Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 31st day of March 2019 be read a first time.
35 Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Appropriation Act 2018.

Appropriation Bill 2018 – For Second Reading – Debate commenced

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

40 This is my 15th Budget address as a Member of this Parliament, it is my seventh Budget address as Chief Minister and in delivering it I am already facing my fourth Leader of the Opposition.

As part of my address on this Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill, I have the honour to present the estimates of the Government's revenue and expenditure for the year ending 31st

I also have the honour to present the out-turn for Government's revenue and expenditure for the year ended 31st March 2018, which was the sixth full financial year of a Socialist-Liberal Government since we took office in December 2011.

50 This address comes 24 months after the decision of the British people in their referendum to leave the European Union. In that respect, and given that it is now increasingly likely that the United Kingdom will leave the European Union on 29th March next year, this is, sadly, the last Budget address that will ever be delivered in this House by a Chief Minister whilst we are members of the European Union. In the context of that international political backdrop, as is now traditional, my Budget address to this House will be very much a State of the Nation
55 address and I will also report to the House on the state of our public finances as well as on our nation's economic outlook.

Indeed, Mr Speaker, it is now 30 years since Sir Joe Bossano delivered his first Budget address as Chief Minister to this House. To quote exactly and verbatim what the then Financial and Development Secretary said in his address on the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill in 1988, it is, in fact, 30 years since el giri, as he referred to himself, gave way to el Jefe, as he very wisely referred to the then new incumbent of No. 6 Convent Place. Seen now through the prism of history, those words were perhaps more prescient than he might have ever appreciated.

That was the beginning of an economic revolution in Gibraltar's political development that ushered in a period of economic self-sufficiency that was inextricably linked to the right of self-determination that is the foundational core of the GSLP.

Additionally, and as a direct and specifically intended consequence, a process of political emancipation commenced also as we took full control and responsibility for our finances into the hands of a Chief Minister who was better able to understand our aspirations and trajectory as a people than any person appointed by London might ever have been or would ever be.

Moreover, it is certainly true that the real reins of colonialism run through the control of economic levers and therefore, by wresting control of the economics of our nation from the hands of a United Kingdom appointee in 1988, Sir Joe Bossano advanced giant steps in the cause of self-determination, decolonisation and the cause of the maturing of the Gibraltarians in one deft move. And that is why, since 1988, when we look at the economics of our nation we know that we are looking through time also at the development of our nation and the growth of our identity as a people, not just at the year-on-year statistics of our finances.

This year, as in every other year, I will of course also be outlining the Budget measures that this Government will introduce in pursuance of its manifesto commitments, in pursuance of the approaching departure from the European Union and in pursuance of the important twin tracks of the social and business needs of our community.

Mr Speaker, as has been the case with all my Government's previous Budgets, this Budget is designed to support our hardworking families, to strengthen our future – that is to say to support our youth and our students – and to provide well-deserved support for those in our community who are disabled as well as to provide well-earned support for those who have made the sacrifices that make our prosperity a reality: our senior citizens. All of that is factored into what I will tell the House today.

At the same time, and as we face together as a community the challenge of leaving the European Union, this is a Budget designed to encourage established businesses to grow and to encourage new businesses to establish themselves.

Hon. Members have heard me say before that we consider the private sector to be the essential engines of our economy. Hon. Members will hear me say that again today throughout this address. Working with the organisations that represent businesses in Gibraltar, we have delivered a pro-business environment that will continue to be fostered. We mean business in our support for our businesses large and small and this Budget will once again demonstrate that.

But to deliver a great environment in which to do business, to deliver what our private sector needs, we need to continue to improve our public services. That means investing in our public sector and investing in our public servants in order to deliver the public services that our community needs and deserves today. That combination of support to our private sector business community and investment in our public sector will be what delivers the continued and sustainable growth in our economy. And so, Mr Speaker, this Budget reflects my Government's ongoing commitment to use the resources of the State to continue to improve the quality of life and standard of living of all our citizens.

For seven straight years now, my Government has been able to report GDP average growth over 10% per year. I will report on GDP later in this address, but I want to reflect on the fact that this unprecedented run of growth has demonstrated in an objective manner our success in these past seven years in the management of our economy – whatever anyone else may say. We have also demonstrated that we have known how to spread that wealth. We have known how to manage also the redistribution of that wealth in our community, and in doing so we have provided an unprecedented level of prosperity to all sectors of our community.

110 Indeed, it would be churlish and unconvincing of anyone to suggest that Gibraltar is not today experiencing a prosperity which our forefathers might not have imagined possible, despite the many difficulties and challenges that we have faced. How could those who sailed from Gibraltar in the ships of the evacuation, and the men who saw them sail into the horizon, imagine this Gibraltar which they have bequeathed us with their hard work? How could those who voted in 115 the referendum of 1967 – knowing that their choices led to sacrifice, not plenty – imagine the turnaround in our fortunes that has led to this Gibraltar in which no real sacrifice is asked of any of us? And what of the generation which almost 50 years ago saw the Frontier gates shut in their faces, cut off from families, from businesses and from access to the European continent? How could they imagine this Gibraltar where economic growth reaches an average of 10% per annum
120 with the Ministry of Defence now contributing a minor fraction of the economic activity?

None of the Evacuation Generation, the Referendum Generation or the Closed Frontier Generation could have imagined that by our own hand, our people's entrepreneurial spirit, our workers' hard graft and the economic guile of one man, Sir Joe Bossano, we could see a turnaround in our political and economic fortunes which could lead us on to the path of 125 prosperity that we enjoy and continue to develop and grow today.

And so, Mr Speaker, on this side of the House we will seek to adhere to some of the founding principles which Sir Joe Bossano set out 30 years ago in his address in 1988 and his fuller address in 1989. I want to enumerate those principles today Mr Speaker as follows.

The first principle is that the two most important pillars of our economy in Gibraltar are the 130 land that we own and the people that we have. Those are the pillars, those are the resources, and our whole wealth and standard of living depends on using those two natural resources efficiently. We have nothing else. Perhaps nations with larger populations and greater land masses do not recognise this as acutely as we do, but it is likely as true of Gibraltar as it is for the whole of the world; we are just more acutely aware.

The second principle is that we do not borrow to repay recurrent expenditure. In sticking to 135 that principle we must also understand the need to control recurrent expenditure so that it does not rise beyond what can reasonably be met from what the conservatively estimated level of recurrent income will be. You see, if recurrent expenditure were ever to exceed recurrent income and we were to stick to the principle that we do not borrow to repay recurrent 140 expenditure, then the only way to repay that recurrent expenditure would be to increase recurrent income using the levers immediately available to Government – that is to say, taxation – and we do not want to see taxation increased, as we consider that the best business environment is a low tax business environment both for corporations and individuals. That is why hon. Members will see in these Estimates – and I will come to this later in my speech – how 145 we have controlled and are controlling recurrent expenditure, because that is the fundamental, inescapable logic of our situation and the situation of all economies, which is that we cannot consume collectively more than we produce collectively and that if we have one section consuming more than they produce, that can only happen at the expense of another section consuming less, because at the end of the day the equation has to balance. There is no way out 150 of that dilemma. It is a dilemma that is faced by everybody in the world; it is not unique to Gibraltar. And that is exactly how Sir Joe expressed it in 1989.

The third principle relates to borrowing generally and the need to ensure it is properly financed and invested in capital projects which are self-sustaining or required for the social needs of our community. Again, the position of the GSLP has always been that borrowing is not 155 an evil or a problem if it is designed to result in investment which produces more income in the future and is repayable from that income or other reliable source.

The fourth principle is that we should accumulate funds in pots where they will be accessible to Government to discharge liabilities of the Government in the event that there might be 160 periods of lower recurrent income. These are the 'rainy day funds' that other parties have at different times eschewed and at other times eulogised. The negative consequence of the times when the others have eschewed the rainy day funds is that we found all of the funds depleted to zero when we were elected in 2011. In the GSLP, and now with our colleagues in the Liberal Party, we have been constant and consistent in our view of the importance of these funds. This applies equally in respect of entities whose liabilities the Government considers as important as 165 its own. The best example of these is Community Care, an independent charity which was created to provide additional support for resident pensioners in our community.

And so, Mr Speaker, sticking closely to these principles we have not just delivered economic growth, we have made growth sustainable. In this term we have predicted 7.5% of annual economic growth in GDP terms. I will report later on how we have exceeded that to date and 170 expect to continue to exceed that in coming months as the lifetime of this Parliament is extinguished. Additionally, we have delivered record levels of annual recurrent budget surpluses. We have delivered and continue to deliver a significant increase in our employment levels. We have delivered and continue to deliver record low unemployment. And we have delivered and we continue to deliver an overall reduction in the cost of doing business in 175 Gibraltar. And, again, this year will be no different, despite the Brexit process on which we unfortunately and seemingly irretrievably are embarked.

And in the time that we have been in office the Government which I lead has provided support for our working families with Income Tax already abolished for those on income levels below £11,150. There has been a significant reduction in Income Tax across the board for all 180 taxpayers and many of our working families have benefitted from an increase in the National Minimum Wage to date of over 19.4% – that is to say, almost 20% – since we were first re-elected. Our public servants have also benefited with public sector pay increasing since first elected by a total of 17.5%, which averages 2.9% over the six years when inflation in the same period has averaged 1.8% per annum. These are above average inflation pay rises every year 185 since we were elected afforded to every single public servant.

And, rightly, Mr Speaker, our senior citizens have shared in our nation's economic success.
Each year there have been annual increases in old age pensions and the minimum income guarantee: investment in the comfort, care and security of the generations to whom we owe this magnificent Gibraltar. I will explain later the potentially negative consequences of not 190 funding the Statutory Benefits Fund that supports these payments.

Additionally, despite rates offered by the Savings Bank having been revised to reflect the reality of continuing low interest rates, those who are pensioners continue to have available products offering above market interest rates on their savings with the Gibraltar Savings Bank.
And for those that need it, we have invested in the capital and recurrent expenditure required to 195 open the new dementia residential and day facilities and homes for our elderly. This costs money – it costs millions – and that is why recurrent expenditure is up, despite our very prudent management of our public finances, because it is right and proper that we should be spending on these new services.

I should just point out that departmental expenditure has increased in the past six years that 200 we have been responsible for it – an average of 7.6% per annum – but that it grew by an average of 17.8% per annum in the five years before we took over and the party of hon. Members opposite was in power.

But it is right for a socialist Government to have a view across the horizon of the generations:
from the cradle to the grave; from birth through schooling and education to our working lives; 205 when and how we buy our homes and build and nurture our families to our retirements and into our dotage. And we should not just provide for each one of our existing generations. We plan for future generations also. We build today in a manner that will endure for generations. That is how we lay the strongest foundations for our future, for our nation and for our people.

210 That is why one of the limbs of those founding principles which Sir Joe set out 30 years ago manifests itself in the privilege that our young people enjoy with university education available to them and paid for by this small country, because when we talk about maximising our human resources as a people, these are resources we must invest in as much as we invest in other material things. If you trace the decisions that make us a socialist Government, now in happy 215 coalition with our Liberal partners, back to the first opportunity we had to govern, Members will also be able to see how that investment has borne fruit. In the Gibraltar of 1988 there were not remotely the numbers of home-grown graduates that we have now. There are now over 1,000 Gibraltarian students on Government scholarships studying away from Gibraltar at any one time.

I would be tempted to say that this policy, implemented by the first GSLP administration in 1988, is what has most transformed Gibraltar, but as a policy it has, of course, to compete for 220 that prize with the land reclamation programme, the affordable 50/50 schemes, the creation of Community Care and the joint ventures on telecommunications, each so relevant to the prosperity of Gibraltar today – although I do want to hasten to add that this transformational policy in relation to students was, at the time, attacked as a move that would potentially bankrupt Gibraltar.

225 Well, Mr Speaker, there is a deep political satisfaction in hearing one's opponents play the same scratched record decade after decade, even when they have been proved wrong. The fact is that our children represent our future, which is why we have invested record numbers year on year in higher education: investment truly in future generations. And since our re-election in 2011 our spend on scholarships has increased fourfold from £4.4 million to a projected spend 230 next year of £18.7 million. That is the best possible investment we make. We reinvest our recurrent income in our people and in those who in the main will return to produce more for our economy in the future. We have extended the scheme to postgraduate studies now also. We have weathered the storm of increased fees in the UK, and in the face of Brexit we have successfully also agreed with the British government to retain the tuition fees structure offered 235 to our students as if they were home students. Our agreement also extends already to Welsh institutions of higher education and discussions continue with Scotland and Northern Ireland on a similar reciprocal arrangement to the ones we have completed with England and Wales.

But our investment must not just be in relation to tertiary education. That is why already we have invested in two new schools at St Bernard's in the also refurbished areas of the Upper 240 Town. We had opened the last two new schools in Gibraltar at St Joseph's between 1988 and 1996. Now we are doing more, and some cannot decide if we are doing too much too quickly or too little too slowly and so they accuse us interchangeably of both. I do wonder of which of the two we will be allegedly guilty of this week.

Anyway, we are now investing in the fabric of our schools with new schools being built. The 245 first of the new schools expected in the lifetime of this Parliament, Notre Dame, is set to be open in time for this September, and for September 2019 completion is expected of a new St Martin's, a new St Anne's and two new comprehensive schools – on the site of which there has not been an unexpected leak or anything as a result of any rushing, incidentally.

