, but I would have thought that we would have made up our minds in the next six months at most.

2355 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Hon. the Chief Minister have an explanation as to why there has been just simply one expression of interest?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker: because only one was received.

2360 Hon. D A Feetham: Is this Bassadone Motors, by any chance?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I cannot tell him exactly who it is because I have not been told, but I have been told that one has been received, which is what the question asks.

Q93/2017

Political election manifestos –

Removal from Government websites on calling of General or by-election

2365 Clerk: Question 93. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would the Government agree that under the conventions of purdah any political election manifestos currently uploaded to any Government or Government authority or agency websites will have to be immediately removed upon the calling of a general or by-election?

2370 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, no, sir.

Q94/2017

Public service vacancies –

Number and details

2375 Clerk: Question 94. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, further to answers provided to Questions 931 and 932/2016, is the Government now in a position to provide answers to those questions?

2380 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, sir. The information is attached as the schedule I am providing to the hon. Gentleman.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 94

As at the end of November 2016 there were 135 vacancies across the Civil Service.

Employees temporarily promoted within the Civil Service as at end of November 2016.

2385 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, this particular schedule just simply provides ... Well, in fact, at the first line it says at the end of November 2016 there were 135 vacancies across the Civil Service. I thought my original question also asked about the GDC, but I will be corrected if I am wrong. (Interjection) I have not brought it with me because I thought there was going to be no dispute in relation to the answers. I just took it at face value that he would be providing the answer to the question next time round.

2390 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government takes the view that the GDC is a provider of labour, not that there are vacancies necessarily within the GDC. He will know that from the way that we have answered questions in the past five years. The recognised manning level vacancies are in the Civil Service. That is why he has got that number and that is why he has got the breakdown that he has got in respect of acting within the temporary promotions in the Civil Service.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is the hon. Gentleman saying that the Government will not provide the number of vacancies in the public service as a whole, which I always understood to mean not only the Civil Service but also inclusive of the GDC? And if I am not mistaken, in fact, my question actually extended further than that, to authorities and Government owned companies. Is it the position of the Government that they will not provide that information in relation to vacancies across the public service?

2400

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, the position of the Government is that the recognised manning level and the recognised posts are only in the Civil Service, not in the agencies or the authorities or indeed in the Gibraltar Development Corporation, which do not have a recognised manning level and do not have recognised posts. There is therefore no entitlement to see a vacancy as something that will be filled by the Government in that context, and it is only in the Civil Service that we provide that. This has been established in the past five years in the way that

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, there are vacancies within the GDC that come out and are filled. In public authorities there are vacancies that come out and are filled. In Government-owned companies there are vacancies that come out and are filled. All those areas are within 2415 the responsibility of the Government, so I do not understand on what basis the Government is not willing to provide that information.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, when there is a need for a job to be done in an agency, an authority or in the GDC and there is not somebody already available to do that post or that work, then a vacancy is advertised. Just because somebody leaves a post in one of those three types of labour providers for the Government, it does not mean that there is immediately a vacancy or that the Government intends to fill it. In the Civil Service it is different: we are committed to a manning level and therefore when somebody leaves the Civil Service there is definitely a vacancy, because there is a commitment in respect of the manning level.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, within the GDC – and we are talking about very often within the same department civil servants working side by side with GDC employees – GDC employees retire. Then the Government has traditionally advertised those posts. I still do not see the reason why the Government cannot tell me how many vacancies there are within the GDC or within Government-owned companies or within public authorities.

2430 Quite frankly, what he is telling me just does not stack up, unless of course he is saying now ‘the Government is not willing to provide you with that information’. Okay, fine, I cannot go behind that, because he has taken that position across a plethora of areas, not just, as he appears to, in this area.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not true that we have taken that attitude in a plethora of areas; neither is that what I am telling him. I am answering the question that he has asked in respect of the thing that he has asked, which is vacancies.

2440 He needs to understand the things that he is saying about the GDC. When the GSLP left Government in 1996 there were seven employees of the GDC. When we took over again there were well over a hundred, if not more, employees of the GDC. So when he talks about people working side by side between the GDC and the Civil Service, that is the policy that they had when they were here, it was not the policy of the GSLP Liberals. The policy of the GSLP Liberals in relation to the GDC is that it is a workforce and labour provider now to the Government. It is a hugely important part of the labour that the Government has at its disposal and it is also flexible in the way that it provides that labour, and part of that flexibility is that when somebody retires from the GDC their post is not necessarily going to be filled or it is not necessarily going to be filled in a way that produces a vacancy in the context of the GDC.

2450 He has asked for vacancies. We have given him the area where there are vacancies. In other words, in the Civil Service when someone goes they will be replaced, and that is why there are 135 vacancies. If there are good reasons in relation to efficiency why they should not be replaced and that is agreeable to the unions and to the Government and to the administration, well then so be it.

2455 Mr Speaker, that is the information I am giving him. He is getting the information that he is asking for. Maybe he just does not realise that the way we have been giving him the information in the past five years and the things that we have repeatedly explained are as relevant to this question as they are to some others.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, Mr Speaker. The question ... I have got it in front of me: how many vacancies were there across the public service inclusive of Government-owned companies and public authorities as at the end of November 2016?

2465 Now in the past he has provided me – and I can demonstrate that and I will go back and demonstrate it that he has provided me with information in relation to the GDC which is an integral part of the public service. Now he does not want to provide it to me. Is it the case that he does not want to provide me with that information because he has spent so much money that he is now envisaging cuts within the public service, Mr Speaker?

Mr Speaker: No, that ... he does not have to answer that question.

2470 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is a direct question. It is a direct question which he knows the answer to, Mr Speaker.

We have spent a lot of money investing in our community. We have spent a lot of money creating jobs. We have spent a lot of money doing the things that he now seems to be urging us to do more, like opening wards for the elderly at the John Mackintosh Wing, at the Calpe Ward, the new dementia residential facility which is going to open soon, the dementia day facility. We have opened schools, we have opened a university and we have employed more civil servants. We have done all of the things which it was absolutely right to do and invest in our community to do, and we are able to do more because the public finances of Gibraltar are strong, they are ready to face any challenge that we may come across, and if we feel that we need to employ more people we would employ more people.

2480 I am answering his question. His question has resulted in this answer because that is the way that the Government looks at vacancies. I can point him in the direction of other answers we have given in the past which direct him towards having to understand that the manning level that the Government is committed to is the manning level of the Civil Service. The GDC is a hugely important part of the way that the Government runs its administration. The people of the GDC are an important part of what we do. They know that their future is safe with this Government.

2490 There is no question of us having any issue whatsoever with spending money. The only people who have expressed any issue with spending money in the context of this House has been them. They are the ones who spent when they were in Government and now talk about not spending when they are in Opposition. The Government's position will be consistent, and that prudence will not affect anybody's livelihood or anybody's jobs being replaced where they need to be replaced.

2495 It is quite something that those who seem to be arguing only for one thing, and that is austerity, are the ones pushing us to do more in areas where spending is required, and the fact is, Mr Speaker, if you look at their track record, theirs is a track record of increasing spending when they were in Government.

2500 Finally, I would say this. I was not surprised to see what the hon. Gentleman said in his New Year's message in relation to spending, for a simple reason: it is exactly the same thing he has been saying for the past four years. He has not changed his message. He has been saying for four years we are about to be bankrupt. Every year, Gibraltar does better. Every year that he keeps crying wolf the only people he is helping are Gibraltar's enemies.

2505 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one supplementary question. Can the Chief Minister confirm, in relation to the Senior Education Advisor who has now temporarily been promoted – I assume that is Mr Grech who has been promoted to Director of Education – what has happened to Dr Britto?

2510 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, in terms of that nobody has heard from him, or something like that? He is himself temporarily promoted to Senior Administrator at No. 6 Convent Place.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have gone back and, in actual fact, I asked the question of vacancies in September, and in September there were 177.5 vacancies: 101 vacancies in the Civil Service and 76.5 in the rest of the public service. That is the information he gave me in September.

2515 Is there a reason why he is now changing his position, and he provided me with that information in September and now he only provides me with information in relation to the Civil Service and not the rest of the public service?

2520 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have given him my answer, I do not have the benefit of being able to go back, as he has, because I am on my feet providing the answer. If he wants to pursue this line of questioning at the next House I will look forward to having the discussion then in Questions and Answers, but the position is as I have set out.

Mr Speaker: That is the end of Question Time.

Questions for Written Answer

2525 Clerk: Answers to Written Questions. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to table the answers to Written Questions W1 to W7/2017 inclusive.

Q95/2017

Upper Promenade steps – Plans to install gates

Clerk: (vi) Reports of Committees; (vii) Answers to Oral Questions.
We commence with Question 95, the Hon. L F Llamas.

20

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, does the Government intend to install gates at the top of the steps of the recently refurbished Wellington Front Upper Promenade, leading towards the Lower Promenade and also at the top of the steps of the Upper Promenade leading on to Line Wall Road?

25

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, no, sir.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, could I ask the Hon. Minister to perhaps review the steps, particularly the ones leading to the Lower Promenade because they are quite steep? I think that given it is a play area where people will be playing with children and so on, it could lead to an accident in the future. Perhaps they could consider placing a gate at least on the steep steps at the top.

35

Hon. S E Linares: Well, Mr Speaker, no one from the Health and Safety Department or anybody has advised me that they are steep. They might be steep but these have been there for nearly 300 years and no considerable accident has happened since.

40

So I do not see why there should be a gate there. The hon. Member must remember that this is supposed to be an open space where people walk through and use the amenity. By putting a gate, it seems as if you have to close the whole area which has recently been refurbished. So I do not agree with the hon. Member in his suggestion.

Q96/2017

Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority – Assistant Resources Manager vacancy

45

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, sir. Following on from answers provided to Question 1/2017, can the Minister for Sport update this House in respect of the Assistant Resources Manager (Grade 4) vacancy within the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority?

50

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the position remains vacant, but management of the GSLA have initiated the internal recruitment process.

Hon. E J Reyes: Does that include that interviews have taken place or a date has been set for the interviews to take place?

60

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the vacancies were announced internally and as I understand it, there have been two applicants. Therefore the process of interviewing will commence.

Q97/2017

Victoria Stadium and Bayside Sports Complex – Maintenance of floodlights

65

Hon. E J Reyes: Further to the answer provided to Question 4/2017, can the Minister for Sport say when the last quarterly maintenance checks were carried out in respect of the floodlights at all the facilities situated at the Victoria Stadium and Bayside Sports Complex, together with any details if there was a need for call out services for emergencies and/or ad hoc repairs/replacements?

70

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the last quarterly maintenance checks at the Victoria Stadium and the Bayside Sports Complex were conducted in November 2016.

In addition, a number of floodlight fittings were replaced on Pitch No. 2 and Pitches 3 and 4 in early December 2016.

Given that these are quarterly and I am taking it that they are calendar quarterly, does the Minister have any information when the next quarterly check is due? Technically I know three months has elapsed, but if it is within a quarter or whatever, he could enlighten us with that.

85

Hon. S E Linares: Well yes, Mr Speaker, as I understand it these fittings were put in place on Pitches 3 and 4 and they were replaced. Three have failed in total in both facilities and the GSLA are currently dealing with the local contractors to determine the exact reason for this and to have these replaced as soon as possible.

Therefore, my deduction is that they are on constantly. Even though they are checked quarterly, whenever things happen, as I told the hon. Member last time, people are on call, so when anything fails they react straight away and he is right that the next general quarterly would happen within the next three months.

I am sure they are doing it even as we speak, because if things do fail, then they check it again. So the quarterly checks are done just in case they are not failing, so they are checked that they do not fail in the future but they are currently being looked at, especially, like I said, Pitches 3 and 4.

Q98/2017

Gibraltar Football Association – International matches at Victoria Stadium

Clerk: Question 98, the Hon. E J Reyes.

100 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sport provide updated information in respect of the Gibraltar Football Association's National Team or Club's possibilities to play their forthcoming Official International Home Games at the Victoria Stadium?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

105 Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, this question should be directed to the Gibraltar Football Association. The HM Government is not responsible for hosting of international football matches. We continue to work on long-term plans with the GFA and provide support where we are requested to do so.

110 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can I ask the Minister as Chairman of the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, does he have any information to provide? One hears that there could be or could not be a possibility of the games being played due to the fitness of certification of the pitch.

115 In that respect or the details in respect of the worthiness of certification of the pitch lies with the Sports Authority so could he please provide some information in that respect?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as far as the Authority is concerned, the pitches are fit to play. They have been played on currently and they are fit to play. It is then up to the GFA with UEFA to ascertain whether they are happy with the pitch being played on. So therefore I direct the hon. Member to ask the GFA whether they feel, via UEFA or FIFA, whether the pitch is suitable to play.

125 Hon. E J Reyes: Well, Mr Speaker, the Minister may have answered me but I have not quite understood. I know the pitches are fit for play because in fact they were playing on them only yesterday. But do they still have a certification that meets the basic requirements set down by UEFA or FIFA? The Sports Authority are the ones who hold the actual certificate, so from when the certificate was last granted there is an expiry date, has that date come and gone has it been renewed, can he please provide some information in that respect?

130 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I repeat: according to the Authority, the pitches are certified to be played on – if not, they would not be played on. So therefore as far as the Authority is concerned, matches can be played.

135 Now, it is now up to FIFA and UEFA to come and certify and they are the ones who decide if it is up to their standard so therefore it is up to the GFA to have discussions with UEFA and FIFA to see if this pitch is adequate for them or not. As far as the authority is concerned, it is adequate for us.

140 Hon. E J Reyes: So, Mr Speaker, as far as the Authority is concerned, we currently hold certification that allows the pitch to be used for UEFA and for FIFA games and if that is the case when do they expire, when is it next due to be inspected and re-certified?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the certification as far as I understand it, goes either to June or July. Therefore up to June/July, these pitches – but I insist that the authority, even in June or July we can get laboratory certifications of the pitch to be good and adequate for use of the pitch.

145 Therefore it is up to FIFA and UEFA who have their own regulations, to come probably during or after that date to see if it is adequate for them. So therefore I would direct that question to the GFA and not to the Government or the Authority.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am glad to hear that. So far we seem to be continuing on a 150 process that has been there for a long time. The current certification is valid until June or July. If I recall correctly, what we used to do is we used to bring the maintenance teams who we have contracts with, in order to ensure that everything was up to date when it was due for re-certification.

If the certification is due to expire in June or July, does the Minister have any idea when the 155 Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority are next going to have their own external maintenance team coming over to ensure that when UEFA and FIFA do send their own people, as far as Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority are concerned, everything possible has been done in order to regain certification?

Hon. S E Linares: Well, Mr Speaker, knowing the Authority as I do, and the hon. Member as 160 well, I am sure that the Authority would be a couple of months before, asking the laboratory to certify to see if there might be any possible extensions to that certification, but it is too early to say. We are just four or five months before the certification so I am sure the Authority will get proper certification of the pitch well before June.

165 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the original question relates to the possibility of the Victoria Stadium being played to host official international matches.

The questions that have been asked in supplementary have been about certification. But is it really an issue about certification of the pitch as to whether the pitch is of a quality that can host 170 international matches; or is it more complex than that and does it involve in fact the standard, the facilities that the actual Victoria Stadium offers so that then that will comply with UEFA or FIFA standards which would allow home matches to be played at Victoria Stadium?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I would have thought that from the answers 175 given by the hon. Gentleman it would be clear that the issue relates to the pitch, to the playing surface. And, Mr Speaker, what we have to reflect on is that in the time that we have been here on this side of the House, we have seen the GFA achieve two hugely important milestones in its history, in the history of Gibraltar and the history of football: first, admission to the European Federation, UEFA; and second, admission to the International Federation, FIFA.

180 In the context of that, there are certain requirements which are of UEFA and certain requirements which are FIFA and for some reason they are not identical. It is really quite surprising that that should be the case, but they are not. The things that the GFA are saying to the Government relate to the requirements of those international organisations on them, on the GFA and how the Government can assist them in discharging those obligations in order to be 185 able to play international matches of the national squad here and play international matches and European matches of the clubs here.

Those relate in relation to Victoria essentially to the pitch. The hon. Gentleman knows that UEFA have not wanted to entertain the opportunity for international matches, European matches, to be played at the stadium for reasons that they have put to the GFA and the GFA has 190 set out repeatedly.

So from the point of view of the works that were required for the Victoria to be the sort of facility that the Government felt it could provide to the community generally, not just for football because Victoria is for all sports and all the community, that work has been done. And the issues which relate as I understand it and I know my hon. Friend understands it to FIFA 195 matches, the issues relate to the playing surface, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

200 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I? But is that also the case with UEFA because my understanding was that the reason why international matches could not be played at Victoria Stadium, official international matches for UEFA, is because the stadium was not a Category 3 UEFA stadium – is was just below a Category 3 UEFA stadium.

205 So are the issues relating to UEFA and FIFA the same, or is FIFA pitch-related and is UEFA stadium-related?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in relation to FIFA, the issues as I understand them are pitch-related; and in relation to UEFA as I understand it, they are facilities-related and pitch-related.

210 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, if I may, can I come back to the Hon. Minister?

He said that the current certification of the pitch is valid until June or July. Looking at the calendar of forthcoming games, the Gibraltar Football Association is due to play in its qualifying games in respect of FIFA, I think, on 9th June. Therefore, that I think, calendar-wise, should fit in within the certification period.

215 Can the Minister confirm to all sports lovers that as far as the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, the pitch is there, fully certified and therefore if the Gibraltar Football Association wish, they could play that game in the Victoria Stadium in June of this year?

Hon. S E Linares: Correct.

INFRASTRUCTURE AND PLANNING

Q99/2017

Electric hoverboards and scooters – Review of law

220

Clerk: Question 99, the Hon. L F Llamas.

225 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, has the Government taken a decision whether it is going to enforce the law or amend the law in respect of self-balancing, two-wheeled, electrically powered hoverboards and scooters?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

230 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, Government is presently reviewing the position in relation to the importation and use of hoverboards and other similar self-balancing devices.

235 Hon. L F Llamas: Does that mean to say, Mr Speaker, that what was issued in the press release last December 2015 would actually not be enforced, where Government informed the community that these items would be seized, regardless of whether they were being imported or already imported?

240 Hon. P J Balban: No, Mr Speaker, that is not what would happen. These items are illegal imports. These items are prohibited to be used on the public highway and on the public footpath. So the problem here has been that obviously many of these electric-powered power boards and hoverboards have actually found the way into Gibraltar and now obviously there is a question of policing to look after that issue.

245 When it comes to the Government's position at the moment, what is happening is that we are actually looking to see whether there is any need to look at these more toy-type related devices in a different way, because you cannot really compare what is a Segway which is what we spoke about in last month's Parliament – which is a bigger piece of equipment which can be used on the public highway, should the law permit it, and on the footpath – and these other devices which are more toy-ish in nature. They have a very short range and they could not withstand being ridden on the road itself.

250 So what we are looking at is to see whether there is any need to classify these toys as toys and whether there is any need perhaps to assign certain areas, if it was decided that they were to be classified as toys.

But as I said, this is all what the Committee or what the group is looking at, at the moment, and this is where we are at present.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, there is obviously a secondary concern with this. At the moment as it stands, they are illegal imports and obviously, apart from being used on public highways and in any area because at the moment they are undesignated, there is also an issue where there have been reports abroad internationally where they have caught fire. Obviously if my neighbour, for example – I am not saying my personal neighbour has one, but if my neighbour – has a Segway and that catches fire and causes damage to his property and my property as a result, the home contents insurance would not cover it.

260 So I think we need to tackle this one way or another because obviously the position of the Government as at December 2015 was in fact that the authorities may therefore seize any Segways or equivalents found to be in possession within Gibraltar. If that is not being enforced, then I call on Government to do something, act responsibly and quickly and either call them toys and give them designated areas or start seizing, because otherwise we are just allowing people to break the law and not do anything about it.

270 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the actual comments that have been made on the fact that it has been reported that some of these catch fire; apparently I am informed that there are different types of these scooters. Some of them have a CE rating which we assume are perfectly safe and others which come from other countries are perhaps the ones that have caught fire in the past. In fact many airline companies will not allow them on board for that very reason.

275 But I am informed that it is the other types. It is very difficult obviously to ... It is Customs and law enforcement bodies' responsibility to police the laws; it is not the Government's responsibility. So if any Segway is caught, it is up to the RGP to deal with. But at the end of the day, if the RGP received a report from yourself, for example, that your neighbour has a Segway then it would be purely a policing matter.

Hon. L F Llamas: But, Mr Speaker, I do not think that the RGP needs anybody to call and call on any neighbour or anything when they are blatantly being used all over Gibraltar. Obviously, if they were regulated then perhaps Government could say a certain type which is regulated and licensed and is not originating from a cheap generic version of it, will not be allowed, and the proper ones will be allowed.

285 I think we really need to tackle this issue because we have seen a surge over the Christmas period and obviously the fact that they are being used will only simply encourage others to get any variety and they may go for the cheaper one, rather than the proper one which is regulated.

290 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the issue is tackled. They are illegal, they are against the law, there are laws which state that clearly. We issued a press release to warn people before Christmas the previous year not to import these items because they are not allowed. So the law is there, and the Police need to ensure that they deal with people who are riding these things on a public highway.

295 You say it is clearly seen, well it is a policing matter and they are the ones responsible to police the laws in Gibraltar.

Hon. L F Llamas: One final supplementary, Mr Speaker. Has the Government actually advised the RGP not to act because, for example – (Interjections) No, because, Mr Speaker, seriously in the Cavalcade there were children walking up and down Main Street – well, not walking; hovering – riding these items and there were plenty of RGP, no need for anybody to call the RGP. Obviously, when you see that the Police are literally just turning a blind eye, then is there an instruction or what is the case? Obviously, there has to be some form of policy from Government to stifle that enforcement of the law, I presume.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government has no constitutional power and as a matter of fact on this side of the House we would never pretend to advise the RGP on what to do, to give the RGP instructions on what they have to do or to attempt to stifle them in the exercise of their duties.

310

But, Mr Speaker, on this side of the House we think that the RGP do a very good job. On that side of the House, it is clear that they are complaining about the way the RGP do their job. Mr Speaker, I have no doubt if any member of the RGP is listening, they will be very clear in respect of the attitude that the Opposition take to the sterling work that they do for our community.

315

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The hon. Lady. (Interjection)

320

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Sorry, Mr Speaker, if I can just intervene. I suppose I have to say, I declare an interest here. For example, my own children keep asking me for a hoverboard because they see all these other children with hoverboards and that the law is not being enforced. So there is some confusion going on around here. I think that what the hon. Gentleman is asking for, more than anything, is clarity. I do not believe with respect that he is having a go at the RGP, but what exactly is the position going on at the moment, because you do see it all around and nothing is being done to stop it?

325

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the hon. Lady's clarification of what it was that another Member of the House was purportedly asking me. But it is of course a much better way of setting out what might be the concerns of members of the community and I appreciate that.

330

But, Mr Speaker, the position is as the Hon. Minister has set out as far as the Government is concerned. We have set out what the position is in law. The enforcement of that, Mr Speaker, is a matter entirely for Customs and for the Police.

335

People sometimes talk about being in power. When you are in administration, you realise that there is precious little by way of power. One is not able to direct police officers, customs officers to do or not do things, otherwise one would come entirely a cropper of the Constitution.

340

But the hon. Lady raises the point of certainty and in the view of the Government, look, the position is clear. That is why if my children ever eye these things, they are going to get a very clear answer from Dad, that there is not going to be a hover board at home – and for very good reason, because if we go to the substance of this debate, why is it that something that actually looks quite fun is something that the Government has decided cannot be imported or used in Gibraltar?

345 It is based on advice, because of the size of our roads, because of the technical problems that there were with these batteries that were in these boards, etc. It may be, Mr Speaker, that there is an argument for designating areas where this sort of equipment can be used. A bicycle is a lot of fun but you cannot ride your bicycle in Main Street because you could hurt people who are there enjoying the pedestrian facilities.

350 So there may be an argument to be raised there and it is something that certainly the Government is certainly considering. There are skateboarding parks where you use your skateboard, using your skateboard in Main Street is not allowed but skateboards are not an illegal import and they do not catch fire – unless you ride them really well, I guess! But there are arguments to be had to rationalise this particular area but they do not relate to criticising the 355 Police or criticising other law enforcement agencies and I am grateful the hon. Lady has taken the debate where she has.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition. I am sorry but the hon. Lady had caught my eye before he stood up. (Interjection and laughter)

360

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I think that the Hon. the Chief Minister has basically taken it to the core of the debate in relation to this, and it is this: the Government has taken a decision not to allow the importation of these items because the Government is concerned about the safety.

Now, in the light of that and in the light of the concern expressed by my hon. Friend, Mr Llamas that he has personally and indeed some of us have also seen personally people, and children, using these items down Main Street and elsewhere. Therefore there must be a safety issue in relation to this because what we do not want is for children to have an accident.

What is the Government going to do about that? I quite understand that the enforcement is for the Police to enforce but surely, if the Government knows that these items are in Gibraltar and they are being used and that the law is perhaps not being enforced or there might be some confusion in relation to the law – I do not know but the reality is that they are being used – I would have thought that the onus or there would be some responsibility on the Government to obviously do something about it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I know that there is cannabis in Gibraltar and that it is being smoked but I do not complain about the RGP's enforcement of our rules against cannabis because of course there is an agenda to deal with that, as there is an agenda in the RGP to deal with all of these issues – and not just in the Police, all law enforcement agencies.

But I think, Mr Speaker, in the context of the debate as it is now developing –

Mr Speaker: I hope it does not develop very much. (Laughter)

385

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, if you allow the questions, the answers must come.
But what a privilege that with everything that is happening in the world we have the opportunity of debating hoverboards and Segways in this Parliament. We sometimes do not realise just how lucky we are in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, let me just set in context what has happened here so that we understand the parameters of action and who took the action. The issue of the prohibition relates to Segways actually. It started with Segways and it came also in the light of a lot of people winning prizes in the La Linea Fair, which were skate boards with engines on them. I remember at that time there was a flurry of political activity relating to whether these items should be banned because they were dangerous. And it was not this Government; it was the former administration that took the advice of Customs and the Police to introduce that ban. The policing of the ban, Mr Speaker, is 395 something which is a matter, as I say not for us.

400 It is very easy on something as easy to understand and as visible and innocuous as a motorised skateboard to take the bait of agreeing that of course we must indicate to law enforcement agencies that they should do a little more in this area or not. But our constitutional structure is very clear. I have on my desk a letter asking me, as Chief Minister under the provisions of the Gibraltar Police Authority Act, to set out what my priorities are in respect of policing in Gibraltar for the next year. That is what the Act provides for: the Gibraltar Police Authority writes to me, I think they also write to others, and that is put together in a Police Authority Report.

405 I will not be putting on my list of things which are the Government's priorities for policing in Gibraltar in the next year that police officers should be chasing hoverboards, Mr Speaker. I think that I have indicated to the hon. Lady's more sensible approach to the question, how it is that the Government proposes to deal with some aspects of this – the aspects that relate to Government's competences – and I have full confidence in the law enforcement agencies in Gibraltar knowing how to deal with the issues that are being raised. They are not just being 410 raised here, they are being raised in other fora as well and, Mr Speaker, the community knows that it has an excellent Police Force and an excellent Customs Department that will know how to deal with these concerns.

Q100/2017

Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan – Publication of final version

415 Clerk: Question 100, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can Government provide an update as to when it intends to publish the final version of its still draft Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan and thereby accept accountability for the entirety of its content?

420 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government will publish the final version of its draft Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan very shortly.

425 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, could the Minister provide not necessarily a specific definition, but – he has been saying 'very shortly' really for about four years now – are we talking about very shortly, maybe a month from now or very shortly, maybe 12 months from now – some idea of what he means by that?

430 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, shortly –

Mr Speaker: Very shortly was the answer.

Hon. P J Balban: Sorry?

435 Mr Speaker: Very shortly was the answer.

Hon. P J Balban: Okay, very shortly has ... in fact the word 'shortly' has a definition in the dictionary. The hon. Gentleman, what he wants is for me to obviously give him a specific date and then hold me to it. But I will let him know that, as per the definition in the dictionary, 'very shortly' means 'very soon'.

445 Hon. T N Hammond: Indeed, but because the Minister has been giving that response for over a year now, that would not fit into my definition of 'very shortly'. 'Very shortly' to me means something that is happening or going to happen imminently, not something that could happen sometime in the next two, three or four years, which is why I ask the question: not for the Minister to give me a specific date to which I can hold him to account. I am not asking for that; I am just asking for an impression of what he understands from his answer 'very shortly', to ensure that it aligns with what my understanding and perhaps those of many members of the public is of 'very shortly'.

450 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Well, Mr Speaker, we are taking our definition of 'shortly' as defined in the dictionary and in Hansard, Mr Speaker, and there is a huge amount of debate in respect of the definition of 'shortly' and 'very shortly' in the context of the Hansards of 2003 to 2007 and 2007 to 2011, which I commend to the hon. Gentleman.

455 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I thank the Hon. the Chief Minister for his answer. All I can say is that I hope I do not have to ask the question again in six months' time.

460 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that comment, although I do not detect an answer in it. But if he does do the exercise of going back to the Hansards, he might be surprised to note what his own party's definition of 'shortly' was. And given that he defended their record in a general election and commended it to the general public, I assume he has not changed his view on what 'shortly' means, but we will see.

Q101/2017

Government vehicle fleet – Expression of interest for leasing

465 Clerk: Question 101, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it has made a decision in respect of the one expression of interest received for the leasing of its vehicle fleet and if so what are the financial terms agreed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, not yet.

475 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for his response. Can I ask him if he has any intention of re-advertising the expression of interest tender, seeing as he only had one expression of interest?

Hon. P J Balban: No, Mr Speaker.

480

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q102/2017
Bus Tracker App –
Night buses

Clerk: Question 102, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

485 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Transport Minister look into the possibility of adding the night buses to the Bus Tracker App?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

490 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): The Gibraltar Bus Tracker WebApp is currently under development and all routes will be included in the platform. The night route N8 is also currently under development by the IT department.

495 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Minister for Transport give us an idea more or less when the App will be ready?

Hon. P J Balban: Shortly, Mr Speaker. (Laughter)

500 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Defined in Hansard!

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Before we ask for a definition!

THE ENVIRONMENT, ENERGY, CLIMATE CHANGE AND EDUCATION

Q103-106, 108, 111-112/2017
Visitors to heritage sites –
Statistics

Clerk: Question 103, the Hon. L F Llamas.

505 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, further to Question 847/2016, can the Government provide a schedule with a detailed breakdown of the works and nature of the works involved, together with a broken down cost of the same and the period during which these works commenced and finished?

510 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

515 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 104 to 106, 108, 111 and 112.

Clerk: Question 104, the Hon. L F Llamas.

520 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a schedule detailing by month the total number of visitors to the Upper Rock since December 2011 to date, broken down into the following categories: (a) Private Vehicles; (b) Taxis; (c) Coaches; (d) Cable Car; (e) Walking; (f) Walking with attractions included; (g) 100 Ton Gun?

Clerk: Question 105, the Hon. L F Llamas.

525 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a monthly schedule detailing the running cost per attraction/site in the Upper Rock since December 2011, broken down into the following: (a) Wages/Salaries; (b) Electricity; (c) General maintenance; (d) Refurbishments; and (e) Any other expense?

530 Clerk: Question 106, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a schedule detailing by month the total revenue collected in connection to the Upper Rock Admission Fees since December 2011 to date broken down into the following categories: (a) Private Vehicles; (b) Taxis; (c) Coaches; (d) Cable Car; (e) Walking only; (f) Walking with sites included; (g) 100 Ton Gun?

Clerk: Question 108, the Hon. L F Llamas.

540 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, further to Written Question 11/2017, can the Government explain how they do not hold any statistics of visitors to the World War II Tunnels given adult and child tourists must pay an additional £8 and £4 respectively and locals must pay £5 to enter the site?

Clerk: Question 111, the Hon. L F Llamas.

545

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government give an opening date for the Cornwallis Chamber in the Great Siege Tunnel?

Clerk: Question 112, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain why O'Hara's Battery may have its gates open Monday to Friday but the main exhibition remains closed and since when has it been closed?

555 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, in relation to Questions 103 to 106, the information requested is in the schedules that I now hand over.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Let me just explain, Mr Speaker, that the breakdown into the different Heads by month involves a considerable amount of work, so I have provided the information by year and the staff are currently breaking down that further. But with your permission, Mr Speaker, and that of the Member opposite, that will have to come to him later.

565 So we have broken it down by year but further sub-division of all the different expenditure in all the different areas by month is quite an onerous task and with your permission and that of the Member opposite that will follow and he knows that he has an open line to me if he thinks it is taking rather too long. I am told by the end of the week but I am happy to be reminded if he would bear with me on that one.

570 In relation to Question 108, Government has not stated that we do not hold any statistics of visitors to the World War II Tunnels. What was stated in reply to Question 11/2017 was the fact that locals, visitors arriving at the tunnel by taxi and those arriving by tour operator coaches are charged the same concessionary cash fee and are all presented with the same type ticket on entry. So the total number of sales for this ticket type incorporates all three types of visitors and therefore exclusive figures for locals only cannot be presented. Now we are reviewing this, Mr Speaker.

The Cornwallis Chamber is scheduled to open today. I have not checked whether it has but that is my information.

580 In answer to Question 112, O'Hara's Battery exhibition area has been closed since 7th October due to manning level issues.

There is a requirement, Mr Speaker for site attendants to speak foreign languages and it is proving difficult to recruit persons with German, Dutch and other required languages.

This said, the external areas of the site have remained open from Monday to Friday allowing visitors to enjoy the gun emplacements and vistas from the highest point of the Upper Rock.

585 We expect to have a full complement shortly and we will then be in a position to reopen the exhibition.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the hon. Minister's schedules and commitment to supply the detailed breakdown in the near future. And I am very grateful that he has at least provided us with an overall view of a yearly basis.

590 In relation to the World War II Tunnels, would I be able to come back next month and ask the Hon. Minister for a statistical analysis overall without having to ask for a breakdown of locals and tourists? Would that be a possibility?

595 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I need to check back with the team. As I say, we are reviewing and it does involve considerably more work because we do not just have to count the type of tickets; we have to sub-divide that. And as we are reviewing the whole question of the Upper Rock, it may need a little bit more time than next month.

600 But again, I have to check with the team and confirm when we hope to have that information available.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, if I may come back to these questions once I have had the chance to overview it if I have any supplementaries and carry on with the next question.

Thank you.

Q107 & 114/2017

Admission fees to Upper Rock Nature Reserve – Policy re taxis and foreign vehicles

Clerk: Question 107, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, further to Written Question 10/2017, can the Government explain the rationale for exempting taxi drivers from paying the admission fees to the Upper Rock Nature Reserve?
610

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 114.
615

Clerk: Question 114, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, has the Government reviewed its Upper Rock foreign registered vehicle policy since April 2016?
620

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.
625

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, in answer to Question 107, to assist taxi drivers in very fallow months of the year. Fees are paid in this period when visitors access the attractions on the Upper Rock Nature Reserve.
630

And in answer to Question 114, no, sir.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, if I may just come back because obviously these questions are interconnected with each other. So whilst I analyse the overall outcome of the policy in terms of revenue and visitors etc. if I may come back to these questions later on if I need to.
635

Thank you.

Q109-110/2017

Debtor A and Debtor B arrears – Update on position

Clerk: Question 109, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Further to Written Question 17/2017, can the Government provide an update on the arrears position of Debtor A and Debtor B, together with details of any new debts and debtors which may have exceeded their credit periods?
640

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.
645

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 110.

Clerk: Question 110, the Hon. L F Llamas.

650 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, further to Written Question 17/2017, can the Government provide details of the arrears position as at the end of each financial year since April 2012 to date of any other arrears owed by Debtor A and Debtor B to the Government of Gibraltar, if any?

655 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

660 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): The information requested by the hon. Member in Questions 109 and 110 is in the schedule that I now hand over.

Answer to Question 109

Update on arrears position for Debtors:

Debtor A £2,752.65
Debtor B £119,085.10

Answer to Question 110

Details of arrears since 2012 owed by Debtors

Debtors A
March 13 NIL
March 14 NIL
March 15 NIL
March 16 £93,437.30

Debtors B
March 13 £ NIL
March 14 £ NIL
March 15 £2,752.65
March 16 £2,752.65

Q113/2017
Derelict railings in Upper Rock – Replacement

Clerk: Question 113, the Hon. L F Llamas.

665 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, what plans does the Government have to replace derelict railings in the Upper Rock, in particular on the road leading to O'Hara's Battery?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

670 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, a programme for the replacement of railings has commenced and this area is on our priority list but other areas will be tackled before this one. Railings in the Upper Rock have not been replaced for decades.

Q115-116, 132/2017
CEPSA Refinery incident of 29th January – Representations to EU

675

Clerk: Question 115, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, has Government made any representations to the EU Commission in the aftermath of the CEPSA Refinery incident of 29th January?

680

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

685

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 116 and 132.

Mr Speaker, Question 132 is set by the hon. Lady and she may need to be advised, as she is not in the Chamber right now, that her question is coming up, she will not have expected it perhaps that I was going to link them up but they are on the same subject so that was the appropriate way of responding.

690

Clerk: Question 116, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Does the Minister for the Environment accept the statement by CEPSA when it says that the flaring incident of 29th January had no impact on the environment?

695

Clerk: Question 132, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government reveal what is the nature of the complaint to the EU in connection with the flaring incident at CEPSA Refinery on 29th January this year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

705

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, yes sir. The Government has filed a complaint with the European Union Commission and this was done on 6th February.

In answer to Question 116 which refers to whether I agree with the statement that the flaring incident had no impact on the environment, it is probably the most predictable reply ever, no sir.

And in answer to Question 132, the nature of the complaint is and I summarise:

To highlight and remind the Commission of the ongoing cases of flaring which have been occurring over the years at the CEPSA refinery and highlighting the latest incident of the 29th of last month; the apparent lack of action on the part of the relevant competent authorities to ensure that CEPSA complies with obligations arising under EU law; our concerns in relation to the ensuing impacts on public health and the environment in the region and the lack of communication from the Spanish authorities to the relevant Gibraltar authorities when such events occur, and on the operation of the complex as a whole.

And because it is just a summary, in case I have missed anything, I am providing Members with a copy of the complaint as filed. I would just mention, Mr Speaker, that because there are quite a number of appendices, they are not in printed form but they will be made available electronically to the Members within the course of today. There was just too much to print but that is the substance of the main complaint. The appendices will follow by electronic means.

HM Government of Gibraltar

Complaint: Flaring and the San Roque Refinery

The San Roque Refinery

1. The San Roque Refinery (the "Refinery") is an oil refinery owned by Compañía Española de Petróleos, S.A.U. ("CEPSA") located on the northern Spanish coastline of the Bay of Gibraltar. CEPSA is a Spanish multinational oil and gas company which operates in several European countries as well as Algeria, Canada, Colombia, Morocco, Brazil and Panama.
2. The Refinery, said to be the largest in the Iberian Peninsula, is one of three refineries at which CEPSA produces oil products in Spain. According to CEPSA's own website, all types of fuels (propane, butane, gasolines, aviation fuels, gas oil, etc.) are manufactured at the Refinery in addition to pure chemical products such as benzene, paraxylene and ortoxtylene. The website boasts that the Refinery has a distillation capacity of 12 million TM/year and that it employs over 1,000 workers. The relevant extracts referred to in this paragraph are appended to this document as Annex A.
3. Specifically, the Refinery is situated on the Guadarranque Industrial Estate which lies between the residential area of Puente Mayorga and the Guadarranque River in the municipality of San Roque, Cadiz, Spain. The combined residential population of the Spanish towns that immediately surround the Refinery (namely Algeciras, La Linea de la Concepcion, San Roque and Los Barrios) and Gibraltar is of approximately 265,000 inhabitants.

Flaring Incident of 29 January 2017

4. On Sunday 29 January 2017, at around 1700hrs, significant high flaring began from five of the flare stacks installed at the Refinery. Flaring continued for approximately an hour. Annexed to this document as Annex B are various photographs taken from Gibraltar of the incident. The photographs very clearly show the extent of the flaring and the resulting intensity of the black smoke and fumes discharged into the air. The incident was recorded and video clips can be accessed on the following links:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=uESb0Zuk8ek>

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=D81-gVINYps>

5. Given the magnitude of the flaring, media reports suggest that a significant number of residents from both the neighbouring region of Spain and Gibraltar took to social media and other fora to complain about the incident. Various local press articles published following the incident are contained in Annex C.
6. Grave concern as regards the extent of the flaring was also raised by non-governmental organisations from both Spain and Gibraltar such as the Gibraltar Environmental Safety Group as well Verdemar-Ecologistas en Acción. Their statements have been annexed to this document as Annex D.

Statement released by CEPSA

7. Shortly after the incident, CEPSA released a statement a copy of which can be found in Annex E. In its statement, CEPSA claims that an interruption to the Refinery's electricity supply led to a power shutdown at the plant. Allegedly, this in turn required the Refinery to discharge built up gases causing the high flares visible around the area.
8. In its statement, CEPSA also highlighted that it had apparently informed the local Spanish authorities, the emergency services, the Spanish Department for the Environment and the Neighbourhood Committee of the incident. When doing so, CEPSA informed those concerned that the incident would, according to them, not have any consequences for either the people of the surrounding area or the environment. CEPSA further reduced the importance of the flaring episode by alleging that the gas discharged was due to the proper functioning of the plant's safety systems and was done as part of the normal operation of its industrial facilities.

Wider concerns regarding the Refinery's practices

9. Whereas for the reasons expanded upon below, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar ("HMGoG") takes issue with the excuse provided by CEPSA for the flaring incident, HMGoG would further submit that the recent episode of 29 January 2017 should not be viewed as an isolated incident. Instead, there is a long history of complaints concerning CEPSA's practice of resorting to flaring and it is not the first time that CEPSA has alleged that flaring has been caused by an electrical outage. For example, the media reports enclosed as Annex F confirm that similar episodes occurred on 30 March 2007, 1 April 2007, 28 June 2009 and 18 January 2014. Similar concerns were raised by the Environmental Safety Group on 2 May 2006, 6 December 2010, 15 February 2016 and 21 October 2016 as illustrated by Annex G. Aside from the above, an audit carried out into the Refinery's operations (referred to in paragraph 18 below) also confirms that flaring occurred on 21 May 2006, 17 August 2006, 2 April 2007 and 22 April 2007.

10. As the Commission is well aware, the practice of flaring is dangerous and harmful to the environment. The European Environment Agency, for example, (see Annex H) underlines that the emissions of pollutants from flaring may consist of unburned fuel components (e.g. methane, NMVOC), by-products of the combustion process (e.g. soot, partially combusted products, CO, CO₂, NO_x) and sulphur oxides (e.g. SO₂) where sulphur components are present in the waste gas. Yet, despite the fact that all of these emissions are extremely harmful to human health and the environment, CEPSA continues to repeatedly resort to flaring.
11. Given the manner in which CEPSA operates the Refinery it is unsurprising that in May 2014 a report by the World Health Organisation concluded that La Linea de la Concepcion had the worst air quality in Spain (see Annex I). In May 2016, La Linea de la Concepcion was again underlined in a similar World Health Organisation report as having the third worst air quality in the country.
12. It is on the basis of these growing concerns for the air quality of the area and the health of its citizens that HMGoG makes this complaint.

Questions raised by Ashley Fox MEP

13. Since 2009, Ashley Fox MEP has represented Gibraltar in the European Parliament as one of the six MEPs representing the South West of England and Gibraltar. In response to concerns raised by constituents in Gibraltar, Mr Fox has on two occasions filed parliamentary questions in which he calls into doubt CEPSA's compliance with EU environmental standards. Mr Fox's questions of 4 February 2011 and 2 December 2015 together with the Commission's responses to those questions, are annexed as Annex J to this document.

14. As noted in its response to the question of 4 February 2011, it is worth underlining that the Commission at the time confirmed that, with regard to the Refinery, it had “contacted the Spanish authorities and launched an investigation regarding the implementation of Directive 2008/1/EC concerning integrated pollution prevention and control (the IPPC Directive)”. Furthermore, the Commission added that “findings to date suggest that certain shortcomings presently exist for the installation but that action is being taken to rectify this situation”. Finally, the Commission also underlined that “the operator... is investing in improvements... to fully implement best available techniques to prevent or minimise pollution as required by the IPPC Directive” and that “the actions identified in the major audit of [the] site carried out in 2008 by the competent authority are being incorporated into the permit of the installation.”

15. Over four years later, in response to Mr Fox’s question of 2 December 2015 concerning the Commission’s progress with such investigation, the Commission stated that “the CEPSA oil refinery has undertaken action to ensure compliance with its permit and implement the best available techniques to prevent or minimise pollution, as required by Directive 2010/75/EU on industrial emissions [the “IED”]”. Consequentially, “the Commission [had] therefore not been in a position to establish a breach of EC law.” The Commission also pointed out that “the national administrative and/or judicial bodies in charge of the implementation of the IED are primarily responsible to verify the situation and have the means appropriate to address the problem if the concerns are found justified.”

Cause for concern despite the Commission’s response of 10 February 2016

16. Despite the position adopted by the Commission, as stated in its response to Mr Fox of 10 February 2016 referred to above, HMGoG continues to harbour very serious concerns with respect to CEPSA’s compliance with EU environmental obligations – not least because of the recurrence of flaring episodes (even after 10 February 2016) as manifested in the latest significant incident of 29 January 2017. HMGoG is also concerned with the apparent lack of action on the part of the relevant competent authorities to ensure that CEPSA complies with obligations arising under EU law.

17. Moreover, HMGoG seriously doubts that, as stated by the Commission, “the actions identified in the major audit of [the] site carried out in 2008 by the competent authority [were] incorporated into the permit of the installation”. This doubt is generated by the undeniable fact that many of the shortcomings identified in the audit and the recommendations made therein have either blatantly not been dealt with or taken into consideration.

18. In support of such conclusions, and with reference to the relevant audit (appended to this document as Annex K), HMGOG would highlight the following:

- a. In page 14, the audit highlights that in 80% of the times incidents were caused by electrical faults connected to either the Refinery's external electricity supply or its own internal electrical systems. As a result, in page 15, the audit concludes that CEPESA should "prioritise" action to extinguish these electrical issues which would result in an effective solution to reduce environmental risks.
- b. In the bullet points which follow, the audit makes a series of concise recommendations which include, but are not limited to, recommendations concerning: (i) improvements to the Refinery's capacity to generate its own electricity which was found to have "not been reliable in the past"; (ii) steps to secure a second wholly Independent source of electricity; (iii) improvements to information gathering exercises carried out to identify causes of faults; (iv) reductions to reliance on overhead powerlines; (v) revisions with regard to transformation capacity; (vi) revisions concerning the capacity and reserves of electricity substations; and (vii) an analysis of how saturated distributions lines are.
- c. The audit also underlines, in page 18, that flaring incidents should be considered in the context of the Refinery's proximity to urban areas.
- d. The audit further notes in page 18 that action should be taken by CEPESA to (i) wholly avoid or minimize power outages by implementing the recommendations summarised in point b. above; and to (ii) minimize the time taken to normalize flaring situations. The audit itself highlights that the 20 to 30 minute flaring episodes experienced by the Refinery were excessive noting that other refineries take around 10 minutes to recover. In this context HMGOG would once again point out to the Commission that it is reported that the flaring incident of 29 January 2017 lasted around an hour.

19. After considering the above, and whilst noting the Commission's conclusions with regard to CEPSA's apparent action to implement the recommendations of the 2008 audit, HMGoG would highlight that CEPSA, in 2017, continues to deflect responsibility for preventing flaring episodes by unashamedly citing electrical faults as the cause of such incidents. This, justifiably, seriously calls into question whether CEPSA has adequately implemented the recommendations of the 2008 audit or whether it respects other aspects of compliance with environmental standards arising under EU measures. It also calls into question whether the relevant Spanish competent authorities are effectively ensuring, in accordance with responsibilities arising under EU law, that CEPSA is adhering to such EU obligations.

The IED and Best Available Techniques

20. Article 11 of the IED sets out the general principles governing the basic obligations of operators. Such general principles oblige Member States to take the necessary measures to inter alia provide that the "best available techniques" are applied at installations. Commission Implementing Decision of 9 October 2014 establishes the best available techniques ("BAT") conclusions under the IED for the refining of mineral oil and gas (the "Implementing Decision").

21. Without limiting the Commission's power to investigate any other aspect of CEPSA's compliance with EU environmental standards as regards operations at the Refinery, in light of the recurring flaring incidents forming the subject of this complaint, HMGoG would request that the Commission initiate a specific assessment of CEPSA's adherence to BAT 55 and BAT 56 as set out in Section 1.18 of the Implementing Decision. This assessment should be carried out against the recommended techniques to prevent or reduce emissions from flaring listed in Section 1.20.7. HMGoG would also request that action be taken by the Commission to ensure that the relevant competent authorities in Spain are taking the necessary measures to ensure that the Refinery is operated in accordance with EU law.

La Junta de Andalucía

22. HMGoG would invite the Commission to take the steps set out in paragraph 21 above notwithstanding its comments concerning the responsibility of "national administrative and/or judicial bodies in charge of the implementation of the IED... to verify the situation" and their means "to address the problem if the concerns are found to be justified." The reason for this is that the Ministry for the Environment of La Junta de Andalucía (“La Junta”) has already concluded that the episode of 29 January 2017 did not result in “any serious incident which resulted in contamination parameters being exceeded” (see Annex L). In circumstances where La Junta has already reached such conclusion, HMGoG has considered it inappropriate to address its complaint to La Junta as the Comunidad Autónoma in charge of the implementation of the IED for the region of Andalucía. Moreover, the same suggests that La Junta has no apparent concern with CEPSA’s insistence on hiding behind the seemingly standard electrical outage excuse whenever flaring occurs.

Further concerns

23. Finally, it should be noted that despite the fact that CEPSA had apparently informed the local Spanish authorities, emergency services, the Spanish Department for the Environment and the Neighbourhood Committee of the incident of 29 January 2017 no formal contact was established with relevant authorities in Gibraltar despite Gibraltar’s proximity to the Refinery.
24. HMGoG would submit that the decision not to inform the relevant Gibraltar authorities runs contrary to the spirit of Article 25 of Directive 2008/50/EC which requires a level of cooperation between Member States in cases of transboundary air pollution. For instance, the relevant provisions of the measure stated above encourage consultation between Member States and the sharing of information in these cases.
25. HMGoG therefore expects to be formally notified of any future incidents to the same extent as any relevant Spanish authority or any other Spanish entity or body.

Further information

26. HMGoG stands ready to assist the Commission with any further information required during the course of its investigation of this complaint.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for the copy of this complaint, which I look forward to reading and I am sure will be more than happy to support.

730 If I could just go back to Question 116 quickly, when the Minister says no, he does not agree with the statement put out by CEPESA that the incident had no impact on the environment, is he therefore suggesting that CEPESA have been economical with the truth reference the incident?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is not for me to analyse what that means. I do not agree with their statement. Flaring is well known and in fact it has been declared by the European 735 Environment Agency that the practice of flaring is dangerous and harmful to the environment. Emissions of pollutants from flaring may consist of unburnt fuel like methane, by-products such as soot, which obviously is particulate matter, carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide, oxide of nitrogen, sulphur oxide and therefore I cannot agree.

740 And if they say it has no impact on the environment and I say that I do not believe that that is correct, the conclusion as to what I think of CEPESA's statement is, I think very obvious.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, in view of the Minister's position with respect to the potential environmental damage that such incidents and certainly flaring in general can cause, is the Government considering taking any form of legal action against CEPESA in this respect or in 745 respect of this incident?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, we quickly reacted by filing this complaint and we are considering all options.

750 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, considering the incident that happened, is the Government looking at conducting an environmental impact study once again?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, an environmental impact study precisely on the operation of CEPESA?

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Perhaps my jargon is mistaken; I mean a study on the effect of the CEPESA flaring incidents or the refinery itself on human life and the environment?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it probably is not necessary. There was an environmental 760 audit of the plant in 2008 which was requested by the European Union and that in fact highlighted the need to prioritise electrical failures of the plant which is allegedly what happened on this occasion.

765 So we have argued to the Commission that these do not appear to have been tackled so whether there is a need to carry out a new environmental audit when one was done about six or seven years ago, and the conclusions of which we happen to agree with, I think it is probably not necessary. But what we are doing is reminding the Commission of the results of that audit and how CEPESA has failed to deliver on what that audit required.

770 It may not be necessary to conduct a new one but depending on responses and so on, again these are options that we will continue to keep open.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, was that environmental audit conducted as a consequence of the complaint that was made around 2005 or 2006 in relation to the operation of the refinery? I gather it was, as far as I can recall I think it was related to the Environmental Safety Group that made a complaint and I think the hon. Gentleman was involved at the time.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, it was the Environmental Safety Group and in my capacity with another NGO at the time I think I was a signatory to that complaint and certainly worked together with the ESG on it.

I would like to think it was as a result but we must remember that there have been other 780 complaints, some notably from environmentalists in the surrounding area. I do not know whether they have ever acknowledged the cause and effect that it was as a result of that complaint, I like to think that it was. And certainly I think that complaint played a large part in requiring that audit.

785 So I think we can be satisfied and I notice there is no difference across the House on this one.
I think we can be satisfied of the work of our NGOs through the years and also the fact that we are working very closely with them in moving this forward, which is a concern for all of us.

Fortunately for us, Mr Speaker, on that particular day it appears that the wind took the pollutants away from us but that is no justification because there are communities on the other side of the bay who were obviously affected.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in light of the fact and of course, on this the Government and the Opposition are going to be ad idem, but in the light of the fact that there have been previous complaints and that this keeps on occurring, what prospects does the hon. Member think that there is going to be for this complaint that the Government has filed? And therefore, 795 in the light of that and in the light of the fact that there have been various complaints, none of which appear really to have dealt with this particular issue, is it not perhaps the time to take it a step further and perhaps take legal action against CEPESA, as my hon. Friend, Mr Hammond has suggested in his previous question?

800 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as I replied to the Hon. Mr Hammond, we are keeping our options open. I do not think we should publicly declare our strategy, but we are keeping our options open. It is something that concerns us greatly.

Fortunately, they cannot use the Brexit argument against us, because that side of the border will stay within the EU and therefore they will be tied to European requirements.

805

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I remain very interested in the Minister's response to Question 116 reference CEPESA's response to the incident, because clearly we have a case here 810 where, and I very much respect the Minister's opinion because of his expertise in this area, and for that reason it concerns me deeply that we should have a big oil company coming out very publicly saying, 'Nothing to worry about here – what we have done is of absolutely no impact on the environment!' whereas I think even the layman would recognise that it has, and certainly 815 the Minister with his greater and more in-depth knowledge will certainly know that it has had an impact on the environment. Therefore it concerns me that there is a clear element, there is a clear issue of trust here in what we are being told by a big oil company and what the reality on the ground actually is.

Would the Minister care to comment on that particular point?

820 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not think the hon. Member is asking me to give an opinion on big oil companies and I certainly will not.

I take the point, there are concerns as to what that particular company has said and as I say, we are keeping our options open. But I do not think it would be sensible for me to labour that point any further.

Q117/2017

Cancer rates in Gibraltar – Epidemiological studies

825 Clerk: Question 117, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, would the Government consider commissioning a further epidemiological study since the last one conducted in 2010 in order to allay public fears that cancer rates may be higher in Gibraltar than in similar communities in Europe?

830

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
835 Mr Speaker, the epidemiological study in 2010 was conducted in response to public fears about cancer and it was carried out by Aarhus University in Denmark.

Epidemiological data collected prior to that by the Public Health Department had not shown higher rates than 'normal', and in many cases Gibraltar's rates appeared lower than that of many other countries.

It is against this background that the study was undertaken and it confirmed that:

the total cancer incidence rate in Gibraltar is within the normal range of other European countries; Gibraltar is not a high risk community for cancer.

The former GSD administration accepted those findings and defended them here. This administration is not satisfied with those findings. We will therefore be carrying out a further study.

Over the next two to three years, the successful completion of the Electronic Patient Record project is expected to yield high quality data that will enable the Gibraltar Cancer Registry to carry out similar epidemiological assessments in-house. At that time, the need for further research studies into specific aspects will be reviewed and we will be including them as part of the further research in a new epidemiological study.

Q118-119 and Q133/2017

Master Services – Retendering for contract

850

Clerk: Question 118, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: With the retendering of the current Master Services contract, will Government provide assurances that all employees of Master Services will be subjected to Transfer of Undertaking Regulations and have both their jobs and terms and conditions protected?

855

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

860

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 119 and 133.

Clerk: Question 119, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: A certain sense of déjà vu. Can the Government confirm that the invitation to tender for the Master Services contract will be publicly issued?

865

Clerk: Question 133, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What are the reasons for the non-renewal of the longstanding contract of Master Services?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Government has already confirmed, although it was not necessary for us to do so, that employees of Master Services are covered by the protection of the Transfer of Undertakings provisions which protect their jobs and terms and conditions of employment.

The tender will be published in the European Union Journal, as is required by EU law.

The contract will shortly expire and it must therefore be dealt with in accordance with mandatory EU procurement procedures.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, as we are subject to the rule of law, how many other companies will now be facing the same situation whereby other private companies will be subject to another tender process?

885

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, as the hon. Lady would expect, all of them whose contracts are within the provisions of the EU procurement rules.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Would it be possible to ask for a list of all other Government contracts and dates of expiry?

Mr Speaker: No – not now, anyhow. It is possible. I invite the hon. Lady to put down a question for the next meeting, but she cannot expect the information to be available today.

Hon. Chief Minister: That is right, Mr Speaker, although we would have to look at every contract which the Government has which falls within the parameters. I do not know whether that is something that could be done in five days, because the Government has a lot of contracts and looking at the parameters would require an assessment of all those contracts.

But there is a procedure that as soon as one of these contracts comes up they are flagged up, and I am sure that hon. Members were not surprised by this because we had a debate in this House where the hon. Lady raised the issue, and when she was told that the contract was expiring in March she may recall that it was when she got up and memorably said Gibraltar is smelly. We had a long debate about whether Gibraltar was smelly or not, and at that stage there was another question from the Opposition benches suggesting that cleanliness was not up to scratch and we were defending the fact that the contract was in force and that it would come up for tender in March and that therefore this was something that has long been trailed and expected in this community. At the very least, since the hon. Members raised it at that time, as it is raining, Gibraltar is less smelly today.

Mr Speaker: Any other supplementary on this matter? Next question.

910

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can I ask ...?

Mr Speaker: Yes, indeed.

915 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I do not imagine that Master Services will be stopping to work as soon as the contract ends, so what renewal term will be given to them to ensure that the workers will not be in employment on a month-to-month basis – do we know?

920 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the contract when it expires will – I assume in the context of whatever advice we have from Procurement as to what date they will be able to make final assessments in respect of tender submissions – probably be rolled over with an agreement for that period, subject to the advice from the Procurement Office, and that will be the date when we are confident that whoever takes over will be able to seamlessly start running the new show, which may very well be the same company or may be another company.

925 So this is not something that is fixed; it is something which has to be subject to advice from the Procurement Office. But I will tell her, Mr Speaker, that we have serious concerns about the contract that is currently in place and whether it was granted in keeping with EU procurement rules.

930 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Chief Minister give us any assurances as to whether the new employer or the new contract will encompass existing obligations in relation to pension schemes?

935 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, because there is a law that deals with that. There is a specific law that deals with the issue that the hon. Lady is raising, so she has the advantage that the Transfer of Undertakings provisions apply in respect of this matter if there is a new contract which deals with the same subject matter.

940 But the hon. Lady should not write off the possibility that the existing company, the existing contract party, might be the contract party that enters into a new arrangement with the Government. We have to ensure that we get the best value for money for the taxpayer and we have an obligation to do that through an EU procurement scheme which is the law of Gibraltar, since it was directly effective under EU law before we were elected and which we transposed into law because it was already outside the provisions for the transposition period, but it would bite at the time that the contract was granted before.

945 That is how we are going to ensure that this matter is determined, that is how we are going to ensure that the taxpayer gets best value for money and that is how we are going to ensure that Gibraltar is not smelly – so she does not have to ask us those questions again.

950 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, my concerns were echoing those of the employees I have been speaking to who have a concern because their pensions were frozen once, for the ones who have been working for over 18 years, and they very concerned that this may happen again. So I put that concern to the Chief Minister.

955 Can I just ask: if the new successful tender, whichever that may be ... can they take into account the other services that Master Services have provided? From what I understand, they have been exemplary in terms of taking care of ex-offenders, ex-drug addicts – people who have... they have rehabilitated a lot of their workers into society. Will that be a factor that the procurement will take into account in the new tender?

960 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady was putting to us that they were not exemplary in the way that they managed the toilets at Europa Point. She raised that issue on a number of occasions during the course of the exchanges that I am talking to her about.

965 I do not recognise in anything that she says anything to do with the Government in respect of frozen pensions. It has nothing to do with us; I assume it had nothing to do with the former administration before. Nobody has put to us any issue in relation to pensions having been frozen; it is not something we have heard about.

A number of employers in Gibraltar assist with rehabilitation of people who have been in prison. It is something that we would expect most employers in Gibraltar would want to do. In fact, some of the most loyal employees that firms have come from the pool of people who have made a mistake in life but are then given the opportunity to go on the straight and narrow – they recognise that they have been given that opportunity by an employer and they are very loyal indeed to those employers going forward.

I recognise that Master Services has done some of that work; other companies have also done some of that work. Given the sector which they are in, it is an area where people are able to be given an opportunity because there is little by way of trust in respect of moneys etc. in the context of doing the frontline work at the coalface in an industrial cleaning contract, and I would expect that whoever were to be successful in taking the contract will oft be prevailed upon by the officers of the Minister for the Environment – sorry, of Employment – to assist in that respect. I think I sent a shiver down the environmentalists’ spines when I pointed to Mr Licudi in respect of the environment! I meant employment. So I am sure that this is something that whoever is successful will be able to form part of. Indeed, I am reminded by the Minister for Economic Development that to be on the approved contractors list of the Government one is required to also form part of that programme.

But I am not for one moment suggesting that it may not be Master Services itself that succeeds in respect of the tender. It may very well be they have the wealth of 18 or 20 years’ experience, so they may be the ones who are successful, but what is important to us on this side of the House is that we ensure that we get best value for money for the taxpayer and that Gibraltar is clean, so that the hon. Lady does not have to tell us that the toilets at Europa Point are not to the standard that we would all expect them to be – and she was highlighting that as a complaint at the time – and so that nobody has to raise on social media, and her here, that Gibraltar is smelly.

I am sure, Mr Speaker, that the tender process will enable us to get closer to that standard of service we all wish for the value for money that we expect.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can I just clarify that I was not having a dig at Master Services itself when I raised the issue of the toilets being smelly. It could have had a lot to do with the way that the Government allocate contract working hours to Master Services, not necessarily a go at Master Services itself.

Secondly, I ask the Chief Minister if he has actually sat down with the main union, the GGCA, which holds most of the members of Master Services today, to find out the concerns that he claims he has not heard about yet.

And also I ask him to allay concerns that I hear widely that the new contract is actually already a fait accompli?

Hon. Chief Minister: Let me start at the end, Mr Speaker. It really ill behoves the hon. Lady to come to this House making allegations based on rumour, because she is going to spend her life in this House putting issues to the Government which are entirely and completely untrue. I have heard all sorts of rumours about her, about all of them over there and about each and every single one of us – rumours which are unrepeatable even in private to one’s wife, Mr Speaker. (Laughter)

But that is what Gibraltar is like. One hears rumours about everything, and the latest I have heard – well, one of the ones I have heard – is that the contract is going to be awarded to a relative of the Government and this is the best way that we are going to be able to spot how tenders are not granted in a way that is fair etc. Mr Speaker, this is utter tripe – it is complete and utter tripe. People just make it up as they go along. The proof of the pudding will be in the eating, Mr Speaker, and the hon. Lady need not concern herself with bringing to a place like this Parliament matters which she hears as tittle-tattle on the street.

I take the point from the hon. Lady that it is my fault that the toilets at Europa Point smelt and were not to the required standard and not the fault of the person whose job it is to run a company to ensure that the toilets are clean. I would have expected that from a politician; I did 1020 not expect it from her – I thought she was the voice of reason. Reason must dictate that the Government of the day, allocating more resources than have ever been allocated in cash terms in respect of this contract – I think that we have allocated almost a third or two-thirds more than used to be the case under the former administration – would have been entitled to expect that one might be able to eat one’s dinner off the floor of those toilets and not have it smell. So the 1025 hon. Lady must, if she was being honest with the way that she was dealing with matters, she must have been criticising Master Services. I know that today the political advantage is in aligning oneself with the employees of Master Services and not in being where she was with other hon. Members opposite last year, criticising the work done by Master Services. We will be consistent, Mr Speaker, in defending that we are going to seek the best value for money for the 1030 taxpayer – and that may mean we continue with Master Services or not and she need not concern herself with rumours that we might do otherwise.

Mr Speaker, finally, I have a meeting tomorrow afternoon with the union in question, who wishes that meeting, that was going to be one of our regular monthly meetings, to be dedicated to Master Services, so I expect to see them then. I have not met any other union in respect of 1035 this matter. In another meeting, in relation to other matters, with another union the issue was raised with me en passant and I gave my views and tomorrow I will have a meeting with the union that is principally responsible for the employees there. I have no doubt that when they hear what the Government has to say they will be much less concerned than they appear to be about the only issue that can matter to a union, namely the matters that relate to their 1040 employees. One would have thought that any other matter is beyond the remit of a union and I am sure that tomorrow the meeting with the union will be about those issues.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may come back to the tender itself, would the Minister, or indeed the Chief Minister, be able to add some colour to the invitation to tender and explain or 1045 advise the House what is anticipated to be the length of the contract under the tender, and will it be a tender for all existing services as provided by Master Services today?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the tender notice will be published in the European Journal of the European communities. It would be inappropriate to comment further, given that that 1050 tender notice is required to come out with a specific period within which people can tender and we do not want to be putting information into the public domain piecemeal. But the hon.
Gentleman will be able to see the tender: it will be available online and I think it is also published in local newspapers in addition to being published in the European Journal. That is as required.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I quite understand that in relation to the term, but can the Government give a view or some information in relation to its policy as to whether it intends to 1055 break up this contract into smaller segments or whether it is Government policy to tender for the entirety of what is now the Master Services contract?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I would have thought it was evident in what we have said:
there is going to be a tender. If we were intending to break it up there would have been a number of different tenders, and if there were a number of different tenders they might not pass the threshold of what is required to be advertised at a European-wide scale. So the Government has no intention of advertising anything other than one tender.

1060 In the context of the submissions it may be that we receive proposals to break it up or that we receive piecemeal proposals – I do not think we can stop that – and Procurement will have to assess whether those piecemeal proposals, either in whole or in part, are better than a whole contract as is presently the case for all of Gibraltar or just for specific parts. It may be that there are specific parts where somebody tenders and that is more valuable. But as far as the 1070 Government is concerned, it is going out as one contract.

Q120/2017
North Gate building –
Steps to prevent demolition; listing

Clerk: Question 120, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise what steps it has taken to prevent the demolition of the North Gate building of the dockyard and has it sought the permission of the Secretary of State to list the structure under the Gibraltar Heritage Trust Act?
1075

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Yes Mr Speaker, the matter of the MOD Gatehouse has been the subject of public debate for some time now. The planning process through the Development and Planning Commission was carried out in the same manner that is applied to Government projects.

The recommendation of the DPC was that the Gatehouse should not be demolished and Government was hopeful that the Ministry of Defence would accept that decision. MOD moved to start enabling works for the demolition of the building.
1085

At this stage, after consultation with the Chief Minister, who was away from Gibraltar, I contacted the Commander of the British Forces in my capacity as Acting Chief Minister and offered to discuss possible ways of resolving the matter. Later, the Chief Minister and I met with His Excellency the Governor and this was followed by meetings between Gibraltar Government and MOD representatives in order to explore ways in which to protect or preserve the building. The building will now not be done away with, but will be moved to another location.
1090

Further information will be released soon – as soon as these planning meetings determine the best way forward.

With regard to the second part of the question, the building was not listed in the Act and the Government will consider possible listing in the context of the new Heritage and Antiquities Act.
1095

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for his response. Can he confirm to me that, from his answer, that in fact there was no attempt to seek the existing structure ... permission from the Secretary of State to be listed in its current location?
1100

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, that provision is a provision that predates the 2006 Constitution. Matters relating to Heritage are now entirely in the purview of the Government of Gibraltar, and the Government of Gibraltar does not think it is appropriate to be seeking consent from the Secretaries of State to list things in Gibraltar. There is a draft Heritage and Antiquities Act that should soon be on the Statute Book and that will enable us to deal with issues such as that in the future.

But I must say to the hon. Gentleman, as I was heartened to hear the response of the Gibraltar Heritage Trust for the work that my hon. Friend did in my absence from Gibraltar – and would have been doing anyway in respect of his responsibilities – about the fact that the Government has been able to find a way to ensure that this building is preserved for future generations. My own view is that it must be rebuilt in the area, it must be rebuilt quickly and it must be rebuilt in a place where people can have access to it so that this piece of heritage is one that our children can access and not see it behind the wire.
1110

As to moving this particular piece of our military heritage, although I recognise it is not ideal, unfortunately the attitude of the Ministry of Defence was not the one that we might have expected. If it were only in relation to small heritage buildings, one might have had an easier week last week. But let's be very clear: the temple of Abu Simbel, the temple of Rameses II in 1115

1120 Egypt, was moved because it might have flooded with the Aswan Dam's creation, and it is now seen by many millions of people every year. It was a feat of engineering the likes of which, I remember seeing, had not occurred before in our history as a humanity. There is a very good YouTube of it, actually, Mr Speaker, where you see all of the bits of it being redone by National Geographic. This small movement is hardly Abu Simbel, but I think that it is important for our 1125 children that this particular building be preserved and that it be accessible to future generations of Gibraltarians.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister and I concur with his view of Abu Simbel, having visited it myself.

1130 However, in this case – and I refer back to his comment about the Constitution and the Secretary of State and this House not requiring the permission of the Secretary of State for anything that is done in Gibraltar – however, this building is in fact on Crown land, and the provision I was referring to was in exactly that kind of instance where this building is on Crown land and not on Government land, and therefore, from my reading of the law as it stands, any attempt to list any building on Crown land would require the permission of the Secretary of 1135 State, which is why I included that in my question. It would have been possible – I do not know if it is possible – if the Minister had applied to the Secretary of State, to list it in its current situation, and if the Secretary of State was so minded then he may have averted the need to move this building.

1140 But I must ask the Minister: is he not slightly concerned that this sets a rather dangerous precedent for any other structure or building which currently is on Crown or MOD land – for example, there are structures on Windmill Hill which certainly are old and ancient – and whether the MOD stance will be 'Look, either we demolish it for car parking or take it away'? Does the Minister have any intention of accelerating the Heritage Act so as to cover this kind of scenario?

1145 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not think the hon. Gentleman quite understands the structure of land in Gibraltar. All land in Gibraltar is Crown land. Even freehold land is Crown land because the title comes from the Crown. The Crown, Mr Speaker, is that Crown: the Crown that is here in Parliament. It is the Crown which is represented in Gibraltar by His Excellency the Governor in representation of Her Majesty the Queen, the Queen of Gibraltar. That Crown land 1150 is vested in the people of Gibraltar. The Ministry of Defence have access to it whilst that land is necessary only for the purposes of the defence of Gibraltar.

1155 So the Secretary of State is a tenant in respect of that land, and that is the clear position under something that is called Lands Memoranda, which comes from the times of Joshua Hassan, and the negotiations have traditionally been on the basis that that is the case. The fact that it is Crown land means nothing in the context of this equation, any more than that this is Crown land and that the hon. Gentleman's apartment is on Crown land and that all of us live on Crown land because all leases come from the Crown in Gibraltar.

1160 If there is an item of heritage value on land which is presently used by the Ministry of Defence, I think the hon. Gentleman will find that most of what the Ministry of Defence inhabit has long been some of the most precious heritage that Gibraltar might have, and the Ministry of Defence are not known for looking after the heritage of Gibraltar. The work that the Hon. the Minister for Employment did when he was Minister for Education at the University, when he was responsible for that project, showed us that those magnificent facilities up there were oft drilled 1165 into with no respect for the work that had been done in erecting those buildings etc. I suppose if you are the Ministry of Defence you can say, 'Well, the Royal Engineers put it up and the Royal Engineers made a hole in it 250 years later.' That is not quite the attitude one would expect.

And so, Mr Speaker, I think it is important that we realise that in the context of this particular Act the Secretary of State had a role which was not a role related to where the land was; it was a role related to the 1969 Constitution and the structure of it. The 2006 Constitution is different:

1170 all matters vest in the Government except for those carved out. Defence is one of the items carved out, and so matters relating to defence still will require consent of Secretary of State etc.

I do not think it is appropriate to be asking Secretaries of State, who owe their allegiance to another Crown, whether they would agree that something should be listed in respect of Crown land in Gibraltar. I think he will find that is an attitude that was shared across the floor with the former GSD administration – given his quizzical look, I do not know whether it is a view that is shared today – and that is why the policy of this Government has been to bring a Heritage and Antiquities Act, because we will deal with that as we will with many, many other things that are outstanding in relation to heritage.

I suppose, given that we are dealing with heritage and antiquities, it is right that these things should mature before they are brought to Parliament, and that is why it is taking a little time. Of course, it is Hobson's choice whether one steps in to save this particular small guardhouse or not, given that it could establish what the hon. Gentleman calls a precedent. The Government does not see it as a precedent at all. There were other measures that could have been taken by the Government, but I think, in the context of what we are dealing with and the size of what we are dealing with, this is the right measure to have taken and to ensure that we can preserve this particular guardhouse for future generations in the way that we have.

Each case will have to be dealt with on its merits. I know that the MOD do not see this as a precedent; and if they did, they would be foolish to do so because the Government has, and in future will have even more, opportunities to take action to prevent Gibraltar's heritage from being dissipated in any way, wherever on the whole of the square mileage of Gibraltar that heritage item may be located, all of it being Crown land.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his clarification as to what is and what is not Crown land, and also his view as to the role, if any, that any Secretary of State may or may not play. The fact remains that there is reference to the Secretary of State in the Heritage Trust Act – and the Minister can correct me if I am wrong.

My question is: if the Chief Minister is so adamant that we have total control over all land in Gibraltar, why was it that the Government simply did not list the structure?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not know the answer to that question. He would have to ask the hon. the former Leader of the House, who did an agreement in respect of that particular guardhouse. The agreement in relation to land done by the Ministry of Defence and the Gibraltar Government – the Lands Agreements, as they are known – covered that guardhouse and it was to come back to the Government of Gibraltar, and then there would have been no issue, Mr Speaker. But the Ministry of Defence had options under that agreement and they exercised the option to retain that portion of land, and in the context of doing so we find ourselves with this difficulty.

I am heartened that hon. Members are now encouraging us to pursue our policies in respect of heritage, because it was our policy to have a Heritage and Antiquities Act. We are the ones working on it. They did not have it in their manifestos. We are the ones pursuing this particular attitude which will enable us to preserve Gibraltar's heritage, and I am very much looking forward to the time when the relevant Ministers who have been working on this in great detail – from the Deputy Chief Minister to the Minister for the Environment and the former Minister for Heritage, the Minister for Culture – bring that piece of legislation to the House, because I think it is an important step forward in the protection that Gibraltar affords its heritage, as indeed was the step taken by us in Government, which was, I imagine, opposed by hon. Members opposite, to have a Gibraltar archaeologist. Of course that meant that we increased the number of people in the public sector, something for which they repeatedly whip us. But all of this, Mr Speaker, is part of the work of preserving our heritage.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, can I just add one thing? Were it not for the intervention of the Chief Minister – and, dare I say, mine – that guardhouse would probably now be on the rubble dump, and that is one point that seems to have escaped the Opposition. (Banging on desks) (Hon. S J Sacramento: Hear, hear. Well done.)

1225

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister will know there is nobody in this House other than himself who has heritage closer to his heart, and if he wants congratulations he has it wholeheartedly from me, for him and the Government benches, for saving this structure. But my concern is that we have provision in law, and the Chief Minister has just gone to great length to tell us that he has full control over everything in Gibraltar – except for this guardhouse, it would appear. And when I ask him why wasn't it listed, he said he does not know because of this Lands Memorandum. Which way is it? Does he have control over everything in Gibraltar, or does he not? And if he does, why didn't he list it?

1230

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman pretends that he and one particular Minister are the people who have heritage closest to their hearts. He is wrong to do that. He does not realise how close to its heart the whole of this Government has our heritage. In fact, it is one of the reasons why many of us – in fact, all of us on this side of the House – are in politics: to preserve our heritage and to take it forward for future generations. And heritage is not just buildings: it is way of life, it is language, it is our commitment to British sovereignty. All of that is an important part of the heritage of Gibraltar, although I hear the hon. the Leader of the Opposition saying things sotto voce that he should not be saying in this House.

Mr Speaker, it is very clear to me that the hon. Gentleman does not seem to understand the structure of Gibraltar's political hierarchy –

1245

Mr Speaker: But you have explained in detail to him how the Lands Memorandum over the years apply, and I am asking you not to repeat it. If he has not understood the explanation that you have given, it is just too bad. I am asking you not to repeat it. You have explained what the position is with regard to Crown land, whether it is held by the Ministry of Defence or by the Government of Gibraltar. It is a matter going back for decades, which previous Chief Ministers have fought very very hard to obtain. You have explained what the position is – please do not repeat it.

1250

Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Speaker, and the point is that the upshot of all that – and I am grateful that I have explained it clearly enough that you are right to tell me not to repeat it again – is that the Government of Gibraltar controls all land in Gibraltar.

1255

The Constitution provides certain exceptions. Defence is the relevant one here – defence and security – and if a piece of land is required for defence purposes, then it is not an area that we control as to what happens there. But there are other opportunities to control what happens in respect of that area of land and the hon. Gentleman just needs to read the newspapers and see what happened last week to see that the jurisdiction of Gibraltar extends to what is occurring on MOD land. That is, I think, now more abundantly clear than it ever has been before.

So I am surprised that he is still insisting in respect of this matter, but look, there was a small guardhouse, it had heritage value, we have saved that guard house, it is going to be preserved for future generations. It is going to have to be rebuilt elsewhere, which ... it did not have to be rebuilt elsewhere and it could have stayed there. Perhaps a more sensible approach might have been possible. I am sorry to say it was not possible, Mr Speaker. Could we have done something else in respect of land which has heritage value on the MOD estate? I have already told him that there are other opportunities to do things in respect of such heritage artefacts, and in fact there will be even more under the new Heritage and Antiquities Act.

Now, other than going round in circles and explaining it all to him again, which Mr Speaker has in fact ensured I am not able to do, I would just perhaps ask him to take a closer look at the provisions of the Gibraltar Constitution and how it has changed since 1969.

1275 Mr Speaker: Before we deal with Question 121, I am going to give an opportunity to the Hon. Mr Llamas to ask a number of supplementaries arising from the schedules that were previously circulated.

1280 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I just ask one supplementary on this?

Mr Speaker: Yes, I will allow you before we move on to him.

1285 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, looking forwards, is it the position of the Government, when it publishes the new Heritage Act, that it has the constitutional power and indeed the will to be able to list any historical buildings within any MOD land so that those are preserved and protected against any adverse decisions by the MOD in the future?

1290 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will take that question to have been uttered with an element of oral negligence, because the hon. Gentleman does not need me to tell him, I hope, that an Act of Parliament cannot change the Constitution. So we are not going to change the constitutional position by an Act of Parliament, and when he sees the way that he phrased his question in Hansard he will realise that he has suggested that in the way he has put it. Of course an Act is not going to change the constitutional position but the Act will make the most of the constitutional authority available to the Government in those particular respects.

1295 It is also true to say that we are talking here about the attitude of the MOD to a small guardhouse and all the rest of it, but we have to set this debate in the context of where Gibraltar has been in the last 20 years and where it is today. It was not the Ministry of Defence that destroyed the Rosia tanks – the tanks that victualled the Victory, on its way to the Battle of Trafalgar ... It was those who were in the party that says it has heritage close to its heart. We have come a long way since then; we are going to go even further. We are going to protect Gibraltar for future generations. This Government has done a sterling job already in doing so; we will do even better in the future.

1300 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, with respect to the hon. Gentleman and his unfortunate usual style of attempting to obfuscate questions and indeed the answers that he gives, the question is very simple: does the Government feel confident that the new Heritage Act will be able to prevent the destruction of Gibraltar's heritage even when it is on MOD land, so that we do not have a repetition of what has happened with the guardhouse?

1310 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is what happens when hon. Members do not listen to all of the answers that have been provided. I have said yes on a number of occasions in answer to his hon. colleague. I will say yes again to him, given that he appears only to understand things which are black or white, yes or no. The answer is yes, and he should not think that we do not, under the existing Act, potentially also have powers in that respect. If he goes back and looks at what I have said in Hansard, when he does go back and look at how carelessly he phrased his earlier question, he will be able to see what I have said. And I was not obfuscating when I was referring to the Rosia tanks. I was referring to the destruction of them by the GSD, so it ill behoves them to say that they are the ones that hold heritage close to their hearts – unless their hearts are in a heap of rubble.

1320 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Lawrence Llamas.

1325 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, returning to Question 103, Question 103 relates to a question asked last year – Question 847/2016 – where there were a considerable amount of capital works being carried out by different contractors. The breakdown that the Hon. Minister has given me is very brief and it does not actually concur with the capital works that actually appear to have taken place in Question 847. I wonder if maybe he has been given the wrong breakdown.

1330 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, what I have noticed is that there is only the cost given in one of the entries and it may be that the version that got included may have been an earlier draft. I undertake to look into this today and just to cross check whether there has been some error in the preparation or in the table that has actually been presented. I apologise for that. I will look into that and ensure that we have the matter resolved.

1335 Hon. L F Llamas: And also it would be helpful if the Hon. Minister could include the years in which the works took place, because at the moment it only gives an outline of the month and end month but we do not know if it took a year or just three months.

1340 Also, turning to Question 110/2017, is the Hon. Minister able to provide further details as to what type of other arrears are owed by the debtors to the Government, whether tax, rent, rates or any other type of arrears?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: In relation to Question ...?

1345 Hon. L F Llamas: Question 110.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, my impression from the answer that has been prepared for me is that there are none, but once again, as he has asked that, I will double check specifically.

1350 Hon. L F Llamas: So, Mr Speaker, am I right to assume that the only arrears that these companies have – or entities, because we do not know what they are – are in relation to the Upper Rock admission fees and they do not have any other arrears with another Government Department? That is what I think has confused me. Question 110 asked for arrears in other Departments or other Government-owned companies.

1355 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that is what I said I believe to be the case, but as the hon. Member is asking specifically – as I do not prepare the draft of the answers, the information, myself – I will go back to those people who prepared it to double check that my impression is correct and I will respond.

1360 Hon. L F Llamas: Finally, Mr Speaker, in relation to Question 107, the Hon. Minister says that with the exception of the taxi drivers not paying during the months of January and February is because it is a low season. Can I just ask the Minister, given that – and I am just using taxis, obviously, because it is taxis that have been given as an exemption from not paying – if we take April to January 2015-16 and April to January 2016-17, they have had an increase of passengers of 117,000, does it seem fair to further exempt them by not paying for those two months?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member is referring to the fact that it seems to have increased this last winter as opposed to the previous one ... Is that what he is saying?

1370 Hon. L F Llamas: Sorry, comparing the figures from April 2015 to January 2016 and then comparing them from April 2016 to January 2017 – because of, obviously, the new policy of not allowing foreign vehicles up the Rock – taxi drivers, as well as other tour operators, have benefitted from an increase of 117 just for those months. So it appears that they have already ... they should have made up for those two months which were previously exempted, and to allow 1375 them to further exempt for this year. It does not seem fair when we have got, for example, the Chief Minister asking in his New Year speech that we should ... this is a time now of common work endeavour. It does not seem to tie in with what the Chief Minister is trying to tell the community to further exempt when obviously it is a low season for many traders and many stakeholders in our tourist product.

1380 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Gentleman does not understand what the provision does. It takes more people up the Rock, which means more people access the tourist sites, so it is driving more traffic into the Upper Rock and therefore enabling us to have more revenue. Otherwise, people might have not, in those months, been prepared to go up. At 1385 the ticket price, they are prepared to go up and some of them, when they are up there, will go into the sites and will then purchase the ticket.

So we have a different view as to what this does to the Government side of the equation.
Although there may be revenue issues generally, we think that this helps an industry, and that industry is also a part of what keeps Gibraltar running. I know that hon. Members like to whip 1390 the taxi drivers as much as they can, but they are an important sector of our economy as well and they do, in their own way, produce economic activity. We happen to think that this is economic activity that has to be fostered even in months when otherwise it would be difficult to see them able to do other types of business that would keep the fleet going.

Q121/2017
Hot school lunches –
Provision to all schoolchildren

Mr Speaker: Question 121.

1395 Clerk: Question 121, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Minister for Education provide an update on its commitment to provide hot school lunches to all children in our schools?

1400 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, Government ... Sorry, I have not been called. Shall I let you call me? Sorry, I am a bit overenthusiastic this morning!

1405 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, Government is working on delivering on our commitment.

1410 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, it would be helpful if the Minister could give a little bit more information than that.

On 15th September last year we were told that the Government was preparing for a consultation process with parents, headteachers and their unions, and in the Chief Minister's
New Year Message he said – and I need to use that often-used word in here – 'shortly' will be 1415 launching the programme for hot lunches to be available in schools. So I would be grateful if the Minister could amplify his answer to provide our community with a bit more oversight as to what is happening.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the consultation process is ongoing.

1420 Hon. E J Phillips: Well, Mr Speaker, I would be grateful to know at what stage the consultation process is. We were told that there was planning, or pre-planning, and preparation for the consultation process. Is the consultation process underway? Has the Department spoken to parents, headteachers and their unions?

1425 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Mr Speaker, the consultation process is sufficiently advanced that I am very confident that at the next election hon. Members will not be able to tell the electorate that we failed in our commitment to provide hot lunches for all our children in schools.

Q122/2017
New schools –
Update

1430

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education provide an update on the building of five new schools, namely the new Bishop Fitzgerald, Notre Dame, St Martin's, Bayside and St Anne's Schools and the projected cost of the undertaking?

1435

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, a working group has been set up to include all the headteachers and deputy heads of the pertinent schools, and also senior staff from the Department of Education, to deal with the works to be undertaken. It is still not possible to talk about any meaningful projected costs beyond ballpark figures.

Hon. E J Phillips: Is the Minister able to give us a ballpark figure?

1445

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: What are they? What are ballpark figures?

1450

Hon Dr J E Cortes: I think the expression is normally used to say approximate – (Mr Speaker: Estimates?) Estimates, yes.
Mr Speaker, I would rather not at this stage.

Q123 and 130/2017
President Donald Trump –
Congratulatory letters from Gibraltar schoolchildren; AMCHAM competition

1455

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm whether or not the Department of Education either directly or indirectly invited school children as young as six years of age and above to send letters to the United States President Donald Trump, congratulating and welcoming him to his office?

1460 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 130.

1465 Clerk: Question 130, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Minister for Education explain the process relating to the possibility for third parties or external bodies to have an influence on the school agenda as was seen with the recent 'Donald Trump Competition' exercise through AMCHAM?

1470 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1475 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, in the specific case referred to, the competition was organised by the American Chamber of Commerce and schools were offered the opportunity to participate.

It is not for the Department of Education to consider who the incumbent President is, but rather to consider the educational value of such a competition.

1480 No third party has any influence on the school agenda. The Department of Education decides on which competitions have educational value. It then invites schools to decide if they want to participate or not. Schools have complete autonomy to decide if they want to take part.

1485 I am now going to quote from a letter written by a seven-year-old Syrian girl who introduces herself to President Trump as, and I quote, 'part of the Syrian children who suffered from the Syrian war'. The quote continues:

Can you please save the children and people of Syria? You must do something for the children of Syria because they are like your children and deserve peace like you.

The letter then continues:

If you promise me you will do something for the children of Syria, I am already your new friend.

The relevant pupil penned this letter just before Donald Trump's inauguration speech and I do not feel I have to add anything else.

1490 Hon. E J Phillips: Just one further question relating to that: given that we are an open, tolerant community, could the Minister explain the educational value of this competition, particularly for those as young as six?

1495 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is not –

Mr Speaker: No. The Minister has no responsibility, on educational grounds, to explain a competition set up by a third body. (Interjection) No.

1500 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, what he did explain was that the Department of Education would assess the educational value.

Mr Speaker: You are asking the Minister to explain, in his view, what the educational value is of a particular competition which has been introduced by a third party. The Minister, as a responsible Minister of the Gibraltar Government, has no responsibility and there is no requirement for him to express such a view.

Next supplementary.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, much as I am warmed by the Minister's quote of the Syrian girl, I think that the desperation of the Syrians and the Syrian cause cannot really be paralleled with our own motives and our own values in an open and democratic community, so perhaps ... I think that the two things are very different and obviously, considering the doubts and the issues that many free-thinking people have with Trump's presidency, I think this is what we were coming to mainly in terms of doubting whether ... Well. in my case, my question was more about how the Ministry of Education decides on what actually has value and what our ethos is when we hand over to our children to make such representations.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Mr Speaker, I do not think it ill behoves any government of one state to be commenting on the government of another state unless they are going to engage in diplomacy in respect of one aspect or another.

But I can think that there was potentially huge educational value in asking our children to write to the leadership of North Korea – that yesterday discharged a missile into the Sea of Japan whilst it tests its nuclear-tipped warheads and the ability to deliver those warheads across the Pacific into North America – and write to him to ask him to help to keep the world a more peaceful place. I can imagine that there is huge educational value in asking our children to write to the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom to ask her to put EU nationals who live in the UK out of their misery as to what their rights will be in respect of residence in the UK once the United Kingdom leaves the European Union.

There are many things on which we all, or some of us individually, might agree or disagree with an international politician where an exercise in the schools of writing to that individual may bring out of the children something as moving as the hon. Gentleman has referred to us in respect of this Syrian girl. I was really moved when I saw what the hon. Gentleman has now referred to the House when it was referred to me, and it put me in mind of the fact that exercises like this can have consequences which we cannot imagine, and sometimes six-year-olds can make something really shine out in that way.

Mr Trump has been vilified in the international press for many reasons. A lot of what we read is anathema to modern liberal democracies. Some of what he is saying we might all agree with. Gibraltar is a place that has lower corporate taxes – the President of the United States is saying he wants to lower corporate taxes in the United States – and a lot of people think that we are a pariah internationally because we have low corporate rates. He is going to do that. He is going to, it is said, move the US Embassy in Israel to Jerusalem, something that causes huge controversy but is positive in the minds of others.

So I think that this is not about making a judgement about Donald Trump. I think each of us are entitled as human beings to make a judgement even about politicians we do not vote for but whom we read about. But this was an exercise, I think, run in good faith by an organisation that wanted people to be educationally involved in writing a letter. I think it would have been run whether Mrs Clinton had won the election or Mr Trump had won the election, and therefore we have to be careful not to stray into making our own views and choices what we impose on children in the way that they might not have had the opportunity of writing letters.

I can imagine that many of those six-year-olds, apart from this Syrian girl, might have given Mr Trump very good advice indeed, and if only we could get him to read those letters it might be that our own liberal views as to what should happen in the United States might prevail – but unfortunately that is not the way the world crumbles. But I do wish that Mr Trump would heed the advice to make this little Gibraltar-Syrian girl his friend by doing what she has asked him to do.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Minister for Education: given that his Department obviously endorsed this competition and he continues to do so, how many schools actually have participated, and out of that population of schools, how many did not participate, and why?

1560

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I believe – I am working from memory – that eight may have participated, but I would need to check that.

1565

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if he would check that indeed eight schools did participate – out of a population of how many?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Do you mean number of schools? There are seven first schools –

1570

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Seven first schools and four middle.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: So, more or less 11 or 12, but I can double check that.

Hon. R M Clinton: And would the Minister know why certain schools did not participate?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker. As I said before, schools have total autonomy in whether they feel that the school programme allows them to do this or whether they want to do this and any other initiative of this nature. They are not asked to account, the headteachers have a considerable amount of autonomy and I think that is absolutely correct.

1585

Hon. Chief Minister: To assist the House, one of the things the hon. Gentleman and Lady opposite might be even more incensed at is that the magnificent pupils of St Mary's Middle School, opposite No. 6 Convent Place ... St Mary's First School, opposite No. 6 Convent Place, decided to invite the Chief Minister of Gibraltar – a man with whom they have no affinity whatsoever and whom they regard probably as a lower form of political life than even the President of the United States – to come in, and they have done magnificent work in understanding the politics of Gibraltar. They have painted portraits of all the Chief Ministers – yourself included, Mr Speaker. They were very interested in what it is that a Chief Minister does and they gave me elements of advice as to what it is a Chief Minister should be doing and what the best things for Gibraltar might be in the future. None of them, by the way, had any affinity with any of the things the hon. Members opposite are telling me to do for Gibraltar's future. Nobody told that school to do it, nobody told them to invite me so I could go and meet future voters and bias them in some way in favour of my political party, nobody has told the other schools to do it. They thought there was educational value in that, and yet I know hon. Members. In fact, the Hon. Mr Llamas has said that I have embarked Gibraltar on a suicide train to ruin, so one would have thought it was something they would have wanted to curtail, although he only asks questions in this House, I say as an aside, that relate to hoverboards, Mr Speaker, so maybe it is that he thinks that I have put us on a Segway to ruin, (Laughter) but his questions do not reflect that level of serious concern about where our community is going.

Schools have to have the freedom to do what they think is educationally in the best interest of their pupils. Under us they do. This offer is made to them, we do not stand in the way of it, 1605 and some of them produced magnificent results like the result that the hon. Gentleman has referred to the House.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if I may add to that, (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) regarding international value –

1610 Mr Speaker: Just a moment.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker...

Mr Speaker: Yes.

1615 Hon. S E Linares: Is there a question?

Mr Speaker: The Leader of the Opposition.

1620 Hon. D A Feetham: Can we return now to the question rather than the Chief Minister's visit – interesting as that is – to St Mary's School. I do have a supplementary that is relevant. (Interjection by Dr J E Cortes) We have now gone from the Minister to the Chief Minister back to the Minister.

1625 Mr Speaker: Well, from the Minister it will go to you.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this is anecdotal but there has been a question about the educational value and I was about to say that my own grandson.

1630 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker has ruled it out. Mr Speaker ruled the question out.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, may I not reply about the educational value?

1635 Mr Speaker: You may not express ... Because you are politically responsible for education in Gibraltar but you are not a professional, I am ruling that you are not required to answer a question as to what you deem to be the educational value of this exercise.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker –

1640 Mr Speaker: That is my ruling.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, my response at the time was going to be exactly that. I was very grateful to Mr Speaker for having pointed that out.

1645 I will answer not as an educational professional but as a grandparent whose five-year-old grandson ... My little Ryan, whom I have never spoken to about Donald Trump before, asked me the other day – I have spoken to him about nature, birds and Pokémon, but not about Donald Trump – just shortly after the election, 'Grandpa, I hear Donald Trump got made as President of the United States – are you happy about that?' I will not say what the answer was, but clearly they are aware about these things and there is clearly educational value in them having a discussion about this subject. That is purely as a grandfather and not as an educational professional – which I am not.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1655 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, thank you very much to the Minister for answering the question from my hon. Friend, Mr Phillips, that was ruled out.

1660 My question is about policy. Here we have a situation where you have a private entity that has channelled, through the Department of Education, an initiative. The Department of Education has obviously endorsed that initiative and has indeed affected a strategy for the implementation of the initiative. When an initiative like that comes to the Department of Education, does the Minister actually get consulted in relation to this, or is it a decision that is taken entirely by the Department of Education and the Minister is not involved in any consultative capacity at all?

1665 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as a rule the educational professionals deal with it in a professional manner. If there are any issues which the Department of Education feels are issues that need to be discussed at another level, then they may come to me. Remember, Mr Speaker, that I have only been Minister for Education for a relatively short time – I can only assume that that was the practice in the past.

1670 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, in relation to this –

1675 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, and normally... If I may, Mr Speaker – I do apologise. My response is normally ‘this is an educational matter, you have to take a view on the educational value and this is not a political matter’. This is my usual response to that sort of request.

Hon. D A Feetham: And in relation to this particular instance, to this particular initiative, was the Minister consulted before it was effected?

1680 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, I was informed about the matter and I referred it to the Chief Minister.

Mr Speaker: And you what?

1685 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I referred it to the Chief Minister for an opinion as well.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q124/2017
University of Gibraltar –
Exchanges with other universities and colleges

Clerk: Question 124, the Hon. E J Phillips.

1690 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state the number of exchanges that have taken place between the University of Gibraltar and other universities and colleges?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1695 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, as it is an independent body, such questions should be addressed to the University.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, a sense of déjà vu.

1700 In the Government's manifesto there are references to university exchanges: they applaud the Washington internship and they state quite categorically that they want to improve exchanges between the University and other universities, which must mean foreign universities.

1705 There is a financial commitment of over £10 million for the establishment of the University and there is a continuing obligation of the Government to support the University as the University is not self-sufficient. I would have thought it was within the purview of the Minister to answer the question as to the number of exchanges. I am quite happy to write to the Chancellor, but clearly, in relation to this matter, this is a funded project by the people, by the public and it is from the public purse, over £10 million, and it continues to be funded.

1710 I would have thought they could explain a very simple answer to that question, which is how many exchanges have taken place between the University and other external universities.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman raises an issue of principle. We fund a lot of things that are independent. One of the things that the Hon. the former Chief Minister – very oft referred to as the greatest Gibraltarian of all time – insisted in the course of the debate in this House when we created the University was that it must be independent. The Hansard is there. The hon. Gentleman said in relation to the bank and in relation to the University, 'I am going to support your initiatives but it must be entirely independent.' And so, when we, as a matter of policy want to see things happen, we write and we provide funding, and then it is a matter for the University.

1720 We are not politically answerable in this House for things that are independent, because if we were it would be impossible for us to provide information without compromising independence. And so the hon. Gentleman has the answer to his question, which is that he should write to the Vice-Chancellor.

1725 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q125/2017
Teaching posts –
Numbers vacant and being acted

Clerk: Question 125, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: How many teaching posts are currently vacant and being acted?

1730 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
1735 Mr Speaker, just to prove that when I can provide information and when it is appropriate that I should, I will do, the information requested by the hon. Member is in the schedule which I now hand over.

1740 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, does the Minister accept that there is a backlog and delays in appointing the right candidates to these posts, and does he have plans to bring these backlogs down and up to date, as it is disconcerting for teachers and pupils?

1745 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there are a total of 18 posts out of a complement of 382 teachers, so that is only 4.7%. It is low. Clearly we would like all the teachers to be there in the substantive position but sometimes that is not possible, particularly because of the disruption that can be caused by movement of teachers in the middle of the academic year. So I would be concerned if this was the case or there were higher levels. This is actually quite low, but if there were higher levels at the beginning of the academic year ... I am not so concerned about halfway into the academic year, because the plan is to regularise them all by September so that most of them will be filled in September. I think it is the time of year that is more relevant than any particular moment.

1755 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Sorry, I do not quite understand. I have also noticed that a lot of posts do get taken over at the middle of the academic year and I have noticed that it can look a little bit clumsy, so is the intention to have them all set up by September?

1760 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the intention is to have them all by September. Clearly there may be other things that happen between now and September – people retiring, people going sick for long term and so on and so forth. It does not mean that there will not be any changes during the academic year – particularly in some of the senior posts this might be necessary – but that is a management decision and it is up to the senior staff of the Education Department to manage them as they see it fits in best with the schools. They do this in discussion with the schools, with headteachers, and as part of the social partnership with the Teachers' Association in discussions with the GTA.

Q126/2017
Education advisers –
Vacant positions

1765 Clerk: Question 126, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: How are the vacant positions of education advisers in the Department of Education being covered at present, and what plans, if any, are there to fill them?

1770 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1775 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, in order, again, not to disrupt the functioning of our schools, the posts are being covered by experienced retired headteachers and Deputy headteachers.

There are, however, clear and well-defined plans to fill in these posts in the immediate future, and most certainly before the end of this academic year, in accordance with the Government's manifesto commitments.

1780 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, would the Minister agree that the fact that retired teachers are presently doing this work is actually denying present teachers of having experience in acting in these roles, and does the Minister agree that this also affects the current teachers' hopes and motivations to an extent?

1785 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, first of all I would like to thank these retired teachers for coming back and serving the community in the way that they are and using their vast experience in education in filling the gap.

1790 I can assure the hon. Lady that this matter is in the process of being addressed actively and very, very shortly we will be able to allow these headteachers and deputy headteachers the rest and recovery that retirement needs to bring and we will have teachers replacing them in their posts. Certainly by September – once again the relevance of disruption to schools comes into play – by September they will be in place.

1795 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may by way of supplementary ask the Minister: these retired headteachers and deputy headteachers, on what basis are they being employed? Are they on some kind of consultancy agreement, or is it some sort of extension of the normal employment contract?

1800 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I would need to seek the information. They were there well before I took over responsibility for education and therefore it is not information that I have to hand, but I am very happy to find out.

Q127/2017
Heating in classrooms –
Audit to determine adequacy

Clerk: Question 127, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1805 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Has an adequate audit been carried out in recent years to ascertain present levels of heating classrooms in our schools?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1810 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, an intensive health and safety audit was undertaken in schools during 2012, which included an assessment of temperature controls. The findings indicated that building insulation, cross ventilation and numerous other contributing factors have an impact on counteracting temperature extremes.

1815 Classroom temperatures are checked on a regular basis and flagged if they drop beneath what is considered a healthy working environment. Action to remedy this situation is then taken.

1820 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that answer, but does the Minister realise that many classrooms in our schools are actually not properly equipped with enough heating to the extent that teachers are having to bring in their own portable heaters on occasions? May this indicate other problems?

1825 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am not aware of teachers bringing in their own heaters. If that is the case, it certainly has not been brought to my notice and it is certainly something that should not be necessary because I am sure that the Department of Education would be more than happy to provide any additional heaters should they be required.

1830 I think this Government has accepted the fact that some of our schools are now tired, and this is why we have this programme that we are embarking on to replace some of our schools. Without the detailed information here at present, I suspect that the ones where temperature control might be more of a problem will be the older ones and these are the ones that we are planning to replace.

1835 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, can I ask the hon. Lady – because what she said is very concerning – and can I ask the Hon Lady to give the Government the information of which classrooms it is that she is being told this is happening in, so that we can act with the Department of Education. Because it is shocking to hear that. Nobody has brought that to the attention of the Government. We hear the same rumours that the hon. Lady hears, but this one we have not heard. If it is more than a rumour and she has information, please tell us which schools, which classrooms, and we will immediately attend to dealing with it, because although 1840 the new schools are going to be developed we will have a period of time between now and the new classrooms and we do not want anybody to be cold in the context of that period of time.

I know that the Hon. the Minister for Education is also the Minister for the Environment and I know that this causes some friction with his views as to global warming, but it is important that we deal with it.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister and the Minister for Education for these answers and for their concern. I can assure them that it is not rumour and I will be providing information so that they can deal with this matter. In fact, before the Chief Minister stood, I was going to ask and I am grateful to see that the Government will address this issue, for what is left of the winter months at least, to make sure that children are adequately heated.

1850

Thank you.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, absolutely.

Q128/2017

Co-education Working Group –
Progress and recommendations

1855 Clerk: Question 128, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Minister for Education give any information on how far the Co-education Working Group has come to date and if any recommendations have already been made to Government?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Co-education Working Group continues to work adhering to its brief. It has as yet made no recommendations to Government, and will not be doing so until the end of April or early May. The task is too important to rush through. I am, however, completely assured that steady progress is being made. In fact, Mr Speaker, I believe that the working group is meeting again today.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for his answer, but my understanding was that this working group was meant to report by the end of March. Can he confirm to the House that in fact their brief period has now been extended?

1875

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am in close contact with the Acting Director of Education on this. The work has generated a lot of interest and a lot of submissions, so I think that we would rather be cautious and suggest that it may slip by a month or possibly two. We are still hopeful that we will meet the March target but we are being realistic.

Q129/2017

Student grants –
Payments to Student Loans Company

Clerk: Question 129, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1880 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: In connection with the student grants, can Government confirm that they are up to date with repayments to the UK Student Loans Company to cover grant repayments?

1885 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, of course we are.

1890 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I can assure you this is not rumour, but is the Minister for Education not aware that the UK Student Loans Company has been chasing payments of the loan from graduates claiming that Government has not paid them in over a year?

1895 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker. Once again, if it is not rumour then it is serious and we would like to know. This information has not come to me.

1900 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Mr Speaker, if it is not rumour there must be something in writing. If there is something in writing we must have it immediately because we will demonstrate to whoever at the Student Loans Company is chasing that the payments are made more than on time. I urge the hon. Lady, because this is a very serious allegation, to let us have the written evidence that this is not rumour that somebody has been chased for a payment, so that we can deal with it immediately – especially if it relates to a Gibraltar graduate or, even worse, somebody who is currently in education, because I would be particularly concerned about somebody who is a student being chased in this respect – and we will be able to demonstrate that all payments are done more than on time in respect of all accounts. This is one of the most important areas of development for this Government. As the hon. Lady knows, we are committed to further education; we are committed in particular to people being able to go away and study also their second degrees. We would not have put in place the system that was put in place in respect of student loans perhaps, but it was something that the GSD did when they were in Government and we have honoured it.

1915 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Chief Minister's concern but I fail to accept that the only form of negating a rumour is written evidence. I have very concerned graduates who have different concerns because there are very urgent pleas for them to pay back and they have come to me in tears. So I do not have the written evidence. I also have been asked not to say by name, but I am happy to speak to the Chief Minister in private about this matter because I can assure him that it is a matter that is very much alive.

1920 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, this is very strange. The Student Loans Company is a government-owned company in the UK. Some Members opposite continually say that Gibraltar is going to go bankrupt and all the rest of it. All that nonsense that is not true. Nobody is saying that the UK is going to go bankrupt and that the Student Loans Company in the UK therefore has to call people to chase them for payments. The Students Loans Company sends letters and emails when people do not meet their obligations to repay; they do not call people. They, I think, know where the payments come from, so if there were any concern they would have been directed at us. The hon. Lady needs to be sure that what she is saying – because this is very concerning for the community – is that the Student Loans Company is chasing people for payments.

1930 I must tell the hon. Lady – and she knows I have a huge amount of time for her, but she must realise that if somebody has called her crying because a payment has not been made by the Government of Gibraltar, she should not have put down a question seven days ago and not raise it until we get up and in a supplementary tell us that – because if somebody is crying because the Government has not made a payment, something has fallen down.

1935 I assure her this is not happening, but if the Government thinks it has made a payment and it has gone to the wrong account – Government does not delay making payments which are due in respect of loans, everything is paid ahead of the date when it has to be paid – then she should have brought it to my attention, I say to her with the greatest of respect, or indeed to the attention of Mr Cortes. She knows that we would of course have immediately dealt with the issue.

1940 I seriously doubt that there is a problem relating to a Government payment here, and that is why I have said to the hon. Lady ... although of course there are different ways of dealing with rumour and which is not to have written evidence that counteracts the rumour – I know, I spend most of my days dealing with rumours and one has to counteract them in different ways, but if it is the Student Loans Company, and that is what she has referred us to, they would chase by letter and by email. That would be specifically done.

1945 These are not loan sharks, Mr Speaker, who would get together and tell somebody they are going to come and break their legs if they do not make a payment; this is the United Kingdom's Student Loans Company, and therefore it is like NatWest Bank or it is like Barclays Bank – they will be sending correspondence chasing unpaid accounts, in particular graduate unpaid accounts. That is what I am saying to the hon. Lady. She needs to tell us what we have failed to do, in order to give any credence to what she is saying. There have been problems historically, Mr Speaker, with making payments in respect of people's tuition fees.

1950 I know because I have suffered that. I have been at university and been told 'The Department of Education has not paid your tuition fees' and I have had, in the early 1990s – too long ago for me to care to remember – to phone the Department of Education. And it is always the same: the university tells you they have not paid, you phone the Department of Education and the Department of Education, who are magnificent at dealing with these issues whoever has been in administration, will say 'We are waiting for the university to give us this detail of their bank account', or 'We are waiting for the university to provide the certification', etc., and as soon as that is provided the payments are made. It has never been an issue of the Department of Education failing in its mechanism for payment in respect of tuition fees, in respect of maintenance grants or in respect of the mechanism put in place by the former administration – I was tempted to say 'by them when they were in Government', but it is the hon. Lady asking, so by the former administration – to pursue student loans, something which I think was the wrong thing to do, but all of those payments are made entirely on time and she must not think that there is any Government issue in that respect, and that is why I have asked her for written evidence, because it must be in writing if this has happened.

1970 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, a few points. The process, as I understand it, is that the student signs the agreement with the Gibraltar Government or with the Student Loans Company, so somehow the Student Loans Company in the UK has the information of the student. Eventually when ... according to the Student Loans Company who called they say that they are ... I am only saying what they said, that they have not got any payments and are fed up with chasing the Government and this is why they have turned to students, in fact even threatening to take the money out of their bank accounts, which apparently they are entitled to do as per UK law.

1975 Many of the Ministers opposite will know that I always try and speak to them before bringing anything to Parliament – that is the way I work – but in these cases ... The interesting thing is that since I have asked the question I have had two more graduates WhatsApping me telling me that they are actually also in the same position. In these cases, these people are begging me not to say their names because they are really scared of the repercussions. I am not suggesting that there would be any repercussions – (Interjection) I am not suggesting for a minute ... I am just 1985 holding their word to not say their names, so I cannot go to Government with these individual cases. I am only bringing ... They are not rumours, they are real people, but I have to hold their word and I have to respect their wishes, which is why I cannot go directly to Government. This is why I have brought it up as a generic question in Parliament and this is where it stays. I will be happy to discuss it in private but I cannot mention any names because I have to respect the wishes of my constituents.

1990 Mr Speaker: But they can write directly to the Department of Education, can't they? Or are they prohibited in the UK from writing to the Department of Education? (Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I –)

Next question please.

1995 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Oh, okay.

Hon. Chief Minister: This is very important, with respect –

2000 Mr Speaker: It is, but the matter has been sufficiently visited. We should move on.

Hon. Chief Minister: But if I may, with respect, the hon. Lady has said that the Student Loans Company has the students' information. She is absolutely right, the Student Loans Company has the students' information because the structure that was put in place by the former administration – which we have discontinued, as I understand it; we are certainly did not support it, but I think we have discontinued it – is that the student takes a loan in his name and the Government undertakes to pay it. That is how it works.

2005 If the hon. Lady will not tell us who these people are ... and there is no fear of repercussion. If these are people who have not notified the Department of their loan we may not know that there is an outstanding, but if they also now do not allow us to have the information as to who they are we will not be able to make good the outstanding. (Interjection by Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon) No, Mr Speaker, I am sorry, with respect, this is very important. (Interjection by Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon)

2015 Mr Speaker: With due respect to the Chief Minister, it beggars belief that there is not enough common sense in order to deal with the matter. The students involved, what are they afraid of – that if they write to the Department of Education they are going to be put in front of a court of law and sent to prison? What reprisals? What reprisals is the Department of Education going to take on any student who tells them that they have a difficulty? You have been a student, I have been a student – (Interjection)

2020 No, I do not want to be on the ... I am going to tell hon. Members why I do not want to be particularly ... On more than one occasion I have pressed this and the cameras of GBC give me five, six or seven minutes of exposure during the course of a news item. I am going to try to prevent that from happening, because there was an incident at the last meeting of Parliament right where the cameras focused on me and this exposure was given to me, but what was not seen and what was not reported was why I had had to take the steps that I had to take. So I would rather that the camera be not focused on me and be focused on hon. Members who may be transgressing the rules.

2025 But I honestly cannot understand why Parliament –

2030 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, can I –

Mr Speaker: – should be having a debate –

2035 Hon. Chief Minister: Can I implore you for one moment –

Mr Speaker: You can implore me, but listen to me. I cannot understand –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is no Hansard. We are in camera. If there is no microphone on, we are in camera. We have to be careful –

Mr Speaker: I cannot understand why –

Hon. Chief Minister: You do not have to worry. The camera is on me because my microphone is on, but at least one microphone should be on for the purposes for the historic record of what you are about to say, even if it is the Clerk's microphone or something like that.

2045

Mr Speaker: Right, now I am on camera. I cannot understand why here in Parliament 17 people who are very busy, plus the Clerk and so on, should be having to debate what is in essence a simple issue and something that all of us who have been students over the last 50 or 60 years may have, at one time or another, had a similar experience of.

2050

Now, what does one do when it's either the Crown Agents, as it used to be, or these people get in touch? If you have a problem you get in touch with the Department of Education in Gibraltar and I am sure that the experience of most of us is that they would deal with the problem fairly quickly. So why do we have to keep on harping about a straightforward matter?

2055

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if I may – thank you – could I ask the Government to get directly in touch as soon as possible with the UK Student Loans Company and ask them what is in fact going on and why they are calling graduates and scaring them?

2060

Hon. Chief Minister: This is why I am sorry that I have to remind her of what the process was. The students are the principal obligors on those loans. This was structured by the former administration in that way and the Government is not visible to the Student Loans Company – they do not see us in the equation. I do not know whether it is that we transfer the money to the student for him to pay or direct to the Student Loans Company but they have no relationship with us, and if they did the whole thing would be undone because there is an interest rate which is paid only to students for a period where it is paid only to students.

It must have been that the former administration was running out of money, Mr Speaker, because I do not understand how it is that we put Gibraltar students in a situation where we forced them to take loans, which then affected their ability to take other borrowing, because when you come to your first mortgage aged 23 you are asked do you owe anything, and you do because the Student Loans Company is still owed money that the Government of Gibraltar is paying under a structure which they set up and we have completely abandoned.

2070

That is why I am saying to the hon. Lady that we have no visibility to that and the Student Loans Company would not be able to talk to us about it. If we picked up the phone and said, 'It is the Government of Gibraltar – can you please tell us what Gibraltar students owe you that they have not paid, because we want to pay?' they would say, 'This is a banking relationship – we cannot give you the information, we cannot talk to you about the place of residence of people who owe us money or anything.' A bit like what I have to say about Credit Finance that the hon. Members do not like. So it is impossible for us and my level of agitation is concern that if it is true that this is happening and they do not share the information with us, as Mr Speaker said, it is impossible for us to rectify and the last thing I want is for anybody who is a Gibraltar graduate or a Gibraltar undergraduate to be in that situation – but we want to be able to fix it.

Now I do not know, if the hon. Lady does not want to give us the names, how we deal with it, but please tell them to get in touch with the Department of Education, because if there were one outstanding this would jump up like a red flag – it would hit the Minister and the Minister would hit me with it, and there is, as far as the Government is concerned, absolutely nothing outstanding to any UK institute of education or to the UK Student Loans Company in respect of any amounts which are due by any Gibraltarian student. If there are, we need to know and quickly, but if they do not tell us we cannot rectify it.

2090

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for that, Chief Minister. But then is the Chief Minister saying that they have no measure of communication, nothing at all? How over the years, then, do these things get paid back? I do not understand.

2095

Hon. Chief Minister: Because there is a contract. Mr Speaker, this is something that the party she defended at the General Election put in place and we thought was a very bad thing. There is a contract between the student and the Student Loans Company (Interjection) which the students were forced to enter into by the GSD administration. That is a UK contract and the Government of Gibraltar has a contract with the student to pay back the amount that the student has taken in respect of those loans, in respect of whatever limits it was that might have been agreed at the time that the former administration was in government.

2100

That is the way it works. It is very strange, it is something that we spoke against from Opposition, it is something that they thought was a very good idea because it gave students money without the money having to come from the Government of Gibraltar, (Interjection) because it was another way of bumping up the scholarships in a particular way. I thought it was a very bad thing. It pushed students into debt. It was a Thatcherite approach to making students have to have those loans. The Student Loans Company is a creature of the Thatcher administration in the UK and therefore this did not meet with our approval from Opposition and when we came into Government we stopped it. But there is zero legal or contractual relationship between the Government of Gibraltar and the Student Loans Company. The GSD forced that it should be the student that should be the pivot in between both, and so the payments are made through the student to the Student Loans Company, and if they do not tell us what amounts are outstanding then we cannot pay them.

2105

I do not know whether it is that the former administration agreed a limit of the amount that students can take as student loans and whether some people have taken more than that limit and therefore this is their personal liability – that may be the case, but without the data we are not able to provide that information and that chasing would be something that would happen in writing, at least initially.

2120

If the Student Loans Company has assigned the debt or the chasing of the debt to an external credit agency, that would be months after the debt had been chased in writing, and if there had not been a repayment ... If there is anything like the oral chasing that the hon. Lady is talking about it would have been months after you had been chased in writing and it would start to affect people's creditworthiness, and that is why I am very concerned about it. But if we do not have the information we cannot ensure that we rectify it and we cannot ensure that we look at what it is that has happened.

2125

It may be that in the setting up of the structures at the time that they were in Government something has fallen down in respect of these two or three individuals that she is talking about, but it is not something that is happening across the board – far from it as far as I am concerned.

2130

This is a nightmare for students who were forced into debt by the GSD that is being resolved because we are not continuing to do it and we are making all the repayments as and when required.

2135

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you, Chief Minister. I repeat my concern was mainly because these individuals told me that the Student Loans Company had told them that they were tired of trying to get through to the Department of Education, but I will come back to you and furnish you with as much information as I am at liberty to furnish you with in order to sort this matter out.

Thank you.

Q131/2017
Post Brexit –
Education Department priorities

Clerk: Question 131, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

2140

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Now that the new Minister for Education has had a chance to familiarise himself with the Ministry of Education, is he able to state what the main priorities are within Gibraltar's Education Department in the post-Brexit era?

2145

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, yes sir, but in order to pre-empt the inevitable supplementary, I am not going to state these today; I am able to but I am not going to.

It is customary that Government priorities are laid out in the Budget Speech and I still have a little bit of work to do on that. These will be very clear in my Budget Speech, which is, after all, just a few months away.

2155

TOURISM, EMPLOYMENT, COMMERCIAL AVIATION AND THE PORT

Q134/2017
Tourist information offices –
Number of manned offices and closed offices

Clerk: Question 134, the Hon. L F Llamas.

2160

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state which tourist information offices are currently manned and which ones have been discontinued during the past five years?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, tourist information offices are currently operational at John Mackintosh Square, the Customs Building at the Frontier, the Cruise Terminal and the Coach Terminus.

The office at Europa Point was closed in May 2015 and the office at Casemates was closed in October 2015 but was replaced by the office at John Mackintosh Square.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, with regard to the one at Europa Point discontinued since May 2015, what is the Government's position in relation to that office? Will it be reopening, or will it be going out to tender for retail or something like that, given that it is not being used at this point in time?

2175

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the office was closed because there was no demand for the purpose for which the office was set up, which was visitor information. Therefore, there is no intention to reopen it at the moment. As regards what will happen with the unit itself, I have absolutely no idea at this stage.

2180

HOUSING AND EQUALITY

Q173/2017

Affordable new homes –
Letters to young people re purchase

Clerk: We now move to Question 173. The questioner is the Hon. R M Clinton.

2185 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise, as per the Chief Minister's New Year's Message, how many letters have been sent to young people to start the process of purchasing new affordable homes at Bob Peliza Mews and Hassan Centenary Terraces?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

2190 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, no, because these have not yet gone out.

2195 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for her answer. Can she give the House an indication of when she might anticipate sending these letters out?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am waiting for another draft of the letter to be sent to me, so once the draft is provided to me and we are happy with it, it will be then.

2200 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, from her answer would I be correct in deducing that the process is fairly advanced and that, from her answer, letters are likely to go out within the month?

2205 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, that will probably be likely, possibly before even. It is something we have been working on for a while, so it is something that is reaching its conclusion.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, in those letters would the Minister be advising purchasers of a likely completion date?

2210 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, a letter that is going to go out to people is not something that we are going to tell the Parliament about the content of it today. When the letter goes out the letter will be public and the hon. Gentleman will see what is in the letter. It is quite unfair to ask us to give him the details of what is going to be in a letter to potential purchasers before anybody has got it.

2215 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thought we were precisely in Parliament to obtain information from Government which is not necessarily public. Again I ask: is there going to be any information in these letters that indicates a likely completion date?

2220 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we are not in Parliament to tell the hon. Gentleman the content of correspondence that has not yet gone out. So the hon. Gentleman can ask us to tell him what is going to be in the letter and we can tell him that when the letter goes out he will see what is in the letter. We are not telling him we are not going to tell him what is going to be in the letter but the letter is in draft. It may change: there may be more put in it or less put in it, depending on what we think it is appropriate that we should put in it at the time it goes out.

2225 He will no doubt see many of the copies that will come in their direction once they are sent. He can then ask us about the content of the letter once it has gone out, but it really beggars

2230 belief that hon. Members opposite think that transparency and accountability is to come to the Parliament to ask the Government to tell them today what we are going to put in a letter that is going to go out next month. It is not anything that has ever been seen in a democracy, I think, Mr Speaker.

Q174/2017
Government rental homes –
Details of repairs pending

Clerk: Question 174, the Hon. E J Reyes.

2235 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide updated details of how many jobs in respect of repairs to rental homes are currently pending – that is, still not fully completed – indicating the dates when these reports were first made by tenants and the nature of the works required?

2240 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there are a total of 239 pending repairs. These are all of an internal nature and were reported to us as follows: four in June 2016; one in July 2016; eight in August; seven in September; 11 in October; 22 in November; 27 in December; 129 in January 2017; and 30 in February 2017.

2245 Given how huge the list of repairs outstanding used to be when we took over, hon. Members opposite will no doubt want to congratulate us on the record low outstanding repairs now.

Q175/2017
Government rental homes –
Details of empty homes

Clerk: Question 175, the Hon. E J Reyes.

2250 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide an updated list showing the total number of homes which are currently empty; providing as detailed a breakdown as possible of pre-war and post-war properties by indicating their rooms composition, locations such as the housing estate in which they are situated and the dates as from when these homes have been empty?

2255 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there is nothing to update since Question 75/2016.

2260 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, in reply to Question 75, the hon. Lady said there were 11 pre-war flats and 47 post-war flats and then gave me a breakdown between the 1RKB and the 6RKB. In my question today I am trying to find out, of these 1RKB to 6RKB, which are pre-war and which are post-war; and the hon. Lady last time, when I had asked for location, the only information she had been provided with was north, south east and west locations. Therefore,
2265 this time round, Mr Speaker, I did put down 'locations' and I gave an example 'such as the housing estate' because the hon. Lady did not have the information with her last time. In my supplementary I did say really what I was looking for was to see whether they were in Laguna Estate or Varyl Begg Estate, or whatever. That is why I reposed the question in the hope that the clerical staff that does furnish the Minister with information would by now have been able to locate those details.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, there is no change in that there has been no movement in relation to the stock.

Mr Speaker, you may recall that on the last occasion I did say that I was not willing to say that there was, say for example, one in Laguna, two in Glacis, or whatever, so as not to encourage people to start a treasure hunt looking for the vacant flat or flats in the particular estate.

There was a lot of detail provided in the answer to the last question. What we did perhaps leave in the air was specifically which estates comprise the north area and the south area. So, just to clarify for the hon. Gentleman opposite, the north area will include Glacis Estate, Laguna Estate and Catalan Bay, and the south will include Alameda Estate, St Joseph's Estate, St John's Court and Heathfield House. I think the south district is easy to delineate. The Upper Town will of course be Castle Steps, Lime Kiln Steps, Moorish Castle Estate, Tankerville and those estates up there. In relation to the west area, which is what he specifically asked of me on the last occasion, that would include Mid Harbours Estate, Varyl Begg, Chilton Court and Edinburgh Estate.

I hope that clarifies the matter, but in terms of the stock there has been no movement since the last question was answered. There has been a very short period, actually, since I last rose to answer that question.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, that offers some clarification, Mr Speaker.

When the Hon. Minister last time gave me the details, she said that of the 58 flats 11 were pre-war and 47 were post-war, but in the breakdown of room composition all 58 are amalgamated into one. Is she able to divide those now which are the pre-war and which are the post-war? I do not know if I am explaining myself ... For example, there are six 1RKB. Of those six, how many pertain to pre-war and how many pertain to post-war and so on up to the 6RKB?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, I do not have that detailed breakdown before me, but if the hon. Gentleman wants to ask me next time ... In fact, I would go further and ask the hon. Gentleman, given that these are now empty, if he wants to ask me not next month but the month after it may be that they may no longer be empty by then. So that may clarify the issue even further.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, but Mr Speaker, last month I was trying to get that information and the hon. Lady did not have it with her, so we ended up saying, 'Well, if he wants to ask next month ...' I could ask it. I have been clear in my wording here: 'providing as detailed a breakdown as possible of pre-war and post-war properties by indicating the rooms composition'. Would the hon. Lady wish to contact her Department and perhaps later on in the session give it?

I did give fair notice of this question, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the way that we have read this question is essentially, because it is the same question as it was last month, to provide the information by way of update – and there has been no update in relation to the stock because there has been no movement in the stock, i.e. last month we had x number of empty flats and this month we have the same stock because, for whatever reason, there may not have been an allocation in the last two and a half weeks since we answered the question. It is because, Mr Speaker ... and we had the same conversation – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham)

2320 Mr Speaker, I can hear the hon. Gentleman, the Leader of the Opposition, muttering from the other side, telling the Hon. Mr Reyes to be firm. Mr Speaker, this is not a game. I am just explaining the way that we have interpreted the question that has been asked. (Interjection) We have been asked to provide an updated list; I am updating it from last month. Last month I had certain figures – there is no need to update it because there has been no movement, Mr Speaker.

2325 Mr Speaker: Am I correct in understanding that what has happened is that the hon. Lady is saying that there has been no change? But in the answer that you were given to Question 75 not all the details that you had been requesting in your question had been dealt with. Is that the position? And therefore it is that that you are actually asking about. So it is separate information which she did not give you then and she is not giving you now because she is just saying that there has been no change, and that you require. If she does not have that information here with 2330 her, I am sure she will undertake to provide it for you. Is that correct?

Hon. E J Reyes: No, Mr Speaker, not 100% correct. I posed Question 75 last time. We said: can the Minister for Housing provide a list showing the total number of homes which are currently empty, providing a breakdown of pre-war and post-war properties, indicating the 2335 rooms composition, locations and date?

The explanation of the locations ... the hon. Lady has explained to me this time round how she does not want to identify the particular estate but has been generous in saying 'by north I mean Glacis, Laguna and Catalan Bay...' I can accept that. If I were the Minister for Housing I would probably end up saying something similar.

2340 My question this time, Mr Speaker ... I do not say anything further to or relating to the question, because when I have tried that in the past then I get the answer that there has been no change and there is confusion. What I have done is I have worded it in such a manner to clarify better what I had tried to get last time, and therefore my new words are 'providing as detailed a breakdown as possible of pre-war and post-war properties by indicating the room 2345 compositions'. Therefore, I am asking for as detailed a breakdown as possible of pre-war and post-war, which are pre-war which are post-war and what are their breakdowns.

The clerical staff that provides the information for the hon. Lady could have also done a little bit of homework and looked at the Hansard and said, 'Well, look, this is what he was saying last time, because it is a very similar question, let's clarify.'

2350 As a gentleman I accepted her honest answer last time. I do not have a breakdown of the 1RKB, how many are pre-war and post-war. I repeat the question, and to be told again 'I do not have the breakdown', Mr Speaker ... If she does not have it I have to accept it, but perhaps your word advising the Minister to get her clerical staff to get their act together and provide the information so as not to put her in an embarrassing situation ... I would appreciate that at least,
2355 Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: I am not aware that the Speaker's authority extends beyond the boundaries of this building!

2360 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I do not think this is an issue of staff doing their homework or not doing their homework; it is the staff's interpretation of the question in the way that it is posed.

Mr Speaker: Look, let's bring this matter to a close. I think the Hon. Minister understands 2365 what the hon. Member is after. She does not have the information and I am sure she will endeavour to provide it as soon as possible. So let's move on to the next question.

Q176/2017

Government housing waiting lists –
Detailed breakdown of number of applicants

Clerk: Question 176, the Hon. E J Reyes.

2370 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing provide an up-to-date list in respect of the number of applicants on all Government housing waiting lists, inclusive of a breakdown showing also the pre-list, social and medical lists, indicating their rooms composition entitlements and dates when these applicants joined the respective lists?

2375 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there are 217 people on the pre-list and 1,302 applicants on the waiting list, of which there are 137 on the medical list and 49 on the social list.

2380 Their applications are as follows. There are 1,179 for 1RKB, 83 for the 2RKB, 167 for the 3RKB, 77 for the 4RKB, nine for the 5RKB and three for the 6RKB.

Further to the dates provided last month in Question 73/2017, 15 applicants have since joined the pre-list.

2385

Government website –
Updating of statistical information re housing matters

Clerk: Question 177, the Hon. E J Reyes.

2390 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing indicate by when it is expected that the statistical information in respect of housing matters shown in the Government's website will be updated, as the information currently provided is now 12 months out of date.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

2395 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, discrepancies and inaccuracies in the presentation of the data were noticed. The complete system is currently under review in order that statistics going forward are presented as accurately as possible. I hope that the exercise is complete within six months.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q178/2017

Government rental homes –
Breakdown of applicants' house size requirements

2400 Clerk: Question 178, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, further to Question 73/2017, can the Minister for Housing provide a more detailed breakdown in respect of the range of 1RKB to 6RKB pertaining to the 2405 house size requirements in respect of applicants who joined any category of housing waiting lists prior to 8th December 2011 and who have still not been handed keys to a new home as at February 2017, inclusive of dates of applicants joining said lists?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

2410 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there are 245 applicants who have not physically received their keys.

2415 The house size requirements range from 1RKB to 5RKB and these applicants joined the list as follows: between 2000 and 2005, 19 for 1RKB, one for 2RKB, one for 3RKB, one for 4RKB; from 2006 to 8th December 2011, 134 for 1RKB, 28 for 2RKB, 34 for 3RKB, 22 for 4 RKB and five for 5RKB.

Q179/2017

Government rental homes –
Urgent decanting of tenants

Clerk: Question 179, the Hon. E J Reyes:

2420 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of how many tenants required urgent decanting from their homes since the answer to Question 77/2017, indicating the reason why, the date when said decanting became necessary and the date when the tenants were able to return to their home?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

2425 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): None, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Given that that was also the answer last month –

2430 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, sorry, I am reading from the wrong page! Mr Speaker, it is £460 that has been paid Triay & Triay in respect of one property.

Mr Speaker: So what is the answer?

2435 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, then, it is none. It is none, then I am fine. I have answered the next question. My mistake.

Mr Speaker: What is the answer to Question 179? None?

2440 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: None.

2445 Mr Speaker: Given that that was also the answer at the last meeting, could I suggest to the hon. Member that instead of asking the same question every month, because decanting does not seem to be a very frequent process, he might allow a slightly longer time lapse in between the same questions?

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I can understand what you are asking.

I am very grateful to the hon. Lady, because last month we clarified ... I had been asking these in the past. Last month she clarified there were none and I had also asked the further question, 2450 is there anyone still pending awaiting to return, and the answer was none. Therefore my statistics sheet that I keep on that was completely in zero.

This time round, because the previous question actually refers to that, I went to the Government website and looked there, and because the information was missing I said, 'Given that it is wintertime and if anybody gets to be moved it happens to be ... worse cases happen to come in winter because of flooding from the roof and so on,' I said 'Well, I will throw it in now.'

2455 I can understand what you, as Speaker, are trying to say, so I will make a note and I will probably pose that every other month.

Mr Speaker: Precisely. Because we are now in winter, if the hon. Member were to ask the question say in May, then he would get a picture of what would have happened in respect of decanting in the previous three months, and there is no need to ask the question on two or three occasions.

I am liberal, as the hon. Member will agree, with all questions that he asks which might be the same but the answer is not the same, and because the answer is not the same from month to month I am liberal in allowing him to ask the question.

2465 In this case there has been no change for two months and the odds are ... Well, you never know, 20 people might be decanted, God forbid, next month.

Next question.

2470

Q180/2017
Government rental homes –
Squatters

Clerk: Question 180, the Hon. E J Reyes.

2475 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing say how much expenditure has been incurred in respect of legal costs relating to the eviction of squatters from Government rental homes since the answer to Question 79/2017, providing a breakdown showing the number of homes involved and to whom payments were made?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

2480 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, £460 has been paid to Triay & Triay in respect of one property.

Q181/2017
Empty homes –
Contracts awarded for making suitable for reallocation

Clerk: Question 181, the Hon. E J Reyes.

2485 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of all expenditure incurred since the answer to Question 80/2017 in respect of contracts awarded for making empty homes suitable for reallocation, stating to whom payments were made, how much has been paid, the number of residential homes pertaining to each payment, as well as indicating the type/nature of repair works or cleaning services undertaken?

2490 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, since Question 80/2017 Ace Plumbing was paid £4,380 for one property, Elite Plumbing was paid £2,495 for one property, ASJ Builders was paid £16,700 for one property and Liberty was paid 2495 £6,000 for one property.

The works carried out by these companies was general refurbishment works, including plastering walls and ceilings, painting, replacing floor tiles, doors, plumbing, electrical works, etc.

Q182/2017
Government rental homes –
Outstanding arrears

Clerk: Question 182, the Hon. E J Reyes.

2500 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide updated details of outstanding arrears in respect of Government rental homes?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

2505 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, as at 1st February 2017, the level of outstanding arrears in respect of Government rental homes stood at £5,225,585.42.

Clerk: Question 183, the Hon. –

2510

Hon. R M Clinton: Sorry, Mr Speaker, just one supplementary. I am grateful to the Minister for her answer. I was wondering, in terms of that amount, £5.2 million, how is the Minister accounting for arrears in respect of those properties for which the Government is solely the tenant and those for which she has to account for the rent to Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Yes, Gibraltar Capital Assets, which the hon. Gentleman knows I am involved with, so I will deal with the question.

Mr Speaker, I am quite happy to ask the Financial Secretary to give us an indication of how that aspect of the calculations is dealt with and revert to the hon. Gentleman.

As he knows, Gibraltar Capital Assets is not a company for which we are answerable in this House, but I have shared the information with this House and then had what I thought was a very fruitful meeting with hon. Members opposite for an hour and a half, and then an hour and a half with the hon. Lady – although they were very ungenerous, if I may say so, when they left the meeting and went to the media about how fruitful it had been.

But I am quite happy to ask the Financial Secretary to provide the information.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for what was indeed an interesting meeting.

If he could, just to clarify, confirm that he will ask the Financial Secretary, in terms of this £5.2 million, for a breakdown between those that are due entirely to the Government and those for which the Government is acting as collection agent.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, when he is talking about £5.2 million he is talking about the historic figure. The only bit that will be relevant will be the amount going forward from the date 2535 that these arrangements were entered into, not the £5.2 million. But I will ask him to provide an indication of how we deal with those – whether it is in effect an assignment of rent to Gibraltar Capital Assets where there is an arrear in respect of those rents.

Q183-184/2017
Bruce's Farm rehabilitation centre –
New leadership

Clerk: Question 183, the Hon. E J Phillips.

2540 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain the recent change in leadership at Bruce's Farm rehabilitation centre?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

2545 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 184.

Clerk: Question 184, the Hon. E J Phillips.

2550 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state what qualifications the new leader at Bruce's Farm is in possession of?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

2555 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, there have been no changes at Bruce's Farm rehabilitation centre.

Q185/2017
Bruce's Farm –
Suitable qualification of staff

Clerk: Question 185, the Hon. E J Phillips.

2560 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm that all those persons working at Bruce's Farm are qualified to be working with addicts?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, yes.

Q186/2017
Public sector employment –
Drugs-free work policy

2565 Clerk: Question 186, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state when it intends to introduce a drugs-free work policy throughout the public sector?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

2570

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, this is an initiative of this administration of which we are very proud and the hon. Members opposite will no doubt want to congratulate us on it. They will be pleased to note it is already in draft format and in the process of internal consultation.

2575

Hon. E J Phillips: I note from the hon. Lady's answer to that question and also the manifesto, which in fact states 'the adoption of a drugs free work place policy throughout the public sector' ... I also note that in answer to that question she stated that it is going out to consultation, but the question I put was when it intends to introduce the policy itself. Does the Minister have any further information as to when the consultation process will complete and when it will become live?

2580

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: It is an internal consultation process, so the answer to your question will pretty much be determined by the process of consultation, because there are ... It is a complicated policy. It is not a straightforward policy, particularly because it is a public sector wide policy, so there will be different issues depending on which Department of the public sector we are looking at. So it is quite complex in terms of the standard of the quality of the testing, ensuring that there is no contamination, ensuring that we have support, because the emphasis of the policy is really on ensuring that ... It is not a punitive policy. The aim of the policy is not to punish inasmuch as it is to prevent and to support, so we have to ensure that ... It is a human resources policy, essentially, so we have to ensure that everything is in order, and there are obvious resource implications into the implementation of the policy so it is something that we are looking at internally with all the relevant Departments to ensure that we get everything right.

I do not want to, for the sake of expediency, commence a policy and then have gaps in supporting the people whom we want to assist by implementing this policy, particularly given the vulnerable group of people that we are talking about when we look at this kind of policy.

2595

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I would commend the policy but one thing I would like to ask is whether it is going to be rolled out in stages. It would make sense, certainly from this side of the House, that we tackle first the emergency services, healthcare professionals, the Fire Service and Police first and then roll it out insofar as the public service is concerned. I just want to know if that is the intention of the Government, to roll it out slowly insofar as the emergency services and thereafter the other public service.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Subject to the outcome of the consultation process, Mr Speaker – because I would not want to pre-empt what the advice from the other Departments will be – the intention is that the introduction of such a policy would be phased.

Q187/2017

Lifts for Government housing schemes – Fitness for purpose

Clerk: Question 187, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is Government satisfied that the lifts being placed on all Government housing schemes and Aerial Farm development which were stored for over a year at Lathbury, exposed to the elements, are fit for purpose?

2615 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, yes.

Q188/2017

St Anne's School playground car park –
Health and safety re construction

Clerk: Question 188, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

2620 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Does the Government feel satisfied with the health and safety arrangements and standards relating to the construction of the new car park adjacent to the St. Anne's School playground?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Housing and Equality.

2630 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, cranes are towering adjacent to the St Anne's School. Similar ones ... only last year part of a crane collapsed at Eastern Beach construction site. So my question is: how often do the safety officers visit the site to ensure that these cranes are operating safely?

2635 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, since the start of this project there has been a professional team of inspectors meeting with the project's team of designers and architects and engineers and their safety planning supervisor to establish the safety parameters, and the Health and Safety Inspectorate is, of course, in direct consultation with the Schools Representative Authority. Furthermore, Mr Speaker, inspectors visit that site very frequently and notify the project manager in case there are any findings.

2640 So, in answer to the supplementary question, on the basis of the involvement of the health and safety professionals and upon their advice, there is no advice that there is any health and safety risk in this project.

2645 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for that. Does the school have emergency exit arrangements in place that do not include the school's playground in the event of an accident with one of those cranes?

2650 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, from memory as to the layout of the school, then I think the answer is yes, and in any event, anything that is a requirement under health and safety would have been brought to our attention in the event that the answer were no and it was required and we needed to make some kind of alternative arrangements or adjustments.

Questions for Oral Answer

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND THE GSB

Q189-199/2017

Public finances –

Clerk: Wednesday, 15th February, Meeting of Parliament.

We continue with answers to Oral Questions. We commence with Question 189. The 5 Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide the total gross debt, aggregate debt after application of the Sinking Fund to gross debt, cash reserves and net debt figures for public debt for the following date, being 1st January 2017?
10

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
15 Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 190 to 199.

Clerk: Question 190, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise the total liquid reserves figure and its constituents, namely Consolidated Fund, Improvement and Development Fund, Government-owned companies, deposits, contingencies and other funds for the following date, being 1st January 2017?
20

25

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise how total liquid reserves are invested/held given details of all bank/savings bank accounts and cash held for the following date, being 1st January 2017?
30

Clerk: Question 192, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it has sold its holding of 7,500 class A ordinary Shares of Gibtelecom Ltd; and if so, to whom, on what date and for what reason?

35

Clerk: Question 193, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise, if sold, what was the total consideration received by the Government for the 7,500 Gibtelecom Ltd class A ordinary shares and how was this valuation arrived at?

40

Clerk: Question 194, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise under what head of revenue were any Gibtelecom Ltd share sale proceeds recorded and in which financial year?

45

Clerk: Question 195, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the cost of printing and distributing the 2014-15 booklet entitled Report and Annual Accounts of the Gibraltar Savings Bank?

50

Clerk: Question 196, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if the Principal Auditor reviewed and approved the final printer's proof of the 2014-15 booklet entitled Report and Annual Accounts of the Gibraltar Savings Bank?

55

Clerk: Question 197, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, why has the Government omitted the Statement of Investments included in the Principal Auditor's certificate from the published booklet 2014-15 entitled Report and Annual Accounts of the Gibraltar Savings Bank?

60

Clerk: Question 198, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how much interest has been paid by Gibraltar Investment (Holdings) Ltd to Credit Finance Company Ltd in respect of the deposit placed with it from date of inception to 31st March 2016?

Clerk: Question 199, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, further to Question 698/2016, can the Government please advise why holding property in GAR Ltd is an advantage for the Government as opposed to GCP Investments Ltd in respect of the deed of sale dated 1st July 2014 for 14 properties?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the position as regards total liquid reserves composition, when, where and how these are invested on a particular date chosen by the Member opposite, continues to be as previously stated.

85 The position of the public debt on 1st January 2017 is as it was estimated on 1st December 2016 except that the cash reserves are now estimated at £94 million and the net debt at £352 million.

The hon. questioner already has the information on the sale of Gibtelecom Ltd that he is requesting.

The proceeds of the sales were credited to the Improvement and Development Fund in the financial year that it took place.

90 The Principal Auditor does not proofread the Savings Bank Booklet, the cost of distribution of which will be known when the distribution is completed.

The interest paid to Credit Finance on FRNs has been £65,530,744 up to March 2016.

The answer as to why we have adopted a given policy which the hon. Member asks in four of his questions is the answer I gave him in supplementaries when previously asked why.

95 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for his answer.

He says I already have the information in respect of the sale of the 7,500 Gibtelecom shares. I am afraid I do not actually have anything official. Could he tell me what date they were sold and to what entity?

100 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, he asks in every meeting of the House for a list of the investments of the Gibraltar Savings Bank, and in the list that he gets it shows when the Savings Bank ownership of shares went up from £37 million to £75 million. In fact, he phoned me up when he noticed it recently to ask me if this was a typo error or a reflection that all the shares were now owned by the Savings Bank.

105 If he wants to know who did we sell it to, he knows who we sold it to because I have told him on the phone and I have given him a piece of paper in answer to a question which shows the value of the shares held by the Savings Bank. And he knows what that value is because it is 100% of the shares at double the price of what 50% of the shares were.

110 So all the questions that he has asked me are already contained in the information I have already given him and I confirmed this to him on the telephone.

115 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, yes, I can confirm I had a telephone call with the Hon. Minister; it was mainly just to ascertain whether there was, as he said, a typographical error or not. But what I have not been able to see from the schedules that he has provided me with since I have been in this House – and in fact the first schedule I had was in respect of November 2015 ... and at some point between March 2015 and November 2015 these shares were bought by the Savings Bank. I would just like to know on what date.

120 Hon. J J Bossano: I believe it happened in two tranches in August and October, it was not done in one go.

125 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, again I am grateful to the Minister. Would he be able to confirm that to me in due course, and in fact the amounts involved and which dates?

Hon. J J Bossano: He knows for certain that it is in the period that he has mentioned where he has not got the information. I believe the second tranche was in October and the first one might have been in July or August, but I will get the exact month if he wants to know that.

130 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for confirming that and providing me with the information in due course.

If I may, coming to the actual head of revenue, he says the Improvement and Development Fund – would he be able to identify for me which head of revenue it was recorded under?

135 Hon. J J Bossano: It was the head of revenue that says 'Sales of property'.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, looking at the estimates for 2016 and looking at the results for 2015-16, head 102 says 'Sale of Government properties and other premier' subdivided between '(1) Land and building sales and leases' and '(2) Ex-MoD sales'. Would he be able to tell me whether it was (1) or (2)?

Hon. J J Bossano: If he wants to know exactly where it is, I will find out and tell him. The answer is the money went into the I&D Fund to finance I&D projects, but if he wants to know exactly on what page or on what part of the page, I will find out.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if he would because £37 million would be a significant revenue item in that particular head of revenue. All I can see is one that says 'Land and building sales and leases'. I am sure the Hon. Minister would agree with me that the sale of shares is not really land, buildings or leases, and perhaps a new head of revenue should have been opened for the sake of clarity.

I would be grateful if he would confirm, either today or later in due course, whether that £37 million forms part of the forecast outturn for 2015-16, presumably in that financial year, which shows a number of £92,450,000.

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not need to confirm that by going back, because it is inevitable that it should. If the money was transferred in October, then it would be in the forecast outturn in the following March.

Hon. R M Clinton: Again, finally, just to be absolutely clear on this point, I would be grateful if the Minister would confirm if it is in fact part of that £92.4 million showing in the Estimate Book for this year in respect of the outturn for 2015-16. If he would be able to confirm that he would be willing to do that, I would be most grateful.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I am telling him it is impossible it should not be, but if he wants me to ask I will ask.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, now coming to the rationale for this sale, I would be grateful if the Minister could advise why did the Government feel it was necessary to sell the Gibtelecom shares to the Savings Bank

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have already answered that in my original answer. I have told him the answer as to why we have adopted a given policy, which the hon. Member asked in four of his questions, is the answer I gave him in the supplementaries when previously asked why.

Hon. R M Clinton: Can I then ask the Minister if it was always the intention of the Government to sell the Gibtelecom shares to the Savings Bank when the original estimates for 2015-16 were produced?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, he can ask me whatever he wants but that does not mean that he is going to get an answer. I do not see why I should tell him what my intentions were at any given point in time. I am here to provide facts, not thoughts.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thought I was asking a factual question, because in the estimates for 2015-16 there is the number £79.5 million. I am merely asking if it was envisaged in that £79.5 million that the sale of Gibtelecom shares was included as a number of £37 million.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the estimates that are provided to the Parliament are the estimates carried out by the Finance Department on the basis of what is known at the time that the estimates are done. A day later, a decision may be taken to do something different and we do not come back and change the estimates.

I have told him before that he should go back and look at the wise words of the greatest Gibraltarian, who was supposed to say to Parliament 'estimates are just estimates'.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Member agree with me that it is somewhat unusual – and obviously the Government has not seen the need to do this in the last five years – that it should cause the sale of the shares of Gibtelecom to the Savings Bank? That is not a normal item that would appear in the Improvement Development Fund.

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I do not agree with him.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may just ask the Minister one last question on this point: if he can confirm to me that these shares were sold directly to the Savings Bank and there was no intermediary entity involved.

Hon. J J Bossano: That is correct.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, has the Minister – I have noticed in the Principal Auditor's Report for this year that he has added a clarification note in terms of legal ownership and beneficial ownership – now wearing his hat as the Minister for the Savings Bank, has he got any kind of letter or Statement of Trust that the Government are holding these shares for the beneficial ownership of the Savings Bank?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the only letter that can exist is the letter that the officials involved in conducting the transaction consider necessary. Therefore, if it is not there it is because it is not considered necessary, and if it was considered necessary it would be there.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can I then ask the Minister: is there any form of documentation at all surrounding this share sale?

Hon. J J Bossano: I would not know, Mr Speaker, because I do not ask people. As a policymaker I take responsibility for the policy but I do not then go back and say now show me all the paperwork of how you have done it. That is not the way the Government performs its duty; otherwise, we would all be running all the Departments and we could dispense with 5,000 civil servants.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, in terms of the consideration for the Savings Bank shares that were sold, would the Minister confirm that the valuation was that which was given for the B shares purchased by the Savings Bank previously, and would he be able to tell me on what basis that valuation was originally carried out?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have already answered that question because I have told him that the valuation is for 100%, double what it was for 50%, so it must follow axiomatically that it is in fact the same valuation for the second 50% as was done for the first. And the first was a valuation done on the basis of the negotiation with Slovenia Telecom at the price at which they were prepared to sell it and we were prepared to buy it.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister. Can he advise, in terms of that valuation, whether he is aware or not as to how they arrived at the valuation? Was it some sort of multiple of earnings of Gibtelecom?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, it was based on what we negotiated with them, given that there were other buyers interested in buying that share and we were interested in keeping it under our control because we did not know whether they were going to finish up if they were bought by the same people who were negotiating to buy the whole of Slovenia Telecom.

245

Hon. R M Clinton: So the Minister is saying that he is not aware whether any multiple of earnings were used in that calculation?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not know if the hon. Member is hard of hearing but he keeps on asking me if what I have said means what I have said – and the answer is yes, what I say means what I say. Yes.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, one final question in respect of the sale of Gibtelecom shares: would the Minister agree with me that if this sale of shares had not occurred the surplus reported by the Government for that financial year would necessarily have been lower by £37 million?

255

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I do not agree.

260

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if the Minister could explain to me why he would not agree that if he took £37 million out of the Improvement and Development Fund revenue it would impact on the overall result for the Government for the year.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not answer ‘why’ questions from the hon. Member, and I have not said that if the money had not been obtained by selling it would have been taken from the Consolidated Fund.

Hon. R M Clinton: Surely, Mr Speaker, the Minister must agree with me that if this £37 million was not obtained by the Improvement and Development Fund, then certainly the Improvement and Development Fund in itself would be short of £37 million. Would he not agree with that statement?

270

Hon. J J Bossano: Actually, Mr Speaker, I do not have to agree with anything that he says, but in fact he was asking in his previous supplementary whether I would have accepted the surplus, and there is no surplus in terms of capital, the surplus is surplus of recurrent revenue over recurrent expenditure, and if the Government had not sold the asset that it did to the Savings Bank in order to raise capital for capital investment, it could have sold another asset to raise that money. Therefore it does not follow inevitably that the conclusion he is trying to draw is accurate.

Hon. R M Clinton: But, Mr Speaker, nevertheless the Minister will have to agree that if he had not sold that asset he would have had to sell another asset to make up the difference.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, if we had decided to continue the spending at the level that it was in the book and we had not sold this asset, another asset could have been sold.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, coming to the Savings Bank itself, the Minister said that he will not know how much the Report and Annual Accounts – which I referred to commonly as a 290 'glossy' for 2014-15 – how much did that cost, but he must obviously be aware that it is already being distributed. Perhaps if he could just give me the cost of the printing.

Hon. J J Bossano: There is no cost for printing.

295 Hon. R M Clinton: I am sorry, Mr Speaker, but the actual booklet for that particular year is shown as being printed by the Gibraltar Chronicle Printing Works Ltd. Is the Minister suggesting that they did it for free?

300 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, what I am suggesting is that his party in government gave a grant to the Chronicle Printing Works of a global sum of money which they get whether the Government does printing or does not do printing. Therefore, the cost of printing this is zero because we would have paid the same money to the Chronicle if this had not been printed as we have paid when this was printed.

305 Hon. R M Clinton: So, if I understand the Minister correctly, what he is telling me is the Chronicle are beholden to the Government for a fixed amount and therefore there was no incremental cost to the Government in producing these booklets.

310 Hon. J J Bossano: It is correct that he has repeated what I have said using different words, Mr Speaker. (Laughter)

315 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, the Minister, if I heard him correctly – and obviously I must be hard of hearing these days and I apologise for that in advance, my advancing years – I believe mentioned that the Principal Auditor had not reviewed the booklet, the final printer's proof, before it went out. May I ask why not?

320 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, he may ask why not on innumerable occasions and I will give him the same answer on every occasion that he asks it, but in fact I have not said that he had not; I said that he does not. That is to say that he is not required to do it. So it is not that he is required and did not do it; it is that ... my wording is that the Principal Auditor does not proof read the Savings Bank Booklet.

325 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister. If I may ask, is he aware that on the page heading up 'Incoming and Expenditure Account' in the booklet it starts off 'Contribution from the Consolidated Fund', which does not actually appear in the Income and Expenditure account in the Gazette, nor in fact in the Principal Auditor's Report itself. So, somewhere along the line somebody has not read this through properly and I would be grateful for the Minister's thoughts on where the words 'Contribution from the Consolidated Fund' came into the report, because I will have him know that I already have had a member of the public speaking to me and saying, 'Well, what does this mean? It's confusing.'

330 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I accept it is confusing and it will not appear in future, but I have to tell him that of course it says 'Consolidated Fund Contribution – zero.' So it does not say there is a contribution. And I can tell him where it comes from. Something in the printing works went wrong, because it used to be there when the GSD was in office, because they used to make a contribution to the Savings Bank and there was that line there. They must have looked at a previous copy of the accounts and got it wrong, because it is no longer there because there is no longer a contribution made.

340 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member will know, the GSD never produced these types of booklets in the past, so the blame can hardly be put at our door.

I would ask him if in future he would ask the Principal Auditor to check them, because it is distressing to people on the street when they receive something through the post and the heading may be somewhat misleading or may cause people to get the wrong impression. And of course normally, as you say, there is nothing in here to indicate that it should be zero. It is just a space, so it could be a subheading; there are many ways you could interpret this.

I would be grateful if the Minister would consider making somebody responsible for the actual content of the report before it goes out to deposit holders.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the official audited accounts are included in the accounts of the Government and therefore that is the information. This is a leaflet that we produced, which produces a figure that shows the amount of money that is being deposited in the bank and the amount of reserves that the bank has, which are the two important factors to reassure people of the solidity of the bank. I do not think anybody ... We are still getting £100 million increase in deposits every year, notwithstanding the concern about the blank element in the Consolidated Fund contribution, which does not exist. So I do not think it has put anybody off putting fresh money in the bank, and it is certainly not a level of concern that is reflected in people reinvesting what matures, because we are in the process now of servicing maturities in excess of £20 million and the bulk of it is being reinvested.

So I am grateful for his concern for the Savings Bank but I do not think the Savings Bank is at risk of losing customers because of that line.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, my concern was not about losing deposits, merely that depositors are given accurate reports and that somebody checks them. I would be happy if the Minister gives an undertaking that in future somebody will check these before they go out.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have already told him that that line will not be there in the future.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, again I beg your indulgence because when I am going through so many questions I may not have heard the right response to the right question, but in terms of the Statement of Investments, did the Minister give a reason as to why the Statement of Investments is not included in the booklet?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member seems to forget that the GSD policy is not to develop the Savings Bank. The GSD was 15 years in Government and never felt it necessary to provide depositors with any information at all in any form of booklet. So the fact that the booklet that I produce does not contain what he wants it to produce is neither here nor there, because if his party had been in Government the booklet would not exist and the bank would have £70 million from the public – or less, because it was declining – instead of having, at the latest count, £1 billion from the public.

So you know, you judge the performance of banks ... I would have thought ... I think he had a position in a bank. Presumably when he was in the bank the shareholders did not hold him to account because their investments were not included in a booklet that was sent to every customer. What is sent to every customer is what customers normally get – the profit and loss and the balance sheet. In addition to that, every citizen of Gibraltar has access to a public document, which is the audited accounts of the Government, where there is more information, and of course every month, like this month, the list of investments is made available to the hon. Member and therefore is made available to everybody in Gibraltar – not once a year but every single month of the year.

So, given that as far as their policy in Government – which I did not agree with but I respected – the Savings Bank was virtually being used simply to deposit the Government's money, because it had £70 million of private investors and £200 million of Government money, 395 frankly I do not think he is in any position to question whether I am doing enough when they were doing less. And in any event, he has asked why again and the answer is the same to the why.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister, as ever.

In terms of these accounts, he attaches the certificate of the Principal Auditor to them in full, with his signature at the bottom. And at the top he says:

I have certified the Financial Statements of the Gibraltar Savings Bank for the financial year 31st March 2015 in accordance with the provision of section 12 of the Savings Bank Act. These statements comprise the Income and Expenditure, the Depositors' Withdrawals Accounts, the Investment Adjustment Account, the Reserve Account Balance Sheet and a Statement of Investments and related notes.

400 I ask him again: why is it that he feels that he can attach the full statement from the Principal Auditor but not that one statement which is covered by the Principal Auditor's Report, is included in what is gazetted and is included in the Government's own accounts – but somehow he feels it is not of public interest to include here. I just want to know why. If he does not want to give me an answer, I will accept that as well.

Hon. J J Bossano: I know he wants to know why I do everything that I do, Mr Speaker, but this is not the way the system works. I do not have to explain to him why I do things. I do things because that is the policy that I have decided in my responsibility – and he is entitled to disagree with my policy.

410

I do not know why he asks why so many times, knowing that the answer is always going to be the same. Presumably he likes asking why. Maybe he goes round asking everybody why they do everything they do. Maybe it is not just me, maybe he does it to everyone, but from me he is always going to get the same answer.

415

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thought I was here precisely to ask why, but perhaps I should turn the question the other way round: would he perhaps agree that including the statement would be of value to depositors, given that the Principal Auditor considers it worthy of audit and that it is included in the gazetted accounts and the Government's own accounts? Would he not agree that it would be of value to depositors to see how their money is invested, which is, as he will of course recognise, already a public document, and that it would be easier for the public to see it through this glossy booklet, which he produces for their benefit, to include that statement without them having to go and purchase a Principal Auditor's Report or look up the Gazette?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, he has already asked me that question in a previous House and I said I did not agree with him. He must be able to work it out for himself that if I thought it was something that I should be doing, I would be doing it.

430

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, just for the record, he mentioned previously about deposits being over £1 billion. Would he tell the House, out of that £1 billion how much is actually related to Government entities?

435

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I am telling him that the latest figure that I have seen on investments from the public – because we are now repaying some money – is that notwithstanding the fact that we are repaying something like £20 million which is maturing, it is nearly all being reinvested and the figure now is about £1 billion from the public.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, he mentioned £20 million – perhaps he could clarify. The number I have seen in previous answers to questions, is it £200 million maturing this year?

440 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have not given him the figure for the year; I am giving him the figure for this month.

Hon. R M Clinton: But would he be able to confirm that the figure for the year is in the order of £200 million?

445 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member asks every month for a list of investments and deposits with maturity dates, which I give him. He is able ... He has got a lot of time. He spends a lot of time rabbiting about in corners and trying to find out things and he should use the information I give him to answer his own questions.

450 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, moving on to Credit Finance, another great bone of contention, £65 million paid to it by Gibraltar Investment Holdings Ltd. May I ask the Minister how Gibraltar Investment Holdings obtained £65 million to pay this interest.

455 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the money that was advanced to Gibraltar Investment Holdings is the money that was used by Investments Holdings and the Investment Holdings paid interest on that money. It obtained it from the resources available to it.

460 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister. Would it be the case that Gibraltar Investment Holdings has on-lent that money to other Government entities that have in turn paid it interest? I would be grateful if the Minister would be willing to consider answering that question.

465 Hon. J J Bossano: The company in question functions, as it did before 2011, as a holding company which holds all the shares of all the subsidiaries, and therefore the cash is managed collectively. Then it is allocated in terms of who actually finishes up using it and therefore the interest is charged to whoever actually finishes up using it. The revenue of that particular company then goes all the way up. So, although it is done simply, I suppose, because it is more efficient to do it that way, collectively, when the accounts of each individual company are done 470 the things are apportioned accurately where they should go.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I understand the Hon. Minister correctly, Gibraltar Investment Holdings is a holding company; it is not a trading entity in its own right. All it has is shares in underlying Government companies, if I am correct – and I think you will probably point 475 me to the chart in the official Annual Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure, which will be that one.

And looking at Gibraltar Investment Holdings, which is at the top of the chain, that holds all these other entities – Europe Incinerator Company Ltd, which I think is probably defunct by now; Gibraltar Bus Company, which I believe needs to get Government money every year; various 480 other entities; Gibraltar Home Loans Ltd; JBS, maybe it is JBS that has got the money – how is the money trickling up to this entity in order to pay interest? Is it by way of dividend or some other method, because I really cannot see how Gibraltar Investment Holdings generates cash.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not ask that level of detail. I know that the money is 485 available in the company to pay the interest to the Credit Finance subsidiary of the Savings Bank, and I have given him the answer of the amount that is paid, which is the original answer to the original question that he wanted answered. That is the amount that has been paid. It has been paid by the recipient company and the recipient company paid it from resources available to it. Those resources include the fact that we actually provide, from the same booklet he is looking 490 at, £25 million a year. Or didn't he notice that in the book?

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer.

Yes, I did notice that in the book and, if you remember, I tried to veto that payment during the Budget session. I did ask what the £25 million was for and I did not get an answer.

495 So, Mr Speaker, I guess I will get no clarity on this question. If I may ask one final question – and he may, of course, choose not to answer this because it is not – (Interjection by Hon. J J Bossano) Perhaps he may deem it not to be a valid supplementary, but he would probably put me out of my misery if he could tell me when the audited accounts of Gibraltar Investment Holdings will be available to the public?

Hon. J J Bossano: I am sorry that it takes so little to make him miserable, I am really sorry to hear that and I would not wish to contribute to his misery, but they will be available when they are. I have not got a date.

505 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I move on to Question 199, and I believe the answer the Hon. Minister gave me was ... I asked why and he will give me the same answer as before, which is that he does not have to tell me why. However, if the Hon. Minister will look at the Hansard for Question 698/2016, in fact it was the Hon. Chief Minister who responded to my question, and he did in fact say if I put a direct question maybe or maybe not I would get an answer. So I 510 will perhaps ask whether there is anything further that can be said to the Chief Minister's contribution.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the answer that I have given him is the answer he is going to get, there is nothing further to add.

Q200/2017

Multiple Sclerosis Therapy Centre – Future Job Strategy trainees

515 Clerk: Question 200, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many Future Job Strategy trainees placed for training with the Multiple Sclerosis Therapy Centre since 2012 are permanent employees of the centre today?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

525 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Two, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Minister know whether those are two recent employees that have finished their training recently, or are they longstanding employees?

530 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I believe they are from 2015.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he also have any figures for the number of trainees that have been sent to this particular organisation since 2012?

535 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Mr Speaker, 14 in total.

Hon. D A Feetham: And, Mr Speaker, how many of those 14 were then permanently employed by the centre? Does he have that figure?

540 Hon. J J Bossano: Ten of the 14 were employed and of the other four three were terminated by the employer and one was terminated by the employee during the training period before completion.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q201/2017

Gibraltar Joinery and Building Services Ltd – Percentage owned by Government

545 Clerk: Question 201, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is GJBS 100% owned by Government?

550 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Yes, Mr Speaker.

555 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, in light of this answer, are GJBS then allowed to carry out private work and compete with the private sector?

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Mr Speaker.

560 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: So would it be possible to have a percentage amount that goes back to the Treasury?

565 Hon. J J Bossano: I am afraid I do not understand the question: a percentage amount that goes back to the Treasury of what – a percentage of what?

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Well, if GJBS is allowed to carry out private work, considering that it is a Government entity what percentage of the private work that it does goes back to the Government coffers? If it is a public company, shouldn't something be coming back?

570 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, perhaps the hon. Lady is not aware that GJBS took over a lot of contracts initially from a lot of Spanish contractors that pulled out and some Gibraltar companies that pulled out during the GSD administration, and they had to come in and rescue all the projects.

575 And therefore it was only really since then, since that period, that they have been allocated work by the Government, but they have also been allowed to bid for work in the private sector. If the hon. Member thinks that the private sector is at a disadvantage from competition by GJBS, let me reassure her that that cannot possibly be justified, given that GJBS pays considerably higher wages than the rest of the construction industry.

580 Sometimes when they have got not a great deal of Government work, they tend to bid to get private sector work rather than find themselves having to lay off people, which we would not want them to do as a publicly owned company. So the bulk of the work is Government work, but sometimes when they are low on Government work they put in tenders for private sector work in order to ensure that they do not have people on idle time. It is not predominantly in order to make big profits, and of course the profits are still owned by the Government or by the taxpayer, even if they are retained in the company and not distributed. Money tends to be reinvested because they have got a much better stock of equipment and facilities than any other construction company in Gibraltar.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: So, if I understand correctly, a Government-owned company is allowed to (a) fairly bid in the private sector for work, and (b) is allowed to keep the profits and not return them back to Treasury, even taking into account that it is a public company.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not know how much she knows about how companies function, but of course the fact that the Government is a shareholder of a company does not mean that the company is inhibited from doing anything that a company that is owned by a private shareholder would do. That is to say the company functions commercially. It is not a Government Department and it functions commercially but it does predominantly Government work – which frankly would not have been done if that company was not there, given the experience that we have had from the construction industry over the 44 years that I have been here. It is the most reliable construction company in Gibraltar with the highest reputation in Gibraltar and with the greatest number of Gibraltarians. So when it makes a profit, if the Government wanted it to pay dividends it would pay dividends, because it is 100% Government owned. If the Government has allowed it, throughout the 15 years under the GSD and the four years under the GSLP and the last four years, to reinvest the profits that it makes into the infrastructure that it has available to do construction work, and therefore it has better workshops and more equipment than anybody else, that is a choice that the Government, on behalf of the people of Gibraltar, exercises judgement on, as previous Governments have done. But of course if, for example, GJBS buys lorries, then instead of having cash it has lorries. If it did not buy the lorries it might have to hire them. These are commercial decisions that are taken and it has always been like that; there is no change in policy.

HEALTH, CARE AND JUSTICE

Q135/2017

Old Hebrew Home – Government's plans

Clerk: We now move to Question 135. The questioner is the Hon L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain what its plans are with the old Hebrew Home in Line Wall Road?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Government plans to refurbish this facility and reopen it in order to continue to provide further elderly care beds with a principal accent on elderly members of the Jewish community.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, in light of that, what would be Government's position, then, or plans with regard to the John Mackintosh Wing up at the old St Bernard's? Would that be then distributed as an extension to Mount Alvernia, as it is now but for all the community? I believe that is at the moment accommodating the Jewish community from the old Hebrew ...

630 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is correct to say that the majority in the Jewish Home of course would be elderly Jewish, but in the John Mackintosh the – (Interjection) Yes, the third floor does contain some elderly Jewish persons but the John Mackintosh is predominantly, of course, for elder members of our entire community.

Q136/2017
Domiciliary care –
Number of recipients; waiting list; allocation policy

Clerk: Question 136, the Hon. L F Llamas.

635

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose how many members of our community are receiving domiciliary care as at the end of each financial year since March 2012 to date?

640

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the number of domiciliary care recipients as at the end of each financial year ... That is the question I have been asked, although I thought that we had a previous question.

Mr Speaker: Is he answering this question only or is he answering it together with Question 137?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, yes, I will answer this question together with Question 137.

650

Clerk: Question, 137, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. Mr L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose how many members of our community are on the waiting list for domiciliary care and what is the Government's policy in allocating domiciliary care?

655

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the number of domiciliary care recipients as at the end of each financial year, going back to 2009 is as follows: April 2009 to March 2010, 28; April 2010 to March 2011, 40; April 2011 to March 2012, 35; April 2012 to March 2013, 98; April 2013 to March 2014, 231; April 2014 to March 2015, 260; April 2015 to March 2016, 304.

Mr Speaker, there are currently 12 people on the waiting list for domiciliary care since 16th January of this year.

665

The Government policy on domiciliary care is to provide care to meet personal hygiene needs of persons over the age of 60 who, due to frailty or age-related conditions, require support to remain safe at home.

In order to receive a service, they must be eligible for social care and be assessed as having critical or substantial care needs. In non-exceptional cases, a maximum of two hours' support daily can be granted.

This has been a very important part of our policy of ensuring that elderly people can continue to live independently for longer. The policy also helps to keep people out of hospital. We have, as hon. Members can see from the answers provided, put a huge amount of resources into this area of policy, given that we consider this is a priority for so many families in our community.

675 We are now offering the service to more than tenfold the numbers that were being provided a service in 2010, an increase of hundreds of people having the benefit of this service and delivering benefits to the wider public interest and, of course, the community.

680 But this does cost money, and although the Members opposite do criticise us for spending money we are clear that, as in all areas, this is money well spent for our community's wider benefits.

Q138/2017
Elderly care residences –
Panic buttons

Clerk: Question 138, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state on which occasions have resident call buttons, commonly known as panic buttons, at Mount Alvernia and all other elderly care 685 residencies been out of operation and how for how long on each occasion?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the nurse call bell system 690 is in working order in all areas of the service except for the third floor of Mount Alvernia. Management has put short-term measures in place whilst the replacement of the entire system is installed.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can I ask the Hon. Minister for how long the third floor has 695 been out of operation and the reason why – is it a technical issue, or is it something more complex that will require professional help?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I do not have the date from which the third-floor bell system has 700 not been in operation but it is, as he rightly assumes, a technical electrical issue, which is why we have sought a replacement for the entirety of Mount Alvernia, and we expect that the work will commence on 6th March to replace the entirety of the system.

705 The hon. Gentleman – which I am sure is why he is asking the questions – should be assured that, as a result of that, the measures include ensuring that there is always a nurse on that floor during the course of the day. I am reliably informed that there are always two registered general nurses on duty and eight nursing assistants, so there is no concern about the persons' safety and welfare.

Q139/2017
Care Agency employees –
Breakdown re acting positions

Clerk: Question 139, the Hon. L F Llamas.

710 Hon L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a schedule with the breakdown of Care Agency employees (a) currently in acting positions, (b) since when has each employee been acting, (c) what is the original post or grade and department of the employee, and (d) what post or grade and department is the employee acting in?

715 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman a schedule with a breakdown of the information he requests.

Answer to Question 139 of 2017

Q140/2017
MedDoc Ltd –
Beneficial owners

Clerk: Question 140, the Hon. R M Clinton.

720 Hon. R M Clinton: My apologies, Mr Speaker, it was not on my list.

Mr Speaker, can the Government advise who are the beneficial owners of MedDoc Ltd, being Gibraltar Company No. 113133 given the award of the Dementia Day Care facility contract?

725 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I am surprised that Members opposite should single out one care provider in a sector that involves a number of companies. One might be left to wonder why they have not asked who the beneficial owners of 730 the other companies in the sector providing services to Government – namely ADA, Rainbow and Grand Home Care – are.

In order to assist the House, however, I am going to provide it with details of the beneficial owners of all of the companies in the sector with which the Government contracts. They are as follows: ADA – Juana De Los Angeles Dominguez 50%, Carmen Perez 25% ; Micaela Guererro 25%; Rainbow – Emilio Rodriguez 50%; Juana De Los Angeles Dominguez 50%; Grand Home Care – Artur Wasowicz 100%; MedDoc – Dr Josep Ricard Gandia and Josephine Peralta, a retired GHA nurse.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Minister’s comprehensive response. In respect to Medoc, he mentions Josephine Peralta; would he confirm that Josephine Peralta holds 50% of Medoc?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, on the basis that the answer has been drafted for me on the basis that the shareholders have been attributed with a percentage, and there are two shareholders in respect of Medoc, I can assume that they are 50% and 50% but I will have to confirm that information for him.

Hon. R M Clinton: I would be grateful to the Minister if he would. The public record at Companies House shows 50% by Dr Gandia and 50% for a nominee company which I presume is acting for Josephine Peralta, but if he could confirm that I would be grateful.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will recall that in the last session of the House he asked me about the beneficial ownership of a nominee company, and that is why he has asked me the question again, and therefore, whilst again I am assuming, it does follow, given that it is 50% ownership in the Companies House, we can assume it is 50%, but I will confirm that to him.

Q141/2017
Sexual offences –
Steps to curb rise in offending

Clerk: Question 141, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state what steps the Government and law enforcement agencies are taking to curb the sharp rise in sexual offences?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, given their serious nature, the RGP has specific resources dedicated to dealing with these type of offences staffed by specialist officers. As part of its continuing monitoring processes on crime pattern analysis, the Royal Gibraltar Police has naturally noted the increase in reports of sexual offences. Given the limited data available, however, it is unclear at this stage whether this represents a shift or whether we will see a return to the levels reported in previous years, which were relatively consistent.

It is important to note, Mr Speaker, that the analysis has revealed that of the 65 offences of a serious sexual nature reported to police, 26 were identified as part of one particular investigation and cannot therefore be considered to be part of a ‘sharp rise’ in such offending.

775 It is also assessed that, given the greater awareness, the public are increasingly confident in reporting these matters even where they are of a historical nature, demonstrating, I think, their faith in the criminal justice system and judicial process.

In this respect I really do want to highlight the excellent work done in this field by the RGP under the leadership of Commissioner Eddie Yome.

780 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Hear, hear.

Hon. D A Feetham: And will the Hon. Minister also acknowledge the role played by new legislation in that – in people actually reporting and coming forward with historical, for example, sexual offences, in that of course the Crimes Act and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act did introduce very modern provisions relating to anonymity, for example, in relation to victims of such crime and the protection of those victims when they come forward and they give evidence? Certainly that has, in the United Kingdom, seen an increase in victims of sexual offences coming forward so that these can be prosecuted and I would have expected that to be the case here in Gibraltar too.

790 And, of course, following on from that, would he want to congratulate the GSD for introducing those two pieces of legislation?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I would like to contribute to this as Chairman of MAPA, which is a Multi-Agency Public Protection Forum, which deals specifically with sex offenders. While it may be that new legislation provides a different regime and a different framework, I do not necessarily think – and I do not say this as a criticism ... I think that the reason why people are coming forward is because of the successful prosecutions in this particular field that we have had of late. I do not think when people come forward to report these matters they are actually aware of the legislative framework that exists, so that is not necessarily a contributing factor to people coming forward. It does possibly assist in the success of the prosecution but cannot be the only measure for it.

800 I think that congratulations have to go to the multi-agency working together that makes these prosecutions successful, because a prosecution is not only successful because a perpetrator is convicted – we also have to look at the support that is given to the victims and their families, and that is a structure that has been developed outside of the legislation in practices and policies that have been established over the last three years by people who are operational in these matters.

Q142/2017
Legal Aid reform –
Delay in laying of Bill

Clerk: Question 142, the Hon. E J Phillips.

810 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government explain the delay in laying before the House a Bill to reform the Legal Aid system?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

815 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I am glad to tell the hon. Gentleman that there has been no such delay.

As the House knows, following a process of consultation with the Bar Council, the Legal Aid system was reformed with the new rates published.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

820 Clerk: Question 143, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. D A Feetham: May I, Mr Speaker?

825 Mr Speaker: On the previous question?

Hon. D A Feetham: On the Legal Aid, yes.

Mr Speaker, yes, new rates were published in relation to Legal Aid. There were also other reforms introduced in relation to serious fraud; rates were increased there. Then the legislation was changed again after the prosecution of the Marrache brothers. But what about the legal assistance? In relation to legal assistance we have a situation where the threshold for qualification for legal assistance is extremely low and it prevents people from accessing justice. Is that something that the Government is now going to be in a position, in short measure and in short time, to introduce to this House in order to deal with what is a very significant injustice to a lot of people?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, only in this House would you have the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition rise to ask a supplementary on an entirely new matter. The Hon. Mr Phillips asked a question on Legal Aid. Of course he meant to ask about legal assistance, but he got it wrong.

840 Legal Aid rates, new rates, were negotiated by the Bar Counsel, by my hon. and learned Friend, Gilbert Licudi. They have been published and have been in the statute book since 2004. Mr Figueras made exactly the same mistake.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): And got it in the neck.

845 Hon. N F Costa: Yes. And therefore, Mr Speaker, if he wants to know what steps I have taken in respect of legal assistance, then he can ask the question at the next session of Parliament and I will give it to him.

850 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, if I may say so, it is a particularly ungenerous answer. (Laughter and interjections)

What he is really saying is 'I knew that the hon. Gentleman wanted to ask about legal assistance as well as Legal Aid', (Interjection) 'or at the very least wanted to ask' – that is what he said – 'wanted to ask about legal assistance, but I have just given him the answer in relation to Legal Aid because he has made a mistake.' It is actually a mistake that a lot of people make, and indeed when I am drafting sometimes – (Interjections) Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

860 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, when I sometimes draft communiques I have now resorted to talking about 'public funding'. It is a common mistake that people make. Why? Because in the United Kingdom, for example, there is no legal assistance; it is all Legal Aid.

But the hon. Gentleman is here. He must know what the Government's plans are in relation to legal assistance. (Interjection) Of course. Well, therefore I have asked a supplementary and he should be in a position to answer that supplementary, which is: how quickly can we expect to have legislation in relation to legal assistance, which unfortunately is a significant injustice to an awful lot of people? And I think that he would agree with that.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker –

Hon. D A Feetham: Cavalry to the rescue!

Hon. Chief Minister: It is surprising that the hon. Gentleman gets up and he thinks ...
[Inaudible]

Mr Speaker: And the Hon. Speaker will intervene when necessary so that the cavalry that comes to the rescue keeps the situation under reasonable control, because I can see that the fires are now being lit. (Laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is really quite incredible (Hon. N F Costa: It is.) that when what is not best described as the cavalry opposite – because it oft fails to rescue and actually digs a deeper hole – gets up to dig, that is okay, but when the cavalry which does not need to rescue but represents this side gets up, it is something to be remarked upon.

Well, I assure the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, that I do not regard myself as cavalry; I regard myself as being principally concerned about how this Government ensures that people who are in need are dealt with and we understand those issues, and this is an important issue that both the former Minister for Justice, Mr Licudi, and the current Minister for Justice, Mr Costa, have done a lot of work on.

But there are serious issues of parliamentary procedure that the hon. Gentleman has raised and therefore, as the Leader of the House, I am going to deal with those issues in respect of how supplementaries arise and give you the Government's view in that respect, Mr Speaker, and to deal with the substance of what the hon. Gentleman has said.

The hon. Gentleman started by saying that the Hon. Minister's answer was ungenerous. Mr Speaker, I have to commend the Minister for an extraordinarily generous answer, because the hon. Members opposite will not know, except for Mr Reyes and the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, that when Mr Figueras made exactly the same mistake I rightly and properly pointed out that not even a first-year pupil in my Chambers when I was in practice would have made the mistake of confusing Legal Aid and legal assistance and not had it immediately pointed out to him, because it is like in the law mistaking apples and pears.

Those who are listening will not be lawyers but they need to understand, Mr Speaker, that the concept of Legal Aid is only one that is relevant in criminal law. In other words, when somebody is charged with an offence and is unable to pay for their defence, they get what is known as Legal Aid. The concept of legal assistance engages in civil proceedings. It is an extraordinarily simple thing to understand and it is Law 101 for anybody practising in Gibraltar.

And so, Mr Speaker, for the Hon. the Minister not to have simply referred the Leader of the Opposition to my excoriating comments to Mr Figueras, who was then sitting next to him and suffered the Government pointing out that they did not know the first thing about the law in Gibraltar if they did not know that difference, is really not to remember history and to demonstrate once again how he fails those around him. He failed to point out to Mr Figueras when he saw his speech before he delivered it that he was getting it wrong on Legal Aid and legal assistance and he has obviously failed to point out to Mr Phillips that what he was asking about was done a long time ago and that what he needed to talk about was legal assistance.

But, Mr Speaker, we have today had an admission from the Leader of the Opposition that he does not know his one Legal Aid from his elbow. He has admitted here today that he is so careless as to detail that he does not sometimes realise when he is writing public communiques ... That is what he said. In other words, in the discharge of his office as the Leader of the Opposition he does not sometimes realise that he is saying one thing when he means another. And when he is going from black to white, not in an area that is grey, I will print out and frame the Hansard of what the hon. Gentleman has said and I will ensure that the public in Gibraltar, when he asks them to trust him and his party with more serious affairs even than this, are reminded that he does not know A from B.

920 But, Mr Speaker, therefore, given that we are dealing with one thing which is black and another one which is white, a supplementary does not arise from that question, and the fact that the Government may know what it is doing in respect of black does not mean that it can be required to answer in a supplementary to a question about white. Otherwise, Mr Speaker, we would completely lose control of the agenda of questions and we could be asked about tigers 925 and in supplementaries to please provide what we know about tuna. The only person who would be able to do that would be the hon. Member for the Environment, who knows his tigers and his tuna perfectly well, and he is not somebody who confuses his aid with his elbow.

And so, Mr Speaker, the Government does not feel it must therefore answer a supplementary on something that does not at all arise from this question, but if a proper 930 question is put and care is taken, and carelessness does not incur on the preparation of a proper question next time round, then we will happily share the work that we are doing to protect people who do need legal assistance. Legal assistance – I remind them, in case they have forgotten again, that that engages in civil proceedings and not Legal Aid, something which we have already dealt with.

935 But Mr Speaker, I assume everyone in the community who pays them legal fees is looking to ensure that their carelessness has not crept into other areas of their work.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that was – 940 Mr Speaker: I am allowing one further intervention from the Leader of the Opposition and then we are moving on to the next question.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker; Mr Speaker is very generous.

Bearing in mind that the answer the Hon. Minister has given is in relation to Legal Aid and he 945 has said that the Government has done x, y and z in relation to Legal Aid – including, it has to be said, changing the law, because that is what they did in relation to Legal Aid to allow the Marrache brothers to have gold-plated representation at their trial – how can the Government justify reforming the law in relation to that and not having reformed the law in relation to legal assistance?

950 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman seems to think that continually mentioning one particular case garners him some support, and he wants to do it in a way that is most prejudicial to the Government as possible without an eye to the way that we should all be behaving in respect of matters that engage the courts.

955 The Government, as he knows and as we have said a number of times in this House repeatedly – and indeed, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman knows because he was the one asking the questions of the then Minister for Justice, who gave him a lesson on human rights law – that the law had to change because the Government was advised that if it did not the prosecutions would collapse.

960 In those circumstances there was a change of the law ahead of a wholesale change of the law on the area to deal with the issue that had been raised in the context of that prosecution, and then there was a wholesale change of the law that dealt with all areas. That is the position the hon. Gentleman knows about.

965 What he wants to do is to get up and say ‘Why you do this in the Marrache case?’ and use it as a whip against the Government constantly to try and prejudice people against the Government. People will know, because they are too astute in Gibraltar to have the wool pulled over their eyes, that if the Government has already explained that we had to do it in that particular case because otherwise prosecutions would have collapsed, it was the right thing to do because there had not been a wholesale change. There has now been a wholesale change in 970 the law and there will be a wholesale change in the law in respect of other matters involving legal assistance – the other area, I remind him, given that he has told us how careless he is when it comes to this in respect of civil matters, where many more people are affected, which concerns the Government greatly.

975 Or is it that he can for one moment genuinely believe that the Government wanted to change the law to spend more money in respect of a particular case just willy-nilly? Nothing could be further from the truth and nobody gets gold-plated defences; they get the defences that the Government is advised they must have in order for prosecutions not to collapse. If the prosecution had collapsed, Mr Speaker, it would have been very bad indeed for Gibraltar as a jurisdiction in which to do financial services, in which to set up companies, and that would have 980 been a very bad thing indeed.

This Government will have the vision to ensure that we do the right thing for all of the people of Gibraltar and we did the right thing in that case – and he should know that. In fact, Mr Speaker, I dare say that he does, but his attempt to use this matter simply politically really is now so transparent that everybody sees thought it. (Banging on desks)

Q143/2017

Isaac Marrache case – Intention to appeal decision of Mr Justice Jack

985

Mr Speaker: Question 143, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Does the Minister for Justice intend to appeal the decision of Mr Justice Jack in relation to his attempt to withdraw his appeal to the Supreme Court of the decision of the 990 Parole Board in the Isaac Marrache case?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, it is already a matter of 995 public record that I have caused a Notice of Appeal to be filed. I also confirmed as much in Government Press Release 43 of this year.

Given that the matter is subject to legal proceedings before the Court of Appeal, I do not propose to say any more on the appeal or provide any further comment.

1000 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, in relation to that matter it is correct, isn't it, that it is a matter of public record? I have read in the Chronicle this morning that the Minister intends to instruct Lord Pannick to conduct the appeal on his behalf.

1005 Mr Speaker: I did not hear that ... Lord Pannick?

Hon. E J Phillips: Lord Pannick QC.

1010 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member is the appellant, the Government does not consider that it is appropriate for him to be engaged in answering any further questions.

The hon. Member is saying that he read something in the newspaper this morning. He can make up his own mind what he believes from what newspapers, but who acts for the Minister will be obvious in court.

1015 Hon. E J Phillips: Is the Government instructing Lord Pannick in this matter?

1020 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government has already indicated to the hon. Gentleman what our answer is. This is a matter which is sub judice, it is before the court, and the hon. Gentleman will see whom we instruct in the context of the proceedings and will read in the newspaper what was said in court yesterday. This is not a matter for further parliamentary engagement.

I do not know what it is – if he just wants to meet Lord Pannick and have a selfie with him. (Laughter) I do not know why he is so obsessed with him!

1025 Hon. E J Phillips: I am not concerned with Lord Pannick or anyone else, frankly, but what I am concerned about is the public purse and how much money the Government intends to spend in relation to this matter.

Several Members: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

1030 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, if he is concerned about the public purse, then he might want to follow these proceedings very carefully to see who it is that is putting the Government to expense, but perhaps that would require him to understand the jurisprudence of the decisions that are being delivered in this case and it might be beyond his ability to comprehend.

Hon. D A Feetham: It is terrible, actually, him criticising a judge like that.

Hon. Chief Minister: Have I?

1040 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, of course you have.

Hon. Chief Minister: Read what was said and see ... [Inaudible]

1045 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, is it in the –

Hon. D A Feetham: That's what you have done. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

1050 Hon. E J Phillips: Sir, I have the floor, don't I? Mr Speaker, the question I am trying to put to the Government relates to the instruction of an eminent leading QC in the field of public law and human rights. There are over 20 or 30 that I have found this morning on Legal 500 that the Government could instruct, but they are instructing the number-one eminent lawyer in respect of this area –

1055 Hon. D A Feetham: And the most expensive.

Hon. E J Phillips: – and the most expensive lawyer, in fact. Doesn't the Government consider that they should be considering a range of lawyers, and in fact local barristers who could quite properly do this – the likes of Sir Peter Caruana or Keith Azopardi QC?

1060 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is really quite bizarre. I have never seen an Opposition that is setting out its stall to seek to sell us the services of some barristers. I am grateful that at least he has stopped short of asking that we should instruct him!

1065 Mr Speaker, this is not a bazaar. Lord Pannick is a recognised leader in his field. If we instruct him is a matter that I am not going to debate in this House in respect of this matter, but he should know, because it should be glaringly obvious, that Lord Pannick is retained by the Government of Gibraltar in a number of different areas, and if he thinks – he has said that he is the leading brain – if he thinks that Gibraltar should engage anybody other than the leading 1070 brain in some respects, well then he has a different attitude to running the affairs of Gibraltar than I do, because I believe we should have the leading brains engaged in defending the interests of Gibraltar internationally and indeed in our courts where necessary. Whether we use him in this case or not will be a matter of public record. If he had had the time yesterday he might have been able to be in court and hear what was said in court. But those matters in that case are for the courts.

1075 For him to stand up here and to set up a barristerial 'Soko Chico' where he is saying 'Very good, very good, and cheaper for you!' is really quite ridiculous, Mr Speaker. This is not the way that one would expect a serious Opposition to be conducting themselves. This is a very serious matter, not relating just to the incidents that we are dealing with – it relates generally to the law of Gibraltar and the Government will instruct who it considers is appropriate and will not be 1080 considering in this House who we should or should not instruct nor who we have instructed.

He has read a report in a newspaper. I am surprised that he thinks he cannot rely on what he has read in that newspaper as a court report and that he wants to ask the Government about it.

Hon. D A Feetham: But, Mr Speaker, does the Hon. the Chief Minister – and I will ask the 1085 question of the Chief Minister because this morning he is answering virtually every single question that comes close to potentially embarrassing the Government. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) Doesn't he recognise that this is not a matter of national importance for Gibraltar and that there is a difference between instructing somebody like Lord Pannick, who is probably the most expensive barrister, senior counsel, in England, and instructing somebody else who will 1090 do just as good a job but will not cost the taxpayer of Gibraltar the hundreds of thousands pounds that Lord Pannick will cost? That is the simple point.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the reason I have got up, other than to answer questions that he has got up to make when he has got up to raise questions ... so I do not see why the 1095 leader of that side can get up and ask questions but the leader of this side cannot get up to answer them. The only reason I have got up to answer these questions is because the person being asked is the appellant himself. They are asking the appellant questions about his case in court –

1100 Hon. D A Feetham: No, of course not!

Hon. Chief Minister: – and I have got up to answer because I do not think it is appropriate for the appellant to be answering. That is why I have got up. I am not answering that aspect of the question; I am dealing with why I have got up.

1105 Mr Speaker, a number of lawyers names have been mentioned, for whom I have the highest regard – and they are from Gibraltar – in the exercise of their professional duties, though of course I have had many political differences with them in the past, and there are many others who have not been mentioned for whom I also have the highest regard. There may be reasons why we are not able to use them in this case or why we do not wish to use them in this case, but 1110 we do not have to consider with hon. Members opposite who we instruct and who we do not instruct in this case, something which often happens on the instance of our own legal advisers, not on the basis of the Government deciding who we want to use.

For sure, Lord Pannick would not be confusing himself on what is Legal Aid and legal assistance – so already streets ahead of some there, Mr Speaker – and the cost involved is 1115 something that the Government will of course be taking into consideration, as we do always, because we do not spend a penny that we do not have to spend. We protect the public purse, we ensure that moneys are used for exactly the right purposes and the public know that.

What is abundantly clear is that hon. Members opposite see the word 'Marrache' and they think that they are hitting the bingo in respect of trying to attack the Government, and they are 1120 going to do it in respect of every aspect of the case. It is really quite disgraceful, Mr Speaker, that they are doing that from Opposition.

1125 Lord Pannick is a recognised leader in his field. He represented Gina Miller in the recent Brexit proceedings in the United Kingdom, he has advised the Government of Gibraltar for at least five years since I have been Chief Minister of Gibraltar, and if the Government considers he is the right person to do this case he will do it. If we do not, somebody else will do it, but it is not a matter for this Parliament. What we certainly will not be doing is instructing people who do not know their Legal Aid from their legal assistance elbow.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one final question. The Chief Minister will know that this community has shelled out about £10 million in relation to the Marrache affair. It is simply not right – and I would ask the Chief Minister to agree – that we spend another couple of hundred thousand pounds on determining a question of parole. It is simply wrong in my view.

1135

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, determining the question of parole is interpreting the law that the GSD brought to this House about when people are able to have parole. So, in other words, all of the game that they are trying to play with this case stems around the law that they brought to this House about when people are able to have parole or not.

1140

I refresh my memory on the Hansard of the pride the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition said he was expressing when he brought the law that allowed people to be paroled after one third of the time. The first controversial instance when somebody is paroled after a third of the time, the same-self Leader of the Opposition and his party say that this is quite disgraceful. Mr Speaker, the level of political hypocrisy could not be made up!

1145

Legal cases cost money. Lawyers are the principal parties that take the advantage of that. The two people asking me questions about this are lawyers who take advantage of legal fees being paid in cases where people argue esoteric points of law or pertinent points of law.

1150

The state of the law in Gibraltar in respect of parole is not just relevant in the case of Isaac Marrache; it is pertinent to every single future case of parole that may involve any person, whether they are of a name so recognised that hon. Members like to try and make hay politically by referring to it, or not – in other words, an anonymous person who may come before the system and needs clarity in respect of that system. Whether it costs money to deal with those issues or not ... Look, it always costs money to go to court – or is it that hon. Members, lawyers, do not know that, and one of the Members opposite, who has just been made a silk, is not charging more after he has been made a silk than he was charging before?

1155

We could have an argument about whether lawyers charge too much. (A Member: Hear, hear.) I am a lawyer: in my view, some lawyers charge too much; some other lawyers are cheap at the price. In this case that is not the issue. The issue is the principle of defending an Act of this Parliament and its interpretation – an Act which ironically they brought to this Parliament, the effect of which, because of the law that they presented, is that Mr Marrache was able to have parole after a third of the time served. In other words, we were left to give effect to their law, the law which they said they presented with pride. If defending that costs money, what can we do? But if he knows of lawyers in a co-operative he might like to tell us who they are. The last time I checked, he used to send bills every time that he finished a case.

1165

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the issue –

Mr Speaker: I will allow one other intervention from the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition –

1170

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: And then we are really moving on.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much.

1175

Mr Speaker: It was anticipated, when we came to Question 143, that a short answer was not going to be the answer.

1180

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the issue in this appeal is not whether there can be an increase on the tariff for parole – in other words, you qualify after a third; that is not in issue. That is something, in actual fact, that has been on the statute books for decades; it is a historical tariff to do with the fact that prisoners were imprisoned in very difficult circumstances in Moorish Castle. At the time that we introduced the Prison Act there was a transition from the old prison to the new prison. At the time, without consultation, we decided ‘We are going to leave that as it is, we will review it after the General Election’, but what we reformed was the actual mechanism in which somebody qualifies for parole. The tariff had nothing to do with the GSD; it had been there for a very long time indeed.

But my question is this. The information that has come certainly to my attention is that Lord Pannick charged £70,000 for the advice that he provided the Government of Gibraltar and for the document that was then used in the Isacc Marrache parole case before the court. Can he confirm or can he deny that?

1190

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the issue of the tariff and whether it was one that they brought or not is one that I have revisited, and in Hansard he said he was sticking with the tariff when he brought it. In other words, he considered it and he stuck with the one-third tariff. It is not that he just willy-nilly continued with the position as it had been to date.

1195

Mr Speaker, the fact is that communities have to make decisions, (Hon. N F Costa: Yes.) and if you decide that people have to serve two-thirds of their sentence, then what we are going to have to do is spend another ... I do not know how many millions. He said it was going to cost £5 million, I think, but it ended up, under his watch, costing more than double what he estimated it was going to cost, like most things with the GSD, £24 million for the Airport ended up being £84 million for the Airport; I think £5 million for the prison ended up being £10 million. Well Mr Speaker, -

1200

Mr Speaker: That is not relevant.

1205

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, yes, it is relevant in this way: because people have to make a decision whether, if we review the tariff and people serve two-thirds of their sentence, we have to spend another £10 million building an additional prison or throwing an additional floor on top of the prison and feeding people for longer. (Interjection)

1210

Mr Speaker, as to Lord Pannick’s fees, it is absolutely and completely fiction that his fees for an advice have been £70,000. It is utter tripe, Mr Speaker – to refer to one of my favourite dishes when not made with tripe but with meat – utter tripe. The hon. Member is being played for a fool by whoever is giving him that information.

1215

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q144/2017
Director of Public Prosecutions –
Delay in appointment

Clerk: Question 144, the Hon. E J Phillips.

1220 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government explain the reasons for the lengthy delay in the appointment of a Director of Public Prosecutions?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1225 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, there is no such post. Government has said that we will consider, and we consider that it should exist and we are in the process of assessing how best to advance this. Given the discussion we have just had about fees – and it is a perfectly pertinent question to have asked at this point – that does, however, mean an increase in public sector employment, so I am surprised to see Members opposite seemingly encouraging us to pursue this policy of ours, given their repeated attacks, just seen, on us in respect of numbers employed in the public service. This approach might best be described as politically hypocritical.

A Member: Hear, hear.

1235 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I would just refer the hon. Member to his own manifesto, in which he states:

We will seek to appoint a specific office holder to carry out responsibility for public prosecutions.

Is the Government intending or not intending to appoint a DPP to carry out that important function for our community?

1240 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I will read the answer again.

There is no such post. Government has said we consider it should exist and we are in the process of assessing how best to advance this. That does, however, mean –

Mr Speaker: That is enough. That is answered in the question. The rest is – (Interjection)

1245 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is it the Government's view that to appoint a Director of Public Prosecutions, which is at the end of the day is their manifesto commitment – it is not our policy, it is their policy – requires a change in the Constitution? Certainly one interpretation of the Constitution is that Her Majesty's Attorney General is responsible for prosecutions and the creation of this particular post might require an amendment to the Constitution itself. Is that the Government's view?

1255 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I remember as a younger man being told by Sir Peter Caruana every time I asked them about their manifesto commitments that he would make an announcement on their own manifesto commitments as and when their policies were decided. I, however, even though I have been accused of being ungenerous this morning, will not be quite as ungenerous as Sir Peter was with me when I was a young Member of the Opposition. The answer is that we are in discussions with the Attorney General to see how best we achieve this.

1260 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, and I understand that, but at pains of having Sir Lancelot on his white charger standing up and also intervening in this, I just wonder whether the hon. Gentleman can indicate whether there is a preliminary view at least whether this requires an amendment to the Constitution, because if it does it obviously cannot be done by way of primary legislation. I 1265 understand there may be internal discussions, but is that something at the very least that the Government is considering or whether the Government has formulated a view?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, to be demoted from King Arthur of the Round Table (Laughter) to just mere Sir Lancelot is really quite something! (Interjection) At the 1270 moment I do sit atop the round table, even though he is so far down the other side of it and is unlikely to be able to find his way here on a black steed, as I would describe him, or on a white charger.

Mr Speaker, the position is very simple: there is a very clear view now that there is not a requirement to amend the Constitution for this purpose.

Q207 and 208/2017
Payments for legal services –
Breakdown by firm

1275 Clerk: We now move to Question 207, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government explain what the payment of £130,000 in legal fees to Cleary Gottlieb Steen and Hamilton LLP for the period of February to May 2016 relates to?

1280 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 208.

1285 Clerk: Question 208, the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state the total amounts paid to all Gibraltar-based law firms in respect of both legal services and legal drafting services as from December 2011 broken down by each law firm by year?

1290 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, Gottlieb Steen and Hamilton LLP have provided legal advice to Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar during the 1295 period of February to May of last year principally in relation to the following matters: Income Tax and state aid.

The information requested by the hon. Member in respect of legal drafting cost is available on the Government website dating back to 2008. The data for legal services is available dating back to 2012. No payments have been made in respect of legal services during December 2011.

1300 Mr Speaker: Call the next question.

Clerk: Question – (Interjection)

Mr Speaker: Get on with it, please.

1305

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: If you are going to ask a supplementary, decide who is going to ask it and let's get on with the business.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I would be grateful if the Hon. Minister ... if I understood him correctly that the law firm, Gottlieb Steen and Hamilton LLP, is a US-based law firm, and was the advice given from their US office or from their European office, because I do not understand why they were giving advice – I presume in respect of State Aid, this would be in respect of the European State Aid.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) : Mr Speaker, clearly Gottlieb have been instructed by the Government of Gibraltar I think since the time that Joe Bossano was Chief Minister for the 16 years that they were in Government and whilst we have continued to be there. They have an office in Brussels, which has been the one that has been providing advice to the Government of Gibraltar for well-nigh 25 years.

1320

Mr Speaker: Any other supplementary on this subject? Next question.

Q145-148/2017

St Bernard's Hospital –

Mental health patient admissions; Accident and Emergency waiting times

Clerk: Question 145, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide details of both the numerical and percentage bed occupancy rates at St Bernard's Hospital by sufferers of dementia and elderly long-stay patients from January to June 2016?

I apologise, Mr Speaker, at this stage, that I misled the House on the last occasion. When in supplementaries to the hon. Gentleman I said that I had the figures for January to June 2016 contained in a report to the GHA board, in fact the figures were from the previous six months to the ones I have asked today.

1330

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1335

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 146 to 148.

Clerk: Question 146, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1340

Hon. D A Feetham: Is the Minister certain that no non mental illness related patients have been admitted to Ocean Views either because of bed shortages at St Bernard's Hospital or at all?

Clerk: Question 147, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1345

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Health now provide details of the monthly average waiting times for people waiting to be treated at the Accident and Emergency from January to June 2016?

1350 Clerk: Question 148, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Health now provide an answer to Question 57/2017 as to the monthly average waiting times for people waiting to be treated at Accident and Emergency from July to December 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the past two months the headlines in the United Kingdom have been about an NHS in crisis. Just in the past seven days, the headlines and news reports on the NHS could not have been worse. One report refers to NHS Surgeons kicking their heels as bed shortages delay operations, with senior health officials warning of shocking waste because beds are being taken up by patients waiting for community social care. As Hon. Members know, that is not the case in Gibraltar's GHA. Other news reports refer to babies waiting on the floor at A&E and pensioners on trolleys for 14 hours, or horrific reports of a bleeding pensioner with dementia treated by nurses in a store room at a busy NHS hospital because no cubicles were free. Twenty NHS hospitals in the United Kingdom have declared black alerts because patient safety could no longer be assured.

1360 Mr Speaker, the excellent professionals of the GHA are doing, if I may say, a sterling job for our community. There are errors in treatment which come with the fact that medicine is not an exact science, but it would be churlish in the extreme for us not to recognise the excellent work and the important investment we have made in the health services of our nation; an investment under my friend and predecessor Dr John Cortes, and the professionalism of our staff produce a GHA today that is not – not by a country mile, Mr Speaker – suffering a crisis like the NHS.

1365 It is in that context that I now hand over to the Hon Gentleman a schedule of the information requested in respect of Question 145, showing the figures oscillate around 23%.

Answer to question 145

MONTH	PATIENT COHORT	NUMBER	PERCENTAGE
Jan-16	Dementia Long Stay	29	22%
Jan-16	Elderly Long Stay	29	22%
Feb-16	Dementia Long Stay	29	22%
Feb-16	Elderly Long Stay	29	22%
Mar-16	Dementia Long Stay	29	22%
Mar-16	Elderly Long Stay	29	22%
Apr-16	Dementia Long Stay	33	25%
Apr-16	Elderly Long Stay	32	24%
May-16	Dementia Long Stay	29	22%
May-16	Elderly Long Stay	27	21%
Jun-16	Dementia Long Stay	29	22%
Jun-16	Elderly Long Stay	31	24%

In addition to the information provided in the schedule, let me remind the House of the contingency measures we have introduced.

1380 We have added four additional beds to two wards and have temporarily refurbished the cardio rehabilitation gym into a seven-bed ward. A more active and effective bed management system, together with the introduction of a full-time social worker at St Bernard's Hospital and the possibility of approved packages of care has seen an increase in the discharge process.

1385 This has provided the GHA with a daily average – Mr Speaker, perhaps the Leader of the Opposition will want to hear this bit. This has provided the GHA with a daily average of between 11 and 15 beds available. (Banging on desks) Just last week, during what is still considered the height of the flu season, there were 18 beds available. Whilst NHS hospitals were turning people away for lack of beds, we were able to continue operations even at this very difficult time of year. The net result of what I have mentioned is that the GHA is able to deal with acute admissions into A&E in an even more timely manner and further expedite transfer of patients to 1390 the wards.

Mr Speaker, save for three elective surgery cancellations – three, contrasted to the 15% to 20% that they ensured under their time in Government, when there were a panoply of operations cancelled as a result of lack of bed shortages – as a result of bed unavailability, all scheduled elective surgery is being undertaken and there have been no cancellations due to 1395 non-availability of beds in January and February.

All surgical emergencies have also been expedited and undertaken well within the NICE guidelines for referrals. Also, elective specialist surgeries have been carried out by visiting specialist consultants from the UK.

1400 Elderly patients are being discharged in a timely manner. This prevents elderly patients from becoming institutionalised and at risk of hospital-acquired infections due to prolonged stay. Our investment in the community delivers this result.

I can also confirm that only patients with mental health related illnesses have been admitted to Ocean Views Mental Health Facility. There has been no need to shoehorn patients into this facility who are suffering from illnesses unrelated to mental health.

1405 Mr Speaker, the average waiting time for people waiting to be treated at the Accident and Emergency from January to June of last year is as follows. January, one hour and 31 minutes; February, one hour and 20 minutes; March, one hour and 28 minutes; April, one hour and 19 minutes; May, one hour and 12 minutes; and June, one hour and 21 minutes.

1410 Mr Speaker, I am not sure why the hon. Gentleman asks me whether I am now in a position to answer Question 57 of this year, given that I answered that question. I am, however, delighted that the hon. Gentleman should have asked again the same question, as I was wrong and it allows me the opportunity to correct the record.

1415 Mr Speaker, the House will recall that I replied that the average waiting time for a patient to be treated at A&E ranged from two hours and four minutes to two hours and 28 minutes. In fact, average waiting times were significantly lower, reinforcing even further the absolutely outstanding work carried out by our professionals at A&E.

1420 It therefore gives me great pleasure, Mr Speaker, to announce that the average waiting times for people waiting to be treated at the A&E from July to December 2016 of last year were: July, one hour and 14 minutes; August, one hour and 16 minutes; September, one hour and 31 minutes; October, one hour and 35 minutes; November, one hour and 19 minutes; December, one hour and 18 minutes.

1425 Mr Speaker, given the really quite dreadful statistics for average waiting times at A&E in the United Kingdom NHS, I sincerely do believe that we must congratulate the GHA for these average waiting times. (Banging on desks)

Hon Chief Minister: Hear, hear.

1430 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, indeed I add my voice of congratulation to the staff at the GHA and may I also congratulate the Hon. Minister on an excellent speech. It was very well practised indeed.

Can I start off in supplementary with the answer that he has provided to Question 145/2017. He said 23%, I think, in relation to the bed occupancy rates for dementia patients, which was the average, I think, that he was given.

1435 But, Mr Speaker, am I right in saying that actually when you take dementia long-stay patients and elderly long-stay patients, you then have an average of over 44% of bed occupancy by those two categories?

1440 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place I really have to start with the preface that the hon. Gentleman made by saying that he associates my remarks as to the excellent work done by A&E and GHA because, Mr Speaker, if that were true, if he really genuinely felt the words that he said in this House, he would not have – when I saw the post this morning – posted on Facebook a post that indicates that he is not at all pleased with the work that is being done at the GHA. And he knows full well, Mr Speaker, because I explained in this House that when I noted the longest a patient had to wait to be treated at A&E I meant the longest a patient had to be treated at A&E by being admitted into a ward. In other words – (Interjection) Yes, indeed I did. (Interjection) Yes, indeed I did and I have got the Hansard here and I can read it back to him if he wants. I made the point last time in this House that the average waiting time for a person to come to A&E and actually be treated by the consultant as two hours. I was wrong. When a patient attends A&E he is treated by a consultant within one hour 12 minutes, which is a staggeringly magnificent time. (Banging on desks) (A Member: Hear, hear.) And of course, Mr Speaker, there will be occasions where a person waits for more than an hour, because if a patient comes at the same time as more than three or four patients present with heart problems or chest pains, triage demands that the person that presents with what could be a heart attack is seen immediately. So, whereas the average time is this magical number of one hour and 12 minutes to be seen from walking in to A&E to being treated by a consultant, there will be cases where it exceeds that hour. And in those cases, instead of posting on Facebook, the hon. Gentleman can call me, can text me, and he knows that when he does – and he cannot say in this House that it is not true – there has not been one occasion, not one, that he has texted me or written to me that I have not sought by all means possible to address and resolve every complaint and every grievance that is brought to me. So if he genuinely felt the words that A&E were doing a great job, he would not put misleading posts on Facebook, (Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear.) because he knows full well that the persons who had to wait for longer to be admitted from A&E to a ward were in beds, being properly taken care of, seen by doctors, given nutrition and being reviewed. So his post, Mr Speaker, belies and gives the lie to the words that he now seeks to associate in public, trying to be everything to all men. It is just not credible. (A Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desk) Mr Speaker, I will not allow and we cannot allow it to pass un-replied to.

1470 Mr Speaker, yes, if he does the maths it is 44%, but I have to tell him that is incredibly better than it was under the GSD.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am very surprised, I have to say, by the song and dance that the hon. Gentleman has actually made in relation to my post on Facebook (Interjection) and my preface to the question about ... yes, of course agreeing that staff work under very difficult circumstances, and yes, congratulating the staff for the very hard work that they put into not only Accident and Emergency but elsewhere. But, Mr Speaker, doesn't the hon. Gentleman realise ... and we will come back to my question, the question that I asked the last time round and my post on Facebook, given that he has raised it, but doesn't he realise that actually the problems faced at Accident and Emergency are not staff created, they are systemic? That is the reason why people are waiting so long (Interjections) at Accident and Emergency, Mr Speaker.

1480 They are waiting so long because of lack of resources, Mr Speaker. They are waiting so long because of bed occupancy rates amongst dementia sufferers and long-stay patients, because if there are no beds available in wards then people are going to have to wait in a bed inside Accident and Emergency, which then has a knock-on effect on people outside Accident and Emergency waiting to see a doctor.

1485 Does he not agree with me, Mr Speaker, that the problems faced at Accident and Emergency are systemic?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, it is clear beyond doubt that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has come today to play politics and to do so with the consummate style of not Laurence Olivier but a comic.

Mr Speaker: May I intervene at this stage! Will the hon. Member ... [Inaudible]

We are not going to have a repetition today of what we had at the last meeting. I want Members to ask questions and for those questions to be answered by the Government if the Government can answer them, is in a position to answer them. I do not want references to Facebook, because is not ... That can be debated in Parliament when there is a debate, but not arising from questions, and I want hon. Members not to debate the situation of the Gibraltar Health Authority.

1500 So the hon. Member of the Opposition can ask questions, the Minister or the Chief Minister or whoever can reply, but do not debate, because otherwise I will call the question to a halt and move on to the other one.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in respect of systemic, the system that he criticises is the system first of all that they put in place. Let me also tell him this: if he is criticising a system where people who attend A&E have on average to wait for one hour and 18 minutes, then I think everyone on this side of the House will say it is a good system, it is a great system. (Banging on desks)

1510 Mr Speaker, it is clearly the case that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is not listening to my answers. I have told him that as a result of measures I have introduced, by increasing temporarily the number of beds there has been, since December, during January and February, an average of 15 beds available. Every day there are around 15 beds available. I have told him that during January and February there have only been three elective cancellations.

1515 Does he remember what the hon. opposite number when I was in Opposition used to tell me when I used to tell her that operations were being cancelled because there were no beds, and the reply came back always, shoulders shrugged, saying it was the flu season. Well, during the flu season there are 18 beds available and there are no operations being cancelled by simple measures being introduced.

1520 So, no, Mr Speaker, the system works extremely well, the average waiting time is an hour and 18 minutes, there are 18 hospital beds available, elective operations are not being cancelled, cancer operations are being expedited, all referrals are being expedited and the system that we have now, due to the measures that we have taken, will mean that there has been, for the first time, no elective operations cancelled due to lack of beds. (Banging on desks)

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman seems to forget that when he was on this side of the House he used to constantly say that the cancellation of one operation was the cancellation of one operation too many. (Interjection) That is the point he always used to make. He always used to make that point and he always used to lambast the then Minister for Health in relation to waiting times for Accident and Emergency.

1530 What the Hon. the Minister cannot get away from – and I realise that he has been very short in the post because he has only been in the post for a couple of months, but what he cannot get away from is the fact that they have been in Government for five years. Therefore, in five years I

1535 would have expected a better system with fewer complaints, given that he was constantly complaining from this side of the House as to the operation of the system when we were in Government. But the position, Mr Speaker, is that that has not happened. Does he not agree with me? (Interjections)

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, I cannot agree, for various reasons. The number of operations has shot up under this Government. (Interjection) My formidable predecessor, Dr John Cortes (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) introduced the day surgery. I told him in another session of the House that the number of operations – and I am quoting from memory – were around 4,000. That is an incredible number of operations being carried out, and there were many less operations being carried out when the GSD were in Government, (A Member: Six hundred.) around 600. And I have just told him, Mr Speaker, that during the height of the flu season, when I used to be told that operations had to be cancelled because there were no beds available and that is the way it was, I have just told him that we have gone from a position of 15% rate of cancellations, 15% under their time, to three cancellations. (Interjection) And he is right – (Hon. Chief Minister: Wow!) He is right, (Hon. Chief Minister: Wow!) three cancelled elective operations are three too many.

1550 And he knows me well, Mr Speaker. He cannot go to a chat show on GBC and call me his friend and then stand up and act as if he does not know me. (Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) He will have known that internally those three cancelled operations would have caused a stir coming from the Minister's office down and I would have wanted to have known why on earth it was that, given that we have 18 beds available for the first time ever during the flu season, any elective operation was cancelled. Those numbers were not good enough for me, even if we have gone from hundreds of cancelled operations to three.

Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

A Member: Hear, hear.

1560 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he knows that I count him as one of my closest friends. He knows that (Interjection) he knows that, and he also knows that I have to do my job as Leader of the Opposition. And he knows in addition to that (Interjection) that in fact on more than one occasion he has told me that he is glad that I ask these questions because it helps him do his job better. He cannot deny that, Mr Speaker.

1565 Now, Mr Speaker, can I return to the questions in relation to the monthly average waiting times for people waiting to be treated at Accident and Emergency. On the last occasion I asked this particular question and I also asked for the maximum that somebody has had to wait before being treated. What he said to me on the last occasion, despite the fact that the question was what is the maximum that somebody has had to wait to be treated in Accident –

Mr Speaker: You cannot be referring at a meeting here to a specific question that was asked at the last meeting. The rules do not –

1575 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is about –

Mr Speaker: You are asking today about average waiting times. You are being given information about average waiting times. You cannot ask questions about maximum waiting times. If you asked it at the last meeting then the rules do not allow you to ask it again, so deal with average waiting times and not maximum waiting times.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I do wish that sometimes Mr Speaker were to have faith in the fact that I have been in this House for some time and I know what the rules of the House are. I am not going to ask about the maximum – (Interjection) May I –?

Mr Speaker: I hope that you would also have faith in the fact that I have been here much longer than you, (Laughter) (Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear.) that I think that I read and keep up with the rules as often as possible because I have to implement them, and that I am totally impartial as to how I apply the rules.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but Mr Speaker has got the wrong end of the stick. (A Member: Ooooh!) May I –?

Mr Speaker: No. I have told hon. Members beforehand that, by nature of the rules of the House, whereby the majority of the rules ... in detail, Rule 17, governing the right to ask questions, has got 15 sub-paragraphs. By the nature of events the other day and today, we are dealing with questions. They are asking the questions. It is them whom I have to control. The questions should not be of excessive length, they should keep to the point, they should not ask a question that has been ... I wish I could control also ... I wish the rules, and that is up to Members ... I wish I could control the length of answers as well, because then we would get on more expeditiously.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, if I may explain, (Mr Speaker: Yes.) – I am very grateful to Mr Speaker – the reason why I was referring to the maximum somebody has had to wait was because the question that I asked on the last occasion and on this occasion in relation to average waiting times was drafted in exactly the same terms as my question on the maximum a person has had to wait. It was in exactly the same terms; it was just that the difference was average waiting times and the other was the maximum somebody has had to wait. And on the last occasion, in relation to the maximum waiting time, the Hon. the Minister said it is waiting times but it is not waiting times outside, it is waiting times on a bed inside but waiting to be treated.

Hon. N F Costa: They were waiting to be admitted to a ward.

Hon. D A Feetham: But the question was ‘waiting to be treated’, that was the question. (Interjection) Yes, but the question now is in the same way – and the Hon. Minister has raised it – as obviously he misunderstood the question, are we talking about ... When one takes average waiting times, is it average waiting times inside occupying a bed – because of course the questions are drafted in exactly the same way – or are we talking about average waiting times outside Accident and Emergency.

The hon. Minister must see why I am asking the question, because they were drafted in exactly the same way, and in relation to a maximum he said they were on a bed inside – 28 hours, but they are in a bed inside. Okay? The question on average was exactly the same; it just said average. Is that inside or is it outside? That is the question.

1620

That was the reason, Mr Speaker, I referred to the last time round.

1625

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the average waiting time, to be clear, refers from the average waiting time from arrival to be seen by a clinician. Right? So a person comes to A&E and the average waiting time for him to be admitted into A&E and be seen by a clinician hovers around an hour. Of course, with individual cases that may take longer because of circumstances surrounding that particular time in which the person arrives.

If, once at A&E, there is a determination by the consultant within that hour and 13 minutes that the patient should be admitted into a ward, that happens immediately. So a person arrives at A&E, he waits between an hour and 13 minutes to be walked into A&E and actually be seen 1635 by a clinician. That is the maximum he will have to wait, an hour and 13 minutes. At that point the person will either be admitted into a ward, (Interjection) or he or she will be asked to go home.

The point that we made last time as to the longest a patient has had to wait –

1640 Hon. D A Feetham: That is the question.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, but the answer is different. In December, as a result of all the reasons that I gave – the fact that we had the highest number of over-75s presenting with major illnesses at A&E etc. – there was a case where a person, having been seen at A&E within the average time of one hour and 13 minutes ... at that point a consultant makes a determination that the person has to be admitted to a ward. Today that would be immediately, because there are around 15 beds available. At the time when we had that huge surge in December, there would have been that wait, but as the hon. Gentleman says, it would have been in a bed with continuous medical monitoring, food and proper care.

Q149 and 150/2017
GHA and Care Agency vacancies –
Breakdown by department

1650 Clerk: Question 149, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many vacancies are there within the GHA, broken down by departments?

1655 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 150.

1660 Clerk: Question 150, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many vacancies are there within the Care Agency, broken down by departments?

1665 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health Care and Justice.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, all posts within the Gibraltar Health Authority and the Care Agency are covered, and as such there are no vacancies.

1670 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have seen a circular that Unite the Union has sent round to its Members in relation to the question of vacancies at the GHA – not in relation to the Care Agency but in relation to the GHA. It basically says that Unite the Union are dealing with the issue of vacancies within the GHA with the Government and that those are going to be dealt with very shortly by the Government.

1675 Is he suggesting, therefore, that the information that Unite the Union has in relation to vacancies within the GHA is not accurate information?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, surely he does not expect me to answer for Unite the Union.

1680 Hon. D A Feetham: No, Mr Speaker, I expect him to be politically answerable to this side of the House, because if the Government is providing information to Unite the Union and is in discussions with Unite the Union or any other union about vacancies within the public service and they are in discussions about filling those vacancies when clearly vacancies exist and those are the discussions taken with an industrial relations perspective, how can he come to this House and say there are no vacancies within the GHA or indeed within the Care Agency?

1685 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I have said, surely he does not expect me to comment on a circular by a third party in this House.

1690 Mr Speaker: Well, there is a rule here which says that a question shall not be asked as to whether statements in the press or of private individuals or official bodies are accurate. The hon. Members here who are lawyers can tell me: what interpretation am I supposed to make of that?

A Member: Hear, hear.

1695 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful.
I will be posting on Facebook tonight the hon. Gentleman's answer that there are no vacancies within the GHA and the Care Agency.

1700 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I note that the hon. Gentleman has indicated what his social media chronology will be like this evening. He can rest assured that however much he sponsors his posts and his attempts to get them up that will not affect the industrial relations agenda of the Government or indeed the excellent work that we do with Unite and with the GGCA on all aspects where we engage with them and the excellent work that is being done by the hon. Member at the GHA, and people will see through whatever he decides to post 1705 this evening.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is there a reason why the hon. Gentleman has been able to answer the question in the terms that he has, no vacancies within the GHA – because the Government is covering vacancies within the GHA, as indeed within the Care Agency, with cover 1710 from recruitment consultants and recruitment agencies such as S&K and also MedDoc?

Hon. N F Costa: No.

Q151/2017
GHA nurses –
Numbers employed directly

Clerk: Question 151, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1715 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government say how many nurses were employed by the GHA directly as at 31st December 2012, 2013, 2014 and 2015.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1720 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the information is as follows: 2010, 387; 2011, 404; 2012, 429; 2013, 451; 2014, 457; 2015, 480; 2016, 473.

Mr Speaker, I would also like to correct the record. In the previous House I said there were 524 nurses employed directly by the GHA when in fact there are 473 nurses employed.

Q152-155/2017

GHA, Care Agency and Mount Alvernia –
Numbers of nurses and workers through recruitment agency

1725

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state how many nurses were placed/working within the GHA through the services of a recruitment agency as at 31st December 2012, 2013, 2014 and 2015?

1730

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, this question will be answered together with Questions 153, 154 and 155.

1735

Clerk: Question 153, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many workers are currently placed working within the GHA through the services of a recruitment agency?

1740

Clerk: Question 154, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many workers are currently placed working within the Care Agency through the services of a recruitment agency?

1745

Clerk: Question 155, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many workers are currently placed working within Mount Alvernia through the services of a recruitment agency?

1750

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, as at the date of writing this answer, there are 10 nurses placed through the GHA through the services of a recruitment agency.

As at 31st December 2012, 2013, 2014 and 2015, the information is as follows: 2012, six; 2013, two; 2014, five; 2015, 11.

The number of workers that are currently placed/working within the GHA through the services of a recruitment agency is 26.

There are 147 workers placed within the Care Agency through the services of a recruitment agency.

There are 16 workers currently placed within Mount Alvernia through the services of a recruitment agency.

Q156-159/2017

GHA, Care Agency and Mount Alvernia workers – Number directly employed on short-term contracts

Clerk: Question 156, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1765 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many workers employed directly by the GHA are on short-term contracts.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1770 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 157 to 159.

Clerk: Question 157, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1775 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many workers employed directly by the Care Agency are on short-term contracts?

Clerk: Question 158, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1780 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many workers currently working within Mount Alvernia are on short-term contracts?

Clerk: Question 159, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1785 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many workers working within the Care Agency and the GHA are on short-term contracts with a Government-owned company?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1790 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, there are no workers currently on short-term contracts within the Gibraltar Health Authority, the Care Agency or Mount Alvernia, whether via any Government-owned company or otherwise.

1795 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, perhaps his definition of a short-term contract is different to mine. I can tell the Hon. the Minister that I have seen in my office a number of people only last week. I am not going to say which sector, because they did not want me to reveal their identity, whether directly or indirectly, but certainly there are workers that are on 11-month contracts ... for example, that contract has not been renewed and they are on some kind of monthly contract or revolving contract. That is what I mean by short-term contract. If somebody is on an 11-
1800 month contract, it must be on a short-term contract. (Interjection) In fact, there were not only, for example, charge nurses in the time that we were in Government that were on short-term contracts, usually about 11-month contracts and those contracts were then renewed and they were then on further 11-month contracts, but there are such workers now within the GHA.

1805 That is what I mean by short-term contracts, and therefore I ask: what does the hon. Gentleman think that I mean by short terms contracts?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, there is no such thing, as I understand it in law, as a short-term contract. There are either indefinite contracts or fixed-term contracts.

1810 Hon. D A Feetham: All right, well, that is a partially helpful answer.

In relation to the questions that I have asked, Questions 156 to 159, can I therefore substitute for 'short-term contract' a 'fixed-term contract' – and can I have the answer, please?

1815 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, he can certainly rephrase the question, but I would not have the answer here.

1820 Mr Speaker: I can help the Leader of the Opposition by suggesting that he asks the same questions, substituting the words 'short-term contracts' for 'fixed-term contracts' at the next meeting of the House and I will take the questions as being different questions and not the same. I will allow them, in other words.

Q160/2017
GHA and Care Agency –
Subcontracted workers on zero hours contracts

Clerk: Question 160, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1825 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many employees subcontracted into the GHA and the Care Agency are on a zero hour contract? On this occasion I have put a note, just for the Hon. the Minister's benefit, so that he does provide me with the right answer, and the note is: a zero hour contract is a type of contract between an employer and a worker, where the employer is not obliged to provide any minimum working hours.

1830 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I love it how the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition turns it around when he has made a mistake and makes it seem like I am being somehow ungenerous.

1835 The hon. Gentleman asked me about short-term contracts. I even went and sought legal advice, and indeed it was confirmed that short-term contracts do not exist. There are either indefinite contracts or fixed-term contracts. So it is not that I need an explanatory note; it is just that he needs to ask the question properly.

1840 To answer the question, Mr Speaker, we do not have any information on the contracts between employers and employees who are subcontracted into the GHA and the Care Agency.

1845 Hon. D A Feetham: I find the answer puzzling, I have to say. The question – how many employees subcontracted into the GHA and the Care Agency are on zero hour contracts – is surely something that the Government would be interested in. And I ask that question in this context: that the Government, and the Hon. the Minister in particular when he was Minister for Employment, used to boast about the fact that unemployment levels are very low here in Gibraltar. But of course, if you have a situation where people are being placed within the GHA through recruitment agencies on zero hour contracts, that person is then taken off the unemployment list, but of course they may not be working at all or they may be working for two or three hours a week, and that is something that should be a matter of concern for the Minister, as indeed it is for me.

1850 Therefore, I ask the Minister again: has he not taken an interest in relation to something that is, of course, of a concern not only politically to both of us but of course more importantly to the people that are affected.

1855 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has an art of converting hypothetical situations into the worst kind of hypothetical situation. He is asking a hypothetical which, as the Hon. Speaker will remind us, is not permissible under the rules of the House – hypotheticals cannot be asked. And for him to suggest that I have no interest in the welfare of our employees is really quite incredible.

1860 The hon. Gentleman has asked whether there are subcontracted workers on zero hour contracts. It is not for me to explain the rudimentary basics of employment law to a Queen's 1865 Counsel, but if there is any subcontracted work between an agency and a Government Department, then of course the contract is between the company that is the agency and the worker. In other words, Mr Speaker, the labour is provided by that agency to the Government Department and the legal relationship is between the worker and the agency, not with us. Therefore, I cannot answer the question, because I am not the agency and I do not know whether the contract is zero hours, short term – which does not exist, indefinite, or otherwise.

1870 But let me tell him this: there is no one, no one – and obviously I have asked the question – there is no one that we know that is on this hypothetical scenario where they have a contract with an agency that is supplying labour to us but is not doing any work for the GHA.

In other words, Mr Speaker, if it is that an agency is providing the GHA labour – (Hon. D A Feetham: No obligation.) I can assure him that the GHA, if it requires work on a supply basis, then of course the GHA will call that person as a supply worker as and when required. But, as happens to be the case, every time that a worker is in fact contracted to offer supply labour to the Government, the reality is that when the Government entity asks somebody to come in as supply, they are doing the work of a regular worker all of the time.

1880 I remember when I was the Minister for Transport and the Minister for the Bus Company we had people on supply who were doing more hours than the actual drivers. And of course I know who the people are who are on supply and I can assure him, Mr Speaker, that those persons who are meant to be on supply to us and are only called as and when they are needed are actually working every day all of the time as if they had a regular contract.

1885 Hon. D A Feetham: But, Mr Speaker, hasn't the Hon. Minister done an analysis, as I would have expected him particularly to come prepared to this House to answer supplementaries from me in relation to this, but certainly also in his previous incarnation as the Minister for Employment to have done an analysis of the people that are off the unemployment list that are being placed within the public sector through recruitment agencies but on zero hour contracts? Is he saying that does not exist, that it is a figment of my imagination, that there are no people within the Care Agency or the GHA, which are now his responsibility, through recruitment consultants or agencies who are on zero hour contracts? Y si me entero (Interjections)

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, I am afraid to say that his third supplementary does evidence de que no se entera.

1895 Mr Speaker, as I have said, if there is a need for workers to be supplied by an agency the legal and contractual relationship necessarily has to be between the agency that provides the supply and the worker, because in law that supply worker is not an employee of the Government entity. He or she is an employee of the agency. What I am telling him is that I cannot tell him what the contract between a supply worker to the GHA and the agency is because the contractual and legal relationship is between that person and the agency.

1900 What I can tell him – because his concern is that there are people who are off the unemployment list but they are on zero hour contracts, which actually means they are off the unemployment list but doing no work ... What I am telling him is that whereas I cannot tell him what the contractual relationship says between that agency worker and the agency – I cannot because I am not privy to those contracts, because he or she is not my employee – what I am telling him is that when the GHA requires labour, that person will be required as and when required, in other words supply, but what I am telling him is that the zero hours is a fiction of their imagination because it is just not the case. When the GHA says, 'Right, we need certain people to do this job and we will call them as and when required,' the reality is that the Government entity in fact ends up using that person all of the time.

1910 So it is not the case that people are being stricken off the unemployment list on zero hour contracts and not doing work. That is what I am telling him for the responsibilities for which I am responsible, but reminding myself that when I was Minister for Transport those persons who were on a supply list, that were meant to be drivers as and when required, ended up actually

1915 doing more hours of work than the actual drivers. So he should not be concerned that people are off the unemployment list but doing no work. If they are not on the unemployment list, it is because they are actually... Sorry, if they are off the unemployment list it is because they are doing work.

1920 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, one final question in relation to this. He does not understand, really, the concern to the people that are affected. He may say there is nobody within the GHA and the Care Agency that is currently not working any hours, alright, but does he not accept that for the actual worker themselves – and hence I was trying to get to how many of 1925 these people there are – for the worker themselves, it is a huge uncertainty to have a situation where they are not on the unemployment list, so therefore they do not get called for jobs that may come out from the ETB, and yet they are placed within the GHA and the Care Agency through recruitment consultants on zero hour contracts. Those are the people who are coming to me and obviously are saying to me, ‘Look, this is just not fair, because I cannot even go to the ETB and basically ask for vacancies, because I am considered to be employed.’ I just wonder whether the hon. Gentleman can offer those people a measure of comfort.

1930 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, it has just dawned on me exactly what the hon. Gentleman is asking me, and maybe had he phrased the question differently I would have been able to have given him the answer straight off the bat.

1935 I think that the hon. Gentleman is referring to one particular company. I think he is referring to one particular company. Although I am not privy, because I have not seen any contracts of any of the recruitment agencies, I know from what I am told that there is only one company that is actually using what are termed zero hour contracts – one company – of which I have just been reminded right now.

1940 Mr Speaker, I have not been sighted of that documentation and of course it would be, as far as we are concerned, incredibly unfair for that to be the case. But he has to know that the usual recruitment agency that supplies labour to the Government, the usual one, has contracts for between 37 to 39 hours, because those are the ones that we work with in Government and we know because of the relations that we have. But there is certainly one company, which I now know he is talking about. I have not been sighted of those contracts, but certainly it would be for 1945 us on this side of the House quite outrageous if that were to be the case.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am very grateful to the Hon. Minister for the answer.

Q161 and 162/2017
GHA and Care Agency –
Bank nurses

Clerk: Question 161, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1950 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many bank nurses were employed directly by the GHA and separately the Care Agency as at 31st December 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015 and 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1955 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 162.

Clerk: Question 162, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1960 Mr Speaker: I am very ignorant: what is a bank nurse? Will the Minister explain when he answers his question? What are bank nurses? When you answer the next one, okay? Please. Thank you.

1965 Hon. D A Feetham: How many bank nurses were subcontracted into the GHA and separately the Care Agency through the services of recruitment agencies as at 31st December 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015 and 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1970 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman a schedule with a breakdown of the information he requests.

Answer to Question 161 of 2017

The total number of bank nurses employed directly through the GHA is as follows:

31 December 2012	79
31 December 2013	83
31 December 2014	91
31 December 2015	126
31 December 2016	126

The total number of bank nurses employed directly through the Care Agency is as follows:

31 December 2012	2
31 December 2013	2
31 December 2014	1
31 December 2015	1
31 December 2016	2

1975 Mr Speaker, in relation to Question 162, none.

Mr Speaker: And the bank nurse is someone who uses their time between the hospital and a bank?

1980 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, bank nurses tend to be populated by nurses who have retired.

Mr Speaker: They tend to be?

1985 Hon. N F Costa: Nurses who are retired and who are added to a bank list and are called in to cover maternities, sickness and other absences.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: A supply role.

1990 Mr Speaker: I am very grateful.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: The supply list is through the bank.

1995 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, are there any plans on the Government's side – in this case, obviously the GHA, the Authority – are there any plans for nurses on fixed-term contracts not to have those contracts renewed and for them to be placed on the bank list? Is there a policy in that regard?

2000 Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, that is not correct.

Mr Speaker: Any other supplementaries? Next question.

Q163/2017
Acting Director of Nursing – Suspension

Clerk: Question 163, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2005 Hon. D A Feetham: Is it true that the Acting Director of Nursing with 30 years' experience was suspended; and why?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

2010 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, no sir; no one has been suspended.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q164/2017
St Bernard's Hospital –
Reason and cost of alterations to seventh floor

Clerk: Question 164, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2015 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I may come back to this Question 163 in the future, if I may. (Interjections) I mean during the session of this House, obviously.

2020 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): He does not have to come back, he can ask me now.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): He is waiting for a Facebook friend to send a message.

Mr Speaker: [Inaudible]

2025 Hon. D A Feetham: No, Mr Speaker, I am not waiting for anybody from Facebook to message me! No! No!

I do have people that obviously provide me with information. After five years of the Government being in government, Mr Speaker, I now have a larger cadre of informers than I did three years ago. (Interjections)

2030 Mr Speaker: Question 164.

Clerk: Question 164, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2035 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what works have been undertaken to the seventh floor of the hospital, where the Minister and associated staff are located, their reason and their cost?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

2040 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the seventh floor boardroom has been partitioned and converted into an open plan office to house extra administration staff resulting from the creation of the new Ministry for Health, Care & Justice. The office used by the Director of Public Health has been converted into the GHA's main boardroom. The Director of Public Health is now housed on the sixth floor.

2045 Additionally, all administration offices forming part of the Ministry on the seventh floor have been repainted.

The works were awarded to GJBS for a total of £6,277.30.

2050 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, £6,200: is that the total sum of the contract, or is that the amount of money that the Government has paid so far? I have to say that it does appear, for the work that the Government is actually undertaking on the seventh floor, that £6,200 appears on the low side – and I do not criticise the Government for that, obviously, but ...

2055 Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker. Yes, the £6,277 relates to all of the work that has been conducted by GJBS to partition what used to be a huge space into two and to paint the entirety of the offices. I thank the hon. Gentleman for pointing out that we do achieve value for money.

Mr Speaker: Next question ... [Inaudible]

2060 A Member: [Inaudible] ... £6,000 too much.

A Member: Too much, yes.

Q165/2017
GHA procurement process –
Explanation

Clerk: Question 165, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2065 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain the procurement process at the GHA?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

2070 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the GHA procurement process is regulated by the Procurement (Public Contracts) Regulations 2012 and the GHA Financial Instructions.

The GHA procures items which are captured under Gibraltar Government tender awards from the corresponding suppliers. It also purchases items which are more specialised, such as theatre goods, drugs, pharmaceuticals and medical equipment.

2075 Prior to placing any order, due diligence is carried out by the specific Department submitting the request and subsequently countersigned by the respective budget holder.

The Procurement Department verifies the request by checking for availability of funds and obtaining the necessary approvals when these are required.

2080 Approved orders are placed via the GHA purchasing systems and successively received at our General Stores Department, from which they are forwarded to the relevant section.

I now hand over to the Hon Gentleman a flow chart which explains the full procurement process.

2085

Mr Speaker: I do not think the flow chart is going to allow the Leader of the Opposition to ask supplementaries at this stage. Does he have any supplementary? (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Yes.

Next question.

Q166/2017
GHA suppliers –
Top three entities by value

2090

Clerk: Question 166, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister state which are the top three entities by value providing provisions/supplies to the GHA in each of the last five years?

2095

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the information is in the schedule I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman.

Answer to Question 166/2017

The top three entities by value providing provisions/supplies to the GHA in each of the last five years is as follows:

Financial Year
2012/2013	Audibert	Gibraltar	£ 3,083,834.07
	Aifrend Swantex	Gibraltar	£ 1,488,408.17
	Valmar Pharmacy Ltd	Gibraltar	£ 1,225,002.52
2013/2014	Audibert	Gibraltar	£ 2,662,603.02
	Alfrend Swantex	Gibraltar	£ 1,767,592.38
	Calpe Centre Pharmacy (ICC)	Gibraltar	£ 1,425,536.24
2014/2015	Audibert	Gibraltar	£ 3,706,741.35
	Aifrend Swantex	Gibraltar	£ 2,646,571.78
	Louis pharmacy	Gibraltar	£ 1,491,385.32
2015/2016	Audibert	Gibraltar	£ 3,475,044.06
	Alfrend Swantex	Gibraltar	£ 2,290,000.33
	Kings Pharmacy	Gibraltar	£ 1,366,247.64
2016 - Feb 2017	Audibert	Gibraltar	£ 3,341,338.54
	Alfrend Swantex	Gibraltar	£ 1,898,185.36
	Miller and Miller	UK	£ 1,310,838.79

2105

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in relation to the schedule that the hon. Gentleman has provided, Audibert Gibraltar – can he explain who they are and what they do? Alfrend Swantex, Gibraltar, I do not know them, and of course Valmar Pharmacy I do. All the others are pharmacies except for Miller and Miller, who from February 2016 to February 2017 have supplied £1.3 million of supplies to the GHA.

2110

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, Audibert provides drugs and pharmaceuticals, vaccines, general surgical appliances and bandages. Did he want to know as well about Swantex?

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Swantex – and Miller.

Hon. N F Costa: Swantex: drugs, pharmaceuticals, surgical supplies, implants, prosthesis, anaesthesia, bandages, needles, sutures and general medical devices.

Miller is drugs and pharmaceuticals, and surgical supplies.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer and the schedule. May I ask the Minister: has there been a change in procurement policy, in that there seems to be a pattern in that there were procurements from pharmacies locally and now we are now 2120 procuring from Miller and Miller in the UK? I presume Miller and Miller are doing the same sort of supplies as the local pharmacies were doing in the past. Is there a change in Government policy on this?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, there is no change in Government policy.

Q167/2017
GHA cafeteria –
Cost to taxpayer

2125 Clerk: Question 167, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what is the annual cost to the taxpayer in 2016 of the GHA cafeteria?

2130 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the annual cost for the calendar year January to December 2016 is £143,307.

Q168/2017
Oncology Unit –
Purchase of chairs

Clerk: Question 168, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2135

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, why were the chairs for the new Oncology Unit purchased from El Corte Inglés – although I understand that is not the case.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

2140

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have to inform the hon. Gentleman that the chairs for the new Oncology Unit were not purchased from El Corte Inglés – although I do accept that it is a vitally important affair of state. But the public will no doubt realise that there cannot be many serious issues facing healthcare in Gibraltar under this administration if the Leader of the Opposition is reduced to asking us questions about where we do our furniture shopping! (Banging on desks, laughter and interjections)

2145

Hon. Chief Minister: El último corte le ha dado!

2150 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I have to say I do not think that it would be surprising for the Leader of the Opposition, or anybody else who has care for the public finances of this community and how money is spent and whether it is well spent ... that the information I had certainly was that these chairs had been purchased from across the border in Spain at El Corte Inglés, so I decided to ask the question.

But where were the chairs purchased? He has not provided me with that answer.

2160 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place, this is the second time that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition mentions that he asks questions based on the information received, and I have told him that every time he asks me a question on that information he is wide, wide off the mark. The information he is receiving is not at all accurate, and the question that he asked me was specifically in relation to whether they were purchased from El Corte Inglés – he did not ask me from where they were purchased. But they were purchased... five transfusion chairs were purchased directly from the French specialist supplier, BNB Medical.

2165 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: If I can add to that, Mr Speaker, sometimes when one is purchasing specialist equipment in the medical or in the care field, we are restricted and these things cannot always be purchased locally. But it is a shame that the Leader of the Opposition did not take it as seriously or was not at all scandalised when he was in Government and Social Services purchased a kitchen for the building in Governor's Parade from Pepe Cote (Laughter and banging on desks) (A Member: Withering!) because that, Mr Speaker, could have been purchased locally, I am sure. It is not a specialist kitchen.

Several Members: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks, interjection and laughter)

2175 Mr Speaker: The hon. Lady is not answering a supplementary that has been put to her, and may I say that she is out of order – and don't do it again!

A Member: Hear, hear.

2180 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I apologise.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have to say that was one of the most enjoyable interventions that I have heard this morning! (Laughter and banging on desks) (Several Members: Hear, hear.)

2185 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, one has to give credit where credit is due to the hon. Lady, I have to say. (Interjection by Hon. Miss S J Sacramento) Absolutely. My kitchen is also from pepe Cote, I have to say to the hon. Lady, yes.

2190 Mr Speaker, in relation to these particular chairs, were they actually purchased directly from these particular suppliers? Also, were they also subject to the same procurement system that the hon. Gentleman has explained?

2195 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the chairs were actually directly purchased from the French specialist supplier and the cost of these specialist chairs and all the related chemotherapy equipment was in fact part of a very generous donation by Mrs Margaret Ayling, so it was at no cost to the Government. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: On that basis, we can move on to the next question.

ADJOURNMENT

2200 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, in order to stop the process of Members advertising the wares of companies from the across the border across the House and to stop the hon. Gentleman embarrassing himself with rumours that are brought to his attention which are wrong, and given that we can only hold the attention of half of the elected Opposition, can I now move that the House do now adjourn until Monday, 20th February at 10 a.m.

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn until next Monday, 20th February at 10 a.m.

The House adjourned at 12.53 p.m.

GHA procurement budget – Breakdown re local and overseas spend Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Monday, 20th February 2017.

We continue with answers to Oral Questions. We commence with Question 170.

The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

5

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government state what percentage of the GHA procurement budget is bought from local licence holders and what percentage is bought from overseas?

10

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, during the current financial year 2016-17 a total of 64% of the procurement budget has been spent in local licence holders and 36% has been dispersed to overseas providers.

Q171/2017

ABE Ltd – GHA procurement; directors

15

Clerk: Question 171 the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Do ABE Ltd procure any pharmaceutical goods to the GHA; and, if so, can we know the nature of the pharmaceuticals and who the director/agent of the company is?

20

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the GHA procure fridge line type of medication from ABE (UK) Ltd, the main bulk of these items being insulin, eye drops, Hep C and HIV-related medication.

The directors of ABE Limited are Tracey Sarah Poggio, Albert Andrew Poggio and David John Rosedon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, could I ask the Hon. the Minister for Health why it was not in the schedule that we received last week – or perhaps I have it wrong. There was a schedule on who provides pharmaceuticals and it was not in the schedule.

Hon. N F Costa: That is because, Mr Speaker, I believe it was he Hon. Mr Feetham asked me as to the top three are providers to the GHA in terms of their value.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Could I ask the hon. Gentleman if there is any link between ABE Ltd and Miller & Miller?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I do not know the answer to the question but I will be happy to look into it.

Q172/2017
St Bernard's Hospital –
Recent resignations

Clerk: Question 172, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Following three GHA surgeons' resignations in the last nine months and in light of a recent fourth resignation, is the Minister for Health concerned about the resignations trend within St Bernard's Hospital?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, it is not correct to say that there have been four surgeons resigning from the GHA. Therefore, I do not accept the premise that there is a resignation trend.

In fact, to understand the issue fully one must take a closer look at the reasons for the departure of the surgeons who have left in the last nine months. Only two surgeons have resigned unexpectedly, half the number that the hon. Lady has referred to. The other departing surgeons have left either due to retirement or have resigned as expected due to being over retirement age. One surgeon has left at the end of his contract to return to his home country.

One of the surgeons who retired from the GHA after 22 years of service sent a heartfelt thanks to all the staff of the GHA and described his time in the GHA as the best years of his career. I want to thank this surgeon, Mr Speaker, who has given decades of service to the GHA and has helped to build a highly efficient department. He leaves a positive legacy of satisfied patients and will be sorely missed by all of his colleagues.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman will recall, I alluded to some emails that I had received months ago where surgeons had been advising me of their dissatisfaction with the system, which is why I brought up this question in the first place.

I understand the Minister's response from where he is standing, but could he tell the House whether he is undergoing any sort of communication with the surgeons to ensure that they continue, if he insists that they are happy, they continue to be happy and shed this low morale perception that seems to be going on.

70

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I do not, once again, accept the premise that there is low morale. I refer the hon. Lady to the debate that I had with the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition where I noted that 61% of doctors are noted in the informal survey that was conducted that they do not feel low on morale. But I have also told the hon. Lady and the hon. Gentleman that the GHA, as an institution that provides as many services as it does, and in the light of the fact that there are 82 doctors ... there is certainly always room for improvement and for reform. And to that extent I have noted in this House and outside that the Government followed the advice of the Medical Advisory Council and has appointed a Deputy Medical Director, so that now there is a Medical Director who is able to dedicate more time to the functions of the Medical Director and, following the advice of the Medical Director, there is also now a Deputy Medical Director to assist the Medical Director in terms of the functions that need to be conducted as to how best we ensure clinical input.

Mr Speaker, it will not have escaped the notice of the hon. Lady that I have been very keen to stress that in order for the hospital to be a properly functioning hospital and for there to be high morale among the surgeons and for patients, of course, to receive what I always say has to be empathic, compassionate, high-quality medical care, there has to be lead in all areas of the GHA.

85

I have also said in this House and outside that there has to be, in terms of administration, a facilitation and support of the clinical functions and not the other way around. In other words, GHA management and my office have to be there to support and provide the resources needed by the clinicians to be able to lead.

90

In terms of formal clinical management positions, I am able to say that the following are leads: in Accident and Emergency there is a clinical lead; in diagnostics, which is pathology and radiology, there is a clinical lead; there is also a clinical lead in ITU and anaesthesia; also a lead in surgical departments; also a clinical lead in the medical department; and there are also three GPs at the Primary Care Centre who take clinical leads.

As the hon. Lady may know, the Deputy Medical Director is Dr Krish Rawal, who is, as the hon. Lady knows, quite a popular GP and who receives many kudos and very positive feedback for the work that he does.

In addition to everything that I have also said, I am very keen indeed to ensure that the advisory structures that my hon. predecessor Dr John Cortes introduced, where there is full clinical input and advice into the management structures, are buttressed and reinforced, and to that end I have had meetings with the Medical Director and the Deputy Medical Director.

I remind the House that there are also in the Medical Advisory Committee, which is a statutory board that – without wishing to start the morning being too political – a statutory board that had not met in 16 years. That has met three times already during the course of this year. We have clinical leads – in other words, members who are clinicians and who have full voting rights. In other words, the whole policy and thrust of the reforms being conducted by the Hon. Dr John Cortes, and myself following on from his solid foundations, is to ensure that at every single stage of the GHA there is clinical input and there are clinical leads in all areas.

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Q202/2017

Gibraltar London office –
Schedule of payments

110 Clerk: We now move to Question 202, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a schedule of payments made since December 2011 by the Gibraltar office in London over £5,000 within any financial year to the same individual or entity, including (a) name of individual or entity, (b) payment, (c) date, and (d) description of payment?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Yes, Mr Speaker. I am told that the compiling of the answer to this question requires a disproportionate administrative effort, since the information with regard to payments to suppliers made from financial years 2011-12 to 2015-16 is not available in electronic format and would mean going through the payments book payment by payment, manually.

However, we nevertheless have the information requested for the current financial year as this information is now saved electronically, and I will hand over the schedule to the hon. Member for the financial year 2016-17.
125

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, could I ask the Hon. Minister if it is possible to know the name of the political consultant employed receiving a monthly sum, given that I asked if it could be possible that the name of the individual entity be disclosed.
130

Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Yes, Mr Speaker, the Government has no objection to giving the name to the hon. Member, but if he would prefer to do so in the anteroom rather than publicly across this House.
135

Mr Speaker: Yes, the Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for this schedule. I do not know whether this is sensitive or not, but could he identify who the political consultant is that we are paying between £1,500 to £2,000 a month is?
140

Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman just asked the same question.

Hon. R M Clinton: Oh, my apologies, Mr Speaker. I was busy – I was deep in numbers.

Q203/2017
Gibraltar London office –
Running costs

145 Clerk: Question 203, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose monthly details since December 2011 of the running cost of the Gibraltar London Office broken down into (a) salaries and wages, (b) telephone bills, (c) electricity bills, (d) security costs, (e) general maintenance and refurbishment, and (f) any other expense?
150

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Yes, Mr Speaker. I hand over to the hon. Member 155 a schedule containing the information requested from the financial years 2011-12 to 2015-16.

Answer to Question No 203/2017

Mr Speaker: Is there any supplementary arising from the answer to Question 203? Yes, Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, just looking at this schedule in answer to Question 203, just 160 for clarification I would be grateful if the Minister could advise is London House owned outright, because I notice there is a rent payment of about £400,000 a year.

Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, before we came into office the structure was already in place. Strand Management Ltd is the owner and the Government rents it from them. It is a 165 Government-owned company.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q204-206/2017

Europa Point, King George V Hospital site and the Mount – Update re expressions of interest

Clerk: Question 204, the Hon. L F Llamas.

170 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose at what stage it is at with respect to expressions of interest in relation to the plot of land at Europa Point?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

175 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 205 and 206.

Clerk: Question 205, the Hon. L F Llamas.

180 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose at what stage it is at with respect to expressions of interest in relation to the King George V hospital site?

Clerk: Question 206, the Hon. L F Llamas.

185 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose at what stage it is at with respect to expressions of interest in relation to the Mount?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

190 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, in respect of each of these questions the Government is currently having discussions with the preferred interested party in each case with a view to obtaining the best possible outcome for the taxpayer.

195 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, will it be possible to disclose what the intended usage of each preferred bidder at this stage is on each site, on each project?

Hon. J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, in relation to the plot at Europa Point, the intention of the Government was to continue with, in a sense, what we had inherited, which was a kind of restaurant facility, except we were adding on to it this idea of having an interpretation centre for Gorham's Cave, the World Heritage Site.

In relation to the Mount, I think it is more difficult to go into it at this stage, because obviously discussions are still ongoing.

In relation to the KGV Hospital, the Government is looking at the possibility of an elderly residential facility on the site.

205 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

210 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for his answer. In relation to the Mount, and looking at this from a heritage point of view, can the Government confirm that they will,, whichever expression of interest they consider, that it will certainly be a condition of any development that the Mount is preserved as it is, including the gardens as they are, and that there will be no alteration to the current site at present as it stands? I am sure that the hon. Member will agree that it is a heritage site par excellence.

215 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, I think if we do what the hon. Member suggests then there will be no project, no development, no tender and no expressions of interest for the Mount.

220 What I can say certainly is that the Government is very conscious and very aware of the heritage constraints and also of the environmental constraints that will apply to any project which takes place at the Mount, and that in any case it would need to go through the planning process, where those considerations would be fully safeguarded.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I understand the hon Member correctly, is he implying that he would accept some alteration, if not to the building to the current grounds around the Mount?

225 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, what I said is that this is hypothetical at this stage, so really it very much depends on the nature of the project that comes forward and whether it is something which the Government would like to see from a Landlord point of view or not. But then, independently to the Government as landlord, there are also planning considerations which are enforced by the Development and Planning Commission, so they would also safeguard heritage, environment and all the other considerations which the hon. Member is concerned about.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister.
235 In terms of the new Heritage Act, is it envisaged that the Mount and its gardens will be included in the schedule as a listed building, or not? And from the hon. Member's answer, would he then accept some kind of construction in the gardens around the Mount?

Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, it is too early to tell. What I can say certainly is that the Mount is not a listed building at present and I have not seen the proposed list of schedules in the new heritage legislation but I am told that it is not included in the proposal either. But we need to wait, because that is something which obviously my hon. colleagues are dealing with.

Hon. R M Clinton: Would the hon. Member then undertake, or at least seek, that the Minister responsible for Heritage includes it in the schedule for listing?

245 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, we are talking about a schedule to an Act which is not yet a Bill that is before this House. And so, Mr Speaker, I think that the hon. Gentleman has to accept that we should not be pursuing this line further. If he wants to make that one of the things that he says during the course of the presentation of the Bill when it comes, he can give us a whole list of the things that he thinks should be in the schedule, which the Government may or may not agree. But now is not the time to be dealing with whether there is going to be a particular item on a particular schedule of a Bill that is not yet even published.

255 Mr Speaker: Any other supplementary?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, can I invite the House to recess for 15 minutes.

The House recessed at 10.28 a.m. and resumed its sitting at 10.46 a.m.

CHIEF MINISTER

Q209/2017

Former coach park site –
Update on sale and development

260 Clerk: We now continue with questions to the Chief Minister.
Question 209, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, further to Question 255/2016, can the Government provide an update on the sale and development of the former coach park site?

265 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Yes, Mr Speaker, detailed negotiations continue and an announcement will be made in due course.

270 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, would it be possible to know why, whilst negotiations are being undertaken, the car park is not open for the public to use in the interim?

275 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, because there is a new 1,000-space car park which has been opened a little bit further down and which resolves most if not all of Gibraltar's parking problems, and in the interim that site may be necessary as a laydown area for other developments around it, and indeed we need to have exclusive possession to grant when the negotiations are finished.

280 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his answer.
Would he be able to advise the House whether there is still an intention to develop a Marriott hotel on the site?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is still the intention to develop a hotel on the site.

Q210/2017

Government employee overtime –
Schedule of payments

285 Clerk: Question 210, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a monthly schedule since January 2012 of employees of the Government, Government-owned companies, agencies and authorities, who have earned in excess of £2,000 in overtime and/or allowances in a month, broken down into (a) post, (b) grade and (c) department, agency, authority or company?

290 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the information requested is too voluminous to obtain. Nevertheless, a total of all time spent or all amounts spent in overtime or allowances is published in the Estimates book of Revenue and Expenditure annually.

295 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, does that mean that if I bring the question another month I will not be able to obtain the answer due to the voluminous work necessary to be able to provide an answer?

300 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, yes, Mr Speaker, because this essentially means going through the overtime of every single officer of the Government, the Government-owned companies, the agencies and authorities, to check what they have earned in overtime over a period of five years and to give that information to the hon. Gentleman.

305 I know that they want to go to the next election saying we have not fulfilled our manifesto commitments – they would achieve that if we had most of the people who work for us doing this work for them!

310 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, perhaps if I could ask the Chief Minister – without asking for detail, is it the case then that it is in fact possible to earn in excess of £2,000 in overtime in a month?

315 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether somebody is earning in excess of £2,000 in overtime in a month, and of course the answer to the hon. Gentleman must be yes, it is possible. Now, is it probable? Well, it is probable that only very few might have done so, but to understand who those are and find them would require going through everyone's overtime.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

320 Hon. L F Llamas: Just one final supplementary. If I ask for just one year, would that be possible or would it still be the same answer?

325 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think it would still be very, very voluminous work to be done. I do not know what it is that the hon. Gentleman is trying to get to. Maybe, given the way that they do Opposition politics, if what he has heard is a rumour about someone, he might be able to identify by way of post or write to me and I can try and satisfy him and check that one person, if that is what he wants. But to trawl through the Government, the Government-owned companies, the agencies and the authorities, whether for a year or otherwise, is going to involve a hell of a lot of work.

330 Hon. L F Llamas: Just one final supplementary. Would it be possible to ask for just one month in particular?

335 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it still involves going through every single officer, and whether you go through it for a month or you go through it for a year or for five years, or if I say yes, we will give it to the hon. Gentleman for the month of November 2011 and let's see who was earning £2,000 a month in overtime then, it would still require the same amount of work.

340 Hon. Members are entitled to ask for information, and where it is not an exercise which is so difficult to do they are entitled to have it unless we tell them why we think it is not appropriate that they should have it.

345 I do not know what it is that the hon. Gentleman is trying to achieve, because it is not as if they do not have the amount that is paid in respect of overtime – it is in the book. That amount is in the book and therefore they see the total amount paid in respect of overtime. So, if they are trying to get at one particular officer, a number of particular officers, every single officer in respect of overtime ... Well, look, hon. Members will know I have never been a civil servant – he has. I do not know whether he has ever earned £2,000 of overtime in a particular month, £4,000 of overtime or never stayed around to do any overtime, but it would require checking his record together with everybody else's.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q211/2017
Consultants –
Details re fixed contracts

350 Clerk: Question 211, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose details of consultants on fixed-term contracts, including (a) name, (b) consideration of contract, (c) start date of contract and (d) end date or due end date of contract?

355

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the details of consultants sought by the hon. Member continue to be available on line.

360

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q212 and 222/2017
Local procurement –
Chief Secretary's directive; criteria used

Clerk: Question 212, the Hon. L F Llamas.

365 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose all versions of the Chief Secretary's directive on local procurement since December 2011 to date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

370 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 222.

I am conscious that the hon. Lady brings Question 222 – I think she has just been inconvenienced and stepped out.

375 Clerk: Question 222, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government state what are the Government Departments', agencies' and wholly-owned companies' criteria when purchasing or procuring goods in relation to local suppliers?

380 Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Chief Secretary's directives sought by the hon. Member are in the handout I now pass to the hon. Gentleman.

CIRCULAR TO ALL HEADS OF DEPARTMENT

TENDER THRESHOLDS FOR GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS

(1) Local Tenders

The local procurement tender thresholds are being revised as from 1st January 2014 as follows:

	CURRENT	REVISED
Supply (for one item)	£1,000	£1,500
Supply (for a number of the same item)	£2,000	£3,000
Services	£3,000	£4,000

As regards works the threshold is increased from £15,000 to £20,000. In the case of works costing between £5,000 and £20,000 these should be put through a Selective Tendering Process (i.e. a quotation system) with at least three quotes obtained from contractors within the Approved Contractors List.

(2) EU Tenders

In addition, Controlling Officers should note that H.M. Government of Gibraltar is bound by the Procurement (Public Contracts) Regulations, 2012. These regulations set out detailed procedures for the award of contracts whose value equals or exceeds specific thresholds. As from the 1st January 2014 to 31st December 2015 the new threshold levels are as set out below, and any contract that is in the region of or exceeds these values must be put out to EU Tender.

| • Services | £4,000 |
| • Works | £20,000 |

In the case of works costing between £5,000 and £20,000, these should be put through a Selective Tendering Process (i.e. quotation system) with at least three quotes obtained from Contractors within the Approved Contractors List.

(2) EU Tenders

In addition, Controlling Officers should note that HM Government of Gibraltar is bound by the Procurement (Public Contracts) Regulations 2012. These regulations set out detailed procedures for the award of contracts whose value equals or exceeds specific thresholds. As from 1st January 2016 to 31st December 2017 the new threshold levels are as set out below, and any project that is in the region of or exceeds these values must be put out to EU Tender.

390

Hon. Chief Minister: These set out the criteria requested by the hon. Lady also.

Although these are internal documents, they simply set out thresholds and criteria, and in order to assist the House I am adding the 2007 directive also, which Members will see is not as full as those issued in our time and which, surprisingly, omits the requirement of EU procurement rules which were already directly effective but appear to have been ignored by the former administration.

Mr Speaker: I would suggest that, if necessary, we come back to these questions later, once hon. Members have had an opportunity to peruse the schedule.

400 Next question then, number 213.

Q213/2017
United States representative –
Associated costs

Clerk: Question 213, the Hon. E J Phillips.

405

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state the costs associated with our representative in the United States?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

410

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, Mr Liston does not receive any remuneration for his services as our official representative in the United States. He receives $3,750 quarterly to cover expenses that may arise in connection with the Gibraltar American Council.

Q214/2017
Parliament Building –
200th anniversary

Clerk: Question 214, the Hon. R M Clinton.

415

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it has any plans to mark the 200th anniversary of the construction of the Parliament Building?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

420

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, arrangements are in hand to celebrate in a suitable and appropriate manner. The Government will make an announcement as to the manner of the celebrations in due course.

I am sorry to disappoint the hon. Gentleman when I tell him that he should not expect anything too grand as we are not going to blow money extravagantly pushing the boat out.

425

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his answer and his concern for cost.

Would the Chief Minister consider looking for the time capsule which was buried with the building when the foundation stone was laid?

430

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the answer to that is no, and I think there are good reasons why we will not be doing that but I cannot remember right now what it was I was told when that was first raised with me about two years ago. I remember there were good reason and if he likes, I will try and refresh my memory on that and share that with him. So I would suggest he stops digging.

435

Q215/2017
Senior Civil Service positions –
Terms of employment

Clerk: Question 215, the Hon. R M Clinton.

440 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise which two of the current posts of Chief Secretary, Financial Secretary, Attorney General and Principal Auditor are under contract and also which two of these four posts are not considered to be civil servants, and if so why?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

445

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the four posts which the hon. Member is referring to in his question are Civil Service posts. The current incumbents in the role of Financial Secretary and Attorney General are employed on contract terms. Therefore they are not considered civil servants.

450

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his answer.

The Financial Secretary and the Attorney General, two of the most senior posts in Government, am I correct in what he has just said is that they are not considered civil servants and therefore would not follow the normal rules that would attach to civil servants – or did I misunderstand him?

Hon. Chief Minister: He completely misunderstood the upshot of my answer. They are not civil servants, they are on contracts, but the contracts are on Civil Service terms.

460 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, certainly I am aware of the Financial Secretary being on secondment to the Government. Personally, I was not aware of the Attorney General being on contract terms. Would the Chief Minister kindly illuminate the House as to what the contract terms are for the Attorney General?

465 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I am surprised that he is surprised, given that every Attorney General that Gibraltar has had has been on contract with the Government on Civil Service terms, literally in all of the time that I have been in practice and even in the time –

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Even before me. In twenty four years.

470

Hon. Chief Minister: – that Mr Bossano has been in the House. He now tells me, as Father of the House, in all of the time that he has been there the Attorney General has always been on contract terms. Sometimes people would come as Attorney General only for three years or for five years and then go. Mr Rhoda I think arrived in the mid-90s and stayed until recently on contract terms.

475

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for the background, of which I was not personally aware but I am nonetheless grateful.

480 In terms of the contract terms, in the Estimate Books will they appear as salaries? I know in the case of the Financial Secretary there is a secondment fee. Can the Chief Minister advise if for the Attorney General it is purely within salaries?

Hon. Chief Minister: I believe so, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: And finally, Mr Speaker, on this point, we know that the Financial Secretary was, I believe, on a three-year contract, unless that has been extended recently. Can he advise what contract period the Attorney General is for?

490 Hon. Chief Minister: Indefinite, Mr Speaker.

Q223/2017
Runway tunnel –
Date for completion

Clerk: We now move to Question 223, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

495 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: With the exit from the European Union looming, can Government give an approximate date for the completion of the runway tunnel?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

500 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the programmed completion date for the runway tunnel has remained unaffected by the result of the referendum on exiting the European Union. After the Government's excellent victory in the litigation proceedings, the completion date is expected to be in the first quarter of 2019.

505 I therefore allow myself the pleasure of reminding hon. Members opposite – and this is not in relation to her, given where she sits – that this will mean that my Government will not just deliver on our manifesto commitments despite Brexit, we will also deliver on theirs!

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q224/2017
Public boards –
Appointment of non-party activists

Clerk: Question 224, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

510 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Would Government agree with looking into appointing only non-party activists to public boards moving forward?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

515 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government that I lead has always wanted to appoint only the best possible person to each and every appointment made to any board or authority, or to any other post. In some instances we have appointed individuals who are activists of other political parties. We are entirely dedicated to Gibraltar having the best possible people available to do the job in each field. We will not resile from that important 520 proposition.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his answer and I have no doubt that his intentions are noble in this sense, but given recent events and other things that make me think that in a small place like Gibraltar conflicts and influences are very 525 easy to find – we are a very small community – I was wondering whether it would be of value to looking at reforming the criteria for individuals who are openly affiliated to not form part of this board. I believe that there is some value in this suggestion in a small community like ours.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in a small community like ours it is important not to deprive 530 any organisation of the best possible talent. That is why I appointed the founder of the GSD to the board of the University, to the board of the bank and to be one of the three Peters carrying out the gaming legislation review.

One of the other Peters is Peter Caruana, the long-time leader of the GSD, probably not somebody who is ever thought of as a political activist of Fabian Picardo, although things are 535 changing so much in respect of that side of the House – not her – that one never knows.

That is why I appointed Nick Cruz, who stood against her and a GSLP candidate at a by-election and stood in a number of general elections against the GSLP to be the chairman of the Category 2 review.

That is why I asked Keith Azopardi to draft the Consultative Council Bill.

540 That is why the appointment of Isobel Ellul-Hammond to be Cancer Services Co-ordinator in the GHA was not something the Government would have stood in the way of.

That is why Mr Paco Oliva was employed by the Government in the Gibraltar Tourist Board and now in the Gibraltar Health Authority.

545 That is why Freddy Vásquez, who is not known as a political supporter of Fabian Picardo, has been appointed to the prison or to the Parole Board – I can check which, Mr Speaker – very recently. That is why Freddie Vásquez was appointed to that board and he was not for one moment in any way asked to leave. He asked to leave himself, Mr Speaker. In fact, I can just see here that under the Prison Act, on Tuesday, 10th January 2017 – I do not know whether this is a renewal or not – Mr Freddie Vásquez QC was appointed an independent member of the Prison 550 Act.

Mr Speaker, these are not people I could describe by any stretch of the imagination, unfortunately, as political activists that support the Government or me, but they are people who are doing a fine job. When we were elected we did not remove people who had been appointed by the former administration. There were people who were not just political activists; they were 555 leading political activists of the other side. Some of them I think were even chairmen of the party against whom we had contested elections who remained and were asked in some instances to even renew in the boards that they were involved in. It is the right person for the right job.

560 Membership of a political party should not deprive somebody of being able to give their best for Gibraltar. I do believe it is true that in some instances in the past people who had a lot to give Gibraltar were not allowed to do so simply because they had supported or not supported a political party. That would be wrong. Therefore, the hon. Lady I think is right to raise the issue, but I think it is appropriate to tackle the issue that she raises in the opposite way; in other words, not to prevent people because of their political activism from being involved but quite 565 the opposite – not to exclude people from being involved as a result of their political activism.
People who become politically active are sometimes the people who care most about their community and we would not want those people from any of the – if I may say so with respect to her – any of the three sides in politics in Gibraltar today to be excluded from being able to give their best in the way that they then form part of these boards or authorities. I think it is a 570 good thing that people want to become involved; that should be encouraged.

It would be wrong if people were prevented from being involved simply because they are not supporters of the political party that is in administration, and for the reasons I have set out, I do not think that charge could ever be levelled against my Government.

575 Hon. Ms M D Hassam Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for the answer.

I still continue to believe that open affiliation to parties can cause conflict and I disagree with most of the names that the Chief Minister has brought up, because Cruz, Caruana, Montegriffo and Hammond are not party activists anymore, probably have not been for a while, so I do not think that they come into this situation that I am bringing up. But there are party activists who 580 are very active and form part of boards and it can cause conflict and it can make people feel quite insecure, and this is what I have brought up. But I do not believe that the names that the Chief Minister has brought up, with respect, are actually relevant.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, with the very greatest of respect to her she does not know 585 what it is like to be in Government, and when you make appointments like the one that I have referred her to, she might find that political activists take a very dim view of the fact that somebody who has not been a supporter is able to form part of an organisation which is linked to the Government and is able to become involved – and yet it is the right thing to do.

In Gibraltar, winning an election should not be seen as the winning of a war which leads the 590 party that wins to be able to enjoy the spoils of war and spread it amongst its people. That is what we have ensured is not the case when we won the election in 2011, and that is why there is such political diversity now in support of the Government.

That is how you go, Mr Speaker – and I think the hon. Lady should bear this in mind – that is 595 how you go from winning an election by a margin of 200 votes to winning it by a margin of 5,000 votes, when you show that you are not in it just for your own people and your small coterie of supporters, you are in it for the whole of Gibraltar. That also means that if somebody has formed part of the GSD, if somebody has formed part of political activism for the hon. Lady, or indeed if somebody has formed part of political activism for the GSLP or for the Liberals, they should not be in a worse position than anybody else.

The hon. Lady needs to think though what she is proposing. If it were the case that people 600 who have been associated with any political party are not able to form part of our society and the shaping of our society through involvement in boards and authorities etc. where they are required to be independent, what the hon. Lady is doing is trying to push people out of the political process. In other words, people, if they are associated with a political party, have less
605 rights than anybody else, even if they are the best person for the job. That is not something that I think makes any sense, whether that is in respect of the award of a contract or a tender or the appointment to a board. Everybody is entitled to be dealt with properly and independently, and in particularly in relation to boards, people are entitled to be seen to act independently. Otherwise, what the hon. Lady is saying is that forming part of a political process, which is what 610 we are all in favour of – that is what democracy runs on, having the ability to have people involved in the political process – somehow disqualifies you from forming part of other things that we do in our society. I think that is very, very dangerous indeed, Mr Speaker. It is very dangerous whether one excludes one's own from boards or authorities or whether when that...
615 a person can then use that as the excuse for excluding other people from boards. In other words, her supporters are the supporters of the party on the other side.

So I think it is a slippery slope; I think it is particularly dangerous. The definition of political 620 activist would be one on which we could spend hours debating who is or is not a political activist. Does one have to be a registered member of a political party? If you are a registered member of a political party, does the political party have to publish its register? Otherwise, how do you know? Is it the length of the Lord Chancellor's foot?

In the past 20 years in Gibraltar we have lived through a process where a journalist was not 625 invited to public functions of the Government of Gibraltar because he was the editor of a newspaper that was seen in people's eyes to be affiliated to the GSLP. That might sound petty. That is the Gibraltar which I inherited, Mr Speaker. Every journalist is now invited to press conferences of the Government, whoever they may politically activate for, whether in Gibraltar or outside of Gibraltar – because there are some that we know politically activate for Members opposite outside of Gibraltar, but they are invited to our press conferences. That same decision

630 led to a particular newspaper being denied advertising because it was affiliated, in people's eyes, with the GSLP. The hon. Lady might think 'Well, so what? The new people did not get Government adverts; it is the GSLP newspaper,' which it is not. But, Mr Speaker, she might think that is okay, but then when another political newspaper started to take a line that was not in the interests of the party then in Government, they too were denied political advertising – and I am thinking in particular of Vox.

635 So you go down the road of saying political activists cannot form part of boards – surely not just the Government's political activists, also all political activists. So, step one: is a political activist an editor of a newspaper who is agitating against or for the Government? So, if you cannot form part of boards, surely you cannot have advertising. The people who define that will be the people in Government. They will never see anything which is in support of the Government as political activism in support of the Government; they will only see things which 640 are contrary. So we will once again stop advertising to some newspapers, we will once again see people not invited to press conferences. This is a very slippery slope.

What is required is that everyone who has something to give Gibraltar is involved in giving it to Gibraltar. Hon. Members are in this House as Members of the Opposition, and that is what they are giving to Gibraltar. We may have a difference as to how they do it or how they do not 645 do it, but that is a matter for people to judge, not for us. But they are giving something. The people who support them are giving something in giving support, as the people who support us are giving something to Gibraltar by supporting a political party. Political parties are the core of our democracy, and so on and so forth.

To exclude people from boards etc. is really, in my view, the wrong thing. To abuse that and only put your own people on boards and authorities would be quite something else, but I think 650 as I have demonstrated, that is not the case.

The next step is to say only our people can get tenders or only people who are not our people can get tenders. So isn't it just important that tenders be awarded openly and fairly in a way that is transparent and whoever gets them pays the Government more or receives the best value for 655 money payment for the taxpayer? Those are the things that we need to be looking at if we are going to mature as a democracy, and I think that is essential.

The hon. Lady might care to take a look at what is happening in the United Kingdom, where in some instances inquiries or boards are headed by lords who are affiliated to the Government, or in some instances by lords who are not affiliated with the Government but who have fallen 660 out with the people they affiliated with before, and because they are no longer affiliated with the Opposition are considered by the Government to be people they can support.

The board for the gaming review involving Peter Caruana, the bank, the University – these things demonstrate a desire to bring in Gibraltar's best talent to give the most they can for Gibraltar in a way that builds a stronger Gibraltar, and that is what a Chief Minister must always 665 strive to achieve, whatever political complexion he represents.

Mr Speaker: There are a handful of questions remaining which are going to be the subject of written answers because the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is indisposed. I wish him a rapid recovery.

Questions for Written Answer

670 Clerk: Answers to Written Questions, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the only indisposition I wish to the hon. Gentleman is a political one; and if it is not, then I do sincerely hope that he recovers quickly.

675 Mr Speaker, I have the honour to table the answers to Written Questions W25/2017 to W32/2017 inclusive, although for the purposes of Hansard I may say that those numbers may have changed slightly as a result of the change with the way that some of these questions are being dealt with.

Order of the Day

GOVERNMENT MOTION

Awarding of Gibraltar Medallion of Honour to Representative George Holding – Motion carried

Clerk: (ix) Order of the day, Government motion. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

680 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name which reads as follows.

This House:

TAKES NOTE of the policy of the Government to raise the profile of Gibraltar among decision makers in the United States of America;

CONSIDERS that the tabling of a Resolution in the US House of Representatives which supports the right of the people of Gibraltar to determine their own future is a positive development in line with that policy;

WELCOMES the leading role taken by Representative George Holding as the Sponsor of the Resolution and his support for Gibraltar;

HEREBY agrees to award the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour to Representative George Holding.

685 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, George Holding has been to Gibraltar. He has visited Gibraltar on many occasions, long before Gibraltar knew that he was going to be a staunch supporter of our right to self-determination in the United States. I think it is also fair to say that he has associated himself with similar resolutions supporting the right of self-determination of the people of the Falkland Islands, with whom we have such an affinity.

690 It is not often, Mr Speaker, that when one goes to lobby for support you find yourself kicking down an open door, and that is what Mr Holding represented to us in the meetings that the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister and I held with Mr Holding. He is probably the person we have met who knew the most about Gibraltar before we started the work of lobbying with him, who demonstrated hard-core, genuine, honest and heartfelt support for the people of Gibraltar and our desire to remain under the British sovereignty that we so cherish.

695 He is a person, Mr Speaker, who has demonstrated by his actions, not just by his words, that he is a staunch supporter of our inalienable right of self-determination and he has gone out of his way to ensure that he has demonstrated that in the dropping of the resolution – and I understand that is the correct terminology in the US Congress, the ‘dropping’ of the resolution – in respect of the right of the people of Gibraltar.

700 Mr Speaker, it is true that the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour is a distinct honour which this Parliament grants sparingly, and Gibraltarians who have received that honour include you and many others who have given very distinguished service indeed to Gibraltar. It is also true, Mr Speaker, that George Holding’s actions demonstrate his deep commitment to the people of Gibraltar.

705 He is a member of the American Republican Party and in that sense he has represented the interests of Gibraltar within that party and he has been able to garner support within that party. He has also, in the terminology used in the United States, reached across the aisle to seek support for Gibraltar from the Democratic Party and from colleagues of his in the Congress which are not of the same partisan affiliation, and therefore the Government considers that the way that he has gone out of his way to support Gibraltar, and continues to do so after the dropping of the resolution in ways which we will continue to garner the benefit of, I think is an essential consideration for the Parliament when determining how to deal with this motion on behalf of the Government.

710 It is true, Mr Speaker, that George Holding does not get the chance to come so often to Gibraltar as he would like. If he were to come to Gibraltar soon, then it would be possible to bestow this honour, if the Parliament approves it, on him in Gibraltar. If that is not possible, then on one of our many lobbying trips to the United States, some of which are combined with our visits there to attend hearings of the United Nations, it will be my honour or the honour of the Deputy Chief Minister, or both of us, to be able to communicate to Mr Holding the award of this honour if the Parliament approves it and to let him have the medal that comes with the bestowment if Parliament should agree with the Government’s motion.

720 And so, Mr Speaker, I have little more to say. I think George Holding’s record speaks for itself. It is there: the resolution was dropped, the other things he has said and done in support of Gibraltar are obvious. I am telling the House that he is also an important part of the lobbying work that we do in the United States. This would be a well-deserved honour indeed and I commend that the House support the motion as drafted.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Hon. the Chief Minister. Does any Member wish to speak on the motion? The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

730 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, this motion will enjoy the Opposition’s support.

Mr Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Otherwise, I will call on the mover to reply – if the mover wishes to reply.

735 I now put the question in the terms of the motion proposed by the Hon. the Chief Minister. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Public Health (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act.

The Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

740 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act be read a first time.

745 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Public Health (Amendment) Act 2017.

Public Health (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

750 The Bill amends Part I ‘Sanitation and Buildings’ and Part VA ‘Waste’ of the Public Health Act.

The Part I amendment is found at section 39, where the words ‘subject to the prior approval of the Development and Planning Commission’ are inserted. The reason for this is to prevent landlords from taking the option of demolition without any involvement or consultation from the DPC.

755 Part VA is amended for the following reasons: (1) to update references as a result of EU directives and other legislation which have since been repealed or amended; (2) to ensure that the position is clarified with regard to the requirement of licenses to incinerate waste – the amendment at section 192D establishes capacity limits for waste incineration, stating that if the incineration of waste falls below the prescribed limits then the activity will require a waste 760 licence under the Public Health Act; should the amount exceed these limits, the activity would then fall under the scope of schedule 1 of the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations 2013, requiring a permit under those Regulations; (3) to create a new ground for refusing a licence application, that the application is deemed not to be in the public interest – this is a beneficial power to have in case future applications are received for the storage or processing of 765 radioactive or other types of hazardous materials which may cause concern; the public interest element has also been introduced for the granting of temporary licences; (4) to create a penalty provision for anyone who carries out an activity without a licence or contravenes the condition or an obligation of a licence – this helps prevent any circumvention of the waste licensing procedures; (5) to introduce minimum standards for the Government to be able to refuse 770 registering an establishment or undertaking and to allow the Government to vary conditions, add conditions or remove establishments or undertakings from the register if it is found that an establishment or undertaking has failed to comply with conditions imposed upon them; and finally, (6) to make reference to a new process and application form in the Public Health Waste Licensing Form Rules, specifically Form 8 for renewals of existing licences – this will simplify the 775 renewal process for establishments and undertakings, eliminating unnecessary red tape and streamlining the procedure for existing establishments and undertakings.

I commend this Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill?

780 I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act be read a second time.

Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

785 Clerk: The Public Health (Amendment) Act 2017.

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Public Health (Amendment) Bill 2017 – Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

790 Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

COMMITTEE STAGE

Mr Speaker: Will the Chief Minister move that the House resolve itself into Committee?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should now resolve itself into Committee and consider the Public Health (Amendment) Bill clause by clause.

In Committee of the whole Parliament

800

Public Health (Amendment) Bill 2017 – Clauses considered and approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act.
Clauses 1 to 5.

805

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: The long title.

810 Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Public Health (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Third Reading approved: Bill passed

Mr Speaker: Chief Minister, report stage.

815 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the House has considered the Public Health (Amendment) Bill clause by clause and has passed it without amendment.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that the Public Health (Amendment) Bill 2017 be read a third time and passed.

820 All in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Savings Bank (Amendment) Bill –
Leave to introduce not granted

825 Clerk: Private Members' motions, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

Leave is requested of the House to introduce a Bill for an Act to amend the Savings Bank Act in the form attached so as to make provision for the timely publication in the Gazette by the Minister with responsibility for the Gibraltar Savings Bank, of the annual accounts of the revenue and expenditure of the Savings Bank and of deposits received and repaid and interest credited to depositors during the year ended on the 31st day of March together with a statement of the assets and liabilities of the Savings Bank after being audited and certified by the Principal Auditor.

830 Mr Speaker, my motion, in seeking leave to amend the Savings Bank Act, is not one that this House should have any particular difficulty with. It is in keeping with the Government's avowed policy to promote transparency and accountability in public finances. It is a very simple amendment that would enable a clear timeline for the publication of the audited accounts of the Gibraltar Savings Bank and not leave it to the discretion of the Minister for the Savings Bank.

835 Mr Speaker, the Savings Bank now has, apparently, deposits in excess of £1 billion and it is of very real public interest and importance, especially since it is ultimately guaranteed by the taxpayer.

The law as it stands under section 12 of the Savings Bank Act requires the Principal Auditor to audit the accounts of the Savings Bank and that they:

- (a) be laid before the Minister not later than the 31st day of August ensuing in every year;
- (b) be published in the Gazette.

840 Mr Speaker, I did in fact ask the Minister for the Savings Bank last December 2016 during supplementary questions as to his views on the date of publication in the Gazette. His response was as follows, and I quote:

The answer is there is no limit laid down in the law. There is a limit to the time after the Auditor has audited that I get it and the policy that I have adopted is that when the whole of the accounts are made public, i.e. the Government's accounts, it is after that date that I think it should go into the Gazette.

I did then invite the Minister for the Savings Bank whether he would consider introducing an amendment to the Savings Bank Act to actually set a time limit for publication in the Gazette, and his answer was simply no.

845 Mr Speaker, I consider that it is for this House to decide what is the appropriate timeframe for the publication of the audited accounts of the Savings Bank and it should not be at the sole discretion of the Minister. Let me illustrate my point by considering the date of gazetting of the 31st March audited accounts of the Savings Bank for the last four years as follows: March 2013, gazetted number 4123 on 30th October 2014 – that is 14 months after audit and 19 months since its official year end; March 2014, gazetted number 4157 on 19th March 2015, seven months after audit, 12 months after the year end; March 2015, gazetted number 4334 on 19th January 2017 – and, Mr Speaker, this really does beggar belief – 17 months after audit and 22 months after its year end. The March 2016 audited accounts have not yet been gazetted, but we know that they have been done because they had to be done in August. So six months after auditing and 11 months after year end we have still not had sight of them, even though they are in the possession of the Minister and the Principal Auditor has in fact said in his report that he has finished his audit.

860 Mr Speaker, it is evident that in recent years the gazetting of the audited accounts of the Savings Bank does not follow a set timeframe and they are completely out of date when they are gazetted. By contrast, the March 2009 accounts were gazetted on 1st October 2009 in number 3737, only one month after audit, and so there can be no logistical issue with publishing the Savings Bank accounts in the Gazette.

865 Mr Speaker, I cannot see how it benefits this or indeed any Government to delay the publication in the Gazette of the audited accounts of the Savings Bank. The fact that the law requires the Savings Bank to be audited within five months of its year end shows the importance and priority given to it. Indeed, when you consider the wording drafted in the original 1935 Savings Bank Ordinance under section 12 – and, Mr Speaker, I have actually gone back and looked at an original 1935 Ordinance – it states:

The annual accounts of the revenue and expenditure of the Savings Bank and of the deposits received and repaid during the year ended on the 31st day of December together with a statement of assets and liabilities of the Savings Bank shall after being audited and certified by the auditor be laid by the Treasurer before the Governor no later than 31st May ensuing in every year and shall as soon as practicable thereafter be published in the Gazette and submitted to the Secretary of State.

870 Mr Speaker, I quote: 'as soon as is practicable thereafter be published'. 'As soon as practicable' or perhaps 'as soon as possible' or, in common parlance that would be recognised today 'ASAP' or 'as soon as' has a meaning we all understand. Section 12 has naturally been amended over the years but it was, it would appear, in July 1991 that the words 'as soon as practicable' were deleted in the Savings Bank Act. I am, of course, happy to be corrected on the history of the Act, but if Members care to consult the Laws of Gibraltar behind them, Volume 11 from 1984, they will find that the words 'as soon as practicable' were still in the Act as late as 1984. So, Mr Speaker, there was a clear intention in 1935, and in fact as recently as 1984, that not only should the Savings Bank be audited promptly within five months, and that provision remains, but that the audited accounts be given to the Government and its results be published promptly.

880 'Why?' do you ask. Well, not only was it, and it is, of public interest as regards their deposits, but it is also of interest to taxpayers, who have to underwrite the Savings Bank's performance should any losses arise.

Mr Speaker, in my view 'as soon as practicable' should mean publication ASAP in the Gazette being no more than a month after the Minister for the Savings Bank is in receipt of the audited 885 accounts. It is certainly not acceptable that not just the public but indeed this House should have to wait for either the full Principal Auditor's Report for that financial year – which for 31st March 2015 we received in October 2016, some 19 months after the year end – or for the Minister at his entire discretion to publish, which for 2015 was 22 months after its year end.

890 Mr Speaker, the amendment that I propose to the Savings Bank Act will cause no increase in expense to the Government and it will help in its stated quest for greater transparency and accountability by setting out a clear timeframe for the publication of the audited accounts of the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

895 The timely reporting of the financial position of the Gibraltar Savings Bank has never been more important to this community at a time when we have seen its deposits grow, according to the Minister for the Savings Bank, to over £1 billion and which the taxpayer ultimately guarantees. And so, Mr Speaker, for all the reasons I have just set out, I commend my motion to the House. (Banging on desks)

900 Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in terms of the motion moved by the Hon. Mr Roy Clinton. Does any Member wish to speak on the motion?

The Hon. Mr Joseph Bossano.

905 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the hon. Member opposite and the rest of his colleagues all know what the answer to this is going to be – or does he think that anything he has said today has changed the position from what it was on 20th December?

910 When people are elected to Parliament and then they form a Government they are committed to deliver what is put in their manifesto. If we had wanted to put a date we could either have put it in the manifesto or we could have done it without it being in the manifesto – or the GSD could have done it in the 15 years that they were there. None of that has happened.

915 The fact that he happens to be the hon. Member as opposed to anybody else with his own personal ideas of what should or should not be done is not a sufficient reason for us to say we decide we are not going to change the law but we want him to change the law, so we are going to vote in favour of his motion so that he can overrule the policy of the Government and do what we have decided not to do. Now, if that is really something that he thinks there is a possibility that might be happening, then I am afraid he lives in the world of Never-Never Land because that will never happen in a million years in this Parliament or in any other Parliament.

920 Logically, this is not about wanting permission from the Parliament to change the law; this is about having an opportunity to make the speech that he has made, and that speech contains nothing that I would not expect him to say and which failed to convince me like his other arguments have failed to convince me previously.

925 So the answer is that the law since 1991 ... and I certainly note that having first urged me to do it because it was more applicable to the modern age in which we live, he then urges me to do what was being done in 1935. Well, I am not sure that his arguments have got anything to do with logic; they have to do with what he thinks will work in achieving it. So first it is more modern to do it and then it is not that it is more modern, it is that we are not doing something that was done in 1935 and we are not doing something that was being done before 1991.

930 The answer is, of course, that if people had any concern about how long it is in the Gazette – and I think in the modern age in which we live, as I indicated to him in my reply in December, it should not be in the Gazette at all ... I do not imagine the 17,000 people who have got their money in the Savings Bank are avidly awaiting the publication of the Gazette to be reassured of the state of the Savings Bank.

935 The hon. Member gets monthly detailed breakdowns of the money that is coming in and how that money is invested, and as far as I am concerned, the appropriate procedure is that when the audited accounts of the Government have been completed, the Savings Bank – which is in fact a special fund, like many other special funds, a special fund of the Government – will be published, which in effect will be repeated in the Gazette but would already be in the public domain because the accounts will have been made public before the Gazette is published. That is the procedure we have decided to adopt and that is the procedure for which I take responsibility, and I am quite happy to put up with the criticisms of the hon. Member opposite but I am telling him that we will be voting against the motion.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the motion? I therefore ... Yes, the Hon. Trevor Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I have to commend my hon. Friend for his motion, because it is a very reasonable motion in light of the clear fact that it is designed to simply enhance transparency and no more than that. It is not party political in any way. It has one objective only, and that is to improve Government transparency, and in particular in this case the transparency of the Savings Bank.

I think we have to look at what is normally accepted practice, and if we look to businesses I do not think it would be reasonable for businesses to normally publish their accounts with such delay or indeed at the discretion of any individual. And Government should therefore certainly not have any special status in this regard, in fact quite the reverse: Government should and must be held to the highest standards and certainly perhaps higher standards than may be the case in the private sector, bearing in mind that it is Government who then legislates the private sector.

The Minister has pointed out that many people are investors in the Gibraltar Savings Bank. Indeed, many people in this community are investors in the Savings Bank and I do not believe it is for the Minister to suggest whether those people, individually or en masse, are interested in when the accounts are published. The accounts should be published in a timely manner for those investors to see, in order that they can see how their investments are doing and how secure their investments are.

The Minister also brought in the manifesto. Again, I have to disagree with him in that respect. To suggest that a manifesto entirely binds Government to only do what is their manifesto ... Of course it binds them to do what they have stated they were going to do in their manifesto, but to me it is certainly an unusual perspective to suggest that if Government receives a good idea, even though it was not in their manifesto, they should not enact that good idea regardless of who it comes from. A good idea is a good idea. Certainly Government has demonstrated that it does not only do what it chooses or what is set out in its manifesto, because I never at any point recall seeing the refurbishment of No. 6, a multi-million-pound refurbishment, being in the Government's manifesto.

So, as I say, I believe a good Government looks at ideas and, provided those ideas are affordable, should certainly look to enact those ideas. And this is a good idea because, again, I come back to the fact that it enhances Government transparency, it is affordable, and therefore I really do not see why Government should object to this degree to this motion and this amendment that my hon. Friend wishes to see enacted.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Any other contributor? The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government thinks that we do keep to the highest standards of transparency. In particular, because we legislate for the private sector we have to be held to the highest standards. Of course we agree with that principle. But of course, we agree with that principle, we on this side of the House agree with that principle because we are the ones who are putting in place the accounts for all the Government companies, that they failed to file or publish.

Mr Speaker, it is important that in assessing the things that the Hon. Mr Hammond has said we look at what the practice has been before we were returned to Government. The GSD

990 stopped filing the accounts of the Government companies, which were filed by the GSLP and prepared by the GSLP. I think some of the last accounts were for 1996-97. They stopped filing them. Does the hon. Gentleman realise the gravity of that, given what he has said? He has introduced into this debate that Government legislates and therefore must act in keeping with the higher standards, in particular with legislation. I do not think any Member of this House can agree that the Government should fail to comply with the rules of law, and yet the party that he represents is the party that failed, failed to file the accounts of the companies that they were trading with. So everything that he has said is something which is a condemnation of the actions of the former GSD.

1000 Mr Speaker, this Government has been left to recreate those accounts and to try and ensure that, as quickly as possible, they are filed, and it is taking a long time because of the mess of having to reconstruct the accounts from, in some instances, 10 years before. So, to now try and apply that logic, which he has tried to do, to the Savings Bank Act and to the changes which are now proposed by Mr Clinton I think demonstrates how little the hon. Gentleman knows about the past decade of Gibraltar politics.