It is clear that this investment is long overdue, and we will be announcing in coming months 250 how we intend to tackle the other schools that require investment that is also long overdue.
Investing in our wealth in our children's generation is investment in our nation's future wealth.
We are doing everything we can in this space. We are working to deliver as many of the new schools as quickly as possible because this is an investment that is required.

Hon. Members opposite too often say we are doing too much. They say we are spending too 255 much. They would not commit themselves to this programme to build new schools at the last election. Well, their failure to commit to this programme would also have had consequences.
The negative consequences would have been for our young people in the new comprehensives to come, who would not have had their new schools. The negative consequences would have been for our children who would not have had their new first and middle schools. The negative

260 consequences for the children of St Martin's, who would not have a new school in the planning to be delivered in time for next September. The negative consequences of not spending are real and have real people at the end of the decisions who will suffer those negative consequences.

And yes, there is a lot going on at the same time, but the Island Games are next July, the schools need to be ready for the start of each relevant term and this is not just construction 265 required in those areas. This is also the economic activity that delivers the prosperity on which all families in our economy rely, and so if there is dust arising from construction, it is the dust which delivers the benefits some unfortunately take for granted. And as we take the opposite route to Members opposite and we make the decision to carefully calibrate our investments that will last for generations – not least in the generation of electricity, if hon. Members allow me
270 that indulgence – I will talk a little now about the power station.

This weekend, Gibraltar's new power station at North Mole has already started testing and commissioning. Testing and commissioning of the new LNG facility is also about to get underway. That is the consequence of our positive decision to progress an ambitious plan to invest in a new fuel and in a location for power generation in Gibraltar that would not 275 compromise the Upper Rock Nature Reserve and does not require us to put up the cost of electricity to each business and household in Gibraltar by 5% per annum for 20 years to pay for it, as Members opposite were going to do if re-elected in 2011. No 100% increase in utilities from us, Mr Speaker.

The new power station will transform Gibraltar's power generating capability from both a 280 stability and an emissions perspective. We will provide a surer source of power in a better location and in a manner which will improve our air quality dramatically. Not only will the new plant not emit dangerous nox particulates, it will also enable us to shut down four other generating facilities, the generating technology of which is now far from optimum. Indeed, the new facility provides the best available technology, which is what the Government committed 285 itself to do. The investment has also included the distribution system as well as the fuel facility developed with Shell and which will provide a future LNG bunkering facility also, and with the value of bringing back to Gibraltar a world player like Shell – positive consequences of our careful and considered decision to invest our nation's money wisely and create a new aspect for our bunkering industry as we invest in safe and secure power generation also.

I am reminded, Mr Speaker, of how unnecessarily acrimonious this subject matter was made 290 in the run up to the last election and the manner in which this debate was pursued by some even during the course of this debate on the Appropriation Bill in recent years. It is, once again, another example of Members opposite not appreciating the potential negative consequences of their actions. But that is now the past. Commissioning and testing is commencing and we are 295 progressing as a community as a consequence of our focus on delivering this much needed project for our nation.

Plans are also moving apace on the new waste water treatment plant, another much needed project we have been pursuing since we were elected. I am very pleased that the work on this is now sufficiently advanced and we can expect to see ground broken during the course of this 300 calendar year. Progress indeed, at last, on a project which I know all Members on this side of the House are very keen to see completed. The hon. Member for the Utilities and the Environment, Dr Cortes, will say a lot more in respect of the new power station and the waste water treatment plant.

Another important area of investment is that represented by the works for the tunnel under 305 the runway. These works are progressing with the necessary care and attention to detail. Progress with the contractor is good, despite past difficulties, but we remain vigilant and cannot realistically expect to be tied to any deadline given the problems we have seen previously experienced on this project, which makes commitment to any date to open the tunnel a hostage to fortune, something which we will not countenance. But work is progressing and what is 310 important to us is that the tunnel should be completed to the highest quality, so that the taxpayer is not short-changed again, and that it is built to last. On this, as in every other area, we must deliver a project that lasts and endures for generations. Unlike our other capital projects that have an inescapable deadline, such as the schools and the sports facilities, we will not accept pressure on this project to complete by a particular date, as that might allow the contractor unnecessary leverage for us not to get the best deal for the taxpayer.

The same Minister for the Environment will also be able to report to this House on the massive increase in investment we are making in the Upper Rock Nature Reserve. It is not unfair to here point out that in the time between 1996 and 2011 there was almost zero investment in the Upper Rock. That lack of investment was quite dramatic and was showing. John Cortes has reversed that with the support of the whole Cabinet. Now hon. Members can see the investment bearing fruit. Look at the new tourist facilities, like the Windsor Suspension Bridge and the Skywalker Skywalk, all of which are beautifully and properly signposted. Look even at the new railings and defences, which in the case of one particular vehicle appear to have been installed just in time to prevent a tragedy.

So we spend money but we spend it wisely and we spend it on things that matter to all generations of our people, on our environment, and which make sense for our economy and our public finances. And that means, of course, spending on our Health Services too: a new and independent Paediatric Centre for our children which will be ready next year; a new bespoke Primary Care Centre; continued investment in new hospital services provided in Gibraltar – what better way to celebrate the 70th anniversary of the NHS in the United Kingdom than with more and better investment in our own Health Service, the Gibraltar Health Authority, everyone's Florence Nightingale; and investment also in the support of the new Calpe House in London, which we have supported and which will be inaugurated tomorrow. All of that is investment in the health of our nation. How can we not pursue such an investment?

If I may, Mr Speaker, I would like to simply pause there to wish the trustees of Calpe House all the best for the future as they prepare to open their magnificent new facility. I will, unfortunately, not be able to attend the opening as I need to remain here to listen to all hon. Members' contributions. The Hon. the Father of the House, Sir Joe Bossano, will rightly be the one to attend to represent the Government. I am sure I speak for the whole House when I wish the new Calpe House all the very best and I express the hope that it will be as much of a haven in London for those who need it in time of illness as the existing Calpe House has been. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker, part of living longer is also about living healthier, and that is why it is such a pleasure to see more and more of our young people involved in sport. That is why we must also invest in sport as an investment in community and an investment in the overall health of our community. Nonetheless, there are mornings when I rue the day that I allowed Steven Linares to persuade the Cabinet that we should host the 2019 Island Games in Gibraltar! But it was the right thing to do. That is also now a target that is almost upon us, and one which has required the acceleration of projects like student accommodation, which will be used as accommodation for athletes. The sporting facilities will all have to be ready by then, which is an ambitious timetable that we are sure we will be able to meet. And we are developing facilities here, as we are developing homes for the MoD, where our financial outlay is in a number of financial years but the return will come in the following financial years. That means we see the cost in this financial year but the benefit and income is not seen until later.

It is right that in this respect I should also reflect here the gratitude of the whole community to the Gibraltar Football Association. It is in great measure thanks to them that we will be able to develop the new sporting facilities that will provide for all sports. They unlocked with UEFA the funding for a new national football stadium at Victoria, which is providing £16.5 million to Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar and which is in turn allowing us to invest that amount and more in other facilities. That is why it would not have made sense, as Members opposite were prepared to do, for the Government to have invested itself in Victoria, which is principally a

365 football facility today. We would then have invested taxpayers' money predominantly for one sport, ironically the richest of all sports. Yet that was the plan of Members opposite. Again, their policies, their statements and their decisions would have had the negative consequence of delivering a worse deal for the taxpayer and a worse deal for sportsmen and women. Our nation would have suffered from the negative consequences of these policy errors for generations, and the negative consequences would have affected all generations, from spectators to participants.

370 Instead, we are now able to see the use of Victoria Stadium being fully dedicated to football and with the investment coming exclusively from football, and the spread around all the other sports of funding for new facilities which will also include football. That was the right thing to do and we are doing it in partnership with the GFA and all the other sporting associations, because working together, pulling together and seeking partnership is what delivers great results.

375 And that is how we have approached our work with the United Kingdom in the negotiations to leave the European Union. If hon. Members care to think back 24 months, the mood music was not positive. Before 9 a.m. on the morning of the result of the referendum, the then Foreign Minister of the Kingdom of Spain said that he hoped, and I quote, 'that the formula of co-sovereignty, to be clear, the Spanish flag on the Rock, is much closer than before'. The ink was not dry on the returning officer's return on the result of the referendum and already these matters were leading the Spanish news in these terms. And yet today no one is talking about 380 flags or sovereignties and it is Snr Margallo who is the past. We held our nerve, we held our red lines, we held to our reasonable positions and we worked and we are working with the United Kingdom in partnership to deliver a Brexit that works for Gibraltar without compromise of any of our fundamentals.

385 The Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister will report more fully to the House in the course of his address in this debate, on the work we have done with the United Kingdom and on our contact with other European partners, given his portfolio responsibilities for Europe and for leaving the European Union.

390 Mr Speaker, our work with Her Majesty's Government in securing post-Brexit access for our financial services has been critical in first stabilising our traditional business lines and then enabling our sustainable growth to continue. Of course there will be some loss of existing business – there will be some new businesses also – but the sector today is buoyant and confident of the future. We are already seeing new firms coming in and new sectors being developed. This is also testament to the non-stop work and travel of Albert Isola, who has become the champion of Gibraltar as the jurisdiction from which to do international business.
395 He, in his field, deserves deep recognition for the work he is doing in this sector, as all Ministers genuinely deserve in the sectors to which they are all indefatigably dedicated.

400 Of course, my Government is working hard to deliver a successful new line of business for Gibraltar, that is in particular in the DLT/Blockchain space where, as world leaders, we continue to welcome new businesses to Gibraltar on an almost weekly basis. In just the first wave we have some 35 new DLT businesses coming to Gibraltar: quality firms that will have office space and people employed here in Gibraltar, and coming here because they want to be regulated within the pioneering framework that we have created for them. Indeed, I understand that some of our law firms are receiving literally hundreds of enquiries a week in this innovative area. We have led in this space and it shows. We are creating a Crypto Rock with an excellent reputation 405 around the world and the impact of this ripples across our entire community. It affects professionals and service providers and we look forward to welcoming more businesses like these who are choosing Gibraltar for their businesses to serve the future.

410 In gaming, despite the challenges of Brexit, our numbers are holding strong. Every indicator is up. Whether it is in employment, PAYE or Corporation Tax in this sector, we are up on last year, and this despite the huge consolidation there has been in the sector and, of course, Brexit. We are working with all operators to ensure that their Brexit contingency plans can work for them as well as for us and we are pleased with the progress we are making. With over 3,500 jobs in this industry we are alert and alive to its needs and consistently working to improve the Gibraltar experience for them. As we speak, our regulators are processing a number of new licence applications both in the B2B and B2C spaces and also working in considering the impact of Blockchain on our gaming community. We have also completed an exercise on gaming licensing and duty reform, which my colleague the Minister for Commence will explain in more detail.

If I may say so, Mr Speaker, that is a million miles away from the place where our detractors and our competitors expected or wanted us to be. We were expected to be floundering by now, we were expected to be losing business by now, we were expected to be on our knees, but I never for one moment believed that we would fail. Never. And I was right to trust the Gibraltarians' instinct to rally, to fight, to never surrender in the face of a challenge; and instead we are growing, tapping new areas of business and working with the United Kingdom to preserve and enhance our access to the UK market after our departure from the EU and in that way guarantee the key factors that make us attractive to so many of the businesses that are established here and that want to establish themselves here.

That is the direct consequence of the hard work of the team I have had the privilege to lead on Brexit with the Deputy Chief Minister, involving every Minister in their own field and including the Attorney General and the Financial Secretary in the fashioning of the agreements we have been able to finalise with the United Kingdom in all relevant sectors that require continued access to the UK market on single market terms after we have left the European Union. It has not been easy, but it has been the fruit of hard Gibraltarian resolve, grit, graft and genuine British friendship, partnership and support.

All of this preserves our economic activity, which goes to the calculation of economic activity in our gross domestic product calculations, as does economic activity in the Port and Airport, in tourism generally, in employment as a whole, and all of that against the relevant measure of inflation.

And so, Mr Speaker, I move on to analyse the key economic indicators of the performance of our economy. In doing so, I want to point out that these are the metrics that have been applied to our economy by successive Governments and that they are provided to the Government by the Treasury and the Statistics Office. They are based on the figures which are audited by the Principal Auditor. Again, I should point out, to ensure no one is confused, that the Principal Auditor of Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar is the only auditor under our laws who enjoys constitutional independence in the exercise of his functions.

I turn first to a sector that will only grow in importance as we leave the European Union, namely the Port. Activity at the Port increased by 7.6% in 2017 compared with 2016. In gross tonnage terms, activity increased by 15.5% over the year. The number of ships calling at Gibraltar for bunkers increased by 10.1% in 2017 compared to 2016. Growth, growth, growth, Mr Speaker, in all key areas of Port activity.

In tourism a similar picture emerges. The number of visitor arrivals, excluding non-Gibraltarian Frontier workers, increased year on year by 3%. The figure for total arrivals, including non-Gibraltarian Frontier workers, increased by 4.2% over the year.

Visitor arrivals by air hit a record high for the second year in a row last year, increasing by 5.3% despite the demise of Monarch Airlines in October 2017.

The strongest growth, however, came from visitors staying in Gibraltar, that grew to a record high by 12.8% year on year. The percentage of total visitors arriving by air staying in Gibraltar continues to rise where it stood at 43% compared to 40% in 2016 and 39% in 2011.