1005 Today what is blindingly obvious to everyone, to everyone who is depositing their money in the Savings Bank, which is the only way that the Savings Bank deposits are going to go up, is that the Savings Bank has never been better managed and that deposits in the Savings Bank have never been safer than under Joe Bossano.

1010 Again, this is a question of actions not words, because words can fill column inches and words can say whatever it is that the person speaking them wishes them to say. Actions are not so easy to bring about, and what Joe Bossano has demonstrated in the time since 2011 when he took over the running of the Savings Bank, through the actions of third parties, is the trust that people have in the management of the Savings Bank under his stewardship.

1015 You can demonstrate through your actions that the things you say are the things you do – of course you can, and Joe Bossano demonstrates that all the time – but to have third party objective support that you are a person who does what you say is very difficult indeed, and yet hon. Members have seen it, that despite the constant onslaughts against the Savings Bank the deposits in the bank have only gone up. And so when I say that the Savings Bank has never been better managed it is my view, but when people increase the deposit base of the Savings Bank from where it was, about £300-odd million, to well-nigh £1 billion now, they are demonstrating by their actions that the current rules and the current management are what they have faith in.

1020 It is not that the accounts are not published – yes, they are published – but this is a new stricture requiring that they be published when the hon. Member wishes them to be published, and that, Mr Speaker, is something that we have already said no to, as the hon. Member said, not just now, we said no to that already.

1025 So, apart from the hon. Member just simply wishing to hear his own voice on the same subject again, there can be no reasonable grounds for him to have brought this motion. I know that he is retired, Mr Speaker – he is a very young retiree for a banker – and that he has little else to do. There is the small matter for us of having to run Gibraltar after the result of the Brexit referendum, having to run the Health Department and all the other important Departments that we represent, but look if he wants us to have a debate on this subject where he already knows the answer from meetings already held, this is the one thing that he is entitled to but it is not serious, it is not real, it is not something which is designed to be a good idea. It is just an attempt to talk further around the subject of the Savings Bank.

1030 There is one positive side to that, and that is that every time that they think they are attacking Joe Bossano on the running of the Savings Bank, every time they say ‘Savings Bank’ and it gets into the newspaper, we see that instead of there being a run on that bank there is an increase in the deposits because they remind people of the excellent job being done by Joe Bossano, of the excellent returns paid to our pensioners, and more people demonstrate their confidence in the way that the legislation is structured, in the way that Joe Bossano is running the affairs of that bank in that Ministry of his, and they deposit more.

Now, it is true that if there were a good idea that came from Members opposite we would adopt it – a good idea, not what they say is a good idea but actually a good idea – and the one person they cannot blame for not being prepared to do that is Joe Bossano and I will tell the hon. Member why – I think he prefers me to call him Joe Bossano than just the Father of the House or the person – who many objectively would think is one of the greatest Gibraltarians of our time, but we will come to that on another day: because Joe Bossano is the person who said to Members opposite, in their former incarnation and in their current incarnation, if you have a better idea for community care, which you have called a ticking time bomb, we are ready to listen to it and we are ready to ensure that we give effect to it. Joe Bossano said repeatedly from where he is, if hon. Members have a good idea, something that is good for Gibraltar, we will work with them to adopt it. It is just that this is not a good idea. In our view, things are better run as they are.

In the view of those who have deposited their confidence in the bank and raised its deposits from £300 million to over £1 billion things are run well as they are, and this is not ... And this is where the hon. Gentleman completely belies his misunderstanding of the way that the Savings Bank is structured, not today but for x hundred years. These are not investments that people need to see the accounts of in order to see how they are performing. This is not like what his private pension provider, if he has one, might send him where he is tracking what his investment is doing. This is an investment that tells you every month how it is doing because you get paid the interest every month. (Interjection by Hon. J J Bossano) If the hon. Gentleman does not know that, then he does not know in Savings Bank terms what is up and what is down, and if the hon. Gentleman does not understand that he does not understand the structure of the Savings Bank.

Indeed, he does not understand how the Government that he represents, the GSD that he represents, used to deal with those deposits. Does he know that before those pensioners' monthly income debentures were issued by the Savings Bank they were issued by the Government? The taxpayer was putting its hand in its pocket to pay the interest and nobody was seeing how their investments were doing. The hon. Gentleman belies his complete and utter lack of understanding of how the Savings Bank works with the things that he has said in an attempted support of the Hon. Mr Clinton's desire to hear his own voice on the issue of the date on when the accounts of the Savings Bank should be published.

He says that one of the issues that was not in our manifesto was the refurbishment of No. 6 Convent Place. He is wrong. He needs to go back and look at both our manifestos and see how we committed ourselves to improving the offices of civil servants, and a lot of civil servants work in No. 6 Convent Place. I do not know whether he realises that a lot of the attacks that they make on the Government are actually not attacks on the Government – they are attacks on civil servants. The offices at No. 6 Convent Place are principally used by civil servants. There are two politicians and everybody else is a civil servant. And so, Mr Speaker, I know that they like to run with the hares and run with the hounds, I know that they want to try and garner support of civil servants, but they need to recognise that when they are attacking the size of the public sector this has not increased. It is still 10 on this side of the House, although I sometimes hear rumours that there are people sitting over there who would rather be sitting over here. It is the number of civil servants that they are attacking, the number of public servants in Gibraltar that they are attacking, the officers of those public servants that they are attacking.

So, Mr Speaker, nothing that has been said by the Hon. Mr Hammond I think discloses that the things that Mr Clinton has said are any worse an idea than we might have thought, given what Mr Clinton has said, and Mr Bossano has ably replied to him, and therefore nothing that has been said during the course of this debate is going to change the Government's view, as stated already in December of last year to Mr Clinton. We therefore cannot, in my view, be persuaded to support what is actually, in the objective view of the Government, a very bad idea indeed.

Mr Speaker: Is there any other contributor to the debate? The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1095 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I do not think there is very much that I can bring up; I have already brought everything that needs to be brought up over the last three hours. But I am going to keep my contribution short because I am not feeling very well, Mr Speaker.

I do wish – and I say this sincerely, I really do wish – that the hon. Gentleman’s default mechanism, and I mean the Chief Minister’s default mechanism, every single time that he 1100 debates these issues, or any issues, was not to make personal snide comments. The hon. Gentleman Mr Clinton may be retired from banking but it is universally recognised, I believe, now out there in Gibraltar that he is doing an excellent, excellent job in holding the Government to account on these issues and I have absolutely no hesitation in congratulating him not only for this motion but the rest of the work that he does, which is absolutely excellent, Mr Speaker. (A 1105 Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desk) (Interjection and laughter) And neither has anybody on this side of the House personally attacked or otherwise Mr Bossano. Indeed, I for one, who have been nervous about the management of the public finances of Gibraltar now for close to four years – and in many respects in this Parliament and outside it was, to begin with, a lonely voice in the dessert, but I think again now more and more people are coming to realise that in fact the 1110 public finances of Gibraltar have been mismanaged – but I for one, have comfort in the fact that the Hon. the Father of the House is on that side of the House, because at the very least he will be a reasonable handbrake on some of the excesses of the hon. Gentleman. (Laughter) So nobody on this side of the House is in fact attacking Minister Bossano either personally or at all, because that is my honestly held view about the hon. Gentleman and his pivotal role now in 1115 Gibraltar in basically making sure that he stops what is and has been a Government runaway train over the last four years as far as public spending, debt and the management of the public finances are concerned. (Laughter)

But, Mr Speaker, there is a very important reason why we should be moving towards greater transparency in relation to the Gibraltar Savings Bank, and with respect to the Father of the 1120 House, his comments about why are we moving back to 1935, to the past and not the future, are in my respectful view not apposite. In 2011 when we lost the election there were only £24 million worth of debentures in the Gibraltar Savings Bank – £24 million. Today there are £817.5 million of debentures – just debentures, excluding deposits – in the Gibraltar Savings Bank. What we have seen over the last five years has been, first of all, a shift in Government
1125 debentures from Government, where they rank as Government debt, into the Gibraltar Savings Bank where they do not. But more importantly, what we see is the Government operating two books at the moment in terms of expenditure on Government projects and Government expenditure generally. There is on the one hand the Government through direct public debt and on the other the Gibraltar Savings Bank, which no doubt, through Credit Finance and through 1130 other Government companies, is essentially being used to fund Government expenditure.

In those circumstances, where we have seen this huge explosion in Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures from £24 million to over £800 million, where effectively the Government is operating the Gibraltar Savings Bank as its economic motor – because that is what it is – and as its piggy bank, funding expenditure in those circumstances we should be moving towards 1135 greater transparency, not lesser transparency. (Interjection) Oh I beg your pardon, Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Father of the House is right that we are not talking about lesser transparency in this particular case, we are talking about more transparency. But we should be moving towards more transparency and the motion that the hon. Gentleman Mr Clinton has provided is a part of that, and in fact it is not something that the Government should be, in my respectful view, 1140 voting against it. We should be moving towards a situation where we provide the accounts and publish the accounts for the Gibraltar Savings Bank in a timely manner. Why delay it by over a year when the Government is in a position to provide those accounts within a reasonable period of time? That is all the motion is about, nothing else. It is about providing those accounts within 1145 a reasonable period of time rather than the position now, which is over a year after, in some cases, the Government has already got the accounts.

So, Mr Speaker, I really do not understand the Government's reticence in voting against this particular motion, other than perhaps that it is a motion that has been proposed by the hon. Member and the Government really does not want to support anything that emanates from this side of the House and certainly not from my hon. Friend Mr Clinton, who is always, I have to say, 1150 extremely reasonable in these matters. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Is there any other contributor before I ask the hon. mover to reply? The Hon. Mr Clinton.

1155 Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, where shall I start?

Never-Never Land I live in Never-Never Land. Well, Mr Speaker, if I live in Never-Never Land, so does Mr Costa, who last year reminded us about the buckets and buckets of transparency that the Government had introduced, but for some reason this particular bucket of transparency is deemed not a good idea by his Government. And so, Mr Speaker, I will inhabit the same 1160 Never-Never Land as the Hon. Mr Costa because I believe this to be a good idea that can only enhance transparency. I have heard nothing from the Government side, certainly not from the Chief Minister and certainly not from the Hon. Mr Bossano, as to why this is a bad idea. Sometimes old ideas are good ideas, and certainly if in 1935 this was a good idea I do not see why it is not a good idea today, especially when it does not cost the Government a penny.

1165 But Mr Speaker, a lot has been said by both of the hon. Members opposite which I really must respond to, and this is not necessarily within the ambit of my original motion. My motion has been described as a bad idea. The Chief Minister says, 'Ah, well, when the taxpayer bought debentures directly from the Government they did not know what the investments were doing, so why should they know it now?' Well, Mr Speaker, this is exactly the point: the Savings Bank 1170 accounts include the statement of investments, which unfortunately the Hon. Mr Bossano is very, very reluctant to publish, in his, what I call 'glossy booklet', every year. They are part of the auditor's work, they are included in his work – he reports on the statements and investments, and yet in the report and annual accounts he fails to include them. If we had the full audited accounts published on a timely basis we would not get part information from the Hon. Minister 1175 distributed, containing information that he sees fit for public consumption.

I am not trying to undermine confidence in the Savings Bank. On the contrary, the Minister should welcome this motion to enhance the transparency of the Savings Bank. What possible reason can the Government have for delaying the publication of the accounts, especially when they are already in their possession? None, Mr Speaker. If they want to shout from the rafters 1180 what a wonderful institution this is and how well it is managed by the Minister, well, publish the accounts on a timely basis. Why wait for over a year? Why deny the public the benefit of the Minister's investment wisdom for a year? Let them see the results for themselves within a month of him having them. There really is no good reason for delaying the publication.

Or is it that the Minister really does not want the public to see what he is doing with their 1185 investments? Is it that he does not want the public to see on a timely basis what he is doing with the money – that he put £400 million into Credit Finance, that he has bought £247 million of Government debentures, that he has spent £11 million in GSBA Ltd, which I am still trying to get to the bottom of? And of course the worst sin of all, which I really find hard to accept, is that they then bought the other half of Gibtelecom for £37.8 million last year. Mr Speaker, the 1190 Minister may laugh, but if he had published the accounts of the Savings Bank on a timely basis for 2016 we would have had that information in our possession long before we had to ask the question in this House. All that adds up to £733 million of depositors' money which is directly or indirectly in the hands of the Government on Government-owned companies or projects.

Mr Speaker, I have no ill feeling to the Savings Bank, I want it to succeed just as they do, but 1195 let's do it in a transparent manner. Why the secrecy? What is the big deal? Really, what is the big deal? I fail to see. Neither of them has given an argument as to why they think my motion is a bad idea. There has been nothing that they have said that says no, we cannot do this because this would be commercially sensitive, this would be detrimental to savers, this is not good practice – nothing, Mr Speaker, nothing at all.

1200 In fact, Mr Speaker, the practice in 1935 was the correct one: as soon as possible. What is there to understand about ‘as soon as possible’? Nothing. And in fact they complain ‘Well, the GSD did not change the law’ – they did not have to, Mr Speaker, because they understood what the law meant ‘be gazetted’. And they gazetted certainly the 2009 accounts one month after being audited. They did not need to be told by the law ‘Can you please publish these accounts as soon as you have them in your hands’ because they simply did.

1205 Now the Minister seems to be under no rush to publish these accounts, and that was his personal view as Minister, which is why I brought this motion to the House. It was not because I did not already know his view and I thought, ‘Well, let’s kill an hour in the House debating the same point.’ The point is that ultimately it is Parliament that should decide what the law is, and not the Minister at his sole discretion. And so, Mr Speaker, I brought this motion to the House to make a very simple amendment to the law to provide guidance to the Minister as to when these accounts should be published. It is a matter for this Parliament and not the Minister himself to decide what is appropriate and what is good practice and what is transparency or what is not. It is not something that has to be in a manifesto; it is common sense, Mr Speaker. It is absolute 1210 common sense. If you have the audited accounts of the Savings Bank in your hands you should publish them – not today, not tomorrow, maybe next month, whatever is appropriate, but certainly not a year afterwards. What is the point if the information is out of date? If he has nothing to hide, if he is so confident in his investment abilities, which we will see when we see the audited accounts, why not publish? And again, this is a very simple amendment and it will 1215 benefit everybody in this House, regardless of Government, just to provide that guidance in future years. I do not know why that provision was deleted in 1991. It surely caused no real offence to anyone.

But, Mr Speaker, what I really must address is the Chief Minister’s contribution about the previous Government’s lack of transparency and his great bugbear about the failure to file 1220 accounts on time and the gravity of not filing those accounts on time and failing to comply with the rule of law. Failing to comply with the rule of law. These are very grave charges. I hope that he will have a look at Credit Finance and wrap himself on the knuckles because he has not filed the accounts of Credit Finance for the last five years – and he created Credit Finance, not the previous administration. So, Mr Speaker, what excuse does he have for not filing the accounts of 1230 Credit Finance, (Banging on desks) what excuse does he have for not getting them audited and what excuse does he have for this grave failure to comply with the rule of law? None, Mr Speaker. He talks about transparency. He says you have to not just talk about it but do it, demonstrate it. Well, Mr Speaker, I fail to see how he is demonstrating his love of transparency when not only does he not see the merits of my motion but he himself is guilty of the sin he accuses us of, the previous administration. Credit Finance is not some dormant company which has no public interest; this is a public-owned company which has £400 million of the Savings Bank’s money invested in it. Do you not think that the public might be interested in how Credit Finance is doing, how Mr Bossano is generating his miraculous returns with Credit Finance?

1240 Mr Speaker: Just a moment. May I indicate to the hon. Member that under the rules of debate you are now exercising your right to reply. There has been no mention during the course of the debate on Credit Finance at all.

Hon. R M Clinton: Yes, there has.

1245 Mr Speaker: Who did?

Hon. R M Clinton: [Inaudible] ... filed accounts.

1250 Mr Speaker: I must have missed that. I give the hon. Member the benefit of the doubt.

Hon. Chief Minister: I did not mention Credit Finance at all.

1255 Mr Speaker: But I do not recall hearing this morning any reference to Credit Finance.

Hon. D A Feetham: He mentioned Government-owned companies. He brought it up.

1260 Mr Speaker: Right, fine, Government-owned companies. Therefore what the hon. Member can do is to make, in exercising his right to reply, he can make a passing reference to a particular company, but what he cannot do is to devote a great deal of time in furtherance of his arguments, because that is introducing new material into his speech. He has spoken for two or three minutes on Credit Finance but what he cannot do is to make that the basis of his right to reply. He has made a reference, I allowed him – in fact I allow him to continue, but I just want to draw his attention to the fact that really he cannot over-elaborate on the matter.

1265 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as a point of information for the House, so that you and the hon. Member are aware, Credit Finance Company Ltd is not a Government-owned company; it is owned by the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

1270 Mr Speaker: Right. The Hon. Mr Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Sorry, Mr Speaker, I did not quite catch the Chief Minister – did he say 100% by the Savings Bank?

1275 Hon. Chief Minister: It is not Government owned at all, Mr Speaker, either by the Savings Bank or the GDC; it is 100% owned. It is not a Government-owned company.

1280 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I think what the Chief Minister meant to say, as he did now, is that it is £30 million of the ordinary shares that are owned by the Gibraltar Development Corporation and £400 million of preference shares are owned by Credit Finance.

1285 But Mr Speaker, I understand your point of order and I would perhaps in defence say I will accept entirely what he is saying, except for the fact that the Savings Bank has a £400 million investment, a substantial investment in Credit Finance, which goes to the heart of the question of publication of accounts and the schedule of investments, which is why I brought it up. And I also brought it up, Mr Speaker, because of the Chief Minister's comments about the gravity of failure to file accounts, and I held this up by way of example.

But I will move on, Mr Speaker. I will move on because of course I live in Never-Never Land, as the hon. Member said to me.

1290 Mr Speaker, the reason again that I raise this motion in the House is that it is for this House to determine what is appropriate, and it should not necessarily be solely in the Minister's discretion. Again, we have not heard as to why he thinks there is not sufficient reason to change the law and I have not heard why I have failed to convince him in my argument. I welcome the fact that he takes full responsibility for the Savings Bank, but I would also welcome if this House took responsibility for the Savings Bank and caused their accounts to be published in a timely manner in the interest of transparency.

1295 And so, Mr Speaker, on that point I have nothing further to add than to commend my motion to the House. (Banging on desks)

1300 Mr Speaker: I now put the question in the terms of the motion proposed by the Hon. R M Clinton. Those in favour? (Several Members: Aye.) Those against? (Several Members: No.) The motion is defeated.

Residential care homes for the elderly –
Access to the outdoors –
Amended motion carried

1305

Clerk: The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name which reads as follows.

THIS HOUSE

ACKNOWLEDGES that elderly residents of care homes and wards should have direct access to a safe outdoor environment, where possible

NOTES in particular the residents of John Cochrane Elderly Care Ward and Calpe Elderly Care Ward have no direct access to the outdoors

AND calls on Government to implement a policy to ensure ALL elderly residents are encouraged and assisted to go outdoors weather permitting.

1310 Mr Speaker, the underlying principle for this motion is to voice the concern of one particular individual in our community with whom I have had the pleasure and privilege of having numerous lengthy conversations over the last couple of months to do with this very important and valid cause.

1315 It all began last May, Mr Speaker, when Mr Pepe Soiza invited me and my hon. Friend Mrs Marlene Hassan Nahon to visit the John Cochrane Ward. His wife is a resident there and it was very clear and evident that Mrs Soiza enjoys the unconditional support and devotion of Mr Soiza and through him is therefore able to enjoy the simple things in life: a bit of fresh air, sunlight and the occasional ice-cream.

1320 It would be useless to quote all the research which has been done to prove how sunlight and going outdoors is so beneficial for our physical and mental well-being and how this is just as, if not more important for Dementia and Alzheimer suffers.

1325 During our visit we were introduced to other residents and their family members – residents who showed no signs of medical illnesses that would prevent them from being taken outside. Some stories were rather depressing, with some residents not having left the unit for several years because they have no family willing or able to take them out.

1330 From what I understand, the two residential units at St. Bernard's were meant to be a short-term temporary solution. However, they have turned into permanent institutions. Obviously the units were not designed to be residential homes and it would therefore seem appropriate to respond to the inadequate building infrastructure by introducing policies which will maximise and ensure care and amenities are all equal across all elderly care residences.

1335 Mr Speaker, since my motion was filed I have learned that the Government have taken steps to escort residents from John Cochrane and Calpe Wards outdoors, which was a fundamental reason for bringing this motion to Parliament. I welcome this move and look forward to hearing how this policy is being implemented across the homes.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in terms of the motion moved by the Hon. Lawrence Llamas.

Does any hon. Member wish to speak on the motion? The Hon. Neil Costa.

1340 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, as I rise I do so with some trepidation to discuss the particular circumstances of any one particular person. I know that from Standing Orders it is preferable not to mention or identify persons by name, and therefore when I give my replies in this House it will be unavoidable that by doing so the House and the community will now learn of what measures exactly it is that have been put in place to make sure that this particular person does receive the care that the hon. Gentleman has said 1345 that she does not.

Mr Speaker, it will not surprise Members opposite to learn that the Government will vote against Mr Llamas's motion and that I will move an amending motion at the conclusion of my contribution.

1350 Mr Speaker, on speaking to the motion before the House I remind hon. Members of the two questions that the hon. Member opposite asked me in respect of which I have to say he was nowhere to be found in the Parliament to hear my answers.

1355 In Question 726, the Hon. Mr Hammond, on behalf of the Hon. Mr Llamas, asked whether within the elderly care infrastructure Government had a policy to provide outdoor recreational time to residents on a daily basis, weather permitting. I replied, among other things, that there is an internal policy that regulates the attendance of residents to outings. The Opposition at that point did not ask me any supplementaries. Mr Llamas then asked me whether the Government intended to provide any outdoor recreation whatsoever for the residents of Calpe Elderly Care Ward and John Cochrane Elderly Care Ward. Had Mr Llamas been present in the House I would have referred him to my answer to Question 726, in which I had already provided him with the 1360 information requested. In other words, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has brought a motion to this House which, in my opinion, reflects quite an unprecedented disrespect to the House's proceedings and the contents of which betray that he has paid no heed whatever to the answers
I have given to him twice. As a result, I have to tell the hon. Gentleman opposite that his motion is wrong in content and pointless to the extent that he cannot possibly speak intelligently on the 1365 subject matter without first having given me the opportunity to explain to him all the activities that the elderly who are in our care undertake. Indeed, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman missed on an excellent opportunity to keep quiet.

1370 In any case, Mr Speaker, we are where we are and I must now, referring to paragraph by paragraph of his motion, explain to the Hon. Mr Llamas why his motion is entirely and wholly incorrect. Whereas he will not believe me, I have said to my colleagues on this side of the House and to some Members opposite that I have always considered the Hon. Mr Llamas a person who cares about the more vulnerable members of our community. I have to tell him now, however, that his recent flurry of press releases, again on issues on which he has not been in this House to listen to my answers and on this motion, really make me doubt the motivation for tabling his 1375 motion. For myself, Mr Speaker, I would have been mortified to have tabled a motion that betrayed my absence from this House when my questions were being answered and which showed that I had not paid the slightest attention to the answers provided by the responsible Minister.

1380 My embarrassment, however, Mr Speaker, would have quickly turned to anger and my realisation that it was also my team who had let me down, because the question immediately arises as to why on earth Mr Hammond or any of his colleagues would have allowed the Hon.
Mr Llamas to put himself in such a politically untenable situation. There is no way on this good green earth that the Hon. the Chief Minister, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister, the Hon.
Mr Bossano or any of my other colleagues, who actually care about my best interests, would 1385 have allowed me to make such an avoidable rookie mistake. But of course the Members opposite clearly survive in the context of the equivalent of a political jungle while they joust and jockey for the limelight and for popularity.

1390 In any case, Mr Speaker, the language of the hon. Gentleman's motion, like all other motions presented by the hon. Members opposite, gives the Government an excellent opportunity to once again set out the incredibly meaningful strides taken on this occasion in the provision of care for our elderly and vulnerable members of our community from the position we inherited since first being elected into office.

1395 Mr Speaker, I have to further tell the hon. Gentleman that the wording of his motion shows a lack of awareness by him of the reality on the ground. Had he been in Parliament to listen to answers to 726 and 50, he would not have given notice to what is in effect a non-motion.

Let me set out the various improvements which we on this side of the House have introduced.

1400 In December 2011 we inherited when we came into office 1.5 activities co-ordinators at Mount Alvernia and one activities co-ordinator at John Cochrane Ward and Calpe Ward. We have increased this to five activity co-ordinators at Mount Alvernia, three for the hospital wards and two in John Mackintosh Home, resulting in a total of 10 activities personnel to cover all elderly residential sites.

1405 In his non-motion the hon. Gentleman is asking this House to acknowledge that elderly residents of care homes and wards should have direct access to a safe outdoor environment. In other words he is implying that this is not the case at the moment. But quite the opposite, Mr Speaker, and this is why I prefaced my contribution at the outset to say that the hon. Gentleman would have served himself better by listening to the answers in this House.

1410 The residents of the care homes and the wards have access to safe outdoor environments across all locations. In Mount Alvernia, for example, there is access, including wheelchair access, to the gardens. John Mackintosh Home has an outdoor terrace. John Cochrane Ward, Calpe Ward and the newly set up interim ward at St Bernard's Hospital have access to the beautiful GHA gardens and podium. How can the hon. Gentleman therefore suggest that these wards have no direct access to the outdoors? The hon. Gentleman is incorrect. Is the hon. Gentleman not aware of the garden and outdoor spaces at St Bernard's Hospital? Does the hon. Gentleman not realise that the location of the hospital, for example, affords access to other outdoor recreational activities: Westview Park, GASA swimming pool and even Commonwealth Park?

1415 Mr Speaker, let me advise the hon. Gentleman of the outdoor activities currently undertaken by our elderly in our care: weekly trips to town; morning coffees, breakfast and lunch outings; beach projects; Gibraltar International Dog Show; GASA Family Pavilion; theatre shows; concerts; shopping trips; seasonal events such as Christmas lights, the Governor's tea party, the Convent Fair, Remembrance Day Service; and any other community events they are invited to. In addition, some residents of John Cochrane Ward and Calpe Ward are walked to different venues and St Bernard's Hospital, as I have noted, is conveniently close to many areas, including Main Street. These groups consist of no more than four at any one time and take place two to three times a week.

1425 Mr Speaker, it seems obvious to say, but given the contents of the non-motion I feel bound to say so, that some residents due to illness or frailty are unable to participate in outings. As I will explain a little further on, however, suitable and extensive indoor alternatives are provided so that our elderly whose physical condition prevents them from attending outings receive equal attention. I should further point out that outdoor activities only take place when weather permits.

1430 Further, Mr Speaker, the non-motion before the House asks the Government to implement a policy that all elderly residents are encouraged and assisted to go outdoors. Mr Speaker, you really could not make it up, and you could not make it up because it does show, as I have said, a complete lack of preparation for the serious business of this House. The hon. Gentleman should already know this. Of course, he would have known this had he turned up to Parliament on the two separate occasions that he asked me these questions, but of course instead of filing the non-motion, or at the very least when drafting the non-motion, he could at least have had the decency to consider Hansard, as he would have seen my answer to Question 726, which said that there is a policy. The policy does exist. The policy has been in place since 2014 and was designed to ensure the safe movement of both residents and staff. The objectives of the Internal Health and Safety Policy are to safeguard the residents and staff when on outings.

1445 Let me provide the hon. Gentleman with a summary of what is provided in the policy, a précis of course, Mr Speaker, which I would have been delighted to have provided the hon. Gentleman had he asked me any supplementary questions on the subject – but to ask me supplementary questions he must be in this House.

1450 Had the hon. Gentleman been in this House, I would have advised him that the policy sets out the roles and responsibilities of staff Members to ensure that residents going on an outing are well prepared, that the entering and exiting of the vehicles is done safely and efficiently, and that the venue of choice is appropriate for the residents attending.

Had the hon. Gentleman been in this House I would have further informed him that outings are pre-arranged and only residents who have consented, or their next of kin have consented, are taken.

1455 Had the hon. Gentleman been in this House I would have added that staffing levels are adjusted to ensure appropriate supervision. I would have explained that staffing attendance always includes a qualified nurse and a first aider and that venues visited by residents are risk assessed.

1460 Had the hon. Gentleman been in this House I would have advised him that outings depend on the outcome of the assessment – for example, venues are checked for accessibility and suitable toilet facilities. We also have a bus with wheelchair access which operates between 10 in the morning and eight at night to convey residents to different venues.

Had the hon. Gentleman been in this House I would have added that safe manual handling procedures are followed and that packed lunches and drinks are provided if the outing is somewhere other than a restaurant.

1465 At this point, Mr Speaker, I wish to thank the Friends of Mount Alvernia and Community Services who provide an invaluable role when bigger outings are arranged. For trips arranged through the excellent Friends of Mount Alvernia there are on average 26 elderly members of our community who participate. In addition to the big coaches, the Friends of Mount Alvernia's Vito provides for seven members of our elderly community. I also wish to place on the record the much appreciated and valued assistance provided by members of the Jewish community.

1470 Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman can well imagine, all residents are encouraged to participate in the outings which are organised. However, there are residents who do not wish to participate in these outings and this is of course respected.

1475 In total, Mr Speaker, there has been a staggering increase in the number of outings organised for our wonderful elderly community in our care. Under the previous administration total outings in 2010 totalled 35 a year. In 2016 there are, a year, 170 outings, which represents an incredible increase of 385%. (Banging on desks) And how could it have been different when my colleagues the Hon. Samantha Sacramento and the Hon. John Cortes were responsible? It is my distinct pleasure and duty to continue to build on their hard work and outstanding legacies.

1480 As always, Mr Speaker, quantitatively and qualitatively we on this side of the House, who actually care and bring our hearts as well as our minds to the discharge of our responsibilities, are quantum leaps ahead of the feeble attempts of the Members opposite, when they clearly did not care when they were in Government.

1485 In addition to all of the above outdoor activities we also facilitate an extensive indoor programme for residents who are unable or choose not to participate in outdoor recreational activities. These are arts and craft, scrapbooking, life story work, baking, sewing, knitting, cinema, exercise classes, yoga classes, board games, games tournaments, reminiscence therapy, garden parties, bingo, staff talent shows, seasonal events, singalongs, building of the grotto – the House may well recall the magnificent Christmas grotto of last year and of other years – speciality lunches, aromatherapy, various evening entertainments courtesy of local artists and schools and social interactions with our younger generation.

1490 Mr Speaker, despite all that we have done, all that we have done, we are by no means complacent and are determined to keep developing and improving the services which are 1495 available for our elderly, who have given so much to us and thanks to whom we are able to continue to build our lives in a safe, stable, prosperous and caring Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, because, unlike the hon. Gentleman opposite, I am not comfortable talking about particular cases, all that I will tell him is that, given the reports that I have received, I am entirely satisfied that we are doing all that we can for all of our residents. In conclusion, therefore, we on this side of the House are certainly not going to take any lessons from the GSD in this area of policy.

1500 At the start of intervention I gave notice that I would be moving an amending motion. My amending motion reads as follows:

THIS HOUSE

NOTES the many improvements in the provision of elderly care in Gibraltar since the election of the GSLP Liberal Government on 9th December 2011.

ACKNOWLEDGES the following:

That the number of staff dedicated activities co-ordinators at Mount Alvernia, the John Cochrane and Calpe Wards and the John Mackintosh Home have increased from 2.5 to ten.

That there has been a substantial increase in the number and in the quality of outings organised for elderly residents by 385%.

That elderly residents of care homes and wards have direct access to a safe outdoor environment.

The excellent work carried out by the GSLP Liberal administration in respect of the establishment of new wards for the care of our elderly citizens.

The invaluable work done by the staff of the elderly residential wards.

The importance of the day centre at Waterport Terraces and

The important decision to change the nature of the residential facilities at Old St Bernard's Hospital into the excellent elderly care residential services known at John Mackintosh Home.

WELCOMES the opening of the Bella Vista Day Centre which allows our elderly residents to present with Alzheimer's and Dementia to receive the full range of medical and therapeutic treatments.

The soon to open Dementia residential Home.

The vital work being done by the current administration in respect of refurbishment of Alvernia to add even more bed capacity.

And commends the GSLP Liberal Government to continue to relentlessly pursue improvements in elderly care.

Mr Speaker, I am giving written notice of that amendment.

1505 Mr Speaker: There is one small matter, but a very important matter, which is incorrect in the moving of the motion. I think the hon. Member needs to ... 'delete every word after "This House" [Hon N F Costa: Yes.] and substitute the following'. So will he do that? Will he stand and say 'Mr Speaker, I move that the hon. Member's motion should be amended by the deletion of every word after "This House" and by the substitution of the motion which I have circulated', 1510 alright, just to be absolutely correct?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

By way of notice of the written motion which is now being circulated around this House, I move that the motion of Mr Llamas be amended by removing all of the words that follow 'This House' and be substituted with the motion that I am now circulating to this House.

Mr Speaker: Does any hon. Member wish to speak on the amendment before the House?

1520 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister, in his response to my hon. Friend, my colleague's motion, can only at best be described as ungenerous and shows a complete lack of what this Government claims to be so fond of: humility. He now proposes to delete what was an entirely – and I have to say this – honest motion of my colleague with a self-congratulatory statement. So much for humility!

1525 Mr Speaker, he accuses my colleague, if not this side of the House, of having no heart. I can assure the Hon. Minister that my colleague is full of heart, and in fact he does meet a lot of people who do come to him and say, 'We are not getting this treatment, we are not getting this access, we are not getting whatever,' and he does take the time to meet all these people. He does take the time to go to hospital wards and have a look for himself. This is not a random motion that he just concocted in the middle of the night for the sake of coming to this House with a motion. This was a motion that was driven by real circumstances and by real people who have real problems.

1530 And now he makes a big deal about 'Well, if the hon. Member had only been in this House he would have heard my answer. If only he had been in this House he would have heard how wonderful it all is. If he had only been in this House he would have heard everything he needed to know and this motion would have been useless.' Well, Mr Speaker, there are people out there who are not in this House who have real concerns and do not have the information that the hon. Minister has. Or he may have a policy, but is it being implemented correctly? The people out there who are not in this House obviously take a different view, and that is why my colleague introduced this motion. The Government may have retrospectively tried to fix things as soon as they saw his motion by recruiting an extra person on to the wards, but that really does not warrant this statement of self-congratulation. And even if the hon. Member had been in this House ... and if he was absent it was for very good reasons. If he was absent it was because we in this Chamber no longer know when we are going to sit because the timetable gets moved around at the whim of the Government. (Interjections) It is true! (Interjections) It is true! This House could be more efficient – 1545 A Member: You have known for six months!

1550 Hon. R M Clinton: I beg your pardon? I will give way to the hon Member if he wants to say something.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): It's all right, I'll tell you when the time comes.

1555 A Member: Yes, he should hear it.

Hon. R M Clinton: Sorry, you will tell him, or me? (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Carry on.

1560 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

If the hon. Member was absent it was not because he was wilfully absent; he was absent because we in this Chamber no longer know when this Chamber sits, not because he was wilfully absent. (Hon. Chief Minister: Disgraceful.) And yes, it is disgraceful, Mr Speaker. It is disgraceful that the Chief Minister –

Mr Speaker: Just a moment. Will you please sit down.

Let me deal with this question as to whether an hon. Member is absent or not. For a number of years the House has been able, or was able, to start its meeting the third week in the month, usually a Thursday. Because of events outside Gibraltar's control – in my view, and if any hon. Member disagrees with me he can say so. Because of events outside our control it has become necessary for Members of the Government to absent themselves from Gibraltar to deal with these matters more often than has been the case. Consequently, as I understand it, it has not been possible to follow to the same extent the orderly procedure and the orderly programme which we had in this House.

1575 It affects all of us – it affects me, it affects the members of my staff – but that is the reality and we have to put the paramount interests of Gibraltar before our individual conveniences. That may result in it being impossible on some occasions for some Members, on both sides of the House indeed, to be present for a particular session. If that happens, there is nothing they should be ashamed of or condemned for; it is just a reality that we have to live with it, and 1580 please let us not make anything more about it than should be the case.

We are here to serve the people of Gibraltar and to that extent Members of the Government may have to sacrifice themselves in travelling abroad more often than they would like to and hon. Members of the Opposition may find it difficult to attend here when they have other commitments. I am in that position myself. I sometimes have to cancel even commitments as 1585 Mayor because I am required to be here, so please let us not make anything more of it than what we should and let's get on with the business at hand.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for your point of order and that the record should reflect that if my hon. colleague was absent it was due to these turbulent times in which 1590 yes, I agree, we have to put Gibraltar's interests first, but it does mean that if my hon. Friend was absent, nothing should be read into it and certainly he should not be admonished by the Minister for Health.

And so Mr Speaker moving on quickly, my final point is this. The Hon. Minister made a lot about if there had been further supplementaries to the Q&A in the House. Well, Mr Speaker, 1595 you yourself are only too fond of telling us that we should not have debates during Q&A, and this is precisely why the hon. Member has brought this motion. This is to encourage a debate, to have a debate, to discuss the issues, and in a fulsome manner examine what has or has not been done.

And so, Mr Speaker, I really can only commend my colleague for bringing the motion in the 1600 way he has done and I condemn the Government's motion for complete lack of humility.
Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Before I call on any other Member to contribute, there is a small typographical error after 'Welcomes'. The first line after 'Welcomes': the opening of the Bella Vista Day Centre which allows I think, not 'allow', which 'allows'. Okay, we will take it that it is 'allows' and we will 1605 all make a note in our copy.

Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute to this amendment? The Hon. Mr Bossano.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
1610 Mr Speaker, the Hon. Mr Clinton has reacted to this amendment on the basis that it is just a list of self-congratulatory statements, and then gone on to say that what has happened is that my hon. colleague has employed somebody as a result of the matter being raised in a motion in the House and notice had not been given. I have to tell the hon. Member that, regrettably, the longer he is in this House the less credence his statements have in my eyes, because he started 1615 off life in Parliament sticking to facts and he now moves further and further away from facts, as he did in the last motion when he started talking about 'if you do not do something on the date I want you to, it must be because you must have something to hide'. And now he comes along and ... Is he suggesting really that all these things that have been listed – which the Hon. Mr Costa is not even asking them to welcome or congratulate him on, but simply to acknowledge 1620 that they have happened – they have all happened since the motion was moved? Is he saying that the Minister for Health has produced a list of lies which he is asking the House to vote in favour of? Because that is what he has just said. That is part of the reason that he has given for informing us that he does not support the substitute motion.

1625 Is it that he does not welcome the Bella Vista Centre? That he does not want the residential home to open soon? That he does not want any more work done to Mount Alvernia? Is he against all those things? Is it that he is now moving from being what he appeared to be wanting to do, which was to come here and do a good job for the people who had voted for him to be on that side, although sometimes he behaves as though he thought they had voted for him to be on this side (Laughter) and therefore he confuses what the responsibilities and the functions are 1630 when one is there and one is here? I have reminded him of that before because I happen to have been there longer than I have been here and I always, when I was there, knew my place in the House and did not expect the Government to approve me telling them what to do, even if it was not what they should be doing. But what he cannot really say with any credibility is that his reaction to the alternative amendment is based on the fact that this is just a self-congratulatory 1635 statement provoked by the initial motion, when it is a statement that lists ... Or is it that he does not believe that it has gone up from two and a half to 10 people in numbers employed? That he does not believe that there has been outings that are up by 385? That he does not believe that they have got direct access? Does he not believe any of those things? If he does not believe it, then he is right not to acknowledge that they have happened, but then in effect and de facto 1640 what he is saying is that the Minister for Health has invented a lot of things that are not true and he is expecting the Opposition to acknowledge them to be true when they know them not to be true. I think that is utter and complete nonsense on his part and if he wants to vote against the amending motion simply because he feels that he is in Opposition and has to oppose, then let him give that as the reason because there is no other one. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute to the amendment? Otherwise, I will call ... From the official Opposition? Any other Member? The hon. Lady wishes to contribute to the amendment?

1650

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: To the motion of Mr Llamas, yes? (Interjection) I am so confused!

1655

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, because ... Can I, to assist the House? If the hon. Lady wants to speak to Mr Llamas's motion, that motion is presently before the House with an amendment to change it. Once that amendment passes, then the amendment will be before the House. The amended motion will be before the House. So Mr Llamas's motion is presently before the House with a proposal to amend it.

1660

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Mr Llamas for raising this issue to the attention of the House and for proposing this motion.

1665

I rise to speak only because I remember quite clearly when I visited John Cochrane Ward with Mr Llamas and had the opportunity to speak to residents and their families, and while many of them spoke highly of the treatment and attention that they were receiving on site, they did sadly reflect on the fact that they were not given many opportunities to go outdoors. Mr Llamas has pursued this cause through a number of questions in this House because it is true that 1665 residents in the majority have been feeling that they did not get taken out. I was there, Mr Speaker, and their relatives all said it to us and they asked us to voice their feelings about direct access to the outdoors. So I speak more as a witness to my hon. Friend Mr Llamas and his calls from residents and their families to raise the cause for added direct access to the outdoors.

Surely we as Opposition are here to bring such concerns to the House, and it is with this consideration and only this that I have no hesitation in supporting Mr Llamas' motion. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Any other contributor?

1675 Sometimes what the Speaker does – Mr Speaker Vázquez used to do it ... have a motion with an amendment that obliterated it completely and when an hon. Member spoke, allowed him to speak on both but only once, (Laughter) okay? Really, the hon. Lady has not spoken on the Government's amendment. She has spoken on Mr Llamas' motion. I take it that that is her 1680 contribution and therefore I will not allow her to speak once again once the amendment has been approved.

Any other contributor? I therefore now call upon the mover to reply.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, turning to Mr Clinton first – and he called me ungenerous – let's 1685 call a spade a spade. The hon. Gentleman asks questions in this House and he does not appear in this House to ask me.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, on a point of order.

Hon. N F Costa: He asked no supplementaries –

1690

Mr Speaker: On a point of? (Hon. R M Clinton: Order.) Order, yes. What is the Standing Order that you are referring to?

Hon. R M Clinton: Well I am referring to the point you made before, Mr Speaker, about not 1695 reading anything into Members not being present.

Mr Speaker: About what?

Hon. R M Clinton: Members not being present. Not reading anything into Members not being 1700 present. (Interjection)

Hon. N F Costa: That was something else.

Hon. Chief Minister: Not reading anything, then, speaking on it.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, he calls me ungenerous because I pointed out that the fact that although two questions had been asked in this House, no supplementaries had been asked of me. He then goes on to say that the Hon. Mr Speaker has told us on many occasions not to debate. But asking supplementary questions and debating are two entirely separate things. The 1710 Hon. Mr Llamas asked me a question as to whether or not the elderly in our care have access to the outdoors and whether there is a policy. Had he heard my answer he would have heard from me that there is a policy and the policy sets out, as I have said today, all the different matters that the carers take into account when deciding whether or not and how those outings are to take place and where those outings take place.

Mr Speaker, the Hon. Mr Clinton says that the hon. Gentleman may have a policy. It is not 1715 that we may, we do have a policy. The policy has been there since 2014 and in those supplementary questions that could have been asked of me I would have been delighted to have set out to the hon. Gentleman what the policy contained.

For the hon. Gentleman to suggest that I have employed 7.5 people since the date that the 1720 motion was filed (Interjection) to the date that it was heard just goes to show that the hon.
Gentleman does not know how the Government works or that the Hon. Minister Bossano would not have been at all pleased for there to have been such a jump in such a short space of time.
That has been the work conducted by the Hon. Dr Cortes and the Hon. Samantha Sacramento over the past five years, where we all considered that having 35 outings in 2010 was not good 1725 enough, and it was as a result of the fact that we thought the 35 outings a year was not good

1730 enough that we increased the number of activities co-ordinated, and that has gone up from 35 to 170. That is a staggering increase and the reason why it matters that we say so is because it shows that the previous Ministers before me have very much been concerned about the fact of access to outdoors, access to outdoor activities, access to indoor activities. Therefore, Mr Speaker, there is no question that the work that has been conducted by this Government in terms of keeping our elderly minds occupied, of making sure that they have access to the podium, to the gardens, to Main Street, to coffees, to lunches, to the seasonal events and to other events, have taken place when we have been in Government and not when they were in Government. And all the point that I was making, Mr Speaker, was that if this was so important 1735 to them, if this was such a crucial issue, then you would have expected that during 16 years of Government the number of outings would not have been 35 – they may have been 60 or 70 or 80 or 90 or 100 or 120 or 130 or 140 or 150 or 160 or, as it comes to us, 172, which is damned site a lot more than when it used to be under them.

1740 So no, Mr Speaker, we will not take any lessons from the GSD, and no, Mr Speaker, we are not being ungenerous. We are just telling them the facts, and the facts hurt because they never cared and we do. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I will now put the amendment to the House. Those in favour? (Several Members: Aye.) Those against? (Two Members: No.) Carried.

1745 We now have before the House the motion as amended, which is in effect the Hon. Neil Costa's amendment. That is now the motion before the House and any hon. Member who has not spoken may speak on it.

The Hon. Lawrence Llamas.

1750 Hon. L F Llamas: Do I reply at the end?

Mr Speaker: No, at this stage you can speak on the amendment. You can express your view about the amendment and then –

1755 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, the amendment has been passed, so now Mr Llamas has the right at the end.

Mr Speaker: The amendment has been passed. Therefore the Hon. Lawrence Llamas can exercise his right to reply, but at the end of it all – which may not be now, because there can be 1760 other contributions to the amendment if any Member so wishes. If not, if there is no other contribution, then I will call upon the mover to reply. Is there any other contribution?

Okay, I therefore now call – 1765 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is.

Mr Speaker: Yes, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the motion now before the House is a motion that, in my view, accurately and properly reflects the reality today on the ground for people who are 1770 residents of the elderly care facilities that the Government is running.

I must say to the hon. Gentleman that the motion as he brought it of course was asking us to do more as he saw it. This is a trait we are seeing from hon. Members opposite. They bring questions or motions to this House asking us to do more at the same time as they issue statements or say things in this House suggesting we should spend less. If hon. Members 1775 manage to find the elixir of more done for less cash, they should please tell us where they found it so that we can give a healthy dose of it to all those that we think need it. Looking for efficiencies is something that is difficult and we are doing. Hon. Members need to realise they 1780 come to the House because they have met someone because they have taken an interest in something and they ask us to do, but at the same time they must remember that they are the ones asking us to spend less.

1785 So, in the context of the generosity that one is asked to read into Mr Llamas's movement of a motion, I will say that once again one is left to be very surprised indeed that hon. Members – neither John Cortes, who used to run the Health Services, or Samantha Sacramento, who used to run Elderly Care Residential Services, or Neil Costa, who now runs the Health and Care Department that deals with all of these issues – should have received not one inkling of a phone call from the hon. Member saying 'I am concerned about this: how can we resolve the issue?' Because that would be the politically generous way of dealing with a genuine problem that somebody wants to resolve. Hon. Members know that if they pick up their phone and they speak to us about a particular issue relating to a constituent or group of constituents, if it is possible to assist we will assist. The hon. Lady has done it often, and it does not mean that we always agree with the solution that we propose but a solution would always be proposed.

1790 That is why, Mr Speaker, the motion that was brought was not a generous motion by any stretch of the Clintonian imagination, (Laughter) and what is a generous and genuine motion is the motion now before the House, which is the motion that the hon. Member has put. The motion before the House before was simply a political device. It was a political device designed to try and garner favour with people who the hon. Member feels would have his support politically if he brought that motion. The motion now before the House is a genuine reflection of the position.

1800 Mr Speaker, if I may say so with the very greatest of respect – the hon. Gentleman mentioned him – I have known Pepe Soiza for many years. He is a genuinely concerned, hardworking husband of somebody who suffers an ailment and he deserves all of our support and respect. I did a lot of work with Pepe before I was Chief Minister and a lot of what is reflected in the motion now before the House is the work that John Cortes and Samantha Sacramento and now Neil Costa are doing with me and other Members of the Government to deliver for people like Pepe, given the concerns that they have. And the statistics that are before the House are not self-congratulatory. They are the evidence that the work that Pepe Soiza was so keen to see is actually happening, and that, Mr Speaker, is actions demonstrating our commitment to the people who are the residents of the Elderly Services facilities that we run.

1805 1810 Mr Speaker, I say to the hon. Gentleman – I hope not becoming emotional – that there is no service that at the moment could be closer to my heart than the elderly residential service, and if he genuinely believed that there was an improvement to be carried out in respect of any of those services he knows that he just needs to get in touch with me or any hon. Member, and if he genuinely wanted to see something happen and if it genuinely was the right thing there would be no need for a motion in this House. Indeed I say to him that when we do things which are done as a result of something that an hon. Member opposite does we will not hesitate in recognising that and in giving them credit where it is due. The hon. Gentleman should know that we have very little political fear of the way that they run their political affairs, and therefore giving them credit if they bring something to us that we then do because it is a good idea – coming back to the concept of a good idea – is something that we will not be afraid of.

1815 1820 An honest motion is therefore now the motion before the House, a motion that accurately reflects the position, and there is no lack of humility, Mr Speaker, in moving an amendment to a motion to in history lay down for Parliament in Hansard the reality of a situation rather than allow history to be misled and the public to be misled by a very political partisan motion, which was what we were seeing before. There is no humility in allowing yourself to be trod over when you have done the excellent work that John Cortes, Samantha Sacramento and now Neil Costa are doing in bringing about these changes in Elderly Care Services and instead of reflecting that in a motion, allowing simply the hon. Gentleman's very partisan motion to remain what would be on the record.

1830 I am interested to hear that Mr Llamas goes into hospital wards. I do not think that any of us would think it appropriate for Members of the Opposition to be traipsing through hospital wards unless they are going to see somebody. That is the basis on which we used to go to hospital wards before. It is indeed the basis on which other Ministers would be able to go to hospital wards, other than the Minister for Health. Therefore, Mr Speaker, if that is the case, I should ask that he be in touch with the Minister for Health and Care so that we know that he is not 1835 breaching clinical protocols in the way that he is visiting these hospital wards. He can go there only to visit somebody at the invitation of a family member, etc.

Mr Speaker, a lot has been said about whether Members are here or not. It was me that introduced the concept of a timetable for this Parliament because I had suffered the eight years that I was in Opposition being told, literally with the minimum notice required by the rules, 1840 when I had to be here and being brought here to debate Bills that I was not told were going to be debated, etc.

The only notice we were ever given sometimes, out of the generosity of spirit of the (Interjection) man sometimes described as the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, was 'Oh, and in that meeting we will debate the Budget,' (Laughter) so one was able to prepare oneself. Hon.
1845 Members do not know how lucky they are to be given an indication, where possible, of what we are going to be dealing with.

My own view is that the Labour reforms of the British Parliament of the mid-1990s have been incorporated now into our procedures as much as is reasonably possible. In other words, hon.
Members get a timetable which sets out when we are going to meet and when we expect 1850 questions to be dealt with. And, Mr Speaker, as you rightly pointed out, and I am grateful for that, we wanted to meet so that Chief Minister's Questions could be dealt with at three o'clock on a Thursday and for four years we were able to keep to that rhythm. Then the small matter of something called the Brexit Referendum got in the way. We are now required to travel when we do not wish to travel, we are not able to be here when we want to be here, and sometimes 1855 therefore the de facto timetable that had sprung up is one that we are not able to follow.

There are Members opposite who are still at work, there are Members opposite who are retired and there are Members opposite who do this as a full-time job. The independent Member has no other employment, the retired banker has no other employment, I do not know that Mr Reyes has other employment, and Mr Llamas has no other employment because he is 1860 on a sabbatical from the Government. When others have employment, or if they simply have a personal matter to attend to in relation to children or whatever and they are not here, you are right, Mr Speaker, nothing can be read into that and that is absolutely appropriate and the Government will not read anything into somebody who is not here because they have a personal issue to attend to involving their family or they have a professional issue to attend to, because 1865 Parliament is meeting in these circumstances. But, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member was at Crufts when he was not here to hear those answers. He was at a dog show, as far as the Government understands –

1870 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: Order!

1875 Hon. Chief Minister: At a dog show, Mr Speaker. And if he was, Mr Speaker, it is a matter entirely for him –

Hon. L F Llamas: May I ask the Chief Minister to give way?

Hon. Chief Minister: I will give way.

1880 Mr Speaker: No.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I think I need to defend my absence.

Mr Speaker: Very well.

1885 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, back in November I was invited three years ago to officiate at the Brussels International Dog Show representing Gibraltar. I was not representing myself and I was not showing any of my dogs; I was actually judging, officiating and representing my country in a very, very international event where there are more than 6,000 dogs, where there are more 1890 than 50-odd judges, and I think it is rather unfair to be accused (Several Members: Hear, hear.)
(Banging on desks) that I was doing something which was personal.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): It is rather irresponsible.

1895 Hon. L F Llamas: No, it is not irresponsible because I had a contract with that party to actually perform a judging duty; it is not irresponsible. Right?

Hon. Chief Minister: So you were at a dog show.

1900 Hon. L F Llamas: Yes, I was at a dog show –

Mr Speaker: May we please –

1905 Hon. L F Llamas: – judging it the same way as other Members may go to backgammon without –

Mr Speaker: May –

Hon. Chief Minister: You have disrespected this Parliament.

1910 Mr Speaker: Just a moment. Order! Order! Order! (Interjections) May we please not have comments across the floor of the House. If any hon. Members wish to speak when another one holds the floor, ask for the Member to give way.

The Hon. Mr Llamas, have you finished?

1915 Hon. L F Llamas: No. So, Mr Speaker, I was actually performing a duty which I had contracted with the Belgian Kennel Club three years before I even had an inkling that I would be involved in politics and which I had an obligation to carry out. It would have been unethical of me to have withdrawn that appointment.

1920 Mr Speaker, obviously I appreciate and I understand that Government's responsibilities and duties are far more important than that of Opposition, I accept that, but of course when Parliament is called ... and I know that we started the year with a very structured way that we would be doing things in the third week of the month, that we would start on a Wednesday and finish by the Friday. It was very well structured, and obviously when that went out of the window because of Brexit it is understandable that that takes priority.

1925 But, Mr Speaker, obviously when Parliament is called and we have personal commitments which we need to see to, we try to liaise with your staff here in Parliament and we try to ascertain which days are going to be free, because obviously we have other commitments which we may need to carry out. Unfortunately, if we cannot predict when Parliament will be sitting, inevitably ... We try our utmost best to always be here and we are 100% dedicated to our job 1930 and it is rather unfair that the Hon. Chief Minister accuses me of being at a self-inflicted cause wasting my time and the taxpayer's funds. (Banging on desks)

1935 Hon. Chief Minister: I am very pleased that I gave way to the hon. Gentleman and he confirmed that he was at a dog show, Mr Speaker, (Laughter) instead of being here, for which he is paid £35,545 by the people of Gibraltar.

1940 So, Mr Speaker, look, I do not judge whether it is right for him to go to a dog show or not, whether it was right for him to contract to go to a dog show or not, whether he was judging or showing or whatever. I do not judge that, but that is where he was. That is where he was when the hon. Gentleman was answering the questions in respect of these issues which he says are so important. And somebody else might rightly be able to say, 'Well, so what: I went to that and I did not come to this.' Okay, Mr Speaker, but he is full time a Member of this House. He is on a sabbatical from the Civil Service. He is a full-time Member of this House. He earns £35,500 to be a Member of this House and if other Members in their spare time, when they are not required to be here, do other things, that is completely irrelevant. But what is particularly relevant, Mr Speaker, what is particularly relevant, is that the hon. Gentleman says outside of this House that Gibraltar under our administration is on a suicide train and he asks questions in this House about dog parks. He misses meetings of this House to go to dog shows and if Gibraltar were on a suicide train it would be his responsibility to be in this House, trying to put the brakes on that train. So that puts the lie to the things that the hon. Gentleman says outside of this House, Mr Speaker.

1950 When it comes to how the timetable is moved around, the Government regrets unfortunately not being able to stick to what it wishes to be the timetable to our reforms that we made in this House so that everybody should be here, especially given that some of the hon. Members on the opposite benches are doing nothing other than taking the pay of this community to represent this community. For them to come here and suggest that they are rightly out doing things like engaging in their contractual commitments, as the hon. Gentleman has told us to judge dog shows in the Netherlands, really is not an acceptable way of wriggling off the hook that the hon. Gentleman has made for himself, a hook that demonstrates a complete and utter lack of generosity, because this motion which is now before the House is the only one that can be described as genuine and which can be described as reflecting the reality of the position when what we were dealing with, which was once again clearly a directive that two motions be put every month and that they be regarded – 1965 Hon. R M Clinton: A point of order.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton on a point of order.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I refer to Part X of the Standing Rules, section 45(6):

No Member shall impute improper motives to any other Member.

1970 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: Just a moment –

1975 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, improper motive is not to say that you are trying to garner political points. Improper motive is something to be improper. Hon. Members are supposed to be seeking to score political points and are supposed to be trying to demonstrate that they are an alternative Government. So to say to them –

Mr Speaker: May I?

1980 Hon. Chief Minister: – that they are making some –

Mr Speaker: May I?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, can I answer the point of order?

1985

Mr Speaker: No, but I have to deal with it myself.

Hon. Chief Minister: But, Mr Speaker, you should hear both sides in respect of it.

1990

Mr Speaker: I will, I will.

Now, the Hon. Mr Roy Clinton, you are referring to 45(6), (Hon. R M Clinton: Yes.) which reads: 'No Member shall impute improper motives to any other Member.' Could you please explain to me what is the improper motive which you think the Chief Minister is imputing?

1995

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister seems to be imputing, in my mind, that my hon. Friend has been negligent in the performance of his duty to this Parliament and to the people of Gibraltar and seems to be suggesting that he is taking his pay on false premises in order to put above that private matters, and I think that is wholly inappropriate.

2000

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I can address the question of motive, (Mr Speaker: Yes.) this subsection of the rules deals with motive Mr Speaker, with motive. I have not addressed the concept of motive. I am free to say that any Member in his House is negligent. That is not motive, Mr Speaker. I am free to say that the hon. Gentleman takes his pay and does not do enough for the Gibraltar taxpayer in taking his pay. That is not motive, Mr Speaker. Motive is what motivates somebody to do something, and what I have said in that respect is that the hon. Gentleman has been motivated politically to move his motion and that the Hon. Mr Costa's motion is a genuine motion and his was just one designed to create political points. The hon. Gentleman is a politician: if he was not moved politically, what was he moved by?

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may raise another point of order in respect of the same section, section (12) this time, which says –

Mr Speaker: Which one?

Hon. R M Clinton: Twelve, in which it says:

The conduct of Her Majesty, Members of the Royal Family, the Governor, members of the Parliament, the Chief Justice or other persons engaged in the administration of justice shall not be raised except upon a specific substantive motion moved for that purpose; and in any amendment, question to a Member or remarks in a debate on a motion dealing with any other subject any reference to the conduct of the persons aforesaid shall be out of order.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, addressing that part of the point of order made, does the hon. Gentleman not remember everything he has said since he came to this House, because he has been imputing my motives, if that is what he says that section means, from the first time that he uttered a word in this House after he was elected.

This is specifically clear: the conduct of the Member shall not be called into question. Where is the conduct that has been called into question? What I am saying is –

Mr Speaker: May I –?

2025

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, can I please address the point of order as well?

The conduct that is being addressed is not the conduct in this House. I am saying that he is not value for money for the taxpayer if he goes off to Crufts in Holland instead of being here to 2030 deal with the issues that he has to deal with. If the hon. Gentleman says that this rule does not allow me to say that, then he has got a completely different reading of the rules than every Member has ever had in the history, in particular, the person he used to support to lead the Government of Gibraltar.

2035 It is absolutely right and proper that we should all hold each other to account, and in that respect this rule does not exclude saying that somebody has not acted in a way that we consider to be appropriate value for money for the taxpayer.

2040 Mr Speaker: I had occasion to consider 45(12). In about April/May 2014 the matter was raised and I explained to the Leader of the Opposition that if the Speaker was expected to invoke that rule strictly, Members of Parliament here would be very, very limited in what they would be able to say about each other.

2045 It is right and proper that hon. Members should not question the conduct of Members of the Royal Family, the Governor and the Chief Justice, and then 'Members of Parliament' has been inserted into this particular subsection. As I say if it is the view of hon. Members that I should implement that, apply that strictly, they are going to have to be very, very careful about what they say to each other.

2050 I took the view then that that would not be the proper purpose behind this specific subsection. In a letter that I sent to the Leader of the Opposition on other matters as well I dealt with that particular one. I have got it on file; I could look at it again. But that was the view and the ruling that I then gave.

2055 Can we then proceed with a more orderly business before the House?

2060 Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

2065 And so it is entirely orderly to point out that the hon. Gentleman was not here because he was at a dog show, and every attempt that we have seen in the past five minutes to prevent the Government from pointing out to the community what the hon. Gentleman was doing has failed. Mr Speaker, one is almost left to say that the Opposition has gone to the dogs! (Laughter) At least on that particular occasion that is exactly where they were, Mr Speaker.

2070 Therefore to play politics with an issue as sensitive as the care that we give to the elderly in our community is really to demonstrate that there is an attempt to turn every potential opportunity for political advantage with little regard for the substance and the importance that it may have, whether dealing with the dates on which accounts are filed to the ways in which people in elderly residential services are taken out.

2075 What we are seeing, again in respect of motions, is this two motions a month – for goodness' sake – directive are taking effect with no regard whatsoever to the effect on the people who may be the ones who are the subject of the motion.

2080 In this respect, Mr Speaker, the motion now before the House, the motion that I am confident the House will pass, is one that reflects the extraordinary hard work, the dedication, the care and the sentiment that the people who have been in charge of discharging ministerial obligations from 9th December 2011 have had, in particular for people in respect of elderly residential services, who could not be closer to my heart than they are and who therefore are now reaping the benefits of the work of John Cortes, the work of Samantha Sacramento, the work of Neil Costa and indeed the support of the whole Cabinet for the spending necessarily associated with that.

2085 That is why, Mr Speaker, I commend the motion as amended to the House and it must be the record that stands for history of the way that we care for the elderly in our community today in the second decade of the 21st century. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mr Llamas can now exercise his right to reply.

2080 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I will start by just saying that when I stood for election the first thing that crossed my mind was to do this full time, which I am doing, and the sacrifices that this means for my family and in particular my wife and children. (Interjection) Yes. So to insinuate that I do not do this full time and I have chosen not to take any extra work or employment which obviously would compensate at least my immediate family ... I do not think I have to defend that point in this House or outside this House. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

2085 Mr Speaker, I will start with the infamous Question 726/2016. My question specifically asks about outdoor recreational time on a daily basis; the words 'daily basis' are included in that question. The answer referred to outings and events. Therefore, I find it that, regardless of whether a Member is in Parliament or not, the answers hardly reflect what the question is technically asking for.

2090 Never have I criticised the care staff of these residency homes, never have I even suggested the patients are lacking activities and never have I suggested during this motion that the Government has actually failed and should be ashamed. Therefore, Mr Speaker, I do not think that I have come here to this House with a politically motivated motion. Indeed, Mr Speaker, the support given by the Friends of Mount Alvernia is commendable and invaluable. The services provided by this charity just show how hard they work and the dedicated members it has on board.

2095 What I have sinned on, Mr Speaker, is being accused by Mr Costa of headline grabbing for bringing issues of concern into the public domain through the media, and yet again I am being criticised for bringing issues through the resources available in Parliament, which Mr Speaker always encourages us to pursue.

2100 Residents and families have also conveyed their positive feedback on the activities provided in the residency units and they have also praised the carers and care provided on sites. And, Mr Speaker, whilst the Chief Minister was asking that I seek clearance from the Minister for Health to visit these wards, these wards are not actually clinical wards, they are residential wards and as such I was invited by a family member, so I do not think it is inappropriate for me to attend and have to seek the Minister's approval.

2105 The Mount Alvernia and John Mackintosh Wings have easy access and direct access to the outdoors, Mr Speaker. However, the access to the beautiful gardens down at St Bernard's would be a perilous journey if residents had to travel a rather long way through various lifts to access these gardens. The reality is not in this House, Mr Speaker; the reality is in these two wards in which people are living day in, day out.

2110 The fact is, Mr Speaker, that the Hon. Minister accuses me of not being in this House on two unfortunate occasions; however, I have been to the John Cochrane Ward and I would recommend that the Minister takes time to visit and talk to the residents as to the state of affairs, which are rather depressing.

2115 It is obvious that the Minister must have agreed with my motion, given that last week a policy has been implemented in these two wards and at last there will be elderly escorted – at 30-minute intervals, from what I am told – to the gardens at St Bernard's.

2120 So Mr Speaker, I wish to just conclude by saying that unfortunately I bring a motion to this House in good faith but am met with a bullish answer.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

2125 Mr Speaker: I now put the question in the terms of the motion as amended before the House. Those in favour (Several Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried by Government majority.

Medical cannabis –
Prescription and legislative framework –
Amended motion carried

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mrs Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

2130

THIS HOUSE:

NOTES the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the United Nations in 1948 which considers the right for people to receive medical treatment;

NOTES that the international medical community has proven that cannabis flower and oil can be used for medicinal purposes;

NOTES that the GHA already prescribes opiates and other sedative drugs such as Diazepam and Diamorphine;

NOTES that there are a great number of patients in Gibraltar who suffer from ailments which could be treated successfully with cannabis;

NOTES that at present the Government has provided Sativex in very limited cases but not widely available to sufferers;

NOTES that the full plant extract has been known to be more effective than Sativex, both anecdotally, and clinically, and therefore the need for a comprehensive cannabis program is required, through which sufferers can obtain different variants of cannabis medicine, whether it be Sativex, the flower itself, oil extractions, or any other number of variations;

AND THEREFORE RESOLVES that medical professionals within the GHA should be free to prescribe medical cannabis for needy patients immediately and without delay, and should also be given expert training on as to how and when cannabis-based medicines should be prescribed;

FURTHER RESOLVES that the proper legislative framework for a proper cannabis program be introduced and provided by the Gibraltar Government for this to happen.

Mr Speaker, the Government's decision late last week to allow doctors to prescribe Sativex to patients suffering from multiple sclerosis represents an important step in the direction of embracing the medicinal qualities of cannabis-derived compounds. I am sure that there are many in our community who are encouraged to know that doctors will now be able to provide this new treatment option to their patients, granting hope where this time last week there was nothing but frustration and confusion. These patients will now have a chance to experience these qualities and start a new chapter in their treatment of this condition with the expectation of respite from its distressing effects. This relief will likewise extend itself to the families of these individuals, while doctors themselves will benefit from clarification of an issue that was creating uncertainty in respect of the legal implications of prescribing this medicine.

Both the recent Viewpoint debate on the issue and the ensuing discussions revealed a public demand for access to this medication, and having passionately pursued the cause on behalf of patients, families and medical professionals, I commend the Government for making a decision that will benefit some of the most vulnerable members of our community.

2145

As pleased as I am, however, I am of the view that the Government's stance does not go far enough in offering both patients and doctors a more exhaustive range of cannabis-derived options that present similar treatment benefits to Sativex, for there are members of our community, Mr Speaker, whose quality of life is being significantly let down by the frail trappings of the human body. These individuals all do the right and natural thing and seek help, a help that in other situations would be gladly made available. In these cases, however, and in respect of medicinal cannabis, this help is being denied to them. It is not being denied by medical science, it is not being denied by the will of the doctors; it is being denied, I am ashamed to say, by us, and by denying this help we are failing in our duty to keep improving the quality of life of the people we have been elected to serve.

2155 When one is in pain one will do anything to eliminate it. This desperation turns one into researching alternative options, to consulting medical professionals further afield and to pinning one's hopes on a solution that might hold the key to relief. When these hopes are dashed, however, that pain is felt all the more acutely. But in some cases nature itself holds the key. Medical science has shown that cannabinoids can provide that solution and what is preventing 2160 possible treatment is an illogical restriction that does nothing but prolong misery and force patients into accepting a pain that could be alleviated by the measures described in this motion.

Western society's historical misunderstanding of this issue, one which ignores the long-chronicled use of cannabis for medicinal purposes in other ancient civilisations, has meant that the matter was always going to be a controversial one, but this has only forced the science to be 2165 more robust in proving its efficiency.

From Imperial College to Harvard, academics across the planet are increasingly united in the consensus that cannabinoids offer pain-relieving qualities that could benefit patients suffering from a wide range of conditions. Fifteen countries have now followed this lead and the move is steadily spreading across many states and legislations in the US.

2170 The UK currently has its own ongoing inquiry into the benefits of medicinal cannabis with cross-bench peer, Lady Meacher, who chairs the group, having said, and I quote:

The findings of our inquiry and review of evidence from across the world are clear. Cannabis works as a medicine for a number of medical conditions. The evidence has been strong enough to persuade a growing number of countries and US states to legalise access to medical cannabis.

Against this background, the UK scheduling of cannabis as a substance that has no medical value is irrational.

This view is strengthened by the substantial scientific research that has concluded overwhelmingly in favour of such an assessment. I refer my parliamentary colleagues, for example, to the in-depth investigation into therapeutic potential of cannabis-related drugs by 2175 Stephen P H Alexander from University of Nottingham Medical School, which opens with the premise that there is considerable potential for therapeutic benefit to be had from plant-derived drugs and related agents which exploit the system linked to the best understood effects of cannabis-derived drugs. Alexander goes on to highlight the encouraging results being shown in trials exploring treatment for pain, nausea and vomiting, feeding disorders, glaucoma, neuro 2180 degeneration, multiple sclerosis, schizophrenia, cancer, epilepsy, and stress and anxiety. This is but only one of the many detailed academic studies I have come across in my research and I would be more than happy to provide further information to direct the House to similar examples.

Much of this research refers specifically to the experience of patients, many of whom have expressed the firm opinion that cannabis has helped to treat the symptoms of a broad spectrum 2185 of conditions. By means of example I refer the House to the poignant Millie's Story, a National Geographic documentary that reports how a baby girl's quality of life was dramatically improved by cannabis oil when all other options had seemingly been exhausted. There are numerous other such examples, with both scientific and anecdotal context, which clearly indicate that 2190 these products work.

As a result, Mr Speaker, the call from doctors and medical professionals in support of this measure is getting progressively louder as scientists draw attention to the fact that such legislation would eliminate restrictions and enable further research with improved quality assurance over the products manufactured and obtained for the purposes of this research.

2195 Gibraltar could even find itself contributing actively to this study with our own resources and facilities used to take the science to the next step, potentially identifying even more effective ways to use a plant that offers 1,400 strains, each one with different actions and capabilities that could potentially help treat so many conditions and illnesses.

2200 Initiatives such as the University of Gibraltar and in particular its connection to the GHA's School of Medicine could very feasibly take the lead in academic and scientific research, and it is in this area where Gibraltar could once again emerge internationally as a beacon in the fields of study of these medicinal substances.

2205 While there may be some who might treat these proposals with genuine scepticism, a scepticism that maybe warranted, one must at the same time remember that there are many medical advancements which were initially dismissed by sceptics but which we now take for granted: vaccinations, incubators, antiseptic hand washing, even the whole idea of germs causing disease in the first place. Years from now the use of cannabis and its derived medications will likewise be taken for granted and future generations will wonder what took us so long – because yes, Mr Speaker, scepticism is healthy but denial is not.

2210 These arguments are already having an impact on public opinion. A recent poll indicates that 85% of Gibraltarians support the medicinal use of cannabinoids, a measure of both the robustness of the medical science and of our community's capability to empathise. There is a growing feeling that politicians should not be telling others how to deal with pain, that this is for doctors, for scientists and for patients, and the majority are giving the same message. These patients need to see that Parliament is not turning its back on their suffering and these doctors need to feel empowered by being provided with the expert training so that, if necessary, they can prescribe these medicines without the fear, or at least the uncertainty, of prosecution.

2215 My motion, Mr Speaker, aims to address this demand while providing broader treatment options for patients and doctors alike.

2220 It notes that the right to receive medical treatment is enshrined by the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights, showing that we as a Parliament have a responsibility towards helping those in pain.

2225 It recognises the overwhelming consensus among the international medical community concerning the medicinal qualities of other cannabis-derived products, while also drawing attention to the fact that opiates are already being prescribed by the GHA in the form of, for example, diazepam, diamorphine and now Sativex, the licensed G W Pharma drug.

2230 The motion calls for a comprehensive programme that will allow patients tightly regulated access to different medicines derived from the cannabis plant, some of which have been proved to be more effective than Sativex itself. The programme could see the cannabis plant either imported or cultivated locally in a controlled artificial environment in order to dispense a range of products outside pharmaceutical regulations, as is the case in most of the jurisdictions which have legalised the use of the plant for medicinal purposes. This system recognises the unique and complex qualities of the cannabis plant – an organism which unlike, for example, the regularly used diamorphine, is entirely non-toxic – while also acknowledging problems regarding quality assurance and production. This is a process that has proved effective in many countries, with the full potential of the plant being exploited for the benefit of patients beyond the use of only one medicine.

2240 The motion also appeals for a relevant legislative framework that will enable medical professionals within the GHA to prescribe these medicines and be given suitable training to understand their benefits and their proper use, particularly through an educational summit where these professionals could learn about these medicines and their benefits, as well as a comprehensive patient-centric programme that will help change the culture of a more traditional system of conventional medication. This would create a productive and trusting relationship between doctor and patient that prizes the wellbeing of the latter.

2245 But let us make one thing clear, Mr Speaker: this motion is not about the decriminalisation or legalisation for recreational use, nor should it be confused with a step in that direction, for that is a very different argument, one with much wider-ranging implications. Instead, this is about the provision of medication through tightly regulated and controlled procedures led primarily by health professionals. Similarly, it is not about the recreational use of other narcotics and neither side of that debate should confuse nor conflate this Parliament's intentions. This is simply about reducing pain and these are noble intentions which should not be exploited in favour of a more complex and entirely different agenda.

2255 Mr Speaker, common sense tells us to do this, medical science tells us to do this, health professionals are telling us to do this, public opinion tells us to do this, human empathy tells us to do this; so I have to ask why aren't we doing this, because when science says yes, when doctors say yes and when the call from patients and public opinion is a resounding yes, then who are we to say no?

Mr Speaker, let us end this pain and let us vote in favour of this motion and bring hope and relief to where there is currently neither.

2260 Thank you.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the motion in the terms moved by the hon. Lady.
Does anyone ...? The Hon. Neil Clinton. (Laughter)

2265 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, if you are referring to Bill Clinton, the former President of the United States, I have no problem being called Mr Clinton, but otherwise I prefer to be called Mr Costa.

2270 Mr Speaker: I would rather have been able to refer to Hilary Clinton! (Laughter) But anyhow, same surname, the Minister for Health in Gibraltar at the moment.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place I would like to thank the Hon. Member, Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon for bringing the motion, although the motion as drafted is not one that the Government can support.

2275 It does bring to the fore an important issue which, in my view, is worthy of debate in the Parliament. It is also one on which the Government has already moved.

2280 On the premise that I have taken expert advice from professionals within the Gibraltar Health Authority and the Director of Public Health, I will move an alternative motion. The hon. Member will see, I hope, that the Government's motion goes some way towards effecting what she proposes in a manner which the local experts in the field are comfortable with and which reflects the changes in legislation which were made last week.

2285 By way of background, I am informed by expert medical professionals that although throughout history a vast range of therapeutic benefits have been claimed for the use of cannabis, very few of these claims are presently backed by evidence of efficacy and of safety. The reasons for there not being sufficient evidence to substantiate all of the claims vary and it is not helped by the fact that cannabis is not one product but a mixture of a very large number of active compounds in varying quantities. For example, the supposed therapeutic benefit of cannabis as an analgesic has been claimed for centuries and tinctures of cannabis once used to be common but were removed from pharmacopoeias a few decades ago on grounds of erratic function and poor safety.

2290 There is anecdotal evidence that cannabis does help with chronic pain, muscle spasms, improving sleep and improving ticks in persons with Tourette's syndrome. There are, unfortunately, few long-term trials testifying to the safety of the product and there are no licence preparations yet for many of these indications. Hon. Members may agree with me that 2295 unlicensed and unregulated products should not be prescribed by clinicians and that the safety of the patient must be paramount. As Members are well aware, licensing is the primary means of regulation. A cannabinoid product is given a licence within a country for lawful use in tightly restricted circumstances. There are some examples of medicines being used by doctors for treating conditions outside of the licence but these practices are on the basis of expert medical 2300 opinion and supported by august bodies such as the Royal Colleges. The overwhelming view presently is that cannabinoid preparations should not be used for any purpose that is not explicitly licensed.

As such, Mr Speaker, I point out to the hon. Lady that it is not technically correct to suggest that the international medical community has proven that cannabis flower and oil can be used for medicinal purposes. It would be fairer to say that, except in a limited number of cases, the jury is still out. The only product licenced and included for use in the British National Formulary for prescribing is Sativex, which is a proprietary extract of cannabis that is licensed for treatment of severe spasticity in multiple sclerosis. A further product, Nabilone, which has a synthetic cannabinoid licence for treating nausea and vomiting associated with cancer chemotherapy that is unresponsive to conventional antiemetic products, has been brought to by attention. I am advised that because it is synthetic it does not fall within the restrictions that Sativex fell within and that therefore no amendment was required to the law to clarify the position.

I can confirm that following the changes to the legislation there is absolutely no doubt that Sativex may be prescribed by specialist medical clinicians in appropriate circumstances. As with all cannabinoid preparations, its use will be subject to further scrutiny in clinical practice through close medical supervision and protocols that govern dosage, usage, monitoring and stopping. All these indicate that the safety of these products is not assumed lightly by the medical profession.

The motion suggests that there are a great many patients in Gibraltar who suffer from ailments which could be treated successfully with cannabis. I am afraid that the GHA has not been able to find evidence of this, both with regard to numbers of persons with the specific ailment that can be treated with these products and with regard to the specific question as to whether the treatment would be safe or without worse outcome than the current treatment regimes. As I am sure the hon. Member will agree, however, the fact that there is no evidence that there are a great many patients who may benefit from these products is not in itself a bar to allowing for the availability for prescription after careful clinical appraisal on a case by case basis, as with any other drug. I am advised that such prescriptions and use should, as I mentioned earlier, be, as in the UK, subject to strict compliance with the terms of the appropriate drug licence.

There is a further suggestion in the hon. Lady's motion that the full plant extract is more effective than Sativex, both anecdotally and clinically. It is therefore suggested that there is a requirement for a comprehensive cannabis programme in Gibraltar. Again, this may seem like a logical step. According to information provided to me by the medical professionals, at this point in time such a programme is seen by them as being speculative and not yet supported by the licensing process.

Much as I would like nothing better than for clinical trials to have proven the beneficial effects of cannabis products for a whole series of different ailments, I believe we should follow expert professional advice at this time. As the hon. Member is aware, however, I am fully committed to have further research into this issue undertaken by the relevant GHA professionals, and my view, as well as the Government's view, may well evolve on that basis.

This research will of course look at the experiences that other jurisdictions have had with respect to the use of cannabis products for medicinal purposes. We will need to look, for example, at the situation in Canada, where cannabis is legal for medicinal purposes and a new law is due to be introduced this spring which goes further. In the United States there is a wide range of different laws on a state-by-state basis from legalisation to decriminalisation, to legal non-psychoactive medical cannabis to legal medical cannabis of all types, to full cannabis prohibition, and this of course not even touching on the point that in the US at the federal level cannabis remains a prohibited substance classified by the Drug Enforcement Agency a drug with a high potential of abuse and no accepted medical value.

All this needs to be looked at properly in good time by medical professionals and this should not be something that Parliament should rush into. It is right that this need for careful research does not delay the need and did not delay the need for clarity over the prescription of Sativex, but we need to ensure that any further changes are the result of clinical advice, proper consideration and full clinical trials. As a result, the current position would be kept under review 2355 by the Director of Public Health and GHA clinicians and may in the future change if the Government is satisfied that there are good medical grounds and other good reasons to do so.

2360 Mr Speaker, at the beginning of my speech I indicated that I would move an amending motion. My amending motion, written notice of which I will now circulate to this House, will read as follows. It will remove Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon's motion after the words 'This House' and will be replaced and substituted by the motion that is currently being circulated and reads as follows:

THIS HOUSE:

NOTES the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the United Nations in 1948 which considers the right of people to receive medical treatment;

NOTES that the certain medicinal products contained in cannabis and its derivatives have been licensed by the European Medicines Agency and appear in the British National Formulary.

NOTES that the Government will be guided by the Statutory Drugs Advisory Council and the medical professionals therein.

NOTES that there may be patients in Gibraltar who suffer from conditions which could be treated using such products and that these should be made available for prescription by the appropriate specialist medical professionals in Gibraltar, in accordance with the licence conditions each product is subject to;

NOTES that the Government has published regulations to allow for this to be undertaken;

AND THEREFORE RESOLVES that the Government be commended for its actions in resolving this matter immediately and for its undertaking further research into the subject.

2365 Mr Speaker: The guidance for hon. Members now ... The advice that I would give them with this amendment before them is to forget everything about the original motion, consider this motion as if it were the one that they had found on the Agenda, and therefore speak to this motion.

I think that perhaps I ought to add for the record I think the hon. mover did say that it amends by the deletion of every word after 'This House' and the substitution thereof of this one. I think he did say that, didn't he? (A Member: Yes.) Very well.

2370 Does any hon. Member wish to speak on the amendment before the House? The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, we on this side of the House will in part support the Minister in respect of his amended motion.

2375 We would also add that some reference should be given quite properly to the preamble and the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs 1961, which would be the proper reference, in addition to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which deals with the benefits to healthcare of cannabinoid derivatives.

2380 Just to address a number of the things that the Minister talked about in relation to his response to the hon. Lady's motion, it is quite clear that there are cannabinoid derivatives that alleviate the pain and suffering of a number of ailments, and particularly Sativex was licensed in the United Kingdom to deal with spasticity in cases of multiple sclerosis. Therefore it is right that that should be limited to those particular uses in relation to MS.

2385 What I would say, though – and I agree with the Minister – is that we should not have a free-for-all in relation to the prescription of cannabis and cannabinoid derivatives. There has been some debate as to the difference, but I think we should really clearly be looking at expert-led views in relation to the use of cannabinoid derivatives in other ailments, concerning glaucoma for example, epilepsy and other ailments that people in our community suffer from.

It is right, clearly, that cannabinoid derivatives can clearly assist with the pain and suffering of a number of ailments, but we have to be careful and I agree that this amended motion should 2390 limit that and give the Government the opportunity to explore how cannabinoids can be used in other ailments as well.

What I would say, though, is that – one comment, and I do not say this negatively – it is quite clear from the Viewpoint that the Hon. Minister was on with me and Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon in relation to the concern of the medical practitioners in our Health Authority, they were quite clearly concerned that they were breaching and breaking the law insofar as the Crimes Act is concerned, and I think it is right that the Government has now moved a Bill to be presented to this House in relation to (Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Regulations.) regulations – apologies –in relation to the amendment of the law to allow for Sativex to be used in these limited circumstances. (Interjection) The comment I would have is not to be negative about it, but I am quite glad the Government has now sought fit to make those regulations to give those doctors the certainty that surrounds the prescribing of these important drugs in relation to particular ailments.

2400 It is right, of course, that people in this community will want to see cannabinoids prescribed more readily, but I think it is right that the Government is careful about how this is done, that it is done slowly, that it is done with expert opinion, and we would welcome the amendment to this motion.

Mr Speaker: There is a small typographical error in the second paragraph, the word ‘the’ is unnecessary. It says here ‘Notes that the certain medicinal products’’: ‘Notes that certain’. That is a typographical error which I should point out.

2410 As far as the hon. Lady is concerned, may I explain to her that she can speak now on the amendment, expressing her attitude and her views about it. Having done that, if the amendment is then carried, that then becomes a motion before the House and she then has a right to reply. The likelihood is that in that right to reply she may not have anything to say, or she may wish to reply to any points that have been made in the course of the debate. What she really has is an opportunity to reply and to wind up the debate.

Does the hon. Lady wish to speak on the amendment?

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Yes.

Mr Speaker: Yes.

Hon. Ms. M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I was the only Member of this House to congratulate the Government last week when it announced its decision to allow medical professionals to prescribe Sativex to patients in desperate need of it. I was encouraged to see such a positive response to the plight of these patients, to the issues raised in the GBC Viewpoint debate and to the call from doctors and public opinion to make this medicine available. At the time, I described not only the impact this move would have on patients but also the way in which it would clarify matters for doctors in terms of their legal standing; furthermore, the decision would erase the inconsistencies of the current system where some patients were receiving a treatment that was being denied to others.

2425 If the Government was therefore seeking congratulations, as indicated in their amendment, it already received it from me, but it is my view that, as reassuring as it was to see the Government embrace the health benefits of cannabis-derived compounds, it is disappointing to not see them show a fuller commitment to offering these benefits on a wider scale. Approving one medicine for one condition is hardly an example of a Government taking a dynamic lead on this issue. These restrictions both ignore the significant scientific research, which overwhelmingly leads in favour of recognising the health and therapeutic benefits of cannabinoids, and limits the release that could be afforded to Gibraltar’s patients. It dismisses the views of many scientists, rejects the experiences of patients, disregards the opinions of doctors and flies in the face of public opinion. Additionally, it places politicians firmly in the spotlight of a field in which we should only play bit parts facilitating the views of experts. I am saddened to see that this expert voice is being discounted.

2445 In my introduction to this motion I outlined the many arguments in favour of it. These arguments were not born out of an indulgence; they developed through careful research into the scientific literature available, through conversations with specialists in the field and through communications with patients and their families. All this developed in me an appreciation of the qualities of these products in relieving pain and a number of other symptoms associated with a wide range of conditions. They helped me to understand the advances that other countries have 2450 made by embracing these qualities and they have enabled me to comprehend that we can exercise our own jurisdictional powers to license a cannabis facility as well as a pharmacy to dispense the various extractions and preparations.

I have seen how many countries have given the cannabis plant a special status in respect of its unique qualities, operating outside of conventional pharmaceutical regulation and allowing 2455 for cultivation and research that has led to beneficial and harmless medical products.

It has been pointed out to me that cannabis does not fall comfortably within the pharmaceutical industry's conventional standards due to its particular non-toxic chemistry, with many jurisdictions making allowances for this by permitting medical research and production within a properly regulated environment.

2460 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman the Minister for Health mentioned Canada. In Canada, 35 producers of medical cannabis have been licensed as per September 2016. All licensed producers are subject to inspection by Health Canada to verify compliance with the requirements of Marijuana for Medical Purposes Regulations, the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act (CDSA) and its regulations, as well as the Food and Drugs Act (FDA) and its 2465 regulations. This also includes meeting the requirements of Good Production Practices (GPP), which include standards for microbiological and chemical contamination, testing for cannabinoid content, which pest control products are permitted and maximum residues of such products.

Furthermore, in Israel cannabis for medical use has been permitted since the early 1990s for cancer patients and those with pain-related illnesses such as Parkinson's, multiple sclerosis, 2470 Crohn's disease, other chronic pain and post-traumatic stress disorder. The numbers of patients authorised to use medicinal cannabis in Israel exceeds 10,000. There are eight government-sanctioned cannabis-growing operations in Israel, which distribute it for medical purposes to patients who have a prescription from a doctor via either a company store or in a medical centre.

2475 So you see, Mr Speaker, there is no reason why Gibraltar could not actively contribute to this field of research, to take the science further and identify more ways in which these compounds could help our local citizens as well as people across the world. These are all compelling arguments which have made me steadfast in my conviction to this cause.

But the most powerful argument I came across in favour of my proposals was the empathic 2480 one. There are people who are in pain. Nature offers them an opportunity to find solace from this. It can boost their motivation and their feeling of self-worth; it brings hope to mornings of desperation and nights of despair. It allows these individuals to temporarily forget that they have been afflicted by one of life's awful complaints and functions as one of us. It can literally change lives, and yet we are denying this to them.

2485 Mr Speaker, tomorrow, next week or even next month we will all come back to this House and debate something else, but these people will still be in pain and that is not something that we should be commending.

Thank you. (Banging on desk)

2490 Mr Speaker: Any other contributor to the amendment? Does the hon. mover wish to reply?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I think that the hon. Lady is a tad ungenerous to me at the end, or in conclusion of her contribution in respect of the amended motion. We are not in any way

2495 seeking to deny anybody anything; quite the contrary. If she had heard my speech she would have heard me say that I would have liked nothing better than for there to be validated clinical evidence that actually showed that the products that she mentions could in fact alleviate the many ailments that the Hon. Mr Phillips and the hon. Lady have mentioned. So it is not that we are seeking to deny; quite the contrary. We have told her that we are actively looking into the matter.

2500 Mr Speaker, I appreciate, I do, that the hon. Lady wants to go further in respect of this motion and I can see why she does, but in the absence of clear clinical evidence that is validated through the rigorous clinical procedural trials, the Director of Public Health, GHA clinicians, the Advisory Council that advises the GHA have told us in no uncertain terms that unfortunately the evidence currently is conflictive. In other words there is a body of opinion that says that it is beneficial and yet there is a counter body of opinion that says it is not beneficial. Therefore, Mr Speaker, in the light of that, it is not at this point, as I said, presently safe for doctors, who swore 2505 an oath to do no harm first and foremost, to prescribe a medicine that could unfortunately and in fact do more harm than good. And I repeat the point that if the clinical trials demonstrated that they were beneficial, we on these benches would be the first ones to introduce a regime that enabled our clinicians to be able to prescribe those medicines.

Therefore, Mr Speaker, as I said, I think that the hon. Lady is being unfair with me today by saying that by relying on the clinical advice I am in any way dismissing the opinions of experts and the views of patients. Quite the contrary, it is because I am relying on the Advisory Council that has clinical persons, part of that council, advising the GHA, and it is precisely on the basis of that advice that I stand in this House today to say that unfortunately the clinical evidence is not clear.
2515

Having said that, and hoping that I have clarified the position to the hon. Lady in my reply, let me also tell her that she herself in her reply to the amended motion accepts that the regime in Canada is very fresh. She reminds the House, rightly, that the system is of September 2016 – in other words only in the last quarter of last year. This is therefore an extremely novel regime in terms of monitoring, of investigation, of regulations. And of course this is in a country which I think has over 35 million people with the budget for research and development, clinical trials and all the work that goes into proving whether a product is or is not safe and the many years it takes for clinical trials to prove one way or another whether a product is safe. And even then the House will know that many products that have been licensed to be prescribed by doctors some years later are yanked off the shelves because in fact what was proven through medical trials to have been beneficial due to further research is shown not to be.

This is why I said in my opening contribution that we are not saying that the debate is over, we are not saying that the research is over, we are not saying that the investigation is done. What we are saying is that we cannot rush into it when the evidence is conflictive and when the experience of other jurisdictions to which the hon. Lady alludes to and to which I have alluded to in my contribution – which is Canada – have only just recently introduced this new regime, which of course as a result will take some time to determine whether or not it is delivering the benefits, which in fact I very much hope the cannabinoid products do deliver, to the patients who are prescribed these products.
2530

Mr Speaker: I now put the amendment moved by the Hon. Minister to the vote. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Unanimously carried.

2540 This now becomes the motion before the House and anyone who has not spoken to the original motion may do so.

The Hon. Samantha Sacramento.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, this debate on the amended motion is very simple indeed. Before I break it down into the medical aspect let me set the whole matter into context, please, because the Government in this regard – and not only in this regard but on classification of drugs as a whole – is advised by the Drugs Advisory Council. The Drugs Advisory Council is a statutory committee which has, among other things, the responsibility of advising the Government on one of the matters which is to restrict the availability of drugs. This is a committee which I chair, but among others there are medical professionals on this committee, and that of course includes the Director of Public Health. So, on issues such as this, when the Council is considering these issues we will of course turn to the Director of Public Health for his advice and his guidance as a medical expert in this field.

Anecdotally, as a result of the last meeting of the Drugs Advisory Council, where a particular issue was raised we immediately dealt with it as a result of what was raised at that meeting and very promptly thereafter the law was changed immediately by way of regulations – and not a Bill, as the hon. Gentleman opposite mentioned earlier. I only say that for point of clarification, Mr Speaker, just to make the point that those regulations are already in force.

Mr Speaker, the debate, to put it simply, relates to what we are talking about, because we cannot use terms such as cannabis, cannabinols, and cannabis derivatives interchangeably, because they are completely different. And that goes to the root of it, because it depends on the regulation of the substance. The regulation is important because if a product is licensed, then there will be inherent safeguards. If doctors are to be prescribing something, they need to be clear on what it is that they are prescribing. And there is a difference between something that is licensed and is not licensed, because something that is licensed will have a very strict and stringent procedure that follows. If something is not licensed, it is usually because there is good reason for it, and as we have just heard from my hon. Friend Minister Costa, there is not overwhelming evidence in favour of the use of unlicensed cannabis derivatives. There is no scientific proof and that is why it is not something that is under consideration.

We have heard that medical professionals are crying out for this. That is not the case. What we do, in terms of the medical professionals, is turn to products that are licensed. No one in the medical profession is asking the Government for us to provide a framework for products that are not licensed, Mr Speaker.

We are accused of lacking empathy. Of course we find empathy with people who find themselves going through very difficult circumstances indeed. No one wants to find themselves in a position where they are suffering. But that is not the same. That is not to say that we are not being responsible, because in the situation where clear clinical medical evidence as to the safety of the use of a product does not exist, one cannot ask those making the decisions to empathise with the individual. What society would expect would be for the Government to take the responsible approach, defer to the clinical medical expert evidence and rely on the advice that is given. In Gibraltar, as I said, we do that through the Drugs Advisory Council, and nothing further has been recommended, Mr Speaker.

To conclude, the position in relation to the prescription of drugs as it stands is very clear and it is absolutely expert led. There is no question about the advice coming from politicians. The way that it works is that the experts advise the Government through the Drugs Advisory Council, which will then in turn refer the matter either to individual Government Departments or other Ministers, and that is a position that is clear. It has safeguards that need to be in place and is a position that works. It is not a question of whether the Government is being progressive or not, and it is not a question as to whether we should be looking at cultivating cannabis in Gibraltar for it to be distributed. It is looking at products that are licensed, because these come with safeguards; and then, in the prescription of these products it is the doctors who decide who they should be prescribed to. There is absolutely no question of Ministers deciding this and the doctors will decide this on a case-by-case basis depending on the individual's condition, symptoms and whether these are relevant, proper and appropriate in the circumstances. But that, of course, is a clinical and medical a decision, Mr Speaker. It is not that the Government is denying cures or hope in any case; it is absolutely that the Government is being 100% responsible in the way that it deals with this matter based on the clinical evidence that is available to us.

Thank you. (Banging on desks)

2600 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

2605 From the official Opposition we welcome the Government's cautious approach to what is a very sensitive subject and we agree that the pros and cons need to be examined scientifically and the correct balance achieved. Certainly by looking at products that are licensed and are in the British National Formulary that is obviously the correct way to go in respect of safety for patients, which must always be paramount. So, on this side of the House in the official 2610 Opposition we do not have too much problem with supporting the amended motion, which hopefully the Minister will be happy with. This is a subject which goes beyond any kind of partisan discussion and it is about the safety of patients first and foremost.

All I would ask is for any of the Members opposite to perhaps clarify what it is that they mean by further research into the subject. Would they envisage setting up a commission or some sort of select committee to look into the question? But, as I say, on the overall substance of the motion the official Opposition does not have a problem with it.

2615 Thank you.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Dr John Cortes.

2620 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, in my time as Minister for Health I did considerable work on this. I have virtually nothing to add to what my two colleagues, the Hon. Neil Costa and the Hon. Samantha Sacramento, have said in relation to that, except of course that the cannabis derivatives that we are talking about have to be properly licensed and we tend to follow the British National Formulary. We do not have in Gibraltar the wide range of expertise for us to decide what 2625 products should and should not be licensed.

However, just to make it clear that the Government has looked at ... precisely because it cares and because it does care about people in pain, and during my time as Minister for Health in fact I asked one of our senior clinicians, currently the Deputy Medical Director, to engage with the Government of British Columbia, where there is more leeway for cannabis derivative use, to see whether there was anything that they had learnt or done which would convince us that we should do anything further. Sadly, there was no evidence that goes against what my colleagues have said.

I think, though, that I must answer one particular point that the hon. Lady has made, and this is reference to the possibility of a cannabis production and processing procedure in Gibraltar. Mr Speaker, this is not a question of growing a few plants of marijuana in a pot on a balcony and then boiling it in a saucepan in the kitchen. This would require large areas dedicated exclusively to the cultivation of marijuana, otherwise known as cannabis, and a very elaborate process which would be carried out by ... Normally it is carried out by some of these major multi-national pharmaceutical mega-companies. We simply do not and could not have the resources in 2640 Gibraltar to extract derivatives of cannabis safely, even if we could grow enough of the plants, and then have the proper quality controls, the proper regulation of the whole process, licensing of the processes and so on. It is simply not possible without setting up a major industry, for which currently there are certainly no resources and I am sure the Government has many more priorities.

2645 So, Mr Speaker, I just thought I would add that, adding some of my own perhaps botanical knowledge to the debate. So therefore, those would not be realistic in Gibraltar and clearly I will support the Government's amended motion.

Mr Speaker: Is there any other contributor before I call upon the hon. Lady to reply?

2650 I therefore call upon the mover to reply.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I would like to thank the House as a whole for allowing me to present the arguments in favour of my motion and for giving this important issue serious consideration.

2655 I am heartened at least by the fact that this debate has taken place and that deferring points of view have been aired in an atmosphere of respect and that democracy has been exercised. Parliament should always set an example when engaging with issues of public interest and concern, and in this case, as always, I feel like we have delivered.

2660 It is never easy to be defeated in a parliamentary procedure – even though I am getting used to it – no matter how used one might think one is to it, but I am of the firm belief that there is no indignity in defeat when one has argued with passion, commitment and conviction. Where the defeat does hurt, however, is in the thought of the patients who will not be able to benefit from what the original motion proposed, of the doctors whose ability to do what they feel is best for these patients is being restricted and of the families whose search for hope will continue. This 2665 Parliament has already developed a proud record of standing up for the little guy. In this case, however, I feel the little guy can be forgiven for feeling a little bit let down.

The hon. Gentleman, the Minister for Health, talked about clinical trials and real evidence, so I urge him to think about the 15 countries, many who are at the cutting edge of medical science, who have already taken this path and helped hundreds of thousands of patients. Is this House 2670 saying that these countries have no bearing on the good research undertaken to bring to our community?

If I may, Mr Speaker, I must say I take offence to Minister Cortes's rickety visual of a flawed suggestion of growing cannabis in a kitchen pot. This is a serious issue which, with the right mindset, could be looked at seriously.

2675 Mr Speaker: If the hon. Lady will sit a moment, I do not think that the Minister dealt with it other than seriously. I do not think it was a joke, I do not think it was a snide comment; I think it was a considered serious point that he made, so I would ask her to withdraw any implication that the Minister had not been serious on the matter.

2680 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I have no doubt that the Minister was being serious, but what I am trying to say that in his visual he undermined my own seriousness at what I was trying to express.

2685 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: That was not my intention.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I accept that.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: It was not my intention at all.

2690 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Because of course I would never have thought about growing cannabis in a kitchen sink in a little pot, obviously. There is a very internationally well-known process on how to do this, which 15 countries have already taken the lead on.

2695 But anyway, if I may continue, I suggest at this stage that perhaps the Government of Gibraltar bring experts to Gibraltar to talk about the benefits of medical cannabis. When talking about conflicting evidence I remind the Minister that this is medicine, and medicine is not an exact science. Some medicine does work for some people, some medicines work for others; this is why we have such a huge variety of medicinal products behind the pharmacy shelves. But let's not forget that cannabis, unlike many other medicinal drugs that are freely available, is non-2700 toxic, meaning that there should be no reason or danger to take this debate further and offer our community the possibility of widening the spectrum to eventually regulate for ourselves within our own jurisdiction or framework this medicinal plant.

2705 So, despite the arguments that have been presented during the course of this debate I remain convinced that in the not-too-distant future the cannabis-derived compounds we have been discussing will form an established part of conventional medical practice, as is the case with other opiate-based medications. I am confident that the science will continue to support the emerging conclusions and that the stigma that has been attached to the plant's value as a medical tool will be confined to the past, and I look forward to the day when these qualities will be made available to those in need of them and to a time when people will wonder what the 2710 fuss was all about.

In the meantime, however, my sympathies lie squarely with those who will suffer until we see this day. It is for them that we have had this debate and it is to them whom we must explain why we have reached these conclusions. I wish them the very best with their treatment.

2715 Mr Speaker: I now put the question in the terms of the motion proposed by the hon. Lady and amended by the Hon. Minister. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried. Are the Opposition voting in favour? Carried unanimously.

ADJOURNMENT

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): So, Mr Speaker, dogs, kitchen sinks and pharmacists perhaps meaning something different when they say 'Would you like a little something for the 2720 weekend, sir?' What a session!

I now move that the House do now adjourn sine die.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question, which is that the House do now adjourn sine die.

2725 I now put the question, which is that the House do now adjourn sine die. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

The House adjourned at 2.38 p.m.

Estimates of Expenditure

15 Mr Speaker: As hon. Members are aware, it is a requirement under section 69 of the Constitution that the Estimates of Expenditure for the next financial year should be tabled in the House before 30th April. Since the House is not due to meet next month, I am proposing that the provisions of the Constitution will be deemed to have been met if the Estimates are circulated to all hon. Members before the end of April. This is what I have been doing for the last few years and so I propose that it should be the case again for this year. Is that agreed?

Members: Aye.

Statement by the Speaker

20 Mr Speaker: There is another matter that I wish to refer to. In last Friday's edition of the Gibraltar Chronicle it is reported that, when asked how he had found his first year as an MP, the Hon. Mr Clinton said, and I quote:

There is no manual that you get given, or even an induction course into Parliament. You get shown your seat and you get shown your microphone, but that's about it.

Now, while it is true that there is no induction course as such for newly elected Members, it is not the case that the only guidance and assistance that the new cohort of Members who were elected in November 2015 received was just as described by the hon. Member.

25 Hon. Members will understand that it is incumbent upon me that I should set the record straight.

At the ceremonial Opening of Parliament on 9th December 2015 I assured new Members that they would always find me, the Clerk and the staff at their disposal in order to help them in the exercise of their important duties. Most of them, if not all, in fact, took up this offer prior to the first working meeting of Parliament in January 2016. To that end the Clerk and I, and the staff, met with them and explained to them not just the procedures of parliamentary meetings but also the technical arrangements for the broadcasting of proceedings. Later, once they had received the draft Estimates of Expenditure at the end of March 2016, we held other separate meetings with them at which we explained the salient aspects of that special meeting, which is the Budget session of Parliament.

35 Since elected, the Hon. Mr Clinton in particular has had a number of meetings with the Clerk and myself at which we have given him every possible assistance which he has requested, including more recently the procedures for the introduction of Private Members' Bills and Petitions to Parliament.

40 In the absence of any clarification from the hon. Member since his remarks were published last Friday, I feel compelled to draw attention to what I consider to be unfair, implied criticism of the Clerk of Parliament, the staff and myself.

45 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, for the record, as you know, I did meet with yourself and the Clerk at 10.30 this morning to try and understand what your issue was with the Chronicle article last Friday. It is, however, regrettable that we could not see eye to eye on it and you have made the statement you have. I stand by all I said in the Chronicle article and it is regrettable that you have seen fit to make the statement you have.

50 Having said that, may I ask the Speaker if he has had time to consider the contents of my letter of 24th February in relation to the application of Standing Order 45(12)?

55 Mr Speaker: No, you will do no such thing. We are going to proceed ... You have had an opportunity, having heard my communication from the Chair. We are going to move on to the next item, if you wish to take up any other matter with me, you can write to me about it.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, with respect I did ask you in my letter to actually make reference to it in directions from the Chair, and if I gather from what you are saying is that you have chosen not to do so.

60 Mr Speaker: It is not that I ... You are referring to a matter which has got nothing to do with this, and therefore this is not the appropriate time at which to raise it. The matter that you are referring to is not connected with the Communication from the Chair, with the statement that I have felt compelled to make. It has got nothing to do with it.

65 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker. Well, frankly, your earlier statement I think had nothing to do with the proceedings of Parliament. (Interjections)
I have actually written to you –

Mr Speaker: Will the hon. Member sit down.
70 It has a lot to do not just with the proceedings of Parliament but with the manner in which Members of Parliament conduct themselves – not just within Parliament but outside.
I would commend to the hon. Member that he reads through the Parliament Act, in particular references to criticism of the Speaker where that is not justified.
Now, if he wishes to continue to contest the matter I will allow him, but ultimately he knows 75 what the rules are and ultimately what I say remains said. It is on the record and that is all there is to it.

I have given the hon. Member an opportunity. He met me this morning and he remains intransigent. So be it. I have had my say and that goes on the record because there are aspects that he needs to understand: respect for the Speaker, respect for the institution that is 80 Parliament and the people who work here for him and for all the other Members.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank you.
I refer back to my letter of 24th February and I would be grateful if you would give an indication whether you would give some kind of statement as regards the content of my letter – 85 or is it that you are choosing to ignore it completely?

Mr Speaker: I may or I may not, because I have considered the Hansard of the meeting and before the matter reached the stage which it reached in respect of the acrimony involving Mr Llamas, I made a statement ... If you would care to go back and ... I have checked with the 90 Hansard and I know that what I was saying amounted to a defence of Mr Llamas because I explained that it was not easy for Members to arrange their affairs when Parliament meets unexpectedly, and that is the position in which Mr Llamas had found himself and indeed other Members. So I had already defended his position, safeguarded his position, and I said that nothing more should be said about the question of Members being absent.

95 There are Members absent here this afternoon: so what? There is only one person really that needs to be here, apart from a quorum, and that is me. I have no deputy, I am always here and it would be very difficult, the way that things are in Parliament, for any of the other 17 to sit here and keep matters under reasonable control.

I will allow the hon. Member one last opportunity to speak and then we are going to move on 100 to the next item.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker, but in your view, Standing Order 45(12), does it or does it not prohibit the ... If I use the words:

The conduct of ... members of Parliament ... shall not be raised ...

105 Full stop.

Mr Speaker: Yes, the conduct. I do not consider that what Mr Llamas did amounted to conduct. If anybody from the Government criticised him in respect of his conduct, that is not conduct. Conduct is a habitual behaviour. Conduct has to do with a way of life. An incident in which an hon. Member is absent for one meeting, possibly for very good reasons, does not 110 amount to the conduct of a Member. Therefore, if the Chief Minister or anybody else criticised him in that respect, in my view he was not criticising his conduct, he was criticising the fact that he had not been here for a particular meeting of Parliament. That is all I am going to say.

Clerk, will you please now call the next item: Petitions.

115 Clerk: (iv) Petitions; (v) Announcements; (vi) Papers to be laid; (vii) Report of Committees.

Suspension of Standing Order 7(1)
to proceed with Government Bills

Clerk: Suspension of Standing Orders. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move, under Standing Order 7(3), to suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with Government Bills.

120

Mr Speaker: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Governor's Emergency Powers Bill 2017 –
First Reading approved

125

Clerk: Bills: First and Second Reading.

A Bill for an Act to make provision for the exercise of emergency powers in accordance with section 18(2)(b) of the Constitution where a public emergency arises or is likely, and for connected purposes.

130

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the exercise of emergency powers in accordance with section 18(2)(b) of the Constitution where a public emergency arises or is likely, and for connected purposes, be read a first time.

135

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that is that for a Bill for an Act to make provision for the exercise of emergency powers in accordance with section 18(2)(b) of the Constitution where a public emergency arises or is likely, and for connected purposes, be read a first time.

140

Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Governor's Emergency Powers Act 2017.

Governor's Emergency Powers Bill 2017 –
Second Reading approved

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill for the Governor's Emergency Powers Act 2017 be now read a second time.

Mr Speaker, hon. Members will know that section 35(3) of the Constitution provides as follows:

Every bill shall be published in the Gazette, and the Parliament shall not proceed upon any bill until the expiration of six weeks after the date on which the bill was so published, unless the Chief Minister certifies by writing under his hand that consideration of the bill is too urgent to permit such a delay.

I have certified that this Bill is urgent under section 35(3) of the Constitution, Mr Speaker. I have written to you to this effect, and although I am not required by the Constitution to do so, I have also written to the Leader of the Opposition and the independent Member, Mrs Hassan Nahon, informing them of my certification of the Bill as urgent.

Mr Speaker, this Bill also engages another part of the Constitution, which requires that Parliament be alert to the manner in which it proceeds today. Section 35(2) of the 2006 Constitution, which establishes this Parliament – which is the one just above the one that allows the certification of urgency – states that:

Except with the consent of the Governor, acting in his discretion, signified by the Chief Minister, the Parliament shall not proceed upon any bill (including an amendment to any bill) that, in the opinion of the Governor, acting in his discretion, signified as aforesaid, concerns a matter for which he is responsible under section 47(1).

Mr Speaker, I have already indicated to you in writing my communication of urgency and that His Excellency the Governor, Lieutenant General Edward Davis, has given his consent, as required by section 35(2) of this Bill, to proceed through the stages in this House. I have confirmed the same to the Leader of the Opposition and Mrs Hassan Nahon, the independent Member, also.

Mr Speaker, turning now to the substance of the Bill, I must tell hon. Members that I have particular pleasure in bringing this Bill to the House because, as the House will know, the exercise by the Governor of powers in an emergency already exists. At present that power is conferred by the Emergency Powers Order 1939 as amended from time to time. In fact, that Order has been amended quite considerably. Amendments range from 1952 to 1973, and that Order in Council is of direct application in Gibraltar – in other words, a piece of UK law which has direct effect in Gibraltar. The 1939 Order has been on the statute book in the United Kingdom for a long time and its application was first specifically provided for in the 1969 Constitution. Whilst the 2006 Constitution continues to refer to the 1939 Order in Council, it also provides that in the alternative there be ‘any law enacted by the Legislature to like effect’ which would then have effect in periods of emergency. Mr Speaker, this Bill, if passed by the Parliament, will be that law, that alternative law enacted by this legislature.

In order to understand the importance of this rule and the Bill that is before the House, Mr Speaker, we should reflect that there are 11 substantive references to an emergency in the Constitution. As lawyers and constitutional scholars will know, the words ‘an emergency’ are usually used to defeat the application of fundamental rights that are protected in a constitution. One must always therefore be very careful when dealing with situations in which we would accept the application of a provision that defeats or blunts the application of the constitutional rights which form the framework of our laws. So, in these circumstances, before bringing to this Parliament a Bill, the Government would be very circumspect indeed to understand that we are not in any way creating any powers which would be potentially used to defeat fundamental constitutional rights. Those rights could be the rights of individuals in the Chapter of Fundamental Human Rights or they could equally be the rights of the home grown institutions of Gibraltar, created by or under the Constitution, which may somehow be suspended or have their powers curtailed in the relevant applicable circumstances. We on the Government side are satisfied that this Act will not curtail such individual or institutional rights in any material way for reasons that will become apparent. In other words, there is no derogation of any powers which the Government may now hold and exercise by the passing by this Parliament of the Governor’s Emergency Powers Act.

Let us also, before going any further, look at where the references in the Constitution are to the 1939 Order in Council and to emergencies generally. Principally, Mr Speaker, sections 17, 18, 45 and 78 of the Constitution contain in these references.

The original reference is in section 17(1). That is the section that provides for periods of public emergency. Section 17 (1) says this:

Nothing contained in or done under the authority of any regulation made under the Emergency Powers Order in Council 1939 or any law enacted by the Legislature ...

195 And, Mr Speaker, that means this legislature. It does not mean the UK Parliament; it means this legislature. The word 'Legislature' appears capitalised and is therefore subject to the definition of legislature in the Constitution. So:

... any law enacted by the Legislature to like effect shall be held to be inconsistent with or in contravention of section 3, section 4(2) or any provision of sections 7, 9, 10, 11 or 12, section 13(1) or (3) or section 14 to the extent that the regulation or law in question makes in relation to any period of public emergency provision, or authorises the doing during any such period of anything, to the extent strictly required by the exigencies of the situation arising or existing during that period for the purpose of dealing with that situation.

Mr Speaker, all of those sections referred to in section 17 are sections that deal with individual rights protected under the Fundamental Human Rights chapter of our Constitution.

200 Mr Speaker, section 18 sets out when an emergency is deemed to have occurred under the Constitution and I will deal with section 18 in greater detail later in my address when I am dealing with the substantive provisions of the Bill before the House.

Section 45 of our Constitution is in particular relevant when there is an election on foot in Gibraltar. In fact, Mr Speaker, it is important that we look at that section in its interplay with this Bill because that will indicate to hon. Members just how important this Bill is.

Section 45(9) of our Constitution provides that:

Upon the dissolution of the Parliament the Chief Minister and Ministers in office at the time of such dissolution shall remain in office and shall discharge their functions until new elections are held and a Chief Minister appointed in accordance with this Constitution following such elections; but such executive authority may not be exercised – may not be exercised, and this is the important parenthesis, Mr Speaker –

save in the event of public emergency (including public order or safety), to commit or bind the next successor Government of Gibraltar to public funding or liability except in the ordinary course of the day to day affairs of Gibraltar.

So, in other words, Mr Speaker, once an election is called, section 45(9) of the Constitution bites, there is still a Chief Minister, there are still Ministers, but we cannot engage spending, other than immediately required, in respect of which there might be any commitment, unless there is an emergency. And those are the types of situations that we are dealing with here.

It is important to reflect, Mr Speaker, that in such an emergency being declared the Constitution is not suspended, so neither does cabinet government cease. We are not dealing with the suspension of the Constitution and the United Kingdom taking powers – something that we saw in most recent constitutional history in the Turks and Caicos Islands; neither are we seeing the Constitution remaining but cabinet government being suspended. We are seeing a situation where there is an emergency but the Constitution is still in place and cabinet government is still active, and in that context what we are going to deal with this afternoon creates powers which are complementary to the powers of cabinet government. Indeed, the reality is that the declaration of an emergency will, in effect, in such circumstances allow the Government, through the Governor, to take extraordinary measures for the purposes set out in the Bill – and indeed there are other Acts in our statute book which are relevant, which I will come to in a moment.

215

220

Section 78(5) of the Constitution sets out that:

References in this Constitution to the Emergency Powers Order in Council 1939

225 – which is the one I am referring to the House – are references to that Order as from time to time amended and include references to any Order or other law replacing that Order in relation to Gibraltar.

It is important, Mr Speaker, that hon. Members keep that in mind.

You see, Mr Speaker, in order for this Parliament to legislate in this field, the 1939 Order in Council must cease to apply. In that regard I would draw the Parliament's attention to the Emergency Powers (Overseas Territories) Order 2017, which is Statutory Instrument 181 of this year of the United Kingdom Parliament and which comes into operation on 16th March this year – that is to say next Thursday. That Order was made on 15th February and was laid before Parliament as recently as 22nd February. It is for that reason that we have not been able to publish our own Bill, which is the localised version of that Order, that new modernised Order, until last week, although we have been doing a lot of work with UK colleagues. But of course the Order in the UK is not crystalized until laid and published.

Mr Speaker, the new Order in Council will have the effect of replacing the 1939 Order with a regime that is substantially the same in effect, albeit with some modernisation. The relevance of the 2017 Order in Council is that it will not apply to Gibraltar but only once this Bill becomes an Act and is in operation. Article 1(2)(b) of the 2017 Order in Council made in the UK a week ago provides that that Order extends to Gibraltar but only to the limited extent provided for in article 3(3) of the Order itself, and article 3(3) of the Order states this:

In relation to Gibraltar, the instruments specified in Schedule 2 that apply to Gibraltar are revoked with effect from the date that equivalent provision comes into force.

'Equivalent provision' being the reference I made earlier, Mr Speaker, that is in the Constitution – in our Constitution.

Mr Speaker, therefore what hon. Members will want to know is that this Bill, once it is an Act passed by this Parliament, will be that equivalent provision which will obviate the need for the application of the new Order in Council to Gibraltar. It is therefore the Government's intention that if the Bill is passed by the Parliament today the Act should receive Assent and be published before 16th March. In that way and observing that chronology, the 2017 Order in Council will not ever have applied to Gibraltar.

Hon. Members will know, Mr Speaker, that there is a convention since the 2006 Constitution that the United Kingdom does not extend the application of Orders in Council to Gibraltar, although it has the right to do so. The provisions of the new Emergency Powers Order in Council must nonetheless be provided for in order to ensure that there is constitutional completeness. In the circumstances, we are now providing that constitutional completeness via this home-grown Gibraltar Parliament Act. And indeed, Mr Speaker, in terms of constitutional theory, what this Act will do is ensure a closing of the circle in respect of emergency powers in a way that is entirely home grown.

To summarise all of that constitutional backdrop for hon. Members in non-legal and understandable plain English, Mr Speaker, I will put it like this. The Governor is an emanation of the Gibraltar Constitution. This Parliament is an emanation of the Gibraltar Constitution. And now, with this Act, with this Bill if it becomes an Act, the powers that the Governor would enjoy in an emergency will also be powers granted by an institution which is created by the Constitution. In every way, therefore, we are localising the grant of powers that would be operating in the context of a declaration of emergency by the Governor. We are granting the Governor those powers, Mr Speaker. The grant of powers created by the UK Order in Council – either the 1939 Order or the 2017 Order – would be obviated, as I said before, by the grant of powers by this legislature.

It is important that we put into context what I have just taken the House through and in what circumstances an emergency could be declared and what it would amount to.

Mr Speaker, section 18 of the Constitution provides for the interpretation of its provisions and with respect to emergency it defines them thus:

In this Chapter “a period of public emergency” means any period during which –

(a) Her Majesty is at war;

(b) the provisions of Part II of the Emergency Powers Order in Council 1939 are in operation in Gibraltar, or any emergency has been declared under any law enacted by the Legislature to like effect.

Declarations of war not being the subject of this Bill, Mr Speaker, clause 3(1) provides for there to be a public emergency when declared pursuant to the Act.

275 Such a declaration is made by the Governor issuing a proclamation to that effect, but a proclamation may only be made where the circumstances set out in clause 3(2) apply. That is to say an event or situation that threatens serious damage to human welfare in Gibraltar whether in whole or in part, an event or situation that threatens serious damage to the environment of Gibraltar whether in whole or in part, or an event or situation that threatens serious damage to the security of Gibraltar.

280 The power to make a Proclamation of Emergency is then set out in clause 4 and, unless a shorter period is specified or a proclamation is earlier revoked, the proclamation lapses after 30 days, although a new proclamation can be made pursuant to sub-clause (3).

Sub-clause (5) requires that any Proclamation of Emergency made under this section shall be published in the Gazette as soon as practicable after it is made.

285 Mr Speaker, I think it is important that hon. Members have in mind that the proclamation and the declaration of the emergency do not suspend the Constitution. What they do is they allow for things to be done which might otherwise be caught by certain sections of the Constitution, which are the sections I took the House through before.

290 A regulation-making power is provided for also, which is the basis for action to be taken following the issue of a proclamation of public emergency, and this power is provided for in clause 5.

Such powers are, however, to be exercised where specific conditions are met only, and those are the ones set out in clause 6, and require:

(a) that the provision is necessary for the purpose of preventing, controlling or mitigating an aspect or effect of the state of public emergency in respect of which the regulations are made;

(b) that the effect of the provision is proportionate to that aspect or effect of the state of public emergency; and

(c) that the need for the provision is urgent.

295 Hon. R M Clinton: Will the Chief Minister give way?

Hon. Chief Minister: It is very unusual to ask for way to be given in the context of this part of the speech. I think it is probably better if the hon. Gentleman raises an issue in the context of his opportunity to question me during the Second Reading.

300 Hon. D A Feetham: The reason why he is doing it is to inform his own contribution in response. That is why I have – 305 Mr Speaker: Why doesn't he let the Chief Minister finish? If the point that he wishes to have clarification of is not covered by the Chief Minister, then he can raise the matter and invite the Chief Minister there and then by giving way to reply. That is the proper conduct. I think it is not a very customary thing to ask anybody moving a Second Reading of a Bill to give way. It has never happened.

310 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it never happens, no. I have been on that side of the House –

Mr Speaker: It has never happened during the time that I have been in the Chair.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it has happened when I have been a Government Minister. I have also been a Government Minister. Mr Speaker unfortunately often forgets that, but I have 315 been a Government Minister and I have given way (Interjections) from that side of the House.

It is true, Mr Speaker, you are absolutely right, that of course it can be done the other way. And of course we will defer to Mr Speaker, but to say that it never happens – that, certainly in my own experience, is not the case.

Mr Speaker: It is very unusual for that to happen and given the memory that I have, I do recall that the hon. Member has been a Minister of the Government from 2007 to 2011. Am I correct?

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, you are correct.
325

Mr Speaker: Thank you.
Chief Minister, carry on.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we all remember what parties he used to belong to as well!
330 And one often wonders why it is that the Opposition spend more time opposing the Speaker than the Government!

Anyway, Mr Speaker, I may deal with issues that the hon. Gentleman wants clarified in what is left of my address; otherwise I will be happy to deal with them in the context of my response.

335 Limitations are imposed on the scope of the regulations that can be made, and in particular the Act of course specifically provides that anything done by regulation by the Governor when a Proclamation of Emergency is extant does not allow for the Constitution to be amended – and this is an important point. One could argue that the clause is unnecessary, as a law created by this legislature cannot give power to amend the Constitution which created this legislature, but I think it is important it should remain in because it imputes into the Bill the clarity that the 340 Constitution is not suspended at that point: the Constitution is active and current at that point.

Clause 8 creates offences for breaches of regulations made under clause 5.

Clause 9 provides supremacy over other enactments should there be any inconsistencies.

Clause 10 confers discretion on the Governor in exercising powers conferred under the Bill.

345 However, Mr Speaker, sub-clause (2) specifically provides that, so far as it is practicable to do so, the Governor shall consult the Chief Minister. Mr Speaker, the practicability here is the essential aspect. It may not be practicable to consult because of communications being impossible between the Chief Minister and the Governor in such eventualities. It may not be practicable for a host of reasons which we cannot imagine today. If it is practicable, however, then consultation must occur.

350 Mr Speaker, the House will know that that the Civil Contingencies Act 2007 is the flip side of the coin and confers powers which are not dissimilar to those we are dealing with here, but not powers that relate to security. That Act goes further in the establishment of structure, such as the Civil Contingencies Committee and the Civil Contingencies Co-ordinator post is created. This Act will, however, be relevant in an instance where the structures and powers set out under the 355 civil contingency laws are sometimes potentially not operable, in a situation where a complete breakdown of our institutions could have occurred.

This Act creates an avenue for action which does not require the suspension of the Constitution or the cessation of cabinet government but enables action to be taken or start to be taken in order to re-establish the needs of civil society.

360 Mr Speaker, in making this Bill an Act we will in effect be bringing into the purview of this House the final piece of the jigsaw outstanding in respect of the internal architecture of the current 2006 Constitution. No power which has been granted to the Government of Gibraltar under that Constitution is in any way diminished by this Bill. We would not have brought the Bill if it did. Indeed, we are in effect becoming masters of our own destinies, even in an emergency, 365 as even in that eventuality all the actors will remain creatures of this Constitution and all the powers exercised will emanate from it and its institutions, the most important one being this Parliament itself as we create the powers within the Bill.

Mr Speaker, for all of those reasons I commend the Bill to the House and I look forward to dealing with any issues hon. Members opposite may wish to raise.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Hon. Mr Clinton.

375

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his explanation and analysis of what is a fairly comprehensive piece of legislation and is obviously being tabled on an urgent basis.

380

I am not much of a historian – as perhaps the Deputy Chief Minister is – more of an amateur historian, but if I recall correctly, in 1939, which is obviously the period when the original Order in Council was put in place, the City Council itself was suspended and the Government then appointed one individual to exercise powers in respect of civilians by himself.

385

I heard the Chief Minister say that the Constitution is not suspended and everything carries on as normal as it can be in the circumstances, and that the cabinet government will carry on. Well, my question to the Chief Minister is: what happens to this place? Does Parliament continue to meet? Is Parliament de facto suspended? Will we continue to be able to pass laws? Or is it just held in suspense? In which case, is this de facto – and this happens all the world over – a Bill for the imposition of martial law?

390

It is a fairly serious matter and I do not think it is something that we can not discuss, or at least have some discussion about it. I understand the reasons for it and I understand that the Governor probably had the powers to do this in any case, and by codifying it in our own legislation we obviously avoid having it imposed upon us. But really, for me, it is just an understanding, as a parliamentarian, as to what our role would be under this Act. Will Parliament continue to sit monthly? Will we be able to pass laws? What is the role that this particular Chamber will perform? Or is it just that the Cabinet will continue to meet and try to run civilian government as best as it can?

395

As I say, I am just looking at it from the point of view of historical precedent, where in 1939 or thereabouts the City Council itself was suspended and I believe the powers were vested in a possibly Major Patron. My memory fails me, but Dr Joseph Garcia, the Deputy Chief Minister, will no doubt be able to confirm or not. That is really what I am trying to understand: what this Bill will do in terms of the wider context of this Parliament. I would be grateful if the Chief Minister in his response could address that.

400

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

405

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? No.

No, I will then call the Hon. the Chief Minister to reply.

410

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. historian, the Deputy Chief Minister, reminds me that in fact the City Council was suspended in January 1941. There was a little something going on then, which was called the Second World War. I have no doubt that the Emergency Powers Order in Council, given that it was dated 1939, may have been related to the planning that Great Britain was doing about what it would do around the world in respect of war, and in fact the first opportunity to declare an emergency in the definition set out is if there is a war. But as I told the Parliament, we were not dealing with that sort of situation, but I will deal with it in the context of my reply.

In 1941 I understand all powers were taken by the Governor, but 1941 was a different time and absent the issue of war there was also no Constitution in Gibraltar that granted powers to a Parliament. We were dealing with a City Council that was a municipality. Indeed as the hon. the historian reminds me, all of the personnel in Gibraltar that were not able to join the war effort were evacuated from Gibraltar. That was a context which may indeed have, theoretically, the possibility of arising again – please God it will never happen – but there is a difference between a situation where a constitution is suspended and where emergency powers are being taken.

Now, the hon. Member asked me does this Parliament continue to meet. Well, Mr Speaker, this Parliament might continue to meet, but we do not know whether it would be possible for this Parliament to continue to meet. What he needs to understand in the context of what I have said is that I have already told the House that the Constitution continues in place, and if he looks at the powers granted to the Governor in this instance they are powers that relate principally to the suspension of personal liberties. So, nowhere in the context of what is set out in the provision is the legislature or the executive in any way curtailed. In other words, sections 24 to 43 of the Constitution, which create the Parliament, and sections 44 to 53 are not where the grab occurs. The grab occurs in respect of personal liberty. In other words, protection from slavery or forced or compulsory labour, which is section 4. The right to personal liberty, the protection of the freedom of expression, the protection of the freedom of assembly and association, the protection of the freedom to establish schools, the protection of the freedom of movement and the protection of discrimination on the grounds of race, etc. Those are the clauses that actually engage, Mr Speaker. In other words, those are the ones where, looking at it in stark terms, things can be done in that situation which may in another time offend those sections but in that time may be necessary.

And so this is not a suspension of the Parliament. The Parliament, Mr Speaker, is based on personal membership of the legislature by individuals. We happen to stand in political parties. Political parties exist because we have the freedom of association. The freedom of association might be suspended, but even in our most revolutionary moments I do not think we have done anything that might warrant emergency powers being taken.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
Not that I remember. I would know if we had! (Laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: And so, Mr Speaker, in a situation where there might be war, the first parenthesis, or the second parenthesis, those emergencies, some things may have to happen which might at another time have offended those parts of the Constitution, but the Parliament is not one of the things that is stopped from meeting – but it may be that the Parliament might not meet.

We have seen the Parliament meet every month since we were elected, except when the Referendum was called, and we have seen times not of war and not of emergency where the Parliament has met twice in a particular year or three times in a particular year, which is what the Constitution provides for. So the Government might not be able to come to Parliament either because of indisposition or because, if there is an emergency on, we might all agree that we do not want to come to Parliament, we want to deal with the emergency. The important thing is that the Constitution is not suspended. That is why it is necessary to say those parts of the Constitution will not have the effect that they have in peace time because the Constitution continues in place, the powers of the legislature under the Constitution continue to have effect and the powers of the executive government under the Constitution continue to have effect.

And so, Mr Speaker, you could not be further from a declaration of martial law, which is what the hon. Gentleman has suggested to me this might be doing. This is not martial law. I think the hon. Gentleman needs to understand what martial law is. You could not have martial law and the Constitution alongside each other; you would have to suspend the Constitution, because it would be a very strange martial law indeed that allowed us to come here and say what we liked 470 about the martials, assuming that we were not the ones declaring martial law, which of course we could not be because we do not have an army. The only people who have an army and who have the constitutional responsibility in respect of the raising of an army and security are the United Kingdom, and the powers that have been given to the Governor by this legislature could not be powers to empower the Governor in respect of the army. And so, Mr Speaker, nothing could be further from what this Bill will do if it becomes an Act than the declaration of martial law.

475 The hon. Gentleman should rest assured that, although we may not see eye to eye on many things, if I was asked to move a Bill to allow for martial law I would say so in the context of my address. I would not pretend to hide such a thing, because as a civil libertarian I would want people to be aware that I had been asked to bring a Bill to the Parliament and, I assume, asked also to convince my ten colleagues to raise their arms at the right moment in order to support it 480 – and that would be something I would not agree with. No.

Mr Speaker, the provisions of this Bill do not do that. They would not be enjoying the support of the Government if they did do that. But the hon. Gentleman might wish to know that of course it is open to a British government to declare martial law in Gibraltar or in any other territory, or indeed in the United Kingdom. I think that that has been shown historically to be 485 anathema to the British system of democracy and that is why it is one of the many strands of the affinity that the people of Gibraltar have with British democracy, the most mature and established democracy in the history of the planet.

But it could happen, and in Gibraltar it would take effect by the simple suspension of the Constitution – and the United Kingdom has not been shy to suspend constitutions. It suspended 490 the constitution of the Turks and Caicos Islands because of financial irregularity, and so therefore that is not something that would be dealt with in the context of emergency powers such as this.

Now, what sort of instances would we be dealing with? Well, they are very difficult to imagine, Mr Speaker, but they would really be instances related principally to natural disasters.
495 They might be instances related to other types of eventualities that make transport, communications and all the rest of it almost impossible. Although cabinet government is not suspended, it might be impossible for cabinet government to operate in the way that it tends to do with Cabinet meetings every week etc., although one is almost tempted to say that we have had the suspension of cabinet government before by Chief Ministers who have not met with the Cabinet as often as one might have expected them to – but that is for a separate discussion.

In this instance, Mr Speaker, in my view, because of the quasi parallel civil contingencies provisions, what we are really dealing with is that although Government and executive authority is not suspended, although the Constitution is not suspended, it is not possible to do things in Gibraltar in order to re-establish Gibraltar, and things have to be done for Gibraltar but they are 505 done through the offices created in the Gibraltar Constitution, which is how we would all like to see it happen, and the proclamation and the period of proclamation is as short as is possible. Therefore the 30 days or shorter period and the extension only by a further 30 days which is provided for so that the operation of cabinet government is re-established as quickly as possible and the executive authority is re-established as quickly as possible.

510 So I would say to the hon. Member opposite that in effect what you are seeing in this Bill is the groundwork for the opposite of martial law – in other words, the groundwork for the ability to once again govern ourselves after an emergency as soon as possible.

Mr Speaker, for all of those reasons I think this is a Bill that the House should approve, and in particular I would draw to the attention of the hon. Gentleman the dates I gave him. The English 515 Order in Council will apply in all the Overseas Territories as from 16th March. I think it is in the interest of all Members of this House that we demonstrate that once the trigger of the repeal of the 1939 Order has been pressed by the United Kingdom we move as quickly as possible to ensure that we act in this Parliament to prevent a new Order in Council taking effect on

16th March here by making this Bill an Act seeking assent before 16th March and publication 520 and promulgation before then.

For all of those reasons, Mr Speaker, hoping I have dealt with the hon. Gentleman's query as fully as I could on my feet, I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Could I suggest to the Chief Minister that he might check as to what exactly 525 happened during the Second World War. The civilians that remained behind surely were not subject to military law in respect of any offences which they may have committed of a civil nature – traffic offences and so on. They were not subject to military law. Weren't the courts still in Gibraltar? Was there no Chief Justice in Gibraltar during the Second World War? I think this is a matter that can be easily looked into, surely.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am sure, Mr Speake. I am sure, and in fact Mr Speaker is confirming in the way that he postulates those questions that this sort of Order – the 1939 Order is the first emanation; this is the modern version, which is going to become this Act – does not have the effect of suspending a constitution, although then there was not a Constitution to suspend.

535
Mr Speaker: But the courts were there.

Hon. Chief Minister: Of course. There were the courts, there were institutions, etc. and those 540 that continue to function would continue to function, and the effect of the Order in Council was not to suspend them – and in fact I am just being reminded by the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister that Sir Joshua at that time was actively involved in representation before tribunals that continued in effect, etc.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the 545 exercise of emergency powers in accordance with section 18(2)(b) of the Constitution where a public emergency arises or is likely, and for connected purposes, be read a second time.

Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

Clerk: The Governor's Emergency Powers Act 2017.

Governor's Emergency Powers Bill 2017 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

550
Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree – and, Mr Speaker, no other Bill will be dealt with today, only this one.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of this 555 Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

COMMITTEE STAGE

Governor's Emergency Powers Bill 2017 –

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should resolve itself into Committee to consider the following Bill clause by clause: the Governor's Emergency Powers Act 2017.

In Committee of the whole Parliament

560

Governor's Emergency Powers Bill 2017 –
Clauses considered and approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to make provisions for the exercise of emergency powers in accordance with section 18(2)(b) of the Constitution where a public emergency arises or is likely, and for connected purposes.

Clauses 1 to 10.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Governor's Emergency Powers Bill 2017 –
Third Reading approved: Bill passed

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the Governor's Emergency Powers Act 2017 has been considered in Committee and agreed to without amendments and I now move that it be read a third time and passed.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that the Governor's Emergency Powers Act 2017 be read a third time and passed.

580 Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

585

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, late on a Friday afternoon, on the cusp of a long week – and having read this morning, by the way, in The Times, I cannot resist telling the House that today was the day that Crufts commenced in London – I have the honour to move that the House do now adjourn until Friday, 17th March at 2.30 p.m.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question that the House do now adjourn to Friday, 17th March at 2.30 in the afternoon.

I now put the question, which is that the House do now adjourn to next Friday, 17th March at 2.30 in the afternoon.

590 Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against. The House will now adjourn to next Friday at 2.30 in the afternoon.

The House adjourned at 4.58 p.m.

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 2.33 p.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. A J Canepa GMH OBE in the Chair]

[CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: P E Martinez Esq in attendance]

PAPERS TO BE LAID

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Friday, 17th March 2017.

(vi) Papers to be laid – the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

- 5 Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table the Report and Audited Accounts for the Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation for the year ended 31st March 2009, 2010, 2011 and 2012.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Questions for Oral Answer

CULTURE, THE MEDIA, YOUTH AND SPORT

Q225/2017

Gibraltar Music Festival 2016 –
Payments to stallholders

- 10 Clerk: (vii) Reports of Committees; (viii) Answers to Oral Questions.
We commence with Question 225. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you.

- 15 Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if all stallholders have been paid in respect of the 2016 Gibraltar Music Festival, and who is actually responsible for such payments?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

- 20 Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, some stallholders have not yet been paid because the stallholders need to produce an invoice certified by the event organiser at the Ministry in order for payments to be issued. Some stallholders have not yet produced the invoices certified by the event organisers. Until an invoice is produced, payments will not be issued.

- 25 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for his reply.

I must confess I am surprised that there are still some payments outstanding. Can he perhaps clarify what he means by an invoice certified by the event organiser? My understanding was there was a prepaid system and that somehow this would be tallied electronically, and that the money, I presumed, would have been just handed over to the stallholders by the event 30 organiser, but obviously this is going through Government.

Could the Minister explain what the procedure is and what exactly is this invoice he refers to? Because there are... As he has said, there are some people who have not yet had payment, one of whom did make representations to me, and it maybe a case of just providing some information to the public as to what it is they need to do to expedite the matter.

35 Thank you.

Hon. S E Linares: Well, first and foremost, Mr Speaker, whichever stallholder has been there for more than a year definitely knows the system, and therefore whichever stallholder might have been a new one from this year and could explain why they do not understand the system.

40 The system is very simple. If you have a stall in the GMF and you sell wares, they will then charge and produce the invoice of how much they have sold, which is then tallied with the amount that comes in. But until they present an invoice, until they present how much of their wares have been sold through either the electronic system or whatever, the Ministry will not pay them. But it is not only the stallholder that has to certify that, it has to be the events 45 organiser who are in touch with the people who do the bands and run the system. It is them who have to certify because any stallholder could say they sold x or y, and it has to be certified.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer.

50 May I suggest, just as a matter of expediency, that he contact the event organisers – obviously it is changing this year – to contact all stallholders to perhaps put this matter to rest so that the books can be cleared in respect of anything that is owing to them.

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, it would be better if the stallholder who has made representation to the hon. Member contacts the Ministry and we can explain everything that 55 needs to be done.

Q226/2017

Culture and heritage budget – Breakdown of expenditure

Clerk: Question 226, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a detailed breakdown of the 60 £4,564,379,42 departmental expenditure under head 40, Culture and Heritage, for the position as at 30th September 2016 and explain why this Department has in six months already spent 70% of its annual budget of £6,498,000?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the figure 65 of £4,564,379.42 accords precisely with the half-year information provided to the Opposition. The hon. Member must understand that departmental spending is not necessarily linear, especially in a Ministry such as Culture. Therefore, there is nothing exceptional to the figure given when compared to that of the overall estimate for the full year.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Hon. Minister for his answer. He seems to have answered the second half of my question and not the first half of my question. Is the Minister able to provide me a detailed breakdown of the figure I quoted of £4.5 million?

75 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, this is a matter which has been ventilated on a number of occasions in this House.

The hon. Gentleman is talking about the six month figure which was provided to us when we were in Opposition and which we have, of course, therefore agreed to also provide to hon. Members opposite to enable them to have a heads-up of how things are going towards 80 31st March.

Mr Speaker, no breakdown will be provided of that. There is an annual Budget debate that deals with the figure, which is the figure which is set out in the Estimates Book. By the time we get to 31st March we will have a forecast outturn for the current financial year, which will then be the subject of the debate that we have traditionally in June or July, and that is when they get 85 the opportunity to get breakdowns and when they get the opportunity to ask detailed questions on the subject. What we cannot do is allow every Question Time in this House to turn into a mini Budget debate, because if we do that the House is going to come to a standstill.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister for his intervention.
90 Can I perhaps then ask the Minister: is he confident that the annual budget of £6.4 million is sufficient for the requirements for the year?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Q227/2017

Sports and Leisure Authority – Assistant Resources Manager vacancy

Clerk: Question 227, the Hon. E J Reyes.
95

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, sir, following on from answers provided to Questions 1/2017 and 96/2017, can the Minister for Sport update this House in respect of the Assistant Resources Manager – that is a grade 4 post – vacancy within the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority?

100 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the interviews that were scheduled have had to be postponed as one of the candidates has unfortunately undergone surgery and will be on certified sick leave for the foreseeable future.
105 Once this individual recovers and returns to work the interviews will be conducted.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can I ask therefore the Minister: I understand that an individual can be on certified sick leave and therefore is not fit for work, but is his condition that serious that he is actually hospitalised? It may be possible to attend an interview.
110

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as I said, ‘unfortunately undergone surgery’, so the postponement will be whilst he is recovering from the surgery. I can also give the hon. Member the information that there are only two candidates, so therefore they are waiting for this person to get a bit better so that they can then start the interviews.
115

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, that is helpful, Mr Speaker. At least we now know there are only two candidates, because last month the Minister said the interviews were in the process.

120 I know that medical conditions do make a person not apt to provide their best, so therefore we wish whichever candidate it is that has not been well a speedy recovery. From the medical certificate, as such, does he have a rough idea as to when that would happen? Would it be this side of the Budget? When it comes to Estimate time and he provides the establishment and the staffing levels that may alter and we may end up having a pending post there. I do not know what other information the Minister can shed on that.

125 Hon. S E Linares: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not have the information as to when the candidate will be back, but I am sure that the management of the GSLA will want to have these interviews as soon as is practically possible. Therefore, as soon as I am sure that the candidate is at least fit to come to an interview, that candidate will be called in and they will conduct the interview with that person. I could not commit myself, but I am sure if it is a surgery of the type that is not life threatening or anything like that, then I am sure that it will be done very, very soon.

130 Mr Speaker: Given the answer that the hon. Member has received, there is no problem in his asking a question in May as to whether it has by then been possible to hold the interviews which have been unavoidably delayed. Okay?

135 Hon. E J Reyes: You are correct, Mr Speaker. I was going to say that given that April is the Easter period, in May I'll just ask for an update. But it has been helpful to know that there are only two candidates, and I was going to ask, with your leave, Mr Speaker: in the meantime I suppose someone is acting for this post so that work may continue as normal as possible.

140 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, sir.

Q228/2017
Victoria Stadium –
FIFA/UEFA certifications

Clerk: Question 228, the Hon. E J Reyes.

145 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sport provide details of the Victoria Stadium's football pitch number 1 in respect of FIFA and/or UEFA certifications currently held, together with details of when these certifications were issued and when they are due for renewal?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

150 Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the playing surface of the Victoria Stadium currently holds a FIFA Quality Pro certification. The certificate was issued on 29th June 2016 for a period of 12 months, and as such is up for renewal on 28th June 2017.

155 Hon. E J Reyes: After I posed this question, Mr Speaker, as Mother Nature would have it, the high winds have played a bit of havoc on that surface, so I hope that it has been tackled with and so on.

160 Coming directly to the answer, Mr Speaker, the Minister said that the FIFA certification was issued on 29th June 2016. I know previously from my time in the Ministry we used to get the UEFA certifications. Is there no longer a need for that because of the FIFA one? Does that surpass it, or have we simply given up on UEFA? Perhaps the Minister can enlighten us; otherwise we end up talking in ignorance at sporting events without really knowing the true state of play.

165 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as far as I understand it, the laboratory that does the testing used to do the testing for UEFA because we were members of UEFA. Now we are members of FIFA they just give you a FIFA certification. I am assuming that they are both the same and therefore it is now a FIFA-certified quality certification. So whether it is FIFA or UEFA it does not make much difference.

170 As to what the hon. Member said about the inclement weather, I can inform the House that matches were played last night and that we will also have maintenance people working as soon as ... Even though matches are being played with the wind we currently have, as soon as the wind slows down, the parts that are just behind the goals which do not affect the matches will be maintained and fixed so that everything is up to standard.

175 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, one of the reasons why I posed this question is because those of us who do attend the stadium on a regular basis and so on ... One hears concern amongst team officials and so on that there seems to be a bit of doubt about UEFA's ... not FIFA, the UEFA side agreeing once again, like last year, for the pre-qualifier stages of the Champions League to be played. We had last year the games of Lincoln and Europa FC. And they were saying – and it could only be rumours, and I suppose the Minister may want to go back and look at this – that although it is a FIFA certification, UEFA was not quite straight away rubber stamping that, that it did require some sort of further inspection.

180 Given that there is no meeting next month, Mr Speaker, would it be in order simply to ask the Minister to take these next couple of months to look into it and then he can update us in May, or if anything happens in between he can always communicate to me so that if there is nothing to be feared I can certainly join him in a sportsmanlike spirit to allay any fears whatsoever?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, I have no problem with that.

Q237/2017

World War II tunnels – Visitor numbers

190 Clerk: Question 237, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide any statistics whatsoever of visitors to the World War II tunnels from December 2011 to date?

195 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
200 Yes, Mr Speaker. For the financial year 2011-12, 24,074 visitors; for the financial year 2012-13, 21,978 visitors; for 2013/-14, 21,831 visitors; for 2014-15, 23,205 visitors; for 2015-16, 27,955 visitors; and for the current soon-to-end financial year up to and including January 2017, 26,534 visitors. Clearly we have to add February and March to the final tally.

205 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can I just ask the Minister ... I posed a question back in December 2016, where I asked for statistics to the Upper Rock attractions during the last five years and I was told that there were no statistics held by the Government with regard to the attractions at the Upper Rock, and it has taken me a little bit of actually having to go and visit the tunnels and see that there is a system in place where you purchase a ticket and you do have 210 an actual tally on the ticket that tells you which ticket number it is ... as to why in December we were told that there were no statistics for any of the attractions. but I have actually discovered today that there are statistics in regard to at least one of the attractions.

215 Hon Dr J E Cortes: No, I think, Mr Speaker, that ... and I have not got the benefit of Hansard in front of me ... and we have corresponded before and conversed on this before and this was not raised. I think that what was said at the December meeting was that we were not able to give particular breakdowns that had been requested because of the way in which the tickets are separated by cost rather than the other information that he had asked. I would need to check exactly what the answer was, but I am very glad to say that we have been able to extract this 220 after a considerable amount of work. It may not be possible to do the same with the other sites.
Remember this is a relatively new site and it is run slightly differently to the others, but I am very happy to look into the actual detail of this now that he has asked me that specific question. I am sure that there is an absolutely perfect explanation. In any case he should congratulate me for having been able to obtain information that perhaps he says I said I was not able to obtain.
(Laughter)

225 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, absolutely. I did ask about visitors in December and then I did ask for a breakdown between locals and tourists. It was on the locals and tourists that you said you were unable to provide any statistics, but having asked the previous month on visitors ... that is why I posed the question.

230 So would it be reasonable to say then, Mr Speaker, that the Minister undertakes to go back to his Ministry and double check on that question that the facts are correct, given that obviously there has been some error?

235 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I will say more than that. The hon. Member keeps on asking me every month different aspects of the same information. I do not really know what it is that he wants to know – I have to surmise it out of the questions. I would be very happy if he wrote to me or had a conversation with me telling me what does he want to get out of these answers.
These are facts. This is nothing political – nobody is hiding anything. If he tells me what he wants out of the answers, then I will use my best endeavours to provide what he wants, but it is very 240 difficult because one month I am asked for one breakdown and the other month I am asked for another – and I really would like to be helpful but I would like a bit more information, and certainly I will look into everything that I can.

Q238/2017
Heritage Action Committee –
Reactivated priorities

Clerk: Question 238, the Hon. R M Clinton.

245 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise what priorities has the reactivated Heritage Action Committee identified following its recent meeting?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

250

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Yes, Mr Speaker. The reactivated Heritage Action Committee (HAC) will mainly deal with issues that are current at the time, such as specific works with heritage implications, and will improve communication and co-ordination between the different stakeholders.

255

Priorities in heritage will be set by my Ministry in consultation with the soon to be created Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council.

260

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for his answer, but he seems to have given me a generic answer in terms of the interaction of the Heritage Action Committee and various other groups. What I am asking for is have they identified any specific priorities.

265

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, no, what I am trying to say is that the HAC (Heritage Action Committee) is an action committee. It will meet probably every month or every two months, or whenever there is an issue, a proposed development, perhaps necessary works which may have heritage implications. Therefore we will sit with all the representatives there – I think it is only five or six, so definitely quite an acute action committee – to discuss with all the stakeholders what the implications on heritage may be and what we may need to do to mitigate or to avoid the...

270

So I cannot tell him the priorities. The priorities will be those that arise at that moment in time. This is not what we are going to create with the new Heritage and Antiquities Act, which is the Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council (HAAC), which, working with my Ministry, will be setting up the priorities. This is an action committee which will deal with current issues and therefore I cannot foresee what issues are going to be discussed at the HAC; it is not that kind of committee.

275

Hon. R M Clinton: I am grateful to the Minister for his answer.

Perhaps he can narrow down the answer to what acute areas, if any, were identified at the last and if not the first meeting, or the recent last meeting, that warranted action.

280

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The last meeting was the first meeting, where we discussed how we would run the committee and the sorts of things that we would discuss. I would need to check on the minutes but I do not think we discussed any specific issue. We may have done, but I would have to check the minutes.

285

I think I have answered the question in the sense that it has not set any priorities. The priorities will be the issue, the development or the proposal – maybe a wall collapses in a monument: what do we do, how do we deal with it? It is that sort of thing. Priorities in heritage will be set by the Ministry and the new Advisory Council and we can look at all sorts of things that we want to do, but this is definitely, as the name describes, an action committee.

290

I cannot remember now – it was some weeks ago – what exactly we discussed at that committee. I can check the minutes at a later stage, but I just want to make the distinction: this is not a policy-creating committee, this is an action committee responding to the needs at that given time. I think it is something that is good to have because it brings all the stakeholders together. We can discuss what can be done, what cannot be done, what the consequences are; and sometimes, by putting all our heads together, we may solve a problem to the benefit of heritage. It is that kind of committee.

Q239/2017
Sewage treatment plant –
Technical specification and contract

Clerk: Question 239, the Hon. T N Hammond.

300 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, further to Question 449/2015, 8/2016, 332/2016, the Minister's speech during the Appropriation Bill and Question 630/2016, can the Minister provide an update on whether the technical specification for the sewage treatment plant is now understood and when Government might be in a position to award a contract?

305 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the technical specifications for the new sewage treatment plan are understood, although we are still not in a position to award a contract.
310

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister explain why they are not in a position to award the contract if they now understand the technical specifications?

315 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Because we are still considering how to go forward and there are a wide range of issues, not just technical, that have to be considered. We are currently considering these and in discussion before we take a decision.

Hon. T N Hammond: And is the Minister in a position to describe some of those other issues which are not technical and which are perhaps holding the project up?
320

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Are the issues that the Government are considering in relation to this particular project relating to the type of financing that the Government is envisaging in order to build this sewage plant?
325

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am not able to provide further information to that I have done. These are obviously discussions which have to be confidential in nature until the award is made.
330

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I can understand that the detail of any financing in relation to the project is confidential, but why is it confidential for the Hon. the Minister to say that one of the issues – if that is the case, one of the issues – concerns what type of financing the Government is considering in relation to this project?
335

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Gentleman has made clear he does not feel comfortable saying any more. I am surprised that he is being pressed, because clearly it is not that he is not comfortable saying more because there is a very good opportunity for the Government and therefore for the people of Gibraltar; it must be that he is uncomfortable saying more because he is trying to put the Government in a good position for the people of Gibraltar and for the Government.
340

I am surprised sometimes, Mr Speaker, that we get so many questions in this House urging us to complete manifesto commitments whilst at the same time we get so many statements in this 345 House inviting us not to comply with our manifesto commitments because of the way that hon. Members opposite say that they see Gibraltar's future.

So perhaps, Mr Speaker, the easiest thing might be if we just turn up here one day and are left on our desks a list that hon. Members opposite might care to produce for us of those manifesto commitments that they would like us to pursue and those that they think that we should not pursue. I assume this one might be on the list of things that they would like us to do, given their questioning on it.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I know that the hon. Gentleman jumps to his feet every single time that he feels uncomfortable with a question from the Opposition, or alternatively that he has become so omnipotent in his own mind that he really does not want any questions from the Opposition side. But maybe he can answer this: has the Government made a decision as to how this project is going to be funded?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I did not want any questions from the Opposition I would not call meetings of the House every month. The hon. Gentleman knows that, outside the constitutional requirement to hold three meetings in a year where there is not an election and two in a year where there is, I have no obligation to hold a meeting of the House every month. I allow them the opportunity to ask questions by signing a notice convening the House every month. So again, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman's political Tourette's gets the better of him.

I get up, Mr Speaker, because he is the Leader of the Opposition, at least for now, on that side, although I note that already there are some saying that they are eying his post – and I do not just mean the hon. Lady in the rocker chair who is in another party; I have even heard it from the newly baptised Deputy that he would not mind the job if it came his way. But as he is currently the leader of the political grouping on that side and he was asking about something which is general, I, as the political leader of the grouping on this side, have got up to reply to him. He got up as a political leader opposite before I got up, so perhaps all of the references to omnipresence and all of the other references, which I thought were the beginning of the usual slide into belligerence, might apply more to him than they do to me.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Chief Minister's intervention, as always.

If I can go back to the Minister, can I ask a very, very simple question? (A Member: As always.) As always – always very simple. The Urban Waste Treatment Plant, which I believe is what we are talking about, which in the Budget only had £1,000 allocated to it – is this subject to a tender that you are actually looking at, or are you considering the wording of a future tender? Where are we in the process?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I suppose that on that side it is now two people who get up in every question!

Mr Speaker, I think that the Opposition is aware that this is a tender process that has now gone through most of the process and there is now a preferred bidder, and that is where we are: it has gone through the tender process. It is obviously a very important project and we have to get it absolutely right, but it has gone through the full tender process.

Hon. T N Hammond: On that basis then, Mr Speaker, could the Hon. the Minister, just so that I know when perhaps to come back with a question and when he may be able to answer it ... Does he have any idea, any idea whatsoever, regarding the timeline for the award of the contract? Could it be a month from now, three months, six months, a year from now? Any idea whatsoever?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the juncture we are at, at this point in time, it is difficult to say and I would rather not. It could happen very quickly or it could happen less quickly, so I would rather not commit myself.

Q240/2017
Western Beach –
Action to rectify sewage problem

Clerk: Question 240, the Hon. T N Hammond.

400

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, bearing in mind the continued poor water quality at Western Beach and the Government's 2011 manifesto commitment to 'act immediately to ensure the sewage problem is dealt with', what activity has taken place since 2011 to rectify the situation?

405

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, since this Government entered into office, Western Beach has become the most frequently monitored beach in Gibraltar with numerous samples taken on a weekly basis.

Furthermore, the Government has and continues to lobby the European Commission in order to find a permanent solution to the Spanish-induced problem of sewage contamination at Western Beach. Four questions have been tabled by MEPs representing the south-west of England and Gibraltar since 2011: on 30th September 2014, again on 26th March 2015, on 30th November 2015 and 12th May 2016.

As stated in my answer 329/2015, the latest position from the Commission was stated by Mr Karmenu Vella on behalf of the European Commission in a written answer on 5th May 2015, in which he confirms, and I quote:

The Commission is aware of the possible pollution situation of the bathing site at Western Beach. He stated: The origin of such pollution is the diversion of a storm drain in the municipality of La Linea de la Concepcion, discharging sewage near that beach. The Commission formally contacted the Spanish authorities, to gather further information on the situation.

420

This was the first time that the Commission publicly accepted that the source of pollution lies in Spain. Our action has therefore secured this important development. The Department of Heritage, Environment and Climate Change is currently preparing to send an update of the latest data to the Commission, requesting that they put further pressure on the Spanish authorities.

425

Hon. T N Hammond: Thank you, Minister, for that extensive answer.

Would the Minister agree with me that while we continue to pump our own raw sewage into the sea at Europa Point our case for Western Beach and the Spaniards effectively doing the same is severely weakened in anybody's eyes?

430

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, if I may say so, with respect to the hon. Gentleman, I have not heard a question which is more against the public interest of Gibraltar put by a Member of the Opposition in this House since I have been elected to it in 2003.

435

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
Or I in 44 years.

Hon. Chief Minister: And Mr Bossano says in the 44 years that he has been here.

440 Mr Speaker, let us be very clear: the position in relation to Gibraltarian sewage has been the case for many years. It was the case while hon. Members opposite were in Government, it is unfortunately still the case in relation to us because of the complications that the hon. Gentleman has alluded to. But to say that dumping sewage into a Strait which sees a lot of movement of water and which does not produce pollution to either Little Bay or Rosia Bay or to 445 Sandy Bay or Catalan Bay or Eastern Beach –

Hon. J J Bossano: Or Spanish beaches.

Hon. Chief Minister: – and therefore any Spanish beach, because all of them would be further away, somehow makes our case in respect of an area which is close to where sewage is deposited by Spain and makes it impossible to use a beach, and that somehow our case is affected, is to see a Member of the Opposition rise and play into Spanish hands like I would never have though I would see in this House. But I am seeing things in this House done by this Opposition that I never expected to see Gibraltarians do unto other Gibraltarians – because this 455 is not unto the Government, Mr Speaker, this is unto all of us in Gibraltar.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I am sorry but it is utterly inexcusable that we should continue to be pumping raw sewage into Europa, whether it affects a beach or not.

460 Mr Speaker: It is a separate subject, isn't it, which you are perfectly entitled to ask and develop as you see fit, but you are linking one with another. You have a specific question there and you ought to try to deal with Western Beach, and we will allow you all leeway that you wish in that respect.

465 Hon. T N Hammond: Thank you very much.

The point is that raw sewage is raw sewage, and where that raw sewage lands is not necessarily neither here nor there. Any visitor to Europa will see what the raw sewage and the impact of it is at Europa and indeed in the environs around Europa. But I do ask, in terms of the activity with respect to Western Beach, whether the Government and whether the Minister 470 believes we are any closer to a solution to that problem than we were in 2011.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has not understood the import of his own question, and if he did – as the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is suggesting from a sedentary position that he did – that would be even worse.

475 You see, Mr Speaker, it is absolutely true that to reason is not treason. So, if somebody gets up and reasons out an argument which it is important for a community to understand, then that is not treachery and it would be wrong for anybody to suggest that simply because somebody says something and logically explains it and it is important for a community to understand it, that that would be treachery. But to get up here and to make an argument as logically flawed as 480 the one that the hon. Member has made is really not to reason; it is just to get up to seek a headline in a way that does Gibraltar a massive disservice and is against the public interest of Gibraltar.

I will explain it to him again. Sewage coming out of the northern part of Gibraltar, which has been the case for generations and which was the case under the man they call the greatest 485 Gibraltarian of all time and whilst Mr Feetham was in Government with the GSD, cannot affect beaches in Spain because it does not affect beaches in Gibraltar, which are nearer. And so therefore, Mr Speaker, if that is the case, how can there be an argument that we are somehow, 490 in some way, therefore affecting our case about what happens in the north-westerly corner of Gibraltar, which is adjacent to Spain and the sewage that comes out from there and affects our beaches?

The hon. Gentleman knows that we are working to stop the pumping of raw sewage into the sea. The hon. Gentleman also knows it was our manifesto commitment. I believe it was not theirs – Mr Speaker, they did not have a manifesto. Now, in the circumstances, given that they, as a party, have said repeatedly, with the man who is their leader having been represented sitting next to the man who said it, that it was not a priority for them –

Hon. D A Feetham: It was a priority. We said it was.

500 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, if you look at Hansard you will see that the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana – I recall from memory, but memory is something which is best checked against Hansard ... that it was not a priority. And so, Mr Speaker, frankly, to now have this suggestion made to us flies in the face not just of their record but flies in the face of logic and puts an argument which, by their standard – forget that I have demonstrated it is illogical, but by their standard – goes against Gibraltar.

505 So if the hon. Gentleman gets up and says this damages our case ... Well, look, Mr Speaker, the way that things have always been done in this House – not just in this House, in politics in Gibraltar – is that if you think that there is an issue which damages the case of the Government and people of Gibraltar against Spain, you pick up the phone, you call the Minister, who at the end of the day is a parliamentary colleague, and you say, ‘John, I am concerned that this damages our case.’ You do not get up here, in the glare of publicity with proceedings transmitted live on radio and on television, and tell José Ignacio Landaluce, Mr Speaker, which is what the hon. Gentleman has done.

515 Mr Speaker: No, that is not the point. The point is this: we have just had a question about the sewage treatment plant. Is the Leader of the Opposition offended that I am making an intervention now? Does he think that I do not have a right. Because if he does think –

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, you have asked me a question – can I answer it?

520 Mr Speaker: But I am entitled, given the exchanges that have taken place ... When there has just been a question on the sewage treatment plant and now there is another one on Western Beach, I am entitled to intervene, am I not? (Interjection) Or does the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition think that I am not? But because I have indicated –

525 Hon. D A Feetham: You have asked me a question – may I answer it?

Mr Speaker: – that I am going to intervene, you make a gesture indicative of your displeasure. Is that the case? Are you displeased with the fact that I am intervening?

530 Hon. D A Feetham: For the third time, may I answer the question?

Hon. E J Phillips: Seriously, a gesture?

535 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker has got the wrong end of the stick. I have to say yet again there is absolutely no offence taken by me about your intervention, Mr Speaker. (Mr Speaker: Right.) You are perfectly entitled to say whatever. But, Mr Speaker, of course if you ask me a question I am entitled to answer it.

540 Mr Speaker: Right. Now, the position is this. The Hon. Mr Hammond asked the question about the sewage treatment plant. I think – look, I have been out of Government for many years – there is a link between a sewage treatment plant and sewage going into the Straits, is there not? And therefore it would have been quite proper for you to deal with the matter then.

I think it's unfortunate – to say the least, because it has become controversial – that you have linked it with the question of Western Beach, and I have allowed it but I really do not think that they should go any further on this issue.

If the hon. Member wishes to ask a question at the next meeting of the House about the question of sewage in the Straits, I will allow him that question.

550 I will also allow the Leader of the Opposition now, if he wishes, to ask any supplementary, but I do not want any further exchanges on the issue because they are two separate questions and –

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I may.

555 Mr Speaker: The sewage in the Straits has got nothing to do with the sewage at Western Beach, but it has to do with the sewage treatment plant and that is where you should have brought the matter up.

560 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I may, the reason I made that reference – and to be honest, the accusations that the Chief Minister has made of me do not become him – is because in their own 2011 manifesto they write:

We will develop a sewage treatment plant, the absence of which has allowed La Linea to defend its own sewage landing at Western Beach by saying we also put our sewage into the sea.

Several Members: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

565 Hon. T N Hammond: So I have deployed precisely the same argument that they have deployed in their 2011 manifesto.

Hon. D A Feetham: Game, set and match!

570 Hon. Chief Minister: They have not, Mr Speaker, and the hon. Gentleman should know better than to use sporting references which are going to be thrown straight back at him when I smash this ball in his court.

It is very simple. What we were saying was what La Linea had said. La Linea, Spain, have actually said in the context of the European Proceedings that that is the position. The hon. Gentleman is making the assertion for himself, and so therefore, with an ace, straight back at you.

575 Mr Speaker: Does the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition have a supplementary on this matter?

580 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, I wanted to return to the question of the complaint that has been made to the European Commission and ask the Hon. Minister: what action is the European Commission taking in relation to the sewage at Western Beach, other than the fact that it has cited responsibility by Spain for the sewage actually being, not pumped, but via that storm drain.

585 What is going to happen? Because at the end of the day, what people want to know is not that the Government has made the complaint and that the Commission has accepted the responsibility of Spain for this, but what is the Commission going to do in order to obviously have this stopped, which is a state of affairs that is completely and utterly unacceptable?

590 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia) Mr Speaker, I may be able to assist the House with this issue.

My understanding, and this is subject to confirmation, is that there may well be a subsequent answer to the answer that my hon. Friend has given, and that is that the Commission has actually said that they are initiating legal proceedings, or they were, against Spain at that time and they bundled this particular case with other cases which were affecting other parts of the ...
595 the discharge is coming from Spain ... other parts of the Spanish coastline. So I think there is a subsequent answer and that answer points to legal action on the behalf of the Commission, but we need to confirm that.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q241/2017
Cemetery –
Maintenance management programme

600 Clerk: Question 241, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, further to the motion passed in this House on 24th November 2016, has the Government prepared its management programme for the maintenance of the cemetery?
605

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
610 Mr Speaker, this is nearing completion.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Minister have an approximate date for the completion?

615 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: On this occasion I am happy to say that it is just a couple of weeks away. I have seen the document this week and I think it will be ready very, very soon, certainly by the next time we sit in Parliament.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Minister: if he recalls last time, or a couple of years ago, there was a tender put out for the maintenance of the cemetery – is it the intention to do that again, or is it going to be done in house?
620

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: We are considering the options, Mr Speaker. It very much depends on what the actual management programme is to see how we can deal with it.

625

Q242/2017
New power station –
Technology re low emissions

Clerk: Question 242, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can Government describe what technology is being used in the new power station to ensure that emissions are kept as low as is possible?

630

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
635 Mr Speaker, the new gas-fired power station will ensure that emissions are indeed kept as low as possible. The use of natural gas, never previously used for power generation purposes in Gibraltar, will ensure that sulphur-oxide emissions are almost zero, that both carbon-dioxide and nitrogen-oxide emissions are much reduced, and lastly that particulate matter emissions to the atmosphere become negligible.

Furthermore, all six generating sets, not just the dual fuel sets, will incorporate the use of selective catalytic reactors to reduce nitrogen oxide emissions even further, a practice that is uncommon elsewhere in the world when combusting natural gas for electricity generation.

645

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister then confirm that it is not the intention to use any kind of particulate remover as part of the power station, particularly when the power station – as I imagine it may occasionally have to – is running on diesel?

650

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the gas does not require particulate removers because the particulate matter in gas is very, very close to zero. Nevertheless, there are various things that we are doing in order to ensure that particulate matter is virtually not emitted from the stacks.

655

There will, of course, be continuous real-time monitoring of all the different ingredients of the emissions, so this will be able to be monitored very, very easily. But we are using extremely high-performance diesel. On the rare occasions when it would use diesel, and we hope that that would be virtually never, it would be very high-quality diesel which would have pre-combustion centrifuging to remove any impurities before combustion, so the particulates are removed before the diesel is burnt. So we are removing it, but the intention is that we should use diesel very, very rarely and it is treated before. So it is very high quality and low in particulate matter and it is treated before burning.

660

Hon. T N Hammond: But it is not the intention to install any kind of post combustion particulate removal for when and if the power station needs to run on diesel?

665

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, we are using the best available technology for these engines. As I say, there are different ways of treating particulate matter. If the hon. Member is referring to electrostatic precipitators, these are not suitable for our type of engines and therefore we will not be using those, but we will be using the best available technology and in fact we are in discussion with the local NGOs on it and they seem to be quite content with the methods that we are using.

Q243/2017
Bouygues –
Awarding of ecosite status

Clerk: Question 243, the Hon. T N Hammond.

670 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Government say on what basis Bouygues is able to award itself ecosite status at the new power station and what independent verification exists for this process.

675 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, no sir. This should be addressed to Bouygues Energies & Services.

Q244/2017
Recent refinery flaring –
Complaint to EU

Clerk: Question 244, the Hon. T N Hammond.

680 Hon. T N Hammond: Has Government received a response from the EU reference its complaint about the recent refinery flaring?

685 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Government has received formal notification from the European Commission that the complaint has been registered and that it is being considered.

690 Hon. T N Hammond: And Mr Speaker, again in order to inform me as to when it may be appropriate to ask a follow-up question, do we know when any kind of further answer may be forthcoming in that respect?

695 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have consulted the Chief Minister and Deputy Chief Minister, who are more au fait with the procedures of the European Commission, and we suspect that it would be about six months or so. We can confirm how much these things normally take, but that is our assessment at this point in time.

Q245/2017
Beaches in off season months –
Measures to keep free from dog litter

Clerk: Question 245, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

700

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Following various complaints from beach stakeholders, can Government confirm what measures it has in place to ensure that our beaches are being kept free from dog litter in the off season months when owners are allowed to walk their dogs?

705 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the RGP have an operational role in policing this, which is of course not under the control of my Ministry.

710 In addition, the litter wardens and officers from the Environmental Research and Protection Unit patrol the beaches at different times on a daily basis.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I informed the Hon. Minister that I have received complaints from beach stakeholders, especially in the Eastern Beach, saying that the situation is pretty dire and it is very unpleasant. So is the Minister telling me that I should refer to the RGP, or do they take ownership for the state of affairs there?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady is always free to refer to the RGP, as indeed are those persons who are offended by the state in which dog owners will allow their dogs to leave the beach. As I said, they have an operational role in this and that is not under my control.

We also have the litter wardens and the environmental protection officers who patrol there at different times, but clearly they cannot be there all the time and I suspect that the problem happens when there is nobody there to keep an eye on it. We have increased the number of patrols following complaints, which have also come to me, and we hope that this will improve.

725 Hopefully again, once the DNA process, which will come into effect very, very soon – dog owners have until the end of this month to record their dog's DNA ... hopefully, if anybody does allow their dog to foul and does not pick up, we will be able to identify these, so hopefully next winter we will have a more favourable situation.

730 I am very, very concerned about it and I do receive complaints from people, and also from responsible dog owners who are offended at the fact that those who are less responsible give them a bad name.

I will ask the team to redouble their efforts. Thank you.

735 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for that answer.

If I can just suggest perhaps the situation is almost like quite innocent because dog owners leave their dogs to run wild as such in the off season months and they might not run after the dogs to check on what they have done. So perhaps would the Ministry for the Environment be interested in putting up more signs to raise awareness for owners to be more on top, literally, of their dogs and go after them and make sure that they pick up after they do their business?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, absolutely. Obviously now we will be probably looking at next winter and clearly, unfortunately, as we all know, signs in themselves do not solve the problem, which is why we have had to introduce the DNA fingerprinting, but certainly this is something that we would be very happy to do.

Q246/2017

Bayside and Westside Schools – Security arrangements

Clerk: Question 246, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Following my Question 768 of November 2016, has 750 Government made any changes yet to security arrangements at the entrances of Bayside and Westside Schools?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and 755 Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, both secondary schools have enhanced security arrangements by strictly controlling access through particular entrances whilst increasing supervision on others. These improvements are particularly evident at Westside School, where access through the main 760 vehicular and pedestrian thoroughfare is restricted and closely regulated.

If I may add to my prepared answer, Mr Speaker, we have recently ... and perhaps to illustrate it further, the reception in Westside School has been moved forward to the front of the school, the southern side of the school, rather than inside the patio. In the past you had to go into the patio and then into reception. Now reception is on the front line and that has already 765 made a tremendous difference – and further works may be undertaken in the future.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I appreciate that answer and I do recognise that Westside has seen an improvement. The Bayside one though, however, I think still needs improvement and I remain very concerned given its position in terms of also the front to the 770 airport and the fact that it is still accessible. I drive my son there every morning and in this day and age it just takes one mad man and it is rather worrying and I urge the Government to take this as a matter of priority, please.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Certainly, Mr Speaker, we are already more vigilant, as I have said, and as 775 I say, it is very likely that we will be carrying out works in order to increase that further, certainly before the next academic year.

Q304/2017

Brexit –
Impact assessments on Social Care, the port and tourism

Clerk: We now move to Question 304. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, in the light of the Brexit referendum, has the Government 780 carried out any impact assessments on Social Care, the port and tourism? If so, are they able to disclose the details of such assessments and the plans to counteract any potential risk in these sectors?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.
785

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, yes, the Government has carried out an impact assessment into the areas that the hon. Member has raised in his question. The Government are not able to disclose any such assessments, for obvious reasons.

790 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I can understand how the Deputy Chief Minister deems fit not to disclose those assessments in this House, but would it be possible to have a confidential copy at all?

795 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, I would be happy to brief the hon. Member – not to supply a copy, but certainly to brief him on the situation.

Q305/2017
Nuffield Pool –
Timeline re handover; free admission

800 Clerk: Question 305, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Government have a timeline for when the Nuffield Pool will be handed to them by the MOD and is it still their intention to make it available to the public for free?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

810 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the handover of the Nuffield Pool by the Ministry of Defence is dependent on the completion and commissioning of the new facility being built at Four Corners. It is anticipated that these works will be completed during the fourth quarter of 2017 with a handover therefore likely in January 2018.

Our 2015 manifesto says, and I quote:

when the Nuffield Pool is handed back to the Gibraltar Government by the MOD a pool will be open to the public at no fee as part of the facilities available to bathers in the area of Camp Bay and Little Bay.

This remains a policy of the Government.

ADJOURNMENT

815 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should now adjourn to Wednesday, 29th March at 10.30 in the morning.

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn to Wednesday, the 29th of this month at 10.30 in the morning.

Suspension of Standing Order 7(1) to proceed with Government Statements

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Wednesday, 29th March 2017.

Mr Speaker: I have received notice from the Chief Minister that he intends to move now the suspension of Standing Orders in order to make two Government statements this morning. I should also inform Members that he will do the same this afternoon in order to make an additional third Statement this afternoon.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move, under Standing Order 7(3), to suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with a Government Statement.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question that the Standing Orders should be suspended as moved by the Hon. the Chief Minister. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Westminster terrorist attack – Statement by the Chief Minister

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the terrorist attack last week in London was a strike on the Mother of all Parliaments. It was an attack on British democracy and as such it was also an attack on this Parliament. We take our powers from an Order in Council that originates at Westminster, we are part of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association which is based at Westminster, and of course we are British and any attack on Britain is therefore also an attack on us.

In this instance in particular, Mr Speaker, I can tell Hon. Members that, along with the Deputy Chief Minister and the Attorney General, I was in exactly the area of the attack the very day before. We had been in the Lords and in the Commons lobbying for Gibraltar, meeting friends of Gibraltar and engaging with Members of both Houses of Parliament in support of Gibraltar's cause, and on our television screens we saw many regular visitors and friends of Gibraltar affected by this attack.

Mr Speaker, it is the Westminster Parliament that represents the modern concept of the rule of law. It is that Parliament which has, for longer than any other, been the embodiment of freedom and respect, and we in this Parliament will want to stand shoulder to shoulder with our parliamentary colleagues at Westminster in the Commons and the Lords. We express our solidarity with all MPs and all those who work in the Parliament in London. In particular, we express our condolences to all those who lost loved ones in this attack. Four innocent dead in the heart of Whitehall is an atrocious tally of evil that all in this House will want to roundly condemn.

Specific mention must be made of the loss of life of police officer PC Keith Palmer. On days like last Wednesday we are reminded that we are indebted to all police officers for the dangerous and often thankless work that they do to keep us safe. The death of a police officer in these circumstances serves only to emphasise the risks that they take every day.

It is also worth noting the heroic efforts to revive PC Palmer of former Gibraltar ADC Tobias Ellwood, now a Minister in the Foreign Office, and he has now been elevated to the Privy Council.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak?

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much.

The Hon. the Chief Minister speaks on behalf of the Opposition in what he has said to this House in his Statement a few moments ago.

All that I would do on behalf of Her Majesty's Opposition is to offer our condolences to the families of the victims and also all those who were injured, in particular the four individuals who unfortunately and tragically lost their lives in this terrorist attack: Aysha Frade a mother of two; Kurt Cochran, a US tourist; Leslie Rhodes from South London; and of course, as the Hon. the Chief Minister has pointed out, Police Constable Keith Palmer. All of them left their homes and their families that morning expecting to return to their homes and their families later on that day and unfortunately did not do so, and on behalf of her Majesty's Opposition I wish to extend my condolences to the families of the victims.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, every year on 5th November the United Kingdom comes together to essentially celebrate a failed terrorist attempt to destroy the House of Lords. This atrocity that was not has become a part of folklore, but it draws attention to the fact that even over 400 years ago the heart of British democracy was already a target for those who wanted to subvert the values that the building represents.

Last week the edifice came under attack again and while the methods may be different, the times more modern and the building itself changed, the intentions were still the same: to threaten our freedoms and our political structures and to inspire fear into the hearts of the world's citizens. And while Guy Fawkes and his co-conspirators were defeated, so was this latest perpetrator, showing that these values are as robust and as deep rooted as the buildings that protect them.

In this case, unfortunately, there were some fatalities and we, as a House that also protects the democracy it represents, must pay tribute to their memory. These victims themselves characterise the kind of modern pluralism that extremist actions fail to undermine. A female British teacher of Spanish origin, a male American tourist, an elderly English man – who, incredibly, used to wash the windows of that very bastion of democracy himself, Winston Churchill – and, of course, an unarmed police officer who was tragically killed while discharging his duties. As unnecessary and cruel as these deaths are, Mr Speaker, they are nonetheless a reminder to us all of the value and dignity of a life bereft of hatred, violence and evil. I express my deepest and sincerest condolences to the families of these individuals with the assurance that their memories will never fade in our appreciation of the freedoms we enjoy.

But this is a time of heroes, Mr Speaker: of heroes like PC Keith Palmer, guarding the front line of these freedoms; of heroes like MP Tobias Ellwood, selflessly helping wounded, despite the uncertainty of the event's immediate aftermath; of heroes like all those policemen who stand outside high-profile targets and promise us that our lives will not be disrupted; and of 85 heroes like the security and emergency services that protect our communities and keep us safe.

And while the pain we all feel will eventually fade, history will remember these heroes and the sacrifices they have made in the name of everything we hold dear.

But there is perhaps no bigger hero than the City of London itself. This glorious metropolis has weathered many storms, but wounded and cornered it has refused to be beaten. It has risen 90 from the ashes of the Blitz, it has risen from the rubble of Bishopsgate, it has risen from the mangled steel of the July bombings, and every time it has risen it has defied hatred as a diverse and cosmopolitan city of dreams that will not bow to violence but instead will stand up for the democratic values that we represent.

The very morning after the attack Parliament convened in that same building, showing that 95 the wheels of democracy were far from having been derailed. People took to the streets to reclaim their own freedoms and show that the City's heart was still beating, that democracy cannot and will not be defeated and that we will not give in to the fear of hatred. London and its people should be commended for this response, for sending a clear unified message to those that aim to divide.

100 But this response, Mr Speaker, must be a responsible one. The world cannot afford for these actions to create tensions between its people. This event and the person behind it must be rightly condemned, but we must not blame race or religion or immigration, or revile an entire culture because of the actions of one. Violence and hate cannot be allowed to divide people and to make us cast doubts and suspicions over others. To do so would be to threaten the values 105 that many have died protecting, and the unity of our condemnation must be matched by the unity in our humanity. These were the actions of one deranged and evil individual, a man resentful of our freedoms, representing nothing but a violent anger that has no place in any spirituality, and it is precisely by being united and by remaining loyal to our common humanity that this futile menace will be defeated.

110 This has been an awful episode in human history, Mr Speaker, but I am confident that these stories of heroism and this stoic refusal to give in to fear will once again show us for the remarkably lucid and compassionate species we are.

Thank you.

115 Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to associate themselves with these sentiments? I will now ask the House to –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker.

120 Mr Speaker: Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will now call on the House to observe a minute's silence in honour of the City of London and the Members of Parliament at Westminster.

A minute's silence was observed.

Tribute to Maurice Xiberras

125 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, all Members of the House will have been saddened to hear of the death of Mr Maurice Xiberras.

Mr Xiberras sat on benches on both sides of this House. As a leading light in the integrationist movement of the late 1960s, Maurice became a Member of the House of Assembly as a Government Minister, with Sir Bob Peliza as Chief Minister from 1969 to 1972 and with Peter 130 Isola as a fellow Minister. Those were challenging times, Mr Speaker. The Frontier was closed and logistical arrangements akin to a Berlin Airlift had to be put in place.

After the election of 1972, Mr Xiberras remained in this House as a Member of Opposition, with Sir Joshua re-elected as Chief Minister. In that year, of course, Mr Speaker, both you and Mr Bossano were elected with Mr Xiberras as Members of this House. Interestingly, Mr Speaker, I note that today in this House there are two people who sat with Mr Xiberras in this place and two people who stood with Mr Xiberras in elections to this place. You and Mr Bossano sat here with him between 1972 and 1979, and Mr Bossano and Mr Feetham stood with him in 1972 and 2003 respectively. I do note that in the gallery we see a former Member of this House, Mr Caruana, who also sat here with Mr Xiberras.

140 Mr Speaker, the 10 years in which Maurice was a Member of this House were, as ever for Gibraltar, challenging and difficult. The closure of the Frontier by the Dictator General Franco was perhaps the most difficult moment, but no less difficult was the return of democracy to Spain and the UK's attempts to engage us in sovereignty discussions with Spain as a result. For much of that time Maurice was in the heart of the action as a Member of this House and as a Minister or Opposition Member or Leader of the Opposition.

145 A very full biography of Mr Xiberras cannot be given today, but it is worth noting that he was a Member of this House for a decade and that he was known for his eloquence whilst here. I will always remember a phrase he coined in the 2003 General Election, the first one I and the Leader of the Opposition were candidates in. Maurice's turn of phrase then was to say that the election was not about grooming horses. I could see how he had managed to encapsulate contesting theories about what that election could be about in just one phrase. He will have been pleased that neither of the two colts in that election have done badly.

I considered Maurice to be a friend, Mr Speaker, who could argue a totally contrary political position but who was nonetheless happy to have dinner and share anecdotes and tales of political battles past in a convivial and jovial spirit.

155 Last week, on hearing of his unexpected death, I spoke to his son David to express the condolences of the Government and of the people of Gibraltar. Today, I record the thanks of this House for Maurice's work in it and his contribution to it.

Mr Speaker, the angry young man is with us no more, but his powerful words in debate, his anger at injustice, his passion for Gibraltar and his contribution to this House will live forever in the record of proceedings of this place. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

165 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, much has been said about Maurice Xiberras the politician, and he was indeed one of the great political figures of his time: a founder member of the IWBP; a member of the Constitutional Conference that negotiated for Gibraltar the 1969 Constitution with its linchpin the preamble to the Constitution; he was de facto Deputy Chief Minister in the IWBP Government of the early 1970s and then Leader of the Opposition with the IWBP and then the Democratic Party for British Gibraltar.

170 There is absolutely no doubt that he was, together with Sir Joshua Hassan, Sir Bob Peliza and the Hon. Member opposite, the Father of the House, one of four political figures that dominated politics in the 1970s. To this day his result at the 1976 election, where he stood as an independent following the collapse of the IWBP, coming second in the overall results, continues to be the best result by an independent. Indeed, no independent since has in fact succeeded in being elected to this House.

175 It was a great shame, it has to be said, that despite the fact that he was honoured by this Parliament with the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour, he was not alas honoured by Her Majesty. I do not understand the reason why, Mr Speaker. Perhaps it was that he left Gibraltar for the United Kingdom in 1979, at a time when I am told the DPBG were ahead in the polls, in order to follow his wife and his two young children.

Anyone who has served in politics at the level that Maurice served will understand the unique pressures that politics places on family life. His wife Shirley was raised in Jamaica, unused to living in a small place like Gibraltar and relying on a very small parliamentary salary, and with those unique pressures the strain must have been extremely difficult indeed. When Shirley left Gibraltar he followed, but unfortunately their relationship did not endure and they separated after a few years.

I know that having left Gibraltar in these circumstances left very deep emotional scars, and years later he would tell me that for many years he felt as if he had turned his back on his country. It was one of the reasons why he stood with me in the 2003 election. He wanted, win or lose, to exercise that ghost that had haunted him for many years and he did so by standing again, even though he knew he had little prospect of getting elected. I am glad he did, Mr Speaker, because he became like a father to me, like a mentor, and he followed ... and I indeed followed him – we travelled together in my own political journey since 2003.

He was a man of enormous understanding, honesty, integrity and humility. He was described in the 1970s by his political opponents as ‘an angry young man’. I never knew him as a young man, but I never saw him lose his temper. He was firm when he had to, he would get on his high horse when he felt a matter of principle was at stake and would never compromise on what he felt was fundamental, but I never saw him lose his temper.

If I was to pick a gripe with him it was that his powerful intellect often led him into writing opinion pieces which I described to him, and he agreed, as being the length of a mini thesis. He just had to cover every single point he felt was important, from every conceivable angle. Even after he left frontline politics he would often send me his opinion pieces for a second opinion, always with the title in the email ‘Please slash away’.

It is, of course, his unwavering commitment to retaining British sovereignty over Gibraltar that he is best remembered, a commitment that earned him the nickname at the Foreign Office of the ‘Abominable No Man’. He was deeply suspicious of the Foreign Office but also, it has to be said, of any nationalist tendencies in Gibraltar. He was of course deeply committed to the concept of maintaining our current levels of autonomy whilst strengthening our links with the United Kingdom in the form, in his latter years, of devolved integration – something that he and I both believed might become increasingly relevant in this new chapter that Gibraltar travels in post Brexit.

A few years ago, Mr Speaker, his beloved Mary Ann passed away, unfortunately because of cancer. She had been his partner for many, many years and I knew that he was deeply affected by her loss. I know that he is now in a better place. Maurice, my friend, my mentor, until we meet again may you rest in peace. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Does anyone from the Government ...? The Hon. Mr Bossano.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I had little contact with Maurice after he left Gibraltar, and therefore what the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has told us about his subsequent life is something that I think many of us are not familiar with to the level of knowledge that he has told us today.

But of course, I came into politics because of the position that was created in 1964 when the United Nations Committee of 24 for the first time was addressed by Sir Joshua and Peter Isola and came out with a decision which stands today as it stood in 1964 and is the basis of the annual battle we have to fight in the United Nations. And it was because at the time the position that was being taken was that Gibraltar wanted close association – something that did not exist in the terminology of the UN; there were only three options there – there was an option of integration which we were not familiar with but which in fact was brought to the light of day by a journalist who was also working in GBC, Hector Licudi, who was the first one to raise the issue of that option as an alternative. We set up a group to investigate the possibility. We got in touch with the Maltese, to whom it had been in fact offered and Mintoff eventually rejected it, and 235 from that initial investigation we created the pro-integration movement which was the precursor to the IWBP. The pro-integration movement was the first contact I had with Maurice, other than the fact that we shared years together in the grammar school, and in that first 240 contact it was when we first started gathering some momentum for the concept. Indeed, it was no more than an NGO. Within the AACR we had supporters of integration and there was a debate, which was not a partisan debate – we were looking at the merits of the alternatives that were before us in a situation where what was available under the UN Charter, which was not so-called close association but free association, had a serious weakness from our perspective at the 245 time, which was the fact that the relationship could be ended unilaterally by the UK. Therefore, a free association in decolonisation mode would have allowed the United Kingdom – given the atmosphere that there was then, and continued with even greater force after the death of Franco, that a deal had to be ... The UK resisted. The United Nations called for talks with Spain 250 until Franco died, and that is at the time that I was in Opposition and Maurice was in Opposition and it was at that time that the talks started with Marcelino Oreja in Strasburg. Those talks were the talks that were being held under pressure from the United Kingdom in order to comply with the UN recommendation – because it was not a binding thing – that the process that decolonisation should de facto be one in which Spain would be involved, and as far as Spain was concerned their involvement was only to agree the terms of the recovery of Gibraltar.

In that context the position that Gibraltar found itself in following the referendum was a position that was extremely difficult, because the restrictions were getting worse by the day and it was a baptism of fire for somebody like Maurice and Joe and other people who came in for the first time into Government, straight into Government without having been in opposition before 255 and having had the opportunity to learn the ropes of the game, and having faced a situation where overnight our workforce was disappearing. The one thing that people fear, which I think we are all confident is not going to happen, is a repeat of that situation. If today the workforce that we have in Spain could not come in, the effect on our economy would be even greater than it was in 1968, because at that time many of those workers were here to keep the military base 260 going, but today it is not the military base that is going but the private sector, which is what brings in all the money that we authorise as should be spent in this House through the taxation of that wealth, and we need to understand just how important it is that we keep the private sector going. But in those days when Maurice came in, the importance was that the military base, which was 70% of our economy, and the public services were the big users of foreign 265 labour and that foreign labour had to be sourced, and a deal was done with the Moroccan government using the offices of the British government to bring people here. And Maurice, as Minister for Labour, was faced with a situation that nobody had ever had to face in that job before. It was on the basis of that we were enabled to keep an economy that was flourishing because the level of activity on the military base was kept up. Within the confines of what could 270 be done in four years, I think the transformation that was carried out in Gibraltar by the first IWBP Government, which came in under very difficult circumstances and not only managed to maintain the momentum of the economy but in fact did more – admittedly, some of it with UK development aid, because of the aid programme under the Sustain and Support policy that the UK put in place the moment that we had the threat of being strangled by our neighbour, but 275 nevertheless it produced enormous results and the Government was able to rally everybody around in a situation where people were prepared to work voluntarily. I remember Bob Peliza going to work in the Alameda Gardens to give an example to the rest of doing work free of charge because of areas that were short of labour.

I think that Maurice's contribution in a technical sense, in terms of being able to deliver 280 things with his ability, was a very important part of the success of that Government and I believe that for him it must have been very difficult to leave Gibraltar and leave his involvement in politics.

I was the one who invited him to join the integration movement before it became a political party, and there were other people in that original movement from all walks of life and it was 285 completely non-partisan. It became a political issue when there were two political parties, each one with a different philosophy. The philosophy was what was best for Gibraltar.

I think in this House and in our community it is very important that we limit our differences to legitimate things in which we believe we are advocating what is best for Gibraltar and we do not allow it to deteriorate into something that becomes then a personal issue between us and we then follow a course of action which is driven no longer by putting the interests of our country and our people first. I do not think that ever happened with Maurice. I think Maurice believed with everything that he said that he was doing what was best for Gibraltar, even though some of us might have disagreed with some of his later statements after he left Gibraltar and came back.

295 Certainly we were very close friends, we were very close colleagues and I join the statements that have been made by the Chief Minister and the Leader of the Opposition at the great loss that Gibraltar faces. Some of us are nearer that point in life than others.

Hon. D A Feetham: Perish the thought!

300 Hon. J J Bossano: I hope that it will be a long time before speeches have got to be made about me in this House!

Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

305 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Ms Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, my family name's connection with the late Maurice Xiberras is one that goes back many years, even to a time before either you or the present Father of the House were involved in local politics, difficult as it may be to imagine such a time.

310 He was a contemporary of my father's and as such played an important part in helping Gibraltar take those tottering steps towards being a more functional and self-sufficient democracy. Mr Xiberras's contributions as a member of this early generation of Gibraltar's political development are significant and include his participation in the Constitutional Conference that led to our previous and historic Constitution; serving as a Minister in the IWBP Government and later as Leader of the Opposition, a role that saw him represent Gibraltar's interests in discussions with the United Kingdom and Spain, as well as accompanying my father to Strasbourg for these important meetings.

320 Mr Xiberras played these roles with full conviction to his principles and values and there was never any doubting of his commitment to what he felt was the best for Gibraltar. Of course, Mr Speaker, history naturally shows that Mr Xiberras was also a political rival of my father, but despite this, Sir Joshua always held his adversary in high regard. They disagreed on many matters of local and international concern, disagreements which have continued well beyond my father's sad passing, but as has tended to be the case in local politics, there was a healthy mutual respect in this relationship between Chief Minister and Leader of the Opposition. Indeed, Mr Xiberras wrote my father a very kind letter shortly before his move to the UK, where he expressed both his admiration and his appreciation for the way in which Sir Joshua had always treated him. And while the particular versions of history may have differed, I can confidently assert that my father and his family have always remained similarly appreciative of how Mr Xiberras served the people of Gibraltar.

325 It is unfortunate that Mr Xiberras's direct involvement in local politics was cut short with his passing, for I am convinced that he would have continued to make important contributions to our evolving democracy. It is obvious that his interest in local developments continued even to recent months and his engagement was still today helping to shape the minds of some.

335 As a member of the latest generation of a genealogy of parliamentarians that both my father and Mr Xiberras started almost 50 years ago, I would like to give thanks for his loyal service to the nation we have all been elected to represent, and of course, would like to extend my condolences and those of my family to all of Mr Xiberras's loved ones. May he rest in peace in the knowledge that Gibraltar is a better place today because of what he did yesterday.

340 Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I would like to echo those sentiments myself. I am not going to deal with the politics of the situation. My relationship, my close friendship with Maurice was also based on other pillars. We spent six wonderful years teaching together in the grammar school. During that 345 time we were both also involved with the Teachers' Association campaigning for the recognition of teachers, which we did not enjoy then and which they enjoy now.

Another aspect of our close friendship was the fact that for a decade we used to go out to bat opening the innings for Grammarians. We were both very keen cricketers, something that also strengthened our friendship.

350 Politics never divided us. We could rise above that, something that I would commend to all. It is terribly important that we should all realise that there are much more important matters in life that bind us together than political differences.

I join myself, my staff as well, with the sentiments that have been expressed. It was a terrible shock. Only last January Maurice was sitting pretty well where Joe Caruana is now. It was the 355 last time we saw him in the House. (Banging on desks)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in light of those tributes across the floor and from the Chair, I would now invite the House to observe a minute's silence as a mark of respect for the passing of Mr Maurice Xiberras, a former Member.

A minute's silence was observed.

360 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the best way to honour the Westminster Parliament and Maurice Xiberras's memory is to have questions, argument and debate in this House.

Questions for Oral Answer

INFRASTRUCTURE AND PLANNING

Q229/2017

Park and ride –
Manifesto pledge

Clerk: We now proceed to answers to Oral Questions, and we commence with Question 229. The questioner is the Hon. T N Hammond.

365 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, does Government have any plans to construct park and ride car parks to the north of the runway as per the 2011 manifesto pledge and then rent all spaces in the Devil's Tower Road car park to residents?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.
370

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, as part of our Government's 2011 manifesto commitment to provide parking north of the runway, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar announced on 16th January 2014 the use of Western Beach car park.

375 Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar also invited tenders in 2014 for the commercial development of the old air terminal site. One of the tender requirements was that any proposals include an element of parking for cars and motorbikes for public use.

In view of the Traffic Plan and its potential options for the car park at Devil's Tower Road, no final decision has been taken on the use of this car park.

Q230/2017
Midtown car park –
Breakdown of space ownership

380 Clerk: Question 230, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, of the 456 parking spaces sold at the Midtown car park, can the Government say how many different owners there are and if there are any instances of multiple space ownership, provide a breakdown of the number of spaces purchased by a single owner given the number of spaces owned by each owner?
385

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the information requested is attached in the schedule handed to hon. Members.
390

Answer to Question 230/2017

The records held by Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd show as follows:

Owners with one parking space	259	259
Owners with two parking spaces	62	124
Owners with three parking spaces	5	15
Owners with four parking spaces	3	12
Owners with five parking spaces	2	10
Owners with six parking spaces	3	18
Owners with eight parking spaces	1	8
Owners with ten parking spaces	1	10

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I am not sure that the Minister will be able to answer this question but I will ask it anyway. I note on the list that there is a single owner with eight parking spaces and another single owner with 10 parking spaces. Is the Minister aware of whether that is a private individual or a company that owns those spaces?
395

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, yes, they are both companies.

Q231/2017

Black cabs –

Progress re environmentally friendly engines

Clerk: Question 231, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister say what progress has been made with the 400 introduction of black cabs with environmentally friendly engines?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the London Taxi 405 Company (LTC) are currently in the process of inaugurating their new facilities in Coventry, UK, where the new electric TX5 black cab will be manufactured. The left-hand-drive version will not be available until early 2018 with LTC focusing their initial builds on the right-hand-drive version, which is their core market.

We expect to be able to procure this version of the traditional London taxi. The left-hand-410 drive Euro 6 version of the outgoing TX4 version was not manufactured by LTC due to resource deployment totally being allocated to the preparation of the new facilities and the development of the right-hand-drive new TX5.

Hon. T N Hammond: I thank the Minister for that response. I just pick up the suggestion that 415 there will be a procurement: is it Government's intention to actually procure the black cabs themselves, or will they be procured privately?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, these black cabs were to be procured in partnership with the 420 GTA.

Hon. T N Hammond: And can the Minister describe how that partnership will take shape?
What does it mean 'in partnership with the GTA'? Is Government going to be providing funds for that?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, we have not completed our discussions on this with the GTA, so 425 it is still ... When the black cabs are available we will then sit down to discuss the detail. The issue this has not been done before is because the black cabs, as I said in my initial reply, have been impossible to procure, not that we did not want to procure them. In fact, we are very keen on seeing black cabs within Gibraltar reflecting the Britishness of Gibraltar, but unfortunately 430 they were not available and because this has now been thrown ahead until probably late 2018, the discussion really has not been finalised in that respect.

Hon. T N Hammond: But surely, Mr Speaker, if the plan is to enter or to have a partnership with the GTA, and bearing in mind this concept was introduced back in the 2011 manifesto, 2018 435 is not so very far away now, and it certainly was the case in 2011. There must have been some conversations already with the GTA, some agreements in principle as to how this partnership would work.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, we work with a GTA Committee whose life is much shorter than 440 ours is within Parliament, and as committees change opinions change, so perhaps what was discussed very briefly with one committee has evolved with the re-election of other committees.
It is not until we see these cars becoming available, which is what we are waiting for now, that we will then sit with the committee of the day to discuss the final details on how we proceed from here on.

445 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, presumably an initial costing exercise at some point was undertaken in order to come up with this manifesto commitment. Does the Minister have any idea of how much a single black cab of this nature would cost?

450 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, we have no idea what the new electric cabs will cost. The initial investigation was made with the TX4s and we do not know what the new electric vehicles will cost in the future.

455 Hon. T N Hammond: And could the Minister, if the calculation has been done for the previous version of the cabs, provide a figure approximately of what one of those cabs would have cost?

460 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the question the hon. Member is asking is not relevant whatsoever. The question he is asking is what we calculated the price of the vehicles were then; that is totally different to what the price of the electric vehicle will be in the future. Until we have a final price for these electric vehicles it is calculations made in the past, which are totally different today.

465 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if the Minister could indicate whether it is the intention with this partnership with the GTA, whether to provide black cabs, to replace all taxis with black cabs or just a proportion of them. We can obviously go to the internet and find out what the cost of a black cab is to purchase and we can do the maths ourselves if he can tell us how many cabs he thinks will be involved.

470 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, initially what we are looking at is just the 'cabs', in inverted commas, the private hire vehicles which belong to the GTA. That is the only thing that was being looked at. There would be, I would say ... I cannot remember off hand, but I think there are six vehicles which are run by the GTA themselves. That was the initial part of this plan.

Q232/2017
'No idling' signs –
Update

Clerk: Question 232, the Hon. T N Hammond.

475 Hon. T N Hammond: Further to Question 196/2016, has the Government had an opportunity to review the recommendations made in its Environmental Action and Management Plan on 'No idling' signs; and does the Government intend to begin a programme of placement of these signs, and if so, where?

480 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

485 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government is reviewing the recommendations on 'No idling' signs as part of a holistic review of the EAMP. The intention is to ensure that recommendations relating to traffic and traffic reduction reflect and complement the measures included in the Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan, which is to be published shortly. Additionally, many vehicles now feature no-idling facilities built in.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, just bearing in mind originally in the Environmental Action and Management Plan the placement of 'No idling' signs actually had a timeframe associated 490 with it – I do not recall, I believe it was 2015 but I stand to be corrected on that – is the Minister now saying that actually it may be the case that a decision will be taken on review that that recommendation will be rejected and that no ‘No idling’ signs will be placed? What is the purpose of reviewing a recommendation which appeared within the plan to have already been accepted by the Government?

495

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):

Mr Speaker, the Environmental Action and Management Plan is under constant review and it is acutely being reviewed at the moment. A lot of the commitments in the plan have been achieved; others we have to review the time frame for them.

500 I do not think that reviewing something actively should be taken as a negative and I suspect that when we get the review completed and we have new ... Remember that these timeframes are aims, they are not ... You do it in advance and you are not absolutely certain that you will be able to hit them, but certainly the intention is to complete all these requirements and it is very likely that the ‘No idling’ signs will still be a feature of the plan.

505 Hon. T N Hammond: I thank the Minister for his intervention. Could I just ask, because representations have been made to me, whether the Government would consider at least accelerating the process for the placement of ‘No idling’ signs particularly at the Frontier, where it is an obvious place, when there is queueing, for ‘No idling’ signs to be placed, and also in areas of the Upper Rock where often vehicles are in queues and similarly pollution can become a 510 problem for pedestrians?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not have the plan in front of me. I think it specifically did refer to the Frontier. That is one clear area where this is an objective, and there are other areas as well.

515 I think really what we have to do is convince people that idling is bad – bad for the environment, bad for one’s health – so probably, more than just signs in specific areas, we need to encourage it in other ways as well. I think the Upper Rock is one area where possibly in some specific cases these could be used, but I think the Frontier is probably the worst offender.

Q233 and 234/2017

Speed cameras –

Aspect of vehicle captured; locations and operational times

Clerk: Question 233, the Hon. T N Hammond.

520

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can Government describe the operation of the new speed cameras, and in particular whether the image they capture is at the front, back or both aspects of the vehicle?

525 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 234.

530 Clerk: Question 234, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can Government say if speed cameras will be in operation at all the designated sites all of the time?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

535

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar is in the process of commissioning speed cameras at various locations throughout Gibraltar. These locations are Devil's Tower Road, Rosia Road and Europa Advance Road, where four distinct camera positions are available.

540

This pilot project will see cameras placed in all of these locations becoming active and will be controlled operationally by the Royal Gibraltar Police.

Depending on the success of this initiative that is aimed at reducing mortality and injury from speeding-related accidents, further locations may be considered in the future.

545

As with parking fines, which have recently been increased, the Government has no desire to take citizens' money for speeding or illegal parking. What we all want to achieve, and I am sure I speak for all Members of this House, is that people should not offend, and in that way save lives, make our roads safer and ensure citizens follow the law of the road. These are manifestly not measures designed to raise revenue, as success of the measures will be when the revenue decreases.

550

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, absolutely I am sure everyone in this House supports any initiative which will enhance road safety. I have not brought revenue raising into the equation, so I am not sure why the Minister is at pains to point out that it is not a revenue-raising initiative.

555

I would ask him whether he could answer the question as to what aspects of the vehicles the cameras will photograph, which was the first question asked: whether it be front, back, or front and back?

560

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the reason why I mentioned the latter part in the question was because there were Twitter feeds to this effect suggesting that Government would raise revenue with the cameras. That is not the point of the cameras because, as I said in my reply, as people realise that cameras are functioning and they are being caught on cameras they will then obviously reduce their speeds and not get caught. That will reduce revenue and that will be the end of it.

565

As to the direct question the hon. Member is asking, this is something which I do not think is in the interest of actually mentioning the details. This is something which the Royal Gibraltar Police is managing and it is strictly a policing thing. If the hon. Member is adamant to know more, I am happy to discuss this behind the Speaker's Chair if necessary.

570

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I really cannot understand why it is not in the public interest simply to know whether the speed cameras will be taking images of the front, the back or from both aspects of the vehicle. I would thoroughly recommend, personally, that the speed cameras have the capability to capture images of both aspects of the vehicle. That way, all vehicles, whether they be motorbikes or cars, can be subject to the same restrictions on speed and the same rules and fined accordingly. It would seem inappropriate only to have the capability from the front, because then clearly it would be very difficult to fine mopeds for speeding, and certainly one of the more dangerous aspects of driving on our roads and the people most vulnerable perhaps are speeding moped riders. Often it is very young people who are new to the roads who tend to fall into this trap, and alas and tragically we have seen accidents over the years occurring with young people.

So I would thoroughly recommend to the Minister that he ensures that the capability of the cameras is such that people can be discouraged from speeding on motorbikes and clearly there is some value to having a front aspect of the vehicle because it then allows the driver of the vehicle to be identified as well. Of course, a vehicle can be insured for multiple drivers so it would be very difficult to fine an individual if the vehicle is only photographed from behind, for the very simple reason that it would be very difficult to identify who the driver is. I would just ask the Minister for his views on that.

590 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, we brought to Parliament the Bill to do with speed cameras and the hon. Member I am sure will remember that, regardless of who is driving the vehicle, the onus will be on the registered owner if it cannot be proved otherwise. That was something that was discussed in Parliament and in fact I think we approved unanimously in that respect, so it is a bit odd that the hon. Member should be mentioning that.

595 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I told the Hon. Minister I would come in on the public interest point if it assists the hon. Gentleman and the House.

The cameras are complex and they deal with a number of different aspects of vehicles in different places. What we are saying to the hon. Gentleman is we are happy to have the discussion with him but we do not want to provide a guide as to how the effect of the cameras may be avoided by people. Hence why, instead of having a debate across the floor of the House, we are inviting him to have the information that he is seeking behind the Speaker's Chair. I would have thought that is reasonable. We are not saying we will not give him the information; we just do not think it makes sense to be sharing across the floor of the House that level of information.

605 The Police may take a different view as to how to deal with issues related to deterrents and they will be the ones on the front line of deciding what is said in terms of any campaign about how the cameras operate etc. We feel that we should not be the ones putting that information out there at this moment in that way and that we are quite happy to have a discussion with him. If it is any consolation, all the things he has said are the things that the Government considered at the time it was procuring the cameras, so he cannot for one moment think that we did not take all of those issues into consideration in the context of procuring, installation and now potential operation of the cameras.

Q235/2017
Government vehicle fleet –
Financial terms re leasing

Clerk: Question 235, the Hon. R M Clinton.

615 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, further to Question 101/2017 can the Government advise if it has now made a decision in respect of the one expression of interest received for the leasing of its vehicle fleet; and if so, what are the financial terms agreed?

620 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the answer remains as set out to Question 101/2017.

625 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer. Can he give an indication to the House as to when he might expect to make a decision?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the moment we take a decision we will let the hon. Member know when that happens.

630 Mr Speaker: May I say to the hon. Member who has asked the question, it is exactly the same question as he asked at the last meeting with the addition of the word 'now'. The answer he has received is the same. I therefore will not allow him to ask another question on the leasing of the Government's vehicle fleet until six months have elapsed.

635 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for your guidance and you have already expressed this to me. I would, however, ask for some flexibility if I may ask a question about vehicle leasing in future, in a different context.

640 Mr Speaker: Should there be a development in the interim period – if there is a development from the Government, if they were to announce the award of the tender – then I will allow the hon. Member to ask about the financial terms agreed, but only if that happens.

COMMERCE

Q236/2017

Post Office and associated services – Supply workers

Clerk: Question 236, the Hon. D A Feetham.

645 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many supply workers are currently working within the Post Office and associated services and since when have those individuals been on supply?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

650 Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Yes, Mr Speaker, there are 11 supply workers currently working in the Post Office, most of whom have been on supply since August 2015.

655 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Gentleman have a breakdown of when those individuals started as supply workers? I am interested in particular in any individuals that have been on permanent supply, continuously on supply for a considerable period of time. That is really what I am focusing on and it may assist my saying so to the Hon. Minister in the question that I have asked.

660 Hon. A J Isola: Yes, Mr Speaker, there is nobody on permanent supply. There are some that get called more than others do, and the way that the formula works is depending on how many days you have been called over a period of time when you get to an allotment of days, that is when you are eligible to be considered for being permanent. So it is not that I have the details of how many continuous days each of the supply workers have been on supply for, because I do not have that information. What I can tell you is that their start dates are ... As I said, six from 2015, the majority from 2015; one from 2014; two from 2013; one from 2009; and one from 665 2007.

670 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the information that I have is that the mail man has been on permanent supply, in other words working continuously – and bear in mind, Mr Speaker, that when an individual is on permanent supply they do not have the benefit of holiday leave and also sick leave – but permanent supply for four years; the euro fulfilment individual has been on permanent supply for three years; parcel post continuous supply for two years; and an individual in the registration room has also been on permanent supply for another two years. Can he confirm those figures?

675 Hon. A J Isola: No, Mr Speaker, I cannot confirm those figures because I do not have that data available to me. What I can tell the hon. Member is that I am meeting with the supply workers, in fact, tomorrow – the meeting was set at around about the same time that he will have received the note that I have received – and we will be discussing these things with them at our meeting.

680 Hon. D A Feetham: And does the hon. Gentleman agree with me that for somebody to be four years on permanent supply is really extremely unfair on that individual and on that individual's family, bearing in mind, Mr Speaker, that when they were in Opposition and we were in Government we were constantly lambasted for there being individuals on permanent supply? Indeed, it was a manifesto commitment of theirs in 2011 and I do recall that the Hon. the Father of the House also went to the Post Office during the course of the 2011 election and told individuals there that all those who were on permanent supply would be made permanent.

690 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I think one of the issues that we have is that we do not really understand what the hon. Member means by 'permanent supply'. Our understanding is that people who are on supply could be on supply for a year and get called once a week, twice a week, two days a week. To what extent that is or is not permanent supply I do not know.

695 From the information I see in this file, I can tell you that none of the people that he is referring to have worked every day on supply for the period. (Hon. D A Feetham: They have.) No, they haven't. (Hon. D A Feetham: They have.) Not from the information that I have. But as I said to the hon. Member, we will be meeting with the supply workers to go through the issues that he has on the paper that I have and hopefully make some progress to see how these matters can be progressed in order to ensure that the taxpayer receives value for money in their postal service.

700 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I am very grateful for that. I can tell the hon. Gentleman that the information that I have comes straight from the horse's mouth and these individuals have been working continuously – the first individual for four years.

705 It appears, Mr Speaker, that the heart of the problem – but of course the Hon. the Minister will make his own mind up when he talks to these individuals – is that there are a number of vacancies that exist at the Post Office, and indeed there have been individuals that have been moved out of the Post Office into other areas. For example, the postal sorter retired in 2013; that is a post that has not been filled. Does the Government have any plans in relation to these particular posts that are vacant at the Post Office? Or indeed does the Government have any plans in respect of the individuals that have been moved out of the postal work, therefore creating this space within the postal service that needs to be occupied, in my view – that is my assessment – by these individuals on permanent supply?

715 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, with respect to the length of permanent or normal supply I will wait to meet the horse to understand what it is that they are telling you. (Laughter)

In respect of what the vacancies are, what the operational aspects are, I think what we are currently doing is doing a review to better understand exactly what the position is, and once that has been completed I will be in a much better position to discuss with the people themselves, and of course their union, how we see things moving forward.

720 Mr Speaker: Next question.

HOUSING AND EQUALITY

Q276/2017

Disability Bill –

Modifications required to public areas and buildings

Clerk: We now move to Question 276. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, further to Written Question 24/2017, is the Government now 725 able to provide an answer?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, this is the exact 730 same question as Question 24/2017 and accordingly the answer remains the same.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, is the Minister able to disclose whether an assessment has been carried out or is currently being carried out?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, assessments are being carried out, yes.
735

Mr Speaker: Again, I cannot allow the hon. Member to raise this matter for another six months. Okay?

Q277/2017

Mortgaged housing estates–
Responsibility for collecting rent arrears

Clerk: Question 277, the Hon. R M Clinton.

740

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise with whom the responsibility rests for the collection of housing arrears in future in respect of the six housing estates mortgaged, and how will this be managed?

745

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the responsibility for the collection of rent arrears will continue to be that of the Housing Department and managed in the same way.

750

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for her answer. If I may ask, can she confirm that, in terms of the entering into arrears agreements, that the Government will still be pursuing the same policy as they have done in the past and offer exactly the same terms and conditions that they have offered in the past to tenants of these six housing estates prior to the 755 mortgaging?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, yes, in relation to the six estates that are subject to the financing, the same conditions apply because the threshold is that we have to collect arrears of rent regardless. While of course we have a duty in these estates, we also have a duty to the 760 taxpayer in the other estates as well, so we continue to pursue them, to collect them, to chase them as vigorously in relation to all the debtors in the same way.

765 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Minister: what would happen in the event of significant build-up of arrears in future? Would it be that the Government would have to make good any deficit in rents collected and have to be paid over to Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd, or does that risk in respect of arrears lie with Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd in not receiving rent, or does that risk rest with the Minister for Housing – in which case, does she have an obligation to make good any difference in the collection of rents in the future?

770 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, that of course is a hypothetical question –

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Which is not allowed.

775 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: – which is not allowed under Standing Orders, but in any event, for a question of that detail I would need notice of the question. However, what I would say in a general answer to that, to allay Mr Clinton's fears in relation to arrears generally, is that since the arrears collection agreement commenced last January – so it has been going on for over a year – the trend has been that arrears have been decreasing and decreasing significantly every single month of the year except for the month after Christmas, where we had very little 780 increase, but other than that, and they are now down and they are now down to a level below the month before. But the trend is that the figures are going down and not up, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for her answer and for and her assurance that arrears will be going down.

785 May I ask – I presume there is and maybe she could confirm – is there actually an agreement with Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd in respect of the collection of rents and would she be willing to provide that to this House?

790 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is asking questions he knows the answers to because he was briefed privately in the subject of this matter. That is not a question that arises from this question. It is a question on which he should have given specific notice and he would have got the answer that he was specifically briefed outside of this House because we said that we would consider those arrangements with him and with other Members of the House. The hon. Lady attended a meeting also where she was briefed in respect 795 of those matters.

Q278/2017

Purchase of new affordable homes – Letters to young people to commence process

Clerk: Question 278, the Hon. R M Clinton.

800 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, further to Question 173/2017, can the Government advise if letters have since been sent to young people to start the process of purchasing new affordable homes at Bob Peliza Mews and Hassan Centenary Terraces?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

805 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, not yet but it is expected to happen in days. We want to ensure, as far as possible, that the letters go out to all persons interested.

810 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for her answer. Can she give the House an indication of how many letters will be sent out – presumably she has the statistics; and if possible – it may be a big ask – a split between both developments?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I would require notice for details in relation to that question.

815 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I will of course in future table a more detailed question, but could she give the House a ballpark figure as to how many letters she intends to send out? She must have some idea.

820 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, there is a lot going on in Gibraltar and a lot going on in the world for us to be here being asked to give ballpark figures of numbers of letters. If he wants to know how many letters are going to go out, he asks us how many letters are going to go out. If he wants to know how many letters have gone out, he can ask us, once they have gone out, how many letters have gone out. If we give a ballpark figure and it is somehow slightly different to the figure we finally give of letters that have gone out, then we face a question of 825 why we gave a ballpark figure that is different to the figure of actual numbers.

This is not a question that arises from have they gone out. Why does the hon. Gentleman think that it is appropriate to ask a supplementary about detail? If it is detail, give the Minister notice of the question and then we will happily come and tell you how many letters we are preparing to go out. It is not a question of not giving the information; it is a question of being 830 asked a question about detail in the context of a question in respect of which it does not arise.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Chief Minister's intervention.

835 Just for the sake of clarity, the question I asked was specifically in respect of the letters and I assumed that the Government would know how many were being prepared. But I will not pursue the point any further and I will do as the Chief Minister suggests and put in a more detailed question. I appreciate this is not a question either.

840 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, thank you, Mr Speaker, for the hon. Gentleman's non-question, but the hon. Gentleman needs to know that these numbers change. There will be more people on the housing waiting list and we want to cast the net as widely as possible, so it is not something we can know today. We can tell him the actual number when it happens and we will be quite happy to tell him – it is just a question of counting the pieces of paper that have gone out to different addresses.

845 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if I may intervene here, I notice that the statistics online have disappeared on the housing front. Is there any reason for this?

850 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am not sure how this arises as a supplementary question but I will answer because it was a question put to me by the Hon. Mr Reyes last month, where I explained that we had noticed some errors in the information that was going up and we were completely reviewing everything that was online because it was more important for me to make sure that if information is available on line, that it is correct and it is accurate and not things that we discovered when we reviewed, which for some reason were being inputted by different people and not being inputted properly. But that was a Parliament question at last 855 month's Parliament, if I recall correctly, Mr Speaker.

Q288/2017
Government dwellings –
Numbers vacant or derelict

Clerk: We move to Question 288. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: How many Government dwellings are there currently in Gibraltar which are vacant or derelict?

860

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, we are currently undertaking an in-depth study of all the properties.

865

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if I may ask, does Government or the Housing Ministry have any policy or any intention to allow for Gibraltarians to take any of these derelict properties on and perhaps beautify them and take them over in the future?

870

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, yes, in the future and in the past, because that is precisely what we have been doing with these properties. What we are doing at the moment, though, is looking at all the properties that we have available in our property portfolio to see how collectively we can move forward in a way that best suits the needs of the Government, and indeed, as the hon. Lady says, the housing needs of people in Gibraltar.

875

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one question arising from that question. If the Government is conducting, as the Minister says, an in-depth study into those properties, surely they must know how many dwellings are vacant or derelict.

880

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, again it is a number that fluctuates and it is not for the Department to determine whether a property is derelict or not. We need to consider various things into account and we need to look to see whether a property is vacant and beyond economical repair, in which case we would then assess it to be derelict.

885

There have been assessments, which we are reviewing, but the reason I have not provided the figure is because figures are subject to change, subject to this review that we are conducting, because it will all be taken into the global context of the properties that we have. But we will have a very clearer picture in the not-too-distant future because we are very advanced in the study. It is something that we are looking at collectively because we are looking at the parcels of properties that we have available and it may be that it entails moving properties. So it may be that we have more empty properties in the future but with a view to looking at the whole urban renewal and urban regeneration of certain parts of the Upper Town in particular.

890

Mr Speaker: Next question.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND THE GSB

Q289 and 290-301/2017

Public finances –

Public debt; Liquid reserves; GSB shareholding in Gibtelecom;
Inflation and public sector pay increase; Shell LNG Gibraltar Ltd; GSB debentures;
Standard Credit Finance Company Ltd; Management of mortgage funds; Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd; General Sinking Fund balance

895 Clerk: Question 289, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide the total Gross Debt, Aggregate Debt after application of the sinking fund to Gross Debt, Cash Reserves and Net Debt figures for Public Debt as at 1st February 2017?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
905 Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 290 to 301.

Clerk: Question 290, the Hon. R M Clinton.

910 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I beg your indulgence if I lose my voice in the next five minutes.

Can the Government please advise the total liquid reserves figure and its constituents, namely Consolidated Fund, Improvement and Development Fund, Government Owned Companies, Deposits, Contingencies and other funds for the following date, being 1st February 2017?

915

Clerk: Question 291, the Hon. R M Clinton.

920 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise how total liquid reserves are invested/held, giving details of all savings bank accounts and cash held for the following date, being 1st February 2017?

Clerk: Question 292, the Hon. R M Clinton.

925 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if the Gibraltar Savings Bank has invited any expressions of interest for all or part of its shareholding in Gibtelecom?

Clerk: Question 293, the Hon. R M Clinton.

930 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it is concerned that inflation for the quarter ended 1st January 2017 is 2.5% compared to 1.5% in the previous quarter; and is it still committed to pay increases of 2.75% or inflation, whichever is higher, for the public sector?

Clerk: Question 294, the Hon. R M Clinton.

935 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, given that the Chief Minister in his 2016 Budget speech stated that the Government would have a 49% interest in Shell LNG Gibraltar Ltd, can the Government advise why it answered Question 87/2017 as follows: 'There are no other joint ventures other than the one mentioned in the question'?

940 Clerk: Question 295, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise what are the financial terms and period for new savings products offered to holders of Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures that mature in 2017?

945 Clerk: Question 296, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise why was Strand Credit Finance Company Ltd (08489759) allowed to be struck off and dissolved by the UK Registrar of Companies by compulsory strike off for the 1st December 2015, and was any property consequently bona vacantia?

Clerk: Question 297, the Hon. R M Clinton.

955 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise why it was felt necessary to incorporate a new Strand Credit Finance Company (10094514) on 31st March 2016 in the United Kingdom and how much did that cost?

Clerk: Question 298, the Hon. R M Clinton.

960 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how it intends to manage the net £275 million raised by way of mortgaging the six housing estates and who is the responsible officer?

965 Clerk: Question 299, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please identify which Government-owned company is to make payments to Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd by way of housing allowance and what contractual arrangements have been put in place to facilitate this?

970 Clerk: Question 300, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how much has been paid in rents collected to Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd from inception of the new tenancy agreement for the six housing estates to 31st January 2017?

Clerk: Question 301, the Hon. R M Clinton.

980 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the balance on the General Sinking Fund as at 1st February 2017?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

985 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the position of the Public Debt as at 1st February 2017 continues to be as previously stated, except that the cash reserves were £95.6 million and the net public debt was £357 million.

990 The position as regards the total liquid assets composition, when, where and how these are invested on a particular date chosen by the Member opposite continues to be as previously stated.

The GSB has not invited any expression of interest for the shares in Gibtelecom.

995 The January level of the IRP is in line with what I predicted was likely to happen when I answered the hon. Member's questions in relation to the index increase of last October. All the indications are that inflation is likely to be higher in the future than it has been in the recent past. To the question on whether we stand by our commitments, the answer is that we do stand by our commitments.

I answered Question 87/2017 by providing the information requested in the question.

1000 There are no new saving products being offered to the holders of the GSB debentures that mature in 2017.

I am informed that Strand Credit Finance Company Ltd was struck off having been dormant due to an oversight on the part of the UK administration, who met the cost of reincorporating it.

1005 The cash raised by Gibraltar Capital Assets will be managed by the Treasury as part of the pooled cash reserves of the Government companies and the Housing Allowance payments will be received by the company from the funds in the pool. The rental income for the period requested was £1,896,189.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his response. As usual I will just need a couple of minutes to absorb it.

1010 I seem to note that I do not have an answer to Question 301, the balance in the General Sinking Fund.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the answer to that is already contained in the answer that I have given him.

1015

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I asked specifically for the balance of the General Sinking Fund. I do not recall hearing that number.

1020 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, if I tell him that there has been no change and he knows what the balance was before, then the answer is that the balance is what it was before. He should be able to work that one out for himself.

1025 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I have never been a great fan of the Times cryptic crossword, but could the Minister indulge me and just give me the number of the balance as at 1st February?

1030 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I do not see why I should indulge him. I spend every month telling him that there has been no change and now he cannot remember what was the figure that I gave him. Well, then, he can look it up.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, coming to the question of Shell LNG Gibraltar Ltd, can the Minister advise the House whether he considers this to be a Government joint venture? Yes or no?

1035 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not tell him what questions he should put and he does not tell me what answers I should give.

Hon. D A Feetham: But you do ask him [Inaudible]

1040 Hon. J J Bossano: No, I give him the benefit of my experience, for which he is always grateful, so that he can improve his performance – which he seems to be doing because he has now been promoted by the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition! (Laughter and banging on desks) I think he should thank me for that.

1045 If the hon. Member is asking me to express an opinion, then in my opinion since the Savings Bank owns all the shares, it is not a joint venture. A joint venture is something with a third party.

Hon. R M Clinton: Sorry, Mr Speaker, I do not know if the Minister and myself are talking at cross purposes but did I just hear him say ‘because the Savings Bank owns all the shares’ when I was talking about the Shell LNG?

1050 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the answer that I gave him was in relation to the question that he asked, right? He asked whether there was a joint venture with Shell by a Government company, and the answer is that there is not. The fact that a statement was made at a certain stage in time saying this was going to happen does not mean that things cannot be changed and plans cannot be changed. There is not a Government company in joint venture.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, the reason why I asked this question – and I will put a question to the Minister in a minute – is because I am conscious of the Minister’s desire for precise questions, and he gives precise answers for which I am always grateful. But in raising questions in the House I have to be clear in my own head, in my mind, as to will that question elicit the answer that I am expecting or not, and if the rules of the game change it is very hard for me to ask the right question to elicit the right answer. It is a bit like playing Animal, Vegetable, Mineral: suddenly the vegetable becomes a mineral and the mineral becomes a vegetable and I do not know which is which.

1065 Mr Speaker, I am just a bit concerned as to whether the Minister has been given the correct information, because if you do a search on Shell LNG you will find that it was incorporated not long after the Chief Minister’s speech on 18th August 2016, and of the 2,000 issued shares Credit Finance Limited is the proud owner of 98 shares, which is equivalent to the 49% we were talking about. Credit Finance I believe is still owned by the Gibraltar Development Corporation.

1070 When I start asking about Government joint ventures, is it that the Gibraltar Development Corporation or anything that it owns is not considered a joint venture? Or is he, in his answer, only going to answer in relation to specifically directly owned Government entities and nothing that is related to the GDC?

1075 I am sure the Minister will appreciate the difficulty that causes me in asking the right question. I would be grateful if the Minister could clarify.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, the first thing I want to clarify to the hon. Member is that he keeps on asking questions here on information that he has already obtained which is publicly available, which is something he is not supposed to be doing.

1080 The Credit Finance Company is predominantly owned by the Gibraltar Savings Bank and it is therefore something that is used as an investment vehicle by investing in activities, products or ventures that will promote the economic development of Gibraltar. Therefore, Credit Finance has invested because it comes within the terms of reference of what the Savings Bank does under the amendment which I introduced in the House and which he voted in favour of – but it is not the Government with Government money.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker – and I know I risk straying into extending the question. Does the Minister not accept that Credit Finance – the £30 million ordinary shares are owned by Gibraltar Development Corporation and that the preference shares are owned by the Savings Bank – have no voting rights?

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not accept what he has said because, as far as I am concerned, the majority shareholder in the company is the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

1095 If the hon. Member's analysis was true, then it would mean that all the things that he has said about the Credit Finance, which has been criticised by him and by his colleagues on innumerable occasions on the basis that Credit Finance was a company that was being used to give money to the Government ... all that would be false if in fact Credit Finance belonged to the Government, because how could the Government be giving money to itself and be criticised for doing it.

1100 There is an element of the original ordinary capital that was created under the GDC and then the bulk of the capital is provided by Credit Finance. So, if Credit Finance provides £400 million out of £430 million, I do not see how the hon. Member opposite argues that it is owned by the owner of the £30 million and not by the owner of the £400 million. So I do not agree with his analysis and it certainly does not stand up against his previous interventions when he has been critical, and so has the Leader of the Opposition, when they have accused the Government of using Credit Finance as a source of finance for Government projects. Well, look, if it belonged to the Government, as the hon. Member is now trying to describe it, then all the previous arguments would be nonsense because then the Government would be using something that belongs to it.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I always find the Minister's logic infallible. Following his own logic and following on from what I believe he has just said, what he is telling the House is that it is the Savings Bank that owns the 49% indirectly, through Credit Finance, in Shell LNG under the terms of its amended objects in which to further the economic development of Gibraltar. Would that be correct?

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, and it will earn a very handsome return on that investment.

1120 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is it not the case that the position is as follows: that what we have is a Government-owned company that is being funded to the tune of £30 million by the taxpayer through the GDC and £400 million through savers' money through the Gibraltar Savings Bank, but the vehicle itself is owned by the Government? It is a Government-owned company – at least partly owned by the Government, even though, as my hon. Friend has said, ordinary shares are owned by the Government through the GDC and the preference shares are owned by the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

1130 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, if the hon. Member is asking me to be true that the Gibraltar Development Corporation owns £30 million of the shares and the Credit Finance Company owns £400 million, then of course it is true because I have just said so myself a few minutes ago and I always tell the truth.

In any event, it is a matter of public knowledge; this is not a secret. But of course if the hon. Member would be happier if the £30 million that is owned by the Government was also owned by Credit Finance, I will take that on board and see if I can make him happy.

1135 Hon. D A Feetham: And is it not also the case that the circularity of the argument is as follows? You have a Government-owned company, Credit Finance. It is owned by the Government because the Government owns the ordinary shares. It is also partly owned by the Gibraltar Savings Bank, but it is funded by the taxpayer and by the Gibraltar Savings Bank. The £400 million in Credit Finance which the Gibraltar Savings Bank has invested has gone to another Government-owned company, which is Gibraltar Investment Holdings Ltd, which is then being used in order to pay for expenditure that Gibraltar Investment Holdings Ltd has, including the funding of all the other Gibraltar Government-owned companies, which includes projects and expenditure that those companies may have on behalf of the Government.

1145 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I do not see how that arises from the question on the LNG Shell Company, but of course all that the hon. Member is saying is that I am right in my analysis – and I am grateful to him for saying that – because he is saying that in fact the company that is providing the finance is a Government company and therefore, if it is a Government company, then he cannot be arguing that a different entity is providing money to the Government.
1150 Logically, his argument would only be consistent with what he has said in the past if he accepts that the Government is a very small minority shareholder – that is to say it is a shareholder that has £30 million out of £430 million. As far as I am concerned, the logic is that the decisions on the investments are determined predominantly for the benefit of the owner of the £400 million, which is the Gibraltar Savings Bank, which is why I am answering this question.

1155 Hon. D A Feetham: A final question, Mr Speaker. The point is that you can have a Government-owned company that is capitalised, that is provided with capital, with money, by the Gibraltar Savings Bank. It does not alter the nature of the beast, of the vehicle. The vehicle is a Government-owned company, at least partly so. It may be funded by the Gibraltar Savings Bank but it is a Government-owned company and it is then a Government-owned company that 1160 makes the decisions, be it on behalf of the shareholders or whatever, but it is a Government-owned company that is making the decisions as to where the money is being invested. It is actually being invested in other Government-owned companies and those other Government-owned companies are using it in order to fund projects that the hon. Gentleman promised a multiplicity of people at the last election and indeed previously in the 2011 election.

1165 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, Credit Finance invests money that it has obtained by issuing shares. It invests the money in order to make a profit so that the debenture holders are able to get the return that they do.

1170 There is no way that the hon. Members opposite can be in favour of the Savings Bank having debentures and paying the rates that they do and against the Savings Bank deploying those funds in accordance with the power that it has to do under the law to make a profit.

1175 I do not know if it is that the hon. Member prefers that the profits should go to a bank that is not owned by the Government and that when capital has to be raised it should be raised from other banks, which is something they used to do when they were in Government, when they used to put money in Barclays Bank and then borrow money from Barclays Bank, except that when they lent it to Barclays Bank they were getting 1% and when they borrowed it they were paying 6%.

1180 If and when the Members form the next Government of Gibraltar they can stop Credit Finance, they can reduce the activity of the Savings Bank, they can go back to having reserves of £1,444.45 instead of £25 million. That is their prerogative, but they will have to get a vote to do that. We have got a vote to enable us to do what we are doing and all that we are here to do is to explain to him how it is being done, which he does not have to agree with.

1185 Hon. D A Feetham: And I am very grateful to him always for his candid explanations, which certainly when he does explain things I always find very helpful. But drilling down to where the differences are here, which are highlighted and actually come out of that answer, yes, of course if you are taking debentures ... the Gibraltar Savings Bank, I mean, is taking money from customers, it has got to offer a rate, and from 2011 to 2013 it was offering rates that went up to about 5%. That was well over market rates. There is not an investment, unless one is talking 1190 about riskier investments ... very difficult to actually have safe investments that will offer – it is impossible – more than 5%. Indeed, banks, UK Treasury gilts, they were all offering less than 1% for most of that period. What is happening here, and I would like the hon. Gentleman to confirm it, is that the money from the Gibraltar Savings Bank into Credit Finance is actually being invested in the Government of Gibraltar. That is where it is being invested, and therefore it is the 1195 Government of Gibraltar, because it is those Government-owned companies that are owned ...

1200 that is where the money is actually going. It is Gibraltar Investment Holdings, the Government-owned company, and all the other Government-owned companies that are benefitting from this money, and therefore the Government ... That is the investment. It is the Government ultimately that is going to have to repay this. That is why we have always said, 'Well, actually, it is the Government – indirectly, through this complicated vehicle – that is actually borrowing the money, even though technically speaking it is off the books as Government debt. Apart from the Sunborn, I have to say that I cannot think of on my feet any private investment or significant private investment into which the £400 million has actually been paid, other than into Government-owned companies for Government projects.

1205

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the question is about the investment in the LNG plant which has been made by Credit Finance – and he says he cannot think of anything other than the Sunborn. The question that we have by Mr Clinton is about the LNG investment. The LNG investment is by Credit Finance on a return. The joint venture, if it is with anybody, is a joint venture between Credit Finance and Shell, not between the Government and Shell.

1210

The issue is whether a company which is owned with £400 million out of £430 million by the Savings Bank and £30 million by the Gibraltar Development Corporation is a Government company. That is what the issue is. As far as I am concerned, it is not a Government company because the Government is a minority. But if they would be more comfortable if it was 100% owned by the Savings Bank, then I am prepared to make them happy by spending £30 million and buying the 30 million shares and then they do not have to worry anymore.

1215

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I hope to wrap up on this particular question and then move on to other ones. In terms of this particular investment by Credit Finance and Shell LNG, can the Minister then ... If I understood him correctly, he is telling the House that the Shell LNG Gibraltar plant is not a Government joint venture project. Is that correct?

1220

Hon. J J Bossano: I am telling him that it is not a joint venture between the Government of Gibraltar using a Government company, but it is a joint venture between Shell and Credit Finance, which has got a minority shareholding of the Government. That is what I am telling him.

1225

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Again, just wrapping up on this, can the Minister advise – and again this is a hypothetical question – in terms of Credit Finance whether he would be willing to provide information in terms of the equity investments that Credit Finance makes?

1230

Hon. J J Bossano: If by the equity investment what he wants to know is the number of shares that there are, then the number of shares that there are he knows already from the registry that he says he has gone to look at.

1235

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, yes, I am not referring specifically to Shell LNG; I am talking in general of any other equity investments that Credit Finance may hold.

Hon. J J Bossano: He has already had the answer to that question before. That answer has not changed.

1240

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if the Minister could refresh my memory in terms of in which question specifically I asked that.

1245

Hon. J J Bossano: I will refresh his memory: the answer was no. (Laughter)

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, again I beg your indulgence because there are quite a few questions to get through.

1250 Going to Question 292, where the Minister advised the House that he has not invited any expressions of interest for the shareholding in Gibtelecom, can I ask the Minister: does he undertake an annual valuation exercise of the shares that the Savings Bank holds in Gibtelecom in terms of potential earnings, multiples, etc?

1255 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, we carry the shares that are not quoted. He will remember that he asked me a long time ago about whether shares were quoted or not quoted and I told him that they were not quoted because they are not on a stock exchange, even though there was a reference to quoting in the paperwork that I supplied him with.

1260 The value is the value at which we purchased a share. Probably if we were to do a valuation based on the return which we are getting, which is an 8% return, the capital would be worth more, but that is not the way we do it.

If we were at some stage to dispose of the shares, then clearly the remaining shares would be revalued at whatever money was paid for the ones that we sold, because that would be logical.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer.

1265 If I can move to Question 293 in terms of inflation and the public sector pay increases, does the Minister have a view as to inflation and how far it may or may not go up again? I will defer if he says it is a hypothetical question but I am sure he has some feel for where the number may be; and if so, in terms of the public sector pay increases, does he have a cost for honouring that commitment, at say the 2.75% level certainly for this year, in terms of the overall cost of the inflationary increase?

1275 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, in the estimates we always include a figure from which – I think something like £9 million, which is well above what is required for the pay review, but that has always been the case – and it is from that figure that there is a provision that is then distributed along the heads of expenditure when pay settlements are made and that meets the cost of the pay, which is an important part of that £9 million, and increases either for other charges that may come in at a higher figure than expected ... Inflation will be something that will affect the Government's Budget not just in respect of salaries but in respect of procurement.

1280 So the answer is that the figure ... I cannot tell him what the figure is going to be in this year's Budget because we have not yet done the Budget and it would be wrong to pre-empt those figures, which he will be able to see at the end of April, but it is unlikely to be less than what we have provided in the past because if we look at inflation before the period where prices were, I think, deliberately being kept down and interest rates were being deliberately kept down by this policy of quantitative easing, which put a lot of money in the market, something like 2.5% to 3%
1285 was considered to be a normal rate of inflation.

1290 Indeed, a lot of Governments have been trying to get the level of inflation to go up to the 2% target of the Bank of England because they consider that in order to stimulate economic growth there has to be an element of inflation in the economy, and when inflation has been at zero, or in some cases below zero, negative when prices have been falling, then that is considered to be a recession if it happens in two consecutive quarters according to the mantra that most economists subscribe to – but I do not necessarily do.

1295 But the answer to his question is I think we need to think of inflation around the 3% figure as normality, because all we need to do is to go back some three years and we will find that ... For example, in the years before ... In 2012 it was 3.7%, in 2011 it was 3.5%, in 2010 it was 3.4%. Those are the recent figures until this very strange period that we have lived in the last few years, which has been artificially engineered.

RECESS

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am going to have to move that the House should now recess until 3.30 this afternoon, when the supplementary questions etc. will be able to continue.

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess until 3.30 this afternoon.

The House recessed at 12.32 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3.30 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

Q289 and 290-301/2017 – Public finances – Supplementary questions continued

Clerk: We continue with answers to questions. I believe we are on supplementaries to Question 301. The questioner was the Hon. R M Clinton.

5 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I can move to the answer to Question 295 in respect of the Savings Bank and any new products, the Minister advises that there are no new products being offered to holders of maturing debentures in 2017. With reference to his press release in March about the change of interest rates, I can see that the debentures that are available – and he will correct me if I am wrong – are three-year fixed term, five-year fixed term for non-pensioners;
10 and five-year fixed term, 10-year fixed term for pensioners. Is there a reason why there is not a 10-year fixed term for non-pensioners?

15 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the question is whether anything is being offered to people whose debentures mature, and there is nothing about pensioners in the question.

20 The answer is, of course, that we are not creating a product which is only available to the people whose debentures mature. We did that only once, which was when people had debentures that were redeemed before the maturity date and then something was created because we were moving from the Government to the Savings Bank. Normally with the Savings Bank debenture what happens is that whatever is available on the web page for anybody is what is available to the people whose debentures are maturing now, including taking all their money in cash out. There is about £200 million this year of maturing debentures and if the people wanted the £200 million the cash is there.

25 I think, in terms of why there is not a 10-year one, in fact in the past the 10-year one has not been all that attractive in terms of the money that has been brought in and therefore, because we wanted to keep the higher rate for pensioners, which would not apply to non-pensioners, we decided that since there was already a 10-year one for pensioners we would not reduce the rate of that and we would leave that at the 5%. That is the reason why it was done.

30 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer. If I may move to Question 296 in respect of Strand Credit Finance Company Ltd and the striking off by the UK Registrar of Companies, the answer was that it had been dormant and there was an oversight on the part of the UK administration. I would be grateful if the Minister could advise the House who is responsible for managing these companies. I believe it is a subsidiary of Gibraltar Strand 35 Property Company Ltd, which is registered in Gibraltar. How did this oversight occur? And the second part of my question was: was any property consequently bona vacantia?

Thank you.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I gave an explanation to Parliament when the company was 40 originally set up. I think I had questions then from the Leader of the Opposition at one stage, and then I think from Mr Bossino at another stage. What I said was that the purpose of the company was in case there were properties that we wanted to buy in the United Kingdom and there was a difficulty. Let us say, for example, that Calpe House, which has got a mortgage in the United Kingdom for the new Calpe House ... If Calpe House had been unable to get it or unable to get it 45 on sufficiently attractive terms, then we had a vehicle ready to do that. I gave the example the last time also of sometimes when there are long-term patients in the United Kingdom that need family accommodation. I think we have got one case where a property was bought in Manchester. If it is not easy to get the necessary mortgage facilities, then we would have a vehicle already in existence.

50 Those circumstances have not materialised, so in effect the company was dormant because there has been no activity and there is a company of accountants, or something like that, engaged in the United Kingdom that does the books of these two companies and that is the one that overlooked the need to keep the registration alive. When it came to light they accepted that it was their mistake and they put the mistake right at their own cost because it was their 55 fault.

The answer is there is no management, because the company is a vehicle that is ready there for, and when we need it, but we have not needed it so far.

Hon. R M Clinton: I am grateful to the Minister for his answer.

60 Coming on to Question 297, which I think the Minister may already have answered in answering my first question, was it then reincorporated because you may envisage a need for something similar in future and presumably you would want to keep that optionality? And when you say there is no cost, I presume, as you say, there is no cost to the taxpayer – if you can confirm that – because the administrator has covered that cost. Would that be right, eh?

65 Hon. J J Bossano: I think the cost of maintaining the company is under £200. We think that for £200 a year it is worth having the company there, because we might need it in a situation where we want to act quickly if we have difficulty in raising finance simply because the ultimate owner would not be an entity that lending institutions in the UK might be familiar with.

70 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, just to finalise on these two questions, if the Minister could just confirm, then, there was no issue of bona vacantia when the company was dissolved.

Hon. J J Bossano: The hon. Member is right, there was not.

75 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I can move now to Question 299 in relation to the Housing Allowance, the answer the Minister has given the House is that the Housing Allowance payments will be received by the company, the company being Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd, from the funds in the pool. My question is really quite specific in that I wanted to know which Government-80 owned company is to make these payments and what contractual arrangements are in place. I wonder if the Minister could answer those two questions.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I think I have been explaining to the Members opposite something they would know from the time they were in Government – those who were in Government – but I have had to explain it to those who arrived subsequent to 2011 and now to those who have arrived subsequent to 2015. The pool is the pool invented as a device by the GSD administration, which we continue to use because in fact it is a very efficient way of dealing with the situation where all the money during the year the Treasury uses as one single pot of money. There is a pot of money that is company money, there is a pot of money that is I&D money and there is a pot of money that is Consolidated Fund money, and whatever movement there is, that is all reconciled at the close of the financial year. Clearly, if there are companies that have got surpluses and companies that have got deficits, the company which will get charged any payment will be the one that has got the resources available to it to be able to make the payment, because at the end of the day we have got the income that comes in from the rent which goes direct to that company and then it has to be supplemented by the Government because that is part of the agreement that there is with the lenders – which had been explained to the hon. Member by the Chief Minister in the meeting that they had.

So the answer is that there is not a specific company that is there to do that. The money will come from the company that has got the available resources, but at the end of the day we supplement it in order to meet the obligations of what has to be the annual cash that has to be paid and the annual cash that has to be built up for the eventual repayment of the £300 million. That is how it works. That is as much detail as I have got.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister, and yes, I am now well familiar with the cash pooling concept. However, what I am finding some difficulty with is understanding whether there is any contractual obligation to make this payment to Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd, and if so with whom if the liability gets passed to whichever company has surplus assets. How has this arrangement been formalised to ensure that payments are made? Who is the guarantor of this payment?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member seems to forget that we are the owner of all the same things. I know that he is an accountant but he is not the accountant of the Government who has to satisfy himself that one thing is in one pocket and should not be in another pocket.

We have got Gibraltar Investment Holdings, which has got other companies which are subsidiaries, of which the Member knows from the book; and then we have got the GDC, which has a number of subsidiaries. Those 100% Government-owned companies, if they require decisions, all have the same owners and all have the same directors, all of them, so whatever technicality needs to be done is done in order to make sure that the mechanism that we are using – inherited from them – is working in accordance with any legal requirements there may be.

As a matter of policy, as a policy maker, I do not have to take a decision on that. There are people employed in the Treasury who have been doing this before 2011 and who continue doing it. Obviously, before 2011 there was not the equivalent of the hon. Member on that side who was an accountant trying to be the accountant of the companies, so those kind of questions were not asked before by me. I tended to limit myself to having the Government explain to me or defend its policies, not the technicalities of what the employees in the Treasury do and whether they are doing something that they should or should not be doing. I cannot imagine that any civil servant would be willing to expose themselves to doing things that are in conflict with the law.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Minister a direct question: is there a contract with Gibraltar Capital Assets, signed by the Government, saying that we will give you the Housing Allowance to make up the difference in your cashflow requirements, and is it a contract

135 between the Government – not a Government-owned company but the Government – and Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd?

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not know what the Government told the hon. Member in that meeting where I was not present, and I do not know whether he asked the questions, so I am not going to give him an answer until I have found what he asked them and what they told him.

140 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, is the Minister telling the House that he does not know?
Surely he must know whether there is a contract in place with the Government and Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd.

145 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not have to tell the hon. Member how much I know; I only have to tell him how much I am prepared to tell him, and therefore what I have just told him is he had the opportunity – which I probably would not have given him if it had been my decision – of being briefed in private for several hours. I do not know how much he asked in those several hours and I was not at that meeting. If I had been, he probably would have been told less than 150 he was told. But I am telling him now that any questions that he wants to know about this I will look at on the basis of finding out what he asked before and what he was told before and whether he was told things that he was told there on the basis that he was being given a private briefing and not a public airing. If he wanted a public airing he should have refused to go to the private briefing and then he would have had to be content with what he got.

155 But I am telling him as a policy maker the position is that the mechanism works on the basis that that is how it was working. It is an efficient mechanism, and it was not invented by us but it is an efficient way of doing things from the point of view of doing things administratively. I do not believe in adding layers of bureaucracy that cost money; I believe in removing layers of bureaucracy, which saves money for taxpayers. He believes in that as well because he urges me 160 to do things. I know that he supports the fact that I have taken the responsibility on behalf of the Government for improving efficiency. If it is something that works and is cost effective, then as a matter of policy I would not try to change it. If it is something that is in breach of some technicality, then there are two ways of dealing with it: either we as a Government change the requirement for the technicality, which we have got the majority to do; or we say to the 165 professionals, 'Well, look, you are technically out of order: put it right.'

When he goes beyond that to say 'Is there an agreement between somebody or the other?' it is like the questions he has asked on previous occasions: 'Well, did you tell the Attorney General to do something, or not?' Governments do not come to Parliament to give verbatim reports of their conversations during office hours with their civil servants. I will find out, and if there is 170 information that is available to me and there is no problem in sharing it with the hon. Member I will share it with him here so that he is free to do with it what he likes.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am, as always, grateful to the Minister for his honesty in response and his helpfulness in undertaking to at least go and look and see if there is such an 175 agreement. If I may just say that certainly when we attended the meeting we were told there was going to be a payment from a Government company, although it was not identified to us, and certainly nothing was said that deemed that information commercially sensitive or private in any way, which is why I have asked the question of the House.

180 My interest – and I am sure the Minister will appreciate this – is the contractual arrangements, because I am sure he will agree with me that it would be inappropriate, for example, for another Government-owned company or, indirectly through the Savings Bank, Gibtelecom to make a contribution to Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd. I am sure he would agree that that would be completely out of order.

185 So, Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if the Minister would find out, if he can, whether there is such an agreement in place and revert to the House as he said he would.

Thank you.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I am answerable for the Gibraltar Savings Bank and all the shares of Gibtelecom, as an example, held by the Savings Bank. The profits pay the dividends to the Savings Bank and I can assure the hon. Member nobody is going to touch a penny of my dividends for as long as I am there!

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member may recall that in the past when we have spoken about where the money from the Gibraltar Savings Bank, Credit Finance, into this pool mechanism has gone, the hon. Member, when I asked him what is that money being used for, has said to fund the cash requirement of Government-owned companies. That was the answer, that is a matter of record, and I think that he recognises that is what he said.

Bearing in mind that he has given a very similar answer now, in relation to capital assets, to my hon. Friend Mr Clinton – that it is going into the same central pool – and bearing in mind that in fact there are no subdivisions of that pool into defined pockets, as he has described it, am I also right in saying and assuming that that money too is of course being used to fund the cashflow requirements of Government-owned companies or whatever else the Government may need the money for?

Hon. J J Bossano: The money that has been provided to Gibraltar Investment Holdings as FRNs, is then, as he has been told before, finds its way to companies that may need the cash at the time they need the cash. That money has not increased; if anything it has come down. That is to say the original provision of funds to GIH has not gone up since, and if anything it is coming down rather than going up, so there is no question that Credit Finance is providing additional money to GIH other than the money that was provided before this arrangement existed. Before the £300 million facility existed, the money that was given to GIH would have gone down. Nothing extra has gone from Credit Finance to GIH since then.

Hon. D A Feetham: Capital assets, £300 million.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, but the £300 million, Mr Speaker, is in the company that obtained the money on the basis that it was secured on the leases of the estates. Having obtained that money, that money is available to the pool. Okay? It is not the case that the company that got the money from Credit Finance, GIH, has received any additional money from Credit Finance in order to make any payments to the company that has the annual rental payments to make, so it is not the case that any new money has gone in that direction from Credit Finance. The money that went initially from Credit Finance has been available to other companies for other things that they were undertaking. For example, you have got property companies that have been receiving money from the sales of properties, from the 50-50 sales. That money is available in the pool either for investment in other things or for the payment or for the amortisation of the capital of this company because it formed part of the same pool.

If the hon. Member is asking is it the case that we are relying on fresh money from Credit Finance, the answer is no; is it the case that the money is not being repaid to Credit Finance, the answer is no. Money is being repaid to Credit Finance at the same time, so there is nothing that has happened as a result of this company coming into existence that has cost more money to be provided from Credit Finance to Gibraltar Investment Holdings.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, that is not the question. Mr Speaker, I apologise, it is probably my fault, but the hon. Gentleman has not understood the question. I understand that otherwise there would be implications of the nature of the scheme. I understand this is not capital assets, Gibraltar Investment Holdings into Credit Finance. I am not asking about that.

I am saying: in the same way as the money from Credit Finance went into the central pool at the Treasury – which was then, according to him, used to finance the cashflow requirements of Government-owned companies, as he said to this House – is the new £300 million from capital assets, which has also gone, according to him, into this pool which is effectively operated by Gibraltar Investment Holdings ... or not? (Hon. J J Bossano: Treasury.) Yes, okay, Treasury. Is that pool, is that money, also being used in order to fund the cashflow requirement of Government-owned companies and indeed the Government itself?

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not think it is being used in the sense that use has been made of it so far, but it would be available for that use.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. Yes.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may move to Question 298 on the same subject of the money raised by Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd – and, for the benefit of the House, of course Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd effectively paid £275 million to Gibraltar Residential Properties, so the holder of that money technically will be Gibraltar Residential Properties ... Coming to my question – and again we always end up with a question on this idea of cash pooling, but can the Minister advise if this £275 million is in any way ring-fenced or restricted in use by the Treasury, as the Chief Minister's office said that these will be used for stuff that will generate economic activity for Gibraltar?

So my question to the Minister is: is this money in any way ring-fenced by Treasury, whether mentally or by way of direction, and told that they cannot use this £275 million unless for a specific purpose?

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not believe there is any legal impediment to the money being used for any specific purpose in the sense that there is anything in the provision of the funding that says you can only use the money for x. It would be a matter of Government policy. Certainly from my perspective the best way to use that money is in a way that generates income, so that in effect it funds itself. Whether that happens or not remains to be seen.

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, I sincerely hope that it does fund itself.

If I may just ask one final question: in terms of the responsible officer – and just to confirm my understanding from his response that the money will be managed by the Treasury – is it the case that the Treasury are effectively responsible for this money and therefore it would come under ... the responsible officer would be effectively the Accountant General?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, the question – Question 298 – that the hon. Member asked originally, was who is the controlling officer. The concept of the controlling officer is what there is in the estimates in a Department. The pool of money is managed by the Treasury in the same way that it has always been managed and it is not that there is a list of controls for different kinds of money depending on the source. Otherwise, what would be the use of having a pool? It is not that there is one particular named civil servant who is the one who takes the decision on how to spend £275 million and some other named civil servants who take a decision on money from another source. The money is the cash available to the Government and to wholly owned Government companies, and the availability of that cash at any point in time is used in whatever way is the most efficient way to use that cash from the point of view of managing the financial affairs of the Government and the public service.

The hon. Member has been told that the preferred option – and I would agree that that is the best way to make use of this money – is to invest it in areas where there is a return which not only meets the cost of servicing this money but makes a profit. Therefore, if the hon. Member said that that is what was indicated to him I have to tell him I would clearly think that that 290 should be the preferred option. But the preferred option can only materialise and be put into effect if an opportunity exists to do that. Everybody who has money wants to make money, but if wanting to make money was all that was needed then everybody would be very wealthy.

There has to be an opportunity to do it; there has to be a project or an investment possibility that could do it. For example – I am giving the hon. Member examples and I do not want him to read into things something I am not doing; I am trying to make him understand – I explained to 295 him before the decision that was taken that Credit Finance should be the one that did the joint venture on Shell LNG. It could equally have been, ‘Well, look, that is a profitable investment that will give a return that is more than we have to pay on that money, so we can use the money for doing that.’ That would be an example, but it is not a decision that was taken. I think in any event the money was required before this was finalised and, from the point of view of the 300 Savings Bank, we saw that as an opportunity for the Savings Bank to bring in money, which is important because we want to be able to keep our interest rates as attractive as possible for the benefit of local savers. I am not saying that it was something that was considered; I am giving him an example of what might have been a possibility.

305 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his illustration of the use this money could be put to, but I really have a very specific question. He mentioned controls earlier:
who is responsible for the control of Government-owned companies ultimately, other than himself? Is there somebody in the Civil Service who is responsible for oversight? You talk about, on the one side, what is in the Estimates Book, and we all understand that, but who is ultimately 310 responsible for the control of the Government-owned companies?

Hon. J J Bossano: Ultimately, Mr Speaker, the same people who were responsible in the last 15 years: the people who put us here and put him there.

315 Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, I am sure the people of Gibraltar will be pleased to know that their influence is still acknowledged and the fact that we are their servants.

I must ask again, and forgive me if I repeat myself: who is responsible for the control of Government-owned companies? Is it somebody in Treasury? Is it the Financial Secretary? There must be somebody in the Civil Service who is responsible for monitoring these companies.

320 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has asked that question before. It is a question that ... As far as I am concerned, the only person who has ever asked it in this Parliament in the 44 years that I have been here has been him.

I am here because I am responsible for the Savings Bank. I am not on the counter in the 325 Savings Bank taking money from people for debentures, but if anything goes wrong with the Savings Bank the guy who can be sacked for it is me. The civil servant cannot be sacked – he can be reprimanded, he can be given a warning, but he cannot be sacked – but I am liable to be sacked and I am liable to be sacked by the people who employ me, who are the people who have voted for me.

330 This is not something new. This is something that has been true of the responsibility you have in Government since I have been here in 1972, and it is the responsibility that the people in the Opposition, in all the time that I have been here, clearly understood: the division between the ultimate responsibility, which is a political one, and the responsibility that civil servants have, which is not a matter for which they have to be scrutinised, answered, named or identified. The 335 hon. Member has actually even asked for the names of the people concerned. Well, look, it is not going to happen and it is not right that it should happen. If the hon. Member wants to criticise the Savings Bank, I take the responsibility and he criticises me; and if he wants to criticise something that is wrong with the management of the economy, then I take the responsibility and he criticises me.

340 It does not mean that the day-to-day decisions in matters that affect the economy ... or it does not mean that, for example, the production of the statistics on which our economy depends for policymaking are done by me. I do a lot of my own work because I am used to it, having spent more time in Opposition than in Government, but the bulk of the work has to be done by the professionals that we employ. Those professionals are the same ones as when they 345 were in Government. They are people who are dedicated people, who know their job – some know it better and others know it less well – and the work that they do ... It is simply not correct that the Opposition say, 'Well, I want to know who it is that is responsible for running this or for running that,' because responsibility rests at a political level with us, just like they have a responsibility which is political. I think that the hon. Member should understand that distinction.

350 So, ultimately it is the people who decide. If they are not content or satisfied with the management of their property, they ultimately get rid of the people who have to be voted, just like if you were talking about a private corporation. If a business is not doing well, what you would expect would be that the board of directors get kicked out by the shareholders, not that there should be a mass redundancy of the employees, although the guys who take the 355 responsibility may not have been the individuals who were directly responsible on a day-to-day basis for running the show. At the end of the day, one sees it all the time in the private sector.
People in the private sector, when a company does very badly, accept that they are the ones that the shareholders will hold responsible, even though the board of directors may not be meeting more than two or three times a year. He needs to understand that there is a parallel in 360 the public sector and that is the parallel that where the responsibility is ... He can ask who is the individual who takes a decision as many times as he wants and the answer is going to be that I am responsible for all the mistakes that the people who work for me do.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer. I have a question 365 on this at the end, but if you can bear with me ...

He mentions that no, I should not have the names of the people who are responsible for expenditure and it is not correct for me to ask, but if anybody picks up the Estimates Book – and there is four hundred-odd million or more of expenditure in here – Department by Department, at the top of each page, it tells you quite clearly: for example, No. 6 Convent Place, the 370 controlling officer is the Chief Secretary. And it goes on and on and on.

All I am asking is really, quite simply, who is the controlling officer. Who is it that is responsible for making sure that the Government companies are managed? It is as simple as that. The Minister may not want to answer me. If he does not want to answer me, I am perfectly happy for him to say 'I am not going to answer you', but surely there must be somebody who 375 has oversight of these companies who is not a Government Minister. Is that in the Financial Secretary's office? Is that in Treasury? Under which area of Government does this come under?
There is four hundred and fifty-odd million here. Penny by penny, line by line, it is all accounted for and we all know who is ultimately responsible for that expenditure. We have well over £700 million going through Government-owned companies. Somebody in Government, either in the 380 Civil Service ... must have oversight of that; and if there is not oversight, would he not agree with me that there should be?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I cannot agree with the hon. Member, and it is not that I do not want to give him an answer; it is just that he does not want to accept the answers that I give 385 him.

What he has just told me I told him 15 minutes ago. Fifteen minutes ago I said the terminology the hon. Member is using of 'responsible controlling officer' is a public sector concept in the Book of Estimates, where there is a controlling officer for the expenditure. I told him that 15 minutes ago. Fifteen minutes later, as if I had not said anything, he tells me what I 390 have told him.

He says that I do not want to answer him. I try as much as I can to provide him with information and I think I go the extra length to satisfy his curiosity, but what I cannot do is restructure the way the public service operates, including state-owned enterprises and Government Departments, simply because of his ideas of how it should be, which is not the way 395 it has ever been. It may be that one day he will be on this side and revolutionise the whole system and introduce controlling officers everywhere – presumably a controlling officer for the University and a controlling officer for the Gibraltar International Bank, who are also owned by the taxpayer. But what he is asking now ... The answer is there is no such thing as a controlling officer.

400 The pool of money is controlled by the same people in the Treasury who control the pool of money. When money is spent on the basis that it has been approved by Parliament, there is a controlling officer because the Parliament, which has approved the expenditure of that money, is informed of who is controlling the money that they have approved. If a Government company tomorrow decides to buy a typewriter, he does not need a controlling officer to buy the 405 typewriter, because the mechanism of a commercial company, even if the shareholder happens to be the state, is not the mechanism of a Department. Maybe if Departments were more like private sector companies and they did not have so many controls things might be done more efficiently and less expensively, but all these controls that they have do not exist in state enterprises here or anywhere else. They have never existed before, and we have had state-410 owned companies going back to the ship repair yard in the 1970s.

At the end of the day what the Member wants me to do is to say to him either I am not prepared to tell you who is the controlling officer or I am prepared to tell you who is the controlling officer. I am telling him that the concept of a controlling officer is totally alien to the commercial structure. It is an invention of the public sector in a situation where the Parliament 415 says 'I have approved £1,000 for photocopying paper', and the controlling officer makes sure that the £1,000 is for photocopying paper and not for writing pads. In a company you decide if you want writing pads or whether you want photocopying paper, and the guy who decides is the guy who is going to use it. He does not have to go through a line or chain of command, nor is there a paper trail which passes through God knows how many stages.

420 I have explained that to him before. I have explained to him the problem we have in providing any information, given the length of time between the action taking place and the record of that action taking place in the inputting. I have said to him more than once this is a system that needs to be modernised and reviewed but it is a system that has been there a very long time and the inputting takes ages after the event. Therefore, if I say to him 'How much has 425 been spent today?' I know while I am saying it that the figure I am saying is wrong.

So I am not withholding information; I am trying to explain to him they are two different concepts, two different structures and two different ways of carrying out what is ultimately money that belongs to the public, because it is not just taxpayers' money – if a company makes profits, this is not taxpayers' money; it belongs to the citizens whether they pay taxes or not,
430 because ultimately they are the owners and we are what would be the equivalent of the board of directors if there was the same kind of structure. So we have got a role that we play in the Government and a role that we play in Government companies at a policy level, and what we are doing is using civil servants because, frankly, it would cost more if you had all the administration of the companies done by other people in addition to the people we have got in 435 the Government. So it makes more sense to do ...

Before it was introduced by the GSD, the concept of pooling it was not done. It was much more cumbersome and much more expensive and much more rigid. There were vertical lines of decision making, and if you needed to spend money on one thing you then had the situation of how do you go about the machinery of transferring money from one company to another. If you
440 put all the money in one pot, then in effect you are able to do much more efficient management of that money. For example, if somebody needs to borrow money and somebody has got money to lend, it makes more sense that they all draw from a common pool than that one should be

445 depositing money in the bank and another company should be borrowing from that bank as an overdraft – and then the bank is actually giving money to one company using the money of the other company. Those kinds of things used to happen in the past. I think whoever it was who advised the Government after 1996 came up with this concept and it is a concept that has worked for many years; I learned about it on that side, not this one.

450 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I understand the Minister correctly, effectively what he is telling this side of the House, or just me, is that the concept of the controlling officer is irrelevant in this discussion in respect of this £275 million because it is through a Government-owned company and, as such, there is no controlling officer that would normally be associated with the numbers in the Estimates Book. I would just like the Minister to perhaps, if he could, confirm to me that effectively, as I understand it – and this may be blindingly obvious – everything that is a Government-owned company, anything that is not in the Estimates Book, is not subject to the Public Audit Finance and Control Act and is therefore beyond the scrutiny of this Parliament.

460 Mr Speaker: This is the last supplementary that I am allowing on this particular issue of controlling officer. The two hon. Members have been at it for 25 minutes on the same supplementary. It is going beyond the pale. It is a kind of situation that I do not think is contemplated in any parliament; I do not think it happens. Of course, we no longer have a question and an answer; what we now have is a discussion going on for 25 minutes, and here the rest of us are as if there was nothing else in the world that is important, as if that was the sole issue that this Parliament meets to debate.

465 I have been very liberal, I think, very patient, but there is a limit. There really is a limit on this specific issue of the controlling officer or the lack of controlling officer. I am not curtailing the hon. Member's supplementaries on any of the other questions, because they have all been answered together; but on this issue yes, because I think the Minister has given exhaustive answers and now the hon. Member is asking the Minister to confirm whether his understanding of those exhaustive answers is not ... Honestly, look, there is a limit and we have come to the limit.

470 Whether the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition likes it or not, I think he must give me credit that we have been 25 minutes on just one simple issue, and surely that is a liberal application of the rules by any concept other than a biased one. (Laughter) Okay?

475 Now, the Hon. Mr Clinton has the floor based on what I have told him.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I? I just had –

480 Mr Speaker: You do not have to intervene! The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition thinks that every time I intervene –

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I don't.

485 Mr Speaker: – he has got to intervene in order to bring me to order, as it were. (Laughter) He does not have to. It is a matter between the Hon. Mr Clinton and me as Speaker only. Yes! It has got nothing to do with you as Leader of the Opposition! You have not asked a question; he has asked the question. He has had the floor for half an hour this morning, half an hour this afternoon, and it goes on. And that is it! (Laughter)

490 Hon. D A Feetham: No, Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: Yes!

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, it does have something –

495 Mr Speaker: You have the floor.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much. Yes, it does have something to do with me. I was going to just ask Mr Speaker's leave to ask one supplementary question. (Interjection by Mr Speaker) That is all! I did not want to say anything else. (Interjection by Mr Speaker)

500

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker. Thank you.

Mr Speaker: I will, of course, allow you one question, but I will not allow you to query what I have told Mr Clinton –

505

Hon. D A Feetham: I'm not querying anything!

Mr Speaker: – because I think I am entitled to point out to him that he is abusing my liberality in respect of the Rules of the House.

510

Now I will allow Mr Clinton supplementaries on other matters. I will allow the Leader of the Opposition his supplementary if it is that he wants additional information or any other issue arising.

Hon. D A Feetham: Just on this issue, yes?

Mr Speaker: On this issue?

Hon. D A Feetham: That he has not answered – or do you want to hear mine first?

Hon. J J Bossano: I have had a question from the hon. Member which is not really a question; it is an attempt to set a trap for me – and he should know me better than to think I am going to walk into it.

I am not here to tell him what he should make or think or interpret from what I have said; I am here to give him information. He says, 'Having heard everything, can the hon. Member confirm that that means that we have not got enough scrutiny, or we have no scrutiny of this Parliament, of the money that is spent through the Government companies?' Well, the answer is that when there are in this Parliament 17 Clintons, then no doubt that interpretation would be correct, but when there is only one Clinton in the Parliament I doubt that that interpretation would be correct.

Mr Speaker: And when there are 17 Clintons, perhaps the Speaker will have to be a Clinton as well! (Banging on desks and laughter)

530

Hon. R M Clinton: Alas, Mr Speaker, Hilary didn't make it, but never mind! (Laughter)
The House will be relieved to hear that I have nothing further to add.

Several Members: Hear, hear. (Laughter and banging on desks)

540

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, that is the first time that I hear enthusiasm from the other side at a Member on this side saying he has no more questions. That is no doubt because he has been extremely effective (Interjections and banging on desks) in the way that he has conducted the questions this afternoon.

Mr Speaker, I have a slightly different angle related to this. I have found the hon. Gentleman's answers very helpful. Can he confirm that really what he is saying is, in a sense, is this: the companies that are spending this money have their own board of directors – it used to be the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and a couple of others; now it is actually 550 corporate directors, there is a corporate director – but what he is saying is, irrespective that the companies have their own directors, really the decisions about how the money is being spent are made by the Government, because the Government is making those decisions. The day-to-day running may be done by the directors but it is the Government that makes the decisions as to how that money is being spent in that pool contained at Treasury.

555 Hon. J J Bossano: I have no doubt that it was so in the four years that he was in government and I have no doubt that it was so in the 11 years before he was in government, when the party that he leads was in government. And I can tell him it was so in the eight years when the GSLP was in government, and to my knowledge it was so between 1972 and 1988 when the AACR was in government. So, if he is asking is something new happening that has never happened before, the answer to that is no. If he is asking, is it the case that the people who are on the board are appointed to that board because they have senior positions in the Civil Service ... And he is right 560 in saying it is a corporate entity, but let's be clear. It was explained, I think, to him previously that the decision is that, in order to be able to facilitate any change of directors in terms of individuals, the corporate identity, which will be Gibraltar Government Directors is the corporate entity – or GDC Directors is the other corporate entity ... Instead of having to change a director in 20 companies, you change the director in that corporate entity and automatically you change
565 it in the whole of the companies. That was the rationale that was proposed to us, we thought it was a good idea and we said to go ahead and implement it.

The policies of all the Government companies, like the policies of all the Government Departments, are policies taken at the political level, for which we are responsible. There is no question about that; it has always been like that and it will always be like that. It is not the case 570 that, because it is a company structure, the company director can decide to go on a jaunt and spend the money of the company without reference to anybody else. But this is not something that is new; it has always been like that.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q302/2017
Ship repair industry –
Apprenticeships

575 Clerk: Question 302, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many apprentices undertook apprenticeships in the commercial ship repair industry in Gibraltar in each of the calendar years ending 31st December 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015 and 2016; and how many of them have been kept 580 on after completion of those apprenticeships?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

585 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Yes Mr Speaker, the number of apprentices in ship repairing have been: 2012, 10; 2013, eight; 2014, seven; 2015, two; and 2016, four. Thirteen apprentices have completed the training and been taken on by Gibdock.

590 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, there appears to be a trend of downward recruitment of apprentices within ship repair from 10, going down to two in 2015 and four in 2016. Does he 595 know why there is this particular trend? Has he himself enquired? I know this is a particular question that he used to ask from the Opposition benches when he was on this side of the House, so I take it that he has continued to take an interest in this area from the Government benches.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, there is a difference in respect of what happens now and what happened then when I was on the other side, because now we only take the apprentices on the basis that the company tells us that they are going to be employed. Before, people went and did 600 an apprenticeship ... I remember one particular ceremony, because in those days there used to be a ceremony where the Minister went along to hand the people the Level 3 certificate, and when he gave the Level 3 certificate – I think it was Mr Montiel – a couple of the apprentices said, 'Okay, thank you very much for the certificate, but now, next week I am on the dole,' which got more publicity, as one can imagine, than the certificate ceremony had had in any other year.

605 The argument that we had pursued from the Opposition is the policy that we have adopted in Government, which is that we train people for jobs; we do not train them for acquiring skills and then hoping that there will be a vacancy somewhere and that somebody will employ them. I think there is a rationale to that policy. I think people need to understand that although it is normal in countries, in Spain or in the United Kingdom, for people to be trained in a particular 610 trade even if there is no demand in the area where they live, there is a reason for it. You can be trained in the town next door to be a carpenter and finish up in Barcelona working as a carpenter; but in Gibraltar, if we analyse what the labour market wants, then the logic is that we train people for employment – we do not train them to be unemployed and then after the training the guy comes back and says, 'Why have I wasted three or four years of my life and then 615 I am on the dole and I have to finish up doing something else and not what I have been trained to do?'

So the reality of it is that this is driven by two factors: it is driven by what the company tells us they are willing to employ and by the availability of candidates willing to do the jobs for which they will be trained. Just like there is a level of deficiency in a system which just trains people 620 and then hopes they get a job, there is also a situation where some people will go into training simply because they are out of work but not because they have got any intentions or interest in staying there.

I can tell the hon. Member, for example, that in welding and fabrication, which are two of the fundamental skills, it is difficult to get candidates who want to learn those trades if the answer is 625 that when they finish they will have to work in Gibdock. There are people who have done the trades in the past and then finished not ... in the past, given that the Government finances the whole thing ... Look, in terms of Gibdock there is no expense in this. The Government meets the cost of the training and meets the pay of the trainees, so now that they are being told, 'You have to tell us if ...' This year, for example, I think we could only find four suitable candidates and they
630 were willing to take on six, but of all the many people – something like 40 or 50 people – who were interviewed because they were interested in an apprenticeship, when they found that the apprenticeship was not going to lead to a job in the Government sector but lead to a job in Gibdock, then they were not so keen to take it on, so ultimately we finished up with four candidates, who have already started.

635 I think the important thing is that all the 13 candidates that completed were all taken on, but the ship repair yard is a commercial entity and if they feel that the candidates they take on in Gibraltar tend to form part of their permanent workforce, which is something like a hundred – whereas when they have got a lot of work they may go up to two or three hundred, and they bring in workers when there is a peak and they downsize when there is no work – it is that core 640 of a hundred jobs that is the one we expect to be filled locally if there are people who are wanting to do that kind of work. But there is no particular reason or reluctance of the company to take the people on because we made that a necessary part of us financing it.

We are now making it more attractive than it used to be before 2011. People would get three or four hundred pounds a month and now we are giving them about a thousand. So, from the point of view of our apprenticeships, I think in the United Kingdom they get about £2.50 an hour, or £3; here, they are getting the £6.28 from the age of 15. So they can go in at the age of 16, and provided ... Like our own Construction Training Centre, we tend to not ask for academic achievements before you go in. We just give people the basic literacy and numeracy test, because really what we want to do is provide an avenue for the children who come out of schools who have not got qualifications and therefore they are the ones who tend to have less opportunities in life, and those are the ones we want to attract into the apprenticeships. Therefore, in the area of construction we are not as demanding and there is more of an involvement by the instructors in helping people to make the level that they need to make to get their Level 1 and their Level 2 – and in the construction industry, as Members know, the construction trades accept a Level 2 as a craft level, whereas in the mechanical trades it has to be a Level 3. But there is no difficulty in having more, subject to the fact that there is a maximum because of the number of instructors and the facilities that there are in having more.

The other thing is, of course, that I have answered the question based on Gibdock and on the ship repairing trade. The hon. Member knows that that does not mean that these were the only people who were training. There were people training ... For example, we introduced, a couple of years ago, motor car mechanics, which did not exist before, and now that there is that choice some people say, 'Well, I don't want to be working in a shipyard – I would rather be a motor car mechanic.' So they have got other options that were not there before. But I cannot think of any other specific reason.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that was a very interesting answer, and in fact ... I am going to ask a supplementary, but if I may say so the answer that he has provided about UK trainees being paid £2.50 an hour basically also adds justification for the argument that I used to put to the hon. Member that trainees are not employees and that is why we never counted them as such in the unemployment list, which is the position in the United Kingdom. That is why actually they were able to be paid £2.50, well below the minimum wage. The United Kingdom government, or the local authorities, would have been in breach of the law if it were otherwise.

But, Mr Speaker, out of 31 trainees in the last five years only 13 have been employed by Gibdock. In fact, that actually compares in the same period more or less to the position that it was when the GSD was in government and the hon. Member was asking questions about this. Does he therefore now accept that, really, having attempted to incentivise the taking on of trainees by paying more, so therefore making it more attractive to the trainee, and indeed paying for the training rather than have the company pay for the training, the reality is that really this is led by the employer and there appears to be very little that the Government can do to increase these numbers, which was one of the answers that Mr Montiel used to give him when he used to ask Mr Montiel this very same question when he was in Opposition? And if not, does the Government have any plans to try and further incentivise this particular company to increase the employment rates, which at the moment is well below 50% of those trained?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, not everybody completed the course. The hon. Member asked me how many people completed their training and the answer was 13, and how many people had been taken on and the answer is all of them.

Hon. D A Feetham: I understood 31 had completed their training.

Hon. J J Bossano: Thirteen completed their training. For example, in 2015 we had five who completed and the five were employed.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he said to me in 2015 two were trained.

695 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, in 2015 two were training and five stopped training because they completed and were employed. So in 2015 two people were left still training after five people had stopped training because they had got their Level 3 and Gibdock took them on.

So the answer is that of the people who have been in training, of the ones that have completed, all the ones that have completed have been employed by Gibdock, which is the result that was not happening before. I have given him the example of what happened – he may remember the occasion – when there was a ceremony where they were given the certificates and there were two trainees who stood up, put up their hands and said, ‘This is all very well, I have got a piece of paper, but next week I have to go to the ETB and sign on as unemployed, so what have you trained me for?’ What we were always urging was that the training should be based on the knowledge that there was a job, particularly when you are in a specialist area. If you are training somebody to be ship repairing and there is only one ship repair yard, short of going to Lisbon or Cádiz, where does a guy go? Some skills are transferrable, but not all of them.

705 What I am saying to him is that if the intake we have got is driven by the numbers that Gibdock tells us they will ... This is future planning. They have to commit themselves three years ahead and say to us that in three years’ time, if the trainee has passed their Level 1, their Level 2 and their Level 3, there is a job for him. This year they told us there would be a job for six at the end of three years and we were not able to produce six candidates interested. There were candidates who were interested in other things – people wanted to be electricians or car mechanics, or other things, but not working on ship repairing, which is a demanding job, as anyone knows who has been involved in the dockyard in the past. Therefore they took on four, because we could not produce six that would meet their criteria. They interview the candidates and they require a certain level, because they say they are only interested in candidates, from their perspective, who they judge have a good chance of being successful and not drop out in the middle of it.

715 So the answer is that we have made it more attractive by increasing what we pay, but of course the fact that we make it more attractive does not necessarily mean that people are willing to work in a shipyard simply because we make it more attractive. People will say, ‘Well, no, if the end result of my training is that what I can do is work in a shipyard,’ and that is why I told him that it was the welders and the metalworkers were the grades where they recruit people and where we have difficulty in supplying sufficient trainees.

720 But what I can say is that I have given him the people who were in training and I have given him the total, which is what he asked me for, of those who had completed their training; and as an example I have said to him that in 2015 there were two people still training and five people who finished, and the five who finished were all taken on. That is the last intake into employment. The last cohort that finished training and were given a job by Gibdock was in 2015. The people who are in 2016 are still in the middle of their training, and there is a new intake in 2017.

Q303/2017
Lift contractors –
Official contractors list

735 Mr Speaker: There remains one question on the Order Paper directed to the Hon. Mr Bossano. The Hon. Ms Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government explain which lift companies were removed from the official contractors list by this present administration and which companies remained?

740 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunication and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): None, Mr Speaker.

745

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, from my information there have been companies that have been removed, but obviously I have to take the answer from the Hon. Minister at face value and perhaps will revisit this question at another point in time.

750

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, none have been removed by the administration. There may be people who have said they do not want to be on the list anymore and they have been removed at the request of the person, but nobody has been removed and nobody has left. The list has only got longer since 2011; it has not got shorter.

755

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can I ask whether Government has been using any lift companies more often than others or favouring any lift companies in particular?

760

Hon. J J Bossano: It is a very long list, Mr Speaker, because she is asking 'official contractors list'. The official contractors list that we inherited consisted of construction companies, cleaning companies and security companies, which were the three areas that in 2010 were introduced when the previous administration said they were going to put a list where they were making it a requirement that anybody who wanted to be an official contractor to the Government had to commit to taking on people from the unemployment list. And in fact, as I have explained before in Parliament, maybe before the hon. Lady was here, one of the elements in that requirement – and quite extraordinary, and I have never seen anything like it in other jurisdictions, was that it is one that was only on paper; it still is on paper, but I do not think it has ever been actually enforced – was that not only did they have to take the client that was submitted by the Employment Department but they could not terminate the contract of that employee without the permission of the Government. That clause is still in the approved contractor list conditions. It was there from 2010 and it is still there. I do not think anybody has tried to enforce it. I am not sure to what degree it is enforceable, but I can tell the hon. Lady that the initiation of that list was the system that has continued since then and what has happened since then is that we have expanded it to other areas.

775

Recently, when my friend Neil Costa was involved, we agreed that we would be extending it to other areas because there is no logic why some Government contractors should be subjected to those requirements and others not. So now what we do is we make sure that all the contractors are subject to the same conditions.

780

790

In the case of, for example, the construction industry, it also affected the subcontractors, so that in some cases you have had a situation where you have subcontractors ... and there, there are some companies that have been removed, but not because of a decision on their removal but because their inclusion in the list was with a fixed date or with a fixed project. So, for example, if we had people who were subcontractors on the marina, when they came in they were put on the list and then in the conditions of their addition to the list was that they would remain on the list, because they had been brought in to do the marina, for as long as they were doing the marina, and then when they finished the marina they would be removed from the list. This is partly to protect local businesses; otherwise, you would have a never-ending flow of new competitors coming into the market. If there is a specialist that needs to come in to do something, normally they are put on the list and their place on that list is conditional on their still being engaged in the work for which they were brought in; or, where there is a known date, then the date is put in. If something has got to be completed by a specific date, then they are an approved contractor up to that date. Alternatively, they are an approved contractor until the project is finished.

So those people fell off the list automatically. It was not that they were required to be removed, because their original inclusion was for a limited period. But other than that, the list 795 has only changed by having more people in rather than having less.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I thank the Hon. Minister for that detailed answer and I am grateful.

My question arose from the fact that, out of the new buildings and housing estates that have 800 been completed, overwhelmingly there is one lift company that tends to be servicing and providing these lifts. So my question was in relation to whether there was in fact fair competition, whether other lift companies were tendering, or whether there was one company that was effectively taking over the new buildings and estates.

Hon. J J Bossano: The lift companies, Mr Speaker, were not on the original list when we came in, and of course given that the lift companies that I know of employ nobody here, indeed it was necessary, for the maintenance of the lifts, to call somebody in Madrid to get somebody from Algeciras to come here and repair the lifts. I do not know how the people caught in the lifts felt about that arrangement, but that was the arrangement that existed.

It may well be that those companies feel that they are not being as well treated nowadays as they were before 2011, but we believe that it is important to give an opportunity to train locals in the installation of lifts and in the maintenance of lifts and not to be in a situation of total dependence on people who are detached workers. They were not even Frontier workers. They were workers who were employed in Spain, posted to Gibraltar when a job needed to be done, 815 paying their social insurance in Spain, and certainly with the Article 50 Notice that we have had today it makes it even more important that we look to having a home-grown industry in that area. But at the time there was no inclusion of these companies on the approved contractor list and therefore it was not that we were breaking any conditions – there were no conditions attached. They did not have to employ anybody and they did not have to pay anything.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you once again. So then, there is effectively an admission by the Minister that home-grown companies and the work that they are producing means that effectively they get favoured for contracts.

Hon. J J Bossano: When the work is given it is given with the criteria that there has to be the quality, the reliability and the most effective price or value for money, but I make no apologies for putting the interests of Gibraltarians and Gibraltar first – no apologies. And I am sure that her Dad would not either.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, thank you. I have no doubt that his intentions – as, he claims, my father's too – are for the best for Gibraltarians. That was never my question. My question was whether there was some sort of favouring for one particular company, which, it seems there has been an admission of that. The reasons behind it is a different debate, possibly.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, if I want to say something I do not insinuate it, so if she thinks she has discovered that I was subliminally making an admission of something ... I am quite happy to stand up for the beliefs that I have without insinuating something or other.

I have told her that the selection has been on quality and on price. I have to tell her that when it comes to fair and unfair competition I think that not having to have people employed in 840 Gibraltar and being able to bring people in from outside Gibraltar may be unfair competition against a local company, and therefore the local company is not getting preferential treatment if they have to comply with things in Gibraltar and their competitors do not.

845 Certainly I can tell her that I think the position that existed where the competition was between two companies, both of which employed nobody here, contributed very little and in terms of multiplier effect in the economy was not satisfactory. Notwithstanding that, they have not been debarred from competing and putting in tenders. I can tell her also that their tenders have been lower since we have had a local competitor than they were when they held a monopoly – but in spite of that, nobody has been given favoured treatment, although there are plenty of reasons to justify it.

850

Suspension of Standing Order 7(1)
to proceed with Government Statement

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

855 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move, under Standing Order 7(3), to suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with a Government Statement.

Mr Speaker: I now propose that the Standing Order cited by the Chief Minister be suspended in order to allow him to make a Statement. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against?
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

860

Activation of Article 50 of the Treaty of Lisbon –
Statement by the Chief Minister

865 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, all hon. Members will be aware of the statement by the Prime Minister, the Rt Hon. Theresa May, in another Parliament earlier this afternoon. At 1.30 p.m. Central European time the Prime Minister has informed the House of Commons that she has formally written to the President of the European Council activating the operation of Article 50 of the Treaty of Lisbon in respect of the United Kingdom's membership of the European Union. The United Kingdom's Permanent Representative to the European Union, Sir Tim Burrow, has already delivered the letter to the President of the European Council, Donald Tusk.

870 I can assure the House, Mr Speaker, that we have considered in the Joint Ministerial Council aspects of that letter and on the tactical and strategic aspects of what it should or should not contain in relation to Gibraltar specifically. Although the letter does not mention Gibraltar specifically, it does cross refer to the White Paper published in February this year which dealt with Gibraltar issues. Another White Paper, to be published tomorrow, will also be relevant to Gibraltar.

875 The Prime Minister has moreover just answered two questions in Parliament about Gibraltar arising from her statement, confirming specifically that Gibraltar is a specific part of the multilateral negotiation she will lead with the rest of the European Union. She has also stated explicitly that she and her government are absolutely and steadfastly in support of Gibraltar and its people and economy. She has also confirmed on the floor of the House her government's 880 commitment to continue to work closely with the Government of Gibraltar as the negotiations develop.

Mr Speaker, Gibraltar has been a part of the European Union and the application of the treaties establishing the European Economic Community and the EU since this House, in December 1972, voted to give effect to the provisions of the Treaty of Rome through the passing 885 of our European Communities Act.

Article 355(3) of the Treaty Establishing the European Union makes specific provision for the application of the treaties to a territory for whose external relations a member state is responsible. Gibraltar is constitutionally such a territory. Since 1973 our constitutional position has nonetheless developed and now, although a matter may be related to the relationship with 890 the European Union, such a matter will not be outside the constitutional competence of Gibraltar if it is otherwise a matter for which Gibraltar holds competence. This withdrawal,
Mr Speaker, is therefore a matter of constitutional significance for Gibraltar. The 2006
Constitution provides in section 47(3) as follows:

Without prejudice to the United Kingdom's responsibility for Gibraltar's compliance with European Union law, matters which under this Constitution are the responsibility of Ministers shall not cease to be so even though they arise in the context of the European Union.

895 Our membership of the EU is also based on a number of derogations from the full application of the European acquis communautaire. Those who negotiated our membership for Gibraltar in 1972 managed to secure for us terms which have stood the test of time and led to a remarkable level of prosperity in Gibraltar in the 30 years since the opening of the Frontier with Spain really allowed us to trade with the rest of the EU. Mr Speaker, I reflect at this moment of 900 commencement of our withdrawal from the European Union, therefore the gratitude of the generations of Gibraltarians that have followed to those of the AACR and IWBP who were responsible for those negotiations and those decisions. Former Chief Ministers Sir Joshua Hassan, Bob Peliza, Joe Bossano and yourself, Mr Speaker, were Members of the Parliament that took us into the European Economic Community. With you were also former leaders of the 905 Opposition Peter Isola and Maurice Xiberras. The decisions made then now fall to be analysed as we make decisions about the future direction of trade in and from Gibraltar.

Our Brexit Select Committee will now soon start its work as the negotiations commence to analyse the choices we should make for today and for the future. The world today as we leave the European Union is a different place, Mr Speaker, to the world that saw us enter the EEC.
910 Today Gibraltar has access to the United Kingdom market in financial and other services, where we do 90% of our business. That access has been guaranteed going forward as a result of our negotiations with the UK in the aftermath of the result of the referendum. Today the globalised economy and the virtual economy provide opportunities for Gibraltar beyond its immediate geography. In that respect, Mr Speaker, we will be working to ensure that we open up access for 915 Gibraltar to markets around the world. Today the UK is already considering trade deals with the world beyond the EU. Those deals will also likely include access for Gibraltar to such markets as the United Kingdom does trade deals in coming years.

Mr Speaker, considerable work is being done by the Government with the relevant departments of the government of the United Kingdom to ensure such access is secured. We 920 know that those markets are likely to include nations of the Commonwealth and the United States. With those nations we share perhaps much greater affinity than we might with some of the nations with whom we were in partnership today in the European Union. Bonds of language and the common law create synergies which may yet provide a more interesting market for those operating from Gibraltar than some nations of the EU have done to date. We look forward 925 to having access to those markets in future. Indeed, we are in fact cautiously optimistic that we will be able to grow further and prosper even more in the future than we have in the past in the context of access to those new markets.

Mr Speaker, I can inform the House this afternoon that after the Prime Minister delivered her message to the Commons I have spoken to the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for 930 Exiting the European Union, Robin Walker MP. I have once again been directly assured by Mr Walker that the government of the United Kingdom will continue to ensure that we are fully involved and Gibraltar's priorities are fully understood and fully taken into account as we enter the process of negotiations with the European Union on the UK's departure.

935 He has further assured me of the understanding there is on the part of the government of the United Kingdom of Gibraltar's key interests in maintaining market access to the UK in key sectors and in the UK's double lock on sovereignty. Indeed, all hon. Members will be aware of the tenor and content of the Minister's statements when he was in Gibraltar. The double lock commitment, Mr Speaker, has been repeated by the Prime Minister a moment ago in respect of her answers to questions in Parliament this afternoon.

940 Hon. Members will also have noted the statements made by other member states about the United Kingdom's withdrawal from the European Union. The recent statements from the Kingdom of Spain in particular suggest areas of common interest and concern. Speaking last week on Radio Nacional de España, the current Spanish Foreign Minister, Sr Dastis Quecedo, said that he believed Spain was going to have a constructive attitude to Gibraltar because they 945 had an interest in the prosperity not so much of Gibraltar but of the Campo. He added that the region would be one of Spain's priorities.

In a parliamentary response to a written question filed by Salvador de la Encina, who is a friend of the Campo region and a representative of it in Madrid, in the Spanish Cortes, the Foreign Ministry has said the following:

The possible consequences of the departure from the European Union of the UK on the Campo and Spanish workers in Gibraltar will depend on the terms on which the UK leaves the EU.

Amongst the priorities of the Government in this respect in particular is the defence of the interests of Spanish citizens and companies that operate in Gibraltar, with the objective of avoiding that they should be prejudiced by this process.

... Spain will direct its efforts to obtaining favourable conditions for our workers, in terms of free movement and in preserving their social security acquired rights and rights in the process of being acquired, in the context of opportune negotiations with the other side and in agreement with the rest of our Community partners.

950 Speaking to Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, Sr Dastis also specifically confirmed on Monday that Spain is not looking to impose punitive measures on Gibraltar and neither is it going to close the Frontier with Gibraltar. He confirmed the Frontier will remain open, that the controls will remain as they are now and subject to such control as there may be on the EU's external borders.

955 It bears saying these things, which should be obvious, Mr Speaker, because we have heard some other things in the past from others. Indeed, we have heard many other discordant voices from the past say more outrageous things, but the position of the Spanish government now is increasingly clear and we have some common concerns and interests.

960 This is a serious time and serious matters affecting the lives of people who live in Spain and work in Gibraltar are at stake. This is not a time to inflame or shout at each other in the headlines; it is time to work to deliver solutions that work for cross-Frontier workers, the tourists who create a large number of their jobs and the children who cross the Frontier every day.

No doubt every Member of this House will welcome the statements that suggest that the government of Spain is also seriously concerned to ensure continued Frontier fluidity in the future. On this, however, all will consider that the jury is out, given their track record in the past.

Gibraltar, for its part, certainly will be working to ensure continued Frontier fluidity, and with full constitutional power to determine matters related to immigration, we will be able to guarantee access to Gibraltar in future on an unimpeded basis, because Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar continues to believe that Gibraltar is an important economic engine for the whole of the Campo region, which delivers benefits to citizens on both sides of the Frontier.
970 We can continue to do so even after the UK leaves the European Union. We also recognise a moral responsibility to those European citizens who are established in Gibraltar. We will be willing partners in ensuring their continuing ability to live amongst us, even though the position may be different for those settling after we leave the EU.

975 We will approach all aspects of the discussion about the future relationship with the EU in the spirit of sincere co-operation which the treaties require of existing members of the EU.

We want to see people's lives as unaffected as possible by this process. We will work to avoid disruption to all citizens, in particular those who have to cross the Frontier to work or for any other reason. In this respect, Mr Speaker, we welcome the Prime Minister's statement seeking that the United Kingdom's withdrawal from the European Union should be fair and orderly.

980 Mr Speaker, today is undoubtedly a sad day for Gibraltar. It is not the result we wanted from the referendum. Today is a day when we must be ready to work to turn sadness into optimism and hope. It is a day when we embark on a process we did not choose but are determined to make a success of.

985 As the United Kingdom looks to establish itself as a truly global Britain that reaches beyond Europe, so do we the British people of Gibraltar look to establish ourselves also as a nation with commercial relationships well beyond Europe and in partnership with Britain.