The Air Traffic Survey Report shows a record number of seats used for both arrivals and departures in 2017. Despite the demise of Monarch Airlines in October 2017, the number of seats actually used for scheduled arrivals increased – that is to say the numbers of actual bums on seats grew, even though the number of seats available dropped.

Passenger load factors also, therefore, increased. The number of seats used for scheduled departures in 2017 increased. Passenger load factors increased from 80.2% in 2016 to 86.9%, up 465 just shy of 7%. Mr Speaker, I think all hon. Members will recognise the work that the Hon. Gilbert Licudi and his team have done in the face of the collapse of Monarch Airlines to very quickly ensure that the other existing airlines were persuaded to step into the breach and add capacity on the Gibraltar route. I know it is work that continues and which I am sure will bear even more fruit.

470 The number of cruise calls and passengers also hit a record high in 2017 and the number of cruise calls increased by 5% in 2017.

Hotel arrivals also hit a record high for the second year in a row last year. The overall number of arrivals increased year on year by almost 1%. The largest gain came from tourist arrivals, that grew by almost 3%. Room nights sold grew. Room occupancy increased. Guest nights sold grew. Sleeper occupancy increased. Average length of stay increased. The length of stay of tourist arrivals also increased.

475 As a result, tourist expenditure for 2017 has been estimated at over £¼ billion, namely £252 million, a very creditable year on year increase of 19% – that is to say almost a 20% increase in tourist expenditure, again despite the challenges of Brexit and of the Monarch Airlines collapse. Despite that, growth, growth, growth in all key areas; but growth which is a clear consequence also of our decisions to invest in Gibraltar’s tourist product and promote investment in our hotels. As ever in life, you reap what you sow. Sow nothing and reap nothing.

480 And this growth that we are reaping as a consequence of our investment is delivering jobs to our people and beyond our frontiers. As is reflected in the last Employment Survey, the number of employee jobs in our economy in October 2017 has gone up to 28,029. That represents an increase of 3.5%, or 956 jobs in our economy. That is almost 1,000 extra jobs when compared with October 2016, the date of the previous Employment Survey. The majority of the job gains came from the private sector, where jobs grew by 1,052 or almost 5% over the period. Public sector jobs decreased by 54 or 1% over the same period. The engine of our economy is the private sector and this growth in jobs demonstrates that, and the engine continues to fire on all cylinders. Employee jobs in respect of Gibraltarians increased to a record 11,130 over the year, representing just short of 40% of all employee jobs. The growth in full-time Gibraltarians was mainly in the private sector with a net increase of 71 employee jobs, up about 1.5%. In these circumstances the House will be pleased to hear that the number of Gibraltarians unemployed for the quarter that ended on Friday is a record low of 45. In fact, for the month of June the number of Gibraltarians unemployed has hit a monthly low of 31, although the only figure that we report and rely on is the quarterly figure.

490 Mr Speaker, when we were first elected, the number of unemployed reported by the Department was 522 for the first quarter. Given the calculations done by the Hon. Mr Feetham of the cost of our Future Job Strategy, the numbers would probably have been even higher, but using just the figure which the Department was reporting, we had a situation where over 500 Gibraltarians were actively looking for jobs. At that time Mr Feetham also suggested that a figure of 300 would represent full employment in our economy. With the numbers reported by the Department now reduced to 45 and the monthly figure as low as 31, we are reporting, on the quarterly figures, a reduction 91.4% in unemployment. All credit to the successive Ministers for Employment of the Government that I have led: the Hon. Sir Joe Bossano, the Hon. Neil Costa and the Hon. Gilbert Licudi. All of them have been responsible jointly for these magnificent results. And all credit to the men and women of the Employment and Training Board, so ably led these days by Debbie Garcia. These are incredible results that we will work hard to maintain but are unlikely to be repeated. But today, for these purposes, I think Gibraltar is entitled to look at these results and say unemployment has been tamed in Gibraltar through the policies of a Socialist and Liberal administration that has considered no one unemployable and has worked to ensure that our people come first in our labour market.

510 But the Gibraltar economy is not an engine of benefit just for Gibraltar. There is capacity here for others. Our economy also creates jobs, as all Members are aware, far beyond its frontiers.

515 That is why we have people working in Gibraltar from each member state of the European Union and indeed from even further afield.

Importantly, in particular for the education of those who might think that we are anything other than a force for good in our whole region, it is important also to record the following in respect of the period from October 2016 to 2017: the number of Frontier workers increased by 868, or almost 8%, from October 2016 to a record high in October 2017.

And what are all those jobs producing for employees? Average gross annual earnings in respect of all employee jobs increased by 2.9% from October 2016 to October 2017. Average gross annual earnings for monthly paid full-time male employees increased by 2.3% in the same period.

525 To set those wage increases in context, in the relevant period for which I am reporting to this House, inflation in Gibraltar averaged at 2.6% in 2017 compared to 0.6% in 2016. Rates from 2015 to 2016 were unusually low following the low inflation trend in Europe, largely as a consequence of cheaper energy and import prices. The average rate of inflation for the previous 10 years to 2014 was 2.8%, which is slightly higher than the current average rate for 2018 that stands at 2.6%. Inflation in the euro area ran below the European Central Bank's target rate of 2% during 2017, averaging at an annual rate of 1.5%. The UK CPI inflation averaged at 2.7% in 530 2017, marginally higher than Gibraltar's IRP that averaged at 2.6%.

Since the Brexit vote the value of the pound has fallen in comparison with most other currencies, dropping by 10% from June 2016 to 2018. The continuing uncertainty surrounding Brexit continues to apply pressure on sterling and some UK analysts are predicting that it could fall below €1 against the pound once the UK officially leaves the European Union in 2019. The effect of sterling's depreciation on import prices and the recent increase in fuel prices will continue to pass through to customer prices. These external pressures are likely to keep inflation above the 2% target through 2018.

540 Mr Speaker, this year I report on the second full year's results following the decision of the United Kingdom to leave the EU. The year I am reporting on is probably also the year of maximum uncertainty, as it is the year in which we have been engaged in discrete discussions with European counterparts, but it is a year in which we were not able to see a final agreed position as to the status or nature of the United Kingdom's future relationship with the EU. The year has therefore given rise to more than the usual sets of challenges surrounding those issues. 545 It is against this challenging and less than settled backdrop that our economic performance must be measured.

The latest figures available from the Government Statistics Office show that the final Gibraltar gross domestic product estimate for the financial year 2015-16 was £1.79 billion, representing a growth of £180.64 million, namely 11.2%. The GDP figure for 2016-17 is now estimated at £2.01 billion, increasing by £212.69 million, or 11.9%. And the important new figure that I today report to this House is that the GDP forecast from the Government Statistics Office for the financial year we have just ended, namely 2017-18, is £2.18 billion. That shows our GDP increasing by £173.44 million, or an increase of 8.6% compared to 2016-17. These figures reflect 550 the continued strong growth of our economy despite the many challenges that we have faced in the year, for which I have the honour to report to this House.

The Government's manifesto target of reaching an increased GDP of at least £2.4 billion by the end of March 2020 is therefore likely to be achieved a year ahead of schedule. That is to say we now expect to reach very close to the target that we had set for March 2020 by March 2019.

560 Mr Speaker, if I may say so, this proves a point that hon. Members opposite have, on some occasions, had cause to make. Indeed, I think it was the Hon. Mr Hammond or the Hon. Mr Clinton who made the point during one or other of the last two election campaigns that at election time we – that is to say the GSLP-Liberals, or more precisely Sir Joe Bossano – predict the likely outcome of the growth of the Gibraltar economy and in particular of the GDP and that 565 we risk getting it wrong. Hon. Members have therefore been heard to muse that if our plans were all based on those predictions there was an inherent risk in that.

Well, they were right and I do not mind admitting it to them. They were right and we were wrong about GDP growth. You see, in 2011 we predicted we would reach a GDP of £1.65 billion by 2015-16. We got it wrong. We reached that target under a GSLP-Liberal stewardship of our economy by 2014-15 – that is to say a whole year earlier than anticipated. In this election cycle we once again appear to have got it wrong. We are likely to reach the target or near it, once again, a year early: £2.4 billion or very close to that by 2018-19, one whole year ahead of March 2020.

575 The one thing they would not wish me to remind the public of, of course, is that the gist of what Members opposite were telling the electorate was that we could not make those targets at all. Their position was that we were being overambitious. They were certainly wrong about that: we were conservative and prudent in our predictions and they were achieved. Indeed, based on the latest estimate of GDP, our £2.4 billion target would now be met into 2020 with a growth of just 5% a year, when our manifesto estimated a continued average growth rate of around 7.5% to reach the target over the period to March 2020. The growth over the last three financial years has exceeded that, averaging 10.5%, a remarkable rate of GDP growth, in particular given the political circumstances with which we have been required to deal.

585 As a result, Gibraltar continues to rank amongst the fastest growing economies in the world, and economic growth is often seen as indicating an increase in the average standard of living. As a result, I have therefore continued the tradition, started by my predecessor Sir Peter Caruana, of reporting to the House on the GDP per capita in our economy, as this was used by Members opposite when they were in Government as an indicator of the average standard of living of individuals in Gibraltar. It is used in this way in analysis around the world. It is not a strictly scientific measure, but it has been referred to every year since before we took over as the Government. It is therefore an established metric, of however doubtful value, which I shall once again provide to the House.

595 In this respect, as I have told the House, the latest forecast for 2017-18 estimates a GDP per capita capital growth of 8.6% from the previous year to £2.18 billion. On the IMF GDP per capita rankings the UK features in 34th position with a GDP per capita of $45,566 and Spain in 40th position with a GDP per capita of $40,290. Gibraltar's GDP per capita for 2017-18 is forecast at $111,051, placing Gibraltar in third position, closely ahead of Luxembourg, which enjoys a GDP per capita of $110,870 and behind Macao SAR with a GDP per capita of $122,490. Qatar heads the list with a GDP per capita of $128,703.

600 I have said before and must I ensure the record of the House reflects my own view that these measures are not scientific because of the differing methodologies and fluctuating exchange rates on which they are based. In our case, with such a large part of our working population not being relevant in the per capita aspect of the calculation, the numbers are, in my view, distorted. Nonetheless, they are the measures that the rest of the world relies on.

605 The important aspect of this exercise, however, is really only to appreciate that the Gibraltar economy is estimated to have grown by 8.6% in the 2016-17/2017-18 period, with average earnings going up by 3%, and this growth continues to place us ahead of other small countries in the world except Macao, but including Malta, Luxembourg, Singapore and Hong Kong.

610 Mr Speaker, I turn now to an analysis of the public finances of Gibraltar. The level of Aggregate Public Debt as at 31st March 2018 was marginally lower than last year at £439 million. This represents an Aggregate Debt to GDP ratio of 20% in 2017-18, down 2% from 22.1% in 2016-17. The level of Cash Reserves ended the financial year at around £115 million. As a result, this reflects Net Public Debt at £324 million or 14.86% of GDP in 2017-18. This is a decrease of just shy of 1% from the 15.7% at which it stood the year before in 2016-17. These ratios continued at lower rates than that of the UK and most other European nations.

615 Gross Public Debt remained unchanged at £447 million and the reduced level of Aggregate Public Debt reflects the balance held in the General Sinking Fund.

Liquid Reserves held by the Government ended the year marginally higher than the Cash Reserves. As is the established practice, a full breakdown of these Liquid Reserves and details of where these reserves are invested will be provided as part of the Annual Accounts of the Government, once these have audited by the Principal Auditor.

620 It is important for hon. Members and the general public to note that our nation's Public Debt continues to be low in relation to the growing size of our economy. As a percentage of GDP, our Net Public Debt is currently among the lowest of any country in the European Union. Indeed, overall borrowing is relatively low even if we were to include the borrowing by Government-owned companies, a practice which was commenced and established by the former administration, and which has never been, as hon. Members know, deemed to be part of the Public Debt by any reckoning.

625 It is important also to remind ourselves that the former administration established company borrowing in this way because borrowing by Government-owned companies is serviced directly from the income accruing to those companies and is secured against income-generating assets held by those companies and not against the Consolidated Fund or the general revenues of Government.

630 The Government continues, however, to be committed to reducing debt servicing costs and it is fully engaged in restructuring its borrowing in order to take advantage of the historically low levels of market interest rates. In this respect, as part of ongoing management of the Public Debt, opportunities to extend the maturity profile of the Public Debt are also being actively looked into. Indeed, just at the most recent Question Time in this House I was able to advise hon. Members that a Barclays facility via the Government company structure in the sum of £16 million – entered into by the party of Members opposite, the previous administration, at 6.8% – has been refinanced by us at 2.5%. And yes, Mr Speaker, they heard right: that was a loan via the Government company structure that they had entered into and which mortgaged some 17 properties, a large majority of which were released as a result of our refinancing.

635 Incidentally, I expect soon to be filing the accounts of all the Government companies, starting shortly after the summer – accounts that you will recall the former administration stopped filing.

640 Mr Speaker, for all the reasons that I have set out before, the past year has been politically challenging. Despite that, I am delighted to announce to this Parliament that during the last financial year 2017-18, we have once again achieved a recurrent Budget surplus which stands at £36.1 million. This is just about double the originally estimated surplus for the year – a demonstration once again that our estimates are conservative and can be relied upon by hon. Members. This also marks the prudent stewardship of our economy and shows that we continue to build on the good fortunes of our first term in office.