We are a resilient and entrepreneurial people. We will rise to the challenge. We will deliver a prosperous, outward looking, global British Gibraltar living in peace with its neighbours and we will thrive as a people as we adapt to the new realities of post-Brexit trade and adopt its myriad opportunities, because one thing must be clear to everyone beyond our shores: our affections as a people are not for sale. Our sovereignty is not in play. Our future is British now, during and after this process. Let no one think we are a bargaining chip. Gibraltar will be no one's bargaining chip. We will be no pawn in Brexit and we will be no victim of Brexit. As far as we are concerned, this day brings us nothing to celebrate, but it also brings us nothing to fear and everything to fight for, because the stark reality is that in 720 days the United Kingdom will likely no longer be a member of the European Union, and Gibraltar out of Europe will be closer than ever to a truly global Britain. (Banging on desks)

1000 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I start by associating myself with the words of the Chief Minister. It is indeed a sad day for Gibraltar. It is not something that Gibraltar would have wished, and indeed the vast majority of the people of Gibraltar voted against this outcome during the referendum last year.

1005 Mr Speaker, it also is a momentous day – a momentous day for Europe, a momentous day for the United Kingdom, and of course a momentous day for Gibraltar itself.

The Opposition remains cautious and it will remain vigilant in relation to the next two years and the developments and water that must pass under the bridge – and a lot of water I envisage will indeed pass under the bridge and we must remain very vigilant indeed.

1010 The first time that I rose in this House to deliver a speech post the referendum result I said to this House that the priorities of Gibraltar needed to be fourfold, and I, and certainly this side of the House, will remain of that view. Gibraltar needs to aspire to continued access to the UK market; new access to any trade agreements negotiated by the United Kingdom; any access negotiated by the United Kingdom for access into the single market; and above all, in our view, a workable, sensible, reasonable agreement in relation to Frontier fluidity.

1015 Mr Speaker, from our own conversations with the Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Robin Walker MP, the message emanating from the United Kingdom in relation to the first of those two – access into the single market – and also inclusion of Gibraltar in any agreements that are negotiated with third party countries by the United Kingdom ... Mr Walker was extremely positive in his message and confident that the United Kingdom would be able to deliver in relation to those.

1020 In relation to access into the single market, in this regard Mr Walker also drew a distinction between membership of the single market, which perhaps the United Kingdom is not pursuing, but access into the single market, which the United Kingdom is certainly pursuing.

In relation to Frontier fluidity, although the message emanating from the United Kingdom is that it would do everything that it can in order to ensure that we come out of at the end of this process with something that Gibraltar will be able to live with, and that Gibraltar will be able to continue to prosper, and that the United Kingdom will do everything that it can in order to ensure that we do form part of, for example, any agreement for access into the single market.

Mr Speaker, that is where I believe, and certainly on this side of the House we believe, that the fight, if there is to be a fight in those negotiations, that is where it is going to be, because of course that is where our neighbours to the north, Spain, will be able to exert its influence in relation to any possible agreement emanating between the United Kingdom and Europe. And yes, while we welcome the restatement by the Prime Minister this afternoon of the double lock guarantee, an undertaking provided to the people of Gibraltar, and whilst we also welcome the statements made by the Spanish Foreign Secretary in relation to the Frontier, we must remain extremely vigilant about this because of course the view of one Foreign Secretary at this moment in time in Spain may not be the view of a different Foreign Secretary at some other point in the future. And in the same way as Mr Margallo made all those outrageous statements not long ago when he was Foreign Secretary, of course it is always possible that some other Spanish Foreign Secretary will continue to make those outrageous statements and will continue with its policy of unfriendliness, to say the least, in relation to Gibraltar.

That is why, Mr Speaker, it should not be acceptable to the people of Gibraltar and to Gibraltar for there not to be an agreement that deals with Frontier fluidity. In other words, it should not be acceptable to have a default position of Spain and the United Kingdom reaching an agreement in relation to everything else but remaining silent in relation to the Frontier, because to remain silent and for there not to be included within any such agreement anything on the Frontier always leaves us open as hostages to fortune in the future should there be a Mr Margallo mark 2.

Mr Speaker, I end by saying that the Opposition ... and certainly it has been my policy since I have been Leader of the Opposition in 2013 to offer to work closely with the Government of Gibraltar, shoulder to shoulder, united for the benefit of this community, because at the end of the day we all have common goals which are to ensure the survival and the prosperity of this community, which must always transcend narrow political interests. And in the same way as I proposed, when I became Leader of the Opposition, for there to be meetings of the House in a motion ... I am sorry, I beg your pardon, meetings between my learned and hon. Friend the Chief Minister and myself, and his team and our team, to work together in 2013 to foreshadow what could transpire if the vote at the referendum was negative – and also, Mr Speaker, I proposed on behalf of this side of the House the creation of a Select Committee, after we knew what the result of the referendum was, in order to work together for a positive road map that assists everybody in achieving the best possible result – we maintain that policy and we are ready, willing and able to work with the Government in order to ensure that the people of Gibraltar and our future generations enjoy the same prosperity and the same standard and security of living that all of us in Gibraltar have enjoyed in the past. The sooner we set up the work of the Select Committee on Brexit the better, and I welcome, too, the Hon. the Chief Minister's Statement in that regard. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, may I too associate myself with the Chief Minister's Statement.

For many, today's events will represent a sober return to the emotions of the morning of 24th June, the day which set us all on the journey beyond our relationship with the European Union. June gave birth to Brexit, but today is its baptism and civil registration. Unlike the happy affair of christening a child, this event unfortunately will not see us booking up a local social club for drinks and tapas. If I may be permitted the indulgence of continuing with my metaphor, 1080 unlike the birth of a child, we are not in a hugely different place to where we were nine months ago. The road ahead continues to be lined with uncertainty. In many ways we are passengers in this process and the voice of the British people has been heard.

So, Mr Speaker, here we are: it has happened. Now is the time to put everything in place. As an Opposition MP I have a role to play, but compared to the hon. Members opposite it is a minor one.

1085 It was the Government led by my father which steered us through the early years of our democracy when we had been delivered from exodus; it was the Government of the Hon. Father of the House who, when our economic future was threatened by the MoD's withdrawal, thought outside the box and redefined our model; and it was the Government of Sir Peter Caruana which saw off the joint sovereignty proposals. Now comes a new challenge, and I daresay it falls on us all. So, once again, I offer my hand of support across the floor of this House.

1090 I have proudly accepted the offer of forming part of the Brexit Select Committee, where over the next 24 months we will analyse and monitor the progress of the UK government in its steer, as well as devise a strategy for lobbying and pushing our agenda beyond our borders. I stand by, ready to be called upon at any moment and will also take every opportunity to promote our joint cause through the international media and my friends and contacts in the UK – for there is only one way we will get through this, and that is together.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the statements from hon. Members opposite.

1100 The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has set out that there were four things that he thought we should achieve in the context of Brexit and he enumerated them as, first, continued access to the United Kingdom market; second, access to new trade agreements; third, access to – (Interjection by the Hon. T N Hammond)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mr Hammond, yes, I will give you the floor.

Hon. T N Hammond: My apologies, Chief Minister. I was just asking the Speaker if this was a debate. I was not quite sure what process we were in here.

1110 Mr Speaker: Perhaps I should explain. When a ministerial statement is made the Rules provide for questions of clarification to be made arising from the ministerial statement. However, given the gravity of the situation, given the matter that is the subject of exchanges this afternoon, and which is something that has happened in the past, Speakers here in Parliament and in the House of Commons are very, very liberal in the application of those rules.

1115 Therefore, invariably what happens in the House of Commons, and has happened here over the years, is that the Leader of the Opposition and the leader of other minority opposition parties are allowed effectively to make a counterstatement, which is what has happened today. Obviously, in that counterstatement matters arise, which have not been perhaps this afternoon posed as questions of clarification but which nevertheless I feel the Chief Minister should be given an opportunity to deal with them as if they were questions of clarification.

1120 So I have interpreted the rules, as I say very liberally; I think it is in the interest of this Parliament that we should, given the seriousness of the matter. I would not always deal with other matters in the same way. I might only expect serious questions of clarification, which can be made by any Member of the Opposition and not just by the Leader of the Opposition and the leader of a minority interest, as has been the case this afternoon.

1125 So, just to clarify the matter, I think it is in the interest of Parliament and of our people this afternoon that the Chief Minister should therefore have an opportunity to deal with issues which have been raised by the two hon. Members from the Opposition benches.

1130 Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker. So we are not dealing with this as a debate but we are dealing with it as the Rules provide that we should, and perhaps before challenging Mr Speaker's manner of running the proceedings of the House people should familiarise themselves with the Rules. The Prime Minister has been on her feet from 12.30 when she started Prime Minister's Question Time, or quarter to one when she started Prime Minister's 1135 Question Time, until about 4.15, dealing with questions arising from her statement, and she has dealt with questions from just about every Member of the Parliament in the United Kingdom.

Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition raised four matters which he said were the fourfold issues he wanted to see dealt with in the context of Brexit: continued access to the UK market; access to the new trade agreements that the United Kingdom may do; access to any trade agreement the United Kingdom may do with the European Union aka with the single 1140 market; and finally, a workable, sensible agreement with Spain on Frontier fluidity. He went on to say that it would not be acceptable for the United Kingdom and Spain not to do an agreement on Frontier fluidity, as far as he was concerned, because we should not be at the whim of any future Spanish Foreign Minister.

Well, Mr Speaker, dealing with those questions first, in respect of (1) and (2), as he says that 1145 Mr Walker told him in the context of a meeting, we are very much there in respect of continued access to the UK market and access to the United Kingdom's trade agreements with third countries when those are done. There has been a very clear commitment from Robin Walker on behalf of the British government, from Secretary of State Liam Fox in statements made in the context of Gibraltar Day in London last year, and followed up in writing in respect of both of 1150 those. I say in November of last year, Mr Speaker, because in fact we have been able to achieve those two of the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition's criteria by November of last year in terms of commitment. But I think we will be able to go even further, so if I may say so – not in self-congratulatory terms but in terms of ensuring that those who are doing business from Gibraltar and in Gibraltar continue to have the confidence that they need to have to know that they can 1155 continue to invest in Gibraltar – I think that is a very good result indeed for the Gibraltar economy.

The issue of what agreement the United Kingdom will have with the single market is one which, of course, is vexed in a different way. The first two are matters largely in the bilateral gift of the United Kingdom itself and we have found absolutely no resistance whatsoever to having 1160 access to things which the United Kingdom controls itself and in the bilateral relationship with Gibraltar. Of course, hon. Members will know that there has been a debate until very recently as to whether the United Kingdom should remain a member of the Customs Union, whether it should seek to stay in the single market. That debate has been resolved really by the Prime Minister asking people to realise that the objectives for which people appear to have voted in 1165 the context of the referendum are not compatible with some of the rules of the single market and the Common Customs Union, so what deal the United Kingdom achieves in terms of access to the single market is the subject of continued debate in the United Kingdom.

Hon. Members may have watched the recent Question Time on Monday, where David Davis, the Secretary of State for Exiting the European Union, was repeatedly asked what deal the 1170 United Kingdom would have with the single market, and he was of course unable to say because the negotiations have not yet begun. Mr Davis has said that he hopes that the final agreement between the United Kingdom and the European Union is as good as the relationship ... or produces as good an opportunity for business as the relationship produces today. That is one of the six criteria that Sir Keir Starmer, as the Labour shadow Brexit spokesperson has therefore 1175 established for Labour's support to any deal that may come back from the European Union. So we will see what deal it is that the United Kingdom is able to do with the European Union in respect of its own access to the single market.

We have to be alive to the fact that what has commenced on the triggering of Article 50 is the process of withdrawal from the European Union, whilst the new deal for access to the single 1180 market, such as it may be if one is achieved, would be not the process of Article 50, although the United Kingdom is approaching this process as one that should be intertwined with the new deal going forward that the United Kingdom does with the European Union. In fact, hon. Members will know that one of the things that Mr Davis has said repeatedly, and the Prime Minister herself has said repeatedly, is that no deal in terms of future trade relationships between the United Kingdom and the European Union is better than a bad deal in that respect. So this is very much an issue that is live.

A workable, sensible agreement with Spain on Frontier fluidity is of course what the Government also considers is an essential part of the future, Mr Speaker. To a very great extent we have said so explicitly and implicitly in the context of the Select Committees of the United Kingdom Parliament that I have attended: the importance of the Frontier and the ability to continue to seek fluidity across that Frontier is essential. I have repeated that to the House today, and that is why I say that the jury is out on what a Spanish Foreign Minister or a Spanish President may say one day in relation to Gibraltar and the Frontier and may do on another day. In fact, the references I have made to other statements that we have heard are the recent statements we heard by Sr Margallo when he was Foreign Minister – he was talking about planting the Spanish flag on Gibraltar in the next four years – and Sr Marcelino Oreja, who was a leading light in the Partido Popular at one stage, saying that of course, now that Brexit is going to happen, they will close the Frontier.

I think to an extent we have to put those in context and look at the run of play of what is being said in Spain but understand who is speaking for the government and who is speaking for the position of the government today. That is why, although I put it no higher than the statements which have been uttered in the past days, it is important that we reflect that those are the statements made and they are statements about the Frontier not being closed – of course, because it would be an act of political idiocy in the 21st century to close a frontier in Europe, and I doubt that there is anybody in Spain who is going to even seriously countenance that in the upper echelons of government decision making – and second, that there is a desire to achieve Frontier fluidity for Spanish workers.

Spanish workers are an important part of our economy, but they are not just Spanish workers who come to Gibraltar to work; there are other EEA nationals and third country nationals who live in Spain and who come to Gibraltar to work, and a lot of the work that they do is for people who arrive in Gibraltar as tourists, who also need to be able to come across a free-flowing Frontier if there is going to be work for Spanish Frontier workers and other people who come to Gibraltar not because they are working here and not because they are tourists but simply because they want to come because they have family here, because they want to buy goods in our stores, etc. So it is important that we understand that fluidity is something that must apply across the board and not just to a select few. But, Mr Speaker, I think it is also important to say that there are provisions in EU law which I have referred select committees to in the UK and I have referred to in previous statements I have made, which provide for access to the Schengen area of the European Union. Regulation 1931/2006 specifically provides for agreements in that respect and that is one potential avenue where an agreement may arise from.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman says that he has offered to work closely with the Government and shoulder to shoulder with us on this subject. Well, the hon. Gentleman knows that we have said that we are going to set up the Brexit Select Committee to deal with these issues as the negotiations commence. He will have seen that in the United Kingdom the Government is running the Brexit matters; it is not something they do with the Opposition. Here, the process until now has been really a process of information gathering. The process of negotiation begins now. That is when our Select Committee will meet.

But I will say this to the hon. Gentleman – and I do not want to strike a discordant note but it is important that I say it: it is all very well to say that one will work closely with the Government and ‘we will work shoulder to shoulder with the Government’ and then go off and do things which might be interpreted in a different way. I would urge that, for the period in which we are about to embark, we need to all be very conscious of what the effect of our statements and actions may be on confidence in the Gibraltar economy, on the perception of the Gibraltar economy and Gibraltar outside of Gibraltar, in particular the perception that Spain may be given of the positions being taken in Gibraltar. When we talk about the economy being virtual and globalised, that is a very good thing – it enables us to do business with distant parts of the world. The other side of that, of course, is that everything that we say to each other can be read in another capital just further to the north as if it were being said there. So we have to be conscious of what we say and we have to have that particular desire to ensure that anything we do does not affect Gibraltar’s prospects ... shine through what perhaps might otherwise be seen as normal partisan activity. But it is a matter entirely for Members opposite what they do, how they do it, how they say it and what the repercussions of that are.

Can I thank the hon. Lady for bringing a smile to my face on an otherwise difficult day with her reference to this being a baptism or civil registration of the process of Brexit. At least the thought of being able to get together in a social club and eating some calamares, which seems to be the way that most people celebrate baptisms here, was at least more enticing than what is coming!

Mr Speaker, she said that Gibraltarians, that we in this part of the franchise of the referendum, were passengers in this process. Well, we are as much passengers in this process as everybody who voted remain and finds themselves with a leave result may be, but there is a deep political significance in that concept, and that is that at a time when some might be going off on frolics thinking that Gibraltar’s sovereignty is somehow in play, that this was a moment when perhaps there was an opportunity in respect of the big political sovereignty issue, actually what was happening was the gelling even further together of the people of Gibraltar and the United Kingdom, because we voted together in a franchise on an issue as seminal as whether the United Kingdom should remain a part of the European Union.

The Article 50 letter talks about the withdrawal of the United Kingdom from the European Union. The United Kingdom has a definition in law – those words ‘United Kingdom’ are defined in law – and that definition does not include Gibraltar. Gibraltar is included with the United Kingdom as part of the European Union because of the operation of the European treaty, not because of the operation of English law. We voted in a referendum with a question that did not include the word ‘Gibraltar’ in it, but we voted as part of that franchise in respect of a question that mentioned the United Kingdom. In Gibraltar there have, for 50 years, been integrationists and not integrationists, but there have been very few who want to be anything other than British. In the context of that debate and wanting to be British and continue to be British, voting as part of that franchise in that referendum, even though we were on the side – at least 96% of us – that lost, means that we are not just passengers. We are a part of that process. It is, like it or not, a process which the British people are embarked upon and we are embarked on it with them.

You could take that language and say, well then, that of course you are a passenger if you are embarked on a vessel that is going in a particular direction, but so are all the British people. And so, for those of us who believe passionately, as I know that all Members of this House do, that Gibraltar should continue to be British in perpetuity and exclusively British in perpetuity, then being embarked on that process with the United Kingdom, even though the trajectory of this particular cruise ship is not the one that we chose, demonstrates that we are in it together and that therefore anybody who thought that this was a process that might lead to a destination where Gibraltar might be disembarked from the United Kingdom’s sovereignty they have read it completely wrong and they have not understood the significance of Gibraltar voting as part of the franchise in the referendum and indeed of how that was kicked off – the man sitting behind me is largely responsible for that – by the winning of the Matthews case and Gibraltar’s voting in European parliamentary elections as part of the south west constituency of the United Kingdom.

If anything, the umbilical links between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom are stronger now, and those who might celebrate the fact that when the United Kingdom leaves the European Union Gibraltar leaves with them because they are interested in taking our sovereignty are

1285 celebrating the wrong overture, because what that demonstrates is that we leave because we are with the United Kingdom and in the sovereignty of the United Kingdom and nowhere near the sovereignty of any other – though they might have, for one moment, dangled a carrot suggesting that we might be interested in staying in the single market if we were to change our sovereignty. So I take the hon. Lady's remarks about being passengers and I suggest to her that it 1290 is not a bad place to be, given what I know her objectives and our objectives on this side of the House, and indeed the objectives of any Member of this House, are in terms of the long-term sovereignty position of the people of Gibraltar and Gibraltar itself.

Mr Speaker, the Prime Minister spent, as I have said, four hours today on her feet dealing with these issues. There are going to be many challenges in the months ahead, but for Gibraltar 1295 there are also many opportunities. Economically, Gibraltar's relationship with the single market has really been a relationship with the United Kingdom. The hon. Member talks about that first particular limb, the continued access to the UK. I think it is important for people to understand that it is an access that no other Overseas Territory has secured. When we went in, in 1972, the single market had not been created. I saw references to the fact that the single market was 1300 really one of Mrs Thatcher's contributions to the growth of the European Economic Community.
For Gibraltar it meant that we were, in effect, the only one of the Overseas Territories who obtained the ability to trade freely into the UK, not reliant on the umbilical bilateral relationship between each Overseas Territory and the United Kingdom but on the basis of the European Acquis. That is going to continue, which is going to mean that the Gibraltarian relationship with 1305 the United Kingdom is going to be, in market terms, in particular in financial services market terms, closer than it can be between the United Kingdom and other Overseas Territories, and it is fair to say that others look at the relationship we have with the UK and I think wish they had made other choices in the 1970s.

But we now will, to use a European terminology that we may not be using so much in future, 1310 we are going to grandfather that into the world post Brexit and we are going to continue to have that access. We identified from the first moment that that was one of the most important measures, and in a letter that I sent to Prime Minister David Cameron I identified that we needed to be able to say quickly to financial services firms established in Gibraltar that that would continue post Brexit, and the then Prime Minister was very quick to come back to say that 1315 the political will was there to make that happen – and you have then seen how we have continued to develop that commitment into something more tangible and it is now an accepted part of the future going forward.

But the relevance here is this: when the single market happened, Gibraltar started accessing it principally in relation to the United Kingdom, and so you will have heard, Mr Speaker, and so 1320 will hon. Members have heard me say that 90% of our trade has been with the UK in the single market. Well, the remaining 10% has principally been with Ireland, and some of the rest of it in the rest of the European Union. So, when we do this analysis and we get a lot more information after the Brexit result from the firms that are established in Gibraltar telling us what their interests are going forward, I think it becomes increasingly clear that the products that Gibraltar 1325 is able to sell, and which are our unique selling point, are clearly best marketed in places where there is a common language with us, where we have a common legal interface like the common law, respect for the rule of law. But importantly – and I commend to hon. Members to think through this important distinction – the common law brings an understanding of ownership which is twofold, legal and beneficial, and therefore it is possible to do things where that 1330 equitable ownership of things is recognised that it is not possible to do in civil law countries.

The 28-member block is made up principally of civil law countries, and so our financial services are sold better in a small number of those member states of the European Union than they would in the whole of the European Union, and some of those are also small jurisdictions that sell services and therefore are not potential markets for our products. As we go forward, if 1335 the United Kingdom is able to do as they confidently expect that they will, trade deals – whether in two years, in five years or in 10 years – with states in the Commonwealth, of which I will refer only to five in dealing with the issues put by hon. Members this afternoon, then it may be that the markets for Gibraltar's services are much more receptive ones post Brexit than the ones that we have pre Brexit. The examples are these, the ones that have been spoken of specifically in the context of the debate already: New Zealand; Australia; the United States of America; Canada, which has just done its agreement with the European Union and is therefore a good blueprint for trade with the United Kingdom going forward; and, of course, India. In those five Commonwealth nations – except the United States, which is not a Commonwealth Nation, although I recently read that the United States may be seeking access to the Commonwealth of Nations – we would see represented almost two billion people. A lot of the argument with all my predecessors, yourself included, as former Chief Ministers, and I put in the context of the Brexit referendum, was to say 'How can we leave a market of 520 million people?' Well, Mr Speaker, of those 520 million people it appears that there were about sixty to eighty million people interested in our financial services, those governed by the common law principally, for all of the reasons that I have referred to the House. Of course, that is not to say that those 80 million each bought a financial service from Gibraltar, but a market of sixty to eighty million people who have that common interface and understanding of the law. If the United Kingdom is able to do trade deals with nations – the five that I have set out that represent two billion people governed by the common law where we have that common interface of language, of common law, rule of law, etc. – then it is possible that the markets to which we have access in the future will be even more attracted to the services that we are able to sell from Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, that is not to say that we would have changed the recommendation that we made to the people of Gibraltar at the time of the referendum – I certainly would not have – but we have to accept that the referendum result is now firm. The Prime Minister has taken action today to start a process which in 720 days will very likely produce a result, and we have to look for the opportunities, such as I set out to hon. Members today, that deal with not just those four issues that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has identified but looks beyond them at what markets there may be for Gibraltar thereafter and enables us to understand why it is that we are pursuing the criteria that we are pursuing.

It is not, Mr Speaker, the day that the people of Gibraltar were most looking forward to, but with the resolve and resilience that this community has shown in the past, and with the hard work that everyone in this community is going to put into ensuring that Gibraltar continues to be a success – and I for one pledge my work to ensuring that the political aspects of this are dealt with, as I am sure every other Member of this House will – I am sure that for Gibraltar this is just, in history, going to be seen as another challenge: another challenge that we surmounted, another challenge that did not make us bend to anybody else's will, and another challenge that ensured that Gibraltar and Gibraltarians will continue to forever be of the British sovereignty that the people of Gibraltar choose it should continue to be.

Mr Speaker, the Prime Minister has one quality which I think it is important to reflect to all Members of this House. Apart from the fact that she is a determined woman, as we have seen, it is also true that, like all of us, she was a remainer. She advocated the vote for the United Kingdom to remain in the European Union and the argument she is making now is an argument born out of respect for the result of the referendum. That is how we must all act in working with the Parliament at Westminster in continuing our work at a technical level with the devolved nations of the United Kingdom, with the islands of the Channel Islands and with the other Overseas Territories to ensure that we take the best opportunities for Gibraltar and take from what might otherwise have delivered a hammer blow to our prospects and turn it into an absolute success going forward for many future generations of Gibraltarians, and I have no doubt that we will achieve that, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Questions for Oral Answer

HEALTH, CARE AND JUSTICE

Q247 and 248 /2017

Care Agency carers –

Gibraltar-resident and cross-Frontier employees and subcontracted workers 1385 Clerk: We now resume questions and we commence with Question 247. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provided statistics of how many carers employed by the Care Agency are resident in Gibraltar and how many are cross-Frontier workers?

1390

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 248.

1395

Clerk: Question 248, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide statistics of how many subcontracted workers providing care services for the Care Agency are resident in Gibraltar and how many are cross-Frontier workers?

1400

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the number of carers employed by the Care Agency who are resident in Gibraltar and those who are Frontier workers is broken down as follows: resident in Gibraltar, 125; cross-Frontier workers, 34.

The total number of subcontracted workers providing care services for the Care Agency who are resident in Gibraltar and are cross-Frontier workers is broken down as follows: resident, in Gibraltar, 27; cross-Frontier workers, 169.

Q249-252/2017

Dementia and long-term elderly patients –

Dementia Residential Unit; St Bernard's Hospital; Mount Alvernia

1410 Clerk: Question 249, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that the Dementia Residential Unit will be fully operational on 1st April 2017 and that Grand Home Care are to operate the facility?

1415

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 250 to 252.

1420

Clerk: Question 250, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in what wards at St Bernard's Hospital are dementia and long-term elderly patients currently located?

1425

Clerk: Question 251, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: How many extra beds at the hospital put in place by the GHA since December 2016/January 2017 are being occupied by dementia and long-term elderly patients, and where are these located?

1430

Clerk: Question 252, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many elderly citizens are presently waiting for a place at Mount Alvernia and how many of these are occupying a bed at St Bernard's Hospital?

1435

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as announced by the Hon. the Chief Minister in his New Year message on 10th January, the Dementia Residential Unit will open within 90 days of his address – that is to say in April of this year. The facility will not be operated by Grand Home Care.

Dementia and long-term elderly patients are currently located in Captain Murchison Ward, Victoria Ward, Calpe Ward, Cochrane Ward and the temporary ward.

The GHA has put in place 11 extra beds at St Bernard's Hospital since December 2016 and January of this year, all of which are being occupied by dementia and long-term elderly patients. These are located as follows: Captain Murchison Ward, two beds; Victoria Mackintosh Ward, two beds; temporary ward, seven beds.

1445

There are currently 70 elderly citizens waiting for a place in Mount Alvernia and 27 of these are occupying a bed in St Bernard's Hospital.

1450

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer.

I was surprised to hear that Grand Home Care will not be operating the Dementia Residential Unit. If I may ask the Minister: who is to operate the Dementia Residential Unit, why the change at this stage, and was there a retender process?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the company that will be operating the Dementia Residential Unit will be Medoc. This bid was the second preferred bid at the time of the tender; it also happened to be the lowest bid.

1460

Certain information came to the Government, which I will be more than happy to discuss with the hon. Gentleman behind the Speaker's Chair, but certain information came to the Government which made the Government deem that it would be unsuitable for Grand Home Care to continue to be the preferred bidder to operate the Dementia Residential Unit.

1465

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his response. Can he advise the House on what date this decision was taken?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I do not have the exact date but it was certainly after I answered this question when he asked me originally which was the preferred bidder and at the time I answered Grand Home Care. It happened subsequent to those events.

1470

Mr Speaker: Next question.

1475 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Minister: in terms of the size of the contract, is it not a requirement under European law that if a tender award has been taken away from a contractor that it is required to go back out to tender? Or am I wrong in that assumption?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, he is wrong.

1480 Clerk: Question 253, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: May I just ask one supplementary on my ...? It is in relation to the seven beds in the temporary ward. When he talks about 'temporary ward', he means the temporary ward that has been created out of the rehabilitation gym?

1485 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, the hon. Gentleman is correct, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

1490

Q253/2017
Cardiac rehabilitation –
Location of classes pending return to use of gym

Clerk: Question 253, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1495 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in the light of the fact that the cardiac rehabilitation gym is now being used as a seven-patient ward, where are cardiac patients undertaking rehabilitation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1500 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, it is perhaps pertinent to remind the Hon. Leader of the Opposition that this area was originally designed as a hydrotherapy pool which had never been commissioned to be used as such by the previous administration. Talk about the prudential use of taxpayers' money for yet another hole in the ground, Mr Speaker!

1505 As a result of the non-use of the pool since 2004, my hon. Friend and predecessor Dr John Cortes decided to convert the area into store capacity for the rehab departments. This was later used as a temporary isolation unit for the Ebola outbreak contingency, which when decommissioned was converted to an additional gym for rehab services.

The hon. Gentleman should also know that the cardiac rehab classes have always been conducted within the established rehabilitation areas. This has been the practice since the move to the current St Bernard's Hospital in 2005.

1510 Once the temporary ward is decommissioned in April of this year, it will be adapted again as an additional gym which will be used fully as a cardio rehabilitation area once our elderly are eligible for admission into the new Hillside residential home.

1515 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, thank you very much for the history lesson. I have to say I did not even have to push any buttons: the hon. Gentleman decided of his own motion that he would go on the attack! I commend him for that. And here I was telling my hon. Friend Mr Hammond, 'I don't think I'm going to be asking any supplementary questions,' Mr Speaker!

1520 He has outlined the history of this, and then he says that now ... almost indicating, I should say, when he gives the history, 'Well, it's never really been designed as a rehabilitation gym; it was really something else, but now the Government is going to turn it back into a rehabilitation gym.’ That presumes that it is a space that is usable as a rehabilitation gym and that the Government has made the decision to actually use it as such. What he has not answered is where are those people who require a rehabilitation gym at the present moment in time, where are they being treated. Where are they going –

Hon. N F Costa: I have.

Hon. D A Feetham: Oh, have you? I beg your pardon. Because if there is no gym and it was being used for something else before and now it is being used as a – (Interjection) Well, can he, please, because I have to say that I did not understand the answer that he provided.

1530

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I did decide to go on the attack but I also did answer the question.

Yes, as I explained, the area was originally designed as a hydrotherapy pool but never actually used. As a result, it was the decision of my hon. predecessor to convert the non-used hydrotherapy pool into a rehabilitation gym, but as an additional rehabilitation gym because, as I explained to him, the cardiac rehabilitation classes have always been conducted within the established rehabilitation areas. And so once the temporary ward is decommissioned, because of course those patients will then be either transferred to the new Dementia Residential Home or indeed to the additional beds that will be provided at the elderly residential facilities, then it will be converted once again into the additional rehabilitation gym and then they will be able to use that additionally for rehabilitation classes.

1540

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is just that he uses and he has continued to use this phrase ‘rehabilitation areas’. For me, a rehabilitation gym contains gym equipment that is used for rehabilitation purposes. Is he saying that there is another space within the hospital that contains rehabilitation gym equipment for rehabilitation purposes? (A Member: Yes.) That is one question.

1545

The second question is: if it was that the Government, by converting this particular space into a rehabilitation gym – he has told me that Minister Cortes was responsible for that ... The Government must have felt that extra rehabilitation space was necessary. That must follow. Therefore, what impact is this having on those people who want to have rehabilitation and indeed need to have rehabilitation?

1550

The Hon. Minister cannot have it both ways. He cannot say to me there is additional rehabilitation elsewhere – but that has always been the case, unless the conversion has taken place after this has been closed. Otherwise there is now a minus lack ... you are in the minus area in terms of rehabilitation equipment and rehabilitation gym.

1555

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, and then he wonders why I go on the attack! No, the hon. Gentleman clearly has not heard the answer that I have given to him.

1560

The space where the additional rehabilitation gym is currently placed used to be a hydrotherapy pool. The hydrotherapy pool had lain unused for many years, as a result of which my hon. predecessor decided to convert that area into a cardiac rehabilitation gym in addition to the cardiac rehabilitation areas already within St Bernard’s Hospital. The reason why that was decided was not because it was necessary, and therefore I do not agree with the hon. Gentleman’s respectfully flawed logic, but because it was advisable to have additional rehabilitation areas.

1565

In any event, that area was not used because of the Ebola outbreak which became an isolation unit, and following the decommissioning of the Ebola outbreak as an isolation unit the issue with beds arose, as a result of which we made that into a temporary ward since January of this year.

1570

As I have also explained to the hon. Gentleman, this is a temporary ward, as the name suggests, and will be decommissioned by April, once the Dementia Residential Home is open. Therefore, at that point, the additional rehabilitation gym, which forms the subject of this question, will now be fully and properly used as additional space.

Hon. D A Feetham: One final question: what in the Hon. Minister's mind is the difference between necessary and advisable? (Interjection) Well, absolutely.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has said to me that there has always been rehabilitation space, and then he says it was not necessary but it was advisable to convert this particular space into a gym – that it was not necessary, it was just simply advisable – and he is also telling me that, actually, when all this is over it is going to be reconverted back into a gym.

In my respectful view, Mr Speaker, he is splitting hairs. Is it not the case that the Government deems that it is necessary to have this additional rehabilitation space, otherwise it would not be reconverting it back into a gym; and therefore does it also follow from that that there are patients, certainly who have come to me, who are telling me that they are being prejudiced by the fact that they have lost this rehabilitation facility?

It is the only reason why I ask this – I do not use the gym, I do not use rehabilitation facilities. I ask the questions because constituents are concerned about these issues, and that is why I raise them in the House, so that I can then go back and I can then say to them this is the answer the Minister has provided. I will go back and I will say, 'Well, the Minister says that it is not necessary but it is advisable and it is going to come back later on.'

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, if the constituents that have gone to talk to him feel prejudiced, they must have been extremely prejudiced during all of the time that the GSD had a hydro pool that was not used since the St Bernard's Hospital came to its current location.

I do not need to explain to a Queen's Counsel the difference between necessity and desirability or advisability. It is necessary to breathe oxygen and it is advisable to have a Leader of the Opposition who understands the answers that are given to him.

Mr Speaker: [Inaudible]

Hon. R M Clinton: Okay, thank you very much.

If I may ask the Hon. Minister a very, hopefully, simple and inoffensive question, I heard him refer to Hillside residential home: is that what the Dementia Residential Home will be called?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, sir.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q254/2017
GHA locums –
Numbers and assignment by department

Clerk: Question 254, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am just reading a message received from a constituent listening to this debate saying he is not answering the question, so obviously there are others out there who remain just as unsatisfied by the answer the Hon. Minister has given me.

1615 Mr Speaker, how many locums have been engaged by the GHA in the years ending 2011, 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015 and 2016, and which Departments were they assigned to?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1620 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, perhaps the person who is writing to him can write to me directly and I will answer the question directly to the person.
Mr Speaker, the information is in the schedule I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman.

1625 Mr Speaker: Can I ask the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, who has a number of questions, if he would allow the hon. Lady to ask her question, since she has an urgent engagement at 6.30?

1630 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have no objection, but can I say that I have cancelled an appointment which was very urgent, at six o'clock, because of these questions myself. But I have no objection, but I just wanted that to be on record because we all need to be making sacrifices when we are in this House.

Mr Speaker: I am sure we are all going to be rewarded for the sacrifices that we are making!

Q275/2017
Visiting neurologist –
Frequency of visits

1635 Mr Speaker: The hon. Lady, Question 275.

Clerk: Question 275, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1640 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I thank the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition for giving way and I can assure you that it is by no means a facetious engagement: my daughter is eleven years old and she is a drummer and has to compete for the Festival of Young Musicians this evening and really wants her mother there. So I am grateful for that.

My question is: what is the Government's position with regard to the frequency of the visiting neurologist to the GHA?

1645

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Government is satisfied with the frequency of the visiting neurologist to the GHA. We are in the process, however, of seeking to repatriate this and other services.

1650

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, thank you to the Hon. Minister for his answer, but could I commit him to giving us an answer in terms of was there a frequency quarterly, biannual or something like that, because certain constituents who suffer from neurological conditions have been told on the one hand that he was meant to come quarterly but unfortunately did not see him appearing since last October until very recently, and obviously it has caused them concern and problems obviously.

1655

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, to take the questions that the hon. Lady has asked me in order, the neurologists come from St George's Hospital. There are three neurologists who visit every three months for around two or three days.

1660

There has been, according to my supplementary information, one complaint, and we could therefore be speaking of exactly the same complaint about a patient having missed an appointment. If the hon. Lady cares to give me the details of the patient who has missed the appointment, I will obviously make sure that at the next visit the patient is seen, and of course if the patient requires to be referred urgently we also do that. This year there have been 13 referrals and last year there were 37. So if this patient, having missed the appointment with the neurologist ... it is now felt by another consultant within the GHA should be urgently referred to the UK or to Spain, then the hon. Lady need, as she ordinarily does, only write to me and I will make sure it is immediately looked into.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for this answer and for your offer, to the Minister, of being available for this patient, but from what I understand, this patient has never officially complained, he has never missed an appointment, and the complaint and the query is that he was assured that a visiting neurologist comes to Gibraltar every three months and then was told six months later, when no neurologist was coming to Gibraltar, that the missing of a neurologist every quarter is due to the crisis with the NHS.

1675

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, I will certainly go back and ask my team but I would certainly have been told by the Medical Director, with whom I consult daily on numerous occasions and certainly in respect to answers to questions ... He would definitely have told me had there not been the usual quarterly visit by the visiting neurologists, but I will double check that information for her.

1680

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I am grateful for that, but I can assure the Minister, and I will have a conversation with him, that this is what the patient was told by the doctor.

1685

I now ask, and perhaps he has already intimated it, but do we have a plan for a frequently visiting neurologist moving forward?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I have explained to the hon. Lady, there is a quarterly visit by three neurologists from St George's Hospital. Therefore, there is an existing structured visit from the relevant clinicians from St George's Hospital.

As I said, it would really ... I am not doubting for one second what the patient is relaying to the hon. Lady is what the patient says the doctor told him; what I am telling the hon. Lady is that 1695 I would be very surprised indeed if, having discussed all of these questions with the clinical team, they would not have warned me that the question may have been due to the fact that in one particular quarter there was an absence of the visiting neurology team.

1700 Mr Speaker: I am grateful to the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition for giving way. Question 255.

Q254/2017
GHA locums –
Supplementary questions

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I may, one supplementary on the information that was provided on locums.

1705 Mr Speaker: What question are we dealing with?

Hon. T N Hammond: Sorry, it would be Question 254, on the statistics provided for locums, and it is simply ... and forgive my ignorance, but I do not necessarily understand all the terms used. I understand what nursing locum means, I think. I am not sure what an AHP as opposed to a medical locum is – I wonder if the Minister could clarify that information.

1710 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Could the hon. Gentleman refer me to the year and the column he is referring to, please? Oh, I see, yes.

1715 Hon. T N Hammond: Absolutely – it is in the headers.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, sorry, he is referring to the head 'Allied Health Professional'. That relates to occupational therapy, physiotherapy, radiology, psychology, that sort of thing.

1720 Clerk: Question 255.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I just ask one question?

Clerk: I am sorry.

1725 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, with locums I gather that the total locums are on the right-hand column, is that the case?

Hon. N F Costa: That is correct.

1730 Hon. D A Feetham: So it is 89 in 2011, 56 in 2012, 64 in 2013, 115 in 2014, 99 in 2015 and then it is 151 in 2016?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes.

1735 Hon. D A Feetham: Does he have an explanation for the sharp rise in locums in the course of 2016?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, not one that I have been entirely satisfied with. The fact of the matter is that I would have expected an organisation such as the GHA to have succession 1740 planning in place where the use of locums would not be as necessary. But then again, of course, Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman will know, specialisms require continuous training – consultants, allied health professionals, in order to be able to keep up with their skills need to 1745 undergo continued professional development – and of course then there are issues that arise such as annual leave, maternity leave and usual sickness cover. And of course the reality is that the GHA continues to grow the services which it provides. For example, if for whatever reason, say for example the absence of a particular consultant due to illness or due to maternity or any other reason, and as a result of that there has been an increase in the referral list, the GHA 1750 would always move to bring in locums in order to ensure that that list remains manageable and within the expected timeframes that Gibraltarian patients expect that they will be referred to by the GHA consultant.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he also have an explanation for the sharp rise in locums in gynaecology? For example, in 2014 it jumped from two the previous year to 15. It then increased 1755 to 17 and it is down to 15 again in 2016. And there is also a sharp rise in locums in relation to orthopaedics, and I gather ... presumably that is because the Department is trying to do something about the waiting list in relation to orthopaedics, which we know and which the hon.
Gentleman recognises was not what we all want. And finally, in relation to surgical, which is now 10 in 2016 when it was only one in 2015 – well, two in 2015 – is that because there have been a number of surgeons that have left the department in recent times and that those gaps left in the 1760 service as a consequence are being filled by locums?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will appreciate that, given the information that I have provided to him, which is extremely detailed, I could not anticipate each supplementary that he would ask me. So the hon. Gentleman, if he wants absolute certainty in 1765 the answers that I am going to provide to him, then he should give me notice of those questions.

In respect of the orthopaedics, the hon. Gentleman is right, I can definitely answer that one.
In respect of gynaecology, it relates to 2014, during the course of which my hon. Friend was the Minister so I will allow him to please assist.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
1770 Yes, Mr Speaker, it is also to do with the waiting lists. I found, at the time, that the gynaecology waiting list was totally unacceptable. I cannot remember exactly now, but it was many months and we were in a situation where, because there were three gynaecologists at the time and they had about 10 weeks of leave each, it happened that we were one gynaecologist down for 30 1775 weeks of the year. Therefore, a decision was taken at the time for a period of time that 15 of those weeks would be covered by a locum in order to cut down the waiting list, which was done successfully, but there would have been a spike there and it was precisely to ensure that there was cover for one of the gynaecologists on leave during half of the total time, and that had a tremendous effect in lowering the waiting list in that year.

Hon. D A Feetham: And finally, Mr Speaker, has he done an analysis as to whether the numbers of locums are being influenced at all ... are being driven by vacancies? In other words, there are vacancies within the GHA in relation to doctors and those are being filled by locums, so that ... I do not know ... for example, one job is being done by five locums, or anything like that?

1785
Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker. The hon. Gentleman may recall that very shortly after I was appointed Minister for Health there was a whole gamut of vacancies advertised in respect of all of the medical requirements. It takes, unfortunately, quite a few months to be able to fill those positions. Of course specialisms and consultants that are required for any particular field may 1790 not necessarily be in Gibraltar and therefore we need to advertise in the UK. A process needs to be followed, a board needs to be set up and then there has to be a recommendation etc.

So no, if locums are being recruited, it is only because we are undergoing the recruitment process through the traditional process of advertising vacancies and establishing boards, and of course once these vacancies are filled then the locum cover will no longer be required.

Q255/2017
Dialysis Unit –
Replacement doctor

1795 Clerk: Question 255, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, who will be taking over from the two doctors at the Dialysis Unit whose contracts recently terminated?

1800 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, there was only one doctor at the Dialysis Unit. A doctor has already been contracted to cover until a replacement is appointed.

1805

Hon. D A Feetham: But, Mr Speaker, is it not the case that there was one permanent doctor and there was another temporary doctor who was assisting the principal doctor at the Dialysis Unit?

1810

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the answer provided to Parliament has been drafted by the Medical Director, so I have to assume that he would know exactly the number of doctors in any given service in the GHA.

1815

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is certainly true. I get my information from patients who are actually being treated in the Dialysis Unit and I am assured there were two doctors working there: one who was permanent and the other one who was on a temporary basis – not a temporary basis, but he was almost part time, he was part time – working to assist the principal doctor.

1820

Mr Speaker, why was the contract terminated, if it was terminated by the Government; or is it a case of the contract having been terminated by a fluxion of time?

Hon. N F Costa: The latter, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: And can the Government explain why the contract of this particular doctor was not renewed?

Hon. N F Costa: The doctor who served the Dialysis Unit could not be registered by the General Medical Council.

1830

Hon. D A Feetham: And why is that, Mr Speaker?

Hon. N F Costa: Because he does not satisfy the requirements of the General Medical Council.

1835

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that is self-evident, but –

Hon. N F Costa: Well, why are you asking me? (Laughter)

1840 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, because is it, for example, that we are dealing with a doctor who has a foreign qualification and therefore that places a difficulty in terms of registration under the General Medical Council in the United Kingdom? My understanding is that that is an issue with a number of doctors who have been very successfully treating patients at the hospital and elsewhere within the GHA.

1845 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I do not have the particulars of the reasons why the General Medical Council determined in this particular case that this gentleman was not registrable. My information is that, due to the fact that the General Medical Council would not register the dialysis doctor, it was obviously decided that the post had to be advertised and a usual selection process followed.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how long had this particular doctor been in this particular post? Does he have that information?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, I do not.

1855

Hon. D A Feetham: But he accepts that this particular doctor ... there had been no complaints from patients and there was generally – if he has the information – satisfaction in relation to the way that this particular doctor was performing?

1860

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker – and I say this really not wishing to be unhelpful – the original question of the hon. Gentleman is who will be taking over from the doctors at the Dialysis Unit. If the hon. Gentleman wanted to ask me specific questions on the particulars, then, with respect to him, he should have provided me with notice of those particulars he sought from me. I would have been delighted to have exchanged that information with him across the floor of the House, but unfortunately, given the original question on the Order Paper, I am afraid to tell him that I do not have whether there have been or have not been any complaints against this particular doctor.

1865

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is it a locum that is going to be taking over on a temporary basis in relation to this doctor, or is this post going to be filled on a permanent basis by somebody else? Also, is that person coming over from the United Kingdom? Does he have any links with Gibraltar at all?

1870

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the nephrologist advertisement was on the 17th of this month. There has already been a successful applicant who has accepted the job offer by email on 13th March and who will start on 10th July.

1875

The current contract, the current replacement, is not being carried out by a locum but rather by a doctor on contract – at, I must say, a better rate than the previous doctor that currently provided the services.

1880

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, given the very short timeframes – and he must be mistaken in the way that he has provided the answer ... He said that it was on the 17th of this month that the advert went out. It must have been the previous –

1885

Hon. N F Costa: Sorry, February, yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: February. No, I understand that. But we are talking about very small timeframes here, which does indicate that in fact the Government did not envisage that there 1890 would probably be this particular problem with a doctor who was then serving. But am I right in saying that although the job was advertised, the Government had made moves to perhaps identify a replacement for this particular role? Or is it a situation where the Government advertised, there were applicants, and there had been no previous contact at all with the successful candidate?

1895 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, could he repeat the last part of his supplementary?

1900 Hon. D A Feetham: Despite the fact that there has been an advert going out, was this particular candidate headhunted, so to speak? Was there some contact between the GHA and this particular candidate, where this particular candidate was invited to apply? It does appear to me that we are talking about very small timeframes within which this has happened, and it may well be that what has happened is that the Government had identified somebody with Gibraltar connections, for example – I am not putting words in his mouth, but I am just trying to get to the explanation of this – and therefore there was an advert and the successful candidate really was somebody the Government had already identified, even though the Government may have advertised and said, ‘Well, let’s see who applies.’

1910 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place I think I ought to clarify that, whereas I replied to the hon. Gentleman that the contract had ended because of the fluxion of time, and indeed that is correct because the last working day was on 28th February, the doctor actually decided to leave before the last day due to ill health and I thought that it was important to make that fact clear, given how he has phrased ... No, given how he has phrased ... I just thought it was important to clarify that point for the avoidance of doubt.

1915 The hon. Gentleman should know that the advertising process is conducted by the GHA. The Government – or, as the Hon. Mr Bossano has called us before, the ‘outfit’ – had no person in mind, but it is certainly the case that the GHA, when they do advertise for posts ... the different clinicians do contact persons whom they think would be suitable and interested and who have Gibraltar connections. That is the case.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q256 and 257/2017
Speech and Language Therapy Unit –
Therapist post; location and complement

1920 Clerk: Question 256, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, has the Government now filled the post of speech and language therapist?

1925 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, this question will be answered together with Question 257.

1930 Clerk: Question 257, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, where is the Speech and Language Therapy Unit located and how many people are working engaged within it?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1935

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the GHA does not have any vacancies for the post of speech and language therapist. The hon. Member's mole has got it wrong again.

1940

The Speech and Language Therapy department is not a department with a singular purpose and as such is not limited to solely one unit.

The Speech and Language Therapy department provides valuable input into many settings, including schools. If I assume that the hon. Gentleman is asking me in relation to the main offices they report to on a daily basis, the GHA Speech and Language Therapy department have the following bases.

1945

The Primary Care Speech and Language Therapy department. This is the main base of the Paediatric Therapy department. There are four speech and language therapists.

St Bernard's Hospital. This is the main base of the Adult Therapy team. There is one speech and language therapist.

1950

Bella Vista Dementia Day Centre: through this facility, the GHA has ensured that the care provider offers speech and language therapy support for dementia patients. There is one speech and language therapist.

1955

The Paediatric Speech and Language Service consists of two separate caseloads, mainstream and special needs, with clinical leads heading each area. These services are responsible for children, from neonates to adolescents of 18 years of age, who present with communication, swallowing and feeding disorders, including diagnosed genetic and medical conditions, developmental delays, learning disabilities, hearing impairments, autism and specific speech and/or language difficulties. Service locations for these services include mainstream schools; learning support facilities; special schools and special needs nursery; outpatient clinics at Primary Care, Rainbow Ward and the community.

1960

Both service streams within paediatrics have benefitted from staff recruitment within the timeframe of 2014 and 2015. In March 2014, a senior II speech and language therapist was employed to work alongside the clinical lead within this mainstream service and the following year another senior II therapist was recruited within special needs. To date, the staff complement within paediatrics is four full-time posts.

1965

The benefits from increasing from two speech and language therapists to four is self-evident, as it has allowed for a doubling of speech and language therapist time in both areas and has allowed the therapists to develop their competencies accordingly. Therefore, we have increased both availability and the quality of the services.

1970

The adult service is responsible for clients with swallowing and communication difficulties resulting from stroke, neurological disorders, cancer, dementia and voice disorders. The range of disorders which present can include aphasia, dysarthria, dyspraxia, dysphonia, dysphagia and dysfluency.

1975

Service locations for this service include inpatient and outpatient services within St Bernard's Hospital; ECA facilities, including Mount Alvernia; John Mackintosh Wing; Jewish Home; Calpe and Cochrane wards; and community.

The Adult service is staffed by one full-time post.

1980

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many speech and language therapists did the hon. Gentleman say were being employed by the GHA? How many?

1985

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, there are four at the Primary Care Speech and Language Therapy department and there is one at St Bernard's Hospital. I also mention, Mr Speaker, that the Bella Vista Dementia Day Centre has ensured that the private provider also provides speech and language therapy support for dementia patients and they have one speech and language therapist. So, four plus one, plus one.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is there one of those speech therapists that is actually taking care, at the present moment, of paediatric caseloads?

1990 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman ... As I have explained to him in my answer right now ... I just gave him an entire two paragraphs on the fact that the Paediatric Speech and Language Service has gone from two speech and language therapists to four under my hon. predecessor, Dr John Cortes, and I explained to him all of the services that are provided and that it consists of two separate caseloads, one for mainstream and another for special needs, with clinical leads heading each area.

Hon. D A Feetham: So there, is at the moment, a speech and language therapist that is dealing with paediatric caseloads?

Hon. N F Costa: There are actually four.

Q258-264/2017
GHA posts –
Workers on fixed-term contracts

2000 Clerk: Question 258, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, have the 22 vacant posts occupied by subcontracted workers identified in answer to Question 518/2016 been permanently filled?

2005 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 259 to 264.

2010 Clerk: Question 259, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many workers currently working within Mount Alvernia are on fixed-term contracts?

2015 Clerk: Question 260, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many workers employed directly by the GHA are on fixed-term contracts?

2020 Clerk: Question 261, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many workers employed directly by the Care Agency are on fixed-term contracts?

2025 Clerk: Question 262, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many workers working within the Care Agency and the GHA are on fixed-term contracts with a Government-owned company?

Clerk: Question 263, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2030

Hon. D A Feetham: Of the previous four questions concerning fixed-term contracts within the Care Agency, the GHA and Mount Alvernia, please provide a schedule setting out (a) how many successive fixed-term contracts each worker has been engaged on and (b) the date each were first engaged on the first contract.

2035

Clerk: Question 264, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in what Department within the GHA are the workers employed by the GHA on fixed-term contracts currently working in?

2040

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, it is hard not to press the buzzer when you know the answer to the question! (Laughter)

2045

Mr Speaker, subcontracted workers will be recruited as and when required.

There are three workers currently working within Mount Alvernia on fixed-term contracts.

There are 126 workers employed directly by the GHA on fixed-term contracts. It is pertinent to note that out of the 126 workers 55 are contracts of consultants and doctors who have been on fixed-term contracts, some for over 20 years. Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar is confident that all consultants will enter into new and specifically negotiated contracts during the course of this year.

There are 33 workers employed directly by the Care Agency on fixed-term contracts, eight of which are to commence employment on indefinite contracts as from 1st April 2017. This will reduce the number of workers employed by the Care Agency on fixed-term contracts to 25. Further, the Care Agency has recruited eight qualified social workers from UK agencies whose contracts will not be renewed after three years.

2055

There are no workers working within the GHA and the Care Agency on fixed-term contracts with a Government-owned company.

In relation to Questions 263 and 264, I now hand over schedules with the information requested, to the hon. Gentleman.

2065 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, now I understand, having heard the answer to these questions, why the hon. Gentleman came to this House with his cannons firmly locked and loaded, because he was obviously concerned about the answers that he had to give in relation to these questions.

2070 In relation to Question 259 – can the Government state how many workers currently working... sorry, I beg your pardon, Question 258: have the 22 posts occupied by subcontracted workers identified in answer to Question 518/2016 been permanently filled – the answer the hon. Gentleman gave me was ‘that post will be filled as and when necessary’. Unless I have misheard him, that was the answer that he gave me. But of course that is an extremely evasive answer, does the Hon. Minister not agree, because in answer to Question 518/2016 he said there were 22 vacant posts within the Care Agency at the time, and then when I asked him the question about several ... I think it was last month or the month before – were there any 2075 vacancies, or how many vacancies there were within the GHA and the Care Agency, the hon. Gentleman said to me there were no vacancies.

Hon. N F Costa: That is right.

2080 Hon. D A Feetham: No vacancies. The answer in 2016, towards the end of 2016, is there are 22 vacancies in the Care Agency.

Hon. N F Costa: Of care workers.

2085 Hon. D A Feetham: Of care workers only, indeed. At the beginning of this year he tells me there are no vacancies in the Care Agency, and now when I ask him, ‘Of course, well, look, in the light of that answer that you have given me, that there are no vacancies in the Care Agency, which you gave me a couple of months ago, I ask how many of the posts of these 22 which the Government told me existed barely a few months before?’ he now says posts will be filled as and 2090 when.

Does he not agree with me that is an unsatisfactory answer that he has provided and it is an extremely evasive answer, and the fact is the Government does not want to come clean to this House providing statistics on what the true level of vacancies are within the Care Agency and the 2095 GHA?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I do not understand how the hon. Gentleman can construe my answers as anything other than extremely specific.

2100 He tells me that I have come to this House with my cannons loaded as a result of the answers that I am going to give to him in answer to this question. The hon. Gentleman could not be more wrong. The reason why I come with my cannons loaded is because of the sheer nonsense that I have to reply to in press releases as a result of the incredibly incorrect information he is being fed with by a disgruntled mole. Mr Speaker, I should pay this mole personally, from my own pocket, so that he keeps feeding the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition such bloody nonsense, to be honest!

2105 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman really has the hard face of cement. The Hon. Leader of the Opposition, when he sat here as Minister for Justice, used to subscribe to the view that there were no vacancies in authorities and agencies. That view was presented by the best Gibraltarian of all time, Sir Peter Caruana, and when he was the Minister for Justice he never disputed that theory postulated by the greatest Gibraltarian of all time. Therefore, if it was good for the goose 2110 it is good for the gander, and if Sir Peter Caruana used to say that there were no such things as vacancies in companies, agencies and authorities and I stand up to say the same thing, and he did not utter a word of disapproval from these benches, then surely he has to agree with me that the answer I am giving him has to be specific, it has to be precise. It cannot be evasive, because I am emulating the greatest Gibraltarian of all time. So, unless he is saying that the 2115 greatest Gibraltarian of all time uttered falsehoods in this place, he has to agree with me that my answer is correct.

And in any case, Mr Speaker, does he not remember the most eloquent and erudite answer given to the Hon. Mr Llamas by my colleague, the Hon. Samantha Sacramento, when she explained the rudimentaries of these things to him? She said:

Mr Speaker, I appreciate that the hon. Member is new to this and I will of course be as helpful as I possibly can. Unlike the complement in the Civil Service, there is no such thing as a complement in agencies and that is the position that was taken by the GSD when they were in Government.

2120 So no, Mr Speaker, I did not come here worried or with my cannons loaded, to use his colourful metaphors, as a result of these answers. I am proud of the answers that I am giving and I am more proud of the work that I am conducting with Unite the Union that has resulted in an industrial relations review that has, for the first time since the Care Agency was set up by the previous administration, given them – consistently with their considerations of what are 2125 appropriate terms and conditions for them, concluded just the other day – a very satisfactory industrial relations review that actually values, truly values, the work that is conducted by care workers.

They did not do that, Mr Speaker. They did not conduct that industrial relations review. They were the ones who brought in fixed-term contracts and we, unlike them, who are consistent and would be embarrassed to present a political hypocritical discourse in this House and then 2130 outside ... When they stood up in this House and spoke about fixed-term contracts and they said, 'We will introduce fixed-term contracts because whilst we bring fixed-term contract workers from across the way, we will identify local, suitable people, whether in the UK or currently being trained in Gibraltar, to fill those posts.' And of course Minister Bossano, always being entirely 2135 consistent and true to his political beliefs, stood up and said:

Well, if the reason why you are bringing fixed-term contract workers from across the way is because you have identified suitable people to be trained or educated in the UK to fill those posts, then we will support the position.

And given that when the greatest Gibraltarian of all time expanded that philosophy he agreed and banged the table, he should agree and bang the table for my answers. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I think I should warn the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition that they are now getting into debating territory and if they continue in this vein I will move on to the next question. So no debate, please.
2140

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

2145 Mr Speaker: I do not have to tell them the object of Question Time: seek information, urge the Government to adopt a policy or a line of action, but no speeches. We have had enough speeches today.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

2150 I am tempted to ask the hon. Gentleman by way of supplementary is he the GSD in disguise, because quite frankly he is using us to justify what are, quite frankly, in my respectful view, answers that are not straight answers. They are not straight answers. I will explain that and ask him whether he will review those answers in the light of what I am going to tell him now.

I do not agree with the way that he has characterised it, but whether our policy was that technically there were never any vacancies in the GHA or the Care Agency because there is a distinction to be drawn between that and the Civil Service ... in September when I asked the 2155 question about vacancies I was told that there were about 40-something vacancies within the

GHA. Okay? It is not the hon. Gentleman who answered the question; it was a written answer that was provided. That was the answer provided to me in September.

2160 Separately, my hon. Friend Mr Llamas asked on 29th September what vacancies there were within the Care Agency specific to care workers ... or the answer came back specific to care workers, and the answer was vacant posts pending recruitment – we all know the English language, Mr Speaker – the answer, vacant posts, recruitment, 22.

2165 And now the hon. Gentleman seeks to evade giving me an answer in this House by saying, 'Well, because the policy of the greatest Gibraltarian of all time ...' and everybody there on the other side laughing, including the Father of the House, who had innumerable battles with the greatest Gibraltarian ... or the greatest Gibraltarian of our time; that is what I said.

2170 Mr Speaker, the Government has got to make up its mind. Does he not recognise that there is a huge, monumental inconsistency in the way that the Government has been answering these questions across the floor of the House? And indeed it is only when I raised this issue publicly in my press releases, that so seem to vex the hon. Gentleman, that the Government's position then changed and all of a sudden they decide, 'Well, we're not going to provide figures for vacancies.' Does he not recognise that there is that inconsistency? For the sake of our friendship?

2175 Mr Speaker: A short answer – does the Hon. Minister recognise, or doesn't he – and then we can move on to the next question.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, my answers in this House have always been entirely consistent with the policies of the Government.

2180 Mr Speaker: Any other supplementaries on these number of questions that have been grouped together?

Hon. D A Feetham: None that I can think of Mr Speaker.

2185 Mr Speaker: Okay. Shall we move on to the next one?

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. I will analyse them at home.

2190 Mr Speaker: Okay, fine.

Q265 and 266/2017
Intensive Care Unit employees –
Indefinite permanent and fixed-term contracts; recruitment consultants

Clerk: Question 265, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2195 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many staff working within the Intensive Care Unit are currently employed directly by the GHA (a) on indefinite permanent contracts and (b) on fixed-term contracts?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

2200 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 266.

Clerk: Question 266, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many staff working within the Intensive Care Unit are currently employed directly by the GHA via the services of recruitment consultants?

2205

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, there are 20 nurses on indefinite contracts.

There are 10 less nurses on fixed-term contracts, two of whom will have their contracts varied to indefinite and the two nurses in question have already been informed.

2215

Mr Speaker, temperatures may rise even further. I am astonished that the hon. Gentleman should not have withdrawn this question, given that he decided, contrary to parliamentary convention, to issue a press release having filed this question in this House. (A Member: Hear, hear.) The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition should by now surely know the conventions and the practices of this place. In any case, I am delighted to remind the House that the number of nurses under this Government has increased from 387 in 2010 to 473 last year – in other words, a staggering increase of 19%.

2220

The numbers show an unprecedented level of investment in our clinical professional staff. Moreover, the fact that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition issued a press release in circumstances where he had already filed a question in this House demonstrates that the Opposition is not at all interested in learning the answers to the question that they pose and are instead blatantly interested in cheap political theatrics and pathetic headline grabbing based on the mistaken information provided to them by this – I have to say wonderful – disgruntled mole. (Laughter) This in itself would be serious enough and is made more so by the fact that when the Opposition jump the gun in relation to our Health Services it only serves to worry the public and to denigrate the excellent clinical professionals at the GHA.

2225

Further still, Mr Speaker, I make no apologies for the Government's policy to identify existing nursing staff to train in the various specialisms. As the House may be aware, the GHA is currently in the process of providing presentations to Westside and Bayside students highlighting the many different career pathways. The Government will continue to identify members of our community currently studying in the UK or already working, to train them in order to provide high-quality empathic and compassionate medical care.

2230

Mr Speaker, whilst the role of the Opposition is to challenge the Government, it is not to cause undue and totally unwarranted, and more than likely malicious, concern by repeating in their press statements what is plainly and simply unsubstantiated gossip by their disaffected, but worth his weight in gold, disaffected informer. If the hon. Gentleman really wanted to know the answer to the question that he posed, he would have waited for my answer in Parliament.

2235

I used to shadow the Health portfolio when I was in Opposition and I used to write to the then Minister for Health before issuing press releases, and I even used to counsel complainants not to issue press releases and to give the then Minister the opportunity to consider their cases and reply. The stark difference between them and us is that whilst I am still waiting for the GSD's Minister for Health to answer any one of my emails or phone calls in relation to individual complaints – and I had better sit down in my wait – the Opposition will have to admit that I answer every email, every phone call, every text, every WhatsApp, and meet them with their constituents if they so request. We therefore mark a profound difference, in that actually we also then proceed to resolve their constituents' issues.

2240

Even further still, the hon. Gentleman would do well to learn from the Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon, who has the decency to write to me first to enquire if there is any truth in any complaint made to her by any person. This must surely be because the hon. Lady fully understands that casting doubt on the quality of care in an intensive care unit can only create unnecessary panic among our community, which is something that she clearly does not want to generate.

For his part, the Hon. Mr Feetham has tried panic for votes over the Savings Bank. That did not work and Mr Bossano is taking more deposits than ever in the bank. He tried panic for votes

2255 over the natural gas facility. That did not work either, and we got more votes than ever in the last General Election. They tried panic over public finances for votes and that did not work either: Gibraltar is better off than ever under the Government. And now Mr Feetham is trying to create panic over our Health and ICU services, when we are investing more than ever in that service.

2260 Mr Speaker, in relation to answer to Question 266, there are none. (Banging on desks)

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well answered.

2265 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, there I was, thinking that the Drama Festival had ended some months ago! (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Laughter and banging on desks)

At least nobody on this side of the House has participated in any Spanish programmes calling into question the services offered within the Care Agency here in Gibraltar. I cannot say the same about him, I have to say.

2270 Mr Speaker, I am very grateful for the answer and I am very grateful, in fact, for the press release that he provided that also shed some light in relation to this. But I want to focus on the decision, if there has been a decision. In fact, I will ask the first question: has there actually been a decision by the Government not to renew the contracts of four fixed-term contract nurses within the Intensive Care Unit because the Government has made a decision to basically train four local people, which we commend, four locals, but in substitution for four nurses whose 2275 contracts are coming up for renewal once they expire?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman needs the services of the memory clinic: the Drama Festival did not finish last month, it finished on Saturday. And no, Mr Speaker.

2280 Hon. D A Feetham: So can the Government then therefore guarantee and assure this House that the current complement of nurses there within the Intensive Care Unit, be it – well, those that are there on fixed-term contracts – that those are going to be maintained and that there is going to be no attempt to replace experienced nurses and the number of experienced nurses, a dilution of that, in favour of trainee nurses, however small that they may be?

2285 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has accused me of rattling off a press release, but clearly he did not read my reply. I told him in the reply to his press statement that the hard facts are strikingly clear. In May of 2011, when they were in Government, the CCU had 28 registered nurses; we have 30 registered nurses, an increase of two. When they were in 2290 Government, those 28 registered nurses comprised of two charge nurses; we have three charge nurses. And then 24 staff nurses; we have 27 staff nurses. So there has been no dilution, it has been quite the opposite: there has been an increase in the quality of the specialisms and the complement being provided in CCU, which is why I am telling him that he really ought to stop listening to this disgruntled mole. He ought to start thinking that maybe, just maybe, I am 2295 feeding him the information because every time he shouts on the back of that information he gets it horribly wrong.

2300 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he seems to be obsessed by the mole, I have to say. And how does he know that it is just one mole? He keeps on going on about 'the mole, the mole, the mole'. It could be several moles for all that the hon. Gentleman knows. (Interjection) Well, no, they are all actually getting it right – that the answers that the hon. Gentleman chooses to provide me are half the truth and half not the truth. Well, that is another matter.

2305 Mr Speaker, it is obvious – because people have come to me, employees have come to me; they have come directly to me about this – that there is concern within the Intensive Care Unit, where there are a number of nurses ... The majority of them are actually foreign nurses, because this is a very specialised area. It requires training abroad and the specialism does not exist here.

2310 People who have fixed-term contracts, who know that, for example, if they are employed under successive fixed-term contracts for more than four years they will acquire rights, and the intimation to them ... It has been on an informal basis, but the intimation to them has been that the Government or the GHA is not going to renew those contracts because they do not want people within the Intensive Care Unit acquiring permanent rights, and that therefore the Government is planning either to replace with a number of trainees or with contract staff – please listen to the question; you can deny it afterwards (Interjection by Hon. N F Costa) – contract staff, either from Medoc or other recruitment consultants.

2315 Can he confirm and assure the House that that is not the intention of the Government – and of course he knows that when he gives me that answer I am going to be looking at this with a hawkish gaze in the future.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, what a tangled web we weave when first we learn to deceive. 2320 And when he talks about half truths, surely he was referring to the witches and Lady Macbeth and he could have at least have quoted that paragraph for me.

In any case, I have just told him again that the complement of the CCU has gone up by two, that the number of qualified nurses has gone up from 24 registered nurses to 27. Therefore, it logically follows numerically, mathematically, logically, inevitably, inexorably, that there has 2325 been an increase in the quality and the specialism and the skills in care. Can he not see that if there were 28 in his time and there are two in our time that is two more? Can he not see that if there were 24 registered nurses and three enrolled nurses but with us there are 27 registered nurses, the skills have gone up? Can he not see that? Can he not add numbers? Can he not follow simple logic? The complement has gone up, the skills mix has gone up. It is, of course, not 2330 possible ever to replace a registered nurse with a trainee. Whoever is telling him that really has not got a clue what she is talking about. How could you possibly replace a CCU trained nurse with an assistant? Does he think I am mad? Does he think that I am so nationalistic that I would choose a Gibraltar nursing assistant over a Spanish registered nurse? Does he honestly think that? Does he think that I would put Gibraltar's patient safety at risk by way of hollow 2335 nationalism? Of course not.

When one goes into hospital, when one is admitted, one does not care who is in government and who is in opposition; one only cares about the quality of the service that one receives. One wants the best consultants, the best nurses and the best care. I have demonstrated to him – and he can check it with hawkish glare or with bunny eyesight (Laughter) – I have demonstrated to 2340 him, numerically, that under us specialisms are up, complements are up, skills are up, investment is up, 19% of nurses are up, and if he cannot do the mathematics, Mr Speaker, he should go back to school.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman does not really need to get angry – 2345

Hon. N F Costa: I'm not angry.

Hon. D A Feetham: – in the answer.

2350 Hon. N F Costa: I have He enjoyed it thoroughly.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he doesn't, he doesn't. Also, Mr Speaker, his unhealthy obsession with the mole should end. He has just described the mole as 'she'. I do not know how he knows it is a she; it may well be a he or a number of moles, as I have told him in the past. 2355

But he has not answered the second part of the question. There were two parts to the question. I am satisfied with the first, I have to tell him, and I will continue to monitor Government policy. But the other question that I asked, the second part of the question, was: does the Government intend to essentially not allow those nurses within the ICU to serve out 2360 those four years in successive fixed-term contracts, thus not allowing them to acquire permanent rights, and replace those people with subcontracted labour from Medoc or other recruitment consultants? I am asking about Government policy.

2365 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman, in his previous supplementary, said that there was some informal intimation about Government policy: there is no informal intimation of anything. The Government's policy, continuing their policy, is that we will bring fixed-term workers, with the skills necessary for any particular ward, for a fixed-term period. Fixed-term contracts: within the name lies the answer. They are brought in to fill in a gap in a skill that is required by the GHA, and because it is a fixed-term contract the person is told that he or she will be serving at the GHA for a fixed period of time – and for which we are eminently and forever grateful for the care they provide our community, but in order to give effect to the GSD's wonderful policy of bringing in fixed-term workers with a particular skills set for a period of time until local suitable people have been fully trained with the right experience, to be introduced in any of these areas. There is no intimation and it is not informal – it is the policy of the Government. I have said it here, I have said it in a press release, and I am repeating it to him again.

2375 So, Mr Speaker, to answer his supplementary, the fixed-term worker will be told from the outset that the contract will not run beyond a certain period of time. Therefore the person has the choice and the right to say, 'I don't want to be here for two years, I don't want to be here for a year, I don't want to be here for three years – I want to be made indefinite from the get-go.' 2380 The GHA would reply, 'I am sorry, that is not the policy of the Government.' Therefore, the person has a right to either choose to stay or choose to go, and whilst they are here they will be treated with the rights and privileges of every other GHA employee and welcomed to the family.

2385 But to follow that policy, whilst those fixed-term contract workers are providing the services we will be identifying suitable local people to be trained in the School of Health Studies – which is why we have it, which is why we allocate money for it every year – and we will also identify those Gibraltarians out in the world or being trained in the UK for when they come back they have a job, a satisfying career at home for which he and I, as taxpayers, have paid for their education.

2390 So we make absolutely no apologies whatever, Mr Speaker, to scream from the rooftops and say calmly in this Parliament that it is the fixed policy of this Government to ensure that we have fixed-term workers to ensure quality and safe care, and then those persons will be thanked and then the contract not renewed.

2395 Hon. D A Feetham: I am afraid, Mr Speaker, that is an unsatisfactory answer, and again he knows, he knows that he is evading the point because the reality is there are substantial numbers of nurses within the ICU who are on fixed-term contracts, who are on the second or their third fixed-term contracts, and he must know as well that those same people have been informally told, 'You're not going to get another contract, not because we are unhappy with the service you are providing but because we don't want you to acquire permanent rights.' (Hon. N 2400 F Costa: No.) Yes, Mr Speaker, and I am asking him again: is that or is that not Government policy?

2405 Mr Speaker: I will allow the Minister to answer that question and then we are moving on to the next question.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman –

Mr Speaker: We are just having repetition and debate.

2410 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, I agree, and the hon. Gentleman should have some chai tea and relax; he should not get angry. (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, there is no intimation or informality. I have told him that it is the expressly, publicly stipulated ... of this Government, for which we make no apologies. If the result of that policy is what he says, he can colour it in whatever way he likes.

2415

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q267/2017

Sponsored patients –

Policy re check-up and review appointments

Clerk: Question 267, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2420 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, has there been a change in policy in relation to the ongoing check-ups and review appointments for sponsored patients?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

2425 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, there has been no change in policy.

2430 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the reason why I am asking this is because there have been individuals, patients, that have come to me, who would have in the past have had reviews in the United Kingdom, for example, which would have been their preference, but are now being told that that is no longer possible and the reviews have got to be here when they would feel more comfortable with having the reviews in the United Kingdom.

2435 Is the hon. Gentleman then saying, really, that the Government has not changed its approach from the past in relation to this and that there must be some explanation – some medical explanation, for example – as to why the review is happening here in Gibraltar? And in that case, Mr Speaker, can I refer those individuals directly to his Department so that the Department provides an explanation to them? Because obviously people who are being treated – for example, being reviewed in respect of cancers and things of the like – who are being told, ‘Well, you have got to do your review here in Gibraltar’ obviously are going to feel panicky, as is natural, and in circumstances where there might be a natural and quite acceptable explanation people jump to conclusions.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, there has been no change in policy; it may well be that the policy is now being more actively enforced. I am surmising as to why some persons who may have before gone for reviews to the UK are not being sent to reviews anymore.

2445 The hon. Gentleman should understand that these determinations are not made because of clients’ preference. In other words, he said to me that ‘some patients would prefer’. Well, clinical decisions are not made on patients’ preference. Clinical decisions are made on what the clinician determines to be the most medically indicated service or the most medically indicated intervention. For a person to be referred to the UK or to Spain there has to be a consultant who refers that person to the UK.

2455 In the past what has happened as well is that UK hospitals, without appreciating that the person is Gibraltarian and not from the UK, may have sent the review date to the patient directly rather than to the Sponsored Patients department. Since I have become the Minister for Health I have more fully resourced within existing resources the Sponsored Patients department, and therefore, as a result of those additional human resources, they have been able to more actively manage to ensure that where services are being able to be provided locally and the clinician determines that it should be provided locally, they ought to be provided locally. I am sure that the hon. Gentleman would agree that that is a very good thing, because it saves the expenses of sponsored patients where they do not have to be spent.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, and it does seem to me that it does indicate that there has been a difference of approach. It is a question of semantics whether one calls it a policy or an approach.

2465 What the hon. Gentleman is telling me is: I came in as a Government Minister, I looked at it, I resourced the sponsored patients department here in Gibraltar; as a consequence of that, we were able to review more people here in Gibraltar, and therefore, rather than have a situation where we are spending more money in getting them reviewed in the United Kingdom, we are doing it in Gibraltar.'

2470 It does provide an explanation, but it does seem to me to indicate that that is a change of approach. Whether one calls it a change of policy or otherwise, it is a change of approach. It is a conscious decision by the Government to have more people reviewed here – (Interjection)

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is intent today on either misunderstanding me or repeating me and then characterising my remarks in a way that I have not uttered them.

2475 I have said that, in the past, UK hospitals may have, accidentally and without meaning to, tried to arrange an appointment directly with a Gibraltar patient. When a sponsored patient is referred by a consultant to the hospital in the UK with which the GHA has a service level agreement, the consultant's letter is necessary for the initial referral, investigation or procedure. Then the letter makes it clear that any subsequent reviews need to be done through Sponsored 2480 Patients. In the past, if a Gibraltar patient may have received that reminder, rather than going through Sponsored Patients they may have decided to go ahead and keep the appointment. And then, of course, because the UK hospital would have emailed the patient in Gibraltar directly, the GHA would naturally – because we do tend to be as fair and as reasonable as humanly possible – that they would have paid for the trip – for the transport, for the flights and for the 2485 escorts. But because there is now a more active management of the existing policy, I can assure him that the policy remains the same as it was when my hon. predecessor, Dr John Cortes, was the Minister, but as a result of resourcing the Sponsored Patients department more from within the existing human resource capital of the GHA, they are just making sure that all sponsored patients' referrals are being done properly in accordance with the policy.

2490 As I have just explained to him, money, thankfully – and, please God, may it continue forever – money does not factor into determinations by clinicians. In other words, if a clinician determines that a person in Gibraltar would be best served by some treatment which has been clinically tested and is proven to cure cancer, and it costs whatever, the clinician will make that determination and the GHA will actually pay for it. It is an important point to make, Mr Speaker, 2495 because in the NHS there are some cancer treatments that the NHS does not fund because of the cost – they consider it prohibitive – and because they may only extend the life of the person between four to six months. We, the GHA, on the other hand, if a clinician says, 'This treatment is available, it has been clinically tested, it is successful; it is going to cost you an arm and a leg but it will extend that person's life for a few months,' we will pay for it.

2500 So, Mr Speaker, given the answer that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has made, I do not want anyone leaving this Chamber thinking for a moment that any choice is made depending on how much it costs. It is not, never has been and, please God, never will be.

2505 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am glad about that, but of course if it has all been clinician led throughout it is difficult to envisage why there has been this tightening up of the policy. But in relation to the tightening up ... That is what he is telling me: there is a tightening up of the policy. That is – 2510 Hon. N F Costa: Enforcement of the policy.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, okay, tightening up the enforcement of the policy. My point is that if it were always clinician led, there would not have been a need to tighten up the policy – because it is clinician led.

2515 Mr Speaker, does he have an idea of how much this is going to save if that is being done –

Mr Speaker: No, that does not arise. Out of order. It does not arise at all from the question.

2520 Hon. D A Feetham: No, it arises from the answer that he has given me. He has said that effectively what the Government wants to do is ... that there is a wastage financially and therefore there is a tightening up of the policy so that it is dealt with here in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker: He has just said that savings do not come into it, (Interjections) that the Government (Interjections) ... [Inaudible] on treatment which is recommended by the clinicians, and you are asking ... [Inaudible] It does not arise, I am sorry.

2525 Next question.

2530 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, how can you tighten a policy if it has always been clinician led? That is the question. If it has always been clinician led, how can you tighten up a policy, unless what he is really saying is that all he has done is ensured that those hospitals in the United Kingdom that used to send, according to him, these letters, no longer send these letters?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman really does need to just focus and listen to the very full answers that I give him, because I have explained what he is asking me in supplementary information, so I am not going to repeat it.

2535 The record shows that the policy has always been that referrals to the UK for investigations, for opinions and for interventions, have always been determined by a clinician. And because there is now active management, or rather more active management of sponsored patients, where the services can be provided locally and the clinician determines that the appropriate level of service can be done locally, it is done locally according to that clinical determination.

2540 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman really is trying to be all things to all men. If I had stood here to say that there was a free for all in sponsored patients, he would be wagging his finger at me and telling me that I need to get control of the financial arrangements of the GHA, which no doubt will be his line at the Budget, because every time he talks about the GHA he says, 'Oh, it costs £7 million a year and we have got to get the most value for money for the taxpayer.'

2545 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Minister is now debating. Please stick to the question in hand.

Hon D A Feetham: it is financially led.

2550 Hon N F Costa: No.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q268 and 269/2017
Mount Alvernia nurses –

Direct employment; employment through recruitment agency

Clerk: Question 268, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2555 Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much for answering my non-supplementary question.

How many nurses were employed directly by the Care Agency at Mount Alvernia as at 31st December 2012, 2013, 2014 and 2015?

2560 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Q271 and 272/2017
Gibraltar Health Authority –
Vacant posts

2585 Clerk: Question 271, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Please refer to Written Answer 51/2016. Which one of the vacant posts under the schedule headed 'Agencies, Authorities & Government Owned Companies (Gibraltar Health Authority)' related to the Gibraltar Health Authority? Note, the same schedule highlighting the relevant entries would suffice.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 272.

Clerk: Question 272, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Please refer to Written Answer 51/2016. In relation to the heading 'Agencies, Authorities & Government Owned Companies (Gibraltar Health Authority)' in the schedule provided in answer to the question, please state (a) which agency, authority or Government-owned company each vacancy relates to (b) whether such vacancy has now been filled (c) whether it has been filled permanently or on a temporary basis (d) whether the vacancy has been filled by someone employed by those entities directly or through the placement of a worker via a recruitment agency (e) if employed directly by those entities, the length of the contract of service.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, as previously mentioned in answer to Questions 149 and 150 of this year, all posts within the Gibraltar Health Authority are covered, and as such there are no vacancies. What was provided in answer to Written Question 51/2016 was a snapshot of the vacant posts at that particular point and not necessarily vacancies going forward.

I can inform the hon. Gentleman opposite that all posts are being actively evaluated. Where possible, the workload has either been redirected within the existing workforce or the post has been filled.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, we have gone through this in the past in relation to a previous question, so I am going to limit my supplementaries.

Again I am not happy with the answer, Mr Speaker. In October 2016, which this question relates to – that is the month; Question 51/2016 – the Government at the time told me that there were ... I think it was about 45 – (Hon. L F Llamas: Seventy nine and a half.) Seventy nine and a half, I am told by my hon. Friend Mr Llamas. In fact, I had underestimated it from memory. So, if it is 79½ vacancies in 'Agencies, Authorities and Government Owned Companies (Gibraltar Health Authority)' and I have asked how many of those related to the Gibraltar Health Authority, the Hon. the Minister should be in a position to tell me, bearing in mind that the Government has answered, in October of last year, that there are 79½ vacancies in this area, including the Gibraltar Health Authority – I actually suspect they are all, or most of them, in the Gibraltar Health Authority – how many of them related to the Gibraltar Health Authority? Is he not at least prepared to provide me with that answer?

2635 My second supplementary, Mr Speaker, to move it on, is he said some of them have been moved, some of them have been filled – is he not prepared to tell me how many of those 79½ that related to the GHA have actually been filled and how many have been 'moved on', as he put it in his answer?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, we have just had the same debate not 15 minutes ago and I have already explained to the hon. Gentleman at least four or five times that the GHA does not have a fixed complement and that therefore vacancies do not exist.

2640 When the clinical teams, whether the Medical Director, the Director of Nursing, the Director of the Allied Health Professionals or the manager of the hospital ... when I am advised that they require additional people, a study is carried out and if the case is made out then posts are advertised. I have explained that to him already.

2645 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it really is completely unsatisfactory. (Hon. N F Costa: Why?) No, he can moan all he likes, but I get an answer in October when I ask how many vacancies there are within agencies, authorities and Government-owned companies, and I get the answer: Agencies, Authorities and Government Owned Companies (Gibraltar Health Authority), 79½. Now is he saying that the previous answer that the Government provided, 79½, was an incorrect answer? Or has there been a change in policy in the way that the Government answers questions before this House? Because clearly everybody can see there is an inconsistency.

2650 I am just referring to an answer that has been provided to me. He can say to me, 'Look, Mr Feetham, out of that 79.5% none related to the GHA and there was a mistake in the previous answer provided by the Government when it said this includes the GHA.' I do not think it is correct, but at least it is a sensible answer, I could understand it; but what I do not understand is the Government answering 79.5 vacancies including the GHA in October of 2016, and now he tells me there are no vacancies and there has never been any vacancy in the GHA. I am sorry, but what it indicates to me is a Government intent on playing games, and because we have focused on the number of vacancies and because they do not want to disclose to people who may be disgruntled by the number of vacancies, they now decide to change their policy to say there have never been any vacancies in the GHA.

2655 I am just referring to an answer that has been provided to me. He can say to me, 'Look, Mr Feetham, out of that 79.5% none related to the GHA and there was a mistake in the previous answer provided by the Government when it said this includes the GHA.' I do not think it is correct, but at least it is a sensible answer, I could understand it; but what I do not understand is the Government answering 79.5 vacancies including the GHA in October of 2016, and now he tells me there are no vacancies and there has never been any vacancy in the GHA. 2660 He knows I have got a lot of time for him, but he is really now stretching everybody's patience to the limit with the fine distinctions that he seeks to draw and the evasiveness in the answer.

2665 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the same way that the hon. Gentleman did not understand what a short-term contract was between a fixed-term contract, and is a QC telling me whether we have any short-term contracts and there are in fact-fixed term contracts, whether he says he has got time for me ... And he definitely has time for me; he spent seven minutes asking me I do not know how many questions. It is meant to be a supplementary question, one supplementary question at a time. I have written down seven supplementary questions in seven minutes. I wish he had a little less time for me in Parliament, Mr Speaker.

2670 I do not know how else to tell him. My answers in this House have always been consistent. He quotes to me one answer given by this Government and I have quoted to him the answer already given by the Hon. Minister Sacramento that there are no fixed complements in authorities, agencies and Government-owned companies and that recruitment is taking place according to the demands of the service.

2675 He has a very peculiar notion of how he defines reasonableness. He is not here to tell me how I should answer to satisfy him, and he is not here to tell me how he thinks I will satisfy and assuage the concerns of what he says are the disaffected members.

2680 Mr Speaker, I see a lot of people in my office. I meet with the clinical nurse managers, I meet with the directors, I meet directly [inaudible] In fact, I am told off regularly for taking complaints directly from members of staff. I am told off regularly for taking complaints from people directly 2685 who have concerns with the Health Service. I have a very good idea of what is going on in the GHA, an excellent idea of what is going on within the GHA because I am there every day and I know what is going on. I can assure him that if the GHA required more people in any service we would hire them in the same way that we increased nurses by 19%, in the same way that in November we increased the number of consultants we are trying to recruit, in the same way that we went from two speech and language therapists to four, plus one in ERS and plus one at 2690 the Bella Vista Day Centre.

Mr Speaker, does he not see that, under this Government, investment in the GHA has really grown? Of course, not being at all conscious or being blithely unaware, consciously unaware of the hypocrisy of his political discourse, he will today say here why aren't I filling the supposed vacancies, but then in the next question or in the next breath or in the next press statement will 2695 accuse us of spending too much money in the GHA. The person who cannot have it either way is him. Either we are spending too much money and we should put on the hand brake and stop recruiting people, or we should fill what he says are those vacancies. He cannot have it either way, Mr Speaker.

I have been entirely consistent. The policies of the Government have been expressly put 2700 forward by me. There are no informal intimations of anything: I carry out my business openly and notoriously. My policies are set out in writing and if there is any issue with anyone they need to see me. I dare say that I have received complaints from persons about their contracts not being terminated and I have told them this: I am following the policies of the GSD.

2705 Mr Speaker: I am allowing one other supplementary and then we are moving on to the next question.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am very grateful for Mr Speaker's patience, but unfortunately this is 2710 about the answers that have been provided to this House. This is about the fact that the Government has provided an answer in October of last year saying that there are 79.5 vacancies in Government agencies and authorities, including the GHA, and the hon. Gentleman cannot say to me which ones of those 79.5 related to the GHA or did not relate to the GHA.

In answer, he has also said to me that the Hon. Minister Sacramento, in relation to the Care Agency, provided an answer, and yet he has not been able to explain to me why, in an answer in 2715 September 2016, Minister Sacramento said 'vacant posts pending recruitment, 22'. Not 'there are no vacancies because the policy, because we simply recruit people as and when'; she said 'vacant posts pending recruitment, 22'. And then, in a bulletin issued by Unite to its members, it says:

Vacancies, GHA – all existing vacancies are being brought to the Minister's attention as a matter of urgency and will be dealt with ASAP.

2720 Unite the Union. Mr Speaker, I suppose that what he will say to me, and I am asking is, all this is wrong and the position that the Hon. Minister is now taking is the correct one.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, if he knows the answers to his own questions he should not be 2725 asking them, but maybe the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition thinks that if he repeats the same thing again and again he may somehow convert me to his position. Mr Speaker, that is never going to happen.

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition refers to a bulletin of Unite that was dated, if I recall, sometime in –

2730 Hon. D A Feetham: 17th January this year.

Hon. N F Costa: – January of this year. But he then will have recalled, surely – because time moves on, it is not static – that that same entity which he has quoted here today and which he has quoted in a press release and which he has repeated again and again, has also issued a statement jointly with the Government, and they have said that they have drawn a line in the sand in respect of those affected members which they thought ought to be converted from fixed-term contracts to indefinite contracts. So yes, Mr Speaker, I am satisfied with the position, I am satisfied with my answers. That same entity which he quotes in respect of the bulletin has also already come out publicly with us to say that they are now satisfied that they can draw a line in the sand, that they are happy with the work that the Government has conducted in respect of their previously affected members.

Q273 and 274/2017
Care Agency and GHA –
Payments and receipts

Clerk: Question 273, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can Government state what have been the payments made by the Care Agency, and separately the GHA, for this financial year to 30th September 2016 and 31st January 2017, with a breakdown for personal emoluments, industrial wages, other personnel and employer contributions, and other recurrent expenditure?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 274.

Clerk: Question 274, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what have been the receipts of the Care Agency, and separately the GHA, for this financial year to 30th September 2016 and 31st January 2017?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in accordance with the practice of providing tentative figures at the mid-point of the financial year – that is for 30th September – limited to the summary of heads of expenditure, the payments for the GHA and the Care Agency were as follows. September 2016: GHA, £57,087,460; Care Agency, £7,283,682.

In respect of the answer to Question 274, at September 2016: GHA, £10,815,583; and the Care Agency £2,952.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, again, unfortunately, this falls short of the answer that I was seeking from the hon. Gentleman.

I should explain to this House, Mr Speaker, that this is a question that is verbatim, word for word, except for the fact that I perhaps went a little bit too far in asking for the information up to 31st January 2017. But if you omit 31st January 2017 and just restrict yourself to 30th September 2016, which is six months after the end of the last financial year, it is a question, word for word, both of them, that the Hon. the Father of the House used to ask when he was on 2780 this side of the House, and indeed the Hon. the Minister for Health and Social Services – for the Care Agency, I should say – used to ask when he was on this side of the House. And when we were on the other side of the House we used to provide a full answer to this particular question, so therefore, given that the Hon. Minister Costa has provided to this House during the course of this evening a masterclass as to how to be the GSD in disguise, and bearing in mind that he also used to ask this very same question when he was on this side of the House, may I ask him to provide a full answer to this question.

2785 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
Mr Speaker, the Government has already stated the policy of information that it will provide for the estimated six months' expenditure. That information was provided to the Hon. Mr Clinton and that is the information that will be provided. The agencies were not included there because they were not included initially in the answers that I used to get, and therefore the same information is being provided in respect of the agencies, which matches quite closely what is in 2790 the book in terms of the amount that is provided from the Department to the agencies but is not necessarily an exact coincidence of figures.

2795 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, I understand that, but what he has not done and what the Government is refusing to do is to provide us with the same information which we used to provide them when they used to ask for this information. The full breakdown was provided. I have gone back to Hansard and the full breakdown of everything that I asked was provided by the GSD Government to the Hon. the Father of the House – and indeed, more pertinently, to the Hon. Mr Costa. No doubt on Minister Bossano's instructions he used to ask this particular question, because it has Minister Bossano's prints all over it and I just cannot see on what basis 2800 the Government is now refusing to provide those answers.

2805 Hon. J J Bossano: On the basis that that is the policy that I informed the hon. Member we were adopting in answer to Question 243, where I said that we would be providing tentative figures up to September and that they would be provided with the same caveats that they could not be relied on to be an indication of the full year and that they would be provided in January in respect of the figures up to September, and having informed the hon. Member in March 2016 that that was the policy, I have to tell him that in March 2017 it continues to be the policy. If, in fact, he is now saying that they used to do more in that respect, perhaps that must be the exception to the rule because in almost every other respect we do more than they did, by far.
2810

Hon. N F Costa: By far.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr Speaker: May I invite a Government Minister to move the adjournment of the House.

2815 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that this House do now adjourn until tomorrow at 3 p.m.

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn until tomorrow at three in the afternoon.

The House adjourned at 7.39 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

CHIEF MINISTER

Q306 and 307/2017

Housing Works Agency –

Future role and manning levels; Early retirement and exit packages

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Thursday, 30th March 2017.

We continue with answers to Oral Questions. We commence with Question 306. The questioner is the Hon. Roy Clinton on behalf of the Hon. E J Reyes.

5

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details of its intentions for the future role and manning levels of the Housing Works Agency?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

10

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 307.

Clerk: Question 307. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. E J Reyes.

15

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details of any early retirement or exit packages it is offering employees of the Housing Works Agency?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

20

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, a review is currently being undertaken to identify the Housing Works Agency's requirements looking towards determining its future resources, roles, staffing levels and responsibilities.

25

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister for his response. I seem to recall that he made an announcement or pronouncement on I think it was Viewpoint about a new exciting maintenance programme for housing estates. Would he care to elaborate on that; and if so, how might that interface with the Housing Works Agency?

30

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, no he does not care to elaborate, or is it no there is no new exciting maintenance project for the housing estates?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, I would not care to elaborate, Mr Speaker.

Q308 and 309/2017
Eastside reclamation –
Beautification works; Blue Water Project

35 Clerk: Question 308, the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Government say what beautification works have taken place in the Eastside reclamation since the start of 2012?

40 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 309.

45 Clerk: Question 309, the Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide an update in respect of the Blue Water Project announced in June 2015; specifically, is it still intended to build a superyacht luxury marina and a five-star hotel?

50 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, since the start of 2012 the Eastside reclamation has seen many changes. It was a plot of 78,500 m² when we took over; it is now a plot of 95,000 m². We grew it in part by pushing a lot of the rubble mountain into the sea and adding an additional revetment. That served to level part of the plot out for a time.

The position in respect of the Blue Water Project remains as set out already repeatedly each month to the hon. Gentleman.

60 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister for his response and note that clearly the reclamation area has been expanded in terms of square metreage, but the question was what beautification works have taken place – I wonder if he could elaborate on whether any actual beautification of the area has taken place since 2012.

65 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I would swear I have seen some candytuft there. (A Member: Yes, good.)

The answer I gave set out to the hon. Gentleman the fact that what was at one stage a higher mountain was flattened out, and in that respect I think we changed the aspect of it. Beauty, however, remains a matter that is in the eye of the beholder. I think every time Mr Bossano passes it and sees the opportunities for further expansion of plot and reclamations elsewhere in Gibraltar using the builders rubble, he sees something quite beautiful to behold. Others of us might think that if we are not careful and candytuft takes hold there, then the Hon. the Minister for the Environment is never going to allow us to flatten the plot again.

75 So the hon. Gentleman has seen what we have done in respect of the plot. Part of what we intended was to see how quickly we could flatten that plot. We flattened part of it for a while.

The builders' rubble has built up again. The builders' rubble is actually an asset in the hands of the Government because it does lead to potential reclamation, so he will see some movement in respect of that plot both in relation to the reclamation and material that is there in the future.

Q310/2017
Coaling Island –
Update re reclamation project

Clerk: Question 310, the Hon. R M Clinton.

80

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide an update in respect of the Coaling Island major reclamation project referred to by the Chief Minister in his 2016 Budget speech, and can he also advise if this is to be purely residential, industrial or commercial in nature?

85

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, no, sir. Negotiations on finalising this project are currently ongoing. The Government will make a public announcement on this when these negotiations have been concluded.

90

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his answer, but is he able to provide any specific answer in respect of whether it is anticipated the project would be residential, industrial or commercial in nature in terms of what will be built on it?

95

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not envisage it is going to include any industrial activity being located on that site, but there may be some element of work done there which is not industrial. There is an industrial facility there at the moment in respect of yacht repair, but I do not envisage any industrial activity on such a plot.

Q311/2017
Private property developments –
Waiver of import duty

Clerk: Question 311, the Hon. R M Clinton.

100

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it has waived import duty in respect of the construction, fitting out of and equipping any private property developments; and if so, for which?

105

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, but without a relevant time period designated in the question it is, however, impossible to provide any further detail in answer to this question.

110

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may address you – if I were to table a rephrased question in future, would you allow it if I put in a timeframe? Thank you.

Q312/2017
Universal Credit Scheme –
Rollout to pensioners on low income

Clerk: Question 312, the Hon. R M Clinton.

115

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide an update in respect of the Universal Credit Scheme rollout to pensioners on low income?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

120

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government expects to make a statement in respect of assistance to be provided to private sector pensioners on low incomes in the context of the new financial year.

This class of pensioners has been ignored for many years. This Government has repeatedly met with them and has worked on proposals to assist. We have been the only Government to listen and we are expecting to be able to assist those in need.

Given that this group were ignored by the GSD when they were in Government, it is quite something to see the party opposite do a volte-face in their apparent engagement with this group now. Perhaps they would have the courtesy to explicitly condemn the Government in which the current Leader of the Opposition sat as a Minister, for ignoring these pensioners. They might also congratulate us for having engaged with them.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, may I ask the Chief Minister if it is still the intention that this Universal Credit Scheme would involve the assistance or participation of Community Care?

135

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think it is fair to say that a full statement will be made of the detail of the provision that will be made for pensioners on low incomes who are in need of further assistance in the context of the new financial year, and that will contain details of who it will be that will be engaging in providing that assistance.

Q313-314 and 318/2017
Occupational pension schemes –
Private sector workers

Clerk: Question 313, the Hon. R M Clinton.

140

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it is to conduct a consultation on the introduction of compulsory pension schemes in the private sector?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

145

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 314 and 318.

Clerk: Question 314, the Hon. D A Feetham.

150

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Government intend to introduce legislation making occupational pension schemes compulsory in the private sector?

155 Clerk: Question 318, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What is the Government's policy in relation to private sector workers' pensions?

160 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am surprised to receive two almost identical questions from the Leader of the Opposition and the Deputy Leader of the Opposition. It is almost as if they are not talking to each other.

165 Mr Speaker, our policy in relation to pensions in the private sector is set out in our manifesto at page 51 and provides as follows:

PENSIONS FOR THE PRIVATE SECTOR Pensions will be introduced for employees in the private sector. This will not, however, be done without a thorough consultation with the business representative organisations, namely the Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Small Businesses and the relevant trade unions, in particular Unite the Union which has led on this policy area. We acknowledge that there are some sectors which have a very high turnover of staff, for which pensions may not be appropriate for their workers. We also acknowledge that this is an additional cost to business, which many small businesses may not be able to bear and which we have to ensure is ameliorated in order to keep Gibraltar attractive as a place to do international business. Working together with all sectors, we believe we can get the balance right.

Mr Speaker, as I told the House in my Budget address of last year at paragraph 325 under the heading 'Pensions in the Private Sector', I said this:

We have commenced the process of consultation with Unite the Union and the Federation of Small Businesses and the Chamber of Commerce in respect of the potential introduction in Gibraltar of pensions in the private sector. Given the BREXIT decision, we will not be progressing this process in this financial year whilst we observe the effects on the economy of the result of the vote of the British people.

170 Mr Speaker, Mr Clinton's question was therefore unnecessary, unless he was not listening to my Budget address; Ms Hassan Nahon's question was therefore unnecessary, unless she had not read our manifesto, although I do note that she did not have responsibility for those matters at the time of the election when she was in the other party; and Mr Feetham's question was obviously entirely unnecessary, unless he is not aware that Government can only implement such a policy by compulsion by legislation.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Chief Minister's reading of the GSLP manifesto, which sounds sweeter in his voice than in mine.

180 Yes, I have read the Chief Minister's Budget address and the manifesto. My question was really ... and you did state quite clearly in your Budget address that you would effectively suspend the process due to Brexit. My question was aimed at are you going to now conduct this consultation, given the time period that has elapsed. So, to perhaps clarify my question, my question to the Chief Minister is: are you now going to continue with that consultation process, and if so ... have you or have you not recommenced that process?

185 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, his question does require a lot of clarification, because if you read his question you do not see that it is about recommencing any process. His question is 'Can the Government advise if it is to conduct a consultation on the introduction of the compulsory schemes in the private sector?'

190 He says he has read my speech – at least that is what I thought I heard him say from a sedentary position – well, he obviously also heard my speech, because he was here in this House to hear it. He says he enjoys hearing me read him the GSLP manifesto. Well, Mr Speaker, I commend to him the fact that we have our manifestos available for those who might not be able to read on ... we had it on our website, but you can even get your iPad to read it to you, given 195 the technology these days. He may then find that if he listens to it often enough the policies might commend themselves to him in a more favourable way.

Mr Speaker, we conducted a consultation. We will go back to the process of continuing that consultation during the course of the financial year that starts on 1st April, because the effects on the economy that we have observed do not suggest that we should not continue to pursue this important policy area, which I hasten to add was only a policy defended by the parties 200 represented on this side of the House at the last General Election.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if I may, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his information.

I just want to say that, to be perfectly clear, my argument or my question does not stem from actually the merits of the pension itself. It stems from the fact that I have met with the Pensioners Association a few times and I have attended meetings, and they are deeply aggrieved and let down because they claim, a body of at least a hundred people, that they were going to be dealt with much sooner and in a much more personal way. They claim that they also have been trying to reach the Chief Minister and have not managed to meet with him until they have 210 meetings, when they are promised something on the eve of the meeting and then they do not hear from them again for nine months.

So perhaps there are merits – and I would not doubt it, especially in this economic climate – but the problem I have is that they seem very, very let down and they feel like they are being passed around like a football with no clarity at all. So this is what I would ask the Chief Minister 215 to address.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady raises a more human problem than just the issue of policy. If I may say so to her, we interpreted her question to be about pensions in the private sector, i.e. for people who are working now. So I apologise to her if I have answered 220 her in respect of that policy proposal and not in respect of those who are currently pensioners already, who do not have the benefit of a private sector pension income.

In that respect, if I may say so with respect to the hon. Lady, she does have to factor in – as I think she generously has in the way that she has postulated her question, but far too early on for it to sting by the time that she sat down – that these are difficult times. There are only 24 hours
225 in a day and there is a lot to do in the context of the international issues facing Gibraltar, and it is not just the Private Sector Pensioners Association that is having difficulty getting the Chief Minister's time; it is the Chief Minister himself who sometimes has difficulty finding time to do some of the most basic necessities, not that those necessities are necessarily interfered with because I do, sometimes, some of my best reading as I am doing some of my most basic 230 necessities, but let us ... A bit too much detail there. And then they say we are not transparent, Mr Speaker! But if I may put it this way, Mr Speaker, we have ... In the question I answered earlier I did say to the House that we were the – (Interjection and laughter) Don't tempt me, I'll just keep talking about the same (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, what I said before was that (Interjections and laughter) we have met with that association more than anybody has. We have committed ourselves to deliver something to pensioners who are in need. We have not been able to do so yet, that is absolutely true. They wish we had done so already. We wish we had done so already. Nobody else gave them the time of day before 2011. We have given them the time of day, we have given them the time to understand their issues and we have not yet been able to deliver in respect of those who most 240 need us to deliver in that sector. But we will, and what we are trying to do is deliver in this financial year. We said we would ensure we finished all of our considerations before the end of this financial year – I believe we have, and therefore we will deliver to them.

What I would just say to those pensioners who the hon. Lady brings to my attention is that many of them are very good friends of mine, from the time that we have been dealing with this 245 issue and from before. They are not far from our thoughts, but it is very difficult because there are just 24 hours in a day and there is a lot to be done at the moment to determine what is a greater priority than dealing with the future international issues affecting Gibraltar today, but we are going to deal with them and deliver for those most in need. And then I think I should also seek to indulge their generosity, because I know they are people who by dint of their age have lived through some of the challenges Gibraltar has already surmounted that we are at such a stage of challenge that getting time with me and with other Ministers who are relevant is slightly harder than any of us might wish it to be – for them, for family and everything else – because of this moment in our history.

But we are on it. We will deliver on our promise to ensure that those most in need have additional resources available to them. They are far from forgotten – and look, it may be that we have not had the chance to sit down and give them the warmth that they not just obviously crave, given what the hon. Lady has said, but they deserve because they are people who have worked in our economy for many years and I am always very keen to recognise that the Gibraltar that I lead today is the Gibraltar built on the backs of those who have worked in our economy for years. So they will have an opportunity to meet with us and they will have an opportunity to see what we are proposing will be what delivers for those most in need and they are far from forgotten. I thank her for raising the human aspect of this rather than the policy aspect of this, which is what I dealt with in the context of my answer.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister for his very detailed answer. Could I commit the Chief Minister to a timeline for when this Association will have their attention and their commitment?

Hon. Chief Minister: They have had our commitment, Mr Speaker; they have had our attention. The implementation of the work that we are going to do, which I think is what she wants to see me committed to, is something that will be envisaged as from the beginning of the new financial year. The new financial year starts over this weekend. I think we will be in a position to make announcements in respect of this new financial year when we usually do, which is in the context of the Budget – but I am not going to say ‘in the Budget’, I am going to say ‘in the context of the Budget’, because as she has heard me say before, this may not be something that the Government becomes involved in, for reasons that I would rather not ventilate across the floor of the House.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I drill down in relation to Government policy on the consultation side. Is it the case that the Government is still committed in principle to the introduction of this piece of legislation – occupational pension schemes – and that the consultation exercise may concentrate on the mechanics and, for example, the scope? Just to give the Hon. the Chief Minister an example, perhaps extending it to larger companies exempting smaller companies, or is it all in the air? In other words, is it also in the air that the Government might in fact take the view that it will not introduce any kind of legislation in relation to occupational pension schemes across the board?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, page 51 of the GSLP manifesto for the election provides all of the answers that the hon. Gentleman needs. I will read him again the paragraph I read a few moments ago – Mr Clinton might quite enjoy it:

PENSIONS FOR THE PRIVATE SECTOR Pensions will be introduced for employees in the private sector. This will not, however, be done without a thorough consultation with the business representative organisations, namely the Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Small Businesses and the relevant trade unions, in particular Unite the Union which has led on this policy area. We acknowledge that there are some sectors which have a very high turnover of staff, for which pensions may not be appropriate for their workers. We also acknowledge that this is an additional cost to business, which many small businesses may not be able to bear and which we may have to ensure is ameliorated in order to keep Gibraltar attractive as a place to do international business. Working together with all sectors, we believe we can get the balance right.

Mr Speaker, that covers all of the issues that the hon. Gentleman has asked me in his supplementary.

295 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, unfortunately the way that the hon. Gentleman chooses to answer questions and the acerbic nature in which he responds then leaves us both to enter into what the Hon. the Speaker of the House calls a debate, and I have no wish to do so.

300 The position then – and this is the reason why I have asked the question – is that there is no change from the position as expressed in the GSLP manifesto in 2015, because of course my understanding is that that commitment and that wide commitment in the way that the hon. Gentleman has just now read it, has in fact been superseded by the Brexit vote and that therefore the Government’s thinking may have changed. But if the answer is actually the Government’s thinking has not changed, because it is exactly the same consultation as we would have undertaken in any event because we won the election, it was a manifesto commitment, well, so be it, but I was just simply trying to drill down as to how the policy has changed as a consequence of the Brexit referendum. But it appears, from what he is saying to me, is that really it has not changed, because it was always envisaged that there would be a consultation exercise and that consultation exercise is going to be on everything ... principle ... as the hon. Gentleman has just read in the manifesto, which I am not going to repeat.

310 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman seems not to read the questions that his newly elevated Deputy files and does not seem to listen to the supplementaries that his newly elevated Deputy puts, because the Hon. Mr Clinton has just asked me, ‘So what’s going to happen – are you going to continue with the policy, or not?’ and I said to him, I said to the House, we were going to observe the effects, we have observed the effects, we are going to continue next year with the consultation and implementation. So, asked and answered, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q315 and 316/2017

Tax rebates –

Entitlement, overall value and number of payments

320 Clerk: Question 315, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many individuals or entities are currently entitled to tax rebates, and what is the overall value of rebates due?

325 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 316.

330 Clerk: Question 316, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many tax rebates have been paid out to individuals and entities entitled to the same since 1st April 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

335 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member has not provided a date on his question seeking overall rebates due. It is not possible to answer his question accurately where the only parameter of time is 'currently'. In the past he has rightly asked for the figures as at 31st March, a figure which is obviously not yet available for this year.

340 Since 31st March 2016, which is the parameter in respect of Question 316/2017, the total value of rebates paid in this financial year amounts to £9,635,381.54 paid to 10,399 individuals and 65 entities.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in relation to Question 315, in the absence of a specific date it is the latest date that is available to the Government. Does he have the figure therefore the latest date available to the Government?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, it is not, in the absence of a date in a question, that it is the latest date available to the Government. Questions are for a particular date; they are not simply to be assumed to be the latest figure available to the Government, because even the latest figure available to the Government is something that moves all of the time. The latest figure available when I receive a question, the latest figure available when I deliver an answer to a question. That is why most questioners in any Parliament will know to give a date for when they are asking for a particular set of information. And it is something that he has done in the past. Last time he asked this question he asked as at 31st March 2016. Well, the next 31st March is coming up now and he can ask about the information as at 31st March 2017. He can ask for it broken down by quarters – he may want to ask every quarter about it – but if he says 'currently' ... Well, Mr Speaker, 'currently' means something in his head when he writes a question, something else to somebody who is preparing an answer and something else when I stand up in this House and I answer.

Mr Speaker: Rather than have a debate on the matter, could I just suggest to the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition that he puts in a question for the next meeting and I will have no problem in allowing it, and then I think we can get on with business.

365 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, of course I have no wish to raise temperatures, but if I ask how many individuals or entities are currently entitled to tax rebates it means now, and the reasonable thing for the Government to do is to provide me with the most recent figures, because I am asking about now.

370 But of course I will, Mr Speaker, (Interjection by Mr Speaker) ask the question next time round, and then I will just simply add a particular date if that is what the Chief Minister wants me to do.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, because 'now' is the same as 'currently', and now is one thing when he files the question, another thing when we are answering the question and quite another when I am answering. Whilst if we have a particular date, then I can confirm to the House the accuracy of the figure that is provided, because if then there is a discrepancy in the figure he comes back and tells me that I have got it wrong. So I very much welcome Mr Speaker's suggestion that a question is put with a particular date. It would then be able to be provided with information which is accurate.

380

Mr Speaker: Before the next question is called, I would like to draw the attention of hon. Members to 'Rules governing right to ask questions', 17(3):

a question must not publish any name or statement not strictly necessary to make the question intelligible;

385 Arising from that, could I therefore ask both the Leader of the Opposition and the Chief Minister, who is answering the next question, not to name any person in the course of supplementaries.

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Q317/2016

Former General Secretary of GGCA – Assistance to Government

Clerk: Question 317, the Hon. D A Feetham.

390 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, of course.
What does the former General Secretary of the GGCA do for the Government?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

395 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the former General Secretary of the GGCA assists the Central Human Resources Department and the Chief Secretary's Office in matters relating to industrial relations – e.g. historical claims both individual and collective, job descriptions, pensions issues and grievances.

400 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is he a consultant for the Government?

Hon. Chief Minister: I do not believe so, Mr Speaker.

405 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he certainly describes himself as a consultant for the Government in his LinkedIn profile, and the reason why I ask this question is, of course, because he does not appear in the list of consultants that the Government of Gibraltar publishes.

If he is not a consultant, is he then employed by the Government directly on a fixed-term contract or any other kind of contract, or is he employed by the GDC or any other Government-owned company? Does he have that information?

410 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he has a services agreement with the Government of Gibraltar. Frankly, I do not think I am answerable for what somebody may or may not have said in their LinkedIn profile, that is for sure.

415 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am just concerned about the accuracy of information that has been posted and I have asked in the past about consultants working for the Government. Whilst in the past I have also agreed not to ask the Government and push the Government in relation to any consultant whose appointment may be sensitive to Gibraltar plc as a whole, this is not such a case. Therefore, having seen that he does not appear on the list, having seen that he describes himself as a consultant in his LinkedIn profile, and indeed, from the answer that the 420 hon. Gentleman is in fact giving me, that he has got a services agreement, well, a services agreement is perhaps not incommensurate with this particular gentleman being a consultant.

425 Would the hon. Gentleman go back and have a look at this and perhaps clarify whether he is a consultant – and if he is not a consultant, what is he: is he a fixed-term employee of the Government – so that we understand the nature of the obligations of the Government in relation to this individual and the individual to the Government.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not think there is anything to go back to. It is a services agreement with the Government of Gibraltar; it is not a consultancy agreement. He provides services to the Government. Those services are not described as consultancy services; they are services which are provided when required.

If the individual in question has decided that he wants to describe himself as a consultant, well, okay, that is a matter for him, but he is certainly not a consultant as far as the Government is concerned. He is somebody who has a services agreement with the Government. He is a service provider. We have many of them and I do not think anybody could stretch the definition of consultant to include those people who provide services to the Government within that definition.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, unfortunately I disagree. There is a distinction between a contract for the provision of services or a services contract, which is akin to an employment contract, and this is why I am attempting to drill down here – and not in relation to this particular gentleman necessarily, although of course I noted, having seen his LinkedIn profile, that he was not on the list of consultants. It is in relation to perhaps others who may have a contract for the provision of services to the Government that may be akin to a consultancy agreement and do not appear on the Government website in relation to the list of consultants. Because of course it is a matter of interest to the Opposition as to what services are being provided and by whom to the Government in particular areas and whether people are being left out of that particular list.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I still have to tell the hon. Gentleman that I disagree with him – I disagree with his disagreement with me – because by his attempt to extend the definition of consultancy we should be putting Master Services on the list of consultants to the Government because Master Services has a services agreement with the Government. The hon. Gentleman knows that there is a contract for service and contracts for services, and Master Services has a contract for services and Michael Tampin has a contract for services. Neither of them, Mr Speaker, have a consultancy agreement with the Government of Gibraltar, so neither of them are consultants.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, next time round I will ask a question about individuals and services agreements with the Government.

Hon. Chief Minister: Next time round, Mr Speaker, I will provide the answer to that question. (Laughter)

Hon. D A Feetham: I doubt that very much! I have to say!

Hon. Chief Minister: With everything else, however ridiculous the question may be with everything else that is going on in Gibraltar.

Q319 and 320/2017
Registered charities –
Timely filing of accounts; Charities Commissioner

Clerk: Question 319, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What policy and procedures do Government have in place to ensure that the accounts of registered charities are filed on time?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

475 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 320.

Clerk: Question 320, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

480 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What is the role of the Gibraltar Charities Commissioner and to whom is he or she answerable and accountable to?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

485 Chief Minister (Hon F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, charities are registered with the Board of Charity Commissioners for Gibraltar and are answerable to that said board, not to the Government. The Board of Charity Commissioners for Gibraltar is an independent regulatory body governed by the Charities Act.

490 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for that answer.
If I had any queries as to why ... For example, if I had written to the Charities Commissioner and had received no reply, would the Government be able to point me in the right direction as to whom I should take this up with, or has it got nothing to do with that at all? Or can it understand perhaps why either a Member of Parliament or a member of the public would want to have some kind of ability to reach the Charities Commissioner?

495 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, for 'Charities Commissioner' read Financial Services Commissioner in the old nomenclature. These are independent statutory bodies – for example, the Data Commissioner – and if one of them fails to answer correspondence ... Well, look, I am the Leader of the House – the House funds these organisations, so of course it would be something I could follow up with them, but it would be very unusual, in my view, to see that correspondence is not eventually followed up, even if it might not be followed up as quickly as an hon. Member might like, but I think she should persevere in seeking engagement from the Charity Commission and from the Gibraltar Charities Commissioner. We are not, in my view, the port of call with responsibility for the Charity Commissioner to answer correspondence or otherwise.

500 My advice – and I do not think I am being asked for more than that in the context of the supplementary – is to seek engagement with the Board of the Charity Commission or to persevere in correspondence with the Chairman of the Board of the Charity Commission.

510 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you for that answer; I am grateful. If, for example, I had bumped into the Charities Commissioner down the street and asked him why he had not answered my email and he directed me to a civil servant for more information, where would the Government fit in if the Government says that it has nothing to do with it?

515 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, because I think in the architecture of the Board of Charity Commissioners their day to day is handled by civil servants who are provided almost on secondment to them for the purposes of that part of their work.

520 It is a little like Mr Speaker's other role as Mayor, where he is supported in his functions by civil servants, but when they are with the Mayor's office they are acting independently and for the Mayor's office in the discharge of his functions, which are non-partisan and non-governmental – they are municipal.

So I would take up the offer of the Charities Commissioner to liaise with those civil servants he may have been directing her to in their capacity as those who are seconded to him for the purposes of the service that he provides, I assume, as Secretary to the Board.

Q321/2017

Government charitable contributions –
Safeguards to ensure efficient spending

525 Clerk: Question 321, the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What procedures and safeguards does Government have in place for when Government itself makes contributions to charities, to ensure that moneys are spent efficiently and correctly?

530

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government relies on the Charities Commissioner to oversee the operation of charities.

535

Mr Speaker: Does he reply to the letters? (Laughter)

Suspension of Standing Order 7(1)
to proceed with Government motion and Bills

Clerk: Suspension of Standing Orders. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move, under Standing Order 7(3), to suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with Government motions and Bills.

Mr Speaker: I put the question in the terms moved by the Chief Minister under Standing Order 7(3) in order to suspend Standing Order 7(1) and enable the House to proceed with a Government motion and Bills. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Mayor and Deputy Mayor of Gibraltar –
Mrs Kaiane Lopez GMH and Mr John Gonçalves MBE, GMD appointed

545 Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

This House:

Appoints Mrs Kaiane Lopez GMH to be Mayor of Gibraltar, and Mr John Gonçalves MBE, GMD to be her deputy as from Tuesday 4th April 2017.

550 Mr Speaker, I think it is true to say that in the context of Kaiane Aldorino, as she was known, and her trajectory through the Miss World contest, every Gibraltarian will remember where they were when she, Kaiane Aldorino, was crowned Miss World.

555 It was a propulsion of the name of Gibraltar into the consciousness of everybody, the many millions of people who might have been watching the Miss World show, and in Kaiane Aldorino we saw appointed to that position a Gibraltarian who really embodied the best of what Gibraltarians represent. She was not just a young Gibraltarian woman; she was a young Gibraltarian woman who is known for her generosity, who is known for her kindness and who, on the occasion that she won Miss World, managed to do so also because she brought great dancing attributes to the role that she discharged and also great sporting aptitude to the role that she was undertaking while competing in Miss World.

560 That was some time ago now and I think the welcome that Gibraltar gave Kaiane when she returned to Gibraltar – then under the former administration, who flew her to Gibraltar on a private aircraft to ensure that she was here at the time that the celebrations were fixed to go on – I think the welcome was so rapturous that it demonstrated how Gibraltar had taken Miss Gibraltar, who had left the Rock, and Miss World, who came back to the Rock, into our collective heart for the way that she had managed to propel Gibraltar's name around the world.

570 Mr Speaker, when it was proposed in the context of a Cabinet meeting that she might be a fitting person to appoint as Mayor of Gibraltar, there was a unanimous view across the Cabinet table that she represented somebody who young people would be able to associate with and therefore that the mayoralty would be associated not just with distinguished Gibraltarians like yourself, who are now discharging that role, but also with young Gibraltarians of distinction, like Kaiane, who might now assume the role and bring something to it which is different to the things that other mayors have brought.

575 If I may say so with respect to you, because you are here in your role as Speaker but you have also discharged the role of Mayor on two occasions, you have done, of course, a magnificent job in the role and you have brought your own style to the role of Mayor. Every Mayor brings their own style, brings their own aptitude to the role. Every Mayor we have had, I think, without singling anybody out, has done Gibraltar proud in the time that they have been Mayor, and I think appointing a person who is likely younger than other Mayors have been in the past will bring also something which is different to the mayoralty and something that will perhaps ensure that younger people associate themselves with the work of the mayoralty. And that work, Mr Speaker, I think is so hugely important in the context of Gibraltar today, because the mayoralty represents municipal Gibraltar, represents all Gibraltarians – it represents civic Gibraltar in a way that perhaps politicians might not be able to do because politicians represent the people of Gibraltar politically and internationally but we do not represent that civic municipal Gibraltar which is reserved to the mayoralty.

585 So I think that Kaiane Aldorino was absolutely a good proposal as Mayor of Gibraltar. I think she will serve, if the House agrees, with great distinction in the role of Mayor of Gibraltar and that by the time she leaves the role she will have been a great Mayor of Gibraltar and she will have perhaps lit in other young people, and other young women in particular, an understanding of what the civic and municipal role of Mayor is and what involvement in Gibraltar's civic affairs is all about, and perhaps even kindle in some young people a better understanding of the political hierarchy of Gibraltar – something that I think would be a very good thing indeed.

590 Mr Speaker, to appoint somebody as a Deputy to Kaiane who will in future assume the role of Mayor, we are proposing John Gonçalves, a man who has been known not just for his service in the Civil Service – I remember in the old days when I started my career in the law, he had been a man who had served with great distinction in the Supreme Court – but also somebody who has served in the private sector in Gibraltar and who has represented Gibraltar internationally in his role in basketball. He has been one of the members of the board of the International Basketball Federation, one of the movers and shakers of Gibraltar sport, and I hope he is not listening when I describe him as a person who is advanced in years compared to Kaiane. So there is, I think, a balance also of John's age versus Kaiane's age and he will be able to bring, in support of Kaiane, all of the experience that he has had of representing Gibraltar internationally in the sport of basketball.

605 Mr Speaker, both John and Kaiane are people who have represented Gibraltar already, as I have said, in their respected fields internationally with great distinction. John is well known as 'Mr Basketball' in Gibraltar and he is 'Mr Gibraltar' in basketball internationally, so we thought Miss Gibraltar and Mr Basketball might not make a bad combination for the mayoralty. I think they will bring something different to the mayoralty and I very much look forward to seeing them impress their own style on the mayoralty. I think that they are choices which can be 610 commended to the House and I am sure that all Members of the House will then enjoy the benefit of seeing Kaiane and John discharge their respective functions and will welcome the work that they will do. No doubt they will make us feel welcome in the many civic functions to which Members of this House often find themselves invited at the behest of Mayor and Deputy Mayor.

615 Mr Speaker, it would be remiss of me to sit down without thanking you, and in particular your wife Julie, for the work that you have done when you have once again assumed the mantle of the role of Mayor. Having done so during the course of your political life, you agreed to step in when I asked you to return also to that civic role. I think you have done so much for Gibraltar in the time that you have discharged that function. As Speaker you do so much for us in this 620 House. At the same time as you have been Speaker you have also generously assumed the role of Mayor and you have brought to that role your usual kindness and your gentlemanly self, and I could not think of a better way to have seen Gibraltar represented at a municipal and civic level in the past years than by yourself, and of course by Julie. Although we shall miss you in the robes and with the chain of office, as Speaker you will no doubt continue to be an important feature of 625 all the functions that the Mayor organises, so you are not going to get away from us quite as quickly as you might have wished.

I think the House will want to join me, not just, I hope, by acclamation of appointing Kaiane and John, but also by acclamation thanking you and Julie for the service you have rendered on the second occasion that you have held the distinguished role of Mayor. (Banging on desks)

630

Mr Speaker: I now propose a question in the terms of the motion moved by the Hon. the Chief Minister.

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

635 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is convention on these occasions, unless of course there is a particular controversy in relation to the appointment, for the Opposition to support the Government and the Government's judgement in relation to these particular issues. On the last occasion that we were here with a mayorship, unfortunately there was disagreement because of Tony Lombard at the time, but I have no hesitation, on behalf of the Opposition, in supporting 640 the appointment of Kaiane Aldorino and Mr Gonçalves in relation to Deputy Mayor.

The Hon. the Chief Minister is absolutely right: the mayorship has to be, as indeed any other aspect of public and civil life, representative of society. I cannot, on my feet, think about any other Mayor that has been appointed – that has actually been appointed certainly in modern times – who has been less than 50 years old, and therefore the appointment of somebody who 645 is young, somebody who brings a fresh image – with respect to Mr Speaker – to the role of mayor is likely to be beneficial and is likely, in my view, to attract and perhaps engage with young people, which is so difficult in civil life nowadays.

Her achievements, Mr Speaker, are there for everybody to see. Kaiane Aldorino winning Miss World is a moment that everybody will remember, and everybody will probably remember 650 where they were at the time when she was appointed Miss World. I certainly do and it was a magnificent achievement, and therefore it is not only because she is young that this appointment and this honour is bestowed upon her, but it is also because of her achievements and what she has done in order to bring Gibraltar and place Gibraltar on the map.

655 Mr Speaker, in relation to Mr Gonçalves, I think the Hon. the Chief Minister is also right: Mr Gonçalves is somebody who has done a lot in order to put Gibraltar on the international map as far as basketball is concerned and I have no hesitation, on behalf of the Opposition again, to support the Government in relation to his appointment as Deputy Mayor.

660 All that remains, Mr Speaker, is for me to thank Mr Speaker and his wife Julie, as the Hon. the Chief Minister has done, for their service and for the distinction that he has brought to this particular role. He knows that there was some disagreement at the beginning in relation to the appointment, but I have to say that in relation to the way that the Hon. Mr Speaker has discharged his role as Mayor he has always been exemplary, as far as I am concerned, and I echo the words of the Chief Minister in that regard and I thank Mr Speaker for everything that he has done in that role as Mayor on behalf of Gibraltar. (Banging on desks)

665

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any other hon. Member wish to add to the debate? Yes, the Hon. Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon.

670 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am very happy to see that somebody like Kaiane is going to have the opportunity to be Mayor of Gibraltar.

675 There has been some controversy which I have seen around in social media, talking about whether it is justified for the winner of an international beauty pageant to take this job, and I have to say that perhaps on the outset, as a woman, my feminine streak would have coldly been minded to go with that. But we have to remember that this appointment does not come as a result directly of winning a beauty contest, it is what it represents, and when Kaiane won Miss World what she showed Gibraltar was so many things – that we could aim high, that we could pitch above our weight and that we could do great things. And as the Leader of the Opposition and the Chief Minister have said, we all remember where we were when Kaiane won and we all remember how it unified us and how elated and proud we all felt, and how we felt that we could aim high, and Kaiane did this for all of us. Since then, she has continued her good work in the charities field and she has always been giving of her time. She is a generous and lovely lady who is always willing to serve the community, and these are exactly the types of people we need to perform these civic roles. So it does not matter whether she won a beauty contest, a chess tournament or the opportunity to train with the NASA space centre; it is what she did for Gibraltar, how she unified us and how she has become a worthy ambassador for Gibraltar. This is why I think she will do her job with distinction and I am grateful for my part in advance that she has taken this task, which as you know is a big ask.

680 I take this opportunity to thank you, and your wife as well, for all the commitment that you have shown, and also of course I endorse the appointment of John Gonçalves as Deputy Mayor – again, another man who has served the community in many capacities and I am sure will perform his duties with distinction.

685 Thank you. (Banging on desks)

695 Mr Speaker: Anybody else before I ask the mover to reply? The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I think it is important to reflect on some of the things that the hon. Lady has said.

I have not detected any of that reference that the hon. Lady has referred to in social media, but if it is there it is right that we should address it in this House.

700 Not only do I remember where I was when Kaiane won Miss World, Mr Speaker, I remember what I did, because I almost broke my ankle! I whooped and I jumped out of the chair I was sitting in at home at Willis's Road. I could not quite believe that Gibraltar had won through all of what appears to be the politics of a competition like that. I think the hon. Lady has reflected it

705 properly: she made us realise that we could win and I think she did that beyond the ambit of a simple competition like Miss World. We have seen UEFA since then, we have seen FIFA since then both recognise Gibraltar. All of these things are linked in different ways, and if there is one thing that I might ungenerously have thought at the time that Kaiane Aldorino won Miss World, it was that Spain had never won it before Gibraltar had won it. They have won it since and I am 710 very pleased that they did, for them, but Gibraltar took a crown that had not been taken by those who deny us our own existence.

I think, therefore, that it is absolutely right that we should reflect on that and also on who Kaiane is today, because Kaiane today is not the girl who won Miss World: she is a mother. She is a much more mature Gibraltarian woman than she was on the day that she won Miss World, but 715 when she won Miss World, as a very young Gibraltarian woman then, she did a magnificent job of representing Gibraltar internationally and we were all so proud in that year to see Kaiane representing Gibraltar as she carried the crown of Miss World. In the past period she not only has become a Gibraltarian mother, she has also been your Deputy Mayor, so she has been exposed to the mayoralty and, if I may say so, on occasions you have had a need to ask Kaiane to 720 discharge some of your functions and she has done so with great distinction. I think anybody who thinks that she might not be up to it has failed to follow the growth that Kaiane has demonstrated and the work she has already done as Deputy Mayor.

Mr Speaker, I think she is a magnificent representation of what Gibraltarian women can achieve. She is taking on the mantle of the mayoralty at a time when she has also just had a 725 magnificent, beautiful child, so it will be onerous for her in that way. Mr Speaker, I think, will recall that when you had taken the mayoralty before, you had young children on that first occasion. It is not going to be easy. The mayoralty requires functions at times during the day when one would perhaps prefer to be or be required to be home with the children, so there will be an element of sacrifice on her part as well, as there is always in public life.

So I think it is right for the hon. Lady to raise these issues which may have been raised in 730 social media, if they have been, and that we should confront them head on and tell those people who are making those assertions that they are wrong and that we are sure in this House that Kaiane Aldorino – or Kaiane Lopez, as she is now – will do an excellent job. As the motion sets out clearly, she is the holder of Gibraltar's Medallion of Honour, which was bestowed upon her, I believe, by the former administration – not the Medallion of Distinction but the Medallion of 735 Honour, which is the highest civic honour, short of the Freedom, that this House can bestow – and so the Mayoralty is, in my view, absolutely appropriately passing into her hands.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, may I thank hon. Members – the Chief Minister, the 740 Leader of the Opposition and Miss Hassan Nahon – for their very kind words in respect of myself and my wife.

May I ask leave of the House also to say, if I may – I should not, but I cannot help it (Laughter)
– Kaiane is already an institution. When you speak of Winston, everybody knows it is Churchill.
When you speak of Federico, people know it is García Lorca. When you speak of Kaiane, all 745 Gibraltarians know whom you are speaking of.

All in favour? (Members: Aye.) All against? Carried.

Order of the Day

BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Private Foundations Bill 2017 – First Reading approved

Clerk: Bills, First and Second Reading.

750 A Bill for an Act to permit the establishment of private foundations in Gibraltar, to determine the legal status of such foundations, to restrict the purposes for which such foundations may be used, to regulate the creation, operation and management thereof and to provide for the winding up of any foundation so created and for matters incidental thereto including but not limited to the establishment and conduct of a register of private foundations.

The Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

755 Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to permit the establishment of private foundations in Gibraltar, to determine the legal status of such foundations, to restrict the purposes for which such foundations may be used, to regulate the creation, operation and management thereof and to provide for the winding up of any foundation so created and for matters incidental thereto including but not limited to the establishment and conduct of a register of private foundations be read a first time.

760 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to permit the establishment of private foundations in Gibraltar, to determine the legal status of such foundations, to restrict the purposes for which such foundations may be used, to regulate the creation, operation and management thereof and to provide for the winding up of any foundation so created and for matters incidental thereto including but not limited to the establishment and conduct of a register of private foundations be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Private Foundations Bill 2017 – Second Reading approved

Clerk: Private Foundations Act 2017.

770 Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

In 2012 the Gibraltar Society for Trusts and Estate Practitioners proposed a number of legislative reforms to the Ministry of Financial Services in the area of trusts and family offices. Inter alia, these proposals included a recommendation for the introduction of foundations legislation providing for the establishment of private foundations in Gibraltar.

775 The introduction of foundations legislation provides additional choice and flexibility for the fiduciary sector of the financial services industry and its clients whilst allowing Gibraltar to continue to meet international standards through high standards of transparency and compliance. The Ministry resolved in principle that foundations should be introduced and directed STEP to prepare the relevant legislation with the help of the Government law officers.

Private foundations have existed in Europe since at least 1926 and were introduced to provide a civil law equivalent to common law trusts. Foundations are structures that can be used in similar circumstances to traditional family trusts, but are familiar to clients and intermediaries with a civil law background. As foundations, unlike trusts, are legal entities, they will, in accordance with Gibraltar's legal tradition, be entered onto a public register which will be administered by the Gibraltar Registry.

The demand for foundations appears to arise primarily from a need for structures that can be used in similar circumstances to traditional family trusts but are familiar to clients and intermediaries with a civil law background, as I mentioned earlier. There is demand for foundations which are domiciled in a well-regulated, co-operative and transparent jurisdiction.

Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish – (Interjection) I am sorry, Minister, I think this was switched on. I think it will have gone into Hansard, though. He may have been off screen, that is all.

Before I put the question, does any Hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Mr Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Having spent a substantial part of my former career in the private sector in financial services, I can only too readily understand the need as a jurisdiction to provide new products for potential clients. We have to constantly keep on reinventing ourselves and making sure that what our product offering is, is up to date and is what the market is demanding.

Seeing as this legislation is actually a product of what I imagine is quite extensive private sector consultation – and I am sure the Minister has taken on board all aspects of any concerns that may or may not be had – we on the official Opposition have no problem supporting this Bill, and I welcome the fact that there is going to be a publicly searchable register of foundations, which in this day and age I think is important.

So, on that basis, as I say, it will be a welcome addition to our financial services product offering, and on the side of the official Opposition we have no problem in supporting it.

Mr Speaker: Does the hon. mover wish to reply?

Hon. A J Isola: No, Mr Speaker. I am grateful to the hon. Members opposite for their support. I think it is a product that we do need to, as you said, in terms of products, need to keep reinventing ourselves and making sure we are ahead of the time. In that respect and with this product in particular we have been rather tardy because of the amount of work that has gone into its preparation by the private sector, to whom of course I am extremely grateful, in particular to STEP.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to permit the establishment of private foundations in Gibraltar, to determine the legal status of such foundations, to restrict the purposes for which such foundations may be used, to regulate the creation, operation and management thereof and to provide for the winding up of any foundation so created and for matters incidental thereto including but not limited to the establishment and conduct of a register of private foundations be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Private Foundations Act 2017.

Private Foundations Bill 2017 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

830 Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
First Reading approved

835 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010 be read a first time.

840 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Income Tax (Amendment) Act 2017.

Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Second Reading approved

845 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

In parallel with the Private Foundations Bill 2017, which has today been presented – in fact, a moment ago – by the Hon. Minister for Commerce, Mr Isola, I am pleased to present this Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2017.

850 What this Bill aims to do is to regulate the taxation of Gibraltar private foundations which are established and registered under that very Private Foundations Act 2017 and sets out the required changes for the Income Tax Act 2010 that establishes the parameters for that taxation of foundations, the beneficiaries and the taxation of the foundations themselves.

Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House.

855 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the merits and principles of this Bill?

I will now therefore put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

860 Clerk: The Income Tax Amendment Act 2017.

Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken later today if all hon. Members agree.

865 Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act 2011. The Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

870 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act 2011 be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act 2011 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Crimes (Amendment) Act 2017.

Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

880 This Bill as originally published contained two amendments to the Crimes Act 2011. The main amendment is the fulfilment of a GSLP Liberal manifesto commitment to introduce a new and specific offence dealing with the problem of so-called revenge porn. The second amendment in the Bill as published is the offence of grooming.

885 At Committee Stage, Mr Speaker, I will be moving amendments to the Bill following representations made to me by the Gibraltar Women's Association. These amendments create a new specific offence of sexual communication with a child.

890 The new revenge porn offence is based on the equivalent UK offence of disclosing private sexual photographs and films with intent to cause distress, which was introduced in the United Kingdom in 2015. Legislating for such a separate and distinct offence is not just a manifesto commitment but also, in our view, particularly important given the rise of social media in Gibraltar as elsewhere. Gibraltar must make it absolutely clear that as a society we will not tolerate this behaviour. The message we send is that no one should feel free to inflict the distress and humiliation that this particularly invasive and hurtful crime causes on its victims.

895 Mr Speaker, moving on to the specifics of the offence, it is committed if private sexual photographs or films are shown to other persons without the consent of an individual who appears in the photograph or film and with the intention of causing that victim distress.

There are, of course, a number of defences. These include the disclosure being necessary to prevent, detect or investigate crime; the disclosure being made in specific journalistic circumstances; or where the defendant shows that he or she reasonably believed that the photograph or film in question had been shown for profit.

900 The maximum sentence for this offence is of two years' imprisonment. The fact that the offence will exist does not mean that other current offences may not also be charged in appropriate circumstances. Rather, Mr Speaker, it increases the range of options available to our law enforcement agencies when dealing with such cases. There are already offences under Part 6 of the Crimes Act that may be relevant if the facts show a pattern of harassment and also 905 offences under the Communication Act of 2006 which prohibit the sending through a public electronic communications network of a certain type of message. Of course, should the images be of a victim under the age of 18 or the publication be intended to be used to coerce victims into further sexual activity, other offences under the Crimes Act will also be relevant and engaged.

910 Mr Speaker, the second amendment included in the published Bill is to the offence of grooming in Gibraltar to bring this offence in line with the equivalent offence in the UK. The grooming offence as currently enacted applies to an adult who communicates on at least two occasions and who subsequently meets or arranges to meet a child to commit a sexual offence. The proposed amendment will reduce to one the number of occasions on which the defendant 915 must initially meet or communicate with a child with the intention of committing a sexual offence.

The reduction in the number of meetings or communications was legislated for in the UK in 2015. The amendment was made there as a result of a cross-party inquiry, undertaken together with Barnardo's, into child sexual exploitation. That inquiry recommended the change following 920 evidence sessions at which advocates and the Police reported that the existing legislation was too weak and that making the grooming offence easier to use would make it a more effective prevention tool. The support for this change was unanimous in the inquiry's oral evidence sessions.

Mr Speaker, it is arguable that our legislation's current requirement for prior communications on two occasions is there to demonstrate without question the intent to commit the crime. From a police point of view, however, and especially that of the child, this is at best an unnecessary burden and at worst will lead to a child being abused before the Police can actually act. The UK recognised the concern but considered that it is the content and the context of communications that are key to proving the offence rather than the number of communications.
925 There is a clear possibility that a particularly skilled paedophile could in one communication arrange a meeting with a vulnerable child. We agree with this argument; this is why the amendment is included in the Bill.

Mr Speaker, as I stated earlier, I will be moving a number of amendments to the Bill at Committee Stage, following representation by the Gibraltar Women's Association. It is right to say that the GWA welcomed the changes in the Bill and offered their support for it. However, they also suggested that this would be an excellent opportunity to go even further by including a new offence to target paedophiles who communicate sexually with a child. After consideration, we agreed. In England and Wales such an offence was introduced by the Serious Crime Act 2015 and it is an equivalent of that offence which will be proposed as an amendment to the Bill at 930 Committee Stage. The amendment will make it a criminal offence for a person aged 18 or over to communicate with a child under 16 years if the communication is sexual or if it is intended to elicit from the child a communication which is sexual. The offence applies only where the defendant can be shown to have acted for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification. Ordinary social or educational interactions between children and adults, or communications 940 between young people themselves, will of course not be caught by the offence.

945 The offence is also subject to a two-year maximum prison sentence and will lead to notification requirements.

950 Mr Speaker, I would like to take the opportunity to once again thank the Gibraltar Women's Association for their support in this area, and indeed for actively coming forward with their proposals.

Mr Speaker, we are all agreed that sexual offences against children and the deliberate infliction of distress and humiliation on persons by means of publication of private sexual images are terrible crimes and that it is vital that we do everything that we can to prevent such abhorrent behaviour. It is important that we continue to adapt our laws, particularly to reflect changes in technology and communications which have given potential offenders new ways of offending.

Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

960 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

965 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, we on this side of the House will support the Bill. It is right that the law in this area should be strengthened, given the changing circumstances and the increasing use of technology and social media. These are, Mr Speaker, despicable crimes and we are pleased that the Government are legislating in this field.

I, in my other professional capacity, have had the opportunity of looking at some types of these cases in 2007, which horrified me to see cases like these in terms of images, whether they be photo, film, or in fact transfer of data, which was one of the cases that I had to deal with, and thereafter the Government of the day changed the law to incorporate electronic transmission of data where images were transferred through the wire.

This Bill will enjoy the full support of this side of the House.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute to the debate?

I call upon the mover to reply.

975

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, only to thank the Hon. Mr Phillips for his remarks and for the support that he brings with the Opposition.

980 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act 2011 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Crimes Amendment Act 2017.

Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting 985 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

990 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should resolve itself into Committee to consider the following Bills clause by clause – that is to say the Private Foundations Bill 2017, the Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2017 and the Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2017.

In Committee of the whole Parliament

995

Private Foundations Bill 2017 –
Clauses considered and approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to permit the establishment of private foundations in Gibraltar, to determine the legal status of such foundations, to restrict the purposes for which such foundations may be used, to regulate the creation, operation and management thereof and to provide for the winding up of any foundation so created and for matters incidental thereto including but not limited to the establishment and conduct of a register of private foundations.
1000 Part 1, clauses 1 and 2.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

1005 Clerk: Part 2, clauses 3 to 10.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 3, clauses 11 to 22.

1010 Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

1040

Clerk: Part 11, clauses 88 to 89.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Schedule 1.

1045

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Schedule 2 as amended.

1050

Mr Chairman: Schedule 2: two amendments have been circulated to all hon. Members. Do all hon. Members agree that they be incorporated into the Schedule? Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried. The amendments are therefore carried.

Clerk: The long title.

1055

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Clauses considered and approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010.
Clauses 1 and 2.

1060

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Clauses considered and approved

1065

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act 2011.
Clause 1 as amended.

Mr Chairman: If all hon. Members are agreed – again, notice has been given of the amendments that are proposed to this Bill – clause 1 as amended stands part of the Bill.

1070

Clerk: Clause 2.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1075 Clerk: Clause 3 as amended.

Mr Chairman: Again, there is an amendment to clause 3. If all Members are agreed stand part of the Bill ... Clause 3, as amended, stands part of the Bill.

1080 Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1085 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I may, on the last Bill we have looked at, I just want to assure myself – and not being a lawyer I cannot say with any certainty, so I am seeking advice on this really – whether the definitions ... Sorry, Mr Chairman, of course ... whether the definitions under the meaning of ‘private’ and ‘sexual’ are sufficiently robust to capture everything we might desire to be captured within a Bill such as this, or whether there are potentially any loopholes there. I am thinking really in terms of the references specifically to genitalia and pubic 1090 areas, whereas of course in the case of females there are other areas which may be pertinent and a woman would not wish to have shared in public without consent, even though the photos may have been taken in a public context.

I am, I appreciate, treading rather delicately on this subject, but I just want to assure myself that we are definitely passing a Bill here which does capture all of those potential areas where a 1095 situation may arise where there is a non-consensual publication or disclosure, and I just wonder whether we are doing that successfully here.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, I am satisfied to the extent that 97D(1) says:

The following apply for the purposes of section 97B.

(2) A photograph or film is “private” if it shows something that is not of a kind ordinarily seen in public.

1100 – which would cover the top part.

Hon. T N Hammond: That is not covered.

Hon. N F Costa: That is not ordinarily made public, or one would assume not.

1105 Hon. T N Hammond: And hence my reason for raising that particular issue, because of course there are contexts in which such parts are exposed in public – beaches to name but one example, and one of the more common of the examples – so I just wonder whether we are definitely covering this area. An analogy, face to face, I would say I am choosing my words as 1110 carefully as possible, but I notice that we ... I just wish to ensure that this area is covered with respect to non-consensual release of material onto perhaps social media. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) It is not my intention to do so, I assure you.

1115 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Chairman, I am persuaded that it is. I will revert back to the senior draftsman who drafted the Bill. He is a senior draftsman with the Government, he has been now for quite a long number of years and has a lot of experience in drafting Bills.

I am satisfied, given the wording of 97D(2), which specifically says ‘that is not of a kind ordinarily seen in public’.

1120 Hon. T N Hammond: I thank the Minister for that response and certainly for his consideration of the matter also.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I just have one point.
I would be grateful if the Minister could clarify for me – clause 97E(2) says:

Section 97B applies to a Gibraltar service provider who-
(a) discloses a photograph or film in an EEA state outside Gibraltar, and
(b) does so in the course of providing information society services ...

1125 This is under the general heading ‘ ... extension of liability’. I am just wondering why is there a restriction just to an EEA state and not worldwide.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, I do recall discussing this provision with Mr Warwick and asking him that question. Unfortunately, in the supplementary information that he has provided for me that particular answer is not provided, but I can give him a guarantee right now that after we resume I will call Mr Warwick and I will be able to provide him with the answer. There was, I remember, a good reason why it had to be drafted in those terms but I will give him the answer shortly.

Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Private Foundations Bill 2017 –
Third Readings approved: Bills passed

1135 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2017, the Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2017 and the Private Foundations Bill 2017 have been considered in Committee and agreed to with some amendments and I now move that they be read a third time and passed.