645 For those who have spent seven financial years criticising everything that we do and predicting that our actions would not be successful, this further surplus demonstrates once again that we can be trusted with the safe and successful administration of our public finances. Once again this year we are able to point to results to show that the naysayers are the ones who should not be believed, that those who have been crying wolf each year since December 2011 are the ones who are not credible.

650 Indeed, if we compare our economic performance by reference to the surplus, our average surplus for the six years after 2011 is larger than their average surpluses for the six years before our election. Indeed, our surplus this year is as large as their largest surplus ever. But we do not want to compare averages, because we do not want to discredit that period for which they were responsible and neither are the parameters exactly comparable anyway, in particular given the growth in our economy that we have delivered since then. Yet, given these results, hon. Members opposite should now find an elegant way to move away from their ridiculous annual mantra that we are somehow massaging figures. What we are doing is demonstrating consistency in the successful management of our public finances: consistent growth and consistent surpluses.

Indeed, in respect of the politics of real consequences, one of the real consequences of the constant suggestion that things are somehow not going as well as the figures show, of crying 670 wolf every year, is that people will no longer give any credence to such posturing. Additionally, we are able to show that the flip side of that is that we are reliable and credible in our predictions in these estimates, as much as to revenue as we are to expenditure.

In that respect, Government revenue during the last financial year exceeded the original Budget by approximately £21 million. As a reflection of the continuing growth in our economy, 675 Income Tax receipts were up by around £11 million and Company Tax receipts were down by around £9 million arising from an overpayment in the earlier year. Departmental expenditure during the year, on the other hand, has been very effectively contained by the Government and this ended the year slightly under budget at £3.3 million or 0.7% under budget. And as I said earlier, our average growth in departmental expenditure is, in any event, half of the average 680 increase per year in the same period under hon. Members. That is a very creditable landing point which the Government is pleased indeed to report to the House.

Mr Speaker, as in previous Budgets and in line with our manifesto commitment to help Gibraltar Community Care Trust build up its reserves so that it can be totally independent of Government grants, I am delighted to inform the House that a further sum of £15 million has 685 been earmarked by the Government this year as a contribution to the charity. This contribution will be paid out from the Government's recurrent surplus for the year.

Also in line with my Government's commitment to transparency, we have prepared a presentation of the Budget to assist viewers to follow those essential numbers. The presentation will be available online at www.gibraltar.gov.gi. This presentation is not a substitute for 690 reviewing the Estimates Book but rather an attempt to connect taxpayers with where the money this Government raises from their taxes, duties etc. comes from and where and how it is spent.

Mr Speaker, I now move on to the recurrent revenue and expenditure budget for the current financial year. Estimated recurrent revenue for the year is budgeted at around £652 million. This represents an increase in revenue of over £37 million or 6% over the previous year's Estimate.
695 Nonetheless, as hon. Members will see when I get to the Budget measures that I will announce, this will be a prudent and conservative Budget: a Brexit Budget.

The overall recurrent expenditure budget for the year is £628 million, which reflects an increase of around 5.2% over the 2017-18 Estimate. The Government is therefore prudently and conservatively projecting a recurrent budget surplus for this financial year of around £24 million.

During the last financial year 2017-18 the Government invested around £63 million on capital projects funded from the Improvement and Development Fund. Over £18 million was invested 700 on works and equipment and over £44 million was invested in specific capital projects. That includes £5.75 million on the access road to the Frontier, including the resumption of works on the tunnel, and £18 million for the relocation of a number of MoD estates.

This has resulted in one of the largest tenders for property going on the market and being awarded. Over 100 ex-MoD properties have been tendered for by aspirational Gibraltarians looking to progress up the property ladder. We are therefore continuing to spend money building new homes for the MoD personnel, and that spending will release the ex-MoD properties which have already been tendered for by Gibraltarians in some of the most desirable 705 locations in our geography. The income side of this equation will not, however, be visible in this year's estimates. Completion of the sale of the ex-MoD housing will occur in the following year, that is to say financial year 2019-20.

There are also further capital projects funded through the Government-owned companies. These include a number of projects that have now been enjoyed by the community and have 715 been taken to as part of the daily life of our community as if they had been there for years, such as the Midtown car park, Charles Bruzon House and Sea Master Lodge that have recently been handed over to tenants.

720 The expenditure budget of the Improvement and Development Fund for the current financial year 2018-19 is around £72 million. The capital investment in works and equipment is estimated at over £18 million and the provision for investments in other Government projects amounts to over £53 million. That includes an investment of £7.5 million in our roads and parking projects with the ongoing cost of the tunnel across the runway being a key feature; nearly £16 million more for the continued relocation of the MoD estate; £1 million for infrastructure works for new developments, including the new affordable housing projects; a further £14 million for our 725 ambitious programme of facilities to be ready for the Island Games that will leave an important legacy in sport and accommodation for many years to come; and further provision to complete other ongoing capital projects.

Mr Speaker, an important part of the revenue aspect for the year I am reporting on and the year we are estimating for comes from the collection of corporate and personal taxes from 730 economic operators in our economy. In that respect I think most taxpayers will agree and will have appreciated how in the financial year 2017-18 the Income Tax Office has continued to improve the processes for the assessment and collection of taxes in Gibraltar.

The total figure of taxes collected amounts to £277 million, broken down as £166 million in personal taxes and £111 million in corporate taxes for the year 2017-18 I am reporting to the 735 House on. This figure is anticipated to rise to £295 million in the current financial year 2018-19, breaking down to £165 million in personal taxation and £130 million in corporate taxation.

The more efficient assessment and collection of taxes also has an immediate plus side for individual taxpayers also. The Income Tax Office has in the past financial year paid out a historic and unprecedented amount of £15.3 million in refunds to individual taxpayers.

740 I am pleased to inform the House that the Income Tax Office is well on course to achieving the paramount objective of addressing the hugely important issue of cutting delays in issuing taxpayer final assessments and the payment of refunds which arise as a result. This is a significant accomplishment by the Income Tax Office and one that I am proud to report on. For the first time in 20 years a Chief Minister is able to announce that taxpayer assessments are 745 being brought right up to date. In fact, as I am making this speech some taxpayers will already have received assessments in relation to the 2016-17 tax year. That is to say we are now – in cases where there are no disputes – up to date in repayment within two financial years.

In the context of the revenue and expenditure estimates, it is particularly important to highlight this and to report to the House that since the refunds programme was implemented 750 the Government has already spent £25 million in addressing arrears catch-up. This year we have committed a further £15.5 million for financial year 2018-19 in order to take this project further to completion. Hon. Members can see that at head 7, subhead 1 of the Recurrent Consolidated Fund charges as required under section 14 of the Public Finance (Control and Audit) Act. It is on page 16 of the book, at the bottom. Indeed, such has been the impetus given to this exercise by 755 the Income Tax Office that in order not to hold up what is, after all, a catch-up process that had moved quicker than we expected we would be able to progress it, the Government spent an additional £5.5 million over the allocated amount in rebates in the last financial year 2017-18. That is to say we spent an extra 55% over the allocated amount for the last financial year, which we additionally allocated to this subhead in order to repay to taxpayers what is due to them.
760 Never has any Government ever allocated so much to this subhead and to this purpose. This I think will demonstrate to the taxpayers that this is not about holding on to their money but returning it in a structured and organised fashion to ensure the right and fair balance is maintained between repayment and carrying out the proper and correct assessments.

In this respect, we continue the e-government initiative also in the Income Tax Office and by 765 the end of this year we expect to see the implementation of online facilities for registration by PAYE and self-employed individuals, submission of tax returns and payments of tax and social arrears. The completion of these initiatives will importantly finally result in a digital Tax Office offering a seamless and streamlined interface to the general public.

770 Mr Speaker, it is right that I should pause there to thank Tina Pitaluga for the work that she has done as Acting Commissioner for Income Taxes. The post of a new Commissioner has already been interviewed for by the Public Services Commission and the results of that interview process will no doubt soon be announced.

775 Also very important and as a key principle of basic fairness, the level of tax and Social Insurance arrears continues on a downward trend. This is a direct result of the effective strategy, co-ordination and significant efforts between the Central Arrears Unit and the Income Tax Office.

780 The Central Arrears Unit was set up and commenced its operations in August 2016 in order to recover debts owed to Government. It is important to note that an earlier incarnation of a Central Arrears Unit had been created by the first GSLP administration and had been in place until 1996, but it was dismantled by the party of hon. Members opposite when they were last in Government. Again, their actions in this respect had the obvious and immediate negative consequence that very considerable arrears built up. Their actions had the negative consequence also of creating the huge unfairness for those in business who paid their dues, that many of their competitors were not paying their legal liabilities. When that happens, businesses
785 that pay their dues are in effect subsidising businesses that do not pay their dues. The actions of the party of Members opposite therefore had the direct and negative consequence of unlevelling the playing field in favour of those who failed to pay their dues. The direct and positive consequence of our actions in once again creating the Central Arrears Unit – which is not popular, of course, with debtors – is to once again level the playing field. In that way we act 790 fairly to all taxpayers and to all businesses and do not allow those who do not pay to have their businesses subsidised by those who do. And the Central Arrears Unit does not just chase bad debt. In order to do a better job and also to assist businesses, it also aims to ensure that current payments are received on time. This also curbs escalation of debt and ensures an across-the-board fair debt-recovery policy is applied to all individuals and companies who owe moneys to 795 Government.

I am pleased to be able to state that arrears of taxes in Gibraltar have been reduced by £13.3 million in the past 18 months of operation of the Central Arrears Unit. Social Insurance debt has been reduced by £3.4 million in the same period. That is a total reduction of £16.7 million, all of which has been achieved in just a year and a half, just in 18 months. The 800 overall reduction in debts owed to Government, when comparing figures from 30th September 2016 to 31st March 2018, is actually £21 million. Additionally, not only do arrears show that significant reduction, but I must also highlight that the Central Arrears Unit are actively ensuring that current payments are received in a timely manner.

805 This success is due to the excellent work of the men and women of the Central Arrears Unit. They work closely with all Government Departments, all of whom now understand that we must strive to reduce arrears and ensure the timely collection of current payments due. All now understand that the laissez-faire attitude of the party of hon. Members opposite was bad for Gibraltar, it was bad for those who pay their due and it was not fair. The men and women of the Central Arrears Unit are sometimes insulted, they are sometimes threatened, they are on the 810 receiving end of unpleasantness from those who have failed to pay their dues; but, under the effective and unafraid leadership of Lizanne Dalli, they ensure that those who owe money pay because that is the fairness that we owe to those who do pay on time. I extend to the people of the Central Arrears Unit the sincere thanks and respect of the Cabinet that I lead and of the whole community.

815 I express the same sentiments for the work being done by the Minister for Housing and all the people of her Housing Ministry in respect of arrears of housing rents. The Housing Department has also very successfully implemented the arrears recovery strategy which it

820 commenced in 2015. The balance of the rent arrears at its highest in 2016 was just in excess of £6 million. In the relatively short period of 36 months since recovery of arrears commenced, the balance due is now £4,812,223. That figure reflects not just recovery of arrears but also a reduction of accrual of arrears.

825 Recovering arrears of rent is not popular and it is not straightforward. In some instances discretion has to be applied because of the circumstances of individuals who have fallen into arrears. In some cases, calculations may be wrong and reliefs which are available have not been factored in and have to be deducted from the headline liability. In all cases it takes a politician with courage to do the right thing and to pursue unmeritorious cases of non-payment of rent.
Samantha Sacramento has shown that she has the gumption and the ability to pursue such a policy and that she does so with the full support of the Cabinet, the Government and, I hope, the whole of this House and indeed the whole of the community.

830 Mr Speaker, I am also delighted to report to the House that under the leadership of Sir Joe Bossano the Gibraltar Savings Bank continues to flourish. The reserves of the Savings Bank have continued to grow and these reserves stood at £37 million at the close of the last financial year.
The reserves of the bank are estimated to grow further to reach over £41 million by the end of the current financial year. The deposit base of the Savings Bank remains at over £1.3 billion.

835 The Savings Bank continues to provide an excellent range of savings products for our community, as indeed it has done since it was established over 130 years ago. The Gibraltar Savings Bank will continue to provide savings products to serve our community and will continue to offer special rates of interest to our pensioners.

840 The bank is also working on improving the services it offers to savers by making use of the latest available developments in banking technologies. This complements the services that are now being provided to the community by the Gibraltar International Bank, which include a full range of retail banking services, including mortgage finance to prospective homeowners and commercial lending to our local businesses. In fact, I am delighted to be able to report to the House on the growing success of the Gibraltar International Bank. Operating at arm's length 845 from Government, the GIB has grown beyond our expectations and I would like to congratulate and thank the Chairman, the Board, its CEO and all those that work there for shaping an institution that has become an integral part of Gibraltar society and the Gibraltar proposition.

850 It is because of this growth that the Government took the view to invest a further amount of £30 million in the capital of the bank over the last 12 months via the Gibraltar Development Corporation. Given the objects of the GDC, it is quite an appropriate investment and the money was sourced from the £300 million we raised through an institutional investment in Gibraltar.
The bank needed this capital to meet the stipulated regulatory financial ratios which arose given its expanding portfolio of business. In other words, the bank needed an extra £30 million because of the success of its business model, not because it lost money that we had to replace.