1140 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, namely that the Private Foundations Bill 2017 be read a third time and carried. All in favour? (Member: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

I now put the question that the Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010 be read a third time and carried. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

I also put the question that a Bill to amend the Crimes Act 2011 be read a third time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

1145 Clerk: We now come back to answers to Oral Questions.

ADJOURNMENT

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn to Wednesday, 21st June at 10.30 a.m.

1150 Mr Speaker: I now propose the question that the House do now adjourn to Wednesday, 21st June at 10.30 a.m.

I now put the question that the House do now adjourn to Wednesday, 21st June at 10.30 a.m. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

The House will now adjourn to Wednesday, 21st June at 10.30 in the morning.

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 10.09 a.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. A J Canepa GMH OBE in the Chair]

[CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: P E Martinez Esq in attendance]

Tribute to Juan Carlos Perez

Clerk: Wednesday, 21st June, Meeting of Parliament.
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

5 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, before the House continues its ordinary business, this is the first time that we meet after the passing of Juan Carlos Perez, who was a long-time Member of this House.

10 In fact, he was a Member of this House from 1984 until 2003. In that time, in those just shy of 20 years of membership of this House, Juan Carlos Perez became an essential part of the way that debates were carried out, of the rigor with which Opposition did its job at the time that he was a Member of the GSLP Opposition and of the way that Government did its work in the time that he was an essential part of the GSLP Government from 1988 to 1966, and no less rigor was applied by him as a Member of Opposition between 1996 and 2003.

15 A lot of things have been said about Juan Carlos since he passed away. The Hon. Joe Bossano and I have had opportunity to reflect publicly, as many of us on this side of the House have done publicly and privately, on the impact that Juan Carlos has had on our community, on his human qualities and on his political qualities. But today in this House I would just pause for a moment before I ask the House to observe a minute's silence for the passing of one of its longstanding Members to reflect on Juan Carlos the parliamentarian.

20 He was always robust in debate but always highly well prepared. Juan Carlos was not a man whose arguments would fail for lack of understanding or lack of preparation. If there was a person who has not been Leader of this House but who has had the political acumen, who has had the depth of understanding of the politics of this community, it is certainly Juan Carlos Perez.

25 Perhaps the biggest accolade I can pay him, Mr Speaker, is to reflect on the things that the Hon. the former Chief Minister and Leader of the House Sir Peter Caruana said of Juan Carlos during the course of a particularly prickly exchange with me after Juan Carlos had left, commending me to learn from Juan Carlos Perez and telling me that whilst I might be talking nonsense – which was the usual term of endearment that the former Chief Minister used to apply to me – he might say Juan Carlos Perez was, in parliamentary terms, much missed. When 30 your opponents recognise your contribution like that, I think you show what you have given your community.

So I would call on the House, Mr Speaker, before we hear other tributes from Members who might wish to speak, to observe a minute's silence in honour of Juan Carlos Perez.

Members observed a minute's silence.

35 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mr Bossano.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
Mr Speaker, of all of us here I shared more of my life with Juan Carlos than anybody else, both as a trade unionist and as a Member of Parliament and in everything to do with Gibraltar's political life.

40 He was not a politician, he was somebody who had politics flowing through his veins instead of blood, so there was no time in the day or the night or a day of the week when politics did not enter into his life and mine. Everything that I have been able to contribute, both in Government and in Opposition and in the trade union, would have been much less effective and much less likely to have been successful had it not been for the fact that I had him on my side, constantly 45 working with me, learning from me and teaching me. We made a team that was totally dedicated – as parliamentarians, as trade unionists, as political activists – to the welfare of Gibraltar as we saw it and in the best interest of all sectors of our community.

Juan Carlos, notwithstanding the fact that we had to argue a point, had no problem in being forceful, but had friends across this House ever since we first became involved. That is he had 50 close friends in the AACR when we were the Opposition, he had close friends in the GSD when that was the party opposite us, and of course in the GSLP family he was the life of the party. It is a life that is now gone and we are going to miss it. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I echo the words of the Father of the House: Juan Carlos certainly did have friends on both sides of this House – he even had friends from those who liked to hang around outside this House. He was one of those gentlemen who had that ability, like the members of his party are 60 saying, to be able to fight a point to the end but always be respectful, and that does not come easy.

I remember – I am sure Mr Speaker does as well – I first came across Juan Carlos in the late 1960s when we were mere young schoolchildren, when you were the deputy headteacher, Mr Speaker, and there was the tail-end of debating societies in school. Names were picked out 65 of a hat for which side you were on and I remember really rejoicing that I was on Juan Carlos's side because boy did you have a tough time if you were ever to speak against his arguments! He used to prepare himself well. How many hours he spent one can only guess, but he had that ability of having very well-argued points of view to put forward. Like I said before, with respect he could fight his point.

70 Having left school and having done the many things that he did, I also had some brief contacts with him in the trade union, although I was not in the T&G – being a civil servant I was with the GGCA. He was someone who actually inspired enthusiasm, and Joe Bossano is completely correct – he was very much always involved in that big battle for parity in the early 1970s and a certain percentage of that success must be attributed to Juan Carlos for either 75 whatever he did directly or his mere support for the main negotiators such as the Branch Officer Mr Bossano was at the time.

Mr Speaker, he then – I have fond memories – held the portfolio as Minister for Government Services. At one stage when Steven Linares and I were involved with the Teachers' Association we used to have meetings with him – I think it was somewhere in Europort he had his office, yes
80 – and if you went well prepared he did actually acknowledge when you were right. He was very honest and very frank and I think our best successes at the time, if Steven remembers correctly, were when we were fighting the points of excellence and so on and his trade union background I think made him manage to convince Joe Bossano that the teachers should be paid. So, Joe, Juan Carlos I know must have given you as well a bit of a tough time because he was always a true
85 representative of the workers. Even though he had the responsibility of looking after the Government's purse, he never betrayed what was, as the Chief Minister rightly said, running through his veins – that fight for the workers.

So, Mr Speaker, on behalf of this side of the House we offer our condolences to his mother Angeles, to his sister and to all those close relatives of his and the overall family of the GSLP.

90 May he rest in peace, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, it is with great sadness that we once again find ourselves paying tribute to a departed colleague from the world of Gibraltar politics.

95 To describe Juan Carlos Perez only as a founding member of the GSLP does a disservice to the countless hours that Mr Perez dedicated himself to his particular political cause, from almost his constant presence in the party's office to his long tenure as editor of the GSLP's newspaper.

100 There is, I am sure, no political development over the last 40 years in Gibraltar that has not warranted his astuteness nor his opinion, and I am sure that the Members opposite all feel greatly indebted to his advice and guidance.

105 Like Robert Mor, Joshua Gabay and Charles Bruzon, who all sadly left this world before him, Juan Carlos Perez was a committed socialist who always had Gibraltar's interests at heart and, like theirs, his loss will be keenly felt. It must be remembered, Mr Speaker, that in the late 1980s and 1990s Mr Perez played a significant role in developing the necessary telecommunications infrastructure to support Gibraltar's burgeoning economy, and this important contribution for our community deserves all of our appreciation.

110 Of course Mr Perez was a political adversary of my father and his party, but he always treated him with the respect and admiration that was mutually reciprocated and which I can remember since a very young age. I personally always found Mr Perez willing to give me much of his time and we both enjoyed many discussions in the Piazza, which was very much his political turf. I liked being in the company of this larger-than-life personality and I am very saddened by the loss of such a strong political presence.

115 I would like to convey my most heartfelt condolences to his family, his friends and all his political colleagues, while offering the consolation that Juan Carlos's legacy in this House will live on for many generations. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: And one of the great joys of teaching –

120 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, Mr Speaker... The Deputy Leader of the party.

Mr Speaker: Okay. The Hon. Dr Joseph Garcia.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, I first met Juan Carlos as a family friend, so he was somebody I would see on a regular basis in the days of the Spinning Wheel and the Old Rock, which probably most people here are too young to remember – and I think that says something!

125 In 1999 when I was first elected I had the pleasure of serving with him in the House for that short period of time. Indeed, my election was due to the tragic death of Robert Mor; it followed Mr Mor's death. I had the pleasure of serving with him in this House from then until 2003. He was an expert teacher, a political strategist who had a brilliant political mind. I think that has already been said and certainly his performances in this Chamber speak for themselves – the fact that he was admired and liked by friends and by political opponents alike.

130 So I would like to express my most sincere condolences to his mother Angeles and to his friends and family. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Let me not jump the gun: does anybody else wish to pay tribute? The Hon. Mr Albert Isola.

135

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Juan Carlos and the Father of the House were the two individuals who welcomed me into this GSLP family many, many years ago – and I enjoyed many, many a night at the Old Rock, which my colleague has just mentioned, sharing his company, his intelligence and his wit. I do not think I have ever met somebody who had the same level of political intelligence that he had, and to boot with a wit that was pretty much unbeatable, a speed of tongue which was really quite terrifying.

But I think for me the one thing I take from Juan Carlos is not that he did 20 years of politics, which of course we all know and that is well documented, but he spent a life of giving. That is what I think is really quite incredible: he has given his entire life to helping, giving and serving the people of this community in any walk of life. It was not just with the union; anybody who needed help had an open door and he was there to greet, to welcome and to help in whatever way he possibly could. For me the biggest thing about this huge political giant of a man was his ability and his sheer desire to help and give to others throughout the entirety of his life, and for that I think he should be well remembered.

I also join in offering my sincerest condolences to Angeles and of course his family and all of his friends.

Thank you, sir. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: One of the great joys of teaching in a secondary school in Gibraltar is the fact that many of your former pupils become in later life your closest friends, and that was very much the case with Juan Carlos Perez, as far as I am concerned. Politically we were opponents but always friends. Politics never divided us.

I would like to recall the young man that Maurice Xiberras and I taught in the Grammar School. Juan Carlos was mischievous with a great sense of fun and he was never afraid to question and to stand up to the teachers if he felt that an injustice had been committed. But there is an incident that I always remember very, very fondly. The school was staging the play A Man for All Seasons by Robert Bolt, and Juan Carlos was cast as Everyman – Everyman is effectively the prologue of the play – and when the curtains parted, Juan Carlos walked on to the middle of the stage. He paused. He was dressed in a black leotard and, looking at himself, he uttered those immortal words of the opening of the play:

Is this a costume? Does this say anything? It barely covers one man's nakedness!

I will always remember him and I always used to chide him about it. I always remembered it in particular when I used to put on the mayoral robes, which was a different sort of costume if you like.

It is a very sad year, I think, for this Parliament; 2017 is proving to be a very, very sad year. We have lost more than one former parliamentarian and I am sorry to say that, being in contact with some of the other former Members, we should prepare ourselves for even further sad news before the year is out; that is the way of the world.

And so, back to business. (Banging on desks)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, can I, on behalf of this side of the House, thank Members opposite for their very kind words.

Without prejudice to the characterisation of The New People, can I just say that if Juan Carlos were here I think he would probably say, 'Look, this is too many eulogies – you go to Parliament to do politics, just get on with it!'

Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Questions for Oral Answer

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Q337-339/2017

Gibraltar Wine Vaults –
Tourism; beneficial owners; consideration and alternative use of site

Clerk: We now continue with answers to Oral Questions.
We commence with Question 337. The questioner is the Hon. L F Llamas.

185 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose what tourism expectations have been projected for the Gibraltar Wine Vaults?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

190 Deputy Chief Minister (Dr J J Garcia) Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 338 and 339.

Clerk: Question 338. The Hon. L F Llamas.

195 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, who are the beneficial owners of Gibraltar Wine Vaults?

Clerk: Question 339. The Hon. L F Llamas.

200 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, what consideration is being paid by Gibraltar Wine Vaults and did the Government consult or advertise the site for alternative usage?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

205 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the operators of the Wine Vaults have told the Government that they expect to provide a tourism facility as part of the overall wine package experience, not only to see the wine storage facility but also to experience the World War II tunnels and chambers. This will not, however, be organised or controlled by the Government. It is an integral part of the wine storage operation. The operators expect that the combination of wine tasting and visit to the World War II experience could attract tours from cruise liners.

210 The beneficial owners are Gibraltar Wine Vaults Limited.

The consideration already paid by Gibraltar Wine Vaults for the ex-WT Station is £350,000. The Government did not consult or advertise the site for alternative usage. Gibraltar Wine Vaults approached the Government on this project. It was felt that this was a unique project perfectly suited for those chambers, which have little other use, and which will provide Gibraltar with economic activity and employment and could attract wealthy wine connoisseurs and tourism in general.

220 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, could I ask the Government: is there a set lease or a control mechanism whereby the Government will be able to monitor the success of this project; and in any event, if it seems that the project is not returning the economic activity that is envisaged, it can call back the land and offer it for an alternative use?

225 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is not land in the normal sense. These are tunnels inside the Rock itself. There is a lease which regulates the activity and which the operators have to abide by. I do not have the terms of the lease with me, but obviously there is a lease which they obtained in exchange for the premium.

230 Hon. L F Llamas: One final question, Mr Speaker: has the Government been consulted on what the entrance fee to the tunnels in this site will be?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, there has been no consultation certainly that I am aware of.

235 Hon. Chief Minister: There does not have to be.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: And obviously the option is open to them not to have a fee if they so wish it – they are the operators.

240 Hon. L F Llamas: Sorry, one final supplementary, Mr Speaker: does the Minister know for how long the lease will run, off the top of his head? I know it is a supplementary maybe not arising from these questions.

245 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have that information but I do not have it with me. If the hon. Member cares to ask me the question then I will be happy to answer it at a future Parliament.

TOURISM, EMPLOYMENT, COMMERCIAL AVIATION AND THE PORT

Q340/2017

Gibraltar Talking Plaques – Government involvement

Clerk: Question 340. The Hon. L F Llamas.

250 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what involvement it had with setting up and assisting Gibraltar Talking Plaques, together with details of any contract it may have entered into?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

255 Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, Talking Plaques is a fully private concern. They approached the Gibraltar Tourist Board for assistance in 2016. The GTB assisted in marketing the service on its social media platforms, proof reading and helping with the map produced by the operators, adding details on the product to the GTB website and displaying leaflets in the GTB information
260 offices and at events. This, Mr Speaker, is similar to the assistance provided to most private concerns that take an initiative to produce a tourism-related product.

In addition, the GTB provided the sum of £4,689 to Talking Plaques Limited towards marketing material that the company produced, including leaflets and branded giveaways to include the Gibraltar branding. The sum also went towards braille signs on the posts and 265 microchips contained therein.

There is no contract entered into with the GTB. The company sought its necessary permissions from the relevant authorities to roll out their business.

270 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, is it then safe to say that the private entity can sell on the business or decide not to maintain the signs or anything, given that there is no contract; or does the Government have a way of controlling what happens with this business which is being run essentially on Gibraltar's key sites?

275 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, as I mentioned, there is no contract and there is certainly no prohibition of the company behind this initiative having its shares sold to anyone. It is, of course, subject to permissions being given by the Government and that is how it was set up: it was set up by seeking permission from the Government and the Government giving permission to place these plaques in various sites, providing certain information. Therefore, if anything which was of concern to Government were to happen, that permission can simply be withdrawn and the 280 plaques would have to be taken down, by the Government if necessary, because they are on Government property and therefore subject to, at the moment, no contract, no lease, just a licence, and therefore that licence can be terminated by the Government at will.

Q341/2017
Visit Gibraltar website –
Relaunch

Clerk: Question 341. The Hon. L F Llamas.

285 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, has the Government made any progress in relaunching a new visitgibraltar.gi website?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.
290

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Tourist Board is now working with the current provider of the website to launch a new version of the site and this is scheduled to happen late September/early October of this year.

Q342/2017
Pleasure craft –
Licensing criteria

295 Clerk: Question 342. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can Government explain what is the licensing criteria on pleasure craft?

300 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi):

305 Mr Speaker, the criteria for the licensing of small pleasure craft for use within designated areas in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters is stipulated under Schedule 4 of the Small Vessels (Mooring Controls) Rules 2016 and the Seaside Pleasure Boat Rules 1989.

310 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I understand the criteria at the moment as per the law, but my question leads to ask whether the Government would be looking at perhaps making the criteria more stringent given the recent surge of pleasure craft with the new marina and also the accident that we saw a couple of weeks ago that might be telling us that our youngsters may find it very easy to get on a pleasure craft without having enough knowledge of sailing or of the pleasure craft itself. Would the Government be willing to make these laws more stringent?

315 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the question asks about licensing criteria rather than the enforcement of the laws and whether the laws should be changed. The licensing criteria, as I have indicated, is already in the legislation.

In fact, what we did – although the hon. Member says the criteria may not be stringent enough, it depends on how one looks at it – what we did was to actually set out, for the purposes of the new marina, we set out the criteria in legislation. Under the Small Vessels (Mooring Controls) Rules 2016 we actually set out what the criteria for licensing and for permitting vessels in the small boats marina at the Mid Harbour Marina should be. That was firstly for the sake of certainty and clarity so that nobody could say, ‘Well, I’ve been treated unfairly because the criteria has been improperly applied or discretions have not been applied to the required standard or properly in my case.’ Therefore there are steps that need to be taken, documents which need to be produced and very clear certainty in the legislation as to what the criteria should be.

330 The hon. Member mentions issues about who can use these craft. Clearly the legislation sets out who can use the craft and it is a matter for enforcement. Do we need stricter controls? That is perhaps something that can be looked at. When we made the changes that we did for the purposes of the small boats marina, hon. Members will recall that I also announced changes to the Seaside Pleasure Boat Rules to do with jet-skis, to require strict criteria in relation to jet-skis, particularly in relation to age limits and proficiency certificates in relation to jet-skis. So that criteria is already there in relation to jet-skis.

335 We also introduced a new category of vessels which we have called exempt vessels, which were vessels which could be exempt from the fast launch control rules, subject to the vessels not exceeding 40 knots and subject also to the user of that vessel, the person who was being licensed, having the necessary competency certificate, which is generally an RYA motorboat handling certificate, which is required by the Captain of the Port, and also insurance in relation to that vessel.

340 I can also say that we have set up, under the legislation which we produced for the small boats marina, the Small Vessels Advisory Board. That is a board that is tasked statutorily with looking at all aspects of small vessels, including use, licensing criteria, insurance and proficiency. I have met with the board and there has been advice given to me, particularly in relation to insurance, which should cover all motorised vessels, and that is advice that I have accepted. It is a recommendation that has been made by the board to me and we are in the process of looking at the legislation that needs to be changed in order to introduce a mandatory provision, which we already have for fast launches, we already have for exempt vessels, we already have for jet-skis and we are about to introduce it for all vessels which are of a motorised nature. That legislation I hope to either bring to Parliament if we need to change an Act, and I am seeking advice at the moment on that, or introduce it by regulations and make an announcement on it; but I hope to do that very quickly in deed.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

HEALTH, CARE AND JUSTICE

Q343/2017

Hillsides –

Permanent residents

355 Clerk: Question 343. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many residents are now permanently living at Hillsides, together with a breakdown of their long-term previous accommodation broken down into: (a) private accommodation; (b) Government rental housing;
360 (c) GHA wards; and (d) other elderly residential centres?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, there are 42 residents 365 living permanently at Hillsides. All 42 residents were transferred from GHA wards. Before admission to hospital, 28 out of the 42 residents lived in Government rented accommodation and 14 resided in private accommodation. No residents from the elderly residential centres have been transferred to Hillsides.

Q344/2017

Hillsides residents –

Selection criteria

370 Clerk: Question 344. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose the selection criteria in choosing the residents for Hillsides?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

375 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the criteria selection was clinically led, considering each individual's diagnosis and condition. A panel including GHA and Care Agency professionals were commissioned to assess eligibility. The same criteria for admission of dementia patients to ERS were followed. All the residents admitted to Hillsides 380 have been diagnosed with different stages of dementia.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Minister disclose whether residents of other elderly residential centres were considered as part of the changeover or the moving in into Hillsides?

385 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the admission criteria for Hillsides is the same as would be for any admission to any other ERS site, like, for instance, Mount Alvernia. The additional difference is that there is also a mental capacity because, as the hon. Gentleman knows, Hillsides is designed primarily to care for persons who suffer from dementia and Alzheimer's. The applications are assessed by the Care Agency and they prioritise individuals based on need.

390 The hon. Gentleman may also know that before, under the previous administration, there was a list and it was on a first-come first-served basis. I think it was my hon. predecessor, either Dr John Cortes, and Samantha Sacramento who decided that it made more sense, given the progressive nature of the disease – Alzheimer’s and dementia – that there should be admissions based on the person’s need rather than on whether you were first on the list

Q345/2017
Alzheimer’s and dementia patients –
Numbers resident in DHA facilities

395 Clerk: Question 345. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many diagnosed Alzheimer’s and dementia sufferers currently reside at each of the following: John Cochrane Ward, Calpe Ward, Mount Alvernia and St. Bernard’s Hospital?

400

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the number of residents or patients diagnosed with Alzheimer’s and dementia in the named areas is as follows: John Cochrane Ward, 16; Calpe Ward, eight; Mount Alvernia, 72; and St Bernard’s Hospital, six.

405

Q346-347/2017
Dementia Day Centre and Hillside –
Invitations to care providers

Clerk: Question 346. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose the names of the care providers it invited to express interest in providing the necessary staff for the Dementia Day Centre, together with (a) the date on which the invitation was sent to each care provider and (b) the closing date or dates?

410

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 347.

415

Clerk: Question 347. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government disclose the names of the care providers it invited to express interest in providing the necessary staff for the Dementia Residential Facility together with (a) the date on which the invitation was sent to each care provider and (b) the closing date or dates?

420

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

425

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I have previously stated, it is not the policy of the Government to publicly name any company that is approached and invited to apply for a public contract. I can confirm, however, that as I have already noted in response to previous answers to Questions 727/2016 and 51 of this year, all six known local care providers were approached in respect of the Dementia Day Centre. Invitations were sent on 7th September of last year and on the closing date of 15th September of last year three applications were received. In respect of Hillside's Dementia Residential Facility, five invitations were sent on 5th June 2015 and on the closing date of 22nd June 2015 five applications were received.

430

Q348-2017
Subcontracted nurses –
Payments to care providers

435 Clerk: Question 348. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a monthly schedule since 1st April 2016 to date of how much has been paid to care providers in return for subcontracted nurses by (a) the GHA, b) the Care Agency and (c) Elderly Residential Services?

440

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the estimated information, subject to audit, is in the schedule I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman.

445

Mr Speaker: I suggest we proceed with the next question and then the hon. questioner may come back once he has had an opportunity to study the schedule.

Answer to Question 348

During the Period 1st April 2016 to 31st March 2017 the following monthly payments were made to care providers in return for subcontracted nurses.

Subcontracted care workers and nurses –
Payments to care providers

Clerk: Question 349. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a monthly schedule, since 1st April 2016 to date, of how much has been paid to each care provider in return for subcontracted care workers by (a) the GHA, (b) the Care Agency and (c) Elderly Residential Services?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 350.

Clerk: Question 350. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a schedule per financial year since 1st April 2012 until 31st March 2016 of how much has been paid to care providers in return for subcontracted nurses by (a) the GHA, (b) the Care Agency and (c) Elderly Residential Services?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the estimated information, subject to audit, is in the schedule I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman.

470 In respect to the answer to Question 350, the information requested is only available from 1st April 2015, as previously invoices submitted for the Care Agency and ERS were per service and not per grade.

The information for the period 1st April 2015 to 31st March 2016 is as follows. GHA, £0. Care Agency: Grand Home Care, £450,974; Rainbow, £1,188,061. ERS: Grand Home Care, £1,288,237; 475 Rainbow, £87,802.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

480 Hon. R M Clinton: Sorry, Mr Speaker, I have just glanced at the schedule in answer to Question 348 and I was wondering if the Minister could explain the use of subcontracted nurses in the GHA, certainly in the month of March. It obviously seems to be out of scale compared to previous months. Is there something the GHA is doing differently to what it was doing before?

Hon. N F Costa: Sorry, Mr Speaker, could Mr Clinton repeat the question, please?

485 Hon. R M Clinton: Certainly, Mr Speaker. If the Minister could look at the schedule in answer to Question 348/2017, for the GHA, for the period of March 2017, there is a number there of £102,419.05 for that particular month, but if you look at the previous month, certainly from October to February is zero and other months certainly a figure much lower than that. Could the 490 Minister explain to the House why it is that the number is so large in March? Is the Government or the GHA doing something different in respect of subcontracted nurses?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, there has been no change in policy in that respect and therefore I do not have the answers to why there was, as he rightly points out, a sizeable jump in March. I dare say, and I will confirm this for the hon. Gentleman but I daresay that the amount reflected 495 in March ... In fact, it is the answer. If the hon. Gentleman looks at the column just next to the amount, it says that the period relating to the £102,000 is from 1st January to 20th March, so it includes two months of 2017, which would explain two months only, so there are three other months which appear to be unaccounted for. So I will go back to ... In fact, I will email my office and hopefully during the course of this session I will have an answer for him.

500 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, just a clarification, guidance from the Minister to be able to interpret this schedule correctly, the schedule in answer to Questions 350/2017 and 349/2017.
Could the Minister clarify which table relates to Question 349 and which tables relate to Question 350? One is for subcontracted care workers and the other one relates to 505 subcontracted nurses. If the Minister could clarify which table.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the answer in the tables relates to Question 349. The information relating to Question 350 was the one that I read to him across the floor of the House, so it should not have said 'Answer to Question 350'. Thank you for spotting that out.

510

Mr Speaker: Any other supplementary?

Q351/2017
Ocean Views –
Re-admission rate

Clerk: Question 351. The Hon. R M Clinton.

515 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the re-admission rate for Ocean Views in the year ended 31st March 2017?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

520 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the re-admission rate for Ocean Views for the year ending 31st March of this year is 2.85%.

It is salient to highlight, Mr Speaker, that the NHS benchmarking report found a 9% re-admission rate in the UK in 2015. Evidently, therefore, our excellent professionals at Ocean Views should be congratulated for the outstanding work in ensuring such a low re-admission rate. I will have more to say about this, Mr Speaker, in my Budget address.

Q352/2017

St Bernard's Hospital, Mount Alvernia and Ocean Views – Average daily bed costs

Clerk: Question 352. The Hon. R M Clinton.

530 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the average cost per day per bed for each of St Bernard's Hospital, Mount Alvernia and Ocean Views in the financial year 2016-17?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

535 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the average cost per day per bed for St Bernard's Hospital depends on the level of dependency. Therefore, the cost of a bed can vary from £340 to £515.

The average cost per day per bed for Ocean Views is £338.

The average cost per day per bed for Mount Alvernia is £192.

Q353/2017

Health centre cards –
Renewal by self-employed individuals

540 Clerk: Question 353. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise what is the policy for renewal of health centre cards by self-employed individuals?

545 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the renewal of health cards for self-employed individuals is only initiated when the Department is satisfied that individuals have settled their Social Insurance contributions by the 15th of every month, as stipulated by the Social Insurance Regulations 1955.

550 If a self-employed individual is up to date with Social Insurance payments, then proof of payment and a renewal form would suffice to renew their health card.

555 The GHA ensures that a settlement agreement has been reached if the individual is in arrears. Failure to conform to the agreement will result in the GHA suspending their rights to medical care. It is important to note that the individual will still be entitled to emergency medical treatment.

As with any process, there may be cases with specific issues which may require referral to the registration board for individual consideration. This is done via an appeal.

560 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Minister's response.

I have come across a number of individuals who have approached me with varying advice that has been given to them, some of which is contradictory. I would be grateful if the Minister could clarify for the House: if a self-employed individual is entirely up to date, how long would his health centre card be valid for? Would he be issued with a five-year card?

565 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: I am grateful for that answer and I will go back to the constituents and advise them of such. If a self-employed individual is given contrary advice, who should they contact? Who is responsible for this? Would it be the tax department or the GHA?

570

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, they can either contact me directly by email or they can contact Rose Suissa, who is the Primary Health Care Centre Manager, but either of us will attend to it straightaway.

575

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, perhaps this is not a question but he should be aware that individuals have been asked to pay in advance, either monthly or for an entire year, to get health centre cards for renewal. I am happy to share this information with him behind the Speaker's Chair later on.

580

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, that may have been in cases where the individual would have been in significant arrears for a number of years and therefore we would ask for a reasonable amount of cash payment so that we do not find ourselves in a position where a settlement arrears agreement is reached and then in the very first month we are once again in the position of arrears; and therefore, to establish trust between that particular person who owes arrears and the GHA, a reasonable amount is asked for. But if any individual feels that the amount being asked for is unreasonable, they can feel free to write to me directly.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker may I, because I can give the Minister first-hand experience, having had to assist my son, who happens to be a self-employed person. Shortly after Christmas he was refused an appointment at the Health Centre because he was now self-employed and had to produce all the necessary documents for Social Insurance contributions. He was told that the card would be renewed for a month until the end of March and was therefore advised that he pay until the end of the financial year in advance, which he did until the end of June. Coming now to that expiry date, again he has been advised, as recently as the last few days, to pay the whole of the 2017-18 year in advance of Social Insurance contributions. This is fresh as this week progresses.

So there seems to be some contradictory information feeding through from the clerical side. I would be grateful if the Minister could look at it, because there are several cases that we know of and although it makes a certain sense that the Government has to protect that payments have been made, you cannot put a heavy burden on young self-employed people, that we all encourage, to start off having to pay a whole year of Social Insurance in advance.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, I agree with the hon. Gentleman that such a request would be counterintuitive and unacceptable, so I will certainly, after this session of the House, perhaps after the Budget session, call in Rose, who I have to say is formidable and very well acquainted with the work that she does. These must be individual cases which, unforgivably and unacceptably, have fallen through the net, but certainly your son should not have been put in that position. I will see to it that it is immediately rectified and I thank him for bringing it to my attention.

Q354-355/2017

Law Reform Commission –
Sentencing reforms; appointments to Commission

610 Clerk: Question 354. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what specific sentencing reforms it is looking to address in the context of the Law Reform Commission?

615 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the particular areas of sentencing reform to be looked at are yet to be finalised as it is my intention as Chairperson of the Commission to consult the Law Commissioners before a final decision is made.

620 I refer the hon. Gentleman to my –

Mr Speaker: He is answering the question together with Question 355.

625 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, sorry, Mr Speaker, in my eagerness I jumped the gun. I will answer this question together with Question 355.

Clerk: Question 355. The Hon. E J Phillips.

630 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state the names of experts that will be appointed to the proposed Law Commission?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

635 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to my previous statements on this matter, where I stated that I intend to review local sentencing laws to ensure that they cater for the needs of Gibraltar, rather than being tied to sentencing guidelines which have evolved for another jurisdiction with its own particular issues and that may not necessarily apply to us.

640 It should also be noted that I have in the past said that there appear to be a number of classes of offence where, due to local circumstances, following UK guidelines does not always produce appropriate sentences for Gibraltar. These include, for example, offences of violence and sexual offences. It is these types of offences that I think should be looked into by the Commission.

645 As the hon. Gentleman will himself know, the issue of sentencing guidelines is a matter for the Hon. the Chief Justice in consultation with me. Any recommendations in this area will be communicated to the Chief Justice under section 484 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011 for him to take into regard when deciding whether or not to make any changes.

650 Additionally, it may be that the Commission will look into offences which have been part of our statute book for a number of years and which were legislated with maximum fines which did not refer to the standard scale of fines but rather to a set amount which with the passage of time has made the amount irrelevant. In undertaking an exercise in examining such offences, the Commission is able to propose new fines referring to the standard scale, which are more in keeping with the seriousness of each of these offences.

655 Finally, I am keen that the Commission be tasked with an examination of the parole system and the amount of time that persons serving custodial sentences must serve before being eligible to be released on licence. This is of particular relevance given the differences between the UK and local systems, which are not reflected in local sentencing practice.

660 In accordance with clause 4 of the Bill, it is intended that there will be initially appointed at least four Commissioners in addition to Her Majesty's Attorney General, who will be an ex-officio member, and the Minister with responsibility for Justice, who will act as Chairman. At least two of the Commissioners so appointed will be lawyers.

665 Of course, given the fact that the Bill will be debated in a few weeks' time, the hon. Gentleman will forgive me if I do not give the names of the persons it is intended to appoint as Commissioners today and I hope he will allow me to keep something for my Budget speech at the Bill's Second Reading.

670 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that response. Would the Hon. Minister agree that this is a significant undertaking in terms of the Law Commission, its constitution and also its terms of reference? It is a significant undertaking.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, I agree that it is. At the same time we are very excited about the project and the work that would be undertaken.

675 I will tell him that the persons that we have approached to be appointed as Law Commissioners have all accepted and, as I say, I will reveal those names during the course of my Budget address.

680 Hon. E J Phillips: Just one further supplementary question: how long does the Government envisage this process will take? The reason why I ask the question about a significant undertaking is when we are looking at the jurisprudence and the development of precedent in the area of sentencing and sentencing notes by the judiciary, obviously there will be some inconsistency with what has been drawn from the United Kingdom in terms of their sentencing practice. Therefore, does the Government have any idea how long this process will take to develop that sentencing practice?

685 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the answer is no on the basis that, as I explained at the beginning of my answer, I intend to consult with the Law Commissioners on which tasks we should tackle first. It may be that we decide at the first meeting to deal with discreet matters that can be dealt with expeditiously and certainly during the rest of this mandate. But as I say, it will be decided by the Law Commission at the first meeting and at that point I think we will have 690 a clear idea of what we are able to realistically achieve in whatever is left of this term of office.

Q356-358/2017

RGP investigations of fraud and dishonesty cases – Number; criminal proceedings; duration

Clerk: Question 356. The Hon. E J Phillips.

695 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state the number of fraud or dishonesty cases which are currently being investigated by the Royal Gibraltar Police?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

700 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 357 and 358.

Clerk: Question 357. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state from the number of fraud or dishonesty cases currently being investigated by the RGP how many have resulted in criminal proceedings being brought?

705

Clerk: Question 358. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state from the number of fraud or dishonesty cases currently being investigated by the RGP the duration of the investigations categorised into the following: (i) one month; (ii) three months; (iii) six months; (iv) nine months; (v) 12 months; or (vi) in excess of 12 months?

710

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

715

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Royal Gibraltar Police can confirm that there are currently 12 major fraud investigations locally in Gibraltar. This, however, does not take into account the numerous investigations that the RGP assists other jurisdictions with.

720

There are currently four major fraud cases where persons have been charged and are before the courts.

Additionally, the schedules which I am passing to the hon. Member set out the number of minor fraud and dishonesty offences which have been reported to the RGP during the last financial policing year. The second column shows the number of unresolved crimes, which means the matter is still under some form of investigation or before the courts.

725

With regard to overall crime reported to the RGP in the 2016-17 policing year and related to minor fraud and dishonesty offences, the detection rates contained in the schedule have been recorded by the RGP. A detection is recorded only once the person has been judicially dealt with by the courts and has been found to have been responsible for the crime or a police caution has been accepted.

730

The duration of current investigations by the RGP for major fraud offences is as follows: one month, one case; three months, two cases; six months, two cases; nine months, two cases; 12 months, one case; in excess of 12 months, four cases.

Mr Speaker, it is impracticable, in the sense of time consuming, for the Royal Gibraltar Police to calculate the duration of investigation for each minor fraud or dishonesty offence reported to the police.

740 Hon. E J Phillips: Just one question arising from the answer that the Hon. Minister gave, without looking at this stage at the schedule – and I will deal with that later on, if I may, Mr Speaker: insofar as the characterisation of major and minor fraud cases, can the Minister confirm that those are categorised by reference either to value and/or complexity?

745 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the RGP define a major fraud case as one assessed where the loss is in excess of £10,000. Anything under is categorised as a minor fraud or dishonesty offence. So it is a numerical value attached as to whether it is classified as one or the other.

The Speaker: Next question. We can come back to the schedules.

Q359/2017
Human Resources Manager –
Substitute post holder

750 Clerk: Question 359. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, who is performing the functions of Human Resources Manager at the GHA?

755 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, a senior official, substituting to the grade of Senior Executive Officer, presently covers this role.

760 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I understand that the former Human Resources Manager is now in the Licensing Office. Can the hon. Gentleman explain why there has been a change in personnel occupying this particular post?

765 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am sorry to say to the hon. Gentleman that his information is once again incorrect: the former Head of Human Resources at the GHA is not at the Licensing Office.

There has never been any comment in this House as to the movement of civil servants from one Department to another. They are interchangeable. Those are the rules of the Civil Service 770 and that is neither subject to a referendum in the Civil Service as to whether people move or do not move, in particular at that grade, or indeed to a debate in this House.

775 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, nobody is wanting to debate this particular issue; I just want an understanding of whether there are any particular policy reasons as to the transfer of this particular gentleman, who I know was occupying this particular post for some time, elsewhere. If I am mistaken that he has been transferred to the Licensing Department, in fact maybe it is the nomenclature that I have actually used, because I have dealt with this particular individual in relation to residency permits and indeed he has dealt with my queries in his new role very well indeed. It is the policy that I am interested in and whether there are any policy reasons for this particular change.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the policy is that civil servants are freely transferable, and that has been not just the policy – it is the terms and conditions of engagement of civil servants. We have very effective civil servants at every grade who do a very good job where they were and where they are, and so there is no policy reason for anybody being moved, because moving people from one place to another is not a matter of policy, it is a matter of people playing to their strengths and doing the jobs that the Government needs done in order to provide the public with the service that we endeavour to provide.

785 The Department, Mr Speaker, which has not changed in nomenclature under my administration but is the same Department that would have been in place when he was in Government, is the CSRO, Civil Status and Registration Office. We do not license people in Gibraltar, Mr Speaker, we register them.

ERS Facilities Manager –
Recruitment process

Clerk: Question 360. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

795 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: In connection with the appointment of the Facilities Manager or equivalent at the ERS, can the Minister for Health explain what the recruitment process has been for this post in the context of qualification and experience?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

800 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, to date there has been no appointment to this post.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can the Health Minister kindly confirm whether this post is open and will be filled, or are they looking to fill it?

805

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, all I can say really at this stage is that from my understanding there has been no movement in respect of this particular post since I became Minister for Health. The hon. Lady knows, because we have discussed it in the past, that we are in the process of integrating Elderly Residential Services into the GHA so are currently evaluating all posts relating to their effectiveness. But, as I say, since I was appointed Health Minister there has been no movement in relation to this post.

Q361/2017
Primary Care Clinic Health Visitor –
Recruitment process

Clerk: Question 361. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: In connection with the new appointment at the Primary Care Clinic for the post of Health Visitor, can the Minister for Health explain what the recruitment process has been for this position in the context of qualification and experience?
815

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, there has been no recruitment process for the post of Health Visitor as the post is currently filled with a contract nurse.
820

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, does the Health Minister consider it fair that there is another health visitor, because I understand there are two health visitors, or there should be two health visitors, at any time and that the other health visitor only got the job by an interview process presentation to panel, and is it fair that the latest recruit for this position has not had to go through the same channels?
825

Hon. N. F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I have told the hon. Lady, there has been no recruitment to the post. Therefore, at the point that there is recruitment the usual recruitment procedures will apply, and if that is what ordinarily happens, that the health visitor is requested to prepare a presentation and, I imagine, subject herself or himself to an interview, then that will be the process that will be followed at that time. But currently there is already a contract nurse occupying the post.
830
835

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can the Health Minister, or perhaps the Education Minister, give us some clarification that there is currently a junior staff nurse who was sent to the UK through the Education back door, a candidate well known to the GSLP family, and will be placed in this position in a very short time frame?
840

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady and I have discussed this in the bunk of No. 6, at the Piazza Grill downstairs, which we affectionately call the Lower House, and I have told her that her information is incorrect. She has written to me on the subject. I have had my principal secretary Mrs Cervan write to her. Clearly, unfortunately, on this occasion she seems not to trust what I have told her by email, but I can assure her that what I tell her in the Piazza Grill I do as if I were answering her in this House and I always live on the basis that all the decisions that I take will be subject to her scrutiny and to the scrutiny of hon. Members opposite.
845

Let me just tell her that her information is so incorrect that this lady to whom she alludes is not a junior nurse; she is a registered general nurse, which, as she will know, is higher than a nursing assistant, higher than an enrolled nurse. She is a tier-one nurse. So, please, let her leave this House in the knowledge that her information is skewed and it is incorrect. I have told her orally, I have told her by email, I have now said so under the Speaker's Chair and I can assure her that there is no explanation other than what I have already iterated to her orally and in writing and now under my responsibility in this House to give to her full and frank disclosure.
850

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for Health for his explanation and it is indeed true that I have been chasing this matter for many months because I and many workers within the GHA consider this situation very disconcerting. And it is true that the Minister 860 often and any time that I ask for any information can see that I have come in good faith. This is why I have been waiting for this question. But I have to say that it is precisely because I have not been satisfied with the answers given by his officials that I have felt a need to raise it. So perhaps if I can ask the question: once this candidate completes her studies and comes back, should she be given the position, perhaps the Minister for Health will indulge in answering whether all this 865 coincidence, shall we say, in placing her was in fact a fait accompli or not.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I have already told the hon. Lady that her information is incorrect: she is already a registered general nurse. The RGN is a tier-one nurse. They undergo what I understand to be an excruciating three-year degree and she completed her BSc (Hons) via 870 the School of Health Studies. So I can assure her that this is not a junior grade, this is a fully qualified tier-one professional, and at the point that the contract nurse's term of engagement expires, then, as I understand it from the supplementary information given to me, the position will be, in the usual manner, advertised internally for people to apply.

But let me also tell her, Mr Speaker, that since I have been Health Minister, I have on many 875 different occasions seen a need for our GNs or ENs in one part of the GHA and without any internal vacancy or without any other process I have asked the Director of Nursing whether we could reorganise and restructure the nursing cohorts so that one ward could do with perhaps having less particular tier nurse and move to another. In other words, what I am trying to tell her is that it would not be at all unusual if this lady who is currently undertaking the work ... because 880 she is a fully qualified nurse, at the point that the contract nurse's contract expires I am advised clinically by the Director of Nursing that she is suitable to carry out the post. But let me assure her that if she were not, she would not be placed in that position, because she knows me well enough to know that my first concern, as is the concern of every single person on this bench, is patients' safety, dignity and compassionate care by highly qualified and skilled people.

885 Thank you.

Tribute to victims of attacks in London, Manchester and Brussels and Grenfell Tower fire Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I do not mean to interfere in the debate of supplementaries, but I am afraid ... If the hon. Lady will allow me just to recess the House quickly, because we are going to pay a tribute in a moment.

If I can just ask the House to reflect as we go downstairs that this is the first meeting of the 890 House since the attack at the Manchester Arena, which incredibly is just over a month ago, the Borough Market attack, the Finsbury Mosque attack and the tragedy at Grenfell Tower.

In relation to the Manchester Arena, I think many of us could not believe that we were witnessing such a vicious terrorist attack at an event that was, in effect, attended by young people and children, some of whom were just having a great night out.

895 At Borough Market, Mr Speaker, a place where people were enjoying an evening out in that fantastic city that is London, again terrorists trying to change people's ability to enjoy freedom and liberty, especially in a city as cosmopolitan as London.

And then only two days ago, at Finsbury Mosque, a cowardly attempt to create a conflict of religions and civilisations where a man died because he was in the region of his place of worship 900 and his place of worship was attacked. Terrorists are terrorists, Mr Speaker, whatever religion they may be, whatever religion, or no religion, of the persons that they kill.

And yesterday in Brussels another attempted attack, where I am sorry to say some Gibraltarians were in the region of the attempted attack but were very lucky to be able to see that attack thwarted.

905 It is also, Mr Speaker, exactly a week since the horrific event of the Grenfell Tower, which has led us, of course, in Gibraltar to have to check quickly – as the Minister for Housing and the City Fire Brigade and all the other relevant parts of Government have done – the work that has been done on our own high-rise buildings, on which no doubt we will be saying more. We have seen such horrific scenes. Everyone watching the news I think will have been horrified and will likely 910 have turned away to see what was happening in London.

I ask the House, Mr Speaker, to show its grief, in respect and its condolences by recessing so that we may assemble downstairs for a minute's silence at 12 o'clock, where we will be joined by His Excellency the Governor and by the religious leaders of our community. So I therefore invite the House to now recess.

915

Mr Speaker: The House will now have a short recess.

The House recessed at 11.55 a.m. and resumed its sitting at 12.06 p.m.

Mr Speaker: We were dealing with supplementaries arising from Question 361. Any other supplementary?

920 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am sorry, I got cut off my line of thought a little bit. If I can just pick myself up again ... I and the Minister for Health share a very good relationship in the interests of this community and he knows very well that where I can get answers privately in order to help people I try not to go public if it is not needed.

I repeat: precisely because I was not satisfied by the answers I was being given in the GHA I 925 have continued to prod on this issue. I accept that the Minister for Health is trying to be forthcoming and from where he is standing there is nothing untoward about this appointment.
But let me just put it this way: if this candidate who has been given – by the Department of Education, it seems – a scholarship to go and train for this post which has not been filled and then this candidate comes back and then this candidate gets this post, can the Minister for 930 Health not understand why the public or even the staff at the GHA might find it disconcerting that all the factors have lined up in order for this candidate to get the job?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I think that the hon. Lady needs to be reminded of the facts. The first fact is that there has been no appointment. She needs to understand that. In the course of 935 her supplementary question she once again said that there had been an appointment as a fact.
There has been no appointment. There is currently a contract nurse that is filling that position.

I think it is unfair to this particular person to have suggested in her first supplementary to me that she has somehow got in through the back door. This is a registered general nurse and I can assure the hon. Lady that they do not gift those degrees as though they were either confetti or 940 sweets. They are hard degrees, and due to dint of her diligence and her perseverance she qualified as a registered general nurse, which is tier one of nursing. We should congratulate our local brothers and sisters who go to the UK to be able to qualify in professions that we can actually give them a job in to serve our community with compassion and with skill. (Banging on desks) She then, after, was successful in an application to do a further course of study for a 945 Specialist Community Public Health scholarship. She was not gifted it by the Department of Education. She had to apply as everyone else applies and after the application, and after due consideration by what I know are excellent professionals at the Department of Education, she was granted the right to attend John Moores University in September of last year, to be completed in summer of this year, to do the course of Specialist Community Public Health 950 Nursing.

Mr Speaker, further, it is important to note that in the GHA – and my hon. and illustrious predecessor will correct me if I am wrong – there is only one other Gibraltar health visitor. In fact, I think there are only two health visitors in the entire GHA. So we have a Gibraltar who 955 successfully completes a Bachelor of Science and becomes a top tier-one registered general nurse. She then applies again to continue and further her education and she is successful, she is given a scholarship, and all that we are saying to the hon. Lady opposite – and I have said this to her in this House and previously by email and when we meet socially – is that she has not been appointed to this. Whether or not this lady will become the health visitor in this particular post will not be determined by me, I can assure her. It will be determined on the basis of clinical 960 advice and nothing else.

So, no, Mr Speaker, there is no back door. No, Mr Speaker, there is no hanky-panky. No, Mr Speaker, this is being done entirely properly and everyone on this side of the House will applaud the fact that a Gibraltar has been successful as an RGN, has been successful to get a scholarship and we have now a second Gibraltar health visitor. And the fact that there are 965 only two health visitors out of a complement of 500 nurses has to mean, by necessity, that not many Gibaltarians want to be health visitors, so good for her! (Banging on desks)

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, will the post of health visitor, given that there is a contract nurse at the moment whose contract will be finishing in September, be opening up in 970 September?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I have told her during the course of one of my answers to her supplementary, whether or not this person is appointed to the position which is currently being filled in by the contract nurse will be determined by the Clinical Manager in consultation with 975 the Nursing Director once the position becomes available, and whether or not she is successful will solely depend on the advice that I receive from the Clinical Nurse Manager.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): If I may assist – because this is nothing new, Mr Speaker – there have been similar cases going 980 back years, and I believe beyond when we came into office, in other disciplines. The only thing is that there are so few health visitors that this may attract people's attention.

Midwives have regularly gone to study midwifery. Qualified nurses have got scholarships through the Education Department to study midwifery and have come back and have been slotted in to replace contract workers. This has been happening for years, there is nothing new, 985 so I do not understand why this particular young lady, who has gone out of her way, who wants to specialist and train and take her place rightfully within the Gibraltar Health Authority, is being singled out by the Member opposite. (Banging on desks)

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can I just say that I am by no means singling out 990 anybody. I am trying to bring to light an issue that is of concern to many GHA workers and I think that they deserve an explanation. This is not about the individual; this is about procedure and process.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I?

Mr Speaker: Yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just one question. In listening to these exchanges across the floor of the House, there appears to be an assumption on the part of the Minister in his answers 1000 that this lady, who is now qualified, or has recently qualified in the United Kingdom, is actually going to be applying for this particular post. Has the Minister received an indication that that is so, and that is why in his answers he is basically taking it as a given that this lady is going to be applying for this particular post?

1005 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the question as phrased by the hon. Lady was suggesting a back door and that is why I have answered in the way that I have. But the facts as presented to me by Mrs Cervan in the supplementary information are that this particular lady approached the Acting Director of Nursing in September 2016, that she was interested in pursuing this training, that she had been successful in obtaining the scholarship and they discussed the career opportunities and possibilities. But as I have told the hon. Lady and I will repeat to the hon. Gentleman, there has not been a determination. I promise him there has not been a determination –

Hon. D A Feetham: There is no vacancy.

1015 Hon. N F Costa: Absolutely. That is right. As I have also said, there is currently a contract nurse, but once the contract expires the vacancy will then be available, and then from within the GHA they will make a determination of who is suitable. But the point that I also made to the hon. Lady is that there are only two, so she will not be the only person who can apply: the other health visitor lady could also apply once the position becomes available.

1020 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q362/2017
St Bernard's Hospital –
Press officer

Clerk: Question 362. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1025 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is there a press officer stationed at the seventh floor of St Bernard's Hospital; and if so, what does his or her work entail?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1030 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, there is no press officer stationed at the seventh floor of St Bernard's Hospital.

Q363/2017
GHA Heads of Department –
Meeting with Minister to discuss concerns

Clerk: Question 363. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1035 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Has the Health Minister met with all Heads of Department at the GHA in order to listen to their concerns?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, yes.

1040 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, what would I tell a few of the Heads of Department who claim that they still have not met with the Health Minister and are dying for the opportunity to voice their concerns?

Hon. N F Costa: That they are not the Head of the Department.

1045 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I believe there is some sort of discrepancy here because there are a few who claim that they have not met and are Heads of Department, so perhaps ...

1050 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, perhaps to clear up any ambiguity: I have met with the Medical Director approximately 172 times, for his sins; the Public Health Director 43 times – obviously he was good in a former life and has not been subjected to me for as much as the Medical Director; Clinical Nurse Managers, around once a month; the Acting Human Resources Manager – it says here 68, but I doubt that the poor fellow had so much luck and it is probably a lot more than that; the Director of Nursing – I just met with her this morning, I see her very regularly, I would say perhaps three or four times a week; the Director of Finance, around 16 times; Ocean Views Manager, around 43; the St Bernard's Hospital Operations Manager, around 11; the PCC Manager, truly for her sins around 172 or 173 times; and the I&T Director, around 12 or 13 times.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q364/2017

Patients requiring mental health assistance – Out-of-hours arrangements

1060 Clerk: Question 364. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What 24-hour arrangements are there in place for patients who require mental assistance, especially on weekends?

1065 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1070 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, at present, there is assistance from the Community Mental Health Team during working hours and an on-call crisis team – composed of a consultant psychiatrist, a mental welfare officer, and a registered mental health charge nurse – who deal with emergencies, assessments and admissions out of normal working hours.

1075 Mr Speaker, I am delighted to report today in this House for the first time that as from yesterday the Community Mental Health Team services will be further enhanced by the introduction of an outreach support component for community patients. The service will be provided by experienced qualified nurses who will be on call after normal working hours, including on weekends. The main aim is to offer an extra tier of support for our community patients outside normal working hours. Although still at embryonic stages, the new extension to the service will see the phased introduction of a number of new initiatives aimed exclusively at improving the quality of life for patients and carers in the community and will continue to develop as the services grow.

1080 It is important, Mr Speaker, I think, at this point to highlight the answer that I gave to the Hon. Mr Clinton that the re-admission rate is at 2.8%, and we hope that with this new community outreach service support we will be able to do even better on that figure.

1085 It is important to note that, although a high standard of care is presently on offer, the new component will ensure that a more robust support network is available to patients after hours and will be a welcome addition to the existing on-call team. Some of the services that will be available will include: a nursing after-hours on-call service from five o'clock in the afternoon until eight in the morning, seven days a week, including Bank Holidays; improved discharge packages 1090 incorporating more supportive structures for people moving back into the community from Ocean Views; improved supervision and management of patient caseloads that require more input or monitoring; increase in frequency of home visits and checking compliance with medication.

Following the necessary training, a mental health support line will be available to our known patients/carers incorporating a combination of phone and physical presence and, where 1095 necessary, linking with the excellent team at Club House to offer advice and support.

It is anticipated that this improved approach will have a positive impact in reducing the need for admissions or length of stay in hospital.

Mr Speaker, by way of additional information I think it is also important to say that the Hon.
the Deputy Chief Minister, the Hon. the Chief Minister and I are very much in close discussions 1100 with Sams Gibraltar and we are looking to work closely with them to reinforce and add resilience to the additional community outreach programme that I have just announced today in the House.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I congratulate the Minister and the Government 1105 for such a well thought-out package and I thank him as a citizen. I think it will benefit many, many people.

Can I ask when can we expect this service to be advertised and the number known to the public. I personally receive many desperate pleas from people, and obviously I am not equipped to deal with mental health issues so I am looking forward to the day when this will actually be up 1110 and running. Can we have some type of timeframe, please?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker. The process that we followed was that we opened internal vacancies for three enrolled nurses who have got specialised training in mental health, and those three enrolled nurses are now currently undergoing extra training to make sure that when 1115 they receive calls, and indeed when they make house visits, which for me was one of the most important parts and components of the new strategy, that nurses are able to visit persons who are in the community who have been discharged from Ocean Views and they are able to check on medication and of course provide any other medical assistance that an enrolled nurse can provide ... We should be in a position to, the training having been completed in time, to fully roll 1120 out this programme by before the Parliament recesses for summer. So hopefully at some point in July.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

1125 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, may I add my congratulations to the Minister, along with those of the hon. Lady. As this House will recall, we both debated or brought separate motions to this House in relation to the continuity of care for mental health patients in the community and that more should be done to help the most vulnerable in the community.

May I ask the Minister whether this initiative, which is obviously much welcomed on this side 1130 of the House, was as a result of any review that was undertaken; and if so, would the Minister be willing to publish details of that review?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman is asking me whether it was part of a formal review, no it was not. When I became Minister for Health, one of the things that struck 1135 me was that there should be a more robust and resilient community process where we ensured

1140 that persons who have been discharged from Ocean Views do not return to Ocean Views. And although there has already been, as I said before, a psychiatrist, a community mental welfare officer and a nurse that deal with after-hours support, in our estimation it was sound but not enough. Therefore, that is why we rolled it out, and I have and congratulate Kay and Chris Chipolina who have provided us with the clinical advice on that after having also received advice from Mr Manolo Peralta and from other members of the Community Mental Health team that this additional level of support will be sufficient. But of course, like with any new pilot programme that the Government deploys, we will have to wait and see whether three enrolled nurses are enough or whether that needs to be considered at an additional time.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for the additional information. Just one final question: will an element of this service be available to the families of service users who may have concerns?

1150

Hon. N F Costa: Absolutely, Mr Speaker, yes.

HOUSING AND EQUALITY

Q365/2017

Government dwellings – Number vacant and/or derelict

Clerk: Question 365. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1155

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, following on from the answer provided to Question 288/2017, is the Minister for Housing now in a position to say how many Government dwellings are currently vacant and/or derelict in Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

1160

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, as previously advised, we are undertaking an in-depth study of all properties and this is ongoing.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, does the Minister have an indication by when this study will be completed – to avoid me having to make the question unnecessarily if I have a rough estimate?

1165

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I envisage that it will be ready now after the summer. However, the hon. Gentleman may recall that he has asked me a separate question about vacant flats and there are figures, in that it is a written question so he will get it in a written answer. But the exercise that we are undertaking is in respect of flats that are derelict and may no longer be, or we may decide are beyond economical repair.

Q366-367/2017

Laguna, Glacis and Moorish Castle Estates – Completed and pending refurbishment works

1170 Clerk: Question 366. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes. Can the Minister for Housing provide an updated list of all refurbishment works already fully completed, with details of commencement and completion dates and naming the individual blocks of flats where concerned, within the following rental housing estates: (a) Laguna Estate; (b) Glacis Estate; and (c) Moorish Castle Estate?
1175

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 367.
1180

Clerk: Question 367. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide revised and updated estimated completion dates of pending refurbishment works, naming the individual blocks of flats where concerned, still being undertaken at the following rental housing estates: (a) Laguna Estate; (b) Glacis Estate; and (c) Moorish Castle Estate?
1185

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.
1190

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, in answer to Question 366/2017, the following refurbishment works have been completed.

For part (a): Rodney House, September 2013 to November 2016.

For part (b): George Jeger House, commencement September 2013, completion December 2016; Referendum House, September 2013 to December 2016; Constitution House, February 2014 to December 2016; Brother O'Brien, June 2014 to December 2016; Portmore House, June 2014 to December 2016; Gustavo Bacarisa House, August 2014 to November 2016; Ironside House, November 2014 to November 2016.
1195

For part (c): Calpe House, September 2014 to November 2016; Castle House, September 2013 to April 2017; Ince House, November 2013 to April 2017; Wall House, February 2014 to April 2017; and Key House, September 2014 to May 2017.
1200

In answer to Question 367, the following are the target dates for completion of the refurbishment of these estates. Estate (a) Laguna, December 2018; Estate (b) Glacis, December 2017; Estate (c) Moorish Castle, December 2017.
1205

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, the Minister has given me comprehensive information. However, in respect of Question 367 I did ask for the naming of the individual blocks of flats, where concerned. It is so that when I do meet with tenants from those estates I can then home in and at least we know for certain that a block that is still on the list of pending refurbishment works to be completed is not one that has been completed and it allows the tenants to be in a better position to know if works are still to be carried out.
1210

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the answer is phrased in the way that it is because we have moved on from the initial way in which we were phasing the works at the estates. As you can see from the list of blocks that I have highlighted in Question 366, a lot of these blocks have been completed, so we are no longer working within the estates in phases as we were. The way we are working towards completion is works across the board in terms of all the blocks, so essentially we have the same completion date for everything that remains in the refurbishment process.
1215

1220

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I think I understand what the Minister is saying, but if I give you one quick example. In Question 366 for Glacis Estate the Minister referred to Brother O'Brien House. In Question 367, by not homing in or not being able to provide details of the block, the residents of Brother O'Brien are still uncertain if any internal refurbishments have to be carried out – or is everything now ticked off and therefore no further works are to happen? Were that to be the case, the tenants may wish to get together and plead with Government that the works have not quite gone as far as they were led to believe. This is why I thought this information could help to perhaps calm their fears.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, insofar as Brother O'Brien, and indeed all the other blocks that are listed in part (b) of my answer to Question 366, all of these are now completed. We are at a stage where we have completion but we are finalising on the snagging of the completion works, The answer to that is that we have completion subject to snagging.

1235

Hon. E J Reyes: I will leave it at that, Mr Speaker, and if need be after the summer recess I can then clarify any further points with the Minister.

Q368/2017

Government rental housing estates – Intended new refurbishment works

Clerk: Question 368. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1240

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of what new refurbishment works it intends to carry out at any Government rental housing estates in the immediate future?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

1245

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, we will continue to invest in the refurbishment of all Government housing estates and there is a programme of works to ensure that estates continue to be refurbished as well as maintained. More details will be announced in respect of the estates to be tackled and dates when the works will be undertaken.

Q369/2017

Alameda House – Works re fresh water system

Clerk: Question 369. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1250

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of remedial works undertaken and/or works still to be undertaken or completed, to the supply of the fresh water system at Alameda House in Alameda Estate, indicating if they are of a permanent or temporary arrangement?

1255

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

1260 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the fresh water supply at Alameda Estate was provisionally rerouted externally via corridors as an emergency measure. The provisional installation is currently being secured within the inner side of the common areas to afford protection against extreme weather conditions, vandalism and accidental damage until a permanent re-routing solution is implemented as part of the forthcoming external refurbishment of Alameda House.

1265 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am grateful and I am certain that the tenants will welcome that eventually a more permanent thing will happen. Any possibility of an indication of the dates when these external works would take place at Alameda House that will finalise the works that unfortunately had to be taken to the fresh water supply system at Alameda House?

1270 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, in respect of Alameda House we are on track with our refurbishment plan and it is envisaged that the external refurbishment of Alameda House will commence in January 2018.

Q370/2017

Homeless and drug-dependent ex-offenders –
Access to Government accommodation

Clerk: Question 370. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1275 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state what arrangements are in place for those who have completed a custodial sentence, have no place of residence and have drug dependency issues to immediately access Government accommodation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

1280 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, arrangements have been established between the Housing Department and all partner bodies, where cases of people falling under this category are discussed on a multi-agency basis and suitable accommodation is identified in accordance with Government allocation policies.

1285 Hon. E J Phillips: Just one further question arising from that: does that mean, Minister, that as soon as someone is released from prison having completed that custodial sentence, that arrangements are either put in place before they simply make their application for urgent rehousing or housing? How does it work on a practical level for those people to access accommodation in those circumstances? I am grateful.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, under the new arrangements we do not wait for someone to have completed their sentence. This is where the Housing Department works with the prison authorities and social workers, probation officers or drugs workers, depending on the offender, to assist them in their reintegration prior to release. They will assist them in making an application.

1295

What I have said is that their application will be considered in accordance with the housing allocation policies. That is not to say that someone will automatically be rehoused upon release but that their application will be considered in line with the policy. If in consideration in line with the policy it means that the person meets the criteria for rehousing, they will be rehoused but they will be rehoused because they meet the housing criteria as opposed to an automatic rehousing because they have been in prison. I hope that is clear.

1300

1305 Hon. E J Phillips: It is, yes. One further question: insofar as immediate homelessness is concerned, I assume that criteria speeds up their process.

1310 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: It will be treated in the same way as a case of homelessness is concerned. It is not an automatic case that someone who finishes serving a custodial sentence will be rehoused by the Housing Department; that person may have a house to go back to. If that person is likely to be vulnerable or at risk because they are homeless, then the case will be treated as a homeless case in the same way that other cases are treated and they will be given priority accordingly.

Thank you.

Q371/2017
Assisted living flats –
Allocation to old age pensioners

1315 Clerk: Question 371. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What is this Government's policy in relation to allocating assisted living flats to old age pensioners?

1320 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, Government does not have assisted living flats for old age pensioners.

1325 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, firstly, can I just clarify the term I am using so that the Minister understands: the ones like Sea Master Lodge and Charles Bruzon House – what are they known as?

1330 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, those are flats that are purpose built for the elderly. They are not assisted living flats. Assisted living flats are something completely different and it is something that ... In the UK, for example, assisted living flats for the elderly would have live-in assistance or some kind of care or assistance provided to them as part of the package of the flat.

1335 The flats that we have are flats for elderly people, for pensioners, and the two latest blocks that our Government has built and which we inaugurated recently have been specifically purposely built and are completely accessible for the needs of elderly people to help them live independently in the community. If these are the flats that the hon. Lady is referring to, flats such as Charles Bruzon House and Sea Master Lodge etc., then the criteria used for allocating these is primarily for people who are elderly and are on the medical list. Allocations are also made to the people who may be on the housing exchange list. Those are the two primary ways of people being rehoused in these flats that are purposely built for the elderly.

1340 Hon. E J Reyes: May I, Mr Speaker? In connection with that, the hon. Lady has just explained the criteria and the priority being given to those on the medical list and so on, which I think is a well-established norm. However, Mr Speaker, could the Minister enlighten us: is it correct that there are those elderly people on the medical list who have been led to believe that because that they will not be eligible to move into these flats? Can the Minister confirm or deny that, so that we can allay certain fears?

1350 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, that is not the case at all, because those individuals are entitled to be applicants and, as applicants, if they are then considered to be on the medical list they will be on the medical list just like anybody else who is a current housing tenant. So it is not to say that only people who are housing tenants and on the exchange list are eligible for the elderly flats. Anybody on the waiting list, depending on where they are at this stage, would be allocated one of these flats, and indeed we have allocated many of these. So that is absolutely 1355 not true.

1360 Hon. E J Reyes: I thank her, Mr Speaker. I know what elderly people are like... I already fall into the category of those of us who are on the 60-plus! I am not saying that her Ministry or Department are necessarily incorrect in the information they give, but elderly people can sometimes easily misunderstand. More than one person came out from meetings at the Housing Ministry saying, 'Yes, but we've been told there's a huge disadvantage because we don't have a Government flat to return back to the stock,' something that I know previous Governments have also at times had to use that priority – if an elderly couple, for example, could be occupying a 4RKB and are on the medical list and would benefit from moving down to the 2RKB in, for 1365 example, the beautiful Charles Bruzon House, and release a 4RKB. But certainly it is good news to hear that because someone is renting from the private sector it does not necessarily exclude them from the list and therefore if there are still any misunderstandings I will take it up personally with the lady, like we do on a couple of occasions.

1370 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, the supplementary question was as to eligibility and I can confirm that as long as people meet the criteria to be an applicant for housing – and someone who is in a private rental would meet the criteria – then there is no reason why they cannot be on there. The rules are very clear and I know that the Department explains it very clearly.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

1380 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: My supplementary was pretty much along the same lines as the hon. Gentleman on my right, in that I have had a couple of complaints from constituents who feel that because they are not on the Government tenants list and are renting privately ... old age pensioners want to be eligible to rent these old age pensioner flats – we are not calling it assisted living – so I will go back and tell them that they are not prejudiced in any way and they have the same rights as any existing Government tenant. Is that right?

1385 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes. What the Department does when they consider allocation, because there is a difference between eligibility and your entitlement to be on the list and how then your application is considered and the urgency and the weight that you are given when allocation ... At the time of allocation we look at who at that point on the list will need it most. So, if someone is on the waiting list and is in a private rental but may be particularly old or frail
1390 and living in a flat that is extremely inaccessible for them, which means that they have a very poor quality of life, then that person would have priority over somebody who may be a bit fitter or a bit healthier and living in Government rental accommodation, notwithstanding the fact that they would release rental accommodation. What the Department does is they do a balancing exercise where they try and assist all the applicants on the list and also try to look at everything 1395 in the round. So it all depends on the individual and the individual's circumstances and the urgent need of the individual to be re-accommodated.

Q372/2017

Government rental housing –
Policy re arrears agreements and parking spaces

Clerk: Question 372. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1400 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What is the Government's policy in relation to Government housing rental tenants who have arrears agreements and parking spots?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

1405 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, household tenancies and parking spaces are not connected. As such, anyone with an agreement for payment of arrears of rent enters into an agreement in respect of the flat only. Anyone who is in arrears of rent is not entitled to additional benefits, and this includes a parking permit or a licence to park in the estate.

1410 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, would the Minister for Housing understand that to those tenants who are paying their arrears – many of whom have financial issues, which is what got them there in the first place – this policy to them is connected in the sense that it does punish those with arrears agreements because their parking spot gets removed and perhaps they depend on their cars to maybe take their kids to school or do the shopping, or perhaps it is 1415 a very important part of their everyday living? Considering that they have come into an arrears agreement, and especially for those, I suspect, most of whom are keeping to it, they feel like this parking spot removal is a punishment to them and to their lives. Would the Minister for Housing be willing to review such a policy?

1420 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the starting point is that we are talking about people who do not pay their rent but still can afford a car – and of course the petrol and the insurance and all the inherent expenses of the vehicle.

I have to say, Mr Speaker, that there have been a couple of estates where the parking permits have expired in the last couple of months – there have been four estates that come to 1425 mind – and since we have written to people informing them of the Government policy that anybody in arrears of rent is not entitled to any extras ... So it is not just the parking, the ability to avail themselves of a parking space that we are not making available anymore; it is the same as people who are not entitled to have a berth and to have certain other additions that go beyond the protection of being in your dwelling.

1430 Mr Speaker, the number of people who have automatically come in and paid lump sums have been people who have not paid rent in 10 years, 15 years, who, for the sake of not losing their parking, have paid the arrears. So I do not agree with the hon. Lady's premise that people cannot afford to pay their rent and that is why they are in arrears. In fact, some of the anecdotal information that I have from my office, who are meeting people who are coming in and clearing 1435 their arrears completely in the last couple of months when we started dealing with estates where parking has expired ... There was a particular gentleman who came in and said, 'No, I cannot pay – let me pay you half of my arrears,' which was a few thousand pounds, 'but I'll pay you the other thousand in a few months' time because I'm going on a cruise next week,' and he said, 'Well, sorry, your parking space, your permit, expires in the next two weeks – you can either pay it in full or you will find yourself clamped when you come back from your cruise,' and 1440 within 24 hours the full lump sum was paid. Someone else paid a lump sum, Mr Speaker, incredibly enough, of £19,000 so as not to lose their parking space.

So, Mr Speaker, all cases are considered on a case-by-case basis – (Mr Speaker: Que caradura tienen la gente!) (Laughter and banging on desks) Precisely, Mr Speaker, and it is because we 1445 recognise ... What we do is we distinguish between la gente con la caradura and people who genuinely cannot pay, and it is the caraduras who are not allowed the parking permit. We do look at people as individual cases and there have been exceptions made for people who we know are in genuine hardship or people who may have a disability and they therefore need their parking. But what we will not do it for, Mr Speaker, is for the caradura.

1450 Only recently – another anecdote, Mr Speaker – someone asked for us to make an exception to the parking permit. When we looked at the household and the income, there were four people in the household in employment – all of them were in employment. Most of them were earning around £20,000 and the highest earner was earning £40,000, and the car for which they were seeking the permit and they were asking us not to enforce the policy for the parking was a brand new Mercedes Benz. So, yes, cara dura indeed.

1455 But it is for the caraduras, Mr Speaker, to whom this policy applies, and for the people who are in circumstances of genuine hardship to whom it does not apply, and it is because of the application of that policy that we have for the first time made tremendous in-roads in the recovery of arrears.

1460 Several Members: Hear, Hear. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Next question.

CULTURE, THE MEDIA, YOUTH AND SPORT

Q373/2017

Ince's Hall mural – Cost and selection of artist

Clerk: Question 373. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1465 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise what was the cost of the graffiti mural painted on the northern side of Ince's Hall and what tender process was followed in selecting the artist?

1470 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the total cost of the graffiti mural was £19,881.34. The acclaimed and highly regarded street artist Ben Eine directly approached the Government to undertake the job.

1475 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I then correctly understand the Minister, by the artist directly approaching the Government obviously there was no tender process. Can I ask the Minister: £20,000 to paint the side of the building is not an inconsequential sum – how was the artistic merit of the proposal decided upon?

1480 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member asks first of all about the tender. If someone wants to commission a Dalí or a Picasso or a Christian Hook, you do not go out to tender. That is the first thing. (Interjection) Christian Hook, yes, that is why I had to put him in! You could not acquire a Picasso or a Dalí, because they are both dead, Mr Speaker! But anyway, the point is that if you want somebody who is a brilliant artist to do a job, you tell them, 'Here's the wall: do your art,' which is the second point that the hon. Member actually made. We do not tell the artist what they have to do. It is their skill, their profession, to do what they need to do with the 1490 wall, and that was the case with Ben Eine, who is, like I said, an acclaimed street artist who wanted to do a street art. We gave him the opportunity of using that wall and he produced the magnificent, fantastic painting which is there.

1495 This is a subjective thing, therefore people might like the wall in grey and I might like it in orange, and the artist believed at the time that what he painted on the wall was what should have been done. So there might be people who like it or there might be people who do not like it. All I can tell you is that it is attracting loads of tourists taking photographs because of the magnificent painting on that wall.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, indeed, art is in the eye of the beholder, but can I ask the Minister how was the decision made: is there an art appreciation committee within the Culture Agency that decides these things, or was it purely a subjective matter for himself?

1500 And I may ask one further question: how was it that the artist approached the Gibraltar Government? What are his connections to Gibraltar? And are there any plans for him to do any further such murals in Gibraltar?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the artist approached me through his girlfriend, who is a Gibraltarian. This is a person of international renown as a street artist and he said, through that link to the Government of Gibraltar, 'I would be delighted to paint a wall in Gibraltar.'

1505 This gentleman has a huge following. People travel to see his art around the world. He has just finished doing something in Buenos Aires; he has done a number of things in Spain and in the United Kingdom. He was very well connected to somebody the hon. Gentleman may have heard of: Banksy. He painted with Banksy for many years and Ben was very closely linked to Banksy.

1510 This was not a question of the Government deciding it wanted street art of that form; this was an artist who approached the Government and said, 'I would be delighted if you would give me a wall to paint my street art,' and depending on what wall a different sort of thing would have been painted. The wall proposed by the Government was Ince's Hall, which is related to entertainment. So, in his view, because he is the artist, he thought it made sense to paint 'That's Entertainment'. I think it is a magnificent depiction of what has gone on in that building for many hundreds of years and a way of making that building modern for a while. But, as Mr Eine himself said on television, all he has put on the building is paint. It can be taken down when the time comes to do a full refurbishment of that building in the style of the Gibraltar International Bank, which refurbishment Minister Isola led on and did a magnificent job on.

1515 I do not know whether there is such a thing as an arbiter of taste, but most artists decide for themselves what it is that they put on whatever they are invited to use as canvas. Frankly, from my point of view, as somebody who has no understanding of art and is just a layman who sees things that he likes and things that he does not like – and some of the things I like art critics think are terrible, and some of the things I dislike art critics think are magnificent – I happen to think this is magnificent because it really shows in a piece of modern street art what the Ince's Hall is all about. It is smarter than it was and I would like to use this opportunity to thank Ben Eine for having come to Gibraltar, for having decorated a historic building like the Ince's Hall as he has. It is not something that is going to be there forever, because the building will be refurbished in the style of the whole of that area in some appropriate moment, but I am delighted that we have been able to have Ben Eine come to Gibraltar. He volunteered to do so; we have really just paid for paint, accommodation and for him to come – at his request.

1525 1530 1535 I think that part of Gibraltar is smarter and it is more fun as a result of this magnificent piece of street art. Is my view shared? Well, Mr Speaker, it might not even be shared on this side of the House, it may not be shared on that side of the House, it may be shared by many outside, it may be shared by very few outside. Beauty is in the eye of the beholder and I reckon that if we

1540 had painted it beige, the hon. Gentleman opposite might have loved it. But look, at the end of the day, that's entertainment! (Laughter and banging on desks)

1545 Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Chief Minister's intervention and his acceptance of responsibility for the choice of artist and in fact the graffiti that was painted on that wall. I hasten to add that I have always been a great admirer of art, albeit a lot of the art now, in the form of Christian Hook, I cannot afford, alas.

1550 If I may ask the Chief Minister just one supplementary, then, on this subject: is there any intention of any further art to be done in Gibraltar by this particular artist, or indeed any other street artist? And, as regards the choice of colour of beige, no, perhaps white would have been better – at a much lower cost of £5,000 plus waterproofing – but never mind.

1555 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I had a magnificent choice before me. The hon. Gentleman has said that I have taken responsibility for the choice of artist. I had an absolutely magnificent choice of artist: I had one artist who volunteered. So, given that choice, I felt duty bound to give it to him, given that nobody else had volunteered to give us of their time. Nobody else of international renown, or indeed at all, had offered to give us of their time to create this street art at cost. So I will take full responsibility for making the choice out of the one that was available.

1560 Mr Speaker, there is a programme of street art – which is not my responsibility, it is the responsibility of the Ministry for Culture in close liaison with the Ministry for the Environment – which will shortly be rolled out. I do not think we should be prompted to make an announcement about that now, because I think it is an exciting opportunity, which many other cities are taking, which does not involve much painting in beige or in white, which the hon. Gentleman would obviously quite love. I think that modernising a city at the same time as being militant in the preservation of its heritage is what the future is all about, and that is what this Government is all about.

1565 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q374-375/2017
Gibraltar Football Association –
Arrangements re purchase or lease of facilities

Clerk: Question 374. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1570 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sport furnish this House with full details pertaining to the sale/lease of any sporting or other facilities, such as at the Victoria Stadium, to the Gibraltar Football Association?

1575 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 375.

1580 Clerk: Question 375. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sport furnish this House with full details of its intentions, if any, to re-provide or re-site sporting facilities which may be lost for public use at the Victoria Stadium/Bayside Sports Complex as a result of the arrangements it has entered into with the Gibraltar Football Association?

1585

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, both these questions will be answered in detail in the Budget statement which I will be delivering early next week.

Hon. E J Reyes: I understand that, Mr Speaker; however, it will not allow me to pose any supplementary questions should they, in the information that has come forward, arise. I do not know ... Perhaps your guidance ...?

1595

Mr Speaker: Unless the Hon. Mr Reyes speaks before ... If you speak before the Minister, then you have a problem. If you speak after the Minister you will be able, in your own contribution, to raise matters which you are interested in and which he may or may not have covered. In any case, given that you have put these questions and they have not been totally answered, I will be liberal and I would hope the Minister would also be liberal if you ask him to give way and to answer any specific matters that you may deal with.

1600

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Mr Speaker, if I can be of assistance to the House, I am intending to inform the House that we should be taking the Budget debate to the Appropriation Bill on Monday.

1605

The Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister has a proposed draft order of speeches that we will circulate, so that we can agree, as usual, the order of our interventions, and the hon. Gentleman will be pleased to see that he will be speaking in our proposal, just like last year, after the hon. Gentleman – in fact, I think four or five after the hon. Gentleman – so he will have an opportunity to tailor his congratulations to the hon. Gentleman for the announcements he will make in good time.

1610

Mr Speaker: So, if the Hon. Mr Reyes deals in your contribution with issues that you would have tackled in supplementaries, then I would give the Minister the opportunity, if you give way to him, to deal with those matters.

1615

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I think we will do that and I think it is implied in what you are saying that, if as a result of all that and digesting on the answers, should I then need to come up with a formal oral question or whatever, say in the September session, I am sure Mr Speaker will be liberal enough to allow me to pose a question despite not being in the six months' time span because of what is happening. With that assurance, then, I am satisfied with what has been explained, Mr Speaker.

1620

Mr Speaker: Right, we now recess until three this afternoon.

The House recessed at 1.03 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3 p.m.

Q376/2017

Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority – Assistant Resources Manager

Clerk: We continue with answers to Oral Questions.

We recommence at Question 376 and the questioner is the Hon. E J Reyes.

5 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, further to the answer provided to Question 227/2017, can the Minister for Sport update this House in respect of the outcome relating to the selection of the Assistant Resources Manager, which was a grade 4 post, within the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority?

10 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the selection process was finalised and a successful candidate identified. This individual started her new post on 1st June 2017.

15

Hon. E J Reyes: And, Mr Speaker, does it follow from there that there are now any vacancies arising within the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, or was the successful applicant an external applicant?

20

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, the successful candidate is not an external candidate but from within, and now it will probably go down the line, as it usually does. But I must emphasise that the GSLA has not yet agreed as to the money levels as it goes down the line. Because this is a managerial post, people from within the organisation will probably apply for these posts and then we will need to review the whole of the organisation at the bottom part.

25

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can I deduce from that ... In previous answers some months ago the Minister did mention that they were holding discussions with the staff side representatives and so on. Is that process still ongoing and needs to be updated now in light of this vacancy, or is the process now at its final conclusion stages?

30

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, it is still ongoing.

Q377/2017
GSLA Swimming Pool Complex –
Lockers

35 Clerk: Question 377. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sport provide details of how many lockers are installed at the GSLA swimming pools and, of these, how many are (a) available for public use, (b) currently awaiting repairs, (c) assigned for use to GASA members or any other entity, and all this, together with details of terms and conditions for their use?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, at present there are: (a) 152 lockers available for public use at the GSLA swimming pool; 110 of these are located in the accessible pool and 42 in the 25-metre pool. (b) Only five of these lockers are awaiting repairs and replacement locker units ordered; these are located in the accessible pool. (c) No lockers are assigned for use to any entity.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can I ask the Hon. Minister to please have a look at the situation there, because I am told by members of the public who go there that although the number of lockers was well in excess of 100, such as the Minister has confirmed today, that very few of them were actually available for use, hence leading to a sort of a hypothesis that they are either awaiting repairs – which has now been confirmed as being only five and that none have been assigned to GASA and others. It seems to be the same lockers that are constantly, from opening time to closing time, unavailable, so something has gone wrong somewhere in the system. I do not know if the Minister knows any further information at present or if he can commit himself to look into this as soon as possible.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, in relation to the lockers, the information that I have here, obviously pre-empting the hon. Member's supplementary, is that there seem to be people of the public who keep the key. Therefore the problem is being looked at. People get the key and take it home with them, and the problem obviously is that then if you have 100 lockers of which 90 people open the locker and take the key, the availability is going to be only 10.

I can tell you that the management is actively looking at a way in which people are not able to take the key and also telling the people to bring back the key. Another thing that they do is they try and take the actual lock off and put new locks in, but again the same thing happens, so it is a problem that the management is trying to sort out due to the people taking the keys home.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am very grateful for that part of the answer. Yes, it does lead to ???55.56 which is why I had ended my question saying 'together with details of terms and conditions for their use'. I am sure one can deduct from there that the terms and conditions are that it is for day use only and the keys will be returned.

Rather than a question, I want to end up with an assurance to the Minister that he can count on my full co-operation so that we can eradicate this abuse by what is today's phrase, the caraduras, once and for all.

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, thank you, Mr Speaker, and thank you to the hon. Member for that.

80 We were trying to solve the problem and one solution would have been to pay a pound, for which you keep the key and then you get your pound back, but obviously people were leaving the pound there and keeping the whole locker for themselves.

I thank the hon. Member for stating that he will help and we will try and eradicate the caraduras.

85

Hon. E J Reyes: And I dare to say even Mr Speaker will join us.

Q378/2017

GSLA Swimming Pool Complex –
Solar panels

Clerk: Question 378. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state the total cost to the taxpayer of the 90 installation and maintenance of the solar panels at the GASA pool?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the GASA
95 pool has been under the GSLA management and known as the GSLA Swimming Pool Complex since April 2012.

The total cost to the taxpayer for the installation of the solar panel system at the GSLA pool complex was £683,250.43.

The maintenance contract for both systems is £68,000 per annum.

100 The contract is held by Green Resources and entered into as part of the installation package. This is up for renewal in 2018.

It is important to note that since the swimming pool complex has been utilising solar panels our cumulative savings on the electricity bills are currently at £270,339.13, with fuel savings of approximately £75,000 per annum. Therefore the total saving to date is approximately 105 £720,000. Not only has it surpassed the capital expenditure, but it is also producing surplus electricity which is fed back into the grid.

I have not got anything prepared here, because the hon. Member should also know that from the £683,000-odd that I told him, approximately £290,000 of that was EU funding.

110 Mr Speaker: Next question.

INFRASTRUCTURE AND PLANNING

Q379/2017

Illegal parking –
Intention to increase fines

Clerk: Question 379. The Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I tabled this question some time ago, so if I may just rephrase it slightly because it is not quite in date anymore. (Interjection) Yes, I appreciate that,

115 and so the answer should be the same; I just need to rephrase the question ever so slightly to make it make sense. So, I would ask...

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): As a matter of procedural propriety, I do not think it is 120 possible for the hon. Gentleman to change the question that is on the Order Paper. I appreciate that he may wish to seek to make it relevant, but I think for the purposes of the record he must read the question as it is on the Order Paper and then perhaps as a supplementary he may wish to clarify, as he has, matters that relate to the updating of the question.

Mr Speaker: Ask the same question.

125 Hon. T N Hammond: I am happy to ask the question as written; it does not require much explanation, Mr Speaker.

Can Government say if it is the intention to raise the fine for illegal parking on 1st April; and if so, by how much?

130 I just wish to clarify that the intention is 'Was it raised last 1st April?' This is not a reference to the next 1st April.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman needs to know that the record of 135 Hansard for Question Time is produced with the question read out and then the answer. So everything he has said will not likely be in the Hansard. If he wants it to be in the Hansard – I am not saying it should not be in the Hansard; there is no difficulty with that – he has to do it in the context of his first supplementary because the Hansard of questions and answers is question-answer, and then the supplementary can be the clarification. Otherwise, what he has said today just now, what you want on the record – and I think it is absolutely right it should be on the 140 record – will not be on the record.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, fines for illegal parking were not raised on 1st April 2017.

Mr Speaker: Now withdraw that.

145 Hon. T N Hammond: I thank the Chief Minister for his advice. Just to clarify, the question was lodged before 1st April and hence it was written in a different tense to the one that is now relevant.

Q380-381/2017
Bus Company –
Bus drivers working on supply

Clerk: Question 380. The Hon. T N Hammond.

150 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister say how many bus drivers work on supply to the Bus Company and for how long they have been on supply?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

155 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 381.

Clerk: Question 381. The Hon. T N Hammond.

160 Hon. T N Hammond: Do supply drivers for the Bus Company enjoy the same terms and conditions as full-time drivers; and if not, can the Minister explain how these terms and conditions differ?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

165

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, as far as our Bus Company goes, three drivers have been taken on as from 14th June 2017 to work on a supply basis. These drivers are only called as and when required and do not enjoy any of the terms and conditions of a full-time driver.

170 At present there are no other drivers on the payroll that work on a supply basis.

Q382/2017

Sustainable Transport, Traffic and Parking Plan – Environmental zones

Clerk: Question 382. The Hon. T N Hammond.

175 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister clarify what special provisions will apply within the environmental zones as described in the Sustainable Transport, Traffic and Parking Plan?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

180 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the environmental zone should not be considered as a standalone project but rather be viewed as an overall objective of the STTP which is to improve the current traffic, transport and parking situation and encourage behavioural change and a shift in modal transport towards more sustainable alternatives which will be better for the environment.

185 An environmental zone can be considered as a low-emission zone aimed at improving air quality. The manner in which this can be achieved is by the control of parking within the zone and also by improving traffic flow within these areas so as to reduce congestion.

The control of parking looks at, where possible, relocating parking outside the zone so as to encourage less vehicles to enter the zone, coupled with the redesignation of parking facilities to accommodate essential parking by the introduction of pay and display parking.

190 Other measures which are being considered include making access to areas within environmental zones limited to commercial vehicles and/or permit holders only. An example of this is what has recently been introduced in Main Street whereby access has been restricted to fewer hours and special loading and unloading hubs have been provided within the close proximity of Main Street, thus reducing vehicular movement in the centre of town.

195 In addition to these measures, the environmental zones will be complemented by improved pedestrian access to the zone and by enhancing public transport links.

Q383/2017
Governor's Lane –
Measures to curb speeding

Clerk: Question 383. The Hon. E J Phillips.

200 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm what further specific traffic measures it will introduce in the area of Governor's Lane, where the book shop is located, to curb speeding?

205 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, at this moment in time the Government cannot be categorical on what traffic measures will be introduced to curb speeding at Governor's Lane. The width of this road and the restricted access by the Gibraltar Book Shop makes identifying a solution challenging when trying to balance pedestrian safety and continued traffic flow in the area.

210 As part of the STTPP a number of options are currently being developed for consideration by the Traffic Commission and once a full assessment has been completed a decision will be taken.

Q384/2017
Redibike scheme –
Upkeep and maintenance

Clerk: Question 384. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

215 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Who is responsible for the upkeep and maintenance of the RediBike scheme?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

220 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the upkeep and maintenance of the RediBike scheme is carried out under contract by Gibraltar Parking Management Services Limited.

225 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, could the Hon. Minister say whether this contract went out to tender?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the actual cost involved in the Redibike scheme was actually funded by a private company; it was done with Gib Oil. The actual part of the maintenance was in addition to the contract held by the company that does parking management, so it is part of the same company as the PMOs. So the contractor that deals with parking management, PMOs, have this as part of their contract. It is in addition to that. (Interjection) And that went out to tender. That went out to the three quotes system originally.

235 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I am sorry, I am a little bit confused. So because it was privately funded there was some sort of agreement with the parking company that they would then get the contract for the maintenance?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): No, there are two stages which the hon. Lady is confusing. The launch of the scheme, the funding of the scheme, is not something the Government has paid for; it has been paid for through sponsorship. There was an announcement which details how it was paid for. The maintenance of the scheme is something that was included in the three quotes that were sought generally in relation to parking. So the parking scheme, the enforcement of the parking scheme which is run by this company, Gibraltar Parking etc., was the subject of three quotes sought from the companies that could do that sort of work, and that included the maintenance of the Redibikes. So there was a competitive process in respect of this as part of that general traffic parking maintenance contract.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, just a simple point of clarification: can the Chief Minister confirm that Gibraltar Parking Management Services Limited is not owned or controlled by the Government, it is an independent third party private company?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, we are not in the habit of seeking quotes from ourselves. (Laughter and interjection) Yes, but it is quite different to charge yourself import duties, stamp duties etc., which the law requires, and quite something [inaudible] (Laughter)

ENVIRONMENT, ENERGY, CLIMATE CHANGE AND EDUCATION

Q322-323/2017

East Side wave power generator – Serviceability; output

Clerk: Question 322. The Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, can Government confirm that the East Side wave power generator is still serviceable and whether it has suffered any periods of unserviceability in the last six months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 323.

Clerk: Question 323. The Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: What has been the average monthly output and peak output of the East Side wave generator since October 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the East Side wave power generator recently suffered several months of unserviceability due to repairs and modifications undertaken following the severe weather experienced on 29th September last year and subsequent storms. It is currently serviceable.

The average monthly output since October 2016 is 40.2 kWh. Peak output is 4.5 kWh.

Hon. T N Hammond: Can the Minister please advise: from 29th September was it one single long-term outage until it became serviceable or were there several shorter outages in that period?

285 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I think we must remember that this is not a Government facility, it is Eco Wave that runs it, but I am able to facilitate the information.

It was out of action due to storm damage from 29th September to 5th October. You will recall that there has been a lot of bad weather over the winter period right into the spring. There were modifications being carried out on it and that took a number of months from 290 28th October to 2nd February. From 2nd February it was working partially as they were monitoring how the modifications were going, and the modifications were completed by the end of March.

Hon. T N Hammond: I do thank the Minister for the answer and I do recognise it is a private project, of course, but it is a private project which is very much, I believe, supported by 295 Government when it was initially launched.

I do wonder whether these extensive outages have made the Government consider whether wave technology of this nature is in the best interests of Gibraltar in terms of long-term renewable energy strategy or whether other forms of renewable energy might be exploited, 300 bearing in mind we have had, over a six-month period, the best part of five months with the system either unserviceable or being upgraded.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the use of the words 'in the interests of' is a curious one. Any renewable energy is in the interests of Gibraltar and of everybody else on the planet, needless 305 to say, no matter how little.

I think we must remember that this is a prototype, it is a new design; and the Government was very pleased to offer Gibraltar as a location for this innovative form of power generation. Like every pilot scheme, people will learn from the difficulties they experience. They have learned; they have changed. In fact, only yesterday there was an announcement of a very similar 310 plant being opened very soon in Mexico using the example that Gibraltar has given, because they have been able to modify and make it more effective.

So, because it was minimal investment from the Government – I think all we did was throw the cable down the cliff to connect it; it was all done at the expense of Eco Wave – I think it is certainly worth allowing that to continue. Hopefully they will be able to refine the technology 315 and it will then be producing a lot more power for Gibraltar and using the lessons learned elsewhere in the world.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q324-326/2017

Upper Rock –

Mount Misery glass lookout; Skywalk; mobile app

Clerk: Question 324. The Hon. L F Llamas.
320

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, does the Government have an estimated opening date for the Mount Misery glass lookout and an estimated final cost for the entire project?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and 325 Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 325 and 326.

Clerk: Question 325. The Hon. L F Llamas.

330

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, did the Government consult or have any knowledge when planning the glass lookout at Mount Misery that the cable car was planning its own glass walkway at the top station?

335

Clerk: Question 326. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, has the Government made any progress in updating or launching a new Upper Rock mobile app?

340

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education?

345

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the works were affected yet again by severe weather and the completion date was further delayed. The works are very near completion and are awaiting other works in the area to ensure safety. I will not at this time commit to a date. The final cost will be available once the project is completed.

The Skywalk was tabled and discussed publicly at the Development and Planning Commission, where the public had the opportunity to comment.

350

Finally, the app has been completed and will be released to coincide with the opening of the Skywalk.

355

Hon. L F Llamas: Just one supplementary, Mr Speaker. Can the Minister just confirm that the delay has been purely attributed to the weather and there have not been any other factors which have contributed to the delay?

360

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I believe one consignment of glass was found to be defective and had to be replaced at the cost of the company producing it. That is the only reason that I know that there may have been a little bit more of a delay; and also obviously when working in an area which is quite busy, things like putting up the crane and removing it had to be timed so that there was not a cruise liner and so on in port. But the main reason is certainly the weather.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I am not sure whether I heard the Minister correctly, but did he give an answer to Question 325 in terms of consulting and knowledge in respect of the cable car previously? You said it was mentioned at the DPC, but in terms of the consulting or having knowledge of the cable car before you did your own glass walkway was there any knowledge or consultation beforehand?

370

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Certainly not, no. The answer I gave in fact says that we ... Obviously anybody, including the cable car, could have commented. No, certainly we had no knowledge that the cable car was planning ... We do not even know if it was planning or they just thought it was a good idea and wanted to have one too. But no.

Q327/2017
St Michael's Cave –
PA system

375 Clerk: Question 327. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details of the electrical or sound works being carried out at St. Michael's Cave, including cost, contractor, date works commenced, date works completed and details of the works?

380

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
385 Mr Speaker, the PA system works consist of 16 speakers, three amplifiers, cabling, two microphones and stand, rack and labour. Also included is a 12-month maintenance attendance and warranty which will be effective in the current financial year 2017-18.

Works were approved and started on 9th December 2016 and finished on 24th March 2017. Works were carried out by Sound Reinforcement Systems Limited. The works' cost was 390 £19,975.34 and the maintenance is £975 a year.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I would ask the Minister ... Obviously it is difficult to pinpoint whether I am asking the correct question or not, given that I do not know what the cables are for, but there seem to be a lot of cables exposed around the stairways in the cave, some are in 395 conduits, others are just open and I am not sure if they are electrical or sound. Perhaps the Minister would be able to know whether these are the works he has quoted, or could there be other works which are pending? Obviously it seems like it is a job which either has not been finished or has been bad workmanship in terms of craft.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member wanted to know what the cables were he could have asked me directly and I would have found out. I do not know. My information is that the works were finished on 24th March; therefore I can only assume that these are other cables. I will certainly find out, but I do not have that information here.

405 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q328-331/2017
St Martin's School and Early Birds Nursery –
Modifications; projected student numbers; bus replacement

Clerk: Question 328. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, what modifications to St Martin's School and Early Birds Nursery are being carried out or being planned in preparation for September 2017?

410

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
415 Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 329, 330 and 331.

Clerk: Question 329. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, what is the projected number of students expected to be at Early Birds Nursery for each academic year 2017-18 and 2018-19?

420

Clerk: Question 330. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, what is the projected number of students expected to be at St Martin's School for each of the academic years 2017-18 and 2018-19?

425

Clerk: Question 331. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, following on from last year's Budget speech, what arrangements have been made to replace the old bus for St Martin's School?

430

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

435

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, St Martin's School is expecting an increase in pupil numbers in September 2017. Modifications are therefore focused on providing temporary additional and appropriate classroom space. Plans for this include the installation of new specialist toilet facilities along the same lines as was provided last academic year. This is an interim measure as the development of St Martin's new school is a priority for Government.

440

The projected number of students expected to be at Early Birds Nursery for each academic year 2017-18 and 2018-19 is as follows: academic year 2017-18, 17 students; academic year 2018-19, 16 students.

The projected number of students expected to be at St Martin's School for each academic year 2017-18 and 2018-19 is as follows: academic year 2017-18, 49; academic year 2018-19, 53.

445

A generous provision has been earmarked specifically for a new bus for St Martin's School. Details will be disclosed during the course of the Budget debate.

450

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I would just like to ask one supplementary: therefore, the portakabin that has been placed in the car park – I take it that is for toilet facilities, or is it for classroom facilities?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, specifically which portakabin is he referring to? There are several on the site.

455

Hon. L F Llamas: I believe it is the one where the bus usually did a three-point turn, just as you go in, in the main entrance.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The portakabin at that level I believe is a toilet facility.

460

Mr Speaker: Mr Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Would the Minister be able to tell the House how many portakabins are currently in use at St Martin's?

465

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker. Had I had notice of the question I would certainly have been very happy to provide it, but as I said earlier in my question, these are all interim measures as St Martin's School is a priority for this Government – unlike the Opposition, who specifically said they would not build a new St Martin's School during the last election campaign.

470 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if I may, I am picking up on this as a supplementary because I received a question from a constituent about these portakabins, saying that it was chaos when dropping kids off 'especially on rainy days', to quote. Can I know when this interim situation will be alleviated, when the parents will see the difference, please?

475 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Mr Speaker, I had the same representations made to me some time ago, not just in relation to this portakabin but in respect of the design of St Martin's as it is today, how it has outgrown the purpose for which it was built in the 1970s. At the time that it was built St Martin's was of the standard required in the United Kingdom for special students like the ones we have there, and that is what led the Government to make the decision
480 that we had to build a new St Martin's. And so, Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady will be delighted to hear that during the lifetime of this Parliament those concerns that were raised with me at the end of the lifetime of the last Parliament will have been entirely alleviated.

The reason for rising, Mr Speaker, is that this is an important issue which the Hon. the Minister for Education is dealing with, with the Deputy Chief Minister and with myself, and an announcement will be made which will clarify how we intend to deal with those and other issues 485 as soon as we are able to, but in good time to ensure that the solution is in place in respect of that and other aspects affecting linked educational establishments in the lifetime of this Parliament.

490 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q332/2017
Teachers –
Continuing professional development courses

Clerk: Question 332. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state the total number of teachers who have completed continuing professional development courses since December 2011?
495

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
500 Mr Speaker, all our teachers undergo continuing professional development (CPD) from the moment they start their teaching careers. (Interjection)

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, the Minister has confirmed that all teachers have completed CPD courses ... all teachers in Gibraltar have completed them since 2011. (Interjection) All 505 teachers, courses.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the question was not courses, although many of them do, both in Gibraltar and outside, but continuous professional development – I know this myself: as a chartered biologist I have to continue undergoing this – has different types. There is the formal 510 course element and there is the at-work or in-service course element. Therefore, all teachers have undergone continuing professional development. All of us who are or have been parents or grandparents know those days off that the children have, which are down to in-service training. That is part of the CPD that teachers undertake and there are also regular courses. People come sometimes from the UK in more specialist areas like special needs and so on; teachers will go to the UK for courses. So I am very happy to say that all our teachers carry out this continuous professional development.

Hon. D A Feetham: I rise as somebody who really does not know anything about CPD specifically for school teachers; I know about CPD for lawyers. I have a practice certificate in England and I do my CPD there; it is not a requirement here in Gibraltar. But listening to the hon. Gentleman it did strike a chord because CPD for lawyers in England is of two types. You can, for example, undertake lectures yourself and that will count for your points in terms of your CPD. But for lawyers, for example, you cannot just simply do all your points in lectures that you yourself do; you have got to go and do courses. So there is a mixture of both or just courses, and I just wonder what the position is in relation to school teachers.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am very familiar with that. Again, in my own professional life I have had to do both. I was instrumental in bringing in formal CPD for doctors during my time as Minister for Health. In the case of teachers, they do undergo courses but not all of them are in the UK. In-service training – there is a whole programme of professional work that is done there and these are lectures by different members of the profession, by other professions from other areas, and that is all part of the continued professional development provided for teachers.

Q333/2017
GCSE grading system changes –
Measures to support staff

Clerk: Question 333. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state what specific measures the Department of Education has put in place to ensure all teachers and support staff are able to deal with the significant changes in the GCSE grading system emanating from the United Kingdom?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the changes to the grading system are not significant. This year the assessments for GCSE English and mathematics will be reported using numbers from 1-9 as opposed to letters. A level 9 represents a super-A* only accessible to a very small number of pupils, as an example.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, insofar as the statement that they are not significant, I hesitate to disagree, actually, with that analysis.

One of my questions I would like to put to the Minister is that the teachers' unions in the United Kingdom have expressed huge uncertainty given the significant changes that have taken place in relation to the GCSE grading system, and I would have thought – and I would ask the Minister to state the Government's view on this – that it is quite clear that the change to the system, which I understand will be piecemeal from English language now and mathematics to other subjects until 2019 ... that significant problems have been identified in respect of the pressure that would occur in relation to the students. The unions in the United Kingdom have expressed their deep concerns regarding the grading system. I wonder whether the Government is aware of those concerns and whether the teachers' union has raised them here with him directly, and what measures the Government is intending to put in place to alleviate any issues such as pressure on students.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I think where we differ is that the main changes and where the changes are more significant is in the content of the GCSE rather than the grading. Essentially they have become harder, both in breadth and depth of study. That is where the main concern has been and that is something where I have spoken to students directly about their concerns. But the team of advisers and senior management in schools are confident that they have been able to deliver. Through the year, UK experts have delivered in-service training to staff, and senior managers have travelled to the UK and attended conferences and then fed back to teachers in order to be able to deal with this.

There is therefore no reason to worry about these changes, but it is true that our results will probably suffer a slight dip in line with what UK results are expected to suffer as a result of these changes, and in fact these changes have been designed specifically to achieve this. So that is, I think, where the problem lies. I think that our teachers and the students have dealt with this magnificently this year. I have, in fact, attended exam days in both Westside and Bayside and seen it for myself. But it is likely, as in the whole of the UK, that there will be a slight dip in the grades. That will not be a reflection on the teachers or the students; it will be a reflection on the changes to the content of the GCSE.

Hon. E J Phillips: I think we should, of course, congratulate the teachers for the sterling work they are doing (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) to deal with the issue of the grading system changes in the United Kingdom, but what I would say in respect of – (Interjection) Have you quite finished? What I would say in relation to this point is that English is being taught as a language now, as English language as opposed to English, and a substantial amount of material is now going to be put to these students. One of the questions I had stemming from this question was to what extent have our teachers received further training or gone on courses in relation to that particular point on English language, because the material is now going to be much more extensive, the exams will be a lot harder and, as the Minister has indicated, there will be a dip in the results, which is to be expected in the circumstances.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am confident that the training I mentioned earlier will be sufficient and that the results will probably be much better even than we think they will be.

If I may just comment that having attended Bayside and Westside during a maths GCSE exam and an English GCSE exam, I asked afterwards to be sent copies of the papers because I wondered whether 40 or more years later – 45 years later – I would still pass. I must say that, having a look at both papers, I thought I might struggle with the English one but I would pass the maths one – the fact that the Speaker was my maths teacher may in fact be related to that! (Laughter) So thank you, Mr Speaker, for those days in the old Grammar School.

Mr Speaker: The only thing is that all those ones that we got in those days today are no good; the nines are much better.

Hon. E J Reyes: I declare a vested interest, Mr Speaker: you were also my teacher and, you may recall, had we in our day achieved a grade 9 I do not think we would be on speaking terms now, because the numbers seem to have been reversed: a grade 1 was something to celebrate and a grade 9 was something to avoid Mr Canepa, if you saw him down Main Street!

Q334/2017

Post-Graduate Certificate in Education –
Local need; consultation

Clerk: Question 334. The Hon. E J Phillips.

610 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what local needs there are for a bespoke Post-Graduate Certificate in Education and confirm the nature of the consultation that was conducted with the teachers and educators as part of the collaborative working between the University of Gibraltar and the Department of Education?

615 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, firstly the Department of Education works closely with the University of Gibraltar on a range of subjects which are of mutual interest, this being one of them.

620 Further, the Department, under the social partnership arrangement with the Gibraltar Teachers' Association, keeps teachers informed of developments in education throughout and also endeavours to always consult teachers by engaging them in debate and affording opportunities for active discussions.

625 Through supporting the University, we essentially want to become the gatekeepers into education by providing a single pathway into teaching and guaranteeing the quality of the product. Furthermore, we want to give mature students, who perhaps have worked in different industries, the opportunity to become teachers and enrich the lives of students through their experience elsewhere. We passionately believe this can only be good for Gibraltar.

Q335/2017

UK Student Loan Company – Department of Education debt

Clerk: Question 335. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

630

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What is the Government's position with regard to the Department of Education debt with the UK Student Loan Company since I uncovered this debt several months ago?

635 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, the Department of Education has no debts with the Student Loan Company (SLC).
640 The Department pays the company on behalf of the students for loans made to the students themselves.

645 Government's position remains unchanged: it is fully committed to repaying all student loans awarded by the SLC in respect of university tuition fees prior to 2010-11. In fact, Government's position is clearer than ever, given that during the past financial year significant inroads have been made to establish student payment thresholds and guide students through the yearly overseas assessment process to prevent accumulation of arrears.

The hon. Member should note that this student debt was created by the previous administration and not the present Government; therefore, she did not uncover the debt, given the arrangement was entered into by the party of which she was once a member.

650

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am well aware of this story because I uncovered it to the point that no one on the opposite side knew about it until I said it, and I was actually told it was not there – until a few days later I was told I was in fact right and there was a debt. And even though perhaps technically the debt belongs to the student, I think we all know that this was, yes, a mechanism perhaps from the previous administration, but that effectively falls on the Department of Education's lap.

655

So I think the hon. Gentleman knows where I am coming from and what I am trying to get to, and the basic answer I want is to know that there is a backlog and when will it be paid, because there are students who are still receiving demands to be paid and I believe that it is the Department of Education that has to settle this debt.

660

If I may just say, to give comfort at least to the students: when will these letters stop and when will this matter be resolved?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, it is just not like that at all. The loans are given to the students. If a student is in any difficulty whatsoever, all they have to do is contact the Department of Education.

665

I can say that funds are awarded on a yearly basis to the level of around £600,000 in order to pay these debts. In fact, the outstanding amount at the moment is just over £400,000 less than it was six months ago, so this is regularly being paid. The Education Department has been paying monthly instalments of £50 per student blindly, in the sense that unless a student comes to the Department and says, 'This is the repayment that I have,' then the Department has no idea of how much it is.

670

The problem has been that the Student Loans Company was not prepared to give the Department of Education information on individual debts to individual students – one can understand that. So what has happened over the past year or so is that we have obtained consent to share status from the students, and the Department has painstakingly made sure that they have contacted all the students and finally we have been able to achieve that. So we are now able to ask the Student Loans Company for that information. There is an added difficulty in that the information now is paperless and so the student has to personally log on to the account; it is not a question of sending a bill through.

675

But I can say, Mr Speaker, that we are making the progress that is expected. There is nobody who is in any difficulty whatsoever. The number of students today who still owe money is about 40 or so less than six months ago, so we are regularly doing this and we offer all sorts of facilities, Mr Speaker. Students, for example, who remain in the UK are tracked and identified and placed on deduction of earnings from their salary, and then if those students send us their payslips we will reimburse them directly because those are deducted in the UK directly to the Student Loans Company. Moreover, students who have settled in the UK and have difficulties with their credit rating in applying for mortgages and so on, if they apply to the Department of Education with the information the Department will pay off all the loan.

685

So there is no difficulty, but certainly if there is some exchange between the loan company and the student that the Department is not aware of, then a payment cannot be made. But doors are open and there is no difficulty, and I can say absolutely that no student and no parent, no families, should at all be concerned. If they have any difficulty whatsoever they can get in touch with the Department or myself personally and we will sort it out.

690

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one supplementary question in relation to this point. I have been in a room when one of these students in particular – it was just three weeks ago – was contacted by the Student Loans Company and this was the fifth call that they had received in as 700 many weeks relating to the student loan debt. This person got quite distressed by the fact that this company had been calling them on a regular basis to ask them about the debt and the fact that they had to pay it and that they had had no luck with the Government of Gibraltar in securing payment of that debt. I have been in the room when this has happened, this telephone call from the Student Loans Company, so I am telling you from what I have heard myself.

(Interjection by Hon. Dr J E Cortes) No, I am not saying that. It is just that the difficulty that we 705 have got ... We have got to realise the difficulties being faced by students who are in full-time employment and are being chased by this company, and although I understand that there is this consent to share, which is a useful mechanism in order for the Government to contact directly and discuss individual debts with the Student Loans Company, what I am seeing on the ground and the reports I am receiving and the first-hand knowledge that I have from hearing this 710 discussion with the Student Loans Company with this particular former student – and this is a 2009-10 student – is that it is becoming quite distressing, and the challenge that is being presented there. I understand that this individual has contacted the Department of Education but there has been no luck in respect of that particular debt. I only offer that as information to the Minister so that active steps can be taken.

715

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I can categorically say that no student need be worried and if they have that kind of call they should contact us. It is very possible that a desk officer in the Student Loans Company generates this information out of their computer and they make a phone call. This has happened before in other scenarios. It happened, I remember, to doctors, 720 who were getting calls from the General Medical Council about an issue that we, at a high level, had resolved but the desk officers were not aware. We will take this up and if that student wants to get in touch we will take their case directly.

There is a more recent option now to enter into a power of attorney, which would allow greater flexibility, and if students want to enter into this arrangement, again those doors are 725 open. But nobody should be worried, absolutely nobody, and if anybody is, they know where my office is and I will be very happy to accommodate all of them.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Minister whether he is aware – he may be aware – of a press release issued by the UK Department of Education, HM Treasury, Student 730 Loans, on 6th February this year, talking about the process of selling part of the English student loan book, which will affect the Student Loans Company. This may explain the sudden ... or appear to be the sudden perseverance of the Student Loans Company in chasing these loans.
Looking at the notes to editors – and I can give him the page link if he is not aware of this:

Unlike these previous sales the income contingent loans included in this sale will continue to be collected by HMRC and SLC

– the Student Loan Company. And it says:

This sale involves securitising the remaining future repayments on the loans and selling securities representing the rights to these to a range of purchasers. The sale process is expected to take several months.

735 So it may be that the Government needs to review its position and perhaps consider the financial implications of settling all these loans at once, because it is evident that the UK Government itself is in the process of repackaging these loans and selling them off to third parties.

740 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Government is exploring that possibility.

Q336/2017
New schools –
Sale of land for funding

Clerk: Question 336. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Regarding the new schools that Government has promised to build in this electoral term, can the Minister for Education confirm that no public land is being sold off to fund them?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, arrangements for the funding of the new schools will be detailed when the relevant projects are announced.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can I ask the Minister how long that will take, considering there are two years left to build these five schools?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: A couple of weeks perhaps, Mr Speaker – there might even be surprises next week.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND THE GSB

Q385-387/2017
Supported Employment Company; Project Search –
Applications outcomes; employees in public and private sectors

Clerk: We now move to Question 385. These are covered in the supplemental notice of questions which was circulated this afternoon.

We will start with Question 385. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, since January 2012, in each calendar year how many applications to become employed by the Supported Employment Company have been (a) accepted, (b) declined, or (c) remain pending a decision?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 386 and 387.

Clerk: Question 386. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many employees of the Supported Employment Company are currently working within the public sector or Government-owned companies and how many are working in the private sector?

Clerk: Question 387, the Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, what inroads have been made in relation to Project Search or any other supported internship model?

785 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, there are no applications in the Supported Employment Company made, accepted, declined or remaining pending a decision since January 2012 for any calendar year, as I have previously explained in Parliament.

790 As at the end of September the Supported Employment Company had 32 employees placed in the public sector and 36 employees placed in the private sector.

I refer the hon. Member to my previous answer on Project Search. I am not sure what he means by 'inroads' in relation to Project Search, but to date, to my knowledge, there has been no further development of Project Search or other supported internship model. As initially introduced, this entails affording young people with special needs career pathways such that they feel supported and empowered to do well and progress with their lives and careers. At the moment there is a Learning Support Assistant (LSA) seconded to the Education Department. The current role is simply to identify potential school leavers with special educational needs and afford them guidance and support as they make the transition from school to full-time employment. Students are given the opportunity to participate in short-term work placements. These consist of either one full or half-day period over six weeks. The student still remains at school for the remainder of the time.

800

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, could I then just clarify, because I have heard of people who have tried to approach the Government with a view to getting employment for their children and there does not seem to be an actual official mechanism whereby you can actually put ... You do not fill out an actual application, you leave your details, but it does not seem that people are getting answers whether they can be accepted into the company as an employee or not. So it seems to me at least ... I know of two people who are wishing to seek if there is a possibility of becoming employed by SEC but are not getting anywhere, so I cannot deduce from the answer that the Hon. Minister has given me whether there are any pending decisions to be made, given that it does not seem to be a very formal process in order to get into SEC.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I know the hon. Member was not here when we started on this. The position was that initially, on the 1st February 2012, within the number of people that were on the VTS scheme some 40 were identified as persons who had learning disability problems and therefore, it was considered by the people who had been running the scheme under the previous Government, would be people who would have great difficulty in finding work in the private sector or in the public sector on a competitive basis. They were initially transferred to the Employment Training Company together with the other 200, or however many there were at that point in time, and once people started moving out of the Employment Training Company into normal jobs in the private sector, those that had been identified for us were in fact transferred to the newly created company, the Supported Employment Company, where they have got indefinite contracts, as I explained to him in my answer the last time round. To those we have added people in the last four or five years, four and a half years, on the basis that the people we monitor to send to normal employers. If we find that really there is no way that we can actually get them into the normal market, then the decision is taken that they will come in and they are given a 20-hour slot within Supported Employment and a contract. But that only happens not because they make an application and not because applications are refused, but because we actually process almost everyone that goes into the employment market unless they come in basically passing through. There are a number of people who come in to the employment service register and get out on the same day because they come with a

815
825
830

contract of employment in one hand and the registration in the other. But anybody else that is there for more than 24 hours gets referred to the training programme to see if we can, either 835 through assisting the wages or in some other form, persuade somebody in the private sector to take the candidate of the ETB in preference to a candidate from outside.

Anybody with disabilities is treated the same as anybody without disabilities in that system, and only when we come to the conclusion that it is not going to be possible to do what we think is a preferred option – that they would enjoy a normal job with a normal employer – do we then 840 give them the offer of coming into SEC. So anybody who has not had that offer, it is because we are still trying to get them another job.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q388-390/2017
Government-owned companies –
Inter-company transactions

Clerk: Question 388. The Hon. R M Clinton.
845

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, further to Question 299/2017, can the Government confirm whether it or any of its owned companies has entered into a contractual agreement with Gibraltar Capital Assets Limited to pay to it a housing allowance; and if so, which Government-owned company is liable for this payment?
850

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano):
855 Mr Speaker, I will answer the question together with Questions 389 and 390.

Clerk: Question 389. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please advise why Gibraltar Land (Holdings) Limited sold the Eastside Reclamation site to GAR Ltd, another Government-owned company, on 22nd May 2014 for £75,469,680 and how much stamp duty was paid to the Government on this transaction?
860

Clerk: Question 390. The Hon. R M Clinton.
865

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if GAR Limited has been granted any loans by Gibraltar Investment (Holdings) Ltd; and if so, what amount was outstanding at 31st December 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.
870

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the amount of stamp duty paid on the transaction regarding the Eastside was £2,640,082 and the transaction took place because the government decided that it should in the context of the negotiations for the developments that were then taking place.
875

880 Further to the answer to Question 299/2017, the position has not changed. The hon. Member has been told many times, and those of his colleagues who were here before him even more times, that the company cash balances are collectively pooled and managed by the Treasury following the model created by the GSD administration when they were in government.

885 As regards the extension of an agreement, my understanding is that the relevant company is the Residential Property Company, but this has to be understood in the context of what I have just explained to him again regarding the common pool of cash balances.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister, as ever.

890 To go back to Question 299 – and I have read Hansard from last time we discussed this in March; he said he would go away, come back and let me know, if he could – am I correct in saying that the company that has an agreement with Gibraltar Capital Assets Limited is Gibraltar Residential Property Company Limited (GRP)?

Hon. J J Bossano: That is my understanding, yes.

895 Hon. R M Clinton: Does the Minister have any detail as to the nature of this agreement and the term of the agreement?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, I do not have the details, but I advise the hon. Member that he need not bother to ask me, because if I had them I would not provide them.

900 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister, at least we have the name of a company, which is more than we had before.

905 If I may turn to Question 390, I believe he has given the usual stock answer of the cash pool of the companies but he has not actually answered the question whether GAR Limited has been granted any loans. Could he elaborate on that?

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Mr Speaker, the cash pool is accessible to everybody in the companies and therefore they either put money in the pool or take money out of the pool as and when required. He has got a written answer on loans to companies and he will see in that written answer what the explanation is.

910 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer and I look forward to that schedule.

915 In terms of the sale of Eastside Reclamation to GAR Limited, could he explain what the economic rationale for that transaction was, other than it should be done?

920 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, we have had a debate on this point on countless occasions. The Government takes policy decisions, which is the job that the Government has to do in dealing with situations with investors or with anybody else. Those decisions might not be the ones that the hon. Member might take if he was faced with the responsibility of taking it, but the Government takes the decision that it thinks is necessary. If the Government had to satisfy the hon. Member or justify itself to the hon. Member for every decision, in effect he would be replacing the Queen as the Head of State.

925 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am flattered by that remark but I would never dream of substituting Her Majesty.

Surely the Minister must recognise that in incurring a stamp duty liability of £2.6 million there must be a very real economic reason for doing this – and I know there must be because I know he, as a very longstanding economist, would not accept any transaction that did not provide 930 some economic value. Is there anything he can share with this House as to why this put the Government in a better negotiating position?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the position, as he well knows, is that it is not that the company is paying money that belongs to the state to a different party; it is a state-owned company paying to the state. The money that is paid is not in the account of the company but it 935 is in the account of the Government. The stamp duty is being paid by a Government-owned company to the Government. There is no economic cost involved because the Government originally owned a company with £2 million and did not have in the Consolidated Fund the £2 million, and now the Government has got £2 million in the Consolidated Fund and the company does not have it in its account. So the economic effect is zero.

940 The reality of it is that at one stage the Government decided to make property transactions of the Government liable to stamp duty and a number of other things when they were running out of borrowing capacity. I have explained this in connection with some of the other changes that took place in the accounting systems where we have got a number of duplications of things that come in and out. For example, the fact that we have a situation where contributions from 945 the Social Insurance, which never used to go through the Consolidated Fund, now go through the Consolidated Fund and come out of the Consolidated Fund was because before the Government altered the threshold for loans they were reaching the loan ceiling on the 80%, and instead of tackling the 80% like we have done and accepting that the 80% is in fact a limitation on the borrowing ability of the Government, which is a stranglehold because the growth of the 950 GDP by definition will always be faster than the growth of the Government revenue ... So 80% of Government revenue will always produce a lower debt than 40% of GDP. So, for example, a number of things were done, like paying rent on property to itself, paying stamp duty on property to itself, which in effect ... doing what I have just told the hon. Member with the authorities and the agencies which previously used to get income coming in directly and now 955 they get money coming into the Consolidated Fund. With the book that he has he will see that the book shows money coming in into an agency which was collected by the Government on behalf of the agency. The collection of the Government on behalf of the agency meant they recovered revenue higher. If the money had been collected by the agency without passing through the Government, the recovery of revenue would have been lower. Every pound that 960 went through that system made possible another 80p worth of debt.

So that is how the system came about, which appears to him, looking at this particular transaction, as being a situation where an economic decision has been taken when in fact the decision was taken originally to make some things payable that would otherwise have been impossible to exempt from payment simply because ... and we have left the system as it was 965 because, frankly, it is more hassle to try and change the book than to leave it as it is because the effect really is that in economic terms it is a paper exercise. It is money that goes in and goes out, but ultimately the collective wealth of the Government is in the assets in the company and the assets in the Government.

In terms of the cash pool, the cash pool which was really invented when the Government 970 decided to have many trading companies, which did not exist in 1996; they had no employees and only had assets ... when they started trading, in effect what the Government did was to some extent create for the companies the equivalent of what has existed since time immemorial in that there is an ability to have deposits and advances in public sector entities. Therefore, all those deposits and advances only get cleared when you close the accounts on 31st March, but in 975 between 1st April and 31st March the money can go in one direction or the other and it is used as part of the mechanism that the Treasury has for the flexibility of medium-term liabilities in one corner of the empire when there are moneys available sitting in another corner. That is really the best way that I can paint the picture, parts of which will be things perhaps that the hon. Member is not familiar with and I happen to be, just because I have been seeing the 980 changes happening over a long period of time.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am extremely grateful for the Minister's explanation. Maybe he can correct me if I am wrong with his statement: effectively, in terms of stamp duty it is a zero sum gain in that, as he says, it is coming from the left pocket and going to the right pocket, but the stamp duty will be showing as revenue in the Consolidated Fund and a liability would technically remain with the company. Would he accept that as correct?

Hon. J J Bossano: I said that technically it is a paper exercise, that is correct; but the owner of the company is the owner of the pocket where the money is.

Q391-394/2017

Training –

Gibdock NVQ courses and certificates; Future Job Strategy cost and success rate

Clerk: Question 391. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Minister for Training provide details of how many trainees have completed their NVQ course with the training scheme run in partnership with Gibdock and when that training was completed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 392 to 394.

Clerk: Question 392. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government explain why the Gibdock partnership trainees have still not received their accredited certificates?

Clerk: Question 393. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state the total costs to the taxpayer of the Future Job Strategy since inception?

Clerk: Question 394. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state: (i) the total number of people who started on the Future Job Strategy; and of those people (ii) how many are currently in full-time employment?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the number of trainees who have completed their NVQ courses with the training scheme run in partnership with Gibdock by year of completion is as follows: 1999, 15; 2000, 16, 2001, 11; 2002, 10; 2003, 12; 2004, 7; 2005, 14; 2006, 13; 2007, 13; 2008, 11; 2009, 14; 2010, 15; 2011, 15; 2012, 16; 2013, 7; 2014, 6; 2015, 29; 2016, 12.

1025 Any apprentices who have not yet received their certificates have not done so because all the necessary procedures have not yet been completed.

The Government rejects the hon. Member's philosophy that providing training for employment is a cost to the taxpayer. The Government considers it an investment in creating a pool of skills which benefits the individual and potentially assists economic growth. The amount invested in providing training and related infrastructure is already known to the hon. Member opposite and was identified by the Leader of the Opposition in the 2011 election campaign as £11 million a year. Provision for an amount of this order has been made in every budget and approved by Parliament.

1035 The expenditure in support of training for employment under the Future Job Strategy continues at this annual level and the concerns of Members opposite in the past that it would have to be increased over the years has not materialised. It is currently at the same level and is expected to continue at under £1 million a month to the financial year 2019-20.

1040 The number of persons who have benefited from starting on Future Job Strategy training programs to April 2017 has been 2,802 and of these 1,859 obtained employment at the end of the training period.

Hon. E J Phillips: Insofar as the Future Job Strategy is concerned, I am not going to recite our views in relation to that; they are well known and I disagree with the hon. Gentleman in respect of his analysis of what we say the costs were. But it is quite clear from the figures that the Hon. Minister has deployed as of up to April 2017 – 2,802 people have engaged on the Future Job Strategy, and of those he says that 1,859 have secured full-time employment – that there is a significant number just under shy of a thousand people who have not been guaranteed a placement pursuant to the Government's commitment to guarantee everyone a job.

1050 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the people who completed the training got employment; not everybody completes the scheme. Some people give up when they do NVQ Level 1, even before they finish the NVQ Level 1.

Let me remind the hon. Member that the Leader of the Opposition asked me in December of 2012 what was the percentage of the number of people who had completed and got a job, and it was 28%. He then told me that what we were doing was clearly no better than what was there before, under the GSD, because the GSD had a 28% success rate. I pointed out to the Leader of the Opposition then – and the hon. Member was not here – that the 28% in the first year was in fact because it was the first year and those people we were taking on in the training companies initially included all the people who were in the VTS, and for those people we did not have a job guarantee before they entered. Those people had to be recycled because they were placed with employers who told us at the time ... I explained it in 2012 when we took over that there were people who were saying, 'Well, look, I didn't really need somebody in my business and I haven't got a business that is big enough to take on another employee, but as far as I was concerned I was willing to take somebody into the business as long as it didn't cost me anything in order to give that person an opportunity maybe to learn some skills and go back to the unemployment list and get a job, because that was all that the Government was asking of me – but if you are telling me that if I keep him I have to then give him a job, then take him back, I do not want him.' That meant that we had to move people out. Initially we moved them into the public sector, in many areas, simply because we did not have enough places in the private, but they were all eventually found places in the private sector and when that happened, since there is a thing called a contract between the placement provider and the Training Company on the basis that after the first month of probation any further training that goes into the job is on the basis that the person has got one month, the employer has got one month, to decide whether he thinks the candidate is going to be suitable or not, then if they carry on with the trainee for five or six or seven or eight months and then they turn round at the end of the nine months and say, 'Well,

I don't want to keep him,' they have to refund the nine months. That is how the scheme has been working.

1080 Once that scheme started taking people fresh from the unemployment list and not having to deal with the people we had in the beginning, the success rate was beginning to go up. In fact, I think at the rate that is there it is something like 62% or 63% - or something like that, I am not really sure. I have not worked out the percentage, but I know that it has been consistently over the years in between 65% and 70%, depending ... Sometimes we have got better months in terms of retaining trainees. Sometimes the trainees decide themselves to resign. There is nothing we can do about that. Sometimes people are training to do something ... For example, I
1085 can tell the hon. Member we have got some apprentices who in the middle of their apprenticeship have seen vacancies coming out in the public sector and decided to abandon the apprenticeship and go to the public sector if they can get the job, even though the job in the public sector might be one that is less skilled than the one they would get, because the scheme from the beginning has only guaranteed employment in the private sector with the person with 1090 whom we are in partnership. The partnership agreement requires the commitment that the person would be employed. In the training that I explained to him not long ago of the coach drivers for the tour operators, the agreement with the tour operators is that after we finish the training period, which we are subsidising, they take them on.

1095 Obviously we would like to be able to achieve 100%, but I think what we have been able to achieve until now is in the 60s. In fact, when the Leader of the Opposition used to ask me the reasons why people were falling out, it was invariably either people discontinuing themselves or people having to be terminated for disciplinary reasons and it was not the fact that the employer was at fault. There have been very few employers who have defaulted, and they have had to pay and in fact they have not come back for more trainees.

1100 Hon. E J Phillips: Does the Minister agree with me that now is the time to revisit the viability and the sustainability of the Future Job Strategy, given what can be estimated at £66 million of spending in respect of a success rate that gravitates between 60% and 65%? Would the Minister agree that now is the time to revisit the viability of that moving forward?

1105 Hon. J J Bossano: I think that the position is that we have got declining numbers of potential candidates because the levels of unemployment are much lower. The hon. Member does not have the employment survey – it has not been tabled yet, I do not think – but he will see that the employment levels are higher, so if there are more people working and fewer people 1110 unemployed ... The throughput of people is lower now than it was at the beginning and we are in fact open to look at anything that is worth supporting in terms of the commitment that we have got.

1115 We decided in the election of 2011 that that was the amount of money we were going to commit to doing this. That commitment has been maintained. It is the only part of the budget really that has not grown, simply because of the fact that the amount that we pay the trainees has gone up but has been compensated by the fact that there are fewer people available to become trainees. So there are fewer people in the system and even though each person gets paid more now than they were getting five years ago, the total cost is still manageable within that budget, which pays for a number of other things more than just the wages.

1120 Certainly we are prepared to revisit the scheme in the context of anything that anybody can put to us which will result not simply in people becoming more skilled and remaining unemployed, but more skilled with a clear opportunity to take up a job because a job exists and because we know the job exists – because that is the commitment of the scheme from day one: we train for employment, we do not train to have very skilled unemployed people.

1125 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, may I bring the Hon. Minister back to the reply he gave in respect of Question 392. The Minister says that the trainees have still not received their accredited certificates because the process was ongoing or something. Does he have any information to expand that further, and what is actually missing?

1130

Hon. J J Bossano: I think there were a small number of people who, having finished the preparation of the portfolio, the assessor who was employed left the centre and frankly had not done some of the work that required doing, and there was a period when that work was not being done until we, some time later, were able to recruit somebody who was a retired craftsman who we have been able to get trained and qualified to be an assessor and accepted by the awarding body in the UK and then has then come in and done a catch-up exercise on some of those.

1135

There are people, for example, in those circumstances who are already craftsmen and are already working as craftsmen but have still not had their certificates, but I do not think anything else is required of them. It is a matter for the people in the Training Centre to make sure that the paperwork is being done. We have just had somebody from City and Guilds this last week looking at the procedures that we are following and the infrastructure we have got and we have got a good report from him, and I think somebody from EAL is coming next week to do a similar exercise.

1140

I think the difficulty has been a lapse on the work that needed to be done in order to submit the reports to the awarding body in order to get the awarding body to send us the certificates.

1145

Hon. E J Reyes: It does offer some explanation, Mr Speaker, yes, because we have spoken in the past about an assessor no longer being in the Training Centre, but I thought there was a safety margin because the assessors are subject to what is called an internal verifier, of which we have continuation of that.

1150

The only thing that worries me, Mr Speaker, but I think I read properly into what the Minister was answering is that a fair amount of time seems to have lapsed since the trainee completed the portfolio and therefore ceased to be a trainee there. Are we in any risk of too much period of time having elapsed and then the awarding body, when it sends its ultimate ... the external verifier who comes like an overall auditor, to put it in [inaudible] terms ... Do we run the risk of that? If that is the case, then I urge the Minister can he please expedite the matter because it would be a pity for the individual to have had so much work put in, so much time and so much Government money thrown into a project for it all to be lost at the last minute.

Hon. J J Bossano: I think that the risk that the hon. Member is explaining existed, from what I have been told ... I do not understand the system as well as he does, but from what I have been told action was taken in conjunction with the people in the UK and I am told that everything is in place to their satisfaction and that the people involved expect that before the end of this year anybody who is without a certificate will get one. That is what I am told.

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 3 p.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. A J Canepa GMH OBE in the Chair]

[CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: P E Martinez Esq in attendance]

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDERS

Standing Order 7(1) suspended to proceed with laying of reports

Clerk: Suspension of Standing Orders. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move under Standing Order 7(3) to suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with the laying of a report on the table.

Mr Speaker: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

PAPERS TO BE LAID

Clerk: Papers to be laid. The Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

- 5 Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. Gilbert Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table the Tourist Survey Report 2016, the Hotel Occupancy Survey 2016, the Air Traffic Survey 2016 and the Employment Survey Report 2016.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Questions for Oral Answer

CHIEF MINISTER

Q395/2017

Expressions of interest and tender for services required –
Difference in definition

- 10 Clerk: We now move back to answers to Oral Questions and we commence with Question 395. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain what is the difference between expressions of interest and tender for services required?

15

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, 'seeking expressions of interest' is an open request made to potential suppliers to submit a proposal for a proposed project or scheme to the Government. It is, in effect, a method of obtaining commercial information from the supply market on the viability of a proposed site, project or scheme.

20

A 'tender for services required' is an invitation to service providers to submit a fixed-price offer to the contracting authority under sealed bid to provide the detailed service sought.

25

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, could the Government clarify whether there is a criteria, in terms of, a bracket for example, when services might exceed a certain amount of figure, whether they will go into expressions of interest or a tender?

30

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think I have answered that question in the last few months and very likely in the past six months. I do not know when it was that the hon. Gentleman or one of his colleagues asked us for the threshold which required that matters go out to tender. That is a document which the Chief Secretary circulates to all Departments and he will see in Hansard exactly what it provides for when a tender is required under the procurement rules.

Q396/2017

Members of Parliament, public servants and families – Management of conflict of interest in awarding of contracts etc

35

Clerk: Question 396. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, what is the Government's policy as regards the management of potential conflicts of interest in the awarding of contracts or purchasing of services as regards the business interests of Ministers, public servants and their families?

40

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the policy of the Government in relation to these matters is set out in the Ministerial Code that was published on 8th September 2015. The Code has to be discussed by the Select Committee on Parliamentary Reform and approved by this House. The Chief Secretary is leading on the production of a separate code for public servants.

45

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his answer.

50

I believe that press release was dated 8th September 2015 but I cannot actually find a copy of the draft code either on the parliamentary website or the Government website and I would be grateful if he could make it available, although, as he says, it still has to go before the Select Committee.

55

If I may ask the Chief Minister, then: given that this code effectively is still in draft, what other measures are in place at the moment?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as far as I am concerned, I think there is a copy behind him and there has been since the day he was elected to the House. I do not know whether it is there or not, but that was what we agreed at the time it was published, the Code of Conduct for the Members of the Gibraltar Parliament and the Code of Conduct for Ministers. I do not know why the hon. Gentleman felt he had to ask me, but it is here, it is available and he can have a copy if he wishes.

I think all that there is in place at the moment and detailed research at the time disclosed was a note of a Hansard of something that had been said some time ago – I think perhaps when Mr Speaker was a Member of the House himself. It may be in the Book of Rulings, which is available in the House, which I think Speaker Alcantara compiled, which sets out the provision of what is the rule as to conflict.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, with your permission, we are just checking the bundle here ... No, Mr Speaker, on this side we have the Parliament Act, the Constitution, Standing Orders and Rules and a notice on the use of microphones and the rules in relation to red beacon lights. Certainly – I am happy to be corrected by Members on this side of the House – we have never been issued, either informally or formally, with copies of that code that would apply to us, let alone the ones that apply to them. But if I may ask the Chief Minister: is it in his mind that this code is actually in effect at the moment?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the only thing that is in effect at the moment is the existing rule, but as far as I am concerned we have all conducted ourselves in keeping with what we think the rule should be.

Hon. R M Clinton: And, Mr Speaker, I believe he referred to some extract from Hansard – I would be grateful if he could make it available to us on this side of the House, or at least the reference to it, the specific reference.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker. I have told him where it is; he can go and find it for himself. And as far as making available the Ministerial Code, it is available in the Parliament, it is available here, it is available on this side, it is available in there, so he can have as many copies of it as he might care to persuade the staff of the House to make available to him and he can get the copy of the rulings of Mr Speaker, which are available to all Members of the House, and search for himself the bit that deals with conflicts. I know that he is retired, but he needs to behave as somebody who is active at work and not get me to do everything for him.

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, would he at least confirm to the House that, as far as he is aware, this information is not available to the public, in that it is not available on any Government website and certainly not on the Parliament's website, and perhaps would he agree with me that it should be on Parliament's website and on the Government's website?

Hon. Chief Minister: I do not agree with him, Mr Speaker, that it is not available on the website of the Parliament. I think if he were to search carefully he might be able to find some references in Hansard where this has been read out, certainly in the time that I have been available. But it should be very readily available on the Government website and on the Parliament website, so that people can see what the rules are that apply to public servants, to Members of the House, all of them, and to Ministers. If people think that those are difficult to find, we must fix that as soon as possible so that people can see that they have a Government that behaves entirely in keeping with the higher standards of propriety, as everybody would expect. Those rules are not hidden away. Anybody can come here to the Parliament and seek copies of them, which is what people would have done before websites. But now that websites are available – and I agree with the hon. Member that once something is available on a website these days it is certainly public – we should put them on the website as soon as possible.

110

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q397-399 and Q411/2017

Lands Agreement 2015 –

Fortress Headquarters; HM Naval Base warehousing; HMS Rooke site; dockyard land allocated to Bassadone Motors

Clerk: Question 397. The Hon. R M Clinton.

115

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if Fortress Headquarters in Rosia Bay has now been released to the Government by the MoD under the Lands Agreement 2015?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

120

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Mr Speaker, I will answer this question with Questions 398, 399 and 411.

Clerk: Question 398. The Hon. R M Clinton.

125

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if the block of warehousing within HM Naval Base released by the MoD under the Lands Agreement 2015 signed on 13th January 2016 has been sold by the Government; and if so, when, for what consideration, for what term of lease and to whom?

Clerk: Question 399. The Hon. R M Clinton.

130

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, why and when is the Government proposing to demolish all the buildings on the site of HMS Rooke and what is the anticipated cost of doing so?

Clerk: Question 411. The Hon. M D Hassan Nahon.

135

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Has the land at the dockyard allocated to Bassadone Motors been leased or sold?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

140

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Mr Speaker, the Rosia Bay alternative headquarters facility will be transferred once both MoD and HMGoG agree that Lands Agreements 2004, 2007 and 2011 have been implemented in full.

145

The block of warehousing at Mid Harbour Road in part released under the 2015 land deal with the MoD has been sold to Waterloo Holdings Ltd, a subsidiary or related entity of Bassadone Motors, in the sum of £3.6 million on 30th November 2016 on the basis of a 150-year lease.

150

The Government is demolishing all the buildings on the Rooke site in preparation for the redevelopment of that site. The demolition will enable the Government to provide the land to the developer free of existing buildings and as a brownfield site. The estimated cost of the demolition is £1 million and this would be recovered from the premium to be paid.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his response.

In respect of the warehousing in HM Naval Base, did the Government invite any expressions of interest for the sale of the land?

155

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, given that it is usually generally accepted that it is good practice to advertise for the highest possible price for the taxpayer on this land, would the Chief Minister care to advise the House why there was no invitation for expressions of interest?

160

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, I would be delighted to advise the House of why there was no invitation for expressions of interest. You see, Mr Speaker, as no doubt the hon. Members opposite know, on 12th August 2005 the Government of the GSD entered into an agreement with Toyota Gibraltar Stockholdings Limited in respect of the reclamation in the area of Western Beach. They entered into an agreement in effect to produce a 150-year lease of the area that was going to be reclaimed for £3.6 million. The area that was going to be reclaimed, approximately 62,000 square meters, was going to in effect require the Government to spend approximately £20 million reclaiming, although cleverly the GSD Government had done a deal to lease it for £3.6 million.

Mr Speaker, in the circumstances and given that it was not possible to proceed with the Western Beach reclamation because it was no longer financially viable, given that it had been presold for less than it would cost to create, we found ourselves in a position of having to find a location for Bassadone Motors, one of the top companies in Gibraltar that employs over 300 people. In the circumstances, Mr Speaker, what we were doing was transferring the obligations of the Government entered into by the GSD administration for this new site, which we were able to sell for the amount that had been agreed between the GSD Government and Basedone Motors in 2015.

175

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I do not suppose the Chief Minister would be amenable to giving us a copy of that agreement with Toyota Gibraltar Stockholdings LTD in respect of the Western Beach reclamation?

180

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is not a registered document, it is therefore not a public document, but I have absolutely no difficulty in letting them have it. I do not think they can publish it, but I can let them have it. I do not think it is necessarily a publishable document.

185

But look, it is an agreement that their Government did, that the GSD Government did in 2005, Mr Speaker. It really is quite something to see that they appear not to be aware of the things that the Government that they defend the record of did things like this, which made it really quite difficult to see how there may be any financial viability in the reclamation at Western Beach whilst it was encumbered with this obligation.

190

Hon. R M Clinton: I am grateful to the Chief Minister for allowing us to have a copy of the documents and we do undertake to keep it confidential.

195

If I may move on to the Rooke site, I notice that it is going to cost us £1 million to demolish and hopefully that will be recovered from the premium. Do I take it then that the developer will still be London and Regional?

Hon. Chief Minister: That is the developer we are in discussions with.

200

Hon. R M Clinton: And as part of my question I did ask as to a date as to when you might propose to demolish on the site.

Hon. Chief Minister: Demolition has begun, Mr Speaker.

Q400/2017
Gibraltar Capital Assets Ltd loan –
Fees to Hassans and TSN

205 Clerk: Question 400. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, further to Question 695/2016, asked on 28th October 2016, and given that the full list of fees paid to all advisers was not provided at the technical meeting held on 6th February 2017, can the Government advise how much in the way of fees Hassans and TSN has been or is due to be paid in respect of work undertaken in respect of the 210 £300 million loan raised by Gibraltar Capital Assets Limited?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

215 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the total amount of fees paid to the firm of which the Leader of the Opposition is a partner was £428,145.65 for dealing with the whole transaction from inception, including structuring, prospectus, key documents including agreements etc; and Triay Stagnetto Neish, £125,300 for dealing with the land aspects exclusively.

220

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, for the record, the Chief Minister continues to be a partner of that firm and so does Minister Licudi.

225 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am on a sabbatical as a proud partner – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Mr Speaker, I think the jack-in-the-box is getting nervous. I am a proud partner of Hassans on sabbatical, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: He continues, Mr Speaker, to be a partner, whether on sabbatical or not, of Hassans.

230

Mr Speaker: No more exchanges, please, because a question is not being asked, statements are being made, and that is not the purpose of Question Time.
We go on to the next question.

Q401/2017
Property developments –
Import duty waiver

235 Clerk: Question 401. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, further to Question 311/2017, can the Government advise for which private property developments it has waived import duty in respect of the construction, fitting out of and equipping of said properties in the period from 11th December 2011 to 31st March 2017?

240

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government has waived import duty in respect of construction, fitting out and equipping of one project from 11th December 2011 to 245 31st March 2017, namely Imperial Ocean Plaza.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, given this is applied only to one specific project in six years, could the Chief Minister advise why this particular project was given that particular special treatment in respect of import duty?

250 Hon. Chief Minister: Because that was the culmination of the negotiations between the Government and the developer of this project, which the hon. Gentleman may know is delivering much-needed public parking in the area of Glacis and all of the roads towards Ocean Village etc. – incidentally, land which was acquired from the Government by the developer.

255 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, would I be correct, or could the Chief Minister correct me if I am wrong, in that this would be an exceptional case and he would not envisage it arising again?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, there are a number of instances before the past six years where there have been many other instances of full import duty waivers given. We try to resist that, but in commercial circumstances it may be that we decide to do it again in the future if we think it is in the economic interests of Gibraltar.

Q402 and Q410/2017
Arrears of revenue; tax rebates –
Amounts

Clerk: Question 402. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how much has been collected in respect of arrears of revenue in the financial year 2016-17, broken down by head of revenue?

265

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer together with Question 410.

270

Clerk: Question 410. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many individuals or entities were at 31st March 2017 entitled to tax rebates, and what is the overall value of rebates due?

275

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I expect to report to the House in respect of collection of arrears of revenue in the financial year 2016-17 and tax rebates due to individuals and corporations during the course of the debate on the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill on Monday.

280

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, as the Chief Minister knows full well, those details, that level of detail in respect of arrears is not in the Estimates Book, but I will take his word that he will give us the exact information I have asked for in respect of collection of arrears revenue broken down by head of revenue in his Budget speech. I would be most grateful if he could confirm that.

285

Hon. Chief Minister: I have not given my word to do that, Mr Speaker. I have said that I will be reporting on these matters during the course of my speech. I will give them in the way that I consider is appropriate.

290

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I certainly was not prepared to take his word for it, I have to say, but nonetheless I was right not to have done so, given the answer the hon. Gentleman has just provided.

295 Mr Speaker, this was a subject of public exchanges several weeks ago, and indeed it was the subject of exchanges across the floor of this House when I asked the question in March: how much there were currently due in relation to tax rebates. The hon. Gentleman then refused to answer, not because he said, 'I am going to give you the information,' or 'because I am going to report on these matters during the Budget'; he said, 'You have not been specific with a date and therefore I am not going to give you the information – had you been specific and had you said, 300 as you have said in the past, by a particular date, I would have provided you with the information.' And, Mr Speaker, low and behold, we come back today, I ask the question with reference to 31st March and he refuses to provide an answer to the question. Now can he explain that inconsistency in the statements that he has made to this House?

305 Hon. Chief Minister: There is absolutely no inconsistency, Mr Speaker. It is very simple. The year for which he is now asking is the year which I am about to report on. It is the current ... well, the just completed financial year, and in this House we debate the just completed financial year in the Appropriation debate and I will be giving the information to the House in the way that I consider is appropriate in the context of that debate, Mr Speaker – it is very, very simple.

310 He can or cannot take my word for it. My word, Mr Speaker, is not what Mr Clinton was trying to get my word to be; it is what I have said in the answer which is before the House and which I have read already. I expect to report to the House in respect of collection of arrears of revenue in the financial year 2016-17 and tax rebates due to individuals and corporations during the course of the debate on the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill on Monday.

315 Mr Speaker, bring it on – I am very much looking forward to it.

Q403-404/2017

Public finances in Overseas Territories – CPA and UK National Audit Office

Clerk: Question 403. The Hon. R M Clinton.

320 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise its position as regards participation in the CPA UK three-year project entitled 'UK Overseas Territories Project:
Supporting the Role of Public Accounts Committees & Audit Institutions in Oversight of Public Funds'?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

325 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question 404.

Clerk: Question 404. The Hon. R M Clinton.

330 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, has the Government received a copy of the UK National Audit Office guide entitled 'Good Practices in Effective Oversight of Public Finances in the UK Overseas Territories'; and if so, does the Government intend to implement any of its recommendations as to best practice?