855 I am very happy to be able to tell the House that in a snapshot as at the end of last week the bank had attained 20,897 accounts, year to date deposits of on average of £725 million and their loan book now stands at £204 million. And most importantly of all, the bank has turned its first monthly profit and has predicted it will turn a profit for the full year that will close in December

860 Mr Speaker, I trust you will agree that this is quite remarkable for a relatively small bank that was no more than a manifesto commitment when we were first elected and which we created also to deal with some of the retail banking challenges our community faced. And it is already spreading its wings beyond our shores and helping provide banking support to some businesses in the Falkland Islands that are struggling to obtain banking services and have approached the 865 GIB to assist.

The accounts for the year ended 31st December 2017 will shortly be made public. Those who want, can then obtain a copy to study to their accounting hearts' content.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to the specific Budget measures for 2018. Before I start announcing some of the changes to import duties I want to inform the House that this year, in carrying out this exercise with the Collector of Customs and the Financial Secretary, we have realised that there remain a number of anomalies and inconsistencies within the structure of the present tariff. This has also been noted by the boards of the Gibraltar Federation of Small Business and the Chamber of Commerce, who have both raised the same issue with the Government. In the circumstances, I am asking for an exercise to be carried out with a view to seeing if the system can be rationalised. This may lead to there being a smaller number of tariffs that would apply. Products would then be aligned to those tariffs in more a consistent manner. My expectation would be that the outcome of this review can be announced during next year's Budget. In the meantime, the following changes in Import Duty will be introduced, with immediate effect or as otherwise indicated.

Mr Speaker, in support of this Government's continuing efforts to address the problems arising from tobacco and smoking generally, to further curb anti-social behaviour and to better collect, monitor and share information, and to better prevent the possibility of illicit tobacco activity arising, and in consultation with the Collector of Customs, I will be introducing further amendments to the Tobacco Act. These will be designed to ensure that the licensing, importation and exportation, storage and transportation of cigarettes, as well as penalties in connection with these activities, apply to all tobacco products generally rather than only or mainly to cigarettes, as at present. These will assist also in controlling the public order issues that can arise if the trade in this commodity is not properly regulated.

Tobacco licence fees were last partly increased some considerable years ago, in 2005. These will now be increased with immediate effect as follows: the fee for a new wholesale licence will increase, from £1,000 to £20,000; the fee for a renewal of a wholesale licence will increase, from £300 to £10,000; the fee for a new retail licence will increase, from £150 to £5,000; the fee for a renewal of retail licence will increase, from £5 to £200; the fee for a new retail store licence will increase, from £50 to £5,000; the fee for a renewal of retail store licence will increase, from £15 to £5,000; the fee for a new transportation licence will increase, from £50 to £250; the fee for a renewal of transport licence will increase, from £20 to £250; and the fee for a tobacco import permit will increase, from £150 to £1,000.

The last time duty on tobacco was raised was in April 2014. At that date we increased duty per carton of 200 cigarettes from £12 per carton to £13 per carton. That change had followed a series of changes starting in July 2011 when we increased duty from around £8.55 per carton. I say 'around' because at that time duty was assessed on a hybrid basis which included a calculation based on weight. Since that date, currency fluctuations have made duty increases in respect of cigarettes harder, as the effect of such increases on the market price of cigarettes has been harder to quantify with certainty because of the currency's volatility.

Today, I want to signal a deeper and wholesale change in our attitude to tobacco duty. The health of our nation requires that we should ensure that we are taking measures to dissuade people from smoking. Not only are we extending our Tobacco Act provisions beyond cigarettes to all tobacco products, we are considering implementation in Gibraltar of international conventions on the use of tobacco and we are looking at an escalator of duty which will make high-street retail tobacco prices, cigarette prices in particular, less and less attractive. For that reason, as from midnight last night, duty on cigarettes will go up by £1 from £13 per carton to £14 per carton. Additionally, the duty on rolling tobacco will also be increased from midnight last night by a third again, by £15, from £45 per kilo to £60 per kilo.

Also from midnight last night, I will triple again the import duty on waterpipe tobacco from the current £15 per kilo to £45 per kilo. This represents another consecutive increase in Import Duty on this particular tobacco-based commodity. Duty was based on an ad valorem formula until two years ago. I introduced duty at £3 per kilo in the 2016 Budget measure. Last year we upped that duty to £15 per kilo. This year it is tripled again to prevent Gibraltar being used as a 920 place to create an illegitimate market in this commodity. Given the size of the increase, to avoid traders finding themselves with unsellable quantities of the product, the Collector of Customs will have a discretion, if he is satisfied that merchandise has already been ordered and is in the delivery stage or if there is a quantity already in Gibraltar in bond as at today's date, to levy duty at £15 per kilo for that particular quantity only.

925 Mr Speaker, data shows that diesel can emit more toxic pollution than other fuels. That is the main reason why we decided to pursue an LNG power station. That will considerably improve air quality in Gibraltar as we shut down our existing diesel-fired stations and temporary facilities.
Diesel will, in coming months, become a fuel we use in the generation of electricity in our dual-fired engines only in extremis in the unanticipated event of a failure of LNG supply. Additionally, 930 and in line with our policies to protect our environment and to improve our air quality, we have exempted duty on electric cars to promote their importation. The other side of the equation must be to increase duty on the most polluting diesel and petrol vehicles and their fuel.

We increased duty for diesel, the highest pollutant, last year. The increase we implemented did not, however, affect the quantities sold. Additionally, we have not increased duty on unleaded fuel since 2010. Accordingly, from midnight tonight duties on the importation of diesel 935 will be increased by 12p per litre, from 25p per litre to 37p per litre; duties on the importation of diesel premium will be increased by 11p per litre, from 23p per litre to 34 per litre; duties on the importation of Unleaded 95 will be increased by 6p per litre, from 29p per litre to 35p per litre; and duties on the importation of Unleaded 98 will be increased by 5p per litre, from 29p per litre to 34p per litre.

940 As the whole market of both hybrid and electric vehicles has evolved, I have over the years provided several direct incentives, unrelated to fuel duty, to encourage people to move away from vehicles that rely solely on the internal combustion engine to those that provide cleaner alternatives. The Government has led by example and for over four years now the official G1 vehicle is the full electric TESLA Model S – which even Jimmy now approves of, Mr Speaker! I will 945 do more of this incentivising today, as follows: the Government will seek to improve on the UK's ambition of seeking to phase out registration of new vehicles with internal combustion engines by 2040. Some groups internationally have called for that deadline to be brought forward to 2030.

950 Already the Scandinavian car producer Volvo has announced that as from 2019 – that is to say next year – it will stop producing vehicles that have only an internal combustion engine.
Between 2019 and 2021, the firm will introduce five 100% electric models and ensure that the rest of its conventional petrol and diesel range have a hybrid engine of some form. It was the first major manufacturer to make such a bold move. The same announcement has now been made by Jaguar Land Rover, which will manufacture only electric or hybrid vehicles from 2020.
955 Toyota and Lexus will offer every single model it produces as an electric option from 2025. What emerges is that every manufacturer is following suit and the electric technology will soon be the mainstream. The internal combustion engine is not dead yet but it is dying as the propulsion mechanism for private vehicles.

960 In the circumstances, the Government will implement the following measures. Vehicle registrations for private vehicles powered solely by internal combustion engines will be prohibited in Gibraltar by 1st July 2030. In other words, as from that date every vehicle registered in Gibraltar will have to be at least a hybrid. Additionally, vehicle registrations for private vehicles powered in any measure by an internal combustion engine fuelled by diesel will be prohibited by the same date, 1st July 2030. That means that diesel hybrids will not be 965 registrable in Gibraltar as from that date in 2030. Only hybrids where the internal combustion engine element is not fuelled by diesel will be registrable in Gibraltar as from that date. Both of these measures apply as much to new vehicles as to second-hand vehicles being registered for the first time in Gibraltar as from 1st July 2030. As from 1st July 2035, Gibraltar will only allow the registration of fully electric vehicles where the propulsion of the vehicle does not in any way

970 rely on the internal combustion engine, whether fuelled by diesel or unleaded petrol. None of these measures will apply to classic vehicles, as already defined in our laws. Although these dates are far in the future, it is important that we legislate now so people understand the effect of the choices they are making for the future.

975 Additionally, for the next 36 months, any individual taxpayer who installs a mechanism for the electric charging of a vehicle in their home or in a parking space or garage owned by them will be able to deduct the first £2,000 of cost approved by the Commissioner of Income Tax of the installation of such mechanism against their tax liabilities.

980 With immediate effect, duty on diesel engines under 1495cc will be an additional 10% on top of the duty that would otherwise have been payable on importation. The Collector will ensure that any vehicles already bought or on order are not covered by this application of this provision.

At present, hybrid vehicles do not pay duty unless they are imported privately, where they attract 5% duty. Hybrids are presently also eligible for a cashback of £1,000. Full electric vehicles pay no duty, irrespective of how they are imported, and are eligible for a cashback now of £1,750. This also applies to electric forklifts. In order to further encourage the purchase and full use of electric vehicles, the cashback on hybrids is now reduced to £250 per vehicle, although the Import Duty will remain at zero; the cashback on full electric vehicles is increased to £2,500 and the Import Duty will remain at zero; a new cashback incentive of £150 is introduced for full electric motorbikes; and a new cashback incentive of £200 is introduced for electrically assisted bicycles without a throttle, where the electric engine cuts off at a speed of 25 kilometres per hour.

Finally in relation to motor vehicles, the importation of non-classic used cars into Gibraltar does not assist the object of seeking that the fleet of vehicles in Gibraltar should be the most modern and environmentally friendly possible. As a result, the importation of a used vehicle will attract the same duty whether it is imported by an individual or a dealer and will remain as it is today for individual importations, not dealer importations.

995

I want to thank the Hon. Paul Balban and former Member of this House Selwyn Figueras for their diligent work in the development of the measure relating to electrically powered bicycles, which is designed to make cycling attractive even for those in our community who have to negotiate hills in their use – a demonstration that bygone political differences need not prevent us from working together in future in the common interest of our community.

Mr Speaker, the debate on paper versus plastic, or at least the legacy problems caused by recklessly using single-use plastics, is something that has rightly been brought to the fore by programmes like the BBC's excellent Blue Planet and Sky's Ocean Rescue campaign. This Government has always advocated renewables and concern for how our actions affect the planet that we will bequeath future generations. In that context, I note that disposable paper products are presently being charged at a higher duty of 12% than plastic disposable products, which are presently charged at 6%. Given what we now know about the effect of single-use plastics on our oceans and on our planet generally, this cannot be right. As a result, the Government will eliminate Import Duty on disposable paper products such as paper straws, plates, cups, disposable paper bags and sacks. We will, with immediate effect, also increase duty on their plastic disposable equivalents to 200%. The duty on biodegradable plastic bags at the same time will be halved.

Mr Speaker, there have been no major revisions to duty on spirits, cider and other alcoholic beverages since 2010, some eight years ago. Indeed, in respect of some of these the last review has not occurred since 1997. In inflation terms alone this means that duty on these products is out of place with price rises. Accordingly, from midnight tonight, duty changes will apply in respect of different alcohols in different ways.

Duty on cider, shandy and fermented beverages has not been increased since 1997. The duty rates are somewhat confused, with cider attracting 7p duty per litre whilst other drinks with less than 5% alcohol, such as shandy, attract duty at 14p per litre. I propose to rationalise all that at one rate and catch up with inflation such that duty on these products increases to 21p per litre. This duty increase equates to a 53% increase, in keeping with inflation since the last increase.

1025 Duty on bottled mixtures of beverages of an alcoholic strength by volume not exceeding 15% will be increased by 17p per litre, from 33p per litre to 50p per litre. Duty on American whiskey and bourbon is increased to £2 per litre.

1030 And finally, no doubt to the disappointment of champagne socialists everywhere, the duty on sparkling wines and champagne will be increased by 31p per litre, from 69p per litre to £1 per litre. I said it was a Brexit Budget, Mr Speaker! These latter two increases will bring duty to £1 per litre, having the effect of equalising the duty on these alcoholic beverages and making them double the duty on wine at 50p per litre, which duty will remain static.

1035 Mr Speaker, continuing on the theme of our commitment to education and to deliver advances for every generation in our small nation, it strikes me as inconsistent that electronic equipment such as iPads and gaming equipment such as PlayStations etc. do not pay duty whereas products for our very youngest, such as educational electronic equipment, pay duty at 3%. As from today, duty on such products is eliminated.

1040 The Government considers that it is in the wider public interest to promote investment in private sector medical practices that serve many in our community. As a result, all instruments and appliances used in the medical, surgical, dental and veterinary sciences, including sight testing equipment, will no longer attract Import Duty.

1045 It is important for the continuing development of Gibraltar as an attractive retail centre for us to promote the sale from Gibraltar of high-end products that can be alluring to tourists and residents alike. We have done a lot of work already in the Import Duty reductions we have implemented to date. In the circumstances, and upon the representations of some highly reputable and established traders, the duty on handbags is eliminated.

1050 The Collector of Customs and his team carry out a large number of functions for this community and their volume of work has increased exponentially. There are quite a number of areas where this work is visible and others where it is less visible. I therefore propose allowing the Collector and his team to charge a fee for some of this work.

1055 Vehicle valuations are quite laborious and at present no fee is charged by Customs. I therefore now impose a fee of £50 per valuation, which will apply as from tomorrow.

1060 Landing certificates are presently charged for at the rate established some 30 years ago of £10 per certificate. Despite inflation for the period being higher, I propose to only increase the fee to £20 per certificate. That increase does not even catch up with the inflation for the period but makes the fee a more relevant one in today's money.

1065 I have received a number of representations to consider doing something about the duty we levy on bingos that are organised on behalf of a charity to help raise funds for a charity. These charities are exempt from most taxes and therefore feel the imposition of a duty on bingo hampers their ability to raise funds for those worthy causes in this way. I therefore propose to eliminate duty in respect of bingos where they are organised by a registered charity and the proceeds are to be used for the purposes of that charity. Duty on bingos is also abolished if organised for and by the residents on a not-for-profit basis in the common areas of Bishop Canilla House, Charles Bruzon House, Albert Risso House and Seamaster Lodge or at the Senior Citizens' Club in Town Range – its president will no doubt be delighted – or the South District Senior Citizens' Club at Naval Hospital Road.

1070 Mr Speaker, in order to assist with the cost of doing business in Gibraltar and in keeping with our manifesto commitment, electricity and water charges will not be increased this year. General rates payable by businesses will also remain unchanged and discounts for the early payment of rates will continue to apply. In the retail and distributive trades and in respect of catering establishments, the discount granted for early payment is increased from the 30% presently enjoyed to 50%.

1075 The Statutory Minimum Wage was increased to £6.45 with effect from 1st August 2017. The Statutory Minimum Wage would increase only marginally by 16p to £6.61 in line with the latest annual rate of inflation that stood at 2.5% in April 2018. This increase would do little to promote economic growth and would unfairly keep the minimum wage below where we believe it should 1080 have settled given the GDP growth that is being experienced in this community. In the United Kingdom this year the minimum wage for over-25s has gone up by 4.4%. In the circumstances, in Gibraltar the National Minimum Wage will be increased by 4.5% or 30p an hour to £6.75. As a result, the minimum wage will have increased by just shy of 25% in our seven years in office. I can remember when I was a boy and the money sometimes was not as long as the week. I therefore commend this increase in the minimum wage to the House and to the whole of our community. We must walk in the shoes of those on the minimum wage as much as we must factor other matters into our calculation of what this fundamental parameter of our economy should be.

1085 Mr Speaker, each of the measures I have announced to date have been prepared with Brexit in mind. These are measures which open us up more for more business or new business or which have another reason I have explained behind a decrease or increase which is being applied. We have to be ready if things go well and for our position to continue to be one of growth and improved economic data. Additionally, we have to be prepared also in the event that Brexit does not go well – not because we think it will not, but because we have to be ready 1090 for that eventuality.

As a result, the Government has to take certain steps to rebalance the economy in the light of the imponderable aspects of what we could face from the next financial year on. For us, the most important aspect of that rebalancing is the protection of the public sector, a sector in which the Gibraltarians are the dominant nationality and which is dependent on the revenue 1095 yield from private sector activity and employment levels.

The sustainability aspect requires that to protect our public sector workers we contain the cost of the public sector payroll and start reducing the gap between the higher and lower paid in the public sector and between the public and private sectors generally. In order to do so, public sector pay will go up this year by the lower of 2.5% of the individual's pay rate or 60p an hour. In 1100 effect, this 60p per hour cap on the pay rise will kick in on basic salaries over £46,000 per annum. Even at those levels, the increase will considerably exceed average inflation.

Under the former administration we also saw the expansion of the public sector with the creation of many companies, agencies and authorities outside of the pay structure of the Civil Service and we saw many relativities between grades altered without any reasonable logic. To 1105 that effect, the Government will engage external reviewers to undertake an exercise to review senior public sector salaries and relativities in Gibraltar. The last such review was carried out by Bunkle and Roberts in 1983. All of the structural changes that have occurred since then have created myriad distortions that altered differentials and a review is now once again required. For the avoidance of doubt, whatever the recommendations of that review may be, no existing 1110 officers' salaries will be affected. All will continue to receive at least their existing salaries until retirement, whatever the recommendations of the review are.

As I reminded the House last year, the Government is committed to reform of the Social Insurance funds. However, amending these funds is not advisable at this point given the options available to Government may be greater once the UK and Gibraltar have left the EU. It is 1115 nonetheless important and responsible to recognise the reality that the system needs to be rebalanced. It is presently being balanced by relying on an annual advance from Government. It is neither right nor prudent for the Government to absorb this ever-expanding gap between the contributions received by the fund and the payments made. We therefore cannot ignore this problem until the eventual reform.

1120 Mr Speaker, with your indulgence and in the interests of transparency that others keep encouraging upon me, I will take a moment to explain to the House how the Statutory Benefits

1125 Fund works because it is a fund that sits in the background with few understanding it fully – save for my hon. colleague the Father of the House, who keeps a very watchful and keen eye over it. The fund, however, impacts on all of us, from those working to those in our community who have contributed to it over their working lives and are now retired, and to those who unfortunately, because of their circumstances, may need to rely on it.

1130 During the last year, after increasing contributions by 10%, the share of contributions collected, based on draft figures, was around £30 million and Government provided a further £7 million from the Consolidated Fund, which combined with other revenue received took the total contribution to the fund to £38.2 million. In the same period, old age pensions paid were £34.1 million with the balance of other payments of circa £4.1 million taking the total to £38.2 million. These £4 million represent payments of costs and other key benefits provided to those most vulnerable in our society, such as Disability Benefit, Unemployment Benefit, Widow's and Parent's Allowances etc.

1135 Hon. Members will therefore see that, despite that increase in contributions last year, the expense has kept increasing, despite Government's best endeavours. Just going back briefly to 2008-09, only nine years ago, the old age pensions paid amounted to £15.5 million, or half of what they are this year. Total benefits and costs paid were £19.1 million. That is literally exactly half of the £38.2 million we are dealing with this year when we have paid 100% more. And yet in 1140 that period in the increases in Social Insurance payments there have been no more than 10% increases. Whilst the increase in payments is staggering, it is to be expected. It is not of anyone's doing but reflects the care we provide for our elderly through the GHA and other social services and the fact that people are living longer. As an example of this, in 2009 there were 8,213 1145 persons eligible to draw a pension and a widow's pension, whereas by March 2018 the figure has increased to 11,693 persons, and of course the amount of the pension payment has increased in line with inflation. It is a positive fact of life that people are living longer and successive Governments have tried to help those most vulnerable who need this assistance. Who in a civilised society would argue otherwise?

1150 The responsible thing to do is therefore to ensure this fund is properly funded. The irresponsible thing to do is to suggest we somehow cut payments or benefits to pensioners or the vulnerable or ask that we should not increase the contributions and that the wider taxpayer base should meet the expense. In order to pre-empt the proposition that Government or the wider taxpayer is not shouldering enough of the cost, it is clear that we are in fact already doing so. It is clear that the Government's direct contribution from the Consolidated Fund has 1155 remained static at £7 million over the last few years. It would not be true to say the Government has not put its shoulder to the wheel to meet the cost.

1160 In order to understand this, one needs to understand what happens to Social Insurance payments. When paid, these are split two ways, part going to fund healthcare – the GHA – with the balance going to the Statutory Benefits Fund. Last year when we increased contributions in Social Insurance payments we also moved the allocation from 70% to fund healthcare, to 65% to fund healthcare. This means that the decrease arising from this shift, of some £5 million, has been met by Government as it needs to find this shortfall in the additional contribution to the GHA. We therefore think it is equitable for employers and employees to also meet their share of funding this cost.

1165 It is therefore, of course, with some reluctance, but also with the burden of understanding that this is the right and responsible thing to do if we believe in universal healthcare and the welfare state, that I have to today announce an increase of 10% to Social Insurance contributions. I also announce a shift in contributions from 65% being ultimately directed to the GHA to 60% being directed to GHA, thereby having Government contributing further to the fund 1170 and absorbing some of the costs of the increase directly also.

Mr Speaker, as you know, the Government continues to engage with the Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Small Businesses to appraise them of these matters and welcomes their understanding of the need for no doubt unwelcome but necessary increases in Social Insurance. In future, under the system that we expect to be able to implement, contributions will be expected to increase only by inflation each year.

The effect of the changes announced is this: employee contributions will increase at a maximum by £2.75 per week, from £27.50 to £30.25; married women's contributions will increase by £1.45 per week, from £14.50 to £15.95; employers' contributions will increase at the maximum by £3.65 per week, from £36.50 to £40.15; and self-employed contributions will increase at a maximum by £3.35 per week, from £33.5 to £36.85.

At the same time and in pursuance of the Government's continued commitment to reduce the level of personal taxation, especially for the lower paid members of our community, with effect from 1st July taxpayers with assessable income of £11,200 or less will be brought out of the taxation system altogether and will pay no Income Tax. This measure applies as much to taxpayers in both the Allowance Based System as it does to the Gross Income Based System and represents a further increase in this threshold which we have steadily increased since we were first elected, when it stood at £8,000. We have delivered increases in respect of this of £3,200, or 40% more, to bring more and more of the low paid out of the tax burden.

Also in accordance with our manifesto commitment, taxpayers under the Allowance Based System will benefit from an increase in their Personal Allowances which is at least in line with inflation. As a result, with effect from 1st July the following allowances will increase: the Personal Allowance will increase from £3,300 to £3,385; the Spouse and Civil Partners Allowance will increase from £3,300 to £3,385; the One Parent Family Allowance will increase from £5,435 to £5,575; the Nursery Allowance will increase from £5,160 to £5,290; the Child Allowance will increase from £1,135 to £1,165; the Child Studying Abroad Allowance will increase from £1,290 to £1,325; the Dependant Relatives Allowance where the relative is resident in Gibraltar will increase from £301 to £325, and where the relative is resident outside Gibraltar will increase from £210 to £215; the Blind Allowance will increase from £5,155 to £5,285; and the Medical Insurance Allowance will increase from £5,155 to £5,285.

Mr Speaker, last year, as a result of a confusion between the Disability Allowance and the Disability Benefit – where both ended up being called the same thing, an 'allowance' – the Disability Benefit was not increased. This year, to address that, the Disability Benefit reverts to its old nomenclature. A lump sum representing the annualised amount for last year's inflationary rise will be paid immediately to all who were in receipt of it last year, prorated for whatever portion of the year they were entitled to the payment. This year, the benefit will increase by the rate of inflation also.

The old age pension will also increase in line with inflation.

Mr Speaker, at present, companies with tax losses are only able to use those losses against future profits. At present, these losses can be used within the business so long as there is no change of ownership and a change of business within a period of three years. The problems that some large groups are experiencing is that they cannot carry out restructures of their business, as once they transfer the business out to another group company the tax loss is effectively lost. In order to facilitate group restructures, which are increasingly common with some of the consolidations we are seeing across various sectors, I propose that the Finance Bill will include changes to allow the transfer of such losses on restructures so long as there is no change of ultimate ownership and a change of business within a period of three years. The changes will therefore allow losses to be carried forward against a business, even if the business is transferred to another company under the same ultimate ownership. The legislation will include a series of anti-abuse provisions so that such transfer is only allowed in the case of legitimate group restructures. It should specifically not allow for the use of accumulated losses of one type of business to be offset against future profits of a different type of business.

Comments have been made erroneously suggesting that changes to the Damages Act may be unfair on the basis that awardees of damages may not be able to plan or provide for their long-

1225 term care. We do not consider these to be correct. In order, nonetheless, to provide support to those in these very difficult and sometimes tragic situations, the Government will direct the Gibraltar Savings Bank to create a product or bond to allow awardees of sums paid from personal injury claims or death, including death in service payments and insurance payments 1230 arising from the death of a spouse, the same interest rates as if they were retired persons and therefore eligible to invest any such sum received in such a product, thereby availing themselves of the higher interest rates that are offered by the Gibraltar Savings Bank. This will be a special bond for such a purpose only.

1235 The conditions to be satisfied before moneys can be accepted by the Savings Bank for such accounts to attract pensioner rates are as follows. The investment is to be limited to the amount of the award from personal injury or death and interest thereon. The applicant for the account opening must be the awardee or next of kin in cases of death. In both cases the individuals must be – including the deceased in cases of death, who must have been – Gibraltar residents to be eligible for the treatment. Payments must be made by an insurance company or the employer or must be amounts paid by a defendant in settlement of a claim awarded by the Supreme Court of Gibraltar. Payments must be certified as complying with this criteria by the Commissioner of 1240 Income Tax.

1245 Mr Speaker, the Government I lead developed affordable housing in keeping with the principles set out by the first GSLP administration. The lease used, however, was modelled on the lease created by the party of Members opposite whilst they were in power. That allows an element of speculation which is not, in our view, in keeping with the objective of providing homes for our people which are not designed to be used for speculation but for owner occupation. These affordable housing properties, at Beach View Terraces and Mons Calpe Mews, have been sold to original purchasers at cost price – that is to say the cost to build the property based on the area of each individual property without factoring in the value of the land or the cost of relevant infrastructure. However, the cost has been well below the increase in the 1250 market values of these properties due to the rising values generally of residential property in Gibraltar. This, amongst other factors, has enabled some original purchasers to market the sale of these affordable homes for very large profits whilst the taxpayer would see almost no profit from the resale of properties in these developments. That is not fair on the taxpayer at large, on those on the waiting list for new homes or on those who have not been able to buy affordable 1255 properties.