335 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the letter from the CPA, which encloses a draft partnership agreement about this project, is addressed to Mr Speaker and seeks your thoughts. Mr Speaker is aware of the Government's view in respect of Public Accounts Committees in the context of Gibraltar.

340 The Government has not received a copy of the guide referred to by the hon Gentleman. However, the Government understands that a draft was supplied to the Principal Auditor in his capacity as our external auditor when he attended a forum in Miami in March.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for his response.

345 Mr Speaker, invariably I am going to have to tangentially make reference to correspondence that you have kindly supplied me with. The Chief Minister will be aware of a letter dated 2nd June in respect of copying you with the correspondence on the CPA programme, which I presume the Chief Minister has received and has now read.

350 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, is the Chief Minister saying no, he did not receive any communication from Mr Speaker; or no, he has not read them?

355 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have not got a letter of 2nd June; I have got a letter of 1st June.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I apologise – obviously I have got the wrong letter in front of me. The letter of 1st June then, Mr Speaker, he acknowledges having received, although ... Right I see. I have not had sight of your letter, of course, to the Chief Minister; I have had sight of your letter to the CPA.

360 Given that we have established the date of the letter the Chief Minister did receive as 1st June, I take it that he will have had time now to digest it and the attachments, so does he have any view on participating in the programme? Is that a yes or a no?

365 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if he means the programme that is attached to the letter of 15th May, not anything to do with the letters of June, what I see is that our Auditor has already been involved in a lot of the things that are being set out there. So, as far as the Government is concerned, we will consider with the Audit Office what other things it is that they want to participate in. We have never stood in the way of them participating in anything they have considered is helpful to the way that they externally audit the Government.

375 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, as the Chief Minister will be aware, the CPA programme is targeted also at Parliament itself and not just the involvement of the auditors in a jurisdiction. I take it then from the Chief Minister's response that there is no interest on his side of this House in participating in any parliamentary exchanges with Westminster within this programme.

380 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have been involved in parliamentary exchanges with Westminster since I became involved in politics and Joseph Garcia and I started lobbying the Westminster Parliament and started trying to understand the mechanisms there and the mechanisms here, and I commend that to hon. Members opposite.

385 I see one of the things here is the training of Opposition Members in order of how to ask questions. The Government has no intention of becoming the Opposition and therefore does not intend to be trained in how to ask questions. The Government intends to continue being the Government. If hon. Members think that they need training in the way that they ask questions in this House – which I genuinely believe they do, because I do not think they do a very good job, and I am talking of course about the principal Opposition, which is the one questioning me now – they should by all means engage in that training as soon as possible because they need to start doing a damned better job than they are doing now.

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Speaker, I will obviously try harder, since I obviously have not made any impact on the Government, according to the Chief Minister’s measure.

I take it then he has no interest whatsoever in any of the other proposals suggested by the CPA, and certainly I have seen his reaction to Lord Foulkes in respect of the Public Accounts Committee. I take it he has no objection to any other Members of this Parliament participating in that programme and there is no impediment, I take it, from anyone in this House from participating or corresponding with the CPA accordingly. Would I be correct?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, has he read the document? (Hon. R M Clinton: I have.) He has. He tells me from a sedentary position that he has read the document. There is, Mr Speaker, as far as I can detect, only one aspect of this code which I think will require that hon. Members do anything, which is a visit to the UK Parliament from Members of the Gibraltar Parliament. That visit would be a delegation from Gibraltar visiting Westminster, a programme for MPs from Gibraltar in Westminster to serve as a familiarisation for Members, and the Clerk, as to the key areas of scrutiny that constitute their role. It will allow for the Chair, Members and Clerk to explore specific areas in practice and procedure with their counterparts and officials in the UK. The rest, Mr Speaker, is really for the Gibraltar Audit Office.

So, if what Mr Clinton is saying to this House is that he wants us to fund a trip for him to London to go to Westminster on a fact-finding visit to learn how to ask me questions ... Well, Mr Speaker, there is funding for CPA events. If there is budget for it, it is up to him to persuade the Leader of the CPA delegation for Gibraltar – I think it is the hon. Lady – that that is a good way of spending our money. Frankly, Mr Speaker, I think he does need to sharpen up his act. I do not think they are doing a very good job of opposition, but maybe something as easily accessible as BBC Parliament, which recently has featured a number of excellent speeches in respect of Gibraltar both at the Chamber of Commerce Annual Dinner at the United Nations, is a good place to start. Prime Minister’s Question Time at 12.15 on Wednesday, department Question Time – all of that is what they are going to see, Mr Speaker.

By all means, if they think that they need training in order to subject the Government to scrutiny, how could I stand in their way? I think that a trip to London is exactly what the doctor ordered, Mr Speaker.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Chief Minister’s comments, as usual.

I take it, then, he has also read ... Oh, no, he said he had not seen the Good Practice Guide for Overseas Territories. Would he like me to leave a copy behind the Speaker’s Chair for him to peruse at his leisure?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if he is referring to the 2007 document, I have got it. If it is another document, I do not have it.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I will gladly provide it to him. It is dated February 2017 and is specifically in respect of Public Finance Governance in the Overseas Territories, which he may find illuminating.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not want a copy, thank you. I am very grateful that he has offered it, but frankly there was a Chief Minister before me and one before him and one before him and one before him, all of whom felt that we were not going to be told how to do business in this House from outside of this House.

He will find, Mr Speaker, there is a lot of literature on NAO documents of that type, and indeed Foreign Office documents of that type about what it is that they intended to achieve.

440 They are not intended to achieve, I would advise him, the sort of objective that he might be wishing to achieve; they are intending to achieve a slightly deeper objective, which is not necessarily in the best interests of each of the Overseas Territories in question.

He might also like to know, Mr Speaker, that the forerunner of that document, the 2007 document, actually led to the suspension of a constitution in one instance and the calling of a general election in another Overseas Territory. All of those, Mr Speaker, in our view, were not exercises which assisted each of those Overseas Territories in having their people progress in the post-colonial nature of the way that we would want to see our Parliament progressing.

450 At the end of the day hon. Members can decide that they now think – because they did not before the 9th December 2011 – that everything that is done in Westminster must now be done in Gibraltar. I will give him the plethora of quotes from their former leader, the man they say is the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, that suggests that that is not the way for Gibraltar to be progressing.

Our position, Mr Speaker, on the public finances of Gibraltar, on the possibility of a Public Accounts Committee in Gibraltar, is well known, and I will just remind the hon. Gentleman, in case he has not understood it, that we think that a Public Accounts Committee is bad for Gibraltar, that the Commission that we set up, which was independent and included a number of people who had sat with the GSD or the AACR on the benches in this House, thought it was a bad thing for Gibraltar and that we have been consistent in that approach in Government and in Opposition. And should they, Mr Speaker, win an election, there will still not be a Public Accounts Committee in Gibraltar, because if we are the Opposition we will not agree to form part of it.

That is our position, it is our policy position, because we think that is in the best interests of Gibraltar, because we think that is how we best defend Gibraltar's public finances and how we ensure that Gibraltar's public finances are robust at the same time as they are transparent and at the same time as we are accountable. Just because it is done in one way in one Parliament does not mean it is the right way to do it here.

470 But we can have this argument, Mr Speaker, for the next two and a half years: they are not going to change our mind. They are not going to persuade us simply because they come up with a document that suggests that it is done that way somewhere else. We are aware of that. We have factored that into the equation. We have had a debate about that in the context of a motion that he brought in this House. Our position, I think, could not be clearer.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can I start by thanking the Hon. the Chief Minister. I do not often thank him but I want to thank him. I want to thank him because the fact that he says that the Opposition is doing a bad job is a huge confidence boost to this side of the House, because I know that when he says that we are doing a bad job we must be doing a very good job indeed.

Mr Speaker, when the hon. Gentleman refers – as he has on many occasions, for support for his argument that there should not be a Public Accounts Committee – to the report of the committee that the Hon. Mr Speaker, in a different capacity of course, chaired on parliamentary reform, does he not accept that in fact there have been significant factors post that report that make a Public Accounts Committee all the more necessary? I am referring in particular to the fact that the Government, since 2013, has been using and indeed borrowing through Government-owned companies and using for the purpose of Government expenditure nearly £800 million, of which it does not account to this House, and therefore, in the light of that, a Public Accounts Committee becomes all the more necessary because it is the only way that this side of the House can in fact examine how that money in those Government-owned companies is being spent – because the Hon. the Chief Minister certainly does not answer questions on this issue from across the floor of the House.

490 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not me that says they are not doing a good job. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) I think they are doing an excellent job, Mr Speaker. I want

495 them to continue to do the job that led them to a historic defeat in a two-horse race at the last General Election. I do not want them to change, I do not want him to go – I do not want them to change him, Mr Speaker. It is the CPA that thinks that they need training and I have said that if they think that they need training ... because I do not think they are doing a good job at Question Time, but as an Opposition they are superb. I could not have invented them myself – apart from the hon. Lady. I am talking about the official Opposition, Mr Speaker.

500 They have an offer from the UK Parliament to go and spend a couple of days in London: I would take it – London is the most marvellous city in the world, as far as I am concerned. But do
I think that any of the things that he has referred to should lead us to a Public Accounts Committee? Mr Speaker, this demonstrates to me that the hon. Gentleman, the Leader of the Opposition, gets up to talk because he wants to hear his own voice, even though he does not have a clue what he is talking about.

505 First of all, I do not accept any of the amounts that he has bandied about, £800 million etc.
But to get up and say, 'Because you have got £800 million in companies I must have a Public Accounts Committee and that therefore is essential' is to belie the reason why a Public Accounts Committee exists. A Public Accounts Committee exists for the House, Opposition and Government, to quiz civil servants about public expenditure, i.e. the expenditure going through the book, i.e. not the expenditure going through companies. So he has just demonstrated his 510 complete debased understanding of what a Public Accounts Committee is by saying 'I need it to find out what is going through the Government companies.' He has just utterly and completely demonstrated to anybody who on a hot Thursday afternoon may be watching us that at every point that they have been requesting a Public Accounts Committee they do not know what they are asking for. They are saying to the public we must, in order to hold the Government to 515 account, move from a system of pure political parliamentary scrutiny to a system of parliamentary scrutiny of the administration. That is what the PAC does. What Daniel Feetham and Roy Clinton want to do is cross examine civil servants. They want to bring heads, controlling officers, heads of department and the Financial Secretary to this House and ask them questions as if they were in court, with Ministers sitting alongside them also able to ask them questions as 520 if they were in court, to try and grill them, to interrogate civil servants. That is what Mr Feetham and Mr Clinton want to do. That is the system that they want to bring into Gibraltar, and what we have been consistent in saying as one of the arguments that we deploy against the PAC is that we are answerable in this House and that they have to ask the questions of us. They may not like the answers, Mr Speaker, they are not very good at confecting the answers in most 525 instances, but we will not accept that they should have the opportunity to grill civil servants, to cross examine them and to interrogate them as if they were in a court of law.

530 The politicians in this community have to stand up and put up to defend the spending that they do, as we do, Mr Speaker, as we will and, as they will have to realise, is the only way that we will accept is the right way to do politics in this community when it comes to assessing the public finances of Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker: Let me make my position clear. Hon. Members are now beginning to debate the whole question of the Public Accounts Committee. They did that last October and you can do it again next week or the week after, if you want to. But this afternoon there is not going to be any 535 debate on the question of a Public Accounts Committee.

After that lengthy intervention from the Chief Minister I will allow another intervention either from the Hon. Roy Clinton or the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition and then we are moving on.

540 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have a political question; my hon. Friend Mr Clinton has a technical question.

Mr Speaker: I will allow one from each of you.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

545 I have to say that one has to admire the very clever foot shuffle, because that is what came to mind when I was hearing the hon. Gentleman give his reply to my question to the Hon. Chief Minister. He moves from 'Mr Feetham does not understand what he is talking about' to trying to turn, in one answer, the public service against the Opposition.

Mr Speaker, of course we want senior public servants to come before this House as part of a Public Accounts Committee to ask them questions within their realms of responsibility – or doesn't the hon. Gentleman realise that that nearly £800 million in Government-owned companies, which no one knows how they are spending, is actually being run by the directors of those companies, who are public servants? And does he not realise as well that if he, as he has answered in this House on numerous occasions in the past, says to me, 'I am not answerable for the expenditure of Government-owned companies because they have got their own directors, they are public servants,' the only way that we are going to be able to get to the bottom of how that £800 million of the people's money is being spent is by asking questions of the very same people that he himself has drawn our attention to: those public servants?

555 There is absolutely nothing, and does he not accept that there is absolutely nothing wrong with that, because that is the essence and indeed happens all the time in other parliamentary democracies, including the United Kingdom, Mr Speaker?

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

565 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, I...

Mr Speaker: Together, and then that is it.

Hon. Mr R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I will keep my intervention brief. Would the Chief Minister accept that Public Accounts Committees, certainly in the UK, have for many years now also included in their remit Government-owned and controlled companies, and so therefore it was incorrect for him to say that we on this side of the House do not know what we are talking about?

575 Hon. Chief Minister: Let me start at the end, Mr Speaker: no.

Mr Speaker, I have, I think, a political question and a technical question. Well, one of them did not sound very political and the other one did not sound very technical, Mr Speaker.

For 16 years, when hon. Members had a Government of the hue that they defend, there was no Public Accounts Committee in Gibraltar, Mr Speaker. (Interjection by the Hon. D A Feetham: Because the Hon. Joe Bossano did not want it.) For 16 years there was no Public Accounts Committee in Gibraltar, when they were in Government.

585 Now, let's be very clear: he can admire me more or he can admire me less, he can be jealous of my achievements or deprecating of my achievements – and I know he is deprecating, certainly at least when the cameras are rolling he is deprecating. Sometimes through gritted teeth there might be some reluctant recognition of achievement, but it does not matter, Mr Speaker. I do not live my life for his admiration, for his recognition or for his jealousy. I live my life to make this place better for my children.

So I do not accept the figure of £800 million. I think that he just conjects these figures and then wants us to accept them. The figure that he gives is the figure that he gives. He says that nobody knows what we are spending this money on, Mr Speaker, but then he goes on to say that it is all being managed by public servants, so obviously public servants know what we are spending that money on. And of course the projects in many instances which are involved with the companies are announced and the accounts of the companies are put online by the Government – in respect of Credit Finance, there will be accounts of companies which will be filed, so the attempt to create a veneer of secrecy about something that is public is just useless.

600 But of course, that does not mean that those are the public accounts of Gibraltar in the sense that they are not the Estimates before the House. Neither does it mean – to deal with this alleged technical point, as if the hon. Member were a mechanic of finance – that Public Accounts Committees in the UK deal with Government companies and therefore I was wrong in the point I was making. Well, if there were a Public Accounts Committee in Gibraltar it could only deal with the things that the House already deals with, which means that Government companies would not be within it; so the hon. Gentleman is wrong, because he is assuming that if we were to create one we would create it in the way that he wants, and we would not. But we will not create one anyway.

605 Frankly, Mr Speaker, what they do not understand on the other side is that Gibraltar is not a nation of 60 million people, and I know why they do not understand it. They do not understand it because even when they were in Government one of their number said in answer to a question, ‘Oh, I’m not dealing with that, that is being dealt with by central Government’, as if we had a huge Government with local authorities etc. which had to be brought together by a Public 610 Accounts Committee. That is not the reality. This is a small administration and we are answerable for the spending. They might not like the answers that they get, they might not like that Gibraltar is doing so well, they might not like the fact that we are successful, they might not like that people agree with us, but that is the reality and we are not going to interpose for ourselves as a shield between us and them, civil servants. Civil servants today, as controlling 615 officers, spend in keeping with the Estimates Book that we are going to defend next week, and when that spending is done we come to this House to defend it. We stand up to their questioning, we provide the information, and if they do not like it they have the chance to ask many, many supplementaries. That is the way that they can drill down. And that is what they will be told, if they happen to go for the weekend off in London, that is what they will be told that 620 they have to do: that they have to ask searching questions to which they will get detailed answers, to which they will pretend they have not had an answer to go and create the veneer of a lack of accountability and a lack of transparency which is not there because this is the most transparent and accountable Government Gibraltar has had in its history – so transparent and so 625 accountable that we put most of the information in the public domain and they do not even bother to check it, but the public can and they know that their spending and their public finances are safe in the hands of a prudent, responsible, accountable and transparent Government of GSLP Liberal hue.

Q405/2017

Financial Services Commission –
Licences issued since Brexit referendum

Clerk: Question 405. The Hon. R M Clinton.

630 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide a breakdown by type of licence of the 21 licences issued by the FSC since the date of the Brexit referendum to the date of the Chamber of Commerce Dinner on 26th April 2017?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

635 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as I told those gathered at the Annual Dinner of the Society of Accountants last night – I was surprised not to see him there – I have an apology to make for having misled some of you who might have attended the recent Chamber of Commerce Annual Dinner, from which I understand this question derives. I told the Chamber 640 then that the FSC had issued 21 new licences since 24th June last year, the date of the result of 645 the referendum, but when I tried to stand that figure up, I confess it was an error. In fact, 26 new financial services licences have been issued since the result of the Brexit referendum was announced. I stand delighted and corrected, Mr Speaker. Two are category 3 MIFID licences, four are for new corporates licences as company managers, six are for individuals licensed as company managers, three are AIFIM licences, two are EIF director licences, one is for an EIF fund, one is for a new insurance company, another is for a new insurance intermediary company, one is for an occupational pension, two more are for MIFID branches, one is for a prospectus and two are for statutory auditors. That is the total of 26. In addition, Mr Speaker, you might also like to know that there have been two licence extensions in the insurance sector also.

650 I am sorry, Mr Speaker, to have provided such an extensive list, but I understand that there are some doubting Thomases out there. I have, I hope, nonetheless given the House a feel for some of the more important areas of business that are being licensed and the areas of business we are working on developing further.

Q406-408/2017

Counter-terrorism and terrorism financing –
Number of trained police officers receiving

655 Clerk: Question 406. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many of our current active police officers have received training in counter-terrorism?

660 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): I will answer with Question 407 and 408.

Clerk: Question 407. The Hon. E J Phillips.

665 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many of those active police officers who have received counter-terrorism training have also undertaken specific training in terrorism financing?

670 Clerk: Question 408. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state whether or not there is a specific branch of the Royal Gibraltar Police which is focused on counter-terrorism?

675 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, these questions seek information about the capabilities of our law enforcement agencies in dealing with terrorism. It is not in our community's common interest for us to be publicly debating these capabilities. This is a matter on which I am happy, nonetheless, to brief the hon. Members privately, if they wish.

680 Indeed, in the opinion of the Government, Mr Speaker, it is equally foolish to advertise potential security issues such as breaches at the frontier fence. Luckily, however, when the Member opposite issued his press statement this week in respect of a breach at the frontier fence, that breach had been repaired some three weeks before.

685 When there are security issues which concern Members opposite it goes without saying that the prudent thing for them to do is to call the office of the Chief Minister and seek to speak to me or their relevant opposite number, in this case the Minister for Justice. Perhaps if they get no joy they might then want to take further action, but to issue a statement with a photograph of a breach of the frontier fence is a nonsensical approach to an alleged security issue. It is to offer an illustration of an alleged vulnerability, an advertisement of a potential danger.

690 The Government is dealing daily with such breaches. In fact, when we were first elected in December 2011 the frontier fence to the east of the commercial gate up to Eastern Beach was a single chain-link fence. A second Heras fence line running parallel to the original frontier fence was erected six months later in June 2012 and the space between the fences was filled with razor wire coils. The project cost for that second layer of protection for Gibraltar was £110,000.
695 Mr Speaker, it was this side of the House that invested in that double filter to make accessing Gibraltar harder. So perhaps, Mr Speaker, less cheap and immature point scoring and more responsible and mature thinking from the Hon. Member opposite might better serve Gibraltar.

I note, Mr Speaker, that the Hon. Ms Hassan Nahon expressed similar sentiments in an exchange of emails to which I was copied, in which she herself picked up the irresponsibility of these questions from the Hon. Members opposite.
700

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, dealing with a number of points raised by the Chief Minister, I have a number of questions.

The first relates to the reasons why the Chief Minister says that he cannot provide answers to those questions, albeit he is prepared to give the answers behind the Speaker's Chair. Does the 705 Chief Minister not agree with me that in countries in Europe, and particularly in the United Kingdom, where there are specific departments that deal with counter-terrorism, the information is readily available to Members of Parliament of those particular jurisdictions, and particularly in the United Kingdom, where counter-terrorism agencies provide information to, 710 for example, the Home Office by way of committee, questions are asked of Ministers as to resources? Has he not forgotten that in London of late there have been significant questions asked to Ministers in that jurisdiction regarding the resources and capability of the Metropolitan Police Force and the security services in the United Kingdom? Don't you think it is right, Chief Minister, that we should be allowed to ask questions –

715

Mr Speaker: No, you are addressing the Chair: 'Don't you think it is right, Mr Speaker ...'

Hon. E J Phillips: Don't you think it is right, Mr Speaker, that I can ask questions about the capability of our force here, so that members of the public can be reassured as to the capability, 720 capacity or otherwise of our security services in this jurisdiction? It happens everywhere else. We do not know why it cannot happen here.

Hon. Chief Minister: It is not that we cannot provide the information, Mr Speaker; it is that I have told him I am prepared to offer it to him but not across the floor of this House. Maybe he 725 had forgotten that that is what I said when I started giving the answer.

It is not that Members of Parliament in the United Kingdom have been engaged in debate as to capabilities, Mr Speaker; they have been engaged in debate as to numbers of police officers. Mr Speaker, the numbers of police officers are in the Estimates Book – he can see what the numbers are.

730 Nobody is saying that we should not debate the numbers of police officers, but drilling down to ask specific questions about capability in a place the size of Gibraltar does start to create issues. Let's be very clear. If you are talking about a place the size of the United Kingdom and you talk about the capability there – even a place the size of London, Mr Speaker – it is impossible for somebody who is observing that area to say the capability is here or there. When 735 you are talking about a place the size of Gibraltar and we start talking about specific capabilities, it is very easy to start to assess vulnerabilities. Is he saying to me that he does not consider it is possible that debating those capabilities publicly could not expose potential vulnerabilities, and is he prepared to take the risk that he might be wrong?

740 Hon. E J Phillips: I believe he is asking me a question and I am not prepared to answer that question. I have asked a question not about capability; I have asked the Chief Minister, Mr Speaker, very specifically about numbers, about personnel. I have not asked about capability. He is trying to corner this debate and argument in capability. It is not the question I put to him. Will the Chief Minister answer that question? The question I put to him is about numbers, not 745 about capability, and in light of that is he prepared to answer it?

Hon. Chief Minister: Oh, it is very illustrative, Mr Speaker, that he was not prepared to answer the rhetorical question, isn't it? The minute that responsibility passes for the consequences of potential risk, the hon. Member steps back: 'It's not going to be my fault if 750 something goes wrong, let it be yours.'

Mr Speaker, he has asked about capability. He has asked about the numbers of police officers trained in a particular area. That is asking about capability. The debate in the United Kingdom has been about numbers of police officers; this is about numbers of police officers trained in specific skills.

755 Again, I am not saying no to him; I am saying to him 'not across the floor of this House'. If he is genuinely concerned, Mr Speaker, why hasn't he said, 'Fair enough, let me have the information not across the floor of this House'? If he is genuinely concerned, why doesn't he want to have the information? If he is genuinely concerned, why does he just want to have a tennis match about the information, a political tennis match across the floor of this House?
760 Answer, Mr Speaker: because he is not genuinely concerned.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I have a number of questions in relation to these points. I am not after a tennis match with the Chief Minister on this issue. I accept his invitation to go behind the Speaker's Chair and for him to give me that information so that I can have that reassurance, 765 so that if anyone asks me in town, up and down town, about that question I can say to them the Chief Minister has reassured me these questions are nothing to worry about. I am quite happy to accept that open invitation.

I was asking very pertinent questions, innocuous questions about numbers. I have the answer from him and I am satisfied with that, and we will take the subject up behind the Speaker's 770 Chair.

One of the points that was made, obviously, by the Chief Minister was in relation to the hole in the fence, Mr Speaker, and I think the Chief Minister forgets completely what he did in 2013. He accuses me and Members on this side of the House that we have somehow neglected Gibraltar and shown the world that there is a hole in the fence to climb through – shown 775 terrorists that there is a hole to climb through the fence, Mr Speaker. Well, in 2013 he highlighted the significant danger to security. He does not even read his own press releases, Mr Speaker. How does the Chief Minister reconcile his statement in December 2013 – and I am happy to quote it to him – with what he is suggesting the Opposition is doing now?

780 Hon. Chief Minister: I really wish Peter Caruana was back in this House, Mr Speaker, so we had some real in-depth intellectual logic at least coming to us from the other side of the House.

I do not know whether the hon. Gentleman has detected that what I am saying he did, which was irresponsible, was publish the photograph of what he obviously thought – unless he was saying something in his press release which was known to him not to be true – was then a 785 current hole in the fence. That is what he said, Mr Speaker, and that is the photograph that he published. In other words, he said, 'Hole in fence: come into Gibraltar here.' Luckily, three weeks before, we had covered that hole in the fence. I am telling him that there is a security issue at the fence. I am not saying that talking about a security issue at the fence is against the interests

790 of Gibraltar. It is obvious there is a security issue at the fence. We have talked about it, we have said we are dealing with it, we have added a second layer of fence and barbed wire. What we have not done is told people where there is a hole in the fence so they can go and come in to Gibraltar through there. That is what creates the security issue for Gibraltar.

I am quite happy to have a detailed debate about this with him, but can we please have it on things that are pertinent and can we please make this a little bit more intellectually rigorous.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, there we go with the feet shuffling again, I have to say.

Does he not accept that there are inherent inconsistencies in the statement that the Chief Minister is making to this House and also publicly – as many inconsistencies as there are holes in the fence? He comes to this House and he says, ‘Well, the real problem was that you published a photograph of a hole in the fence, and that is a security risk for Gibraltar,’ – the same hole, it has to be said, that he says was covered three weeks ago. But does he not accept that actually there is more than one hole in the fence and that indeed only yesterday 34 people with sticks and with stones came in, not flying but through the holes in the fence, and in fact were only deterred because the RGP and our law enforcement officers had to deploy in riot gear with dogs? Does he not accept that there is a fundamental inconsistency in the statements that he is making to this House and publicly?

Hon. Chief Minister: I genuinely miss Sir Peter – genuinely, Mr Speaker.

The hon. Gentleman can try and do the Harlem shuffle and try and play the shuffle joke as many times as he likes, but this is too serious for joking. It is too serious even to see him dancing on a pin head as he is trying to do now.

810

There are no holes in the fence, Mr Speaker. There will be holes in the fence probably tonight. They will be covered again tomorrow. Every day there is an ongoing exercise of covering holes in the fence, not because we have fencing that can be cut – because we are seeking to implement fencing that cannot be cut, what is known as category 4 fencing – but because there is not a secure area on the Spanish side. That means that people drive their 4x4 vehicles up to the fence, attach them to the fence and pull it away, and that can happen in a moment. But on the same day that these 34 that the hon. Gentleman talks about were stopped and searched by the Police, by the way – he does know that they were not arrested but stopped and searched by the Police and the law enforcement agencies of Gibraltar, including Customs and the GDP, who do a magnificent job there and elsewhere in keeping Gibraltar safe – he does know that somebody swam in. So the holes in the fence, which today they are making the central cause célèbre that they bring to this Parliament, were not how a gentleman swam into Gibraltar to hand himself in to the Royal Gibraltar Police because he was wanted in the United Kingdom. Or are they not aware of that? Or is it that they do not go to the local beaches and see people on jet-skis go from one part of the European geography to another, something which is entirely common, proper and appropriate?

815

825

Mr Speaker, the Government deals with the issue of holes in the frontier fence every single day. Every morning we deal with the issues. Some mornings there are more, some mornings there are less, Mr Speaker. Maybe the next thing that will happen is that he will get up and he will say, ‘I will build a wall and I will get Spain to pay for it!’ It is politics which has proved dramatically successful somewhere else. He might want to take a leaf out of that book. I know that he tweets that people who do not appear to be doing well in polls then do remarkably better than people expect, but let it be that he decides that his policy after he leaves here today is to build a wall and get Spain to pay for it.

830

835

We have a serious security issue which we deal with every single day. We never deal with it by publishing photographs of the hole in the fence, because if the Hon. Mr Phillips published the photograph thinking, as his press release discloses, that it was still there and it needed to be dealt with and the next thing he knew, 34 people had come in through a hole in the fence, was he at least thinking, ‘Oh, my goodness, did they gain access to Gibraltar through Phillips’ gap or

840

Phillips' gate? Was it that they found where I had said the hole was and that was the warren that they used to get into Gibraltar?' He should at least have had that concern, given that he had published a photograph thinking there was a current hole in the fence.

845 We can have this political debate until the cows come home, Mr Speaker, but Gibraltar has a security issue there that the Government deals with every day, and getting up and accusing me of dancing, of doing the waltz or doing the shuffle, does not help, and publishing photographs of holes in the fence which they say make Gibraltar vulnerable, thinking the holes are still there, is just damned right irresponsible. The most irresponsible action that a politician could take is to think he has identified a vulnerability and to publish it so that it might be exploited. That is 850 absolutely disgraceful, Mr Speaker. It is one thing to recognise that there is a security issue and it is quite another to publish where it is and to invite illegal access to Gibraltar through that particular advertised hole that he thought was there. Disgraceful, Mr Speaker!

Mr Speaker: Before I allow another supplementary, I want to make it clear that we have here
855 three questions on the Order Paper, all dealing with the question of counter-terrorism, which is loosely connected, I suppose, with holes in the fence –

Hon. D A Feetham: No, he raised the hole in the fence.

860 Mr Speaker: But it is now. The Chief Minister chose to widen the whole aspect of the matter by dealing with the question of the holes in the fence, and therefore I have been patient and liberal in allowing a number of exchanges on that matter. But that is not the subject of the three questions, and the three questions the Chief Minister has given an indication that he is prepared to give the information necessary. There is not much room behind my Chair, but I suppose it will 865 be in No. 6, or somewhere else. But that is it. I do not think that the hon. Member should continue to flog any further the issue of the holes. I heard today on GBC a very detailed report and news item on the matter, and now the hon. Members are transposing it from GBC here to Parliament.

870 Since the Chief Minister has been the last Member to rise, I am prepared to allow one other intervention from hon. Members of the Opposition. If it is a question I will allow an answer from the Government and that is it – we leave the holes behind and hope that somebody takes care of them.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, there is one question relating to certain allegations that the 875 Hon. the Chief Minister has thrown across the floor in relation to how disgraceful the conduct of the Opposition is in identifying a hole and somehow creating a danger for those that wish to harm this community, but it is completely inaccurate.

The Chief Minister, with the greatest of respect to him, in 2013 told the world that there was a danger in the frontier fence, which had holes in it. I will read it to him:

We are continuing to extend the powers available to HM Customs and Royal Gibraltar Police officers in dealing with illicit tobacco activity and investing in repairing those parts of the frontier fence which have been damaged by those involved in this trade. Last year Government spent £129,513.96 on repairs to the frontier fence and erecting new fencing which is harder to damage. The work we commissioned had not been done for years, but now requires further action to protect not just against this illicit trade in tobacco and the danger to our hard working law enforcement officials arising from it, but also the security danger posed by potential unauthorised access to Gibraltar through holes in the frontier.

880 It is the Chief Minister who puts to the wide world the security danger of the fence, not this side of the House, Mr Speaker. And what has he done in three years to deal with the question of the frontier fence: spent £130,000 and the fence is falling apart. Does my hon. Friend agree with me?

885 Hon. D A Feetham: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I really do not know how to start.

The hon. Gentleman, I am very grateful, has read a press release of 2013 where it illustrates a danger that I have confirmed is the case. I have gone into detail about that danger, Mr Speaker. 890 Doesn't he understand that what he did was not talk about the danger – he issued a press release with a photograph of where he thought there was a current actual hole in the fence. There are no holes in the fence today. Every morning they are dealt with. There are holes in the fence at night, which are made by people who seek to access Gibraltar illegally. The Royal Gibraltar Police and the Customs and GDP sometimes also deploy to stop people getting access 895 to Gibraltar illegally. The operation is not just there; it is in different areas to prevent the access to Gibraltar of people who come in not through the recognised entry points.

There is a danger, however, Mr Speaker, that with a fence we are not able to do much. If we built the best fence in the world ... I have just told him, Mr Speaker, if you attach the best fence in the world to the bumper of a 4x4, because there is not a secure area on the Spanish side, you 900 can pull the fence down. That is the challenge we are dealing with. Am I disclosing something, Mr Speaker? Well, those who attach the 4x4s to the fence and pull it off already know. But those who did not know that that hole existed in the fence had its existence, as he thought that it was, advertised to them by him. So he thought, 'Ha, ha! I'm going to embarrass the Government. I have a photograph of a hole in the fence – I'm going to publish the hole in the fence so that the 905 Government is embarrassed.' Embarrassed was he when he was told that three weeks before that hole in the fence had been fixed; but he published it thinking it was there, advertising it to anyone who that day felt that they should come into Gibraltar and did not have the cutters available. That is what he did, Mr Speaker. That is what I am saying is disgraceful. He created, thinking it was there, a manual for the illegal access into Gibraltar for anyone who cared to read 910 GSD press releases. Luckily, I do not think many people do.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can I, please? The Hon. the Chief Minister was just reflecting that I did raise my concerns about these questions to be raised, and I obviously wholeheartedly agree that it is a security risk to discuss these sensitive matters in Parliament. I 915 have to say that I am absolutely flabbergasted that two long-established lawyers here – (Hon. D A Feetham: Is there a question there?) Yes, there is a question if you wait, thank you very much. (Chief Minister: We always have to wait for you.)

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: We always have to wait about half an hour to listen to the 920 question mark.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am flabbergasted that two lawyers from Gibraltar 925 here do not understand the danger of discussing security details in a Parliament in a community of 30,000 people in today's world, the way things are. I, as a mother, am worried sick every single day and that is why I was worried sick when I saw the questions, because releasing our vulnerabilities in a small community like Gibraltar cannot be anything but dangerous.

So what I want to ask is, for those of us who genuinely care and want to discuss security in a 930 prudent manner, is the Chief Minister willing to provide us with a forum where we can properly and privately discuss these matters and get an update on risks and threats moving forward, please?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady is reflecting the thing I said when I started, 935 that I was happy to meet behind the Speaker's Chair, which, as the Speaker has rightly said, would be in my office. But I think that she is wrong not also to reflect that very often she has raised things with me directly and had the opportunity to have my thinking and the thinking of others with responsibility in this area in relation to any particular issue that has concerned her. And I think that is absolutely the right way to proceed.

940 I have on a number of occasions proposed something like the Privy Council, called the Gibraltar Consultative Council, that would be progressing in the United Kingdom where leaders of the opposition and members of the opposition are brought into Privy Council national security briefings on the basis of swearing an oath of non-disclosure. We have had the debate about oaths of non-disclosure in this House already. There are some people in this House apparently 945 who think the Privy Council is just about letters before your name, nonsensically – but never mind.

So, yes, Mr Speaker, I am prepared, as with the hon. Gentleman who I have made the offer to, to extend to her the opportunity to discuss these issues and to brief her in respect of any issues that concern her, not in this House. I commend her, Mr Speaker, for never having raised 950 these issues in public, for never having printed photographs of things that she has considered vulnerabilities that others might be able to exploit and for taking quite the most mature attitude to this debate that I have seen from that side of the House this afternoon.

Mr Speaker: Let us now move on to the next item on the Agenda.

955

Hon. D A Feetham: [inaudible]

Clerk: Question 409. The Hon. D A Feetham.

960 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: You are the most toxic person and you are the common denominator of the whole opposition, rather than one by one.

Q409/2017

Public service employees with criminal convictions – Government policy

Clerk: Question 409. The Hon. D A Feetham.

965 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what is the policy in relation to the employment of individuals within the public service, including the GDC, Government-owned companies, authorities and agencies, who have been convicted of criminal offences?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

970 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman really should pick on me and not on anybody else. I am delighted to take him on.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

975 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar has a legal obligation to vet all applicants and to consider any convictions disclosed by the applicant or the relevant vetting scheme in line with the provisions and guidelines under paragraph 25, of the 'Rehabilitation of Offenders', of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011.

980 Through these guidelines Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar makes provisions to protect those applicants who have committed a crime in the past, but who have reformed their ways, from being marked forever with the tag of 'criminal' – something I thought there was a large measure of agreement on across the floor of this House, Mr Speaker. Therefore, after a period of time, as specified under Schedule 11 of the Act, these convictions will be spent, meaning that they cannot, under normal circumstances, be referred to in the future and there is no need for a person convicted to reveal the conviction when applying for a job or for it to be taken into account when the person has been vetted for employment.

985 However, there are some exceptions to regarding convictions as being spent for some professions, posts and appointments. In these circumstances prospective applicants are obliged to reveal any spent convictions so that HMGoG may be aware of them, and so that they may be taken into account only if relevant.

990 Furthermore, the law recognises the needs of employers to consider the background of individuals in order to ensure that vulnerable groups, such as children or vulnerable adults, are protected. Therefore, in line with Schedule 12 of the Act, a number of offices and employments are exempt from the rehabilitation periods and, due to the sensitive nature of the work entailed, any previous convictions an applicant may have are not considered as spent.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I thank the Hon. the Chief Minister for the answer.

1000 I had the pleasure of moving the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act in 2011 that dealt with the provisions that the Hon. the Chief Minister has just referred to in relation to rehabilitation of offenders.

1005 My question is more focused on situations where people have not been rehabilitated. Could the Hon. the Chief Minister provide me with some information in relation to that: where you have somebody who is not rehabilitated, what is the general Government policy in relation to offering employment to that person with that unspent conviction, if there is one?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there may be some instances where individuals offend whilst they are in the employment of the Government, and the Government, depending on the nature of the offence, may work with the individual to deal with matters – which, for example, might relate to addiction – or may find that it has no alternative but to dismiss the individual if matters relate to dishonesty, for example.

1010 Then there are situations where individuals are in the job market and the Government opens a vacancy in one of the Government companies, the GDC, the authorities or the agencies. That is a competitive process, and in the context of somebody who has a conviction, given the number of applications we tend to get when we go out for vacancies to the public, it would be unusual to see somebody who has a conviction being the successful individual, but depending on the conviction it is not impossible that somebody might be employed given the criteria provided for the employment and what it is that their conviction relates to.

1015 We are talking in such wide parameters, Mr Speaker, it is almost impossible to zero in on an issue.

1020 Hon. D A Feetham: So, Mr Speaker, the position really, as I understand it, is that the Government and the public service remain flexible in relation to this issue and will look at all the circumstances of the case, including the gravity of the conviction and also the relevance of any conviction to the employment, before making a decision, and that there is no complete bar on the employment of an individual with a criminal conviction. That is the question.

1025 May I also in this regard thank ... I said to the Hon. Minister Costa that I would thank him across the floor of this House. He is not here to hear my gratitude expressed to him, but the reason why this question arises and the reason for my thanks to Minister Costa – and I posed this question in March of this year, so it is quite a long time ago – is that we had an incident with three nurses who had been recruited, and then three weeks into their employment they found that each one had a criminal conviction and each one was then essentially dismissed. I raised the matter with Minister Costa and Minister Costa looked at each individual case, and I know that at least one of those nurses has now been reinstated and I am extremely grateful to him yet again 1035 for listening to concerns that I have raised with him. But the question was posed so that I could understand and I could then advise – because it is not the first time that this issue has arisen – advise constituents in relation to what is the position of the Government on this.

1040 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful that he is grateful to Minister Costa. The same three nurses came to see me and I think I dealt with the one who was able to take employment, because you see the one thing that is not set out in the question that the hon. Gentleman has put and the way he has developed it, is what type of offence we are dealing with. If you are dealing with somebody who, as a juvenile, is involved in a harassment or a fight with somebody and is in their early 20s and has not got into trouble again, although the thing might not have been spent in keeping with the rules, then frankly the reason for a particular agency like the Care Agency or the Health Authority etc. to have a rule on convictions which really relates to having people in a secure area with drugs, does not engage; whilst if you have got others who have been involved in more serious offences which are more recent, then it does engage. So I will take the thanks on behalf of the Government, Mr Speaker. I do not require him to thank me. It is quite enough that the lady in question was delighted that we had been able to resolve their problems.

1050 Mr Speaker, the question posed is too wide. When you are dealing with one particular type of conviction it may be possible to accept somebody into employment, and when you are dealing with another it might not be. So I think we need to understand that this is a question of degree, that there is a risk assessment done in the context of each particular post of employment, and that issues are not black and white. We would be fighting against a black and white rule that said a conviction completely excludes you from the possibility of having a job. We would think that that is not appropriate. There have to be degrees of understanding. There has to be something more nuanced than just black or white. I have got convictions for parking my car in the wrong place, Mr Speaker, and I have put my hands up to them on occasions and paid the £25 fine – although these days I tend not to drive myself to most places. But one is a conviction as much as the conviction of murder, so that is why these things are not black and white or set in stone.

1065 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, I agree that they are not black and white, but there is a need for a little bit of clarity and guidance, I think, to the individuals within the public service that are making these decisions. In the example that I have given, and I am not going to go into specifics of the convictions that we are concerned with, but one of the people that was not reinstated had a more minor – and, Mr Speaker, I hope the House takes my word for that, bearing in mind that I am a lawyer, but anyway, it is my view ... a more minor conviction than the person who was reinstated. I know that Minister Costa is in fact dealing with this, but the fact that we are in a situation where one has been reinstated, two have not, one of them, in my view a lesser conviction, still has not, I think does show that perhaps it is something that the Government ought to look at in the provision of some guidance in relation to this.

1075 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think I have set out very clearly what the position of the Government is. What the position of the public sector will be when dealing with these issues, whether an offence is serious or less serious, whether the conviction is for the commission of an offence at the top of the scale or at the bottom of the scale, is a matter of degree. A black and white rule would be unfair both in respect of those who have committed offences that are deemed to be more minor and in respect of those who might have been criminals who are convicted of a very serious level of crime in respect of what might otherwise be seen as a minor offence.

1080 So I think it is right that this should no longer be simply an issue that is black and white. That is where all of the thinking has been; that is what the rehabilitation of offenders provision is all about. And, Mr Speaker, given that the hon. Gentleman spends most of his time telling us to employ fewer people in the public sector, I am surprised he is trying to pursue this line of questioning at this time, but hope springs eternal.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Order of the Day

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDERS

Standing Order 19 suspended to proceed with Government motions

Clerk: Order of the Day, Government Motions. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

I beg to move under Standing Order 59 to proceed with the suspension of Standing Order 19 in order to proceed with Government Motions.

Mr Speaker: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

GOVERNMENT MOTIONS

Freedom of the City of Gibraltar – Mr Christian Hook

Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

THIS HOUSE:

RECOGNISES the outstanding achievements by Christian Hook in the world of the arts, where his skill and dedication have made him a recognized master in his profession and he can count on his works being in the most important private collections and notable museums and galleries;

CONGRATULATES Christian Hook most notably for the extraordinary accolade of having work displayed in the permanent collections of the Scottish National Gallery, the Museum of Liverpool and the Bolton Museum, and for being the first ever Gibraltarian to have his work exhibited in the National Portrait Gallery in London, thereby making him a major international artistic presence particularly in the UK;

NOTES his work has been selected to appear in the book 100 Masterpieces from the National Galleries of Scotland;

RECALLS him winning the Sky Arts Portrait Artist of the Year, the extraordinary successes that have followed and that his longstanding popularity in Gibraltar has been extended beyond our borders and that his work is in great demand internationally;

TAKES NOTE that at every opportunity he refers to himself as a Gibraltarian artist and by his heritage always being at the forefront thereby promotes Gibraltar;

COMMENDS him for, in addition to his artistic achievements, dedicating his time to charitable and community acts despite his overwhelmingly busy schedule;

CONSIDERS that Gibraltar should rightly be proud of these remarkable achievements; and HEREBY DECLARES that the Freedom of the City of Gibraltar be conferred on Christian Hook in view of his magnificent accomplishments and successes in the arts.

1100 Mr Speaker, I am delighted to bring this motion. There is no doubt that Christian Hook is a great Gibraltarian talent and a talent that has become internationally recognised in a short period of time.

1105 He is, of course, someone who needs no introduction. As Gibraltarians we have all known of Christian's talents for many years. I certainly have, Mr Speaker, having been at school with Christian when his skill was already apparent to us who sat next to him at art at an early age. His accomplishments and level of acclaim have reached new heights in the last few years and these are indeed remarkable.

1110 Having known Christian since childhood, I am therefore, of course, a follower of his work. His style is original, his paintings are rooted in tradition and yet have freshness and vitality – and aren't I pleased that I bought one of them before he won Sky Arts Artist of the Year, Mr Speaker! He describes his style as constructing paintings and deconstructing them and he has a fascination with the broken image. His originality is in the way that he captures motion and light in his paintings and he certainly has a very unique way of painting. You cannot but help admire his work.

1115 The most notable of his achievements must be that of his works displayed in the permanent collections of not one but three important museums in the United Kingdom: a portrait of actress Sue Johnson is displayed at the Museum of Liverpool and forms part of its collection; his portrait of Amir Khan is at the Bolton Museum; and the portrait of actor Alan Cumming is displayed at the Scottish National Portrait Gallery. This tremendous accomplishment clearly makes him a 1120 major artistic presence and his portrait of Alan Cumming has in fact been deemed to be one of the 100 greatest masterpieces in Scotland's National Galleries. The decision was made by the Director General of Scotland's National Galleries in his book, in which 100,000 works were considered and Christian's managed to make it into the last 100, featured alongside artists such as Vincent van Gogh, Pablo Picasso and Diego Velázquez.

1125 Christian has been extremely dedicated to his work throughout his career. He studied illustration at Middlesex University, London, before initially establishing a career as an illustrator at the Royal College of Art, and he has undertaken many notable works in the UK before returning to Gibraltar to work as a teacher. That changed in around 2014 when he was named Sky Arts Portrait Artist of the Year and the rest of the UK came to know what we all in Gibraltar 1130 already knew, that his talent is remarkable and unique.

1135 Since the Sky Arts programme, Christian has truly been catapulted internationally. Not many people can say that they can count on their works being in the most important private collections, museums and galleries. His work is even included in the collection of His Royal Highness, Prince Edward. He has had several exhibitions at the Clarendon Gallery in London, painting many high-profile figures including the Duchess of York, Sarah Ferguson, and he has had a documentary programme for Sky. He published two books last year and also painted the Maharaja of Jodhpur. Recently he featured in the Financial Times Smart Arts Supplement – in fact, Mr Speaker, on the front page.

1140 This weekend his original works will be displayed for a limited period on board the Queen Victoria cruise ship when it leaves from the Port of Gibraltar on Sunday. As an artist he is clearly in very high demand, but notwithstanding his status and extremely busy schedule Christian never forgets Gibraltar and that he is from the Rock. That is one of the things that makes Christian different from so many and a true Gibraltarian. Early last year Christian was involved in assisting the service users at St Bernadette’s Resource Centre by preparing art work for an exhibition that would take place locally and in Milan. Later in the year he spoke at our Gibunco Gibraltar Literary Festival, and earlier this year he spoke at the University of Gibraltar’s Beacon series of lectures. Not only does he dedicate his time to supporting Gibraltar events and is associated with local causes, but at every opportunity he always declares himself a proud Gibraltarian.

1150 Mr Speaker, it is only right and proper that we recognise Christian’s efforts, his professional attainment and achievements. It is important that accomplished Gibraltarians are recognised and it is right and proper that someone who has reached this level of professional attainment and international acclaim and who so faithfully represents Gibraltar at all times be acknowledged in this most unique and honoured manner. I therefore, Mr Speaker, commend the motion to the House. (Banging on desks)

1155 Mr Speaker: I now put the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Hon. Chief Minister.

1160 The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1165 Can I start off by thanking the Leader of the Opposition for giving me this opportunity to reply. It is a motion presented by the Chief Minister and the unwritten rule would normally have seen the Leader of the Opposition reply, but given that I am, from this side of the House, the one who has known Christian for the longest, I volunteered to come up with some words and express a bit more intimacy with this extraordinary Gibraltarian, as the Chief Minister has very kindly tried to explain his relatively short life so far in such a comprehensive but yet succinct manner.

1170 I remember Christian as a very, very young lad. He grew up in Varyl Begg Estate, their family of course being relatively close neighbours of mine, and we had this [inaudible] and I concur with the Chief Minister, who recalls him from his school days: from an extremely young age he had that special talent, that gift that us non-artistic persons can only feel but envious about, and I am really glad to see that Christian put that to use to make a career out of it, because after his study at Middlesex University in London – I think the Chief Minister highlighted that – he actually started, like everyone does in life, doing things that at first seem a bit menial and so on. But certainly not for Christian, because he was an illustrator for Disney – that is not known by many people – and for Reader’s Digest, certainly a booklet that has become very popular for many families. And of course he got involved with English Heritage and the National Trust, among many other publishers, so he has always been there waiting for that big break to come. And before that big break came, he threw his hand at lecturing and illustration in the Royal College of Art, and luckily for Gibraltar he returned and our students had the benefit of having him as an art teacher. So the ladies were really lucky at Westside School, in that they were taught by 1185 someone who will go down not only in local history but in the international history books as being an artist very worthy of his works, to be compared with the likes of people like those who were, according to Christian, influences in his development of art. Cézanne gave him a great interest because Christian was always following a motto that said we are always on the move, if not physically at least mentally. And therefore Christian spent time studying others. Lucien Freud, for example, came to be someone who influenced him and he has developed that specific style that luckily some in Gibraltar ...

1190 I am glad to be on the same wavelength as the Chief Minister. He and I are both lucky enough to own a personal painting done by Christian before he got that fame, the prices of which I do not think either the Chief Minister or I nowadays could afford because they are certainly going into six-figure sums. Someone who can exhibit and within hours have his works of art sold in Mayfair is certainly worthy of at least ... I am always willing to take my hat off to him. But I am really grateful, Christian, that you came to that deal with my wife many years ago somehow or other. It was all above board, but she liked what you were drafting and I hope that my granddaughter so far ... If we have any further grandchildren we will have to cut it in pieces, this lovely portrait that my wife commissioned Christian to do of me. I am really proud and will now put a little sticker below it saying, 'Honorary Freeman of the City of Gibraltar'.

1200 Christian will follow in the footsteps of Gustavo Bacarisas, our first recipient of the Freedom of the City of Gibraltar. I am going to drop a hint that the Mayor may wish to take up in future. If we go to the City Hall today, in the Mayor's Parlour there is this lovely Gibraltar scene done by Gustavo Bacarisas, so maybe one day – since Christian will also join that roll of Freemen of the City of Gibraltar – we can have something by Christian Hook alongside it. I know Gustavo's painting was done on the occasion of the visit by Her Majesty the Queen, but I do not think anyone on either side of this House would have any objections if the Queen decides to come along and then we will get Christian to do yet another painting that can also be exhibited there at the City Hall and enhance that beautiful Mayor's Parlour.

1210 Yes, it is true that – the Chief Minister already pointed out – Christian has had successes. His Royal Highness Prince Edward already owns paintings done by Christian, and of course the subject of Alan Cumming was what gave him that extra break that perhaps he needed by winning the Sky Arts Competition. But certainly a worthwhile investment, for those who like the world of books, is getting Sir John Leighton's book with a hundred masterpieces, in which a hundred were selected from, I am told, well over 100,000 pieces of work. So that is quite an achievement and we, as Gibraltarians, feel extremely proud that Christian has made it into it, that Christian at no time shies away from being a son of Gibraltar, that Christian will continue for many years to come, hopefully, putting Gibraltar onto the map and will attract a new interest in the arts by all the youngsters we have.

1220 I have always been a supporter, whether I hold a portfolio or just a shadow portfolio in the arts, but certainly Steven Linares and I have shared many interesting times watching the potential of our youngsters – and perhaps, Steven, within our own lifetime will have a second Christian Hook coming up and producing good work.

1225 So, with those thoughts, Mr Speaker, we on this side of the House – and I hope the hon. Lady would also join us – we are more than grateful for the motion put forward and extremely happy to support granting the Freedom of the City to Christian and wishing him all the best for the future. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

1230 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise to endorse such a prestigious accolade like the Freedom of the City for the modern master in our midst, Christian Hook.

As someone with a degree in the history of art, I feel qualified to validate this gifted artist in this distinguished Chamber by saying a few words about his art. We are all now aware and 1235 familiar with Christian's achievement as a Gibraltarian, but I would also like to offer an insight into his credentials as an artist.

For those of us who have appreciated or looked into Hook's work, we will note his diverse talent in his compositions. On a technical level Hook's focus is on defragmentation and it is very intense, especially when you appreciate how he manages to, at the same time, retain the likeness and empathy with the object or the sitter while keeping, at the same time, his work relevant and modern and always seeking to capture time and movement. This balance, Mr Speaker, can only be achieved by a true virtuoso.

1240 So in retrospect, Mr Speaker, it is of no surprise that in 2014 Christian Hook rose to fame in the Sky Arts Portrait Artist of the Year programme. This young and promising Westside School art teacher, who had taken some time off to focus on his craft and suddenly wowed the international art world and media, saw his life change in a flash as Gibraltarians beamed with pride at yet another gifted member of our community punching above his weight, painting A-list celebrities like Sarah Ferguson, Amir Khan and Alan Cumming, the latter portrait now sitting in the Scottish National Gallery and only a couple of weeks ago defined as one of the 100 great masterpieces of Scotland.

1250 Sitting alongside the greats of Gibraltar, like Gustavo Bacarisas and Jacobo Azagury, Hook is not just with these great men but is also today compared to Picasso and other world-celebrated artists, and therefore there is no doubt or question as to the merit of Christian Hook's Freedom of the City Award. So for my part, Mr Speaker, I commend this motion to the House and congratulate Christian Hook and his family on this wonderful accolade. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Samantha Sacramento.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to support this motion as a friend of Christian Hook and for longer as a fan of his work. I do not, unfortunately, own a work of his – (Interjections) Not yet, Mr Speaker.

1260 But I want to speak from the point of view of having been a fan of Christian for so long and seeing how his style has developed into such a unique style. I remember, when I was about 12 or 13 years old, walking into a picture gallery and being struck by a portrait that was there for framing, looking at it and just being absolutely astounded, looking at the outstanding quality of the likeness of the person who was sitting. I thought, 'Goodness, who has painted that?' and the person in the gallery said it was Christian Hook. We are talking about almost 30 years ago, Mr Speaker, so even then Christian Hook's talent stood out from so many.

1270 I think, just like every other Gibraltarian, we have been following Christian's progress, and back in December 2014 I remember watching the final of the Sky Arts Portrait Artist of the Year and thinking, 'Well, wouldn't it be great if Christian Hook won,' and we all know how that ended. I am so grateful that it did end like that, because that was pretty much his platform internationally. As the Chief Minister said, we have all known about Christian Hook's outstanding talent, but really it has been in great measure due to the Sky Arts Portrait Artist programme that he has been able to promote himself. The hon. Members here have all listed the celebrities and high-profile people he has already painted, and I am sure that he has quite a waiting list of people who have commissioned portraits from him.

1280 But, Mr Speaker, quite apart from the obvious talent and the quality of the work that he does, he is such a lovely and humble gentleman. He very kindly invited me to the opening of his exhibition at the Clarendon last October. I felt so overwhelmingly proud, as a Gibraltarian, to be walking into the gallery at this exhibition by a Gibraltarian. It was absolutely buzzing and full of people and it was so wonderful to see him, his family and his friends there among the clients of the gallery.

1285 He was extremely busy that week and a couple of months earlier I had asked him if he would be so kind as to speak at our Literary Festival, and he did so, Mr Speaker, and that was a few days after the exhibition. The venue that we chose was the biggest venue that we had for the 1290 Literary Festival and it was completely sold out. He told us about his professional journey in the arts and it was so fascinating to learn that throughout his university life his professors, who demanded such a high standard from him, continuously told him that the way that he was working was wrong. He tried different styles and he was told that they were wrong, but he persevered and he continued to persevere – in the wrong way, he was told. I think, Mr Speaker, that is a lesson to us all: that we cannot fit in other people's boxes and it is important that we have our own styles and develop our own flare, because if the way that Mr Hook does things is wrong, then I think we really need to take a leaf out of his book.

1295 Not only that, I would also like to commend and thank him for other things that he has done in the community. Last year, when I had the responsibility for Social Services, we were invited for some service users from St Bernadette's Resource Centre to paint some paintings to be exhibited at a gallery in Milan. I asked him if he would collaborate with our service users to give them that additional level of importance, and this gentleman who is extremely busy – busy with his work, busy travelling all over the world, busy painting portraits of celebrities – took time out of his incredibly busy schedule to spend time with people from St Bernadette's, learning how they were and what they like and what styles they like in art, and helping us produce a collaborative piece which we then exhibited here and in Milan.

1300 I think everybody has been following Christian Hook and everybody is familiar with his unique and outstanding style, but I wanted to make the point of how Christian also goes out of his way to help community groups and to help local groups. Not many people who make it outside of Gibraltar remember their roots and even acknowledge that they are from Gibraltar, but Christian Hook does both and I think that really speaks volumes, Mr Speaker, and on the basis of all those extraordinary accomplishments, of course I support this motion. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Albert Isola.

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, unlike many of the speakers this afternoon, especially the last speaker, I do not know Christian Hook particularly well; I have the misfortune of knowing his brother better than I do Christian.

1315 What is striking about Christian is that the stage of the success that he has achieved at such a young age is really quite remarkable, because artists with the fame and the notoriety that he enjoys today is not common to people so young as he. Nor is it, I must say, common to have people that young being awarded the highest accolade this Parliament can give to someone in being granted the Freedom of the City. And so I think it is absolutely right that even at his young age we are this afternoon deliberating the Granting of the Freedom on Christian because of his exceptional ability, his exceptional talent, and yes, as other speakers have referred to already, his complete commitment to Gibraltar and its people, because he has never forgotten us and he continues to help and support us in every single way that he possibly can, and I think that that too is absolutely remarkable.

1320 I think the whole of Gibraltar has enjoyed and shared in his success. We watch him closely, we take great pleasure and delight in the work that he produces, and because it is so different and it is so unique I think perhaps we enjoy it more than we normally should.

1325 I think the whole of Gibraltar has enjoyed and shared in his success. We watch him closely, we take great pleasure and delight in the work that he produces, and because it is so different and it is so unique I think perhaps we enjoy it more than we normally should.

1330 Mr Speaker, it is with huge pleasure and support that I join my colleagues and, I imagine, the whole of the House in congratulating Christian on what he has done, not just for himself but for the whole of Gibraltar and the pride he has brought to so many of us. Mr Speaker, I commend the motion to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Steven Linares.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, as the Minister for Culture it is a great honour and privilege to be the Minister and to have this motion coming to this House.

1340 One of the things about Christian – which the young people and ... as the hon. Member said about his youth – is that he is a role model and he is a person that every single young Gibraltarian should follow, because he gives a lot of motivation to young people that we, as Gibraltarians, can reach the heights that Christian has actually attained.

1345 One of the things that strikes me most is that we have had many exhibitions and, like the hon. Member Mr Reyes said before, from a very young age Christian has been competing in many of our exhibitions – our youth art exhibitions, our international exhibitions – and many people used to say, ‘Why is it that Christian wins so many?’ Well, he won so many because he is so good, he is so talented, and therefore I am glad to say that, on the back of him winning many exhibitions, the Ministry of Culture have quite a number of Hooks, which means that soon we can probably organise an exhibition of the assets, that we have at the Ministry, of Christian Hook. So it is with that that I say that it is an honour and privilege to be the Minister of Culture and to support this motion. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

1355 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I must confess a deep jealousy of the Chief Minister and my hon. colleague in having been able to acquire a Christian Hook. Alas, I sadly do not have that good luck.

1360 I, over the years, have developed a deep appreciation and respect for our local artists. Although never having been trained as an artist and having no particular talent in that department, I do appreciate the effort and work that goes into a good work of art.

1365 We have in the past perhaps in Gibraltar focused too much on as it were, our local dead artists, the ones that perhaps should have had more recognition in their time, the likes of Bacarisa, Leni Mifsud and Azagury to name but a few, and in fact Manier as well. But we have an opportunity today to recognise a living artist. We can all go to his studio, which I would recommend if anybody has an opportunity, and see him actually at work. I think it is a unique opportunity for this House and Gibraltar as a whole to recognise Christian’s talent as a living artist. Of course, we also have the artists who have come before him and also are in our community at the moment and are still working. Obviously we must not forget Mario Finlayson, who probably inspired a lot of these young artists today, and although I do have one or two of Mario’s paintings, unfortunately I did not manage to grab Christian in time – and the Chief Minister will be delighted to know that beige is not my favourite colour – but there you have it.

1370 Mr Speaker, what is more important and I think what is coming out of the commentaries that we are getting this afternoon is that Christian has not forgotten his roots. He has not gone and opened his workshop in Mayfair. He is quite locally based in Horse Barrack Court and is there to be seen at work and his work is still being done here in Gibraltar, and I think for that he is to be commended, but especially so in that he is still approachable, he is still an individual. As the hon. Lady on the Government benches said, he still does work for Gibraltar.

1380 What struck me most was that this is an individual who must be extremely busy but he still took time to engage with students at sixth-form level who are undertaking their Young Enterprise projects, and – Minister Cortes will recognise this – that he contributed his own experiences in the book that was published at the Young Enterprise programme. I think, Mr Speaker, perhaps in his own words is probably the best way of summing up his experience. He said in his contribution:

I believe that my journey from being an illustrator to a teacher and suddenly turning my luck around and achieving this success in life should show others that if I can do it, anyone and everyone can do it too. There are no rules on how to better yourself as there is no formula for success. Personally, I feel that the only person who can stop you from achieving your goals is you, by thinking that it is not possible when it is possible.

1385 I think, Mr Speaker, I cannot possibly add to those words and I fully endorse this motion. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Dr John Cortes.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):

1390 Mr Speaker, I think I must share an anecdote with this House. Many years ago – 12, perhaps 15 – when in another life I was working in the Botanic Gardens, we were producing a booklet on the wildlife of the Upper Rock. We had a number of photographs of plants and birds but we had 1395 none of butterflies. We really wanted to illustrate the butterflies of the Upper Rock and someone suggested that we should talk to this young teacher in Westside School and get Christian Hook to do it for us. Christian, always willing to help everybody in the community, very willingly designed and drew this beautiful picture of a number of Gibraltar's butterflies, which subsequently got published as the centrepiece of the book. As I was taking the original with me in the back of my car with other papers, inadvertently it slipped out as I was getting out of the car and I lost it. And Gibraltar being what Gibraltar is, a couple of days later I got a phone call 1400 saying, 'Mr Cortes from the Alameda Gardens, I found a picture of butterflies – it must belong to you.' That's Gibraltar! I was very pleased because actually we wanted it in order to be able to publish it, so I got it back. So I must be the first person ever to have lost a Christian Hook original and then found it again. I had to share that on this occasion.

Obviously I have since got to know Christian better. I heard his Beacon lecture, absolutely fascinating. As I think we have said, muy buena gente, and obviously we must all support this 1405 motion. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much.

1410 I associate myself with the comments that everybody has made during the course of this motion – in particular, it has to be said, the hon. Lady, Samantha, Minister Sacramento. I thought her description of Kevin Hook was particularly germane and particularly on the button, if I may say so. (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Christian.) Christian, I beg your pardon. He is always and has always been a person who has made himself available. He is a person who is extremely 1415 approachable and, as the hon. Lady has also said, is somebody who is always available in order to do his bit for Gibraltar. The Hon. the Chief Minister also said that he is a proud Gibraltarian and I think that is absolutely true. Not always is there a direct correlation between somebody who is successful and also being proud of his roots and where he comes from and Gibraltar, and that is certainly true of Christian Hook.

1420 Mr Speaker, Mr Isola said that we all share that sense of pride in his achievements and I think that that is also a particularly germane comment. Every single time that I see or read an article referring to Christian Hook about his achievements internationally I feel a sense of pride in the fact that this gentleman comes from my home town. There is almost a sense of ownership of part of Christian Hook that makes me feel proud of his achievements.

1425 I also, on a personal level, want to congratulate his parents, Denis and Elvira. They, together with Christian and Kevin, lived for many years in Varyl Begg. They grew up in Varyl Begg, where I also grew up. They had the Beehive Store. I do not know whether people are familiar with Varyl Begg in this Chamber, but they had the Beehive Store for many years and I have to say that this accolade of Freedom of the City could not have happened to nicer people than the Hook family.

1430 For all those reasons, Mr Speaker, and for all the reasons that have been expressed around this Chamber, I have absolutely no hesitation in supporting this motion. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I call on the mover to reply. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

1435 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I want to thank all hon. Members who supported the motion.

1440 I think that listening to the hon. Lady made me think of the moment that I saw Christian win the Sky Arts programme. I confess I knew before it was aired but, despite that, I still felt just like I felt when I actually saw it, just like I felt when Kaiane won Miss World. It really was one of those moments when you saw extraordinary world-beating Gibraltarian achievement actually happen. I think Gibraltarians will remember where they were when Kaiane was Miss World and where they were when Christian Hook won Sky Artist of the Year.

1445 I certainly will always remember where I was when Christian Hook photographed me for the portrait, because it was downstairs in front of the words 'Gibraltar Parliament' and that I bought it, Mr Speaker, because it took 10 kilos off what I looked like at the time, which was much needed, and it was a reflection of a better me, I thought. I think Christian manages to capture a better subject than even the one that he is seeing.

1450 If I may say so, Mr Speaker, he has done an excellent job in particular of the portrait of Her Majesty the Queen, which won a competition organised by Momy Levy and which now hangs in No. 6 Convent Place. I asked Momy whether he would agree that the gift he had made to Governor Adrian Johns of that portrait could actually be transferred to No. 6, and we now therefore have a very prominent Christian Hook portrait of Her Majesty the Queen which gives the subject of the portrait great life and I think is one of the best depictions of Her Majesty that I have seen.

1455 I am very happy, therefore, Mr Speaker, that when he came to see me – I forget the year ... He came to see me and said, 'Look, I've got this competition but I'm going to have to leave school for a few months and it is an extended period of time, therefore the Department says political clearance is required. I really want to go for this: would you agree?' and I said, 'Of course I will – this is a Gibraltarian ready to take on the world: why not?' He took it on, he won, 1460 and I think the best description I have heard this afternoon is the one used by the hon. Lady across the way: he is now recognised as a modern master. (Banging on desks)

1465 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, may I say that as someone who in the art room in the grammar school was known to have painted the sea purple and tree trunks blood red, I do not feel competent to comment on Christian's work, (Laughter) but I am delighted that I have had the opportunity to sign this certificate conferring the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour, which also goes with the Freedom of the City, and I congratulate him and his family for that tremendous achievement.

1470 I now put the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Chief Minister. All in favour? (Members: Aye.) All against. By acclamation, I would say, the motion is carried.

ADJOURNMENT

1475 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, now that Christian Hook can safely walk up Main Street with his goat, if he wishes to in exercise of the Freedom of the City and Garrison of Gibraltar, I move that the House do now adjourn to Monday, 26th June at 11 a.m. when the House will consider the debate on the Appropriation Bill 2017 as its first order of business.

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn until Monday, 26th June at 11 in the morning.

GOVERNMENT BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Appropriation Bill 2017 – First Reading approved

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Monday, 26th June 2017.

Bills, First and Second Readings. A Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 31st day of March 2018. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

5

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money for the service of the year ending on 31st March 2018 be read a first time.

10

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 31st day of March 2018 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Appropriation Act 2017.

Appropriation Bill 2017 – For Second Reading – Debate commenced

15

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

20

This is my sixth Budget address as Chief Minister. It is in fact my second Budget address since our re-election to Government in November 2015 with a huge vote of confidence from our people, and I now have the honour to present the Government's revenue and expenditure estimates for the financial year ended 31st March 2018. During the course of this address I will also report to the House on the Government's revenue and expenditure outturn for the financial year ended 31st March 2017, which was the fifth full year of a Socialist Liberal administration since we took office on a warm autumn day in December 2011.

25 Mr Speaker, as has been traditional now for almost 30 years since the first GSLP Chief Minister delivered the first GSLP Budget in 1988, my address will of course not just be my report to the House on the public finances of our nation and the state of the economy generally, but also a parliamentary State of the Nation review of the economic and political future facing Gibraltar.

30 There could be no better way for the GSLP to celebrate its 40th anniversary than with the honour of a second GSLP Chief Minister delivering a socialist Budget for Gibraltar. It is indeed noteworthy, Mr Speaker, in partisan terms, that the AACR and the GSLP are the only parties in Gibraltar's political history to date that are able to boast two different Chief Ministers in their ranks. Moreover, the GSLP, if I may say so, is the only party to date to have two different leaders become Chief Ministers after leading the party to win general elections.

35 Today I will, of course, also outline the budget measures that the Government will introduce this year in pursuance of our manifesto commitments and in order to continue to address the social and business needs of our community in the developing context of the decision of the United Kingdom to leave the European Union.

40 Mr Speaker, before I start the substance of my economic analysis today I want to extend the thanks of my party on this side of the House and of the Liberal Party to the Clerk of the House and his staff. They do a huge amount of work unseen during the year in order to ensure that our democracy works. Since the last Appropriation Debate in this House there has been no election or referendum – thank goodness, I hear the Clerk say – but there has been a Gibraltar meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association. Members of the CPA who visited Gibraltar were, as ever, impressed by the magnificent locations they visited and of course by the organisation of the events they were engaged in. I know that took a lot of hard work from the Clerk and all members of the staff of the House. I am sure there was a helpful guiding hand from you, Mr Speaker. I therefore want to extend the sincere gratitude of the Government, and I am sure all Members of the House, for the work you do and have done throughout the year to assist us all, from the eldest Member to the newest Member, as we all rely on you in equal measure for this, for cribs, for questions and answers to be provided and when we have to get up to ask or answer questions. As Leader of the House, Mr Speaker, my sincere thanks – no doubt on behalf of the whole House – to Daniel, to Frances, to Kevin, to Paul and of course also to you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

55 Mr Speaker, as has been the case with all my Government's previous budgets, this Budget is designed with prudence in mind to support our working families, young people, the elderly and the disabled. We will aim today to continue to put in place measures to make Gibraltar the most attractive place in Europe and in the Mediterranean to do business and we will do so whilst continuing to invest in our youth because they are the future and we must never stop investing in the future. And we will do so whilst continuing to support senior citizens in our community, because they built this nation and we must never forget their contribution to the prosperity that we enjoy today. And we will do so without forgetting those worse off in our community who cannot help themselves.

65 But this is not a Budget, Mr Speaker, for those who will not help themselves though they could, this will not be a Budget for those who will not work when they could, because above all else today this Chamber will receive a Budget designed to encourage business, to continue to improve our public services and to deliver sustainable growth in our economy. This Budget reflects my Government's ongoing commitment to improve the quality of life and standard of living of all our citizens. That has been the hallmark to date of all the budgets that I have delivered and we will not change that direction of travel.

70 Mr Speaker, last year I rose to address this House less than 10 days after the result of the Brexit referendum. It is true to say that the United Kingdom had shocked us all as much as I think it had shocked itself with the result of that poll. Prime Minister Cameron had just resigned and 75 we awaited the outcome of a leadership contest in the Conservative Party before the direction of travel for the United Kingdom might become clear.

Well, one year on, Mr Speaker, can we say that things have changed or developed much? The recent inconclusive result of the unexpected general election in the United Kingdom has left even the most seasoned political commentators scratching their heads as to what form of Brexit Britain is likely to achieve. In recent days there is even comment that questions the result of the referendum and whether leaving the European Union is an objective that the United Kingdom can fulfil without considerable economic loss such that it may not be a deliverable goal that the public will accept. Will the UK end up with an EFTA deal, like Norway? Will Gibraltar's stalwart friend, Philip Hammond, be Prime Minister? Will the United Kingdom stare into the Brexit abyss in 2019 and decide that it is not viable after all? All of that is in the informed broadsheet comment just in the past 48 hours from the best commentators and the most respected news sources.

But Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar cannot deal in either speculation or in hope. We must deal in facts and plan for eventualities beyond those appearing at first blush. The facts as they are before us are clear. Article 50 of the Treaty of Lisbon has been triggered by the United Kingdom. The UK will not be a member of the European Union by midnight on 29th March 2019.

If, as appears to be the case, the United Kingdom is leaving the European Union, then we are leaving the European Union with the United Kingdom. No one in Gibraltar has any interest in accepting an offer of joint Spanish sovereignty or otherwise diluted British sovereignty in exchange for continued membership of the EU. It is now finally accepted by all parties that Gibraltar is a part of the exit negotiations. There is an attempt by Spain to exclude the application to Gibraltar of any new relevant trade arrangements between the UK and the EU. The United Kingdom's Secretary of State for Exiting the European Union, David Davis, has been clear and unequivocal in his conversations with me in saying that the United Kingdom will not do a future trade deal with the EU that excludes Gibraltar. In addition, the United Kingdom, through its Secretary of State for International Trade, Liam Fox, and its Minister for Exiting the European Union, Robin Walker, have been clear in stating that when it comes to financial services there are strong mechanisms already underpinning Gibraltar's access to the UK market which are enshrined in UK law and that the UK government will maintain that access. We have also agreed that together we will examine ways to broaden our economic co-operation and increase market access and will take into account the priorities of Gibraltar as the UK looks to establish new trade and investment agreements with the wider world.

Access to the United Kingdom market is essential in respect of financial services. Maintaining that position, as it is agreed today with the United Kingdom, is just now a question of finessing mechanisms. That is something tied in with the Great Repeal Bill to an extent, as the measures which today allow access to the UK market are single EU market passporting rules. We are already engaged in detail in this respect with the UK. The Attorney General, Michael Llamas, is ably leading a team on these issues with Paul Peralta of the Government's Legal Office drafting team. Similarly, access to the new trade deals the United Kingdom will do and its double taxation network is an important part of the future for Gibraltar. We are working closely with the Department of International Trade on these matters.

We genuinely believe that Gibraltar will be able to carve out an important niche as a gateway to the UK for business already in the EU. Those who might have been rubbing their hands with glee to take our EU-facing business may in fact now find all their UK-facing business come to us. We shall see, Mr Speaker.

The decision of the European Council to accept a proposal by Spain, however, to seek to exclude Gibraltar from any future UK-EU trade agreement – which was advanced, we understand, by the Spanish Prime Minister at the partisan European People's Party congress held in Malta – disappointed many Gibraltarians. Make no mistake about it, Mr Speaker, we expected nothing better from Spain, but the attitude of the EU Council disappointed every Gibraltarian who had voted to remain in the European Union. The inclusion of that clause felt like a slap in the face to the smallest jurisdiction in the EU by the most powerful of its institutions. Indeed, I doubt the European Union will ever enjoy emotional support in Gibraltar again, even if we all would still see the benefits of remaining in the Union and even if in the end the United Kingdom were to decide to remain in the EU.

130 The effect of clause 24, however, will have to be seen. All that clause is at the moment is just one of many guidelines given to the EU negotiators. The position of the Gibraltar and the United Kingdom governments in respect of that clause is well known. In this respect I would counsel our people to allow the Spanish media their time to gloat and to await the outcome of the negotiations. I would put it this way: I have never seen a Spanish media outlet forecast a loss by 135 one of their teams or competitors in any sporting event, regardless of how disastrous the final result may end up looking. The Government of Gibraltar will work to defeat any attempt to exclude Gibraltar from any measures which might be advantageous for Gibraltar, and of that everyone in this community can of course be sure.

In that respect, Mr Speaker, I am able to announce today that the Gibraltar Consultative 140 Council, which was created by this Parliament by statute, is expected to meet for the first time on Monday, 24th July. I will welcome the opportunity to share candidly with the members of the Council the Government's ideas and concerns. Those who are not officeholder members of the Council will shortly be notified of the invitation to be a part of it.

Mr Speaker, the Governor of the Bank of England, Mark Carney, has warned last week that 145 Brexit is unlikely to be 'a gentle stroll along a smooth path to a land of cake and consumption'. Mark Carney warned that Brexit is likely to lead to 'weaker real income growth' as new trading arrangements with the EU come into force. In a keynote speech last week at the Mansion House he said that 'since the prospect of Brexit emerged, financial markets, notably sterling, have marked down the UK's economic prospects'.

Mr Speaker, I think it is important to reflect that the two UK Cabinets we have seen in place
150 since this speech last year contain past and new friends of Gibraltar who are responsible for those prospects that the Governor of the Bank of England was referring to. Apart from Philip Hammond, we have seen a champion of Gibraltar's cause like David Lidington now elevated to the prestigious post of Lord Chancellor. We have seen long-time friend of Gibraltar Liam Fox 155 appointed to the crucially important post of Secretary of State with responsibility for International Trade. And we have seen Sir Alan Duncan, a former resident of Gibraltar as a boy, appointed once again as Minister of State for Europe. And a former Governors ADC, the valiant Tobias Ellwood, who displayed heroic qualities on the day of the attack on Westminster Bridge, is now a Minister in the Ministry of Defence.

But undoubtedly the most revealing appointment has been the appointment of Robin Walker 160 as Minister of State in DeExEU. Minister Walker has been able to assimilate and understand the issues which affect Gibraltar. He has been able both to empathise and analyse in equal measure the concerns we have put to the United Kingdom. Last year in this debate I told the House that after meeting the Minister for Europe, then David Lidington, I had received the British 165 Government's assurances in writing that we would be 'fully involved' in the process that was then getting underway in the UK to give shape to Brexit. Since then, after the two UK Cabinet reshuffles, both Robin Walker and Mr Lidington's successor, Sir Alan Duncan, have been extraordinarily helpful advocates for Gibraltar into the wider UK administration as a consequence of the detailed exchanges we have had pursuant to the operation of the Joint 170 Ministerial Council specifically created for Gibraltar in the context of that full involvement in the UK's exit from the EU.

In the year since then I have given evidence to the Brexit Select Committees of the House of 175 Lords and of the House of Commons. Both have issued reports referring to Gibraltar. The Deputy Chief Minister and I, as well as the Minister for Financial Services, have featured on innumerable international television and radio interviews as well as hundreds of thousands of references in print and online media reports on Gibraltar.

180 The exposure for Gibraltar has been remarkable, Mr Speaker, and indeed has helped to garner publicity that has turned to new business as opportunities start to become palpable, even in the context of an as yet undefined final post-Brexit solution. But the certainty we have played over and over again has been access to the UK market, and that has been the centrepiece of all our interventions.

185 I will say little more now about the detail of Brexit. Much has already been ventilated in our press statements, much cannot really be aired publicly and much will be said during the course of the intervention to come from the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister and Minister for Europe and for Exiting the European Union. What I want to stress to the whole nation, Mr Speaker, is that, just like last year, the final shape of what will be our membership or association with the European Union after 2019 is not yet clear; the future relationship between the UK and the EU is, one year on, not yet discernible in any analytically reliable way; and just like last year, we need to keep both united and very alert to all possible permutations facing us. That is the key to being more than just taken along in the process. That is the way the post-colonial people of Gibraltar must be ready to plan and act, to be fully involved in shaping the post-Brexit arrangements that will apply to us and not just accepting that we might simply be told by others what they think is good for us.

195 Mr Speaker, in relation to this, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister has been, as throughout the past 27 years, a rock for me, as usual, in the work I have had to do in respect of this community in relation to Brexit. The team made up of him, the Attorney General Michael Llamas, the Financial Secretary Albert Mena, and our representative in London Dominique Searle, are the core of the Gibraltar Brexit team.

200 Mr Speaker, what we have been at pains to say also at every stage is that we are not part of the anti-immigration chorus that has appeared in the United Kingdom. I have emphasised over and over again, as I told the House last year, that Gibraltar remains a cosmopolitan Mediterranean business hub. We remain proudly and happily multi-faceted, multi-cultural and multi-ethnic, and that will not change. Neither will our attitude change to the many people who cross the Frontier every day to work in Gibraltar, of whatever nationality they may be.

205 At this point, Mr Speaker, I want to set out the position of Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar in respect of EU nationals in Gibraltar after the date that the United Kingdom leaves the EU.

210 From the first moment after the result of the referendum was known, I made clear that all those EU workers amongst us who were welcome before 23rd June last year would remain welcome in Gibraltar. We recognise their huge contribution to our success, which is tremendously valued by all in our community. Mr Speaker, 12,000 people cross the Frontier every day to work in Gibraltar – 7,000 are Spanish, so Brexit affects British Gibraltarians, other British citizens, Spanish citizens and other EEA citizens as much as it does third country citizens.

215 The House is aware of the details of the independent report of the Chamber of Commerce about the effect of Gibraltar's economic activity on the neighbouring region. A quarter of all jobs in the Campo and a quarter of the GDP of the Campo are linked to Gibraltar. Brexit does not change that. In fact, it accentuates that, Mr Speaker. That is why I have continued my contacts since last year with the Mayor of La Línea, Juan Franco, and with Spanish unions, Comisiones Obreras and UGT, directly. I have continued to make clear to them that the Government of Gibraltar will not create any obstacles to the free movement of workers coming across the Frontier. I have continued contact and support for the excellent Cross-Frontier Group established by unions and employers' representative organisations from both sides of the Frontier.

225 Today I can confirm that we will join the United Kingdom in respecting the acquired rights of all EU nationals established or working in Gibraltar before the final cut-off date that might be agreed between the UK and the EU. Neither will we have an issue with any dispute in respect of this class of EU citizens being determined by the European Court of Justice. Mr Speaker, our position in this respect has been clear from the moment that the referendum result was announced. We have not wanted any EU national to have any uncertainty in their lives in respect 230 of this matter. The Government of Gibraltar has full constitutional competence in respect of matters of immigration. The position of EU nationals in Gibraltar after Brexit is therefore one for this Parliament to determine in immigration legislation, whether in respect of those already established here and working here or those who come in the future. And in respect of those who 235 might come in the future, it is of course right that as a matter of legal logic and international comity the potential effect of clause 24 of the EU negotiating guidelines should be clear. If the UK and the EU enter into new post-Brexit trade arrangements in future which extend to EU nationals rights like British citizens when they arrive in the UK to establish themselves or to work there after the UK has left the EU, those arrangements will not apply in Gibraltar if the effect of 240 the application of clause 24 has been to exclude Gibraltar from any such new trade arrangements. In effect, therefore, any new Spanish or EEA nationals entering the job market in Gibraltar after 29th March 2019, or such other date as may be agreed, will, as things currently appear to stand, enjoy only the generous rights already enjoyed here by those who are today third country nationals, not those more extensive rights enjoyed today by British and EU nationals. That position is, Mr Speaker, the position that Spain apparently seeks for its nationals 245 and other EEA nationals arriving in Gibraltar in the future after March 2019.

We will see how all that plays out, but one thing is for sure: that the Government of Gibraltar – and I am sure I speak for the whole House in this respect, Mr Speaker – will not allow Gibraltar to be discriminated against and yet extend generous rights to the nationals of those who are discriminating against us, for it should be clear that the people of Gibraltar are not going to be 250 pressured to surrender sovereignty in exchange for EU rights or access to the single market, or anything at all. The mind boggles, Mr Speaker, that there are still some in Spain who think that we might. If there is one thing that has marked our past five years in Government it is our resolute commitment never to compromise on the sovereignty of our nation. Indeed, Mr Speaker, that is the only ring of steel which I would recognise: the one around the 255 sovereignty of Gibraltar. In that respect we are alive to the reality that the right to self-determination is the preserve of those who are self-sufficient economically.

In the past five years the administration that I lead has delivered continued prosperity to all sectors of our community. During our first term in office the GSLP Liberal administration delivered economic growth of over 10% per annum against a backdrop of record levels of annual 260 recurrent budget surpluses peaking at €61.1 million in financial year 2013-14.

Revenue has increased from £350 million in the GSD's last full financial year in office to £615 million now. That represents a growth in government revenue in the time that we have been in office of 75%, Mr Speaker – pounds, shillings and pence in the till. Expenditure in the same period has risen by 60% - 15% less – from £372 million to £597 million, which is what we 265 are debating in this House today. Our income has increased more and faster than our expenditure. That is exactly what the prudent and cautious way to grow is.

There has also been significant increase in our employment levels. In our first term employment levels went from 22,247 in the October Employment Survey for 2011, to 26,144 in October 2015. Mr Speaker, that is a growth of 17.5% in the numbers of people employed in our 270 economy in our first term in office alone. And the Government has delivered an overall reduction in the cost of doing business in Gibraltar at the same time.

The Government has also provided support for our working families with income tax levels already being abolished for those with incomes below £11,050.

Mr Speaker, the first GSLP Government, led by Joe Bossano, introduced the minimum wage.
275 The second GSLP Government, in partnership with the Liberal Party, went even further, increasing the minimum wage by 16.3% since our first budget in June 2012, despite criticism from some that we had increased it too much. Inflation in the same period has been 5.65%. So,
Mr Speaker, the minimum wage has increased in our time in office by just under three times inflation since we were first elected. In addition, we have exempted the lowest paid in our 280 economy from the tax net altogether. That is our record so far. At every stage, therefore, we have the lowest paid in our community in mind when setting policy and when determining how to budget the finances of this nation.

285 There have also been significant reductions in income taxes for all taxpayers and working families in Gibraltar; so much so, Mr Speaker, that I am proud to be able to stand here and say that the Government that I lead is giving back more money to taxpayers each year by way of rebates than any other Government in the history of Gibraltar. (Banging on desks) I will say a little more about that later on in my speech, Mr Speaker, but it is a proud boast indeed for a socialist Chief Minister to be able to say that our Government is calculating assessments more quickly than ever before and is rebating moneys more quickly than ever before.

290 We are also, ironically, Mr Speaker, the Government that is owed the highest amount in taxes by increasing allowances. Additionally, we are also owed more in respect of taxes by taxpayers. So if anyone were foolish enough to have come to this debate thinking that they might run an argument about the surplus being significantly reduced or extinguished by the amounts owed by the Government in tax rebates, they had better think again and quickly scribble out that bit of their speech and scrap it, Mr Speaker. But we will come to that and all the mathematics behind it.

300 Mr Speaker, despite repeated criticisms in this House, the Government has also ensured that our partners in the delivery of this administration's policies, aims and goals, our magnificent public servants, have also generously benefited from the economic success they have worked to assist in delivering. Public sector pay in Gibraltar has therefore increased since the GSLP-Liberal Government was elected by 14.3%, well over inflation at 5.65% for the same period but nonetheless a lower percentage than the increase in the minimum wage of 16.3% to which I referred to earlier. And that is despite public sector salaries in the United Kingdom, with whom our public sector used to enjoy parity, being frozen or subject to increases of just 1%. Indeed, 305 our public servants have also benefited with public sector pay increasing annually by an average of over 2.8% over the five years when inflation in the same period has averaged 1.13% over the period. Mr Speaker, I am proud indeed of that investment in the greatest asset that we have in Gibraltar aside from our precious land – our people, and in particular the people in our public sector.

310 Mr Speaker, the elderly in our community have also been net winners in the past five years as we have also continually invested in their well-being, their care and their income levels. The Gibraltar that we have today we owe to the generations that came before us. I spoke two years ago, on the 75th anniversary of the evacuation, of that evacuation generation. This year, as we celebrate half a century since the referendum when our people first made a free choice to remain British, our community needs to reflect on the generation that made that choice. In 315 those distant days of the Cold War and a different world, the threat they faced from across the Frontier was as clear and unequivocal as it was belligerent. Facing restrictions at the Frontier and other obvious coming discomforts, those of voting age on 10th September 1967 went to the polling stations and deposited ballots which were not designed to appease – they were designed to express a free choice uninhibited by the fear of bullying. That, Mr Speaker, is the referendum generation that we must honour and celebrate this year. Announcements will be made by the Deputy Chief Minister of special events being organised in September to commemorate the referendum of 1967.

325 All of those who voted in the referendum are now senior citizens, although, as I am repeatedly told these days, 60 is the new 40, 70 is the new 50, and apparently 78 is the new 30, Mr Speaker – at least so it would appear from seeing the work rate and sharp brain of Joe Bossano! Anyway, that is why our senior citizens have shared in our nation's economic success with annual increases in old age pensions amounting to 10.5% since 2011. It is worth remembering inflation for the same period has been just over 5.65%. That illustrates that the 330 GSLP-Liberal Government has delivered pensions increases at almost double the rate of inflation for the period.

For public sector pensioners, Mr Speaker, we have reintroduced WOPS. I will be opening the WOPS window again for a short period this year on the terms I will set out later in my speech. Additionally, I will be making a change to the qualification criteria for WOPS towards the end of my address.

Perhaps most significantly, Mr Speaker, we have maintained a Savings Bank 10-year product offering 5% interest per annum for our pensioners so that they have also been able to continue to enjoy above market interest rates on their savings with the continued availability of high-interest monthly income guaranteed debentures – and this despite the spread with the Bank of England rate having got larger as the interest rates have gone down.

340

Community Care, Mr Speaker, has received a considerable part of the surpluses of each year, ensuring that the trustees of that charity have considerable assets available to them to ensure their ability to continue paying the Household Cost Allowance for years to come.

Yet all is not money, Mr Speaker, and our elderly citizens have also seen us benefit them by the establishment of better services which they are likely to need. The two most relevant are, of course, the Dementia Residential Facility at Hillside and the Dementia Day Centre at Bella Vista. These are two absolutely state-of-the-art facilities in which we have invested capital and in which we will now incur recurrent expenditure, but we do so to provide an important and first-class public service from which senior citizens and their relatives will benefit.

In past years I have also been able to point to the significant increases we have delivered in reducing the burden of taxation for our disabled on the allowance-based system. We have also introduced import duty reductions on goods used by disabled members of our community. Led by Samantha Sacramento and Joe Bossano, that policy initiative has been particularly positive in ensuring that our assistance to those in our community who are disabled has not been passed on as gifts, grants or charity, but on the basis of dignity, respect and encouragement. That is why we have grown previously frozen in-work benefit allowances for the disabled and those they depend on.

355

Mr Speaker, on this side of the House we do not believe in discrimination. In particular, we do not believe in age discrimination, one way or the other.

360

Hon. J J Bossano: I should think not! (Laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: I should think not! I don't think I'd get away, if I tried, with any age discrimination!

365

For that reason, in the same way as we have supported the elderly in our community and those of working age, in these past five years we have also acted to support young people. We have funded the creation of new opportunities and we have increased the funding available for studies abroad. I am particularly pleased by the internships at the Washington Centre in the United States, which exposes our young people to US entrepreneurship as well as to the political system of that great nation.

370

I am also very pleased to see that in the past five years student maintenance grants have risen by 16.1% or by three times inflation. Mr Speaker, it was the GSLP Government that introduced the compulsory student grant in 1988 to cover tuition fees as well as maintenance. We were against the requirement of the GSD when in office that Gibraltar students should have to take loans from the Student Loans Company to fund their tuition fees. If that had not stopped before the election, we would have stopped it. Now again in Government, Mr Speaker, we have not just increased the maintenance grants, we have also increased the scope of scholarships: we have extended the right to a scholarship to cover postgraduate studies also. As result, investment in our students has increased from £5.2 million in the financial year 2011-12, the last budget for which Hon. Members were responsible, to £16.6 million this year. We have increased the investment in tertiary education of our students therefore by £10 million a year over the past five years. Mr Speaker, there are those who argue for less spending who would not make these investments. We are proud to do so. We have increased spending on scholarships for our students by 214%. Of that we are extraordinarily proud.

375

385 But the investment has not just been in scholarships for our university students travelling abroad. We have also built and developed our own university, and not content with that we have also already, in five short years, built two new schools for our infant and middle school pupils at St Bernard's school and we have increased the number of teachers in our schools.

390 We will go further, Mr Speaker. As previously explained to this House, a working party composed of teachers, parents and the Teachers' Association was set up by the Government to study the desirability or otherwise of converting our two comprehensive schools into mixed-gender schools. The Working Group on Co-Education has now reported back and presented its recommendations, which have been accepted by the Government.

395 The Minister for Education will be providing more extensive details in his Budget speech, but I am pleased to announce that the process to introduce full co-education in Gibraltar in the two comprehensive schools will now commence.

To coincide with this, there will also be a realignment of the key stages in the education curriculum, to follow the practice in England and Wales, with children entering the comprehensive schools one year earlier at the beginning of year 7, and schooling will be provided for all children at pre-school level.

400 These changes will coincide with a programme to provide new schools to St Martin's – our first priority – Notre Dame, St Anne's, Governor's Meadow, Bishop Fitzgerald, Westside and Bayside School. Exciting plans are also being developed for both St Mary's Middle School, St Paul's School and St Joseph's School. That is the delivery of our manifesto-plus, Mr Speaker, with the intention of these new educational facilities opening in September 2019.

405 At this time, the first stages of transition to mixed-gender comprehensives will be made and the manifesto promise of providing hot schools meals will be fully realised. (Banging on desks) I see the parents who make up the lunch boxes (Laughter) banging the table harder than others, Mr Speaker! The community will want to listen carefully to the statement from the Hon. John Cortes, who will provide greater details in his contribution to this debate.

410 We will also carefully consider the introduction in Gibraltar of a new 'T-level' A-level system, as has been announced in the United Kingdom, which overhauls how technical education is taught and administered and aims to put the courses on an equal footing with academic work. The UK's plans were announced in the budget by Chancellor Philip Hammond and will increase the number of hours students train by 50% and will replace the current 13,000 qualifications available with 15. The Chancellor alluded to the fact that there is still a lingering doubt about the parity of esteem attaching to technical education. We agree, Mr Speaker, because as the Budget document discloses, while the academic route through education from GCSEs to A-levels and on is well regarded, more needs to be done for technical education. We will seek to bring about implementation of these new courses by 2019, as is the expectation in the United Kingdom.

420 This new approach to technical education in schools and new-style apprenticeships will be in addition to the excellent work done already as a result of the Future Job Strategy – that highly successful mechanism that has taken so many out of unemployment and given them worthwhile, meaningful jobs. The reality of that can best be seen by looking at the reality of employment in our economy.

425 The number of jobs in our economy reached a record high of 27,073 in October 2016, representing an increase of 3.6% compared to the previous year. Mr Speaker, I am proud to say that this represents an increase of 21.7% since October 2011 and it is this increase which gives the ring of truth to all of the data that we are presenting. That is to say the GSLP-Liberal Government has presided over an increase of one fifth of the job market in Gibraltar – one fifth, Mr Speaker. That is huge growth by any measure and it leads to the increases in the tax take and the other economically beneficial data that we are seeing take hold.

430 The number of Gibraltarians in employment also reached a record high this year, Mr Speaker, of 11,065 in October 2016. That is a huge increase in five years of 8.2% from October 2011,

435 barely a month before we were elected into office. That is a particularly positive figure for this GSLP-Liberal administration to be proud of, given that in 16 years in office – in 16 years – the party of Members opposite increased Gibraltarians in employment by the same figure, 8%: 8% in 16 years; 8% in five years, Mr Speaker. In fact, their exact figure was an average of 0.5% a year.
 Our figure, as an average annually, is three times that: 1.65% a year. Our dedication to getting 440 Gibraltarians into employment is therefore demonstrated and is paying off.

The strongest job gains came from the private sector, Mr Speaker, where jobs grew from 20,070 to 20,977 – that is up by 907 jobs in the private sector, or 4.5% over the period. The greatest increase in the private sector was registered in the services, hotels and restaurants and real estate and business activities industries, where jobs grew by 430, 199 and 164 respectively 445 over the period. The largest industry job gain within the services industry was recorded in the gambling and betting activities sub-industries, where jobs grew to 3,494 – that is to say 9% or 289 jobs to October 2016 from October 2015. That is spectacular job growth in the gaming industry after the referendum result, Mr Speaker. And in all this time, record low unemployment like never seen before. The numbers have been below 200 consistently on a month-by-month 450 basis and I expect therefore that the quarterly average will be below 200 too.

That is the work of a dedicated Minister like Gilbert Licudi and a dedicated staff at the Employment and Training Board. I congratulate all of them. Employment up, unemployment down – that is the result not of chance or coincidence but of hard work by the Minister and the ETB and they deserve the fulsome recognition of this whole House, Mr Speaker.

455 Interestingly, for the past year public sector jobs have increased by 23, or only 0.4% over the period. Mr Speaker, in the period from October 2010 to October 2011, that is to say the last year that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition was a Minister, increases of jobs in the public sector, that which he appears to occasionally consider so anathema, went up by 2.6% from 4,460 to 4,574 – that is to say 114 in one year. Shocking, Mr Speaker!

460 Anyway, on to more pleasant things. Mr Speaker, the larger the job market, the greater the opportunity for abuse. For that reason, the Government will now start work with Unite the Union and the Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Small Businesses to establish principles for trade union recognition in the private sector. A working group will be established in the coming weeks.

465 Mr Speaker, it is also true that apart from ensuring the well-being of our elderly and our young, we have also transformed much of the physical aspect of Gibraltar in the time that we have been in Government. Whether it is Commonwealth Park or the new bathing pavilion by Harbour Views, we have invested in the living environment of our people. We have built over a thousand new affordable homes and homes for the elderly, and more to come. We have 470 invested in the estates our people live in and the areas that suffered many years of neglect. We are in the process of completing magnificent refurbishments of Glacis and Moorish Castle Estates as well as Laguna Estate. These have taken a little longer than expected because we have encountered technical difficulties that were not anticipated, but we are on track to complete refurbishments in the next 18 months.

475 But, Mr Speaker, for this Government, as for everyone else of course, Grenfell changes everything, and if we have to undertake further works as a result of the inquiry into that fire, on the refurbished or any other estates, we will of course do so; and if we have to change the law in relation to building standards applicable also to the private sector, we will do so, because I have no doubt I speak for all Members of the House when I say I am sure we were all equally shocked 480 when we saw the images of the burning Grenfell Tower. No sooner were reports emerging of the potential relevance of the cladding used in that refurbishment, the relevant Government agencies, from Housing Works Agency to the Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Services alongside GJBS, were working to identify if similar issues might affect the cladding used in our refurbishments, and I want to recognise the work led by Minister Sacramento in this respect in the Ministry of 485 Housing. Having carried out all the necessary checks, we are satisfied that the cladding used in our refurbishments is completely different to that used in Grenfell Tower. The Grenfell Tower cladding system consisted of aluminium composite panels, whereas the system used in the Government of Gibraltar estates is an insulated render system. The system of installation was different, Mr Speaker. The producer of the insulation was different, Mr Speaker. The technical advice to HM Government of Gibraltar as regards the behaviour of the materials used when a fire breaks out is that the external surface of the system we have is classified as class zero or low risk as defined in the documents supporting the national building regulations, and at the time of installation all of these matters were considered, discussed and certified by the Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Services. But the most telling thing is that since the estates were refurbished we have had three fires on the estates and the cladding has not caught or propagated the fire. Additionally, we have no gas pipes in our buildings and our tower blocks have two fire escapes and staircases, not one. But that is not a reason for complacency. As a result, additional checks are being carried out and we will await the detailed inquiry into the Grenfell Tower events.

But, Mr Speaker, the Government does not discard, and is considering already the possibility of installing sprinkler systems in our high-rise buildings, if necessary. We will also consider making it a requirement that such systems should be installed in all high-rise buildings throughout Gibraltar. Should additional work be required, we will make the money available to carry it out and ensure our people are kept safe at all times, even if this requires supplementary provision to be made available this year.

That may be a useful moment to thank the directors and staff of GJBS for the magnificent work that they do throughout the year as a company in public ownership with a commercial ethos. When we have to check the works done by them as a contractor for Government, they are never found wanting.

In addition to the ongoing works, Mr Speaker, we will complete the refurbishments also of Alameda Estate during the lifetime of this Parliament. Additionally, we will commence the refurbishment of other areas of Government housing in a well-designed programme that will address the need to invest in all our estates in a timely and affordable manner for the community. The Minister for Housing will say more about these important developments for Government tenants, but I will say that I am already talking in detail with Unite about how we will work together on how the Housing Works Agency will play an important part in the future in the management of the housing stock. And I will soon be meeting the residents of a number of Government co-ownership estates who are talking to us about remedial works which need to be completed. That also includes purchases of ex-MoD properties. I have been unable to see them earlier due to the additional burden of work that Brexit has produced. I very much look forward to seeing them in order to continue our work in partnership in respect of the works outstanding.

And all of this, Mr Speaker, in the context of a Government that is looking out for those who pay their dues, their rents and their taxes by chasing those who do not or who just do not bother. We have been delighted to announce last week that the excellent work led by Samantha Sacramento at Housing has reached the next milestone in its strategy in the recovery of arrears of housing rent. The balance of arrears now owing is just below £5 million. That means over £1 million have been recovered since the arrears collection strategy commenced just under a year ago. The balance of arrears as at today's date is £4,995,427. It must be recalled that at its highest, before the implementation of the arrears collection strategy, the balance of arrears was well over £6 million. Not only is it significant that over £1 million has been recovered in just 18 months, but perhaps more importantly it demonstrates that the problem is now clearly under control.

Mr Speaker, the investment in our community that we have made in the past five years and which has been hugely criticised by some who argue for austerity instead of investment, is paying off. Not only is Gibraltar a more attractive place to do business due to the measures we are implementing, it is also a more attractive place to live.

And the investment produces income also. I told the House last year that the superyacht berth along the outside of the Small Boats Marina in the centre of our city was already attracting new business to Gibraltar. Additionally, I will be telling the House of a new project alongside this facility which will commence in the coming months.

540 I am happy to report that bunker supplies are up 1.7% from last year and they appear to continue to grow.

Activity at the Port increased by 2.4% in 2016 compared to 2015. The gross tonnage increased by 0.2% over the year. The number of ships calling at Gibraltar for bunkers increased by 2.7% in 2016 compared to 2015.

545 Also commencing and already at the DPC approval stage are the projects that are going to revolutionise sports in Gibraltar. Steven Linares is leading on those incredible and transformational projects which are made possible by the GFA's commitment to pay £10 million into the Improvement and Development Fund this year and £6.5 million the next. That will really make for an Island Games in 2019 which will be memorable and which will create a legacy for 550 Gibraltar's sports men and women. Details have already been provided of that in press statements and in this House, and Steven Linares will say more, Mr Speaker.

What is not yet public is the fact that the Government is working very hard indeed to ensure that accommodation requirements are also dealt with in a way that also creates a legacy rather than an irrecoverable loss. In particular, we are accelerating delivery of the relocations agreed 555 by the former administration with the MoD so we can both house athletes in the housing to be released by the MoD and then be in a position to hand over possession of those MoD properties to their new owners. The Government is already working closely with the MoD in this respect and we expect to be able to show properties and plans for sale of very attractive MoD properties before the end of this calendar year for completion and handing over in the period immediately 560 after the end of the Island Games.

Mr Speaker, we must therefore see the Island Games 2019 not just as an opportunity to grow our sporting facilities, but also to see the transfer to Gibraltarian families of some very desirable family homes. The Deputy Chief Minister, who ably leads the Government's work on land allocations, and the Minister for Housing, who is ably working on all aspects of housing, 565 including aspects relating to ownership and co-ownership, not just Government tenancies, will be developing this exciting aspect of Government policy in coming months.

Mr Speaker, the Island Games will undoubtedly bring many people to Gibraltar in 2019. Many are already coming, however, as the tourism, hotel and air passenger surveys tabled last week show. Visitor arrivals by air increased by 22% last year, the highest on record. Visitors staying in 570 Gibraltar grew to a record high in 2016, up by 17%. Arrivals by sea increased overall by 17.5% and this was largely as a result of a 17.8% growth in the number of cruise liners compared to 2015. The number of arrivals on yachts also increased by almost 13% over the year, with the number of yachts growing by almost 10%. Tourist expenditure for 2016 has been estimated at £211.91 million, an increase from the almost £200 million in 2015, or 6%. Air arrivals in the first 575 quarter of 2017 continued to increase by 14% with arrivals staying in Gibraltar increasing by 20% and arrivals in transit from Spain also growing by 9% compared with the same period in 2016. The number of arrivals into our hotels reached a record high in 2016, an increase in fact of 18.9%. The largest gains came from tourist arrivals that grew by 25.6%. Other arrivals also increased by 13.5%, and that includes visitors on business, sporting or cultural events. Room 580 nights sold grew by 9.0%. Guest nights sold grew by 13.3%.

Mr Speaker, we were very clearly right when we took the decision to bring the Sunborn Yacht Hotel to Gibraltar. It has upped the game of all other operators. It has added conference and banqueting facilities such as we did not have available before. From the moment we announced it was coming the project was, however, subject to unwarranted criticisms from Members 585 opposite and even to major scaremongering. We were right though, Mr Speaker, to have seen the potential, and today it is almost impossible to get a room in that hotel or indeed any other hotel in Gibraltar. Indeed, the Sunborn, like all our hotels but in its own unique way also, has been an important part of our success, in particular in relation to the gaming industry and the financial services industry.

590 As I told the Society of Accountants Annual Dinner last week, Mr Speaker, the FSC has issued 26 new licences since 24th June last year, since the result of the Brexit Referendum was announced. I gave the House a breakdown at Question Time of the areas of business involved, which is already on the record of Hansard and which I will therefore not repeat, but in addition I told the House that there have been two licence extensions in the insurance sector also.
595 Remarkably, that area of business is now growing faster than it has for some time and that despite the result of the Brexit referendum.

In the online gaming sector what we have seen in the past year has been a truly remarkable vote of confidence in Gibraltar. We already have two new firms licensed and we have four, not three as I told the Chamber, in the pipeline – one has been added since my address to them two 600 months ago. Of course we will hear of firms restructuring, but this is normal and to be expected as firms upgrade and grapple with the typical cyclical nature of their businesses and the looming
Brexit changes, but what we are seeing is a real growth in the industry, not a retrocession,
Mr Speaker. The jobs in the industry show that numbers employed grew to 3,494 by October 2016. As I told the House earlier, that is an increase of 289 jobs or 9% in the year from October 605 2015. But we are seeing that greater growth is to come. In the period since October 2016, that is to say in the seven or eight months since then, an additional further 59 jobs have been added in that industry. That brings the total of people employed in our gaming industry to date to 3,353.
Mr Speaker, reality is showing remarkable growth and confidence in Gibraltar online gaming services because we remain the premier jurisdiction in the world for the best regulated online 610 gaming services available to customers.

Our success in financial services and online gaming services is in no small measure down to the work of Albert Isola and his team led by Jimmy Tipping in Financial Services. It is also down to the reputation of our regulator, Phil Brear, who has done a sterling job in online gaming and is widely respected around the world as the best in the business. I extend to all of them my sincere 615 gratitude on behalf of the Government.

Mr Speaker, despite the result of the referendum last year, Gibraltar continues to be an attractive prospect for private developers. We continue working with a number of international developers and contractors on new projects. Additionally, established developers are delivering projects and looking for new opportunities.

620 As I told the House last year, a new reclamation project in the area of Coaling Island is shortly to be launched. Government companies will have a fully secured financial interest in that project. More details will be made public on the launch of the project, but this is a project that will see an investment from and produce a return on the £300 million institutional investment secured for Gibraltar last year.

625 Negotiations continue on the Bluewater development, although Brexit has made some of the matters in issue between the Government and the developers harder to resolve as quickly as we would have wished. We are also advancing our discussions in respect of Rooke and the potential development of that area and Victory Place. But most importantly, Mr Speaker, projects like the World Trade Centre have now become a reality. The World Trade Centre is already full and we 630 are in discussions for more office developments. The MidTown Project is already well underway.
The new Kings Wharf has already broken ground. Eurocity has already gone for full planning permission. All of that after the referendum, Mr Speaker. Gardens of Beauty, Waterside Villas and two more of the Ocean Village towers are about to get underway, demonstrating a huge amount of confidence in Gibraltar and its future.

635 Mr Speaker, this represents hundreds of millions of pounds of investment in Gibraltar by the private sector. Not a few million, not tens of millions – hundreds of millions of pounds of investment by the private sector. It is because there is great confidence in the Gibraltar market that there is therefore great investment into Gibraltar. That is why Members opposite would be foolish to talk down the economy or public finances of Gibraltar, which are demonstrably strong.
640 They would be wrong to raise the spectre of our public finances being anything other than entirely robust, because this debate should be a little bit more sophisticated than them coming here to say that things are not going well, when they demonstrably are. Our economic data shows robust growth and there is nothing for Gibraltar to gain by them pretending otherwise.

645 Mr Speaker, the Governor of the Bank of England, Mark Carney, has also warned about weaker real income growth in the United Kingdom and how the UK has emerged from the referendum, as I said before. We must be alive to the words of the Governor of the Bank of England but the data that I will now disclose for the economic performance of Gibraltar in the last year will not reflect a similar downturn for the Gibraltar economy nor that of our public finances.

650 Mr Speaker, Gibraltar's economic performance has been outstanding in this first financial year since the Brexit referendum. There is no uncertainty reflected in the brilliant numbers for the past year that I report to the House today. A strong economic performance is, of course, a part of what makes us attractive for the continued established here of international businesses, but what is interesting is that revenues are not just up in one category, they are up across the board. Income tax is up from £148 million to £154 million, illustrating the value of growing employment. Company tax is up from £109 million to £135 million, signifying good results from those performing here. Import duties are up across all heads of duty from £160 million to £189 million, signifying that the falling value of the pound sterling makes our exports more attractive. Stamp duties are up to almost £20 million. Gaming fees and charges are also up to 660 over £15 million, demonstrating this sector is vibrant and performing. Rates and rents are up, showing more effective collection, an aspect of revenue growth for which all credit must go to Minister Sacramento. Airport taxes are up, recognising the increase in air traffic to Gibraltar. Tourist site receipts are up on our projections. Savings Bank deposits are up, as well as reserves. Port Authority fees are up because bunker dues and cruise passenger numbers are up. We are 665 well on target to achieve the commitment, therefore, set out in our manifesto of achieving GDP growth of at least 7.5% a year, Mr Speaker. So, to paraphrase the Leader of the Opposition in a way that I am sure he never intended, our decisions are coming home to roost but in a very positive way indeed.

I am therefore delighted to now undertake a substantive analysis for the past year of the performance of our economy and the state of our public finances for the financial year ending 670 on 31st March 2017. In this respect, Mr Speaker, we must equally be conscious of the fact that the process of Brexit has just begun, as we must be alive to the fact that the economic data available for Gibraltar's performance last year is worth celebrating.

Prudence and caution in our planning for the future cannot and should not ameliorate our ability or indeed our obligation to celebrate the excellent performance that our workers and 675 entrepreneurs have delivered in the 12 months of the past year financial year. In particular, we must reflect that nine of the months on which I am reporting occurred after the result of the referendum was known and Brexit became a reality. Let us therefore see how we performed when our detractors were writing us off. Let us see how we reacted to the gloating of our 680 neighbours and our competitors.

Mr Speaker, near zero inflation in the UK and euro area during 2016 was the result of the continuing low price of fuel, food and other imported goods. These had a knock-on effect on Gibraltar's rate of inflation that also averaged near zero until July 2016. Thereafter, what are clearly Brexit-linked increases in import costs and the rising global price of fuel started to feed 685 through to consumer prices, where inflation picked up to 1.5% in October 2016. Inflation has continued to rise in 2017, where the IRP stood at 2.7% in April 2017, up from 2.5% in January. The largest contribution to the rate of inflation in April 2017 came from transportation and vehicles. These were partially offset by downward contributions from food, other goods and services.

690 Gibraltar's rate of inflation has averaged 2.6% to date in 2017, higher than the same period in 2016 that averaged at 0.25%. The growth in inflation is largely the result of rising import prices from the fall in sterling since the EU referendum together with the higher global price of fuel that will continue to filter through to consumer prices with inflation projected to remain above the 2% target in 2016.

695 So now, Mr Speaker, I will turn to an analysis of the gross domestic product and of average national incomes. The final GDP estimate for 2014-15 is estimated at £1.61 billion, representing a growth of 9.1% by £134.64 million. The GDP preliminary estimate for 2015-16 is £1.75 billion, increasing by 8.5% or £137.53 million. Mr Speaker, for this year, the GDP forecast for 2016-17 is £1.91 billion, increasing by 8.9%, or almost 9%, or by £156.25 million compared to 2015-16: an excellent result for the whole community to be proud of.

700 Government continues to work towards a target that would see increases in GDP reach at least 2.4% by the end of March 2020, exactly as predicted in our manifesto. We are on track to deliver that growth. This represents a continued average annual growth over the period of at least 7.5% and is exactly the basis of the manifesto presented to the people in November 2015 and on which were returned to office.

705 GDP per capita of an economy is often used as an indicator of the average standard of living of individuals in that country, and economic growth is therefore often seen as indicating an increase in the average standard of living. It is not a strictly scientific measure, but it has been referred to every year since before we took over as the Government. As I have told the House, the latest forecast for 2016-17 estimates a nominal GDP per capita growth of 8.9% from the previous year.

On the IMF GDP per capita rankings the UK continues to feature in 28th position with a GDP per capita of $42,481 and Spain in 37th position with GDP per capita of $36,416. Gibraltar's GDP per capita for 2016-17 is forecast at $92,843, placing Gibraltar in fourth position, closely behind Macao Special Administrative Region and with a GDP per capita which they have of $95,150. We are ahead of Singapore, Switzerland, Hong Kong, the UK and Spain, Mr Speaker. As I have said before, my own view is that these measures are not entirely scientific because of the differing methodologies and fluctuating exchange rates on which they are based. Nonetheless, they are the measures that the rest of the world relies on.

720 As if to demonstrate how fluctuating and thereby potentially meaningless a calculation this is, the figures would of course have varied wildly depending on what day of the last two weeks one might have carried out the calculation, because of the continuing steep fluctuations in the value of sterling against the dollar and the euro. The important aspect of this exercise, however, is really only one to appreciate that the Gibraltar economy is estimated to have grown in real terms by 7.5% in 2015-16 with average earnings going up by almost 8%. This growth places us ahead of other small countries including Malta, Luxembourg, Singapore and Hong Kong.

725 Mr Speaker, the level of aggregate public debt as at 31st March 2017 was marginally lower than last year at £443 million. The level of cash reserves ended the financial year at around £123 million. This reflects net public debt in cash terms of £320 million. Mr Speaker, that is a net debt that has been reduced, in effect, to 16.75% of GDP.

730 Mr Speaker, as is normal, liquid reserves held by the Government ended the year marginally higher than the cash reserves. As is the established practice, a full breakdown of these liquid reserves and details of where these reserves are invested will be provided as part of the Annual Accounts of the Government, once these have audited by the Principal Auditor.

735 Mr Speaker, our public debt continues to fall and to be low in relation to the size of our economy. As a percentage of GDP, our net public debt is currently among the lowest of the countries in the European Union.

740 Our overall borrowing is relatively low, even if we were to include the borrowing of Government-owned companies, which, as Hon. Members know, is not and never has been deemed to be part of the public debt when their party was in office and when they therefore thought it was perfectly proper for the calculation to do be done in that way. This is so because borrowing by Government-owned companies is serviced directly from the income accruing to those companies and is secured against income-generating assets held by these companies and not against the Consolidated Fund or the general revenues of the Government.

745 Mr Speaker, the Government is nevertheless committed to continually reducing its debt-servicing costs and is fully engaged in restructuring its borrowing in order to take advantage of the historically low levels of market interest rates. In this respect and as part of the ongoing management of the public debt, opportunities to extend the maturity profile of the public debt are still being actively looked at by the Financial Secretary and we will continue to pursue those.

750 The Gibraltar public debt/GDP ratio has fallen in aggregate terms, Mr Speaker, from a high of 44.4% in 2010 to a 10-year low of 23.2% in 2016-17 in keeping with the GDP forecast of £1.9 billion. In net terms, public debt now represents 16.75% of GDP in 2016-17, a decrease of 2.7 percentage points compared to 2015-16 when it stood at 19.5%. The highest point of net debt to GDP was actually reached, Mr Speaker – surprise, surprise – under the former 755 administration, when net debt to GDP rose to 25.3%. We have reduced net debt since then by 8.5%. These ratios continue at a lower rate than that of the UK and most other European countries. As we committed ourselves to do at election time, Mr Speaker, we will achieve the debt targets set out in our manifesto so that net debt will be £300 million by 2019-20, which will then be in the region of 12.5% of our GDP, which we expect to be in excess of £2.4 billion.

760 Mr Speaker, I am delighted to announce to the House that during the last financial year 2016 we have once again achieved a recurrent budget surplus. Just achieving a surplus is something which not all governments manage.

In 2003-04, the year of the General Election, the then GSD administration delivered a deficit of £7.8 million. That is to say the GSD fell short by almost £8 million pounds. They spent more 765 than they collected. Indeed, Mr Speaker, I seem to recall that that was the financial year in which the Hon. the current the Leader of the Opposition joined the GSD. I guess it was their budgetary prudence, leading us into a deficit, which convinced him to join them.

Most nations work on the basis of projecting for a not too big deficit. Well, Mr Speaker, in post-Brexit Gibraltar we are going to declare a surplus which will rank as the highest on record to date. (Banging on desks) The surplus of revenue over expenditure for the financial year 2016-
770 17 was estimated at £75.8 million at the time that the Estimates Book went to press. That is more than three and a half times the originally estimated surplus for the year. This marks the hard work of everybody in our economy and the prudent stewardship of this economy for which we are responsible. Additionally, this shows that we continue to build on the strong foundations 775 of our first term in office. In the past financial year we have not just paid our way; we have paid our way and done so with £75.8 million left over. But, in fact, Mr Speaker, I am advised by the Financial Secretary that as the forecast outturn crystallises it is actually likely that the surplus is going to be closer to £78 million. (Banging on desks)

Government revenue during the last financial year exceeded the original budget by around 780 £63 million. As a reflection of the continuing growth in our economy, income tax receipts were up by around £5 million and company receipts were up by around £31 million. Departmental expenditure during the year, on the other hand, has been contained by the Government and this year ended slightly over budget at £6.6 million or 1.4% over budget.

Mr Speaker, hon. Members will see that the estimated surplus for this financial year is once 785 again set just at £18 million, as it was last year. That estimate is, of course, a very conservative estimate of what we believe is achievable. In addition, it is worth noting that the surplus of £75.8 million, or £78 million as it now looks to be, is declared after the deduction of £25 million to fund the Government companies, something which was not done by the previous administration, which preferred to accumulate losses in the companies. As I remind the House
790 every year, we moved away from that approach in our first financial year in office and have consistently deducted £25 million to fund company losses in each year since our first election and declared record surpluses nonetheless. In this instance, for the sake of comparison, I should clarify that if we were declaring the surplus in the same manner as the former administration which Members of the party opposite represent, we would be declaring a surplus of 795 £103 million. We continue, however, to believe it is more prudent and appropriate to make the deduction in order to fund company losses, as I have stated.

Mr Speaker, I want to once again congratulate controlling officers for their financial management in respect of these returns, although some Departments where cost is demand led have exceeded their budgets for that reason.

800 Mr Speaker, as in previous budgets and in line with our manifesto commitment to help Gibraltar Community Care Trust build up its reserves so that it can become totally independent of Government grants, I am delighted to inform the House that a further sum of £20 million has been earmarked by the Government this year as a contribution to the charity. This contribution will be paid out from the Government's recurrent surplus for the year and goes towards a rainy 805 day fund most in our community are very fond of. By the donation of this amount, Community Care will remain on track to have reserves of £230 million by 2019-20, as we are committed to do. That is the largest rainy day fund our community has ever have had in its history, Mr Speaker.

I now move on to the Revenue and Expenditure Budget for the current financial year.
810 Estimated recurrent revenue for the year is budgeted at £615 million. For the first time, we expect to break the £600 million barrier in respect of revenue in the estimates. This represents an increase in revenue of over £24 million or 4.1% over the previous year's estimate. This is nonetheless a conservative budget going forward, particularly when compared with the forecast outturn. The overall recurrent expenditure budget for the year is £597 million, which reflects a 815 modest increase of around 4.5% over the 2016-17 estimate. Mr Speaker, the Government is therefore once again conservatively projecting a recurrent budget surplus, as I have told the House, of £18 million. That is to say all of the spending in the book is achievable with £18 million left over, even on the basis of conservatively estimated revenue.

Mr Speaker, during the last financial year 2016-17, the Government invested around 820 £48 million on capital projects funded from the Improvement and Development Fund. Around £16 million was invested on works and equipment and a further £32 million was invested in specific capital projects. That includes £1.8 million of funding for the University of Gibraltar and £7.3 million on the access road to the Frontier, including the resumption of works on the tunnel. That project, Mr Speaker, was remobilised last year in August and the progress is already quite 825 incredible. I very much look forward to the completion of that tunnel, given the positive effect it will have on traffic on our roads and access to the Airport.

Mr Speaker, there were also further capital projects funded through the Government-owned companies. These include a number of projects that have now been enjoyed by the community as part of their daily life as if they had been there for years, such as the Midtown car park, Charles Bruzon House and Sea Master Lodge, which has recently been handed to tenants.

The expenditure budget of the Improvement and Development Fund for the current financial year 2017-18 is around £65 million. The capital investment in works and equipment is estimated at around £20 million and the provision for investments in other Government projects amounts to £45 million. This includes further funding of £1.4 million for the University of Gibraltar, an 835 investment of £11.8 million in our roads and parking projects, with the ongoing cost of the tunnel across the runway being a key feature; nearly £15 million for the relocation of part of the MoD estate in order to enable the continued release by the MoD of further land and properties for our use by the community – and the demolition of Rooke, as we see, will be useful, Mr Speaker, as usual for the annual fair; almost £1 million for infrastructure works required for the 840 new power station, another huge essential infrastructure development; £1.7 million for infrastructure works for new development and housing projects; £5 million for our ambitious programme of facilities to be ready for the Island Games, but one that will leave a legacy for many years to come; and further provision to complete other ongoing capital projects.

All of these are important projects, Mr Speaker, that are an important part of our delivering 845 our growth as a nation. Nonetheless, as I told the House last year, the Government will keep a close watch on expenditure and on continuing political developments should it become necessary to make the decision to rein in expenditure and not incur costs on new projects, if the circumstances so require.

850 Mr Speaker, I am delighted to report to the House that the reserves of the Gibraltar Savings Bank have continued to grow and that these reserves stood at £32 million at the close of the last financial year. The reserves of the bank are therefore estimated to grow further to reach over £40 million by the end of the current financial year. It is important that I should remind the House that we inherited the reserves of the Savings Bank at zero from the GSD, which Hon. Members opposite represent. There was literally £1,000 in the kitty.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the G (Hon. J J Bossano): One thousand, four hundred and forty two, actually.

860 Hon. Chief Minister: One thousand, four hundred and forty two pounds were left in the kitty. I think the figure was so painful it is indelibly etched on Mr Bossano's heart!

865 To have seen that grow to £32 million in just five years is a testament to the hard work and dedication of Joe Bossano and the Financial Secretary, and it will be a fund that grows to £40 million by the end of this financial year. The community must take its hat off to Joe and to Albert for these magnificent results. Well done indeed, Mr Speaker. And what a great rainy day fund they have accumulated for us – and this in addition to a cash reserve in the books this year of £123 million. The Savings Bank Fund remains very much on track, therefore, to reach approximately £70 million by 2019-20.

870 Together with Community Care, the community will have a total of £300 million saved up in these rainy day funds by 2019-20. And let's be clear, all the funds were at zero when we were elected in 2011 and we started the process of rebuilding the rainy day funds the minute after we were re-elected. It was absolutely right that we should have done so. We are being proved right in having done so. Anyone who was in Government in the administration we took over from would really have a very hard face to pretend that they could preach to anyone about rainy day funds. They were the ones who left Community Care at zero and the Savings Bank Fund at zero –

875 or £1,442 – so we will not take any lessons on rainy day funds from anyone sitting in this House under the GSD banner, Mr Speaker.

880 The current political circumstances entirely vindicate the view we have taken since we were elected that we should build up these reserves. Already with a total of almost £177 million in four years, Gibraltar now has the largest rainy day fund in its history. Add to that the £123 million in cash and we are already at £300 million, which is the amount of the investment in Gibraltar we have seen via Gibraltar Capital Assets in anticipation of the possible Brexit decision.

885 Given the circumstances in which we find ourselves and given the baseless criticisms we often hear of the Government from Members opposite, I am sure, Mr Speaker, that the House and all the community will be very happy indeed that our repeated prudence and our consistent caution in how we have calibrated our spending has produced this magnificent rainy day or sovereign wealth fund in the sum of over £175 million and well on target to reach the £300 million envisaged in our Programme for Government, as well as an additional £123 million in cash reserve this year. Mr Speaker, for the GDP I congratulate the community. For the rainy day funds I congratulate Joe Bossano, Albert Mena and the Government as a whole.

895 The Savings Bank will continue to provide an excellent range of products for our community, as indeed it has done since it was established over 130 years ago. The deposit base of the bank has now grown to over £1.3 billion and it will continue to provide savings products to serve our community and continue to offer special rates of interest to our pensioners. The bank is also continuing its work on improving the services offered to savers by making use of the latest available developments in banking technology. This complements the services that are now being provided to the community by the now well-established Gibraltar International Bank, which include a full range of retail banking services, including mortgage finance to prospective homeowners and commercial lending to our local businesses. The Minister for Financial Services 900 will report on the development of that bank.

Mr Speaker, I will commence now with the process of dealing with the different Departments I have the honour of continuing to have responsibility for.

As announced in last year's address, the Public Sector HR Business Support Unit continues to assist all Government agencies, authorities and Government-owned companies. The unit has introduced a commercial approach to non-Civil Service Human Resources by aligning business objectives with employees and management in designated areas. The unit is championing change and is assessing and anticipates HR-related needs by using industry best practice. It is working in tandem with Minister Bossano as we explore efficiencies and new working methods to improve delivery of service.

Standardising documentation and procedures and streamlining working practices has been at the forefront of the unit. It has delivered tangible results in the approach to the disciplinary process, focusing on preventative measures, mediation and informal resolutions. The core of all industrial relations continues to be channelled through this department, which works directly to me in respect of my responsibility for industrial relations. Our experienced team are now coaching and mentoring junior staff to ensure the long-term sustainability of the service.

The unit currently offers these now centralised services to 14 separate organisations which previously all had their own HR departments or did not have any HR facility. These include the Borders and Coastguard Agency, the Gibraltar Development Corporation, the Port Authority and the London Office to name a few.

Work is currently ongoing on the integration of three additional organisations – the Gibraltar Health Authority, Elderly Residential Services and the Care Agency – which will see the unit's customer base increase to 2,300 employees. This work is scheduled to be completed by the autumn and will coincide with the move into new office accommodation, releasing considerable other office space and allowing us to bring all of these HR practitioners together. This will mean that the HR practitioner to employee ratio will be at an industry standard of 1:100 and all of this will all be achieved within existing resources.

Mr Speaker, in 2015 we introduced a new departmental structure to bring the Customs Department, to which I now turn, in line with modern operational needs. This was always going to be work in progress and in the last 12 months the Collector, in consultation with Government, identified a need to upgrade and restructure using the existing complement, parts of the investigation branch following the introduction of the Proceeds of Crime Act and in advance of an evaluation against the Financial Action Task Force's 40 Recommendations on Anti-Money Laundering and Combating of the Financing of Terrorism. This restructure was fully supported by the GGCA and the staff.

In close consultation with the Collector of Customs, we have relocated the Entry Processing Unit in British Lines Road to a part of the Airport building overlooking the Commercial Gate and the vehicle holding area. In parallel, we have upgraded the ASYCUDA system and the Customs IT equipment so that at present over 76% of all commercial customs declarations are inputted electronically. In parallel, the Collector is working with officials at the Gibraltar Law Offices to streamline all Customs-related legislation to make them easier to follow and consolidated into fewer regulations. Payment of import duties will be via electronic means or in Customs outstations, where they will be credited to traders' prepayment accounts. Mr Speaker, the Collector has involved both the Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Small Businesses, who welcome this initiative. By 1st August this work will be completed and customs import/export documentation will be 100% paperless.

The Controls section at British Lines responsible for the physical checking of commercial bonds and transit sheds will be relocated to enclosed purpose-built facilities in this financial year. Likewise, Customs House, the Training Wing and Clubhouse in Waterport, the Marine section and the Detector Unit will be relocated and the Collector is working on these exciting projects with the Chief Technical Officer to ensure the best possible location and equipment for all.

The Government continues to be proactive in the fight against drugs and tobacco. The Collector has introduced further conditions to the licences of tobacco wholesalers and retailers. A number of revocations have also taken place for those who have breached conditions of 955 licences. Drugs detections, particularly for class-A drugs, are up and are a credit to the departmental staff in all sections and testament to their close collaboration with the RGP and GDP.

Over the last 12 months, officers from HM Customs and other agencies both on land and at sea have faced many challenges when dealing with drugs and tobacco smugglers. Both His 960 Excellency the Governor and I have personally visited them at their places of work to thank them and recognise the dangerous work they undertake to keep drugs and illicit activity off our land and out of our seas. I once again commit the Government to provide all officers with the necessary equipment which they may require given the increased threatening behaviour of smugglers. We have already worked hard to resource the Department with adequate equipment
965 and vessels. The Collector has already procured some defensive equipment, which has already been issued, especially to officers of the Marine Unit, and others are in the pipeline for the immediate future and for the next 12 months. And the Collector has already been briefed on the areas which the Government wishes to address for the future.

I also wish to thank the families of all officers for the continued support they give those 970 officers, and I add my thanks also to all officers of the Royal Gibraltar Police and their families for the work that they do in their areas of responsibility, which include not just the work against traffickers and criminals but also in relation to security matters.

In that respect, Mr Speaker, not only have we spent large amounts on resources like new marine assets and new weapons for our law enforcement agencies, as well as additional 975 training, we have added complement also. As a comparison of our investment in security and in our investment in Police and Customs, the two heads combined attracted £15 million of resources in the last financial year Members of the GSD were in Government; this year the budget is at £26 million.

I now report on my responsibilities as Chairman of the Board of the Borders and Coastguard 980 Agency, yet another of this Government's agencies that continues to strive to ensure it provides the best service possible to the public.

Our border may well be small but it is very busy with over 12 million people crossing it last year via the land Frontier, the Airport, our Port and marinas. Mr Speaker, our borders are open 985 for business, open for tourism, open for legitimate travellers and we welcome them, but we are closed to terrorists, closed to drug smugglers and closed to anyone else who seeks to break our laws. It is the BCA, together with its law enforcement partners, that ensure that we keep out those who we would rather not see in Gibraltar. It may be of interest to this House to learn – and given events elsewhere, somewhat reassuring – that over the past year the Agency has refused entry to some 40,000 people, many because they arrive at our borders improperly 990 documented and some because we would rather not see them in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, it is unfortunate but indeed a fact that we live in a world where the threat of terrorism is all too real. The very recent attacks in London and Manchester have highlighted that it is indeed a great concern, and as such there is a real need for a robust security posture. The Agency's approach to security is measured and flexible; and, taking its direction from the 995 Gibraltar Contingency Council and working closely with the RGP, it is kept under close and constant review.

The Agency's work at our borders has over the last year led to a number of successful RGP and Customs arrests and prosecutions. Mr Speaker, you may well remember that only recently 1000 the Agency was involved with the foiling of a child abduction case when a foreign national tried to transit through Gibraltar to Morocco with a child.

In the current climate of heightened security on the one hand and of politics in general but of Brexit in particular on the other, the spotlight on our borders, and by default on the BCA, is intense and the work they do is challenging, having to balance the very real need for security 1005 against the equally important need for a smooth-flowing border. They perform their duties professionally and diligently and pride themselves in trying very hard to have a measured and balanced approach to their operation.

1010 Mr Speaker, the redrafting of the Immigration, Asylum and Refugee Act 1962 is progressing well and the Government will be in a position to bring the final version to the House very soon. The new Act recognises the professional development and maturity of the Agency and places additional responsibility on the BCA, making it the focal point and leading Gibraltar authority for a more centralised immigration service in Gibraltar.

1015 Only recently, the responsibility for authorising and issuing visas and visa waivers has been transferred from the Civil Status and Registration Office to the BCA, as we believe that by the nature of their deployment at our entry points it affords them the capability to deal with issues swiftly and thus facilitate a faster and more efficient process and service to our public.

The Tourist Visa Waiver initiative continues to be a great success and I repeat, as I have said every year since we introduced it, that the Government continues to be very proud of how very successful this initiative has been, which has seen over 14,100 visitors who would otherwise not have been able to visit Gibraltar to do so last year alone.

1020 Mr Speaker, this Government continues to recognise that it is only by investing in our employees and working closely with the unions that we can guarantee the service we seek to deliver to our public. Together with the Agency's management, the Government has continued to work very closely with both Unite the Union and the GGCA to ensure the maintenance of good working practices and conditions. We have recently revised and improved the existing 1025 Collective Agreement, addressing outstanding issues raised by both unions and management alike, and I am very confident we will be in a position to sign these changes very soon. In addition, and having listened to proposals from the staff, the Agency is in the process of introducing a new uniform which will prove more practical and versatile.

1030 Mr Speaker, this Government has a track record of recognising the benefits of investing in all of our employees and indeed in training and we will continue to do so in the Borders and Coastguard Agency because the Agency continues to be subjected to thorough and exhaustive inspections by the Civil Aviation Authority at the Airport and by the UK Department of Transport at the Port. These inspections ensure compliance with Her Majesty's Government and EU
1035 legislation and the successful outcome of these inspections provides Gibraltar with the necessary credentials to successfully market our Airport and Port internationally.

Finally, Mr Speaker, this Government has been pleased to announce the increase in the number of flights this year, which has exceeded all records. This corresponding increase in passenger numbers requiring processing will provide additional challenges for the men and women of the BCA who continue to work tirelessly to keep Gibraltar open for business.

1040 From this House to the men and women of the Borders and Coastguard Agency: thank you for your work and well done.

1045 Mr Speaker, in relation to the Civil Service and in line with our manifesto commitments, a dedicated Training and Development Unit was established in February 2016 under the direct supervision of the Human Resources Manager and from the existing complement of the Human Resources Department. The Training and Development Unit ensures that all officers have the necessary skill, knowledge and experience to enable and empower them to contribute to the best of their abilities to the public service and its customers throughout their service and career from recruitment to retirement.

1050 Since the unit's launch, over a thousand training opportunities in fields such as policies and procedures have been designed and delivered internally by civil servants who have qualified in trainer training, and in a wide range of management skills by external recognised professional providers. It is envisaged that a further 1,100 training opportunities will be offered during this financial year.

1055 Over the last couple of years the Human Resources Department has also moved towards professionalising their officers, with most of the Department's team having qualified up to Level 3 in Human Resources Practitioner training with the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development.

1060 In addition to its customary participation in the biennial Careers Fair, the Department held its first Retirement Fair during this last financial year. The successful outcome has led to it now becoming an annual event aimed at informing civil servants of all aspects of the retirement process. Officers attending are offered concrete guidance on all the administrative steps in the process together with specialist advice not only on the all-important financial implications of retirement but also on matters relating to personal well-being. This process is also designed to ensure that there is better succession planning in the service and less need in future to re-engage retired civil servants, a practice that we have considerably reduced since taking office.

1065 Additionally, huge progress has been made in relation to the new Civil Service Code in order to replace General Orders, which the Government expects will be in place by the end of the financial year.

1070 In respect of the Civil Status and Registration Office, Mr Speaker, I am happy to report that they continue to provide all services relating to citizenship, registration of births, deaths and marriages, and to deal with related civil status issues. I am happy to report that a new Head of the CSRO has now been appointed and he has been charged with reviewing and evaluating current practices and procedures with the aim of identifying and addressing potential bottlenecks and delays in the system. The new Head of the Department and his staff are also in the process of drafting a series of informative booklets, providing appropriate guidance and information covering all the services currently provided by the Department.

1075 Mr Speaker, I am proud to be able to report that the granting of British Overseas Territories citizenship, or British citizenship, to long-term non-EEA nationals continues, as established when the GLSP-Liberal Alliance came into office in November 2011. As I said in my last budget address to this House, this policy aims to do justice to people who have been part of and have been actively contributing to our community for the better part of their lives. The Citizenship Ceremonies held virtually every month now will attest to my government's commitment to this.

1080 In December 2016, Mr Speaker, this House saw the passing of landmark legislation legalising civil marriage between same-sex partners. The amendment to the Marriage Act means that same-sex couples are afforded exactly the same rights as any other couple already married at the Registry Office. Mr Speaker, as a matter of interest, there have already been a total of 32 same-sex marriages since that law was passed.

1090 Mr Speaker, during the financial year 2016-17 the Income Tax Office has continued its programme aimed at improving the assessment and collection of taxes in Gibraltar. Streamlined efficiencies have led the ITO to remain on track. They proactively manage its refunds programme, implementing measures aimed at reducing delays and the level of refunds due. This is being achieved through the payment of £11.1 million in refunds during the last financial year, which is in excess of the £10 million provided and future budget provision.

1095 The corporate tax yield in the financial year 2016-17 was £135.7 million, representing an increase of 24% over the Government's corporate tax yield in the previous year, an increase of almost a quarter.

1100 Modernisation of systems this year sees the implementation of two major developments which will contribute significantly to the improved administrative efficiency of the Department. The first development, already in progress, is the scanning and digitising of all taxpayers' files and records. All relevant documents and returns are being packaged in appropriate bundles for the scanning phase of this project, leading to a paperless environment and quick electronic access to all the required information.

1105 The second development sees the implementation of a number of filing options that will shortly be made available to corporate taxpayers, including the introduction of machine-readable tax returns using optical character recognition technology, online submission through the use of a dedicated platform, as well as a bulk filing facility for tax practitioners wishing to streamline their filing obligations.

1110 These are the initial stages of a wider and more ambitious plan which envisages the transition of the Income Tax Office to a totally digitised Department through which these facilities can be extended to all taxpayers. In a digital age it is right that we develop a digital tax system, as the Chancellor said in the United Kingdom in the course of their budget recently.

Given the increased focus internationally in tax transparency initiatives and exchange of information, the Income Tax Office is expanding its approach in discharging its duties and functions in compliance with its ever-increasing obligations internationally.

1115 The good news, Mr Speaker, is that as at 31st March 2017 tax and social insurance arrears were 20% lower than on 31st March 2016. This has been as a result of the effective strategy and co-ordination between the Central Arrears Unit and the Income Tax Office. Twenty per cent down – one fifth down, Mr Speaker. Both these departments have been working together and continue to work closely with the aim of ensuring that all taxpayers comply with their obligations and pay their taxes on time. I congratulate them on their diligence in this respect. 1120 Payment of taxes and social insurance contributions is not a choice and it is right that everyone should pay, or else those who do are in effect being unfairly treated if the system does not chase and enforce against those who do not.

1125 As part of the recovery strategy the Commissioner has published a name and shame list in the Gibraltar Gazette setting out the names of defaulting employers. The name and shame published details of self-employed individuals and companies is a consequence of the provisions introduced into the Income Tax Act 2010 empowering the Commissioner to do so. Mr Speaker, new and additional provisions are also being introduced to extend these legislative measures to social insurance and also to allow the Commissioner to publish the list in any newspaper 1130 circulating Gibraltar. Advertising of important tax reminders in the local press has also assisted in ensuring greater compliance across the entire spectrum of taxpayers.

1135 Mr Speaker, the issue of mounting tax rebates dates back many years to 2007 when two events took place, caused by a change of policy by the GSD that started to see an accumulation of the amounts due to tax payers. The first was a change in the charging to tax of pensions. What happened is that this income was exempted but pensioners took some time to change their arrangements, meaning that the amount due to them increased. Around the same time, the GIBs tax system was introduced with its policy of always favouring the taxpayer, irrespective of the system they chose. The additional work understandably delayed computations and the inadequacy of the provisions started stacking up an arrears issue under the GSD, which we 1140 inherited. Indeed, the rebate arrears issue, far from leading to any undermining of our declared surpluses, could actually turn into questions about the surpluses declared by the GSD.

1145 But faced with the accumulation of rebates, Sir Peter Caruana, the man that the Leader of the Opposition has repeatedly said he considers to be the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, took the opportunity to increase his administration's estimate for tax refunds from £20,000 a year to £5 million in 2011. Some might think that was a debateable decision in an election year. A 250-fold increase by the GSD in moneys to be paid to taxpayers in an election year might actually be something that the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association might want to say something about. Indeed, the increase was not initially disclosed during Sir Peter's budget address that year. In fact, it was only revealed as a result of Joe Bossano's right of reply and as a direct 1150 request for clarification by him. The increase was not because the tax refunds in the previous year were down to only £20,000. No. It was because previous income tax receipts had been shown net of these refunds. That is an important point for the Leader of the Opposition to listen to, Mr Speaker: previous income tax receipts had been show net of refunds. That is to say Sir Peter did not show these figures for many years, allowing the GSD to hide the amount of rebates 1155 due – the very lack of transparency I am now being accused of by the GSD itself. You could not make this up. The previous receipts had included the estimated tax revenue less the estimated amount of tax refunds to be made from the revenue. This mechanism allowed Sir Peter to stop making repayments if the figures became too large and affected his revenue instead.

Really, that the Opposition has the audacity to now raise this shows how little homework and research they have done when coming to these debates in preparation. They accuse us of lack of transparency when over 15 of his 16 years Sir Peter masked the amounts due in the rebates. Go figure. And let's be clear: he only grossed things up not out of some Damascene conversion to transparency or because someone pointed out that it made sense, no, he did so because he did not want to come to Parliament yet again to have to change his brilliant debt ceiling formula, which as Hon. Members will know, he had already had to change twice because he was hitting the ceiling of debt. He was looking for anything that would provide some extra headroom for additional borrowing. This change in approach did exactly that, Mr Speaker. In other words, tax receipts that would otherwise have been netted were grossed, this meaning that income was recorded as higher and Gibraltar could borrow more. That is what they were up to, Mr Speaker. So before April 2011 the books would show a total estimated tax revenue that would have been reduced by anticipated tax refunds. After the GSD reforms of April 2011, the total estimated tax revenue, without any deductions for tax refunds, and the total estimated tax refunds for that revenue would be stated separately. It is clear that it was this transition to the Gross Income Based System that catapulted tax rebates from an average of £3 million a year to between £6 million and £7 million per annum, most of which of course walks across the Frontier, Mr Speaker.

So, knowing this in 2007, how come the greatest Gibraltarian of all time only provided £5m for refunds in 2011? Perish the thought, Mr Speaker, that the GSD was keeping taxpayers' money, as they now liberally accuse us of doing. I suppose, like everything, it is okay when the GSD do it but a crime punishable with flogging when anybody else does it.

So I will let taxpayers be the judge who is prudent and who plays fast and loose with their money. If you know you are storing up a problem at the rate of between £6 million and £7 million per annum, who is more prudent: the administration that provides £5 million to repay or the one that provides £10 million to repay? In fact, we paid £11.1 million this year, Mr Speaker.

Given that Mr Clinton is allegedly quick with numbers, perhaps he can tell us what he thinks during the course of his speech, given that he is the one who shadows me on public finances, a responsibility that the Hon. Mr Feetham has been the first Leader of the Opposition in the history of the Parliament to forsake.

In essence, my administration inherited a tax refund policy of the GSD's making that, for the first time ever, set a yearly tax rebate budget of £5 million. Let's be clear, Mr Speaker: they capped it themselves for the first time. They introduced the cap.

Since taking office, we have progressively increased the cap to £10 million that it is today, although last year we budgeted £10 million and we paid £11.1 million. We are in effect providing double for refunds than they did: double the amount provided by the Government of which Mr Feetham was a member – and he still tries to criticise us. It was the Government of which he was a member that introduced the cap on rebates to taxpayers. I hope he is understanding the point before he gets up and makes a fool of himself. I think you referred to a similar attitude in another context during question time as caradura, Mr Speaker: caradura indeed.

Since taking office we have reported solid, steady and reliable economic growth producing more jobs. More jobs means more taxpayers. The taxpayer base is now 37,000 people from 31,335. Higher wages have become the norm across the board. So, whilst benefiting from greater tax revenue, we have cautiously planned for a proportionate increase in tax rebates, and what's more, we have kept to the same ratio against income which the GSD had.

You see, Mr Speaker, what we have been able to work out in respect of the gross tax yield in 2011, at £122.5 million, when the new tax rebate policy was introduced, is that if we compare this against the cumulative refunds that would have been due as at 2011, a figure of £22.7 million – we appreciate that this is a calculation that could not have been done at the time because of the delay of making assessments, but it is one that we have been able to do now – we get a figure of rebates to gross tax yield of 19%.

Mr Speaker, they did not do that exercise and the problem is that the GSD started to operate what is clearly an ostrich policy. They reckoned that just because they did not work something out it was not owed. Hence they did not alight on the extent of the problems of their own making with arrears, which they were quick to chastise us for.