Government is therefore considering all options available to it under the terms of the under-lease for these estates in order to curtail the levels of profits which will be made on resales in the early years of ownership of these properties. As a result, to catch those who may be seeking to flip these properties, as from today the sale of any property sold as an affordable home for and on behalf of the Government in the last four years – that is to say properties at Beach View Terraces and Mons Calpe Mews – will attract a new Special Stamp Duty for the period until 10 years have expired from the original purchase of the property by the original purchaser of 7.5% of the total sale price calculated with regard to the property sale price and any other payment passing from the purchaser to the vendor, whether in respect of fixtures, fittings or any 1260 other payments whatsoever connected with the transfer of the property. This new Special Stamp Duty is not deductible in arriving at the calculation of profit under the trust deed.

1265 The Special Stamp Duty will not apply in circumstances of a forced sale, including in cases of marriage or relationship breakdown, which circumstances will be certified by the Government's Land Management Committee and administered by Land Property Services for the Government.
1270 The Special Stamp Duty will also not apply if a family moves to a larger property as a meritorious upgrader to another, newer, Government affordable housing scheme. And the Special Stamp Duty will not apply to the sale of any part of the Government's equity sold where the Government has retained a share of the equity in the property.

1275 Mr Speaker, housing rents have gone up by 3% this year also. That is about 0.5% above inflation and only the second time in 35 years that rents have gone up. The increase will provide an additional about £90,000 to the Government in respect of income. As a result, anyone who might have been foolish enough to suggest that this increase will in some way go to pay the £300 million financing package we secured for Gibraltar would not be very good at mathematics.
Indeed, they would have egg all over their face if they had been foolish enough to tweet such 1280 nonsense. In fact, when we made provision for these increases, Members opposite said nothing in this House other than the remarks of the current Leader of the Opposition. He remarked that the rent increases proposed were too small or too little to have any effect. Action for Housing welcomed the increases last time and the Ombudsman had actually called for them. So it would be utter populism for Members opposite to now somehow try to create a bandwagon to ride on 1285 which sought to roll against small or modest or little increases which are outpaced by the hourly increase in the minimum wage. That is to say the increases are on average in the region of the increase in one hour of the minimum wage: more than proportionate and modest.

Finally, I am happy to announce that after considerable public consternation about the availability of tickets last year, this year's Christmas Lottery first prize is going to be £1 million.
1290 Double the number of tickets available last year will go on general sale on Wednesday.

Mr Speaker, I want to take this opportunity on behalf of myself and all Members of the Government, and I am sure the whole House, to thank you, the Clerk and all members of your staff for your assistance this year in the discharge of my functions as Leader of the House. You have all been your usual patient and kind selves. Thank you.

1295 I also want to take this moment to thank my Cabinet colleagues, all of them, for their support throughout this year, and in addition record my thanks also to the Chief Secretary, the Attorney General, the Financial Secretary and the Chief Technical Officer for their indefatigable hard work in support of the Government's policy objectives. They are all truly indefatigable. These are extraordinary times and they are the extraordinary people that I have been able to count on 1300 every minute of every day to deliver for Gibraltar in each of their areas when it has mattered most. Team Gibraltar, Mr Speaker!

Behind this debate and the presentation of the numbers in a graphic and more intelligible format are Ernest Tomsett, Susie Gonzalez, Nancy Reyes, Karl Lima and Charles Santos, as well as many others who make it possible for us to account with such complete transparency and clarity 1305 to this House and to taxpayers generally. I do not think people realise how much care and diligence they put into ensuring that the numbers we report are entirely accurate. I must also extend similar thanks to all others at the Ministry of Finance and Her Majesty's Treasury. I thank them on behalf of the whole nation for their precise and careful work.

And of course my team and the Press Office, the A-Team at No. 6 who serve the Chief 1310 Minister of the day and ensure that, whatever happens, I have a smile on my face every day and we get Gibraltar's message out to the world – whether we are leaving the EU or joining it, whoever is in power in Spain and whatever other challenges the world may throw in our political direction, nothing phases my No. 6 team. Thanks to all of them for their genuine human support to me in these Brexit days.

1315 Mr Speaker, I have political responsibility for other Departments which I have not gone through in detail today. I have been required, because of the juncture in which we find ourselves, to analyse some areas in greater depth than others. I do not want to keep the House for longer than I have to. It is also unfair for me not to report on the excellent work which is being done in Customs, in the Drug and Alcohol Services, in the Civil Status and Registration 1320 Office, in Industrial Relations and Public Sector HR and in the Borders and Coastguard Agency and indeed to explain more deeply what is happening in the Income Tax Office and the Central Arrears Unit. I will therefore leave a detailed paper before the House when I sit down that will set out the progress in these departmental areas also. (See Appendix 1)

1325 I would highlight one thing, and that is the sad loss in one Department in service this year of a young customs officer, Neil Piñero, who passed away on active duty at the age of 30. The Government is considering with the Collector of Customs how best to ensure that he is adequately remembered.

1330 Well, Mr Speaker, as I said when I rose to speak some two hours ago, this is a Brexit Budget, and there are two ways of doing a Brexit Budget: one is sheer austerity; the other is the socialist way. Our way is investment to stimulate continued growth, investment in public services to ensure that the public services that our citizens and business require are there to be provided in health and care, in education, in the provision of welfare for the most vulnerable in our community, in sport and in housing. This is a Brexit Budget which will not rely on austerity measures. There are no cuts here. It will rely instead on investment as the necessary stimulus for
1340 an excellent result for generations to come. We were not found wanting and we did not fail Gibraltar. We did not put our personal interests or egos first. We have had no regard for our political interests at all. We have ceded nothing of our red lines. We will give nothing away on our sovereignty but we will continue to deliver the prosperous future that we must ensure is there for our children. To do that, to guarantee that and to have the peace of mind that we will 1345 not falter, we must take some measures to fine tune and rebalance. In doing so, we demonstrate that we were ready for the challenge and up to the demands of this historic moment in the affairs of our nation. Whilst keyboard warriors criticised from the comfort of their keyboards, we were out in the real world fighting Gibraltar’s corner.

1350 Mr Speaker, for Gibraltar Brexit may be almost over. In nine months we will have left the European Union, but in partnership with Britain, we have navigated these stormy waters carefully and successfully. We have trimmed our sails when we have had to and we have run our engines full steam ahead when we have deemed that we had to. This was the moment of our date with Brexit destiny and it was the moment when we looked destiny in the eye and we were equal to her task and challenge. Our time of reckoning came, but few reckon with the 1355 Gibraltarian!

This is a Brexit Budget, but a Budget for Brexit success: a careful four-way balance between caution and optimism, between prudence and investment, but a Brexit Budget that requires no cuts and no austerity thanks to the way we have delivered success and growth in the past seven years in office, just prudent measures to ensure that we are match fit for our departure from the 1360 European union – prudent measures because, despite our surpluses, we have to ensure we remain able to discharge all our responsibilities with surpluses to come in future too.

That is what is required of the modern, mature, post-colonial Gibraltar, building on the work of all the others who have come before us and 30 years after a Gibraltarian first took the financial reins. Thirty years after we moved from an economy of dependence we move to an age of self-awareness that sees us with the self-confidence to succeed in new markets in the digital 1365 economy – and our view is that greater success awaits, but it must be worked for because there will be no free ride, no space for freeloaders, nowhere to hide for those who want to skive their way out of pulling their weight, because the challenge of Brexit is there for all of us, not some of us, and as we leave the European Union that is the challenge for the future.

1370 And so today, Mr Speaker, I want to end my remarks exactly as another socialist Chief Minister did in 1989, when we faced other challenges, by telling the House that the Budget I am presenting today, the Estimates of Expenditure, the commitment to infrastructure, is an indication that we are meeting that challenge head on, with determination, with commitment, with hard work and with confidence of success.

1375 Thank you, Mr Speaker. I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1380 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, this is my third Budget contribution and my first as Parliamentary Leader of the Opposition. It is a privilege and a great honour to lead the Opposition in this House on behalf of the people of Gibraltar.

Before I get on to the substance of my address we must, of course, recognise the work of the Clerk of the House Paul Martinez, Frances, Kevin, Daniel and of course you, Mr Speaker.

1385 I would also like to echo the words of the Chief Minister in his address in respect of the comments in relation to Calpe House. We also from this side of the House wish the trustees well.

1390 Mr Speaker, if I may, and before setting out our stall, we have an initial observation as to the description of this year's Budget. The Chief Minister describes the so-called Budget as a Brexit Budget. I have to hand it to him. The Hon. Chief Minister, in our estimation, is a consummate spin doctor, but the merry-go-round has finally halted and the music has stopped. People have stopped trusting him, the buzz words are falling on deaf ears, and whoever he pays to write his speeches for him will soon be out of a job. The public are no fools. This is not a Brexit Budget; this is a Big Lie Budget. The Chief Minister claims to be prudent, he claims to be cautious, he claims to be a safe pair of hands. We have heard him say in his address that he spends wisely. He even sets up a department for public efficiency to create the illusion that our money – the people's money – is safer in his hands. Mr Speaker, this is all part of the Big Lie Budget. The direct evidence for this is the Chief Minister's so-called revolution in education. The fact of the matter is that the £52 million contract for the two secondary schools at Waterport is not included in this year's estimates. Why not? Let's not forget that the contract does not include the fitting out of the two schools and therefore the costs of the new secondary schools are very likely to exceed £75 million. How can this be a Brexit Budget when trucks are hurtling down Waterport laden with materials, the deafening sound of the thuds of the machinery operating 24/7 at enormous cost to the public? The project is devoid of any real consultation from those who will actually use those schools. Embarrassingly then, he then jokes to anyone who would care to listen, foreign MPs or whoever, that even the Opposition complain that they are moving too fast – and he repeated it again in his address this morning.

1400 There is nothing remotely Brexit about this Budget, Mr Speaker. The Chief Minister, as we well know, is a big spender and his Cabinet the biggest cheerleaders of spending our money. The GSLP-Liberal Government are penny wise, pound foolish. It has finally dawned on the hon. Gentleman that he has been reckless with our money. It took him seven years of spend, spend, spend, and now the public, the taxpayer, businesses and indeed future generations will be saddled with debts, debts and more debts that he has created whilst he and his Government attempt, in a desperate scramble, to spin this as a consequence of Brexit. We do not accept this and neither do the people listening or watching this debate. He talked about in his contribution of seven straight years of GDP growth at 10% year on year, unprecedented levels of growth. He forgets to mention unprecedented levels of debt.

1410 Mr Speaker, in 2011 the GSLP-Liberal Alliance were elected on their now infamous 'Time for Change' or 'New Dawn' manifesto, promising all things to all men. To their credit, and as anyone who has been charged with the huge responsibility of administering the public affairs of Gibraltar, there are several projects and initiatives which we ourselves, as servants of the people of our community, have welcomed. We have been constructive when we have needed to be and we have been robustly critical in areas where we strongly hold the belief that this community has been and is being taken in the wrong direction. One such striking example is the management and administration of our public finances. Everyone understands the message: it is your money and the Government must properly and transparently account for what they are doing with your money. The issue is even more acute now because it is clear to our community that the Government is parking most of its debt off balance sheet and intentionally hiding the true level of our debt from the people.

1430 I now turn to make the position of Her Majesty's Opposition abundantly clear. Mr Speaker, we will not vote in favour of this Budget because it fails to present a clear, transparent, accurate and unambiguous reflection of the state of our public finances. We consider it a gross dereliction of our duty as representatives of this community to condone and support a Budget which is fundamentally opaque and which handcuffs elected representatives from properly and effectively scrutinising the public finances of this community.

1435 It will no doubt be said in reply that voting against the Budget is repugnant, wrong and we will suffer detriment by playing into the hands of Gibraltar's enemies. What utter nonsense, Mr Speaker. Nothing could be further from the truth. No one buys that juvenile, playground argument. It is true that parliamentary practice/convention has meant that the Opposition has traditionally voted in favour of the Budget, but as the Chief Minister was at pains to teach me 1440 for oppositions to vote against budgets; it happens the world over. There are, in our view, very good reasons to depart from this perceived practice. Mr Speaker, the point is this: we, the Opposition, do not know how the public's money is being spent, and in any event we disagree with what they are spending it on.

1445 Mr Speaker, 2017-18 has been the Chief Minister's annus horribilis; 2018-19 is shaping up to be no better for him – oh, well, all good things must come to an end. The Chief Minister is living off borrowed time. I am not fond of quoting rappers in this House, but I could not resist this one. When the Chief Minister and his Ministers are all sat in the VVIP Government enclosure at the GMF this year, they should reflect very carefully to their headliner Stormzy's warning in his catchy lyrics: 'You're getting way too big for your boots... You're never too big for the boot.'

1450 The Chief Minister's so-called 2015 'Strongest Foundation' is suffering significant structural damage, resulting no doubt from the inherent weak foundations upon which it was built. Brexit is now becoming the excuse for our woes and we have been treated this morning to a Brexit Budget – or, as we like to call it, the Big Lie Budget.

1455 Mr Speaker, it is clear that the Chief Minister no longer has his finger on the pulse of this community and the day-to-day issues that affect hardworking families. Domestic issues have been, in the main, ignored using the Brexit excuse. I have heard it being said that the hon. Gentleman's focus must be on Brexit, but the world did not stop turning on 23rd June 2016 and we must carry on.