1215 Today, our gross tax yield stands at £154.8 million and our cumulative refunds due at £29.1 million, taking into account the amounts we calculate are due now, including up to the most recent tax year, by bringing assessments up to date and doing a little extra work to estimate the most recent years also. We, Mr Speaker are not ostriches. It is not prudent or cautious to be an ostrich.

1220 So, Mr Speaker, I can report to the House today that the proportion of tax rebates that are outstanding today, as measured against our tax revenue, is exactly the same ratio, 19%, that had been established by the GSD Government of which Mr Feetham was, as he likes to say sometimes, de facto Deputy Chief Minister, based at No. 6 Convent Place, working directly to Sir Peter Caruana.

1225 That is not to say, Mr Speaker, that that is right – I want to ensure that we catch up both with what people owe the Government and with what we owe people – but it should put paid to the incessant criticism that things were somehow better in their day. Things were exactly the same in their day.

1230 Also, at £10 million a year we should start making inroads into the problem quicker than at £5 million a year, which is what they provided for when they introduced the cap into rebates.

But our policy on tax refunds will go further than that, Mr Speaker. We accept that tax refunds are dynamic in their nature. Our policy, as I announce it here today, is to eliminate tax refunds cautiously and fairly. We are committed to increasing the £10 million budget next year, and if there need to be any further increases beyond next year to close the gap, then we will do so – we might even require supplementary appropriation for the purpose, Mr Speaker – because we have stuck to our economic plan and we can therefore deliver.

1240 Mr Speaker, Members opposite have had the audacity to accuse me of playing fast and loose with transparency and accountability by withholding tax refunds. The reality could not be further from the truth. They have been fast and foolish to criticise a policy that was actually established by them and is a direct result of one of the flagship legislative amendments introduced by their former, recently beloved, party leader. Any attempt, therefore, to discredit our surplus is therefore simple nonsense as by comparison such an approach would undermine their own historic position. It also fails to account for the £28 million that is owed to the Income Tax Office by taxpayers in unpaid income tax and social insurance which would net off against the amount owed to the Government, leaving only £1 million to account for.

1250 So, Mr Speaker, on the tax rebate argument any attempt to discredit Government policy produces a slam-dunk own goal against the GSD. Judged not against their words but against their actions and their record, Members opposite have not one leg to stand on. But I do appreciate, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Gentleman opposite has come with a written speech and he has been working on this fatally flawed rebate argument for months now, so I do not expect that he will abandon it, although as he reads it he will, no doubt, feel the legitimacy of it flowing away from it as a result of the information I have provided in the House today. I do feel for him, but I will encourage him and Mr Clinton to read their no doubt carefully crafted tax rebate versus surplus section, despite the fact that it is now logically discredited.

1255 Mr Speaker, I now turn to the specific Budget measures for 2017.

For the differing purposes I will refer to as I explain each one, the following changes in import duty will be introduced with immediate effect.

In order to standardise with other high street products, import duty on handbags is reduced from 6% to 3%.

1260 Import duty on jewellery and imitation jewellery is reduced from 4.5% to 3%.

Mr Speaker, for reasons entirely unrelated to the good news in my own family, but to keep our own traders competitive, import duty on children's prams is reduced to zero.

1265 In line with the Government's commitment to the promotion of healthier lifestyles and making involvement in sport more accessible ahead of the 2019 Island Games, wearable battery operated devices, commonly known as sports trackers or watches, have their duty reduced from 12% to 3%, which brings the duty into line with that paid for wristwatches.

Duty is reduced to zero on sports or dance apparel imported by or for a sporting or dance association, including, for example, rhythmic gymnastics or Members opposite when they try and do the shuffle during the course of this debate!

1270 Indoor sporting equipment such as that used for billiards, pool, darts and chess is also reduced to zero.

In support of this Government's continuing efforts to address the health problems arising from tobacco and smoking generally, a number of tobacco-related import duty increases will take effect from midnight last night.

1275 First, the import duty on waterpipe tobacco increases from the current £3 per kilo by £12 per kilo to £15 per kilo. This represents a fivefold increase in import duty on this line commodity and reflects a huge increase observed by the Collector of Customs in respect of the importation of this particular commodity. Last year I imposed a threefold increase in the duty payable on this commodity from 12% ad-valorem duty to £3 per kilo. In effect, therefore, in the space of 1280 12 months we have raised the duty 15-fold on this type of tobacco. Given the scale of the duty increase imposed today, if the Collector of Customs is satisfied that merchandise can be demonstrated to have been ordered before this announcement and the delivery stage is engaged, it will be accepted on payment of a duty of £3 per kilo for that particular consignment only.

1285 Mr Speaker, many tobacco manufacturers are working on alternatives to burning tobacco. Some products I have been presented with recently by our tobacco importers and the representatives of the tobacco majors involve heating tobacco instead of burning it. The new smokeless heated tobacco products in the market will use electrical heat to create a vapour but without reaching the temperature required to cause combustion. The producers of these 1290 products claim that they are less harmful than cigarettes because they generate no combustion and no smoke. According to the producers' laboratory tests, their aerosols allegedly contain significantly lower levels of harmful and potentially harmful constituents and is much less toxic than cigarette smoke. Indeed, according to the producers' air-quality tests, the aerosol emitted does not negatively impact indoor air quality. These are new products and therefore none of this 1295 is yet tested or clear. It is true, however, that some data published so far suggests that these products are likely to offer reduced toxic exposures of at least 90% relative to smoking. The World Health Organisation estimates that there will be over a billion smokers by 2025. With so many choosing to smoke it makes sense that we should promote less harmful alternatives to smoking. Mr Speaker, import duty on refills for tobacco products designed to be heated and not 1300 burnt is therefore set at £45 per kilo of tobacco content. I emphasise, however, that these are new products and that we will assess how duty should develop in respect of taxing them as their take-up develops.

Mr Speaker, recent data shows diesel fuel, even in modern vehicles, can emit more toxic pollution than was previously thought. The reporting of the manner in which well-known motor 1305 vehicle marques have published misleading information about the efficiency of diesel engines has once again brought this issue into sharp focus. In line, therefore, with our policies on the promotion of the protection of the environment and the promotion of better air quality, the Government must act to promote less use of diesel automotive fuels by increasing the duty on such fuels. Accordingly, in respect of importations occurring as from midnight last night, the duty 1310 on ordinary diesel automotive fuel will be increased by 3p litre and the duty on premium diesel automotive fuel will be increased by 1p per litre. Mr Speaker, I drive a diesel vehicle and I confess I have not filled the tank for a month.

Mr Speaker, the purchase of electric forklift trucks already attracts zero duty but it attracts no additional benefits. As from today, any electric forklift will attract the same cashback as for any 1315 electric road vehicle, and the cashback for full electric vehicles that have no element of propulsion by a combustion engine is increased by a further £750. This will not apply to hybrids, in respect of which the position remains unchanged.

Additionally, Mr Speaker, all amounts spent on the Governments Redibikes scheme will be tax deductible.

1320 The duty on plastic bags is doubled, from 5p to 10p.

As a further environmental protection measure, the deductions which apply to residential premises in respect of the installation of solar power will also apply to commercial premises.

1325 Mr Speaker, Gibraltar needs to be flexible over the coming years and look at new forms of investment. We are seen by many as a place to hold assets securely with the benefit of dispute resolution subject to the common law and no capital gains tax.

1330 We are already seeing interest with storing valuables here, with the wine storage project being developed and the number of data centres that exist in Gibraltar. It is for that reason that the Government reduced the duty on works of art to zero two years ago and introduced a ceiling for vehicle duty of £50,000. In order to further promote the use of Gibraltar as a jurisdiction for the ownership and secure storage of high-value items, as from midnight tonight the duty on classic vehicles is reduced to zero. For the purposes of this measure a classic car will be interpreted as defined by EU Directive 2014/45/EU as a vehicle of historical interest that is no longer in production and is over 30 years old.

1335 Additionally, gold bullion is presently a restricted item which requires an import licence from the Collector of Customs. It is presently taxed at 6%. As currencies and stock markets have fluctuated, there has been a move to gold in many jurisdictions. With an import duty of 6%, Gibraltar has priced itself out of that market. Again, as we seek to develop a business in our tunnels for storage of high-value goods that are as safe as the Rock of Gibraltar, we must ensure that the importation of such items into Gibraltar is not made unattractive. Consequently, the import duty on gold bullion will now be decreased by 5% to 1%.

1340 Additionally, the Government has been approached by traders to create a mechanism to allow for the importation into bond of very high value retail items sent to retailers on consignment – that is to say, items which the trader will only pay for if he sells the product in question. Many of these items are of a very high value and are unique. Traders would find it difficult to import such items to show if they had to pay duty on them before they are sold. As a result, in consultation with the Collector of Customs, the Government will design a scheme for importations of very high value items – that is to say, items to retail over £25,000 – where import duty will not be payable on importation but upon the sale of the item. In effect, traders will be able to hold a select number of items on show in retail premises on bond terms. This trade will be limited to Main Street, to premises approved by the Collector of Customs and each item so imported will require a specific permission from the Collector. The trader will have to demonstrate that the item is displayed for sale and will be required to communicate the actual sale to the Collector of Customs within two hours of the sale and the relevant duty paid within 48 hours. Items imported by a trader, or any trading entity in the same or a related group, in this way will have to be re-exported or the duty paid within six months of their first importation, and an item exported if it is not sold will not be able to benefit from the application of this scheme again for another 24 months.

1350 Mr Speaker, the Government has reduced import duty on motor vessels to assist the many in our community who were purchasing small boats for the magnificent new Small Boats Marina in the Mid Harbour basin. Recent news has highlighted the risk jet-skis pose in the hands of inexperienced users. During Question Time last week the Minister for the Port, the Hon. Gilbert Licudi, explained to the hon. Lady opposite that we had already introduced competency and insurance requirements for jet-skis and that following a recommendation from the Small Vessels Advisory Board he would be introducing an insurance requirement for all motorised vessels. 1355 Additionally, from the Ministry of Finance measures will also now be taken by the introduction of an import duty on jet-skis, which will increase from zero to 20%.

1370 Mr Speaker, in order to assist with the cost of doing business in Gibraltar, electricity and water charges will again not be increased this year, despite the cost to the Government of providing these public utilities. It is important that business, and in particular business representative organisations, value this important concession. Given that inflation since January 1375 2012, the month after we were elected at the beginning of this financial year, to 1st April has amounted to 6.3%, that is the discount in real terms that businesses have already had since our election against the amounts at which water and electricity are charged. The taxpayer is in effect subsidising the cost of doing business in Gibraltar to a great extent, but we do so in order to keep Gibraltar an attractive place to do business. This does not lessen the burden on the taxpayer though, and it is important that it be fully understood by those who are taking the benefit of the subsidy. The subsidy applies as much to residential users as to business users, and it is important that everyone understands that they are already paying only about one third of the cost of generation of water and electricity.

1380 General rates payable by businesses will also remain unchanged and discounts for the early payment of rates will continue to apply, unchanged by the Government. As from the next quarter, rates will not be charged on offices from the date of certificate of fitness but from date of first occupation when they have just been completed.

1385 Mr Speaker, in pursuance of the Government's continued commitment to reduce the level of personal taxation, especially for the lower paid members of our community, with effect from 1st July 2017 the exemption from the tax system will increase. Accordingly, taxpayers with assessable income of £11,150 or less will be brought out of the taxation system altogether and will pay no income tax at all. That is an increase in that exemption of £100, Mr Speaker. This applies to taxpayers in both the Allowance Based System and the Gross Income Based System.

1390 In accordance with our manifesto commitment, taxpayers under the Allowance Based System will benefit from an increase in their personal allowances in line with inflation. With effect from 1st July 2017, therefore, the following allowances will increase as follows: the Personal Allowance will go from £3,215 to £3,300; the Spouse or Civil Partners Allowance will go from £3,215 to £3,300; the One Parent Family Allowance from £5,290 to £5,435; the Nursery
1395 Allowance from £5,025 to £5,160; the Child Allowance from £1,105 to £1,135; the Child Studying Abroad Allowance from £1,255 to £1,290; the Dependant Relatives Allowance where the relative is resident in Gibraltar from £305 to £315, and where the relative is not resident in Gibraltar from £205 to £210; the Disabled Individual Allowance from £9,040 to £9,285; the Blind Person's Allowance from £5,020 to £5,155; the Medical Insurance Allowance from £5,020 to £5,155.

1400 Mr Speaker, as stated by the Government in March, when social insurance was increased for the first time in seven years, the Government is committed to reform of the social insurance system. The Government continues to tread a cautious path on this reform, bearing in mind that the options available to Government will also be greater once the UK and Gibraltar have left the EU, although I caveat that with the things I said earlier in my speech, Mr Speaker.

1405 Government continues to engage with the Chamber of Commerce and Federation of Small Businesses to appraise them of these matters and welcomes their understanding of the need for the increase in social insurance and support for the introduction of e-services across Government and has also informed the unions of the steps being taken. There will not be a further increase in social insurance in the current calendar or financial year.

1410 Mr Speaker, nonetheless, under Gibraltar law the provisions provide that young employees under the age of 20, whilst still paying social insurance contributions do not have these counted towards their pensions. These start accruing only once they have reached the age of 20. This provision will be eliminated, given it is explicitly based on age discrimination, Mr Speaker. In line with the position in the United Kingdom, social insurance contributions will accrue for the 1415 benefit of the contributor starting at the age of 15. I thank Unite the Union for bringing that discrimination to my attention.

Additionally, working with Unite the Union, we will implement sick leave discount principles for all public sector workers with cancer-related illnesses and in respect of bereavements as well as the annual leave aspects of some employees.

1420 Also after consultation with Unite, the rule in the Pensions Act that saw non-industrial workers able to retire at the age of 55, whereas industrial workers would have to retire at the age of 60, will be removed to allow those who could only retire at 60 to retire at 55 if they agree to take a commutation of the pension entitlement.

1425 Mr Speaker, old age pensions will increase this year in line with the rate of inflation of 2.7%, so that the single rate for old age pension would increase from £440.54 by £11.90 to £452.44 and the couple rate would increase from £660.85 by £17.85 to £678.70. The dependant rate will grow from £220.31 by £5.95 to £226.26 and the same cash differentials will be maintained with the Minimum Income Guarantee, as in previous years.

1430 In line with our manifesto commitment and the three-year pay deal agreed, the general level of public sector pay will rise by 2.75% with effect from 1st August this year.

1435 And, Mr Speaker, in line with this Government's commitment to keep the national minimum wage under constant review and to increase this by at least the rate of inflation over our term in office, the statutory minimum wage will increase from £6.28 to £6.45 per hour with effect from 1st August 2017. This represents an increase of 17 pence an hour or around 2.7%, which is the rate of inflation. Additionally, the Government will provide the resources necessary to investigate any breaches of the minimum wage and the registration requirements for workers in our laws. With the benefit of that increase on the minimum wage those who are lowest paid in our community will have seen the GSLP-Liberal Government increase their salaries just shy of 20% in the five and a half years we have been in office, or up by £1.05 an hour. We are justly proud of our record in the increase in the minimum wage.

1440 Mr Speaker, we have commenced the process of consultation with Unite the Union, the Federation of Small Businesses and the Chamber of Commerce in respect of the potential introduction in Gibraltar of pensions in the private sector. Last year I announced that, given the result of the Brexit referendum, we would not be progressing that process in the immediate past financial year whilst we observed the effects on the economy of the result of the vote of the British people. This year, Mr Speaker, as we can see that Gibraltar continues to grow, it is right we should unpause that process and continue the consultation with a view to implementing the introduction of pensions for private sector employees. The consultation will continue to include the unions, the Chamber and the Federation.

1450 Mr Speaker, additionally, I have agreed with the Chairman of the Trustees of Community Care to meet with the directors in coming weeks to hear from them what they propose to do and announce in respect of the provision of additional minimum income guarantees for some private sector pensioners and divorced women pensioners. I look forward to meeting with him to understand what the independent trustees of Community Care propose.

1455 Pensioners from the joint venture utility companies are in discussions with Government on ensuring that they have not lost out on pension entitlement as a result of having left the Civil Service in the late 1980s and early 1990s. The Financial Secretary is doing a very detailed analytical exercise to share with them to ensure we see the reality of their situation and compensate any quantifiable actual loss. I expect we will be in a position to finalise that work in this financial year, Mr Speaker.

1460 Also in relation to pensioners, the Government has been approached by a number of those entitled to re-enter the Widows and Orphans Pension Scheme who were not married to their current partners at the time that they retired. The law states that any marriage of the pensioner whose rights would be assigned to a widow or orphan who was not married by the time he retired would not be eligible to entitlement. This is grossly unfair and is based on an old law which has not kept pace with modern life. It is, in any event, an issue that affects only a handful of those who would re-enter the old WOPS scheme. The law will therefore be changed to allow for marriages after the retirement of the contributor if he opts back into the scheme to count also.

1470 The widow to re-enter WOPS ... Sorry, the window to re-enter the WOPS scheme (Laughter) – yes, I hope people understood that slip, Mr Speaker – will be open again, from midnight tonight until 30th September 2017, to allow those who have previously been denied membership on the basis of the application of this aspect of the law to apply.

1475 Mr Speaker, in the context of everything I have said already about pensioners and students, it is important that we should reflect as a community that Gibraltar pensioners are amongst the best well off in Europe and probably the world. It is important that we recognise how well off we are in the context of the uncertainties that Brexit may bring.

1480 Mr Speaker it is my responsibility, as Minister of Finance and Chief Minister, to deliver a full address that deals in detail with all areas of revenue and expenditure. It is for that reason that this speech is a long one and the Estimates Book is a full set of information in respect of every area of Government revenue and expenditure. I nonetheless want to ensure that our Budget is more accessible and that more of our fellow citizens understand what we receive in revenue and what we spend on. This is a point that the hon. Lady has sometimes made also. For that reason, Mr Speaker, and in line with my Government's commitment to transparency, we have prepared a shorter presentation of the Budget to assist viewers to follow these debates and discussions.

1485 The presentation will be available online at:

https://www.gibraltar.gov.gi/new/sites/default/files/HMGoG_Documents/Budget%202017-18%20WEB.PDF .

1490 It will be tweeted and it will be made available on social media. The presentation is not a substitute for reviewing the Estimates Book but rather an attempt to connect the viewer with where the money this Government raises is coming from and where it is being spent.

Preparing for this debate, Mr Speaker, is challenging for all Members of the House. We all want to do our best in this important Second Reading, which allows us to set out our policies and views in respect of our respective areas of political responsibility.

1495 I want to thank all the staff of No. 6 Convent Place for their assistance in the preparation for this debate and throughout the year. They are the ones who keep a smile on my face at work every day of the year, whatever the headlines in the international press may say. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition does a good job of keeping a smile on my face with the national headlines, Mr Speaker.

1500 All of the public servants of Gibraltar have worked hard in their respective areas of responsibility to deliver these results. I thank all of them: the civil servants, the employees of the Development Corporation, the Government agencies and authorities and the employees of the Government companies. A sincere thank you on behalf of the Government.

1505 And I want to thank all the Ministers in the Government for their endeavour in the challenging past 12 months. This Government is a team that only works because we work together. Thank you to all of you. We started this process as a group of excited friends with a common set of objectives and we continue in that way.

1510 This weekend I have broken my preparation for this debate to celebrate the end of Ramadan with our magnificent Muslim community. I wish a great Eid al-Fitr to all our Muslims today, the last day of Ramadan. I enjoyed greatly the events at the Ibrahim-al-Ibrahim Mosque with our Imams and with Ali Douissi of the Moroccan Community Association. We were joined by the Hon. Mr Reyes on the opposite benches and I think we all enjoyed a magnificent meal on Saturday night, Mr Speaker. What I enjoyed most was the presence at the mosque of Hindus, Jews and Christians alongside the Muslim members of our community for the breaking of the fast. That moment will be indelibly etched in my mind as an image of the Gibraltar that we all love; the Gibraltar that Momy Levy used to rave and evangelize about; the Gibraltar that we know and love and for which we work so hard on this side of the House.

It is true that we have a jewel of a nation on our hands, a rare jewel that we must treasure and nurture, and so today's debate is not about values or about religion. Former Vice-President

1520 Joe Biden is reputed to have said, 'Don't tell me what you value, show me your budget, and I'll tell you what you value,' because a budget is not just a collection of numbers, but an expression of our underlying values and our current and long-term aspirations as a people. This Budget is therefore calibrated not to discriminate. It is calibrated to help the aged and the disabled and 1525 the young as well as the capitalist businessman and the worker he employs, for we must nurture our businesses in order to nurture our workers and in that way enjoy the social peace that we are basking in today.

This weekend we have also seen Team Gibraltar prosper and succeed in the Island Games in Gotland. The Minister for Sport has been with the team this weekend and is back in the House today for the debate. He will return to Gotland at the end of the proceedings of the House this 1530 week. The next Games will be in Gibraltar and we will be ready for them, Mr Speaker. From the whole Parliament the very best of luck to all of Team Gibraltar in Gotland this week and congratulations to all those of our athletes who are already medal winners: Harry and Tom, who took gold in clay pigeon shooting; Wayne, Stephanie and Mairead, the latter of whom is just 14, who took bronze in the team air rifle; and our triathlon team, who also took bronze in their 1535 event.

Mr Speaker, the Gibraltarians are a strong, resilient and robust people. Look at the magnificent efforts some of our people make for worthy causes that they hold dear. What makes a man swim across a busy strait like the Strait of Gibraltar; and then, when he reaches Tangier on the other side, on the distant shore, what makes him swim straight back? What 1540 makes a man walk to Jerusalem, like Mark Randall did? What makes a man and a woman swim in the sea every single day, come rain or shine, warm or cold, like Stuart Felice and Debbie Ruiz are doing every day? What makes a team of men get on their bikes in London and not get off until they have cycled 2,400 kilometres to Gibraltar? It is what makes us Gibraltarians, Mr Speaker. The pursuit of a just cause. Courage. Grit. Determination. Rock Scorpions every single 1545 one of them. Heroes raising funds for those worse off than themselves. Champions, Mr Speaker.
The Government will match the amounts each of the ones I have mentioned have raised at the end of their challenges for the causes they have sponsored.

Mr Speaker, prudence, caution, optimism and investment – those are the watchwords with which this Budget has been laced. We must be prudent, but the results of the year just past to 1550 date give us good reason for optimism. That is why with caution we must continue to invest in our community. If we have the income, as we do, we cannot fail to build much needed new schools because Britain is leaving the European Union – because what is the meaning of prudence and caution in relation to budgetary discipline?

Prudence is not an entreaty to stop all spending. That is suicide in economic terms that would 1555 lead to a slowdown and a recession.

Prudence is not austerity, as we hear others in this House advocate – that is cutting spending and cutting public services.

Prudence is also not a balanced budget, where you spend exactly what your income is.
Prudence is paying for existing public services and seeking to improve them in quantity, in 1560 quality and in efficiency, but doing so within our means – and that is what we are doing.

Prudence is paying for new capital projects in a way that ensures that they are not a drag on the exchequer but that they provide those new or improved services we want to offer in a way that does not create new additional costs – and that is what we are doing.

Prudence means putting cash away in rainy day funds for a rainy day – and that is what we 1565 are doing, although we had to start from zero.

Prudence means funding the cost of the companies that the former administration created and not allowing them to build up deficits, Mr Speaker. That is what we are doing and will not be deterred from doing, despite having to reconstruct the accounts of the companies because the government of Members opposite did not maintain them.

1570 That is how this Budget is designed and why spending under each head has been carefully calculated in keeping with Government policy, so that it is reduced to the level it can be and so 1575 that reducing it any further would logically simply lead to a necessary increase elsewhere. Because prudence means doing all of that and having money left over. That is to say, Mr Speaker, prudence is a surplus after pay increases, after new schools, after new sporting facilities and after great musical and cultural events. And that is what we have done and achieved for the past six years and what we will do and achieve for the next three – and that is what this Budget ensures.

1580 You see, Mr Speaker, a Minister for Finance has to see through the prism not just of austerity and saving, not just of protecting our heritage. A Minister for Finance has to balance the wealth of the nation with the health of the nation; the promotion and growth of the nation with saving for the future; the surplus and the reserves and the cost of things versus the value of things. And once that balance is done in the context of these numbers, Mr Speaker, Gibraltar does not need austerity – it needs caution and prudence alongside investment and optimism.

1585 The old St Bernard’s School did not need more austerity applied to it. The pupils of that school needed investment to create the new schools they are being taught in today.

The old KGV did not need more austerity applied to it. The patients of that facility required the investment to create Ocean Views.

1590 Laguna and Glacis did not need more austerity. They had had plenty of that, Mr Speaker, under the GSD. What they needed was investment in the environment people are living in – investment in our public services and in our economy which is cautious and carefully calibrated. That is what this Budget delivers.

1595 And so, Mr Speaker, I say to those outside this House: if you own a business, this is a Budget for you; if you employ people, this is a Budget for you; if you work in the public or private sectors, this is a Budget for you; and if you are elderly, a student or a school child, this is a Budget for you. But if you want to cut services to the public, if you want to slash Government investment in Gibraltar and if you want to sow panic for another year, this is not a Budget for you and we are not a Government for you. And if you do not want to work but you can, or if you do not want to pay your fair share though you can, then this is also not a Budget for you either and neither are we a Government for you. For we are a Government for workers and not for skivers. We are a Government for those who invest, not for those who want to suck up without contributing. We are there for those who need our help, not for those who will not get up and help themselves. And we are ready to do our bit and lead this nation.

1600 Mr Speaker, whatever they think about me, Her Majesty’s Treasury does not lie and the numbers do not lie. Like everything this Government does, we reflect reality; and as such, the only ring that our people will associate with this Budget is the ring of truth, and Members opposite know that. They know that this is the economy they would like to be reporting on. They should be pleased for Gibraltar and they should be honest and say so. They know that these are the public finances that they would be proud to be presiding over, and they should be honest and say so. They should not talk Gibraltar down when the numbers show that our performance is up. A decade after the financial crisis, one year after the Brexit referendum, we are financially stronger than ever.

1615 That is why this is a Budget that reflects economic performance to celebrate unprecedented investment in sport, unprecedented investment in our schools and education, unprecedented investment in our healthcare and elderly services – the unprecedented investment in public services our nation deserves, all funded from the rising revenue that arises from unprecedented levels of investment in Gibraltar: the prudent management of public finances our nation deserves, Mr Speaker.

1620 This is a historic time in our affairs. It is not a time for political novices, for political apprenticeships or political ambition. It is a time for political leadership. Mr Speaker, the economy is performing well, the public finances are stronger than ever, the nation is on a sound course to continued success. Steady as she goes, Mr Speaker. I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1625

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am not sure that I am going to bring a smile to the hon. Gentleman's face with my first contribution during the course of this debate, because it is both unfortunate but very necessary that I bring to the attention of this House that the hon. Gentleman and the Government have turned these annual debates into a farce, and it is a dangerous farce at that.

This book and the annual debate on the numbers it contains can no longer be taken as an authoritative indication of the economic health of this community, and for that reason, for the very first time in six years, the Opposition will be voting against it. (Hon. Chief Minister: Excellent.)

1630

Over the last six years we have seen a systematic destruction of parliamentary governance in Gibraltar and in particular the deliberate disablement of the ability of this Parliament, through this debate and elsewhere, to properly scrutinise our public finances in any meaningful way. The Chief Minister has the dubious distinction of leading a Government that, through the opacity in the way it has chosen to structure the public finances of this community, has made a mockery of these annual debates.

1635

It is not only about the quality of our democracy and about basic accountability and transparency, it is not just about the questions that the hon. Gentleman refuses to answer about the Sunborn loan or the information that we are provided in this House, which turns out to be half-truths or inaccurate. It is much more than that. It is about the ability of this Parliament, and therefore this community, to identify potential financial problems before they arise. And it is self-evident that never has there been a need for that scrutiny like there is today, where we are heading out of Europe and that, whether we like it or not, will involve considerable readjustment to businesses and also social attitude.

1640

This book, Mr Speaker – these estimates of revenue and expenditure – is only half of the picture of what the Government has directly or indirectly spent, at what cost, and how much it has directly or indirectly borrowed to pay for it all. The very simple reason for that is that the Government has borrowed some £772 million – let me repeat that: £772 million – that we know of, through Government-owned or controlled companies which it has used and continues to use to fund its expenditure, and none of that is reflected in this book that we are debating here today.

1645

How can anyone – the Chamber of Commerce, the Gibraltar Small Business Federation, the media, the press or anyone else who in a democracy would be expected to comment on the state of our public finances – be able to share that very optimistic picture that the Hon. The Chief Minister paints, when other than the gross debt figure for those Government-owned companies ... We do not know, for example, how much has been spent by those companies, on what that money has been spent, what cash those companies have left at their disposal and therefore what the net debt position of those companies is. How can anyone say they are happy with these figures when the Government is operating a separate set of accounts it is not disclosing and there is no clarity – indeed there is opacity, Mr Speaker – in the way the Government is spending or has spent £772 million, a pot of money in Government-owned companies?

1650

This is an issue of huge concern for the Opposition, which has become even more concerning post the Brexit referendum, a referendum that we all described in this House as posing an existential threat to our economic model, and today we are asked to believe the statements made by the Hon. the Chief Minister that things could not be better, when we do not know what he is doing or what he has done with £772 million in those Government-owned companies.

1665

I repeat: this is not just about transparency and accountability. It is about being able to spot emerging or existing economic problems so that they can be dealt with, and that becomes more necessary now there are some very significant curves up ahead for the jurisdiction.

1670 Let me say, Mr Speaker, that I am proud of the job that the Opposition has done in being a beacon of democracy in holding the Government to account on these issues, and history will judge. (Interjections) History will judge, and our speeches are there as a matter of public record. Whether the same can be said of others, which in a democracy have their own duties to the people of Gibraltar...

1675 Everything that I say today, Mr Speaker, is subject to this overriding and overarching point that I have just made, because they have really turned this debate into a dangerous farce.

I start with an analysis of the public debt position and the role of the Gibraltar Savings Bank. In December 2011 when they won the election there were £27.6 million of debentures and bonds in the Gibraltar Savings Bank. In other words, money borrowed by the Gibraltar Savings Bank from members of the public owed to members of the public was £27.6 million. The total of debentures and bonds issued by the Gibraltar Savings Bank as at 31st March 2017 was 1680 £834.5 million. That represents an increase, Mr Speaker, of 3,023% in six years. How on earth the hon. Gentleman can stand there today pokerfaced and say that this is a rainy day fund, a sovereign fund, when ... Anyone who knows about these things can tell the hon. Gentleman that 1685 a sovereign fund is a pot of money belonging to the state, when debentures in the sum of £834.5 million is money that the Gibraltar Savings Bank owes members of the public. It is not a rainy day fund; it is a debt owed by the Gibraltar Savings Bank to members of the public.

The reason for that huge increase is that the Government embarked on a process, when they got elected, of shifting debentures issued by the Government directly, which legally counts as public debt, to the GSB, where it does not count as debt of the Government because it is a debt of the Gibraltar Savings Bank.
1690

The Gibraltar Savings Bank, Mr Speaker, is a creature of statute. In simple terms, it is a state-owned savings bank, much like the National Savings and Investments is in the United Kingdom. It is under the management and control of a director, who traditionally has been the Accountant General or the Financial Secretary, the top civil servant heading the Treasury.
1695

This explosion of Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures was, of course, a premeditated plan to allow the Government to use savers' money for Government expenses without the need to increase public debt, particularly as they fought the 2011 election saying that the GSD had been addicted to debt. It was also a way in which the Government, as we will see, could circumvent the legal borrowing limits that were there to prevent a Government from borrowing in a manner that became unaffordable to this community.
1700

The device used by the Government to do that was Credit Finance Company Limited, a company incorporated in 2012, run by public servants and which over a period of time since 2013 has had £400 million of savers' money transferred into it. Credit Finance then proceeded to use the money in order to pay the commuted pensions of civil servants, provide loans to third parties under the direction of the Government, including the Sunborn Floating Hotel, and the remainder, some £330 million, was loaned to a Government-owned company called Gibraltar Investment Holdings Limited.
1705

Gibraltar Investment Holdings is, of course, the company that has historically been used by successive governments to fund the capital and cash needs of nearly all Government-owned companies from the Consolidated Fund – in other words, from this book, Mr Speaker. The Government has traditionally injected capital into Gibraltar Holdings Limited and from there it then trickles down into other Government-owned companies – and Minister Bossano has rightly accepted, even when this was denied by the Chief Minister in his New Year's Message in 2014, that the money loaned to Gibraltar Investment Holdings by Credit Finance Company Limited, some £330 million, was being used in order to fund the cashflow requirements of other Government-owned companies and any projects they may have been undertaking on behalf of the Government. That was disputed on countless occasions by the Chief Minister, but in his inimitable style, which I pay tribute to today, the Father of the House came clean and opted to defend the policy instead.
1710

I also have to admire the Hon. Gentleman the Chief Minister, the way he stands up and pokerfaced says to this House that the Government has made a surplus of £75.8 million this year. But of course if the debt in Government-owned companies to the tune of £772 million – that pot of money – is being used to pay for expenditure that is properly the Government’s expenditure, and that expenditure is not reflected in these accounts, it is not possible to say that the Government is running the public finances of Gibraltar at a surplus of revenue over expenditure. That is why he does not want a Public Accounts Committee, because he knows that that would give us the ability to ask questions of those public servants running those companies which have within them – or had within them, because we do not know how much has been spent – £772 million.

And it is not an answer, Mr Speaker, to say that the debts of Government-owned companies are not debts of the Government. That may or may not be so from a purely technical legal standpoint, but it is still a debt owed by Gibraltar plc. Are we seriously suggesting that if Gibraltar Investment Holdings Limited, a Government-owned company, ever defaulted, for example, on its debt of £330 million to Credit Finance Company Limited, that the Government would refuse to step in? If those listening to this debate think that I am right and that it is inconceivable that a Government would not step in, should we not be scrutinising how the Government is spending that money, which ultimately is an exposure to the taxpayer of Gibraltar?

The absurdity of the Government’s position can be easily tested. The money in the Gibraltar Savings Bank is guaranteed under the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act by the Government, and therefore the taxpayer. So, even if the Government refused to step in to repay any debt that Gibraltar Investment Holdings owes Credit Finance Company Limited because it relied on the principle that Gibraltar Investment Holdings Limited is a separate entity to the Government of Gibraltar, it would have to do so at source because Credit Finance Company Limited would default in its own obligations to the Gibraltar Savings Bank and the Government are guarantors in law of all the moneys in the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

The additional absurdity and artificiality of this convoluted structure, which the Government has set up solely to massage the figures on public debt and expenditure, is that the money loaned by Credit Finance Company Limited to Gibraltar Investment Holdings Ltd is held centrally by the Treasury, i.e. by the Government, with no attempt to segregate it from money owned by the Government directly. Government-owned money and the money held for Government-owned or controlled companies is pooled centrally and, as Minister Bossano explained only last week, is being used whenever it is needed within what he described as ‘the empire’, by which of course he means the Government and Government-owned companies. So all the money that the Government has and is pooled centrally at Treasury is being used wherever it is needed within the structure of Government, including Government-owned companies.

While the Hon. the Chief Minister latches on to technicalities to support his statement that public debt stands at £442.7 million gross and £319.8 million net, the Opposition continues to remind this Parliament that, post Greece and post the collapse of the financial markets in 2008, countries in Europe are moving towards greater transparency and accountability on the issues of public debt.

In the UK, debentures from the UK National Savings and Investments, the equivalent of the Gibraltar Savings Bank, and the debts of Government-owned companies form part of the UK national debt and it is plainly wrong that we should not do so here in Gibraltar.

The gross debt of this community is an eye-watering £1.2 billion – that we know of, Mr Speaker, and I repeat: that we know of. It is over twice, in gross terms, what the hon. Gentleman has told the House that gross public debt stands at today.

I just ask people to judge me not on my arguments, not on the arguments that I am developing during the course of this debate; I ask them to judge me by the Chief Minister’s own statements as Leader of the Opposition in 2011 when, straight after the 2011 budget debate, he went to GSLP headquarters and in a podcast he said this, and I quote:

Hello.

He does the 'hello' well, I have to say. I have to give him credit for that! (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) (Laughter)

Hello, I have just come out of Parliament, where we have been debating the estimates of expenditure; the Budget, in other words. Mr Caruana is pretending that the economy of Gibraltar has never been better, but in fact if you look underneath the surface, if you look beyond the 1% or 2% tax cuts, there is an issue with the economy that I want you to understand.

1775 Pausing there, Mr Speaker, in 2011 he was telling people there was an issue with the economy, and there I was thinking that I was the only treacherous individual in the jurisdiction worthy of capital punishment for my statements on the Budget each year.

But carrying on:

Gross debt – in other words, the amount owed by the Government of Gibraltar – is now up to £480 million. The ceiling is £500 million ... Despite that, Mr Caruana tells us that everything is okay. Well, with a gross debt of £480 million we are talking about every man, woman and child in Gibraltar owing £16,000 to the banks.

1780 Pausing there again, Mr Speaker, I thought that I was the only one as well who would engage in scaremongering the community on the question of the figures, but of course I appear to be in very good company, i.e. the Chief Minister.

Carrying on:

That's an incredibly high level of debt per capita ... Well, the gross debt borrowing limit is £500 million. If you add to the £480 million that we have already borrowed in respect of gross debt the £20 million that Mr Caruana has borrowed from banks using Government buildings which he has put in a company, then you have reached a total of £500 million. That second £20 million, for technical reasons, doesn't count as Government borrowing, but the Government now owes more than the law allows it to owe. The Government now owes £500.2 million.

1785 Mr Speaker, I have to say I have always admired him for it, but only he – nobody else can do it, only he – can stand up in this Parliament and maintain a poker face when he says what he says and what he has said today about public debt.

1790 When he was the Leader of the Opposition and claimed we had just £20 million – not £772 million, £20 million – of debt in Government-owned companies ... And I do not agree that was the true position but I am prepared, for the purposes of this debate, to take his word at its highest, but when he was saying there was £20 million of debt in Government-owned companies he was claiming that the total amount of debt owed by the Government should include the debts of Government-owned companies, and if you took that amount into account it exceeded the legal borrowing limits.

Well let's test the position even further, shall we, in accordance with the numbers that he has given today and the numbers that we know about.

1795 If you take, as he advocated in December 2011, the combined debts of Government and Government-owned companies, each man, woman and child, as he put it then, would not owe £16,000 to the banks, as he claimed then; they would owe £40,000 to the banks, Mr Speaker. It follows that if £16,000 per person was 'an incredibly high level of debt per capita' in 2011, I suppose £40,000 could be described as a staggering amount today.

1800 It must also follow that if he felt – let me get the quote correctly – 'there is an issue with the economy' on those numbers in 2011, there must be a very serious issue with the economy on the numbers today, which are far worse.

1805 He also said that if you took the £20 million debt in Government-owned companies at the time, the GSD Government had breached the legal borrowing limit by £0.2 million. Well, Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Father of the House will know, if the Chief Minister does not already, that at the time our legal borrowing limits were measured within net debt parameters and indeed he is taking the £20 million figure, which is a gross figure. Well, Mr Speaker, I am going to 1810 return to the net debt limits in a moment, but the debt limits were changed last year to 40% of GDP. That is net debt 40% of GDP. On the GDP numbers that he has given to this House today, our combined gross debt is running at 62.5% of GDP. In real numbers – because that is what he was talking about in 2011 – it is not £0.2 million above the legal debt limit; on a gross basis it is £436 million above the figures that he has given in relation to the economy and public debt. We have calculated the net debt limit: it is £436 million.

1815 Mr Speaker, I cannot tell the hon. Gentleman, because he is not transparent enough with this House, what the net debt position of Gibraltar plc is, taking into account the cash position in Government-owned companies, but if I take into account and I give him credit for the £300 million that he has borrowed – and that, let's assume, he has not spent, mortgaged, on the estates – and the £129 million in terms of the cash reserves that the Government has at its 1820 disposal, we are still talking about a legal debt limit that has been breached taking those numbers. But as I say, I am speculating because of course I do not know; there is no ability for me to look through into what is the cash position of those companies in order to tell this House whether in net debt terms we are running over the 40% of GDP ratio that the legal borrowing limits allow us.

1825 Of course, this year we have the £300 million that the Government, through Gibraltar Capital Assets Limited, has borrowed, mortgaged, on the housing estates of Government tenants – a loan that is going to cost us, over 31 years, some £314 million in interest alone. In the first 15 years Gibraltar Capital Assets Limited will have to find £23.3 million per annum to meet capital and interest repayments, assuming a straight-line accrual of sinking fund, and I am still not clear whether that is coming out of this book – in other words, that £23.3 million of 1830 repayments from this book – or from the money hidden away in Government-owned companies, because they refused to tell us in our meeting at No. 6 Convent Place when we met in order to talk about the £300 million loan.

1835 If a GSD Government had done that, Members opposite led by the Father of this House it has to be said would be calling for our collective heads. They would be incandescent. I can just see the headlines and I can just see the statements emanating from that side, or this side if they had been on this side: 'Poor working-class tenants having their homes mortgaged, or hocked, by a wicked right-wing Government'. Instead, we have a socialist Government – a socialist Government, Mr Speaker – borrowing yet more money on the security of people's homes and to boot saying to the people of Gibraltar, 'We, as a Government, do not owe that money because 1840 it's owed by a Government-owned company.' Of course, none of this was put to the people of Gibraltar during the election because they never mentioned it. They did it behind the backs of people and announced it seven months after the 2015 general election.

1845 Before I move on to a different point, it is worth pointing out and it is relevant to the rainy day arguments advanced by the Chief Minister during the course of the debate today, that as at 31st March 2017, 68% – nearly 70% – of all assets in the Gibraltar Savings Bank is being invested directly or indirectly in Government debt composed of a loan directly to the Government of £251.4 million and to Government-owned or controlled companies of £556.1 million. There is not a bank in the world that has so many of its eggs in one basket, and if the answer is that the Government is solvent and guarantees the money anyway, what on earth are we doing, 1850 Mr Speaker, excluding the sums the Gibraltar Savings Bank has invested in Government-owned companies from any calculation of public debt or expenditure?

1855 I now turn to the cash reserves, debt limits and the surplus. We do not know what the real cash position of Gibraltar plc is because we do not know how much of that £772 million in Government-owned companies has been spent or remains available to spend. The hon.
Gentleman says that the proceeds from the £300 million mortgage loan will be spent on investments that will generate further economic activity. All we have is his word for it, because there is no way of scrutinising whether that is so.

The cash Government has in the bank has been consistently dropping since 2011. It stood at £273.8 million in March 2011. By March 2015 it had dropped to £73.2 million. This year the 1860 forecast outturn is £122.9 million. Mr Speaker, I apologise to the House because earlier on in my discourse I said that the cash reserve was £129 million – it is £122.9 million. Every year cash reserves drops from year to year and then increases nearer to the date of this debate as Government tightens its belt prior to 31st March. Even if we take £122.9 million, it represents a 1865 downturn, without knowing what the Government is spending in Government-owned companies, of 55% since March 2011.

Mr Speaker, for most of this time, indeed until the Government changed the legal borrowing limits in March of last year, there was a direct correlation between the legal borrowing limits and cash reserves. That is because the legal borrowing limits were calculated at a net debt of 80% of recurrent revenue and net debt is calculated gross debt minus the money that you have 1870 in the bank. In other words, cash reserves. That formula for the legal borrowing limit was changed in March of last year to 40% of GDP without an electoral mandate and indeed without mentioning it to the people of Gibraltar in the election held three months earlier. It is a similar formula, Mr Speaker, in fact, that led Bermuda to borrow more over a number of years than it could afford, and now that jurisdiction is scrambling to rein in public debt and there are 1875 significant calls to change its legal borrowing limits to the formula the Government ditched in March of last year. But the important point for our purposes today is that for much of the period between March 2012 and March 2016 when the legal borrowing limits were changed, cash reserves were very low and therefore net debt was running very close to the legal borrowing limits – at one point as close as less than £30 million.

1880 The Government just could not afford to pay for the £750 million it spent over a period of four years on capital projects or the rest of the goodies that they like to crow about that they delivered on. They could not do it without the money borrowed from Government-owned companies. It just was not legally possible for them to do it.

Today the Government comes to this House and says it has made a surplus of £75.7 million.
1885 It is a complete nonsense when it is not accounting for the expenditure in Government-owned companies. A simple example – and by no means the only one, Mr Speaker – is that through Government-owned companies the Government is paying the commuted pensions of civil servants. That is traditional Government expenditure and that expenditure no longer appears in this book because it is being paid through Government-owned or controlled companies.

1890

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the G (Hon. J J Bossano):
Which is a jolly good idea.

1895 Hon. D A Feetham: I hear the Hon. the Father of the House saying it is a jolly good idea. Well, Mr Speaker, that may or may not be so, but what I am saying to this House today and my message to the people of Gibraltar is that if it is such a good idea come clean, be open, be transparent about it. Tell us what the Government has spent in those Government-owned companies. Allow us to scrutinise the money that is held in Government-owned companies and then let's see whether in fact the Government is making a surplus or whether Government 1900 expenditure and what Government expenditure is being channelled and funnelled through Government-owned companies.

In 2012, contributions to the Improvement and Development Fund from the Consolidated Fund were £181 million. In other words, in 2012 the Government was directly, from its own pocket and reflected in this book, making provision for capital projects and development to the 1905 tune of £181 million. That was pre Credit Finance Company Limited. At that stage they were not taking money from the Gibraltar Savings Bank. Post Credit Finance Company Limited, in 2013, that number – in other words, the contribution from the Consolidated Fund into the Improvement and Development Fund – falls spectacularly in the following years and there is a nil contribution to the Improvement and Development Fund in 2016, a forecast outturn for this 1910 year of £25 million and an estimate next year of £5 million. That is why, if you look at what the Government actually spent overall – in other words, itself directly – in the year ending 31st

March 2012, which was £602 million, it is more or less the same than what the Government estimates it will spend next year up to 31st March 2018, which is £601.6 million.

1915 There are additional reasons why the analysis on the surplus by the Government, we believe, is grossly exaggerated, if not fictional.

1920 Firstly, I repeat the point that I have been making for the last two years about contributions to Community Care. Prior to the financial year ending March 2014, contributions to the charity Community Care were treated as a recurrent expense through a contribution to the Social Security Fund. Since 2014 these amounts have been included in the surplus and then, from there, there has been a payment to community care. The effect in accounting terms is to lower expenditure and to increase the surplus by a corresponding amount. It has never been explained why the change in accounting practice. If the GSD Government had done this, we would have been accused of smoke and mirrors. This year, that would have meant an increase in recurrent expenditure of £20 million and a corresponding decrease in the surplus by the same amount.

1925 Secondly, the Government owes – that we know of, Mr Speaker – at least £19 million or £20 million in tax rebates going back years. He tries to portray almost a Mystic Meg mode in trying to diffuse the point that I am about to make about tax rebates by pointing out to practices – that he says were practices, Mr Speaker – of the former GSD Government. But he is the New Dawn Chief Minister, Mr Speaker. He is the incumbent four, five, six years ... This is his sixth 1930 Budget speech, he has told this House today, and I would have thought that in six years, even if he is right on the points that he has made, he would have been able to do the right thing by those very many people who are owed money by the state. Some people are being paid their tax rebates for the year ending 2008. If the Government has made money, it should pay it back to the people, not just retain it so that the hon. Member can stand in this House today and say,
1935 ‘Look at what a wonderful Government we are: we have made a £75.8 million surplus.’ That is not a comfort to those people, Mr Speaker. Nor is it a comfort for the hon. Gentleman to say, ‘Well, it’s just a practice of the GSD that we are taking moving forwards.’

1940 Thirdly, Mr Speaker – and my hon. Friend Mr Clinton will be examining this in more detail later on in this debate – the £300 million loan and the mortgage on the estates has generated £14 million of stamp duty, which is a transaction by the Government with itself, a Government-owned company ... I think it is two Government-owned companies. It is artificial income. Indeed, if you take into account transactions between the Government and Government-owned companies or between Government-owned companies, stamp duty generated exceeds £20 million, as my hon. Friend Mr Clinton will be demonstrating beyond peradventure in due 1945 course. Just on those three items it would reduce the surplus by £54 million – and I am just taking £14 million for the time being in terms of stamp duty. But I would not want listeners to think that our position is that there is a surplus of £21.7 million. Our position is that if you take all this, and in particular the expenditure through loans provided to Government-owned companies, there probably is not a surplus at all – but we cannot say for sure because there is no 1950 visibility and ability by the Opposition to scrutinise how much is being spent in Government-owned companies.

1955 Mr Speaker, I now turn to analysis of Government revenue and expenditure. For the reasons that I have already explained, any debate on Government expenditure based purely on these estimates without taking into account the expenditure of Government-owned companies is a nonsense. In simple terms, if I told listeners that I had £500 in my right pocket and I told listeners that I have £800 in my left pocket and I then told listeners, ‘Here is a complete account, detailed to the last penny, of how I have spent the money in my right pocket, that £500,’ and I then said to listeners, ‘I have provided you with a full account of how I have spent all the money in my possession in my control,’ the obvious answer from those listening to this debate would be, ‘Oh, 1960 but, Mr Feetham, what about the £800 in your left pocket?’ and if I said to them, ‘Well, no, I can’t disclose that, because that’s my left pocket, it’s not my right pocket and I’ve only got an obligation in law to disclose to you how I’m spending the £500 in my right pocket,’ they would say, ‘You’re absolutely mad – you’re stupid!’ (A Member: Yes.) The reality is that, unfortunately, 1965 they have reduced this debate to a complete and utter nonsense precisely because they fail to account for that £772 million that they are spending in Government-owned companies.

It has to be said, however, Government expenditure, even without taking into account the hidden expenditure of Government-owned companies, has risen over recent years like a runaway train. It has provoked comments from the Father of the House about consultants hypnotising Government Ministers into overspends, and no doubt a lot of sleepless nights on the part of the Father of the House, as indeed it has caused one or two sleepless nights on my part too. He has that in common with me.

It has led a Government – that fought an election saying we, the GSD, were the party of austerity – to introduce austerity measures under the guise of public efficiency, which is what we are seeing across the public service.

1975 Mr Speaker, on 31st March 2012 the overall recurrent departmental expenditure, i.e. the cost of Government, stood at £333 million. If you compare like with like and treat the £20 million contribution to Community Care as a recurrent expense, as was always the case prior to 2014 before the Government started to indulge in some creative accounting, recurrent departmental expenditure stands at £494.7 million and has therefore risen by 48.5% since 2012. For a 1980 Government that is hiding away so much of its expenditure in Government-owned companies that is a very significant amount.

Recurrent revenue in March 2012 stood at £454 million. The forecast outturn for this year stands at £653.7 million. That is an increase of 44.5% since 2012. Again as I have pointed out in previous years, recurrent expenditure, even without taking into account the money hidden away 1985 in Government-owned companies, continues to increase at a faster rate than recurrent revenue.

This House will also note that over 25.4% of recurrent income relates to import duty, which of course means, in the main, tobacco revenue. Before he accuses me of high treason – which is of course his practice – for making the point, the hon. Gentleman may want to refer to the statements he made to this House on this same debate when he was on these same benches, 1990 where he said, on a slightly lower percentage, that we needed to move away from overdependence on that sector.

Again, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Mr Clinton will be examining a series of one-off increases in income and artificial generation of income that will further highlight concerns with the ratio of recurrent income to recurrent departmental expenditure. I have to repeat, however, that 1995 without taking the entire picture of Government expenditure into account by examining the picture as regards Government-owned companies, it is not possible to have a comprehensive analysis of Government expenditure nor compare it usefully to Government revenue.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to economic growth. Today the Chief Minister has said that economic growth for the year ending 31st March 2016 came in at £1.75 billion and that GDP was forecast 2000 to rise to £1.91 billion next year. Everyone welcomes the rise in GDP, but there is absolutely no doubt that economic growth is being driven by direct or indirect Government borrowing, at least to a large extent. This is not rocket science. If you inject hundreds of millions of pounds in Government company borrowings into the economy it is bound to produce a significant increase in economic growth. It does not, however, guarantee economic health, as he himself was telling 2005 the people of Gibraltar in his podcast in 2011.

At a time when Bermuda's economy grew substantially, fuelled by debt, there were a minority of voices in that jurisdiction that warned that debt had to be repaid and that the jurisdiction was mortgaging its future economic security. This has been precisely the warning of the GSD Opposition for the last four years, and the failure of the Government to put forward a 2010 coherent plan for debt repayment continues to be a very significant weakness in the Government's economic plan, which could bring economic consequences in the future.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to specific Budget measures and my concluding remarks. I said last year that in the light of an impending Brexit and the very significant spending funded by the borrowing we had seen over the last four years, this was a time for reflection and a time for the 2015 Government to rethink its spending plans over the next few years, that it was a time for consolidation and long-term planning, including debt repayment planning. The immediate response from the Chief Minister was that the Government would meet all of its manifesto commitments. No doubt that is why he has hocked Government estates to the tune of £300 million. This is a matter entirely for the Government.

2020 We have made our position clear. What we have advocated is for the Government to prioritise spending on education and training, which is a matter that my hon. and learned Friend Mr Phillips has tenaciously raised on numerous occasions. In addition, Bayside school is not fit for purpose and I am sorry to say that to have prioritised spending on his own offices over and above a new school for Bayside students will, and continues to be a huge black spot on his record as Chief Minister. We cannot see how their electoral plans on Bayside School are sound and how they are going to build a new school at Bayside while students work on a building site. I hope that the announcement that the Hon. the Minister for Education makes during the course of this debate this week is that he will ditch their manifesto plans for a school at Bayside, because it was completely and utterly ill-conceived and I hope it goes in exactly the same way as his plans for a Europa Point stadium and a stadium at Lathbury Barracks went – confined to the dustbin of history. But we will see what the Minister for Education has to say.

2030 We, for our part, continue to believe that the Rooke site is a much better site for a boys' comprehensive school – even if he does not want to follow our plans, which they have said that they will not – and would allow works with no disruption to children. Well thought-out targeted spending is where we need to plan over the next two years, Mr Speaker, and that is what we will be looking for from the Government not only now but moving forwards.

2035 Mr Speaker, the Budget is a prudent Budget and I accept that in terms of the measures that the hon. Gentleman has announced today those measures are prudent. We welcome the measures that he has announced today in relation to increases in import duty in respect of tobacco and diesel and also the measures that he has announced in respect of plastic bags.

2040 The measures that he has announced today affecting working-class people are modest. We live in uncertain times and I certainly am not going to criticise the Hon. the Chief Minister in respect of the measures that he has announced before this House today, particularly when I have been calling upon him to be prudent in the measures that he announces.

2045 But I still want to say this: that if we are really a truly wealthy society, we have to make sure that that wealth trickles down to those who need it the most, and we need to make sure, through training and employment opportunities, that those who find it most difficult in a difficult economy to find jobs are helped in order to find those jobs. I still get many people in my surgeries complaining that they cannot find employment or are not earning enough in order to raise a mortgage to buy a property. Today he has said that employment levels are at record highs. Yes, that is true, but when one looks for examples in terms of a breakdown of nationality where the increases in employment have been, Gibraltarians have increased – and this is up to the end of 2016, which is the latest figures that we have – from 11,010 to 11,065. That is an increase of 55 Gibraltarians in jobs. Spaniards in employment has increased from 6,413 to 6,867. That is 454, an increase of 7.1%, when the increase in new Gibraltarians occupying jobs was 0.5%. The increase in other EU has been from 2,599 to 2,776, an increase of 177 or 6.8%. My heart breaks every time I see someone break down in front of me, as indeed they do, because they simply cannot find employment – any employment anywhere in any building site in Gibraltar.

2050 Since the hon. Gentleman Minister Costa has moved from employment it has proved very difficult for me to engage with the Government as I did with him, where I used to draw to his attention the most difficult cases that came to see me. It is all very well for me to now be told when I refer difficult cases that that is what the ETB is there for, but these people come to see me because they go to the ETB every week and because they are desperate. They do not come to see me otherwise; they come to see me because they are desperate. It is then galling for these people to see top civil servants retiring on fat pensions to be re-recruited by the Government on fat salaries as consultants, or the Government handing out a 28% pay rise to the Chief Secretary and the Principal Auditor just before their retirement on a final salary pension. Was there really no one who could have done the job as Ombudsman? Did it have to be the retired Financial Secretary, whatever the undoubted merits of that gentleman may be?

I also believe that unemployment figures are skewed by the fact that there are people with employment contracts with recruitment agencies who are either on zero-hour contracts or are not working a sufficient number of hours to make ends meet. These people are not classed as unemployed, because they have a contract with a recruitment company, despite the fact that they may be working four, five, six hours a week or may be in possession of a zero-hour contract.

2075

At the other end of the spectrum we have seen the Government and Government authorities make increasing use of recruitment consultants to the extent that we are creating a parallel public service on significantly poorer terms than their permanent cousins. It is all very well to say that such labour is necessary to cover for maternity leave or sickness. The reality is that many of these people are occupying posts for some years. These workers have no holiday or sickness leave entitlement. Many are on the minimum wage whilst the recruitment agencies earn a significant slice by way of premium.

2080

I would ask the Government to be honest with people, tell them what they intend to do and in the meantime make sure people who have been covering on a long-term basis have proper holiday and sick leave. I would go as far as to say that there is a case for cutting out the middle man altogether and for the Government or agencies to do the recruiting directly, so that more of their labour goes into the pockets of the worker and not into the pockets of recruitment agencies, even if that employment is on a temporary and not a permanent basis.

2085

I just want to draw the attention of this House to some of the figures on subcontracted labour. As at February of this year, 45% of all employees at the Dr Giraldi Home were subcontracted workers; 30% of all nurses in the Care Agency and Mount Alvernia were also subcontracted through recruitment agencies. These are very significant figures, and in some areas there are more workers recruited through agencies than directly by the Government. There were a staggering 196 subcontracted workers providing care services for the Care Agency alone, excluding Mount Alvernia, compared with 159 employed directly.

And again, Mr Speaker, as in other areas of Government business, the Government simply refuses to disclose accurate information every time we issue a press release criticising their performance in the area concerned. And there I thought that part of the democratic process was the Opposition holding the Government to account and criticising the Government on areas of Government performance where it is justified. One day the Government gives us the figures on vacancies within the public service, including the GHA and the Care Agency, but when we make any kind of public comment on the numbers, the Government closes the shutters on democracy the next time that we ask. And he calls himself a transparent and accountable Chief Minister simply because we have more meetings of the House, of Parliament, than we did under the GSD Government!

What is appalling, in my view, however, is that rather than opt for the approach of Minister Bossano, who will simply say, 'I am not going to give you the answer,' and will take any criticism coming his way on the chin, we are told there are no vacancies in the Care Agency or the GHA when that is clearly not the case and the Government was in discussions with Unite the Union on the issue – and we know that because Unite the Union issued a contemporaneous circular to its members stating precisely that it had spoken to the Government about vacancies within the GHA.

2110

Mr Speaker, there is no doubt that there are huge morale issues in the GHA and indeed the Care Agency, and labour issues lie at the heart of that discontent. The hon. Gentleman Minister Costa knows I have the highest regard for him personally, but he has a massive job on his hands in relation to Health. There is a very significant discontent by both hardworking staff and by patients. It is unprecedented for doctors to have felt the need to conduct a morale survey at the hospital. It is unprecedented to see so many doctors leave the hospital because of morale issues. It is unprecedented, Mr Speaker, to see doctors who have felt the need to conduct a morale

2115

2120 survey at the hospital – absolutely unprecedented. That all in the context of unprecedented expenditure in Health, which has gone up from £75 million in 2011 to £120 million last year. That is nearly £10 million a month, Mr Speaker! For that amount of money we just simply should not be having the kind of issues that people and staff are experiencing within the Health Service.

Such were the number of complaints we were receiving that I took over this portfolio myself. 2125 It is the reason why I am dealing with this during the course of my own contribution before this House. I began to raise the burning issues as I saw them that were coming to me: bed shortages, Accident and Emergency, the Primary Care Centre and doctor morale issues amongst others. Since March I have attempted to give the hon. Gentleman the space to deal with these because I genuinely want him to succeed, but it is something that I intend to return to and he knows that I 2130 will compare his performance by the same yardstick that he used as Shadow Minister for Health when we were in Government. Nothing is more important than health and we ignore the concerns of professionals and patients at our peril. But again, Mr Speaker, I wish the Hon. the Minister for Health, Mr Costa, well in his endeavours.

Mr Speaker, these are uncertain times. I foresee difficult moments ahead. It is important that 2135 in the same way as we create wealth, that wealth is spread evenly when it is created. Where the Government is looking for efficiencies it should not be allowed to affect the quality of services, the disadvantaged, or create unfairness in the workplace. Other than that, our spending has to be carefully targeted: no more pharaonic projects, no more suspension bridges, no more building palaces at No. 6 Convent Place, less traveling around with hordes of officials and 2140 politicians. Let's invest in what really matters: training, education and the creation of jobs for our people.

Mr Speaker, thank you very much. (Banging on desks)

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, this is going to be an easier week than I 2145 thought, and in the circumstances I now seek that the House recess until 5 p.m. this afternoon, when the Deputy Chief Minister will continue with the proceedings.

Mr Speaker: The House will recess to five this afternoon.

The House recessed at 2.34 p.m.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, it is a pleasure to rise once more in this House in order to review progress in a number of areas of Government policy since the last Budget a year ago. This is my 19th Budget address to this House; it is my sixth as a member of the Government. I apologise in advance to the House for my emphasis on Europe and on Brexit, but I am sure that hon. Members will understand.

Just over an hour ago, Mr Speaker, the United Kingdom government published a paper entitled 'The United Kingdom's exit from the European Union – Safeguarding the position of EU citizens living in the UK and UK nationals living in the EU'. The document contains one direct reference to Gibraltar, in paragraph 8. This says:

The reciprocal agreement on citizens' rights will apply to the entire United Kingdom, covering Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and all parts of England, and Gibraltar. Decisions that are currently made by the devolved administrations and the Government of Gibraltar will continue to be made by them.

Mr Speaker, this is in line with the comments made this morning by my hon. Friend, the Chief Minister.

The cut-off point for the mutual recognition of rights is given as anywhere between 20th March 2017 and 20th March 2019. The paper spells out a series of benefits, pensions, healthcare, economic and other rights, in the expectation that these will be reciprocated by EU member states.

Mr Speaker, having commenced with the latest, I will now rewind and for the sake of good order, start my review at the beginning.

Last June, the United Kingdom as a whole voted to leave the European Union. Gibraltar voted to remain, as did two of the three devolved administrations.

I assumed responsibility for work related to the UK and Gibraltar's departure from the EU after the reshuffle last year. The Government acted immediately and responsibly in order to meet the challenges posed by the referendum decision.

Two immediate action points were put in motion. The first was to produce a detailed Government impact study into the potential effects of leaving the European Union. The second was to look at all the options open to Gibraltar going forward. I should add, for the avoidance of doubt, that shared sovereignty was not one of those options.

Mr Speaker, during July and August of last year, detailed information on the impact of leaving the EU was requested from all Government departments, agencies and authorities. This data was compiled and produced through the Attorney General, Michael Llamas, and co-ordinated with my office.

35 The study looked at the impact of different variations of Brexit. The possibilities ranged from what is known as a hard Brexit, where the UK departs with no agreement, to what is known as a soft Brexit, whereby the effect of any changes would be less dramatic. So there is black and there is white and there are shades of grey in between. Nobody knows the final shade of Brexit at this stage, given that formal negotiations have only just begun. However, the people of Gibraltar can rest assured that their Government has already analysed the impact locally of different types of Brexit. This is what a responsible Government does and what our people are entitled to expect from us.

40 Mr Speaker, the Government has indicated that a number of salient points emerged from that analysis.

The first was the importance of frontier fluidity. That has never been a secret. There are around 12,000 frontier workers officially employed in Gibraltar. This constitutes over 40% of the labour force. That number includes over 7,000 Spanish frontier workers.

45 Indeed, the figures show that practically every nationality of the European Union is represented in the daily flow of workers into and out of Gibraltar. This entire area has become a microcosm of what Europe should be – that is, thousands of nationals of different member states who have chosen to live in one part of the EU and to cross an internal border to work in another. It is a reality that Europe should be proud of; a reality that should be protected and maintained.

The role of frontier workers impacts across the economy. They constitute a considerable proportion of employees in certain areas of economic activity: 80% of land-based gaming; 60% of online gaming; 72% of hotels and restaurants; 66% of the construction industry. Even in areas like health and social care, 26% of those employed are frontier workers.

55 This is a reflection of the positive impact of Gibraltar on the economy of the neighbouring region of Spain. Members will have seen the studies which indicate that Gibraltar accounts for 25% of the GDP of the Campo area and that Gibraltar plc is the second largest employer for the whole region of Andalucía. This fact is recognised by the Mayors of the neighbouring towns, the President of the Mancomunidad, the provincial government in Cádiz and the regional government in Seville.

60 A Brexit formula which involves a difficult border is clearly not in our interest, but it is not in Spain's interest either. This is the message that has to be understood by the Spanish central government in Madrid. It is a message of continuity that they themselves have delivered in the past. Indeed, the Spanish Foreign Minister, Mr Dastis, himself is on record as having said that one of Spain's objectives was to ensure that 'the links that have been created between the Campo and Gibraltar are maintained and that shared prosperity continues'. This is an attainable objective.

65 The second objective for Madrid is shared sovereignty over Gibraltar. This is unrealistic, unacceptable and unattainable. The truth is that Brexit and sovereignty are not connected. It is Spain that has chosen to link the two through the resurrection of the proposal for shared sovereignty. We have rejected shared sovereignty in the past and we continue to reject it. It is nonsensical to expect the people of Gibraltar to exchange one colonial master, as it were, for two.

75 Mr Speaker, Spain has to come to terms with the simple fact that they lost Gibraltar 300 years ago and they are never going to get it back. It would be wrong and irresponsible for Spain to complicate Brexit further still by bringing their obsession with Gibraltar to the fore. There are small micro-states all over Europe, Mr Speaker. No other nation state behaves towards these small territories in the bullying and aggressive manner that Spain behaves towards our country. We do not see France blockade the Channel Islands or Monaco. We do not see Italy obsessed with San Marino or the Vatican City. We do not see Switzerland or Austria plot to take over the sovereignty of Liechtenstein. Indeed, closer to home, we do not see an obsessive approach from Portugal towards Spain because of Olivença.

In this context, it is only Spain that is obsessed with redrawing the frontiers of Europe at a time when Europe needs certainty and stability. Madrid is the odd one out. Their approach to Gibraltar is out of step and out of tune with the times in which we live.

Mr Speaker, history is littered with examples all over the planet where countries have come to terms with particular situations and learnt to live with them. Spain must come to terms with that reality also.

Back to the Brexit report. Mr Speaker, the second major finding of our Brexit discussions with the private sector was that the bulk of our financial services business is with the United Kingdom and not with the European Union. This simple fact means that the possible impact of losing access to the single market in the future is already mitigated against considerably.

The UK has already assured us that there will be continued access to the UK market. We have also received assurances from the Secretary of State for International Trade, Liam Fox, in respect of the inclusion of Gibraltar in future trade deals that the UK may negotiate for itself.

I think that there is broad agreement in this House that this is the way forward: first, the border; second, access to the UK market; third, access to UK trade deals; fourth, whatever access to the EU single market the UK may negotiate for itself. It is not helpful that we should promote a climate of disagreement amongst ourselves where perhaps no such disagreement actually exists.

Mr Speaker, the Government is confident that as one door closes other doors will open. New opportunities will come our way. The engagement with the Commonwealth has already started. I am pleased to report that there is considerable interest in Gibraltar from large Commonwealth countries. We will explore trade and commercial opportunities with them. They too are looking at the new economic openings that Brexit may bring. This interest to talk to Gibraltar is very encouraging and extremely welcome.

Members will recall that at a regional level this subject formed part of the discussions here last month during the conference of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association. The aim, where we can, will be to raise the profile of the Commonwealth in Gibraltar and of Gibraltar in the Commonwealth. This year, with the co-operation of my colleague the Minister for Education, Dr John Cortes, an essay competition on a Commonwealth theme was organised for our young people. The Government will continue to broaden and to deepen our relationship with the Commonwealth as a matter of policy.

Mr Speaker, EU funding will cease once Gibraltar has left the European Union. This is obvious. These funds are managed locally through the Ministry for Economic Development. Gibraltar has benefited from over €60 million of funding ever since the first allocation was made. These funding programmes were secured under the European Regional Development Fund – €32 million; the European Social Fund – €18 million; and the Inter Regional Transnational Programmes (INTERREG) – €9 million. The UK government has effectively underwritten the completion of the existing programmes which commenced in 2014 and which are due to end after our EU exit in 2020.

Mr Speaker, the Government's Brexit impact report was submitted to the new UK Department for Exiting the European Union in September. This has formed the basis of our formal and informal discussions with the UK ever since. The House is agreed that frontier fluidity is important and the hon. Members know that the Government has spent considerable time and effort looking at different ways forward in this area.

Gibraltar is outside the Common Customs Union and therefore outside the ambit of free movement of goods. Whereas the mechanics to provide for the future exportation of goods to the EU is a major issue for the United Kingdom, it is not an issue here in Gibraltar – first, because we have no manufacturing industry as such; and second, because we are outside the EU regime for goods already and indeed have never belonged to it.

The general view is that the system that already operates at the land frontier and other entry points in relation to goods will simply continue as it has been going forward. The examination of 135 the manner in which the border will operate in the future is therefore primarily about the movement of persons and not about the movement of goods.

We have mentioned in the past the possibility of Gibraltar joining Schengen even if the United Kingdom were no longer in the EU. The irony is that in 2013, with no Brexit on the horizon, we were encouraged to look at this option seriously as a way of eliminating the delays generated by Spanish controls on persons. We have therefore moved from a position where we were looking at more Europe to a position where we could end up with less Europe, or indeed with no Europe at all.

140 I have to say that Andorra, Monaco and San Marino are not in the European Union, nor are they part of the Schengen area, although all three are in the Customs Union. It was important to the Government to analyse the way in which the EU's small neighbours operate their borders. This is in line with the pledge we made to examine all the options open to Gibraltar going forward. These small territories have no hostile Spain next door, that is true; nonetheless, we are dealing in an area where precedent is often a valuable ally to deploy.

145 Mr Speaker, it is also well known that the Government has been looking into the possibilities provided by the framework of the Local Frontier Traffic Regulation No 1931/2006. This provides a mechanism which allows EU member states to conclude bilateral agreements with their neighbouring non-EU countries in order to facilitate the crossing of external borders. Two particular advantages of this scheme are that the Commission retains oversight of the mechanics and that it is already enshrined in EU law.

150 It is relevant to note that the crossing arrangements at the land borders of Ceuta and Melilla do not stem from this Regulation. They are the result of special border arrangements which were applied earlier. However, in practice it means that the residents of the neighbouring Moroccan provinces are allowed to cross in and out of Ceuta and Melilla on the basis of a unique regime suited to their own particular circumstances.

155 Mr Speaker, I wish to say a few words at this stage about the amendments to the Schengen Border Code which came into force just before Easter. The Government in general and our Office in Brussels in particular worked very hard behind the scenes with other interested parties on this matter.

160 The Code provides for systematic checks against databases for every person crossing any external Schengen border in either direction, whether they happen to be EU nationals or not. There were disproportionate delays in both directions at the Frontier immediately before the amended Code came into force.

165 Mr Speaker, it should be noted that the Code provides for an evaluation mechanism to regulate the manner in which it is being applied. There is also provision for a reversion to targeted checks in cases where systematic controls generate lengthy delays and for border guards to wave through persons they recognise with simple cursory checks.

170 It is relevant to point out that the Commission has already intervened in relation to the application of the Code between Slovenia, which is part of the Schengen area, and Croatia which is not. Brussels has already agreed to allow targeted checks to be introduced at that land frontier when waiting times are longer than 15 minutes. This sets a useful precedent. A number of MEPs and other interested parties have already approached the Government in order to find out more about the effects of the application of the amended Code at the border between Gibraltar and Spain. We will continue to look at this closely and share any relevant information.

175 Mr Speaker, it is obvious that in relation to Brexit the border alone is a voluminous subject in its own right. The House knows that Brexit is a multi-faceted negotiation and therefore the land borders for which the United Kingdom is responsible is only one of many areas for discussion in the months and years ahead.

180 Another area that the Government continues to follow closely is civil aviation. The Government welcomes the continued support of the United Kingdom to date in relation to the inclusion of Gibraltar Airport in EU civil aviation measures. The Government has conducted 185 vigorous lobbying in the European Union to support our position and has enjoyed the full backing of the United Kingdom government throughout this process.

Mr Speaker, hon. Members know how this story goes. Spain continues to object to the inclusion of Gibraltar Airport in EU civil aviation legislation. They take this position despite having pledged to put an end to that very objection in an agreement signed at Córdoba in 2006.

190 This means that a number of aviation dossiers are held up for the whole of the European Union by Spain. They are the Single European Sky 2+, the legislation on slots, that on air passenger rights and the aviation agreement between the European Union and Ukraine. Other aviation agreements with third countries are now joining the queue. The pressure is building up. It was there before 23rd June 2016 but is has now intensified, given the decision taken in the 195 United Kingdom to leave the European Union.

Mr Speaker, the second question on the horizon is the application to Gibraltar Airport of the new aviation agreement between the UK and the EU. The latest position, as I understand it, is that the UK will not remain in the EU common aviation area, because this will involve recognising the jurisdiction of the European Court. The logical consequence of that position 200 would be a new aviation agreement. A third additional scope of the discussion are the new aviation agreements that the UK will need to negotiate with third countries outside the European Union. I am pleased to inform the House that the Government has already been consulted on the outline preliminaries of such new agreements.

Mr Speaker, I should say that similar to other Departments, the Director of Civil Aviation and 205 the Air Terminal Director have undertaken a review of the implications of Brexit in their respective areas.

Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd and Commercial Aviation are the responsibility of my colleague, Gilbert Licudi. I will therefore only provide a very brief outline in order to put into context what I have said already.

210 The Airport is a member of the Airport Operators Association in the UK and its European equivalent, Airports Council International Europe. The two organisations have been briefed on Gibraltar's concerns and, I am told, have been supportive in representing our position.

Even with the uncertainty brought about by Brexit and by Spain blocking the application of certain EU aviation laws to Gibraltar, the number of flights this summer remains at historically 215 high numbers. This is positive news.

Mr Speaker, the measures taken by the Government in early 2016 to employ 20 additional Border and Coastguard Agency officers and four additional operational support officers at the terminal has paid dividends. Despite a much higher throughput of passengers, queuing times at the central search area for security screening have been reduced compared to previous years.

220 Amendments have been made during the year to the Civil Aviation (Air Navigation) Regulations 2009 in order to bring into effect European Regulation (EU) No 2015/320 of the European Parliament and of the Council. This Regulation sets out the technical requirements and administrative procedures relating to the issue of air traffic controllers' licences and certificates. In addition, the Civil Aviation (Air Navigation) Regulations 2009 have been amended to regulate 225 the minimum heights at which UK military aircraft can fly in the vicinity of Gibraltar.

In last year's Budget, I announced that the MoD Airfield Authorities and the Director of Civil Aviation have introduced revised aviation safeguarding procedures in Gibraltar, which regulate the maximum height of developments close to the Airport. To support the new procedures, in the course of this year the Director of Civil Aviation and ITLD have introduced an easy-to-use 230 layer on the Government GIS portal. This new layer enables developers and architects to investigate the maximum build height for any new development in any part of Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, the precise shape of the UK's departure from the European Union, and indeed our very own, are both far from clear at present. There are a wide variety of possible outcomes. The way it broadly looks – and this may change – is that a number of different agreements will 235 have to be negotiated.

The first is the withdrawal agreement, also known as the exit treaty. There are two years in which this can be concluded. The outcome is open to approval by Qualified Majority Voting, which means that no single country has a veto if it is concluded within that timescale. It requires unanimity to extend the deadline if the exit deal is not concluded within two years.

240 Article 50 of the Treaty of Lisbon provides for the withdrawal agreement to take account of the framework for the future relationship between the withdrawing state and the rest of the European Union.

245 This phrase has been interpreted differently by the UK and the EU. The UK took it to mean that both would be negotiated simultaneously, and the EU that the two would be negotiated consecutively. We now know that the second agreement will be negotiated once the shape of the first becomes clearer.

In addition to this, there is a general view that transitional provisions may need to be agreed to straddle the gap between when the exit treaty has been concluded and the agreements to determine the future relationship come into effect.

250 Mr Speaker, I believe it is relevant to point out the infamous clause article 24 of the Council guidelines in the context of what I have just said. The clause says:

After the United Kingdom leaves the European Union, no agreement between the EU and the United Kingdom may apply to the territory of Gibraltar without the agreement between the Kingdom of Spain and the United Kingdom.

The coming into operation of that clause is limited in time to 'after the United Kingdom leaves the European Union'. The clause therefore cannot apply to the negotiations on the withdrawal treaty, because at that point the UK remains a member of the EU.

255 The logical conclusion is that the Spanish veto clause applies to the future relationship deal between the UK and the EU, which is the only point in the timeline when the UK is firmly out. I repeat the operative words, which are 'after the United Kingdom leaves the European Union'.

260 The EU Council guidelines therefore do not apply to the withdrawal treaty and to anything that may be agreed under its terms. However, all member states have a veto on the agreement that will regulate the future UK-EU relationship. What the guidelines do, in the view of the Government, is that they provide Spain with an additional veto, a second bite at the cherry. This is because Madrid will enjoy the same veto as all the other member states in relation to what may or may not be agreed with the UK, and then also a second veto in relation to the application to Gibraltar of any aspect of that agreement.

265 Mr Speaker, the use of such language by the Council was tactless, insensitive and wrong. It was an affront to the 96% of the voting electorate of Gibraltar who supported remaining in the European Union a year ago.

270 I should add that the European Parliament's own guidelines, which make no direct reference to Gibraltar, are better worded. The Parliament has itself called for the European Union's external borders to be one of the areas to be addressed first as part of the withdrawal negotiations.

275 Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister and I made it clear after the referendum that we would leave no stone unturned when it came to safeguarding the position of Gibraltar going forward. This is precisely what we have done. We have put our views to the top decision-makers in the UK government; we have successfully lobbied all the main opposition parties in the United Kingdom; we have put across Gibraltar's case in the international media; we have spoken to key figures in the devolved administrations, including the First Ministers of Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland; we have discussed mutual challenges with the Crown Dependencies and the other UK Overseas Territories; we have welcomed politicians from London and Brussels to Gibraltar; we have met key figures in the European Parliament across all the main political groups; we have spoken to the other member states of the European Union; we have raised our concerns with the European Commission; we have taken our message to key decision makers in the Government and the Congress of the United States of America. It is simply not humanly possible to have done more.

285 Mr Speaker, parliamentarians from other Commonwealth countries have praised our Brexit work. Last month, I was asked to deliver an address to the regional plenary of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association on the subject. This was followed by questions. A Member of the House of Lords said that she was impressed with the statesmanlike way in which the Chief Minister had approached Brexit. Another said that the evidence given by the Chief 290 Minister before the House of Lords inspired more confidence and was better than any evidence she had heard on Brexit before that Committee. A Member from Jersey said that he was really impressed with the Chief Minister's performance on the Andrew Marr Show which showed that he was, and I quote, 'a capable and confident leader'. There was more praise from the floor from questioner after questioner after questioner. Mr Speaker, this was the considered view of 295 parliamentarians from abroad after listening to what we had to say.

The Government is very grateful in all this to the Attorney General, Michael Llamas, an expert in European law in his own right, whose sharp legal mind and down to earth advice we have been able to count upon throughout. It is not without irony that Michael Llamas, the Chief Minister and I, who started our adult lives enthused with the European project, are now dealing 300 with our very departure from it. It is a strangely painful position to be in.

Mr Speaker, the vote for work related to the United Kingdom's departure from the European Union is a new subhead which can be found under my office in head 10, subhead 2(9).

Mr Speaker, I now propose to say a few words about Spain's approach towards Gibraltar in more general terms. It is obvious that the aim of the policies of the Spanish government towards 305 Gibraltar has always been to undermine our constitutional order, our prosperity and our way of life. In this general context, the hostile objectives of Spanish policy are probably the single greatest threat to Gibraltar.

Over the past few years, Spain has developed new state structures and procedures to implement its National Security Strategy. These developments represent a qualitative change in Spanish thinking and behaviour, which impacts on Gibraltar's security.
310

Mr Speaker, Spain has designed and implemented a comprehensive strategy against Gibraltar. By its nature, this strategy combines the efforts of all of Spain's ministries. Behind Garcia-Margallo's rhetoric, and Mr Dastis's outwardly softer tone, this machinery has continued to work against our interests unabated.

315 This is particularly evident, for example, in the maritime domain where Spain has now developed a National Maritime Security Strategy, with a subordinate operational plan to exercise control of the Straits for the purposes of security and safety.

There are positive and negative reasons for these operations. The constructive reasons centre on the protection of life at sea and the generation of prosperity; for these purposes Spain
320 will always find Gibraltar a willing partner. However, Spain has also shown that its intention is to dispute Gibraltar's sovereignty over our waters by using its military, law enforcement and civilian capabilities. The latter was demonstrated when the former Spanish foreign and interior ministers awarded the Captain of the Port of Algeciras a medal for his 'defence' of Spain's interests against Gibraltar. The captain is a civilian employed in the Ministry for Public Works 325 and Transport.

Beyond the medals, Mr Speaker, it is clear that Spain is serious. In its national security documents, Spain has described our country as an 'anomaly' that poses security problems both for Spain and for Europe. What those actual security problems might be is rarely elaborated upon. And the fact that Gibraltar provides human and economic security to many is conveniently 330 and completely ignored. Instead, a 2003 Defence White Paper makes it clear that Spain genuinely thinks that Gibraltar curtails its sovereignty, perhaps because it allows the UK to launch independent operations in an area that Spain thinks of as vitally important to her own interests.

335 We now fully expect that Spain will, ignoring the NATO and Five-Eyes dimensions, argue that Gibraltar poses a problem for European policies such as the European Security Strategy, European Maritime Security Strategy, Frontex, etc.

340 This House knows that there is considerable work being done in Spain – and I will not go into that, for obvious reasons. However, the Members of the Select Committee on Brexit were given a brief outline of this activity during the Brexit briefing that I gave them recently. We will remain alert to any Spanish arguments and counter them as necessary.

Mr Speaker, I will now move on to some of the assets that we have at our disposal in order to counter that strategy. I will commence with our representation in Brussels and I will provide an outline of their activities over the last financial year.

345 During my Budget speech last year, I said that the view of the Government was that the role played by the Brussels Office assumed an even greater significance in the light of the outcome of the UK referendum on continued membership of the EU.

350 Mr Speaker, their work over the last 12 months, since the referendum, has proved that the Government was not wrong in making that assessment at the time. Since 23rd June 2016, the representation's efforts have been crucial in both informing the Government of movements within EU circles concerning the Brexit process and in advancing and voicing Gibraltar's concerns and desired objectives as the negotiations ensue.

355 New and important contacts have been made and the network continues to grow. I have no doubt that as a result of the Government's work, amplified by our assets in Brussels, Gibraltar is, at this crucial time in our history, better understood amongst EU policymakers than it has ever been.

Since the referendum, the Chief Minister and I have accumulated five visits to Brussels with the representation arranging top-level meetings on each occasion. Much of this work is better done away from the public eye. However, Mr Speaker, rest assured that the representation has been kept exceptionally busy in the last year.

360 I will focus, first, on activity related to the European Parliament, whose role will be important in the context of the Article 50 process. In the 2016 calendar year, Gibraltar Government officials or Ministers formally met 93 different Members of the European Parliament. A total of 37 further private exchanges of views took place between Government officials and separate MEPs from 1st January to date. Meetings with the same MEPs have taken place more than once in the 365 time periods specified.

The Government has targeted the leaders of the more influential political groups and the chairs or political group co-ordinators of relevant European Parliament committees. Discussions have also taken place with rapporteurs of specific reports which are either relevant to Gibraltar or which might touch upon Gibraltar.

370 The work above forms part and parcel of the Office's day-to-day business insofar as the European Parliament is concerned. However, exceptionally, and again focusing only on the Parliament, the Office has also organised the following.

375 On 31st January 2017, the Chief Minister addressed the Constitutional Affairs Committee on issues concerning Gibraltar and the UK withdrawal from the EU. The Committee is one of the most influential parliamentary committees in which some of the leading minds on constitutional affairs and Brexit participate. The exchange of views, in public and before the full committee, was the first in which a Chief Minister of Gibraltar has ever appeared. This helped to focus attention on Gibraltar and the information provided by the Chief Minister was reflected in a report published more recently.

380 In April this year, the representation was commended for influencing 209 MEPs to vote in support of an amendment in a parliamentary resolution on Brexit which recognised the majority referendum vote in Gibraltar. This was not enough to carry the amendment through. However, the efforts of the team in Brussels must be seen in the context of the intense Spanish pressure pulling in the opposite direction and the fact that strict instructions had been issued to MEPs by 385 parliamentary group leaders not to support or introduce any amendments.

Moreover, whilst Gibraltar was not mentioned in the main European Parliament resolution on Brexit, Gibraltar was indeed mentioned in a favourable light elsewhere. There was a positive reference made to the need to protect border fluidity, in separate resolutions put forward by the ECR Group, the GUE/NGL Group and the EFDD Group.

390 Separate visits by a number of MEPs to Gibraltar have also been organised by the Brussels Office in the last year. On each occasion, MEPs were able to see with their own eyes the challenges that Gibraltar faces at European level, not just with Brexit but also with, for example, the Airport and border fluidity.

395 Last month, the Office supported our Finance Centre Director James Tipping, and Frank Carreras, the Government's Specialist Tax and Administration Adviser, during their intervention before the Parliament's Committee of Inquiry into Money Laundering, Tax Avoidance and Tax Evasion. The exchange of views proved to be an excellent opportunity for the Government to publicly dispel allegations made by Spanish representatives in Brussels with regard to our tax practices.

400 Five separate lobbying visits to Strasbourg during the European Parliament plenary sessions were also organised during the last financial year.

Work on influencing the European Parliament will continue, Mr Speaker. I will be leaving for a lightning visit to Brussels tomorrow, where we have this week once again set up a Gibraltar exhibition in one of the main foyers of the parliament building. This is part of the policy of the Government to continue to raise the profile of Gibraltar in the European Union, in particular in the present climate.

405 Since the referendum, the representation has also increased its work with regard to the briefing of individual member states on issues related to Gibraltar and Brexit. The details of these meetings are confidential, for obvious reasons, but today I can confirm that since 23rd June 2016 Government Ministers and officials have held high-level meetings with practically all of the EU-27 countries.

410 In the last financial year, a significant number of meetings with the Commission have also been organised. These meetings have focused on business as usual matters, bearing in mind that it is only recently that the Commission have issued their Brexit negotiating directives and that until the UK withdrawal from the EU happens Gibraltar will be obliged to observe and implement EU law in accordance with its current status inside the European Union.

415 Therefore, meetings have, for example, been organised with Commissioner Moscovici, responsible for taxation, to discuss Gibraltar's excellent record of compliance with EU and international obligations on matters related to tax; and with Commissioner King, responsible for security, to brief him on the current position with respect to the border.

420 Further meetings have also taken place at a technical level to discuss other important issues related to the application of EU civil aviation measures to Gibraltar Airport or the implementation of the modified Schengen Border Code which I referred to earlier.

425 The bulk of the work of the Brussels Office involves the above. However, there is also continued monitoring of EU legislative and non-legislative proposals. Some other activities include: organising three separate visits of MEP assistants to Gibraltar in July and December of 2016 and April 2017; assisting with a tailor-made programme, involving meetings with MEPs, Commission officials and Committee of the Region officials, for the Cross Frontier Group's visit to Brussels in September 2016; securing the Chief Minister's participation as a keynote speaker at an APCO Forum Event on 'Brexit: Beyond the Bubble' and the opportunity for him to speak in a plenary discussion at the annual Friends of Europe flagship event 'The State of Europe' in October 2016; arrangements for the September visit of Gibraltar students to Brussels; and organising a screening of the Gibraltar v Belgium World Cup qualifying game in October 2016 ahead of the 2018 World Cup.

435 All in all, in Brussels, just as in London and elsewhere, Gibraltar will continue to punch above its weight when it comes to voicing its concerns and defending its interests both in the EU and internationally.

Mr Speaker, I want to take the opportunity to thank Sir Graham Watson, Daniel D'Amato and everyone in the Brussels Office for their hard work and dedication over the last financial year.
440 The Brussels Office can be found in the Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure at head 10, subhead (2)(c).

Mr Speaker, I move on now to Gibraltar House in London. The office facilities at Gibraltar House in The Strand have proved instrumental in support of our response to the referendum last year and the challenges that lie ahead as a result.

445 Before June 23rd 2016, regular meetings with UK government officials were held both in Gibraltar House and in Whitehall. We have met Members of Parliament from all the main political parties in Westminster. Additionally, the liaison with Britain Stronger in Europe led to the formation of the associated Gibraltar Stronger In campaign.

After the result, the Government's focus in London homed in to lobby and meet all relevant parties and to explore the response to the outcome with significant affected entities. In many cases, in addition to our initiatives, we were approached directly by others interested in knowing how we might be dealing with the challenge ourselves.

450 There was a moment of change in the London office too. On 30th June 2016, Albert Poggio retired from the role of UK Representative. On 1st July 2016, Dominique Searle, then the Chief Minister's Special Representative, was appointed by the Chief Minister as UK Representative and Director of Gibraltar House.

The team in London was tasked to secure meetings at the highest level, working closely with No 6. The Chief Minister and I met with the Prime Minister, Theresa May, last year on her very first day in office. Shortly after this, as they took up their appointments, we had access to 460 Foreign Secretary Boris Johnson, Trade Secretary Liam Fox, Brexit Secretary David Davis, Brexit Minister Robin Walker, Europe Minister Sir Alan Duncan, and Sadiq Khan, the Mayor of London, among others. These contacts have continued since those first days of the aftermath of the referendum.

In that same period a delegation from the Scottish Executive, headed by First Minister Nicola Sturgeon, was hosted at Gibraltar House. Regular meetings have also been held there with representatives from the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man and the other UK Overseas Territories. The House knows that Gibraltar has also had contact with the First Ministers of Wales and Northern Ireland. Work was undertaken to understand how Brexit would affect the nations of the UK, in particular in areas such as borders.

470 Mr Speaker, the UK Overseas Territories Association (UKOTA) continues to make regular use of the Gibraltar House facilities as a focal point. This allows all the Overseas Territories to work together to defend our common interests and to promote areas of co-operation between ourselves and also with the UK.

Nonetheless, the UK government was prompt to accept our argument that Gibraltar's position in the process of Brexit was substantially and materially different from that of the other territories which, though affected by the departure of UK from the EU in varying degrees, are not themselves departing the EU or so deeply enveloped in its structures. As a result, Gibraltar has had its own Joint Ministerial Committee (JMC), but has also been able to attend the Overseas Territories Joint Ministerial Committee as an observer.

480 The Brexit-related activity in Gibraltar House has come in addition to the regular presence of official and commercial entities holding meetings relating to financial services, policing and commercial matters. The facilities continue to be made available to the Friends of Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, the UK Representative and the team in London have made a point of creating a close working link to Gibraltar through my office at No 6. The aftermath of Brexit has intensified political activity and considerably increased the need for the Chief Minister and I to attend meetings in London. This is a reflection of continuous contact with the UK government and with Members of both Houses of Parliament.

490 The main administrative area of the London office has therefore been transformed into a facility more able to support the regular ministerial presence there that Brexit has brought about.

The team at Gibraltar House have, over the last year, carried out extensive lobbying in the House of Commons and the House of Lords. This is directed at ministerial level from Gibraltar, where information flows back after the meetings have taken place.

495 On the same basis, the office in London liaises with UK government departments as the impact of Brexit unfolds. It also follows relevant think tanks and events providing analysis and information which informs and supports the Government's response to the challenges on the horizon. Where relevant, both Gibraltar House in London and in Brussels provide support and share information as well.

500 Gibraltar's UK Representative is officially included in the Diplomatic List and Gibraltar has therefore been represented at Palace, Westminster and diplomatic functions, where useful contacts have been made.

Mr Speaker, regardless of the exceptional impact of Brexit upon us, the regular links with politicians, former Governors and friends of Gibraltar continue. The Government has taken the opportunity to work towards a realistic reappraisal of how we should do this. Most significantly, 505 Gibraltar Day in London has been completely refocused. The reality was that both the scale and the cost had become unwieldy. This year, as my colleague the Minister for Commerce, Albert Isola, will no doubt relate, the financial services sector and the online gaming industry covered much of the cost of their events by hosting tables for key players.

510 The Chief Minister hosted his main political event at the Gherkin. This signalled that a modern and progressive Gibraltar is open for business. The event focussed that message on a well-attended gathering of ambassadors, peers, MPs and military figures in the presence of our former Governors. This was an audience of 200 people, in contrast to the 1,000-plus who used to be invited to the Guildhall in previous years.

515 Of course, many of those who attended the Guildhall events continue to be very good friends of Gibraltar. However, the high number of attendees from here was not really justified and the size of the event meant that our message was diluted. Instead, the Sunday mass in Fulham ahead of Gibraltar Day has become the focal point of our acknowledging the support of our many friends in the UK who are not just politicians but often members of the Gibraltar diaspora or who have served in varying capacities on the Rock and taken our cause to their hearts.

520 Mr Speaker, as well as helping to organise the visit by parliamentarians on National Day, Gibraltar House continues to organise the lobbying and the presence at UK party conferences. Last year we attended the conferences of the Conservative, Labour, Liberal Democrat and Scottish National parties. These are important venues for our lobbying effort, setting the tone for much of the year, not only with MPs but also with think tanks and policy makers.

525 The House will find it relevant to learn that following the UK general election, the team in London has been focussing on targeting newly elected MPs and it is important that this process continues. I would add, however, that most MPs tell us we are knocking at an open door and that support for Gibraltar, in both Houses, remains as staunch as ever – if not more so in the wake of Brexit. Therefore, Mr Speaker, the core focus of the work of the London office is 530 political.

The London staff involved in tourism now work closely and directly to my colleague the Minister for Tourism through the Department in Gibraltar. The office continues to oversee the payment of allowances to sponsored patients.

535 IT and communications issues were identified for improvement at an early stage. It became clear that best use of the office could not be made with an 8MB ADSL line which served a building on five storeys. There were some practical issues to overcome, but the office is now served with a 1GB connection that links securely to No 6. videoconferencing via Skype is now in place for Ministers to continue to work between Gibraltar and the UK.

Mr Speaker, I take the opportunity to thank the UK Representative, Dominique Searle, and all the staff. Gibraltar House in London can be found at head 10, subhead 2(2)(a).

Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Office in Hong Kong has been bundled together with London and Brussels under the Office of the Deputy Chief Minister. I explained last year that the bulk of its activities are commercial in nature. The Hong Kong office, for this reason, works with my colleagues the Minister for Commerce and the Minister for Economic Development.

The Government continues to lobby outside London and Brussels. At the end of March, I travelled to Washington for a series of meetings with Republican and Democratic Members of Congress and with the new administration. This included the Chairmen of the Foreign Affairs Committee, the Homeland Security Committee and the Foreign Affairs Sub-Committee on Terrorism, Non-Proliferation and Trade. I was able to update the leader of the Democrats on the Foreign Affairs Committee on Gibraltar matters.

There was considerable interest in Gibraltar in the context of Brexit and of our relationship with the UK and Spain. Direct briefings were given to the State Department Senior White House Advisor inside the State Department itself and to a meeting of senior staffers on the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Senate.

The visit led to more Congressmen signing on to the resolution supporting the right of the people of Gibraltar to self-determination, including two chairmen. There are now 27 supporters including the main sponsor. This resolution has to be tabled after each election and it was sponsored once more by Congressman George Holding, who is a good friend of the United Kingdom and of Gibraltar. I took the opportunity of the visit to Washington to present the Congressman with the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour, which had earlier been unanimously bestowed upon him by this House.

Mr Speaker, I now move on briefly to other matters.

The House knows that this year is the 50th anniversary of the 1967 Referendum. I had the pleasure of opening an exhibition a few days ago at the John Mackintosh Hall in order to mark this event. The exhibition opened 50 years to the day when the holding of the Referendum was announced in the House of Commons by the then Minister of State for the Commonwealth, Judith Hart. In her statement to the Westminster Parliament, she delivered the pledge that 'decolonisation cannot consist in the transfer of one population, however small, to the rule of another country, without regard to their own opinions and interests'. This was, Mr Speaker, a key moment in the history of Gibraltar and in our development and evolution as a people.

In 1967, British sovereignty came to depend not on force of arms, nor on the clauses of an ancient treaty; it now depended on the living wishes of the people who had settled in Gibraltar after 1704 and who were given the choice 50 years ago of remaining under British sovereignty or transferring that sovereignty to Spain. The result, as the House knows, was an overwhelming endorsement of the continuation of British sovereignty.

The Government has taken the view that this important event is worthy of commemoration as one of the landmarks in our historical evolution as a people. The exhibition will remain open until 7th July. There will be a memorial event and concert in the build up to National Day.

A set of postage stamps will be issued to mark the Referendum. I am grateful to my colleague, the Minister for Commerce, Albert Isola, for his assistance with this. A set of commemorative coins and coins for general circulation will also be minted to mark the anniversary of the Referendum. I am grateful to my colleague, the Minister for Economic Development, Joe Bossano, for his assistance with this.

A commemorative booklet will be published and circulated to schools in Gibraltar. It is important that younger generations are aware of the events that have shaped our distinct identity as a people. The House will recall that a similar booklet was also published in 2015 to mark the 75th anniversary of the wartime evacuation and that this was also distributed to schoolchildren in Gibraltar at the time.

I am told that National Day, the actual anniversary date of the Referendum, will be extra special this year. Referenda in general will be the theme of the annual symposium that will take place at the Garrison Library in the autumn. There are other events in the pipeline which will be announced in due course.

595 Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the archivist, Anthony Pitaluga, and his staff for their assistance and support in developing this project, and also for the general enthusiasm with which they go about their work.

Mr Speaker, I also welcome the opportunity to update the House on progress with the Northern Defences. As part of the Government's commitment to our unique heritage, the Northern Defences project will continue. The aim is to clear Hanover Battery, the Queen's Lines and the King's Lines which are located in the north face to the east of Laguna estate.

600 Hanover Battery and Hanover Gallery were named in honour of the Hanoverian regiments who helped in the defence of Gibraltar during the Great Siege. I am pleased to report that there has been interest from historical sectors in Germany in pursuing this connection further and that the Government is keen to do so.

605 Works during previous years focused in clearing up tons of debris, vegetation and asbestos within numerous tunnels and buried fortifications. This was a seemingly impossible task. The fruit of such hard work is now visible with the exposing of the Princess Lines, the Queen's Lines and associated galleries. Such an investment has exposed a series of bunkers, battlements and gun placements which range in time from the 18th century to the Second World War.

610 These works have highlighted the importance that the King's and Queen's Lines have had in the defence of Gibraltar. Their value is immeasurable from a historical perspective. The potential as a visitor site is truly remarkable as the site links Casemates Square to our Great Siege Galleries via the WWII Tunnels in the Upper Rock.

615 Mr Speaker, the option to explore Fortress Gibraltar is a vision that will soon become a reality, offering an excursion to visitors and residents which will complement the offers that already exist. Works during the summer months will address Hanover Battery whilst secondary teams will clear the King's and Queen's Lines throughout the year. The Government is very grateful to the Gibraltar Heritage Trust for the tours of the Northern Defences that they have conducted. These are set to resume in September and will provide residents with a first-hand impression of this buried jewel as we continue to uncover it.

620 I also want to take the opportunity to thank the Royal Engineers for their work on the site which continues at regular intervals throughout the year. It is very fitting that the modern-day descendants of the corps that constructed those defences are now assisting in their restoration over 200 years later. The Northern Defences can be found at head 102, Projects, subhead 4(f).

625 Mr Speaker, the ongoing work in relation to Brexit continues to consume a large proportion of the Government's time. The Chief Minister and I are both closely involved in the process. This means that there may be occasions when it may take longer than we would like to get round to a particular issue that matters to someone. The aim of the Government remains to continue to balance the Brexit work and the business as usual work so that everything gets done. In the cases where that may not happen we can only apologise in advance.

630 The hectic pace that we saw in January, February and March will probably take off again now that the general election in the United Kingdom is over. A considerable volume of work happens behind the scenes and is not reported. Nonetheless, our ultimate objective remains the delivery of our manifesto which contains the commitments that we entered into with the electorate.

635 Mr Speaker, I want to take a moment here to congratulate John Collado and Charlie Russo of Land Property Services Ltd (LPS) on their retirement this month. They have been in public service for over 30 years and in 1990 both moved from the Crown Lands Department to what became LPS. I have worked closely with them since December 2011 and wish them a happy retirement. I take the opportunity to thank them and the team at LPS for their support and assistance in that time. I also wish to thank the Lands Office in Convent Place and my personal staff at No. 6, Coral, Caine and Ernest.

640 Finally, Mr Speaker, I close by thanking you and the Clerk and the staff of the House for the assistance and support that I have received throughout the year. Thank you.

645 Chief Minister (Hon F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Minister for Economic Development is having a heated argument with a heated printer and I therefore move that the House recess for 30 minutes.

Mr Speaker: We will proceed for some refreshments; a short recess.

The House recessed at 5.55 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 6.30 p.m.

650 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Joseph Bossano.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Thank you, Mr Speaker. I regret that technical problems almost prevented me from delivering what I need to deliver.

655 Mr Speaker, last year in my contribution I concentrated on how the Ministry for Economic Development assessed the impact of the UK decision to withdraw from the European Union on the global, EU and Gibraltar economies, especially in respect of our ability to achieve the target in the four-year National Economic Plan.

660 I expected to be in a position to update that assessment this year based on the developments that have taken place in the preceding 12 months. However, the goalposts have been moved, if not indeed altogether removed, by the results of the UK general election which without a doubt had both a political and an economic impact on us. I am sure Members are familiar with the saying that a week is a long time in politics. The eight weeks between April's notification and the UK general election result in June have been a millennium in terms of the changes in the context of Brexit. If it was difficult to hazard a guess a year ago, let alone make a prediction, the position 665 now is one of sheer impossibility.

As far as Gibraltar is concerned there is still the same government in the UK and the commitments made before the elections still stand. Moreover, the better performance by Labour candidates has meant that all our staunch supporters are back in Parliament, whereas at 670 the beginning it looked as if many of them were at risk. So the political effect on us from the changed composition of the Commons is not necessarily a negative one since in addition the Democratic Unionist Party, on whose support rests the survival of the Conservative government, are staunch past supporters of Gibraltar's right to remain with the UK. However, the negotiating position of the UK government is considerably weakened given the inevitable consequences of 675 the platform on which the election was called and fought.

In the UK the Prime Minister asked for a strong mandate and argued that unless she got one the UK would not get a good deal from the EU. Since the mandate has not been obtained, the prospects of a good deal are reduced by definition. The good deal would have been the deal that would provide economic benefits and reduce political liabilities, and even though we might be 680 excluded by the disgraceful position of the 26 member states that capitulated to the demands of Spain at our expense, it would still have been better for the UK and for Gibraltar that the UK should have a stronger economy rather than a weaker one. However, in the UK itself following the newly elected Parliament, not everyone agrees on what is best for the UK economy. The official line still is that 'no deal is better than a bad deal'. However, the bargaining chips and the 685 positions have now changed.

The first meeting at the start of the negotiating process has seen the EU rejecting what the UK considers a very generous offer to grant EU citizens already in UK permanent residence if they were already there on the day the Article 50 button to leave was pressed and triggered the process. The EU wants the date to be at the end of the negotiating period, which is a departure 690 date of March 2019. If the UK offer applies to three million EU nationals then a date in two years' time with no limit on movement beforehand means potentially a much bigger number;

and this is the first and the immediate hurdle. There are going to be many more to contend with, leaving the UK in the most disadvantaged position that it is possible to imagine with a united 27 EU states with a single policy position and on the other side of the table an internally divided UK with a precarious government in place.

Some observers see this situation as a possible opportunity for a new referendum and a different result. Nothing can of course be ruled out, but I would not put my money on this option materialising.

Already there is a clear move by Germany and France on further integration of the EU in areas which the UK would have objected to before the referendum. The recent early recovery of the EU and Eurozone economies with unexpected signs of growth, although at a very low level, has encouraged EU member states collectively to start thinking that maybe they would be better off without the UK after all. The comparative economic performance of the EU 27 on the one hand and the UK on the other will have a considerable impact on the negotiating process.

For the UK the danger is the difficulty in being a minority government having wanted to take a strong line. At present these issues are being reflected in the weakness of the exchange rate which looks set to continue. This is helping the UK manufacturing sector with record exports being achieved and very high order books, but manufacturing is no longer the dominant sector of the economy. The weak pound has an effect on our own economy as well and may be of benefit in terms of our prices for visitors from countries other than the UK. The strong performance of the private sector in the last financial year, however, may not be repeatable in the current year with so many imponderables that it is impossible to make any kind of sound judgement. In terms of the existing economic model, we need to continue developing the initiatives and the areas of the economy that are showing growth until we are better placed to be able to assess what is the likely outcome in two years' time.

Dealing with training for employment, I would remind Members that the number of persons in employment is one of the indicators of the direction in which our economy is heading, as is the level of earnings. It is also an important factor that reflects the success we are having in filling job vacancies from the available local workforce as a result of the apprenticeships and the other initiatives under the Future Job Strategy.

Last year I made clear that although EU funding will be lost if the predicted 2019 exit takes place, this will not affect the available resources since the Government is committed to ensuring that we continue to provide the financial resources to back up the Training for Employment initiatives. As was clear in answer to a question in the earlier part of this meeting, these initiatives since 2012 have provided an average success rate of over 66% to date based on unemployed persons being taken on by the placement providers following training, skills enhancement or apprenticeships.

The vocational training scheme under the GSD Government claimed a 28% success rate in jobs take-up after leaving the VTS system. In 2012, the Leader of the Opposition argued that the results of the new system were no better than theirs on the basis that 28% of those who had started in February of that year had obtained employment by the end of December, 11 months later. This, however, as I explained at the time and in answer to questions at this meeting, was because the new condition of a commitment to employ could not be required of the private sector employers who prior to January 2012 had no obligation to employ trainees for whom they had provided placements. This meant that in 2012 many of those who had transferred to the new system had no offer of employment and no prospect of such an offer from their placements coming forward from 2011; they therefore had to be redeployed to public sector placements until a new position in the private sector, suitable for them and their skills, was identified, which is what happened in the years that followed.

As I also made clear – repeatedly, in answer to questions – trainees placed in the public sector did not have a priority for vacancies but had to compete with other applicants from outside the public sector when such vacancies were opened. The exception to this rule was, and continues to be, the apprenticeships that were commenced for carers whose training enabled them to take up employment in the Care Agency.

745 I remind Members, Mr Speaker, of why it was so important to introduce these apprenticeships. Before 2011 the criteria for employment in the Care Agency was a requirement for care-specific qualifications or evidence of having worked in a care environment, for example in an elderly persons' home. Although the GSD Government professed to be committed to prioritising job opportunities for the local unemployed it was impossible for the local 750 unemployed to meet these criteria, but relatively easy for somebody from outside Gibraltar to appear with a letter showing a record of employment in the sector. This led to a situation of increasing dependence on outside labour as local people were replaced on retirement from the only source that met the criteria. By introducing the training programme for carers for people previously unemployed and with no previous experience, we have been able since 2011 to 755 reduce our dependence on frontier workers in an area where it is particularly important in the light of not knowing how the fluidity across the Frontier will operate after 2019. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

This year a similar facility for apprenticeships for nursing assistants was introduced by the training company, and those completing their training are automatically assured of a position as 760 nursing assistant. The present group will in fact be taken on next month, in July. (A Member: Hear, hear.) By 2013-14 the average ratio of persons completing their period of training and then being taken on had risen to around 60% and the latest ratio of those obtaining employment on leaving the training programmes up to April is now 66%. We expect this to improve with the passage of time.

765 I am not sure, Mr Speaker, whether the divide between the two sides of the House in the area of training is real or simply the consequence of the difficulty that Members of the Opposition may have in accepting that they were wrong in predicting in 2011 that we would fail in our Employment Strategy. I am prepared to give them the benefit of the doubt that when they first took that position in 2011 they were genuine. After all, if they had failed to achieve 770 results in their 15 years under the leadership of the greatest living Gibraltarian, why should they believe we would do better? However, later in 2012, in the debates on television in which the Leader of the Opposition participated with me, then as spokesman for employment, he was honest enough to say that although he still believed I would fail to deliver the employment and economic growth targets that I had set myself, he would be happy if I proved him wrong for the 775 good of Gibraltar.

Well, Mr Speaker, I have proved him wrong. So why are they still saying after the General Election of 2015 that the strategy has been a failure? Last year the Hon. Mr Phillips told us: 'It is no secret that we are fundamentally opposed to the Future Job Strategy, it fails to deliver what it says on the tin. It is reactive, inflexible and inspires us with little confidence that the 780 Government is committed to the delivery of skills for a modern workforce'. Another Member said, 'Hear, hear' – but I do not remember which Member it was. (Laughter) It was not on this side.

Well, Mr Speaker, the strategy does deliver what it says on the tin, that is what I wrote on the tin, not what they chose to reinterpret to use against us. The first reading of the label on the tin 785 by Members opposite was that I had promised unemployed persons not just a job in a Government-owned company at the national minimum wage whilst training, but a job for life in Government, after which of course, was never true and has not happened.

The next rendering of the tin label was by the greatest living Gibraltarian himself when he asked me to acknowledge in Parliament that when I failed to get the trainees employed in the 790 private sector, as he expected, I would have to keep the trainees in Government permanently because I should know that those were the political realities. Well, we might have faced this dilemma if the private sector had not co-operated by entering into legally binding partnership agreements and if the agreements had not provided for full reimbursement for failure to employ. Of course it is possible that their scepticism was the result of the experience of the GSD

795 in Government when they only managed to get 28% of their trainees into employment and considered this a great achievement and success, anticipating that we would do no better.

The next objection of Mr Phillips was that in their view what we needed was ‘real training’. Well, Mr Speaker, we have been training nurses and carers, mechanics and electricians, welders and maintenance craftsmen skilled in masonry, tiling, plastering, painting, carpentry and plumbing. We trained bus, coach and truck drivers. All unreal. We have a Gib Doc facility and a Construction Training Centre which we created in 1996 and the GSD operated them between 1997 and 2011 and we took over again in 2012. So these entities and these training programmes the Opposition believes provided unreal training up to 1996, switched to real training in 1997, switched back to unreal training in December 2011 and all the professionals employed in the various stages of the training programmes are now impatiently waiting for Mr Phillips and the GSD to get elected into Government so that they can then switch back again to real training. (Laughter) It is difficult to describe something more detached from reality than the above. The Hon. Member also said commentators had called the training ‘Soviet-style’.

Alongside the training provision where my Department is investing in skills creation for the benefit of the private sector and the economy, we have the requirement in the approved contractor list, also operated by the Ministry for Economic Development in support of the Procurement Department. If public funds are being spent in procurement of goods and services, it seems reasonable that we should require the providers of such goods and services to be approved and require them to give priority of employment to the local unemployed, given that this employment in the final analysis is the result of the publicly funded demand for goods and services. It is fair and it makes economic sense.

This is something that has, on one occasion to my knowledge, been described as Soviet-style – and I understand why. The ‘approved contractor’ concept, as I have explained in the past, required the employer to accept candidates selected by the employment service and requires the private company that employs the candidate to seek the permission of the Government to terminate such employment during the life of the contract. I accept that this sounds quite draconian, even though I welcomed it when it was introduced by the GSD, on paper at least, in 2010 when it was done by the greatest living Gibraltarian – who, whatever other characteristics he might have had, could not have been described as an admirer of the Soviet system (Laughter) unless, that is, one thinks that the Soviet system operated in a dictatorial style.

So I am sorry to say that in my assessment the Member opposite just strings a set of slogans together because he thinks they are good soundbites without rhyme or reason. He downgrades our strategy in his thinking by saying that we are determined to pursue a policy of ‘plugging the skills gap’ as if this were a bad thing. In the last election he was saying that the problem was that there was a skills deficit which we needed to meet.

So is that the difference between us? We fill a gap in skills and he wants us to meet a deficit in skills! He says I do not understand the message: he is right, I do not think anybody understands the message, Mr Speaker. (Laughter)

He tells me we need to focus on sowing the seeds of growth, even though the green shoots may not be visible for some time. Is the hon. Member talking about the Gibraltar economy or the Greek one? Green shoots, Mr Speaker, is terminology used about an economy in the recession, expecting to show barely visible signs of recovery. The Gibraltar economy is not barely showing visible green shoots; the Gibraltar economy is showing an expanding rainforest. (Banging on desks) The economic growth in private sector employment in 2016, when he was talking about barely visible green shoots, has been greater than in any one of the 15 years that the GSD was in Government.

Mr Speaker, the Hon Mr Phillips is wrong when he says I am not prepared to engage with him. My failure is not because I have tax-free rose-tinted spectacles as he claimed last year, my spectacles continue to be plain vanilla NHS high street Boots, typical of the working classes. In fact, I do not even know what rose-tinted ones look like.

My failure to engage is much more simple. There is nothing to engage with him on, because he is not able to substantiate what he says and I do not believe him. He said in 2015 that employers were crying out for apprenticeships. Since the General Election he has been incapable of delivering these employers. I said, 'They do not need to be to crying, they just need to contact me'. I am available seven days a week and no employer has asked to see me to take on apprentices and been refused a meeting. He says this is not true, but will not give me one name of one employer. I have said to him to get in touch with them and ask them to contact me – but no result. I invited interested employers in my last Budget speech a year ago to do so – no one has taken the invitation up.

He says there are companies that have approached him, having previously approached me or my Department with nothing less than 'impressive plans for creating opportunities for young people', but that they tell him my Department is not interested. I can assure him that if this had happened – which I do not believe to be true – the person that showed no interest without making me aware of it would have to answer for it. He says these companies care about providing opportunities for young people and getting Gibraltarians into the IT world. Who are they? No one other than Mr Phillips knows. It is the best-kept secret in Gibraltar. I challenge him to ask permission from the companies to let me have copies of their impressive plans, which in any event, he says, they claim I already have but I am not interested in. Why should I not be interested, Mr Speaker? No, there is not one word of truth in any of this. My Director for Economic Development has written to over 800 employers asking them if they are interested in taking on apprentices. These are employers registered with the Employment Service as having more than five employees. They have been selected because they do not include those already working with us and because below a level of five employees it is difficult for an employer to have the resources to take on apprentices.

He says if I follow his advice – which I cannot because it is not specific enough – we can make 'Gibraltar an even better proposition, just as Tel Aviv and Budapest have done'. Well, what is it that they have done in training people for employment, Mr Speaker? I can tell hon. Members that the only thing I have been able to find is an entity that claims to be the biggest training provider in both places. It is the same entity, the Knowledge Academy of Hungary and the Knowledge Academy of Israel. It claims it is the largest training provider in Hungary and its counterpart in Israel claims the same. They claim to provide motivational training. I do not know if this is what the Member thinks is required to 'unlock and harness the opportunities that young people present'. But if he sends me what he says is happening in Tel Aviv and Budapest that we need to imitate here I will certainly have it investigated.

I am not sure whether these initiatives are the ones that will rid the community of the culture of entitlement and expectation that has become so endemic in our society, as he pointed out. Certainly if it has become endemic, it was not endemic in 1996; but I can give him chapter and verse, if he wants, of the more incredibly irresponsible initiatives introduced by the GSD in the last 15 years which helped to cultivate the culture, are extremely difficult to reverse and have created severe existential risks for the future success of our economy.

I do not know where Gibraltar will be in 20 years, Mr Speaker, like he suggested I should. I do not even know where it will be in three years, in 2020; but if the hon. Member thinks he does, again I am happy to assess where the growth of our economy will come from in 20 years if he has the ability to carry out such an exercise.

I would like also to comment on some of the issues raised by the Hon. Mr Clinton last year in relation to accounts and the use of companies. I welcome the fact that on the need for a rainy day fund, he describes himself as my soulmate – I am happy to have him as a soulmate. (Interjection) and I also welcome the support of the concept (Interjection) from the Leader of the Opposition last year. This acceptance of an initiative that is in the long-term interest and for the protection of our country is essential, and regrettably did not exist under the previous leadership of the GSD, who shortly after coming into office rubbished the idea, said I was hiding money in piggy banks and the leader of the party promptly emptied all the piggy banks, as he called them, so that he could start spending the money. He then engaged in a continuous use of public funds to deliver things which he thought would get him votes, in spite of the fact that what he was doing was emptying the war chest that had been built up from nothing over a period of eight years.

The rainy day fund was a relatively new idea then, in 1988. The closest parallel was the sovereign wealth funds that a number of countries build up by putting aside a part of their revenue streams either because of their small size or because of the narrowness of their revenue streams. We suffer from both of these limitations and when public revenues are high public expenditure needs to be kept under control so that if a sudden unexpected change affects revenues essential services can be kept going. The classic contrast is what Norway and the UK have done with their supply of hydrocarbons from the North Sea. The first has built one of the strongest sovereign funds in the world and the latter spend the money on meeting recurrent public expenditure and have nothing now to show for it.

The rainy day fund policy does not serve the short-term prospects of the politician of the day who is only interested in vote-catching and the chances of re-election, but it is vital for the long-term survival of the country and therefore I am very glad that the policy should be subscribed now by Members on both sides and that both should support and defend this concept and not allow an incoming government to simply spend in one go what has taken years to build up – unless of course it is used for what it is intended, namely to preserve essential services that are at risk from an unexpected drop in revenue. With Brexit looming in 2019 there is no better time than now to understand the importance of the concept.

I will not go into the differences between the Members on opposite sides as to where the funds should be kept, but I need to remind Members of what happened to the Community Care war chest. The GSD toyed with the idea of taking the accumulated funds from the charity back into the Government in 1996, but then settled for a more surreptitious strategy, revealed publicly in 2010 for the first time, which was running it down by withholding first the recurrent cost payments and later the capital protection payments. Both actions involved breaking electoral promises and breaking commitments given in this Parliament.

If the money had not been in the hands of the charity and had been easier to get at, it would have disappeared at the beginning of the 15 years instead of at the end. So it is a very healthy development for the long-term future of our nation that the competition between the two sides of the House becomes one over who will save more instead of over who spends more, as it has tended to be when the greatest-spending living Gibraltarian was running the show. (Laughter)

When the Leader of the Opposition has been praising my cautious approach to spending and accusing the Chief Minister of not listening to me, he sometimes gives me the impression that he is trying to get us to quarrel. He does not need to do this; he should remember that quarrelling amongst ourselves has always been the way we do things in the GSLP. (Laughter) In the Government, as I am the Father of the House, like a good father I always urge my colleagues to be careful with how they spend people's money.

I also want the Leader of the Opposition to understand what is wrong about what in his assessment is happening with the commutation of Civil Service pensions, since this is something which I am responsible for, as I devised the system, and I am glad that last year he said it was a jolly good idea. I am not sure if he is still of that view because he seemed surprised when I said it, and I was in fact quoting him.

I will just give him a figure to take note of, because he says we are replacing the cost to the Government. The cost to the Government in the budget for Civil Service pensions in 2010-11, the last year before Credit Finance came in with the new system, was £27 million. The estimate for the current financial year for the Government is £38 million.

Another issue raised by Mr Clinton has been the use of companies. He said last year:

Normally, all capital expenditure is reflected in the Improvement and Development Fund, and yet low-cost housing never appears in the estimates ...

– he says, because we are doing it with companies. Well, perhaps what he meant to say was, ‘Normally, prior to 1996, approved capital expenditure used to be reflected in the Improvement and Development Fund, but when my party came into government they started using 950 Government companies instead.’ Maybe that is what he meant.

Perhaps he did not know this and did not intend to hide it. But if he did not know it, he could have asked the current leader of the GSD because it was happening in 2010 and in 2011. However, what he must surely know is the even bigger picture, because that has featured in previous debates and in the election campaign. This is that there was a programme of capital 955 works of the order of £1.5 billion which was not going to feature in the Improvement and Development Fund. This was going to be managed by a private company which had a commission on the whole value of all the contracts put together. This was going to be financed by raising money through Government companies, thereby not being recorded as public debt.

All this was being done by the GSD when the present Leader of the Opposition was a Member 960 of the Government, which means that although we knew nothing of the details of this until after December 2011, he must have known it. Presumably the greatest-spending living Gibraltarian trusted him sufficiently, having anointed him as his successor, to have shared the information with him; and if he did not, then maybe the present leader of the GSD may wish to revise his assessment of his predecessor and decide that he was not the greatest living Gibraltarian after 965 all, just the biggest spender of all time. (Interjection) If the hon. Member opposite does not know the details of this £1.5 billion package then he should ask the leader of the party because I seem to remember recalling that during the debates on GBC the GSLP leader gave him a copy of the document that we had found in 2011.

In 2009, for example, Government companies were spending £47 million, which did not 970 feature in the Improvement and Development Fund, the bulk of the money being spent on housing projects. In 2010, £31 million was programmed to be spent by the companies and outside the Improvement and Development Fund. In some instances – for example, car parks – this was started in the Improvement and Development Fund, then moved out and put under a company that raised money from a bank, not public debt, on the strength of the expected 975 revenue yield from parking cars. However, at a later stage the banks decided that the revenue yield for the car parks did not meet the criteria for providing the finance, so the project was switched back into the Improvement and Development Fund.

I can tell Members opposite that when this was happening by the Government, we in the 980 Opposition at no stage imputed improper motives to them, accuse them of breaking any constitutional obligations, saying they were hiding money to keep the Opposition uninformed – none of those accusations were made when they were doing it, and they were the first ones to do it.

The hon. Member therefore needs to understand what we inherited from his party in 985 Government in recurrent commitments and in capital commitments, things that we have had to honour and meet vastly inflated costs compared to the original estimates, things that I would have strongly opposed if they had formed part of our manifesto. It is also true that in many instances we have carried on using the same private sector consultants to manage new projects, and they have proved as incapable of containing costs for us as they were for the GSD administration. My additional responsibility for procurement and public sector efficiency will this 990 term, I hope, deliver better results. (A Member: Really?)

I welcome also the fact that Mr Clinton agreed with me that debt itself is not evil, last year – I 995 am not sure what is happening this year. My position in the 45 years that I have been here on either side of the House has been the same. We may need to have a debt ratio because that is the norm that exists and it is established for country-to-country comparisons of the level of indebtedness. The EU standard was 60% of GDP and it continues to be the theoretical level that EU members should go back to – they are all way above the 60% now. Ours is 40% of GDP which is considered in today’s world a very low figure to have to keep to, when in practice we are already well below this level, as the Chief Minister demonstrated in his opening statement.

1000 What matters has nothing to do about exposure. This year the UK has a borrowing requirement of £65 billion to cover its deficits. Nearly every country in Europe uses debt to meet recurrent expenditure. We in Gibraltar, since the GSLP Government introduced the concept in 1988, have limited borrowing, irrespective of the level, to the financing of capital projects only, and that is still the case. So therefore, anything that is spent on capital projects cannot be having an effect on recurrent revenue or recurrent expenditure.

1005 I would also like to address the issue raised by the Member in respect of public accounts estimates, etc. His position when we compare his criticisms with the performance of his party in Government is that we must not go back to the past. Other new Members tend to say the same. Can I therefore remind him, and them, that the GSD spent most of their 15 years comparing everything with the past? It claimed to be doing better than the GSLP between 1988 and 1996 on everything they did. The Member's response would be because the GSD did this, it does not mean that we have to do it. He is right of course, but we are not doing it because they did it, and we do not do it as often as they did, but we are certainly not doing it when it is not true.

1010 On the public debt, for example, the GSD claimed that their net debt was at a lower level than what we had left it at in 1996. This, even though we left it when calculated using their methodology at zero, so how could they have it at lower than zero, Mr Speaker? And even that was claimed. We will certainly not wish to make any comparisons as stupid as that one! (Laughter) But if in government the GSD spent 15 years running down Community Care and promised in an election campaign to close it down, then it is legitimate to mention this whenever Members criticise what we are doing in relation to the independent charity. The Leader of the Opposition has said that this is no longer the policy of the GSD, but he needs to remember that he was part of the Government when allowing Community Care to continue was described as a ticking time bomb that would blow up our economy.

1015 Let us take the Hon. Member's comments last year that we have to change our public accounts system because he thinks that it should be so. If the Hon. Member questions whether we put enough money into the General Sinking Fund, he needs to remember that we set up the General Sinking Fund before 1996 and that his party got rid of it after 1996. So the GSD in 15 years never had a General Sinking Fund, so never mind how little we put in it – they just did not have it.

1020 We have a manifesto which says to the electorate the things we will do if we are elected into Government. This is how the political system of western democracy works. This is not just what we are entitled to do in Government; this is what we are required to do even if the hon. Members opposite that lose the election do not agree with us. We have not sought a mandate to implement the things that are in the manifesto of the party that loses the election and goes into opposition. Even less do we have a mandate to change the public accounts system that had been there for 45 years, which is a major change in the management of public finances which features in no one's manifesto.

1030 Most countries have cash accounts for government revenue and expenditure and parliaments approve spending on a 12-month cycle. This has nothing to do with a hangover from the colonial days, or the fact that the economy is now more complex and sophisticated than in the 1950s, as the hon. Member suggested last year. The revenue and expenditure of the Government has nothing to do with the sophistication or complexity of the economy, other than that the expenditure could then be an item to deal with areas of the economy that are new and were not there before.

1040 The methodology of the annual budget applies to most other countries irrespective of whether they have had a colonial past, whether they are large or small or whether they have complex or simple economies. If we were covering three years of expenditure as a minimum, as he suggested, then this year would be his last Budget speech and we would now be looking at the expenditure projection for 2019-20 in the middle of Brexit. Does he not realise that it is difficult enough in a small open economy like ours to be able to come up with realistic estimates of revenue, and that we cannot always keep the expenditure under control as we should and would want to? Trying to do it for three years or longer is a crystal-ball-gazing exercise, not a matter of sensible accounting practice.

As to why the Government only forecasts the four-year GDP and not anything else, of Government revenue and expenditure, the answer is simple: first of all, it has been me in 1055 Government or in Opposition that had been making the predictions, and in order to be able to do this with any degree of accuracy one needs to develop many, many man hours devoted all the year round in order to identify the correlation of the indicators that provide an indication to the economy's performance. The figures in the estimates are the results on the revenue side of the Treasury's expectations based on recent income flows as to what the revenue is likely to be 1060 over 12 months. And the actual expenditure in the Budget, unlike the GDP, is a matter that is the area of the controlling officers of those budgets who then come up with the expectation that they have of how they will be able to deliver the services that are required with the expenditure that is available. The methodology of the public accounts and the GDP are two totally different things. Only the economic growth impact is where it is more likely that Government revenues 1065 will benefit if there is higher growth, but even in this area there is no guarantee as there are many variables involved.

Mr Speaker, I am responsible for the Gibraltar Savings Bank, and I am happy to report that the Gibraltar Savings Bank – the people's bank – continues to prosper and grow. Mr Clinton says that their attacks on the integrity of the operation of the Savings Bank should not be castigated 1070 by me as if it were an act of treason – that is what he said last year. Well, it is not an act of treason, simply because it is failing to achieve its aim.

During the General Election they came up with propaganda that painted a picture of the Savings Bank operations being raided, as if somebody was making off with the deposits from the public. He has been a banker and he knows exactly what he is doing by suggesting that the 1075 money in the GSB is not safer than in any privately owned bank. I have explained the rationale and I have explained that it is a key element of our economic strategy and a key constituent of our economic growth. I have explained why and how we do not have liquidity problems, all to no avail.

In other areas of debate on the economy, the labour market or the structure of Government
1080 accounts, I might be willing to make allowances for the fact that they deal with issues which the hon. Member was not familiar with before coming here, but on the Savings Bank there is no excuse – he knows full well that his criticism is baseless and that if it were believed it would be very damaging, damaging for the Savings Bank and damaging for all of us. Therefore, as I say, if he had been successful with the scaremongering the public would have been taking their money 1085 out and Gibraltar would have been the poorer for it. However, I am happy to say that nobody has paid attention to it and that we continue to attract increasing investments from existing and new customers.

This year, £220 million-worth of debentures reach their maturity date and we have 1090 £220 million in ready cash to pay our customers if they need or want their money back. Not many banks can say that. All the indications we have are that the vast majority of our customers will reinvest all or nearly all of their cash with the Savings Bank, which is a vote of confidence in the institution for which I, as Minister responsible, want to thank the investing public and to reassure them that they will not find a safer home for their savings, and that it is important for them to know that we are putting their money to work for the betterment of Gibraltar.

The Leader of the Opposition thinks there is something wrong in doing this because the GSD 1095 kept public deposits in cash – and he has repeated that this year. Well, we have a mandate from the people, who elected us in the knowledge that, as we did between 1988 and 1996, we would run the Savings Bank at a profit and leave those profits accruing year after year, to be used only in case of a national emergency – one of the key constituents of the rainy day fund, as was the 1100 case up to 1996, a rainy day fund which incidentally the GSD did not support in 1996 and in 2011 but now does, I think.

1105 Mr Clinton also asked that I should include not just the profit and loss and balance sheet of the Savings Bank in the report I send to all our investors, but also the two pages of individual investments. He says I am not being transparent by not doing this. I do not agree, Mr Speaker. I provide the list of investments every time he asks, which is almost every month, and this information provided in Parliament is in the public domain and available to everyone, not just to the investors in the bank. I know of no bank that produces a list of all their investments every month – or once a year, or at all; they produce their balance sheets and a profit and loss account. He wants not just the investments, but when he gets the investments he wants to know what the entity that we invested in is doing with the money that we invested. There is no end to it.

1115 It is standard to supply customers of deposit-taking institutions with a copy of the profit and loss account and the balance sheet, which is what we do and something they never did in 15 years – at the same time as they ask us to do more. They say they would not run the Savings Bank as we are doing, so presumably the Savings Bank will only survive while we are in Government, because the last time they had the responsibility for it, it finished with £70 million in deposits, although the Leader of the Opposition said it was £27 million, from the public and £1,442 in reserves. Now the public has nearly £1 billion deposited with us and the GSB forecast cash reserves for this year are almost £32 million. Both figures are to be found on page 224 of the Estimates Book.

1120 Mr Speaker, if we now look at the size of the labour market as a whole, the Employment Survey Report for October 2016 shows continued growth for the financial year just ended. Last year I analysed, for the benefit of Members, the statistical information in the report to demonstrate that Opposition Members were wrong in attributing the growth in the economy to the growth in the size of the construction industry labour force. I showed that it was not the case that a publicly funded construction boom had been engineered in order to achieve the growth targets of the Government. I also demonstrated that what the figures indicated was that such an analysis could be applied, but that is to the situation under the previous GSD Government up to 2011 – that is 2010 and 2011.

1130 Mr Speaker, I do not know whether there is any point in repeating those statistics for the benefit of the hon. Member, because clearly everything the Leader of the Opposition has said today was still insisting on that myth. I do not know whether it is that he does not understand the explanation and he genuinely believes it, or that it suits him to ignore the explanation and carry on saying the same thing. But there is no escaping it. I have been able to demonstrate last year and I can demonstrate with this year's Employment Survey that the growth is not in the construction workforce. This year we have had economic growth; this year the workforce in construction has gone down and the non-construction sector has gone up. So how can he tell us this year that it is obvious to him that there is construction going on employing fewer workers and that is responsible for the growth in the economy? And moreover that it is being financed by Credit Finance or the Savings Bank or whatever else he thinks is appropriate.

1135 The figures for this year confirm the trend that I predicted for the construction industry. I said last year the construction industry was likely to shrink and it has happened – it shrank between 2015 and 2016. I estimated that the size of the workforce as a whole would probably remain static, that is that the growth in employment levels in other sectors of the economy would just about make up for the loss produced by a smaller construction sector – that was my prediction last year. I am happy to say that my estimate was too cautious – I was wrong – and that the increase in non-construction jobs has been substantially greater than the number of jobs lost in the construction sector.

1145 The figures are as follows. In 2015 the private sector grew by 1,629 jobs from 18,441 to 20,070. Over a quarter of the growth took place in the construction industry, where the number of jobs went up from 2,586 to 3,106, which was an increase of 520 – that was the previous year. This was a level only slightly higher than October 2011 under the GSD who had engineered the construction boom when it hit 2,922, an increase of 755 jobs in construction in one year

1155 compared to October 2010. So they say they were not having a construction boom in order to create economic growth, but they actually employed 754 people between 2010 and 2011 in the non-existent construction boom. We say we do not have a construction boom, but they insist that we have one but we are employing fewer people in construction.

What can I do to persuade him that he is barking up the wrong tree?

1160 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): He is just barking – up the wrong construction.

Hon. J J Bossano: From October 2015 to October 2016 the construction industry shrunk, as predicted, by 303 individuals, dropping from 3,106 in October 2015 to 2,803 in October 2016. By contrast, in the same period the rest of the private sector, excluding the construction group, 1165 went up by no less than 1,210 jobs – a better result than the increase between 2014 and 2015, which was 1,109 jobs outside construction, but still a very respectable rate of growth when compared to previous years.

The growth in private sector jobs excluding construction from 2011 to 2015 was 2,928, in four years; and from 2011 to 2016 it has been 4,138. So in the time that we have been here, 1170 since December 2011, the non-construction private sector has employed 4,138 more people. By comparison, under the GSD, that falsely claimed to be creating an expanding private sector, the four-year non-construction record of 2007 to 2011 was a mere 698.

So they do not have a construction boom, the private sector is growing but it is not a construction boom and they only employ 698. We have a construction boom but we employ 1175 2,928. In their five years they produce 1,400 non-construction jobs and in our five years we produce 4,138, and we are the ones with the construction boom. Maybe clearly this time I have succeeded.

I have to say that though my estimate on the size of the private sector erred on the side of caution, as I think estimates should, nonetheless the growth that took place in 2016 is quite 1180 remarkable in the context of the uncertainty created by the Brexit referendum result in the earlier part of the year. Looking forward it is difficult to assess the probability of the historically very high rate of growth in private sector non-construction jobs continuing at the same pace in the current financial year. However, the construction sector will probably start recovering from the level of last October and is likely to be higher at the time of the next October survey – that is 1185 October 2017.

However, in the longer term it is the non-construction sector that has to provide the main area of job creation to maintain a growing economy which is sustainable in the context of the present economic model. This implies that our final GDP for the year just ended will probably be higher than the level required to meet our target of £2.4 billion in 2019-20. In simple terms, we 1190 are looking at economic growth of around £150 million a year over the four-year term – about £3 million a week. We believe that the final figures for this year will come in at a higher level than the £150 million, and without taking account of any new developments that means that we are likely to finish in 2019-20 with an economy that is bigger than £2.4 billion.

Regarding departmental expenditure, in answer to a question on the role of the efficiency unit in my Department, I have previously told Parliament that I would expect the results to be 1195 reflected in the levels of spending in the estimates of expenditure. As I have explained previously, the public sector efficiency policy is not a one-off exercise – it is not a grading of manning levels. It is a permanent feature as one of the instruments we need to employ to ensure we are delivering value for money in the provision of public services, and in particular in 1200 the context of the unknown parameters that could be facing our economy post 2019. This requires that we do not take on recurrent expenditure commitments that are not sustainable within the existing budget, based on existing revenues that may not be so strong in the future.
That is to say today we should not be taking on, in any Department, initiatives that will increase recurrent expenditure unless we have identified a source with a compensating reduction in 1205 expenditure or we have a new revenue stream to meet what the new expenditure requires. The expenditure in the book is a simple cash accounting exercise, as the Hon. Mr Clinton pointed out. It is how it has always been done and how most governments do it.

1210 The bulk of the expenditure is the cost of the payroll and procurement. Procurement is therefore tasked to play an important role in the efficiency policy by ensuring that the prices we pay for goods and services that we buy are the best available. I am not convinced that this is currently the case or that it has been the case in the past, before we were there, in spite of the fact that the Procurement Department follows all the established guidelines and requirements in obtaining quotes and tenders.

1215 Under the GSD administration, the greatest-spending living Gibraltar on more than one occasion excused procurement costs escalating by arguing that contractors always charge the Government more, as if this was normal and nothing could be done about it. This is on public record in the Hansard saying that more than once. There is a serious problem in the escalation of prices once contracts are awarded because of variations that take place later. It has been the case since 2011 and it was there before 2011. When challenged on this issue the other thing that 1220 the greatest-spending living Gibraltar used to do was compare himself to the over-budget results in the UK procurement of public contracts, which invariably finished costing vastly more than the original tender price, and argued that Gibraltar's escalation was not as bad as that of the UK.

1225 I do not believe our role in Government should be to justify the excesses over budget by pointing out that the UK has got an even worse record. Our job is to find out how and why it happens and put a stop to it. I believe that the new initiatives on procurement currently being introduced will, if they work as expected, produce results in the current financial year. If that is the case, it may well mean that even though we expect higher inflation we may be able to supply our requirements at little extra cost. But we shall have to wait and see.

1230 At present most of the efforts on efficiency savings are being concentrated on the GHA budget where I am working closely with my colleague, the Minister for Health. Mr Clinton pointed out last year that the biggest elements in the increased recurrent expenditure have been healthcare and education. This was also mentioned by the Leader of the Opposition and the Hon. Mr Phillips. Because these are the two areas, it follows logically that these are the two 1235 we need to concentrate on to make sure that recurrent expenditure is kept at a sustainable level in the light of the present juncture facing our economy, and as a consequence of the potential effect on the reliability in future of present recurrent revenue sources.

Taking the example of the GHA, the Leader of the Opposition said last year that the cost had gone up from £75 million in 2011 to over £100 million in 2015. In fact, in 2011 it was closer to 1240 £80 million. The GHA managed to stay within the approved budget in 2012-13 and therefore there is no reason why it should not be able to do so in the future. Both I and the Minister for Health are determined to make it happen again this year.

1245 In 1996, the Health budget was £20 million, having risen since 1988, under the GSLP, from £8 million, which is what we inherited from the AACR. The GSD then increased it from £20 million to £80 million between 1996 and 2011 – a four-fold increase which was paraded as a very good thing. In fact, the GSD in Government, and especially on the eve of the 2011 election, their last Budget ... the greatest-spending living Gibraltar reeled off a long list of statistics detailing how much he had increased recurrent expenditure in almost every corner of his empire. In those days spending money was a virtue – the more you spent the more you boasted 1250 about it. Now the GSD sees this as a vice from the Opposition – and I welcome their conversion to the real world. They claimed at one stage to be in a position to identify the elimination of waste of the order of £50 million – that is once they were in opposition – but so far they have not been able to put to me any ideas that may indicate where such waste can be avoided and savings made, and I would welcome that they should do that and help me to be able to achieve 1255 it, since we are both interested in keeping public spending under control so that we spend the money that we need to spend and not money that we do not need to.

As Members know, I am having regular meetings with the three principal unions – the GTA, Unite and the GGCA. We are working well together and I believe most public sector workers understand that the objective of efficiency measures is to make sure that we can maintain the services going into the future at a sustainable level – services which public sector workers and their families access and benefit from as consumers. In fact, such is the commitment to work with me on this, the chairperson of the GGCA recently publicly lamented that too much time had elapsed in between meetings. She was right, of course, and we have met since then and I hope to be able to keep meeting them regularly every month without missing one, including July and August since I never take any holidays.

The GHA budget for the next 12 months is being contained at £110 million. This is close to 37.5% higher than the level reached in 2011-12. In previous years we have seen bids reduced only to find that the approved amount has later been exceeded, for example in 2014-15 the expenditure was £105 million and the approved budget £100.9 million. In 2016-17 the budget provided £103 million, which was £7 million below the previous year overspend. We have now forecast an outturn for the year of £118 million, no less than £15.3 million above the budget. Hence the £110 million that is being provided this year, which is £8.3 million less than they spent but £7 million more than they were supposed to spend.

The Education budget has grown in fact much more in percentage terms, although not in cash. In 2011-12 the estimate for the year was £28.4 million and it is now almost £50 million – £49.3 million, a 75% increase. This is of course a reflection of the GSLP's commitment to education, which has been there since we first introduced universal scholarships in 1988. It has been driven also both by very substantial increase in staffing levels – in previous years, not in this year – and by greater numbers of students in tertiary education in the UK. In addition there have been the much higher university fees that have been introduced in the period. However, what is clear is that the rate of increase in expenditure would be difficult to sustain into the future indefinitely. Therefore when we have done what we need, and will be done in the GHA, we will be looking to see what efficiency measures we can produce for the benefit of the Education Department.

As well as being competitive in terms of the fiscal environment, Mr Speaker, I believe we must be competitive in terms of customer service and speed of response. International investors do not have to come here; there are plenty of alternative locations. We have only two resources that we can use to create wealth: our people and the land. The efficient use of both of these resources is the only way we can provide the necessary competitive environment. We cannot grow our economy indefinitely by increasing the size of the workforce with ever-greater numbers in employment. And regrettably we cannot do that either with the land because it gets deeper and more difficult. Under the existing pool of labour and using that more efficiently means working better, not necessarily working harder. It is an important aspect that we have to consider for the future development of our country's sustainability economically at the kind of level we want it to be.

This is the analysis that has been at the heart of the economic policies of the Socialist Party since the first socialist government of 1988. It continues to be my view that it is not one of the options open to us, but in fact the only option. We can only face whatever difficulties may lie ahead if the framework for our policymaking is what I have suggested. The decision is founded on the analysis that I have spelt out above, which will be the guiding framework for the work on efficiency in the use of public sector resources and public sector procurement.

Finally, Mr Speaker, in respect of the three Departments in the Estimates of Expenditure that I am responsible for in the last financial year and this year – which are the Ministry for Economic Development, the Statistics Office and the Procurement Department – I am pleased to inform Parliament that all kept within their respective budgets and are expected to remain so in the current financial year with no increase in manning levels. (Interjections)

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

It is said that the numbers never lie, and indeed they of themselves are quite incapable of doing so. We are here today to debate the Appropriation Bill for 2017-18 in respect of expenditure of the Consolidated Fund for recurrent expenditure and also that for the Improvement and Development for Projects and Equipment. The process as envisaged by our Constitution and the Public Finance (Audit & Control) Act is simple enough: the Government presents its entire estimates of income, expenditure and borrowing and Parliament then decides if that is prudent or not. This of course assumes that Parliament is in possession of all the correct numbers and all the necessary facts to arrive at an informed decision.

The ideal position is quite simply a breakeven budget or one that delivers a surplus of income over expenditure. Prudence is the overall objective so that we do not overextend ourselves as a nation as regards debt levels and maintain a buffer for the future, which Mr Bossano is so fond of – no more and no less than we would all responsibly do at an individual level and expect that we would all want to do collectively as a community.

I have said before that the rules in respect of public finance may be either incorrectly implemented, outdated or simply being cheated in their interpretation, and I stand by that assertion. I summarised that view in the Gibraltar Chronicle in an opinion piece as follows:

I have found that the Public Finance (Control and Audit) Act together with the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act are being neatly side stepped by the wholesale use of companies owned by the Government and outside the remit of the Principal Auditor. Our public finances can now be likened to an iceberg whereby what you see above the surface and reported in the Annual Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure is but a fraction of that which is concealed beneath in a multitude of companies and devices.

I have to echo the sentiment expressed by my learned Friend, the Leader of the Opposition, and state now that I cannot and will not support this or indeed any future Appropriation Bill presented by this Government where Parliament does not have all the necessary facts and figures required to arrive at an informed decision. It is disrespectful to this Parliament and disrespectful to the people of Gibraltar not to have all the necessary information required.

Mr Speaker, I have four areas which I wish to address in respect of public finances, namely: artificial income; direct and indirect debt; scrutiny and management of public finances and Government-owned companies; and advance Budget measures, forecast outturn and the cost of living. I will also touch upon other areas of my portfolio, including the Gibraltar Savings Bank, inwards investment, heritage, small businesses and financial services.

1335

So, looking at our public finances and artificial income, having now had the benefit of sitting in this House for over a year, I have found methods whereby the Government can flatter its income by the use of transactions with its own companies and other entities it controls, such as the Gibraltar Savings Bank. I have identified the following three types of what we would call related party transactions that generate or save cash for the Government account with no underlying private sector economic activity, and those are in the areas of stamp duty, property sales and the Savings Bank purchase or funding of public assets.

1340

The Government is today reporting a forecast Consolidated Fund surplus of £17.8 million for the financial year ended 2016-17 and a cash balance of £122.8 million. Let me show how easily that surplus can be undone by reversing some of these types of transactions.