1460 The hon. Gentleman is haemorrhaging support and, although not yet on life support, the Government's condition is serious. The Government are failing to address the serious concerns of working families, the vulnerable and, importantly, young people. Last year the Chief Minister promised a Budget designed with prudence in mind to support working families, young people and the elderly and disabled. He has not achieved that objective.

1465 In the Opposition contributions to the debate on the Appropriation Bill each of us will deal with their respective shadow responsibilities. In particular, our Shadow Public Finance Minister, the Hon. Roy Clinton, will address and present in granular detail the numbers, whilst the Hon. Mr Feetham will chart the historic context which has led us to the current financial position that our community finds itself in.

1470 Mr Speaker, we have a duty to the people that elected us to hold the Government to account, particularly at Budget time. The debate on the Appropriation Bill fails entirely to provide the public with an accurate, comprehensive and transparent account of our public finances. The Government have, in seven years, consistently denigrated and destroyed any form of oversight of our public finances, hidden debt from public view, evaded answering detailed questions on public finances from the Opposition and created a system where this House is 1475 incapable of properly and effectively subjecting the management of our public finances by the Government to parliamentary scrutiny.

1480 To all those who will tune in across our community to listen or watch this debate from home or work, I am sorry to have to say to each one of them that there is very little we can do as your elected Opposition to uncover the mass of hidden debt which will hang round the necks of our children and grandchildren for generations to come. But there are some indicators, even from the slither of information that the Government has provided.

1490 Mr Speaker, to our community money coming in is down, the cost of running Gibraltar is going up, debt is rising and our money at the bank is down. The Government is clearly not on target to honour their promise to the people to get net public debt below £300 million. The Hon. Roy Clinton will, in detail, assess the consequences of these startling figures, but it is clear that for the first time the GSLP-Liberal Government will be running a deficit and for the first time the donation to Community Care will be at its lowest. The headline figures I have presented show a critically worrying trend.

1495 Mr Speaker, it is important sometimes to actually reflect on what the Chief Minister said in the New Dawn Manifesto 2011. When we were in Government, the Hon. Fabian Picardo, Leader of the Opposition as he was then, said:

On the GSD Government's own figures, we are already at least £480 million in debt in terms of Gross Debt. Gross Debt is the relevant figure for analysis of national debt that you would see referred to in any publication considering the national debt of any country. That works out to £16,000 per man, woman and child in Gibraltar. In 1996, the figure was £3,000 per man, woman and child. The GSD then referred to that level of debt (which it has now quintupled) as a 'millstone round the necks of future Gibraltarians'.

1500 Fast forward to 2018-19: we have a situation where approximately 65% of indirect debt is now hidden from public scrutiny. The change to the legal debt limit and the overreliance on the debt-GDP ratio instead of linking debt with revenue coupled with hidden debt of massive proportions, indicates to all concerned that the picture being presented by the Government as to the true level of public debt is entirely false and misleading.

1515 Mr Speaker, moving from the debt position, the result of Spain's vote of no confidence motion has provided our community with a renewed hope that the new Spanish government will be more receptive to our position. Although the dust is settling on the formation of a new Spanish government, we remain hopeful that dialogue and co-operation for the benefit of our community and the wider Campo will prevail.

1520 We have been very clear as to what our vision is for Gibraltar and that we would be seeking to achieve: (1) A restoration of the trilateral process of discussion – bilateralism on matters that affect Gibraltar is unacceptable and in that process of discussion there would have to be a realistic discussion to seek to achieve Gibraltar's objectives without making any concessions on sovereignty, jurisdiction and control; (2) freedom of movement of the border; (3) single market access. We continue to press the Government for the restoration of the trilateral forum with the United Kingdom and the Kingdom of Spain to ensure that our rights, wishes and interests are fully protected in the context of Brexit.

1525 Mr Speaker, because it is in the interests of Gibraltar as a whole, we have consistently and regularly communicated our position in that we stand ready to assist. Briefings of the nature we have received do very little to persuade those on this side of the House that the Chief Minister is interested in seeking our views on the challenges that we face as a community. The public expects both Government and Opposition to work together in order to ensure the best possible 1530 outcome for the people of Gibraltar. Briefings to the Opposition are infrequent and contain limited information which soon is released in the public domain – hardly working together.

Turning to my more specific responsibilities: industrial relations – it has been a year of industrial strife for the Chief Minister and his colleagues on that side of the House. The last 12 months have been a very low point for the Government in the handling of its industrial 1535 relations. The uncertainty of the future of the contract for municipal cleaning services continued until the end of last week, and who could forget the brandishing of signs calling for an end to uncertainty by the GGCA and its Master Services members? We have all heard the pre-Budget announcement of the award of the cleaning contract, Mr Speaker. We will closely follow this award and subject it to the closest possible scrutiny before comment.

1540 The last 12 months have also seen the GHA workforce of 400 strong staging a walkout over its longstanding concerns regarding the reliance on supply workers. Its ‘Enough is Enough’ campaign sent a clear and loud message that morale within the service was hitting an all-time low within the GHA. It is clear to many within our community that the use of supply workers is privatisation through the back door. It will be recalled that in the 2011 General Election the 1545 GSLP-Liberal manifesto stated:

Government work and services will be carried out by direct labour which includes employees in related entities on Government pay and conditions. There will be no privatisation of Government departments.

Last month the Borders and Coastguards took industrial action on the Frontier over a similar issue and the use of supply labour. And the related Medoc/Grand Home saga is a story which keeps on giving. Concerns are now being raised in the community and highlighted in relation to Mount Alvernia and its relationship with Medoc.

1550 Mr Speaker, we have described the level of contract workers in the public service as unprecedented. The effect cannot be underestimated: 39% of the total labour force is employed via recruitment consultants or agencies.

The Opposition has been asking questions of the Government in relation to the use of companies to recruit parallel labour or supply workers into different sectors of the public service 1555 for a long time now. The practice of recruiting parallel permanent labour or supply workers to work alongside permanent Civil Service or public service posts on different terms is pervasive and one which we say erodes workers’ rights as well as security of employment. Organising your labour force in this way can seriously affect the quality of the service provided to the public.

We have also said that these practices raise serious question marks over accountability, 1560 transparency, quality and value for money in the procurement of public contracts. These are all issues that require serious examination and an overhaul of the way things are done by the Government.

Moving to employment, training and skills, on apprenticeships last year the Chief Minister announced at Budget time the introduction of T-Levels: a year on and nothing further, despite 1565 our questions in this House as to the progress of this policy initiative. In fact, the Chief Minister again did not mention it today in his address. The Government has failed entirely in its commitment to young people and their families in developing a truly inspiring alternative for those who do not wish or are simply unable to take the higher education route. For too long the Government have ignored a loud call for the development of an apprenticeship programme. The 1570 Government continue to ignore the skills deficit and the cliff edge and are blinded to the calls from the unions, the Chamber of Commerce, business, young people and their families.

The failure of the Government's employment policy will have long-lasting consequences beyond their short time in office and we will have to pick up the pieces when the people of this community put them back in their natural habitat of Opposition. This community may forgive the hon. Members for much, but not for the abject failure of the young people of this community and their families. Almost daily we hear from disaffected young people without hope and opportunity because of the Government's failure to tackle skills training and the establishment of a fit-for-purpose apprenticeship programme. He talks about the jobs and lowest unemployment levels – he should speak to those young people stuck in dead-end jobs with no hope.

1580 The Hon. the Father of the House, Sir Joe, has attempted to denigrate our arguments by instructing his staff to write to employers in a desperate attempt to demonstrate that there is no interest in the business community for apprenticeships. I will never share that view of the Father of the House and I never will shy away from telling him that.

1585 The hon. Members Opposite will recall the statement by Playtech's Chief Operating Officer which clearly supports and reinforces our longstanding commitment to investing in our future generations so that they are the first choice for employers now and in the future. The absence of any response to this call by a senior member of our gaming industry demonstrates to those in our community and beyond that we are not serious about investing in our own people.

1590 If we want big business to set up in Gibraltar we need to ensure that our people are trained to do the skilled jobs required by those businesses. The Chief Minister talked about 35 Fintech companies starting in Gibraltar and the professional services that are provided in Gibraltar to support that underlying business, but ultimately we want our people to do those jobs that Fintech are going to bring here and the jobs that they are creating. This is why we have always pressed for an apprenticeship programme that trains young people to obtain those jobs. It requires foresight and it requires proper investment in people where the dividends will be reaped over a long period of time and not by the narrow confines of an electoral cycle.

1595 The Government's non-policy on skills training will leave a lost generation of young people without skills and our position within the global digital economy weakened. It is time for the Government to abandon its Future Job Strategy and adopt proactive policies which position our young people at the forefront of the digital economy.

1600 The Hon. Chief Minister talked about building a successful economy but he fails to understand that fundamentally the success of our community depends on creating better opportunities for young people. In fact, I think the Chief Minister talked about pillars and he said that young people human resources was one pillar. It cannot work by operating the 'plugging the skills gap' policy that the Government are determined in pursuing. Mr Speaker, we need to proactively shape our future by using the human resources available to us rather than reactively plugging the skills gap. We need to continue to focus on supporting start-ups in IT, gaming, software, development of Fintech, to name a few. I remain absolutely convinced that we need to do a lot more to truly harness the human resources we have available in our community.

1605 Many in our community will agree that creating a vibrant environment for Fintech to flourish is good for our economy, but we must ensure that when we encourage these type of start-ups or more evolved business to our shores that we do so safe in the knowledge that we can grow our own talent in partnership with business so that we can become a centre for excellence. Fintech is proving to be a highly competitive environment with many sophisticated jurisdictions moving quickly into that space. In the experience of our gaming industry the longstanding complaint from those companies has traditionally been the lack of skilled workforce – let us not expose ourselves to that type of criticism again, Mr Speaker.

1610 In my political clinics and those of my colleagues, housing is the number-one complaint area. This year we focused a large part of our outreach campaign on meeting with many representatives of the so-called forgotten estates. It is fair to say that after seven years of GSLP administration they feel very disappointed. Laguna Estate is still waiting for 35 lifts to be installed, we have reports of problems at Moorish Castle last week and Varyl Begg has scaffolding erected with little or no work being done on the buildings. The main issue affects thousands and appears to be the never-ending refurbishment and security of our housing estates, which was clearly borne out by the Chief Minister's meeting with residents of Laguna and Glacis as recently as 22nd June.

1630 Mr Speaker, our housing estates are the heart and soul of our community, and seven years on the Government continue to be plagued by inactivity, neglect and failing to get the job done. It is simply unacceptable for the Government to take seven years to complete works to our housing estates. I am sure that we will now have to endure all the excuses under the sun from the Minister and the Chief Minister, where they will no doubt play the blame game once again. The public are bored of their excuses and action must be taken to finish the job that they promised seven years ago.

1635 Recent announcements by the Ministry in relation to the establishing of a Register of Residential Tenancies are in principle, and subject to a comprehensive review, welcomed by those on this side of the House. It is wrong and an abuse for anyone who has, based on the need, has secured a Governmental rental, to rent out that property. The practice is abhorrent and should be stopped. It is equally wrong as a matter of principle that those who derive a rental income from their homes do not declare that income to the Income Tax Department, as it is from those who rent out their homes in breach of the terms of the under-lease.

1640 This, Mr Speaker, is not the time for public statements on how we would deal with housing moving to the future. The GSD has developed a key policy document which, come the next General Election, will be open for the community to consider. For now, we believe that the system is not fit for purpose. We need a radical shake-up and rethink entirely the way in which we allocate Government homes and access to opportunity for Government co-ownership schemes. We will reflect on the Special Stamp Duty in respect of the affordable homes that were purchased over four years and make comment to the public in due course.

1645 I have asked the Minister for Housing and the Chief Minister several times to explain why the Government have not announced the building of homes for rental and I have been treated to the usual non-reply: 'An announcement will be made in due course.' There is a real need which is not only expressed by Action for Housing but struggling families. What is the secret about, Mr Speaker? We need to give hope to those who are struggling.

1650 In relation to rental arrears, in the last 12 months the Government's record on recovery is appalling. In March 2017, arrears were just over £5 million. At the Budget last year the Chief Minister stated that arrears stood at £4,995,042 and confirmed that the problem was clearly under control. At the end of April the hon. Lady told me that arrears stood at £4,829,692. In January, February, March and April of last year the figures gravitated around £4,879,000 to £4,835,000. Where is the success story in those figures? Nothing has changed.

1655 It is clear for all those to see that the Government are failing to recover what is owed and the problem is stagnating under their leadership. The Government are failing to identify and address the root problem. Those in real social need are unable to access housing because the system is not fit for purpose. There is also systemic abuse in the housing system which must be urgently addressed by the Government. We need to revolutionise housing and only provide homes to those who need them.

1660 Our policy on means testing must be implemented alongside a range of initiatives that make the system user friendly, accessible and, above all, fair. For instance, how is it right that when each of our children reach the age of 18, parents feel the need to put their names on the social housing list in order to slowly creep up an archaic system to have the opportunity to buy into the Government co-ownership or be allocated a Government flat in the future? I have heard of many many cases, when children leave for university, parents ensure that their children are on the list so that when they finish full-time education they get a home. Mr Speaker, what on earth is going on with our system if that is the case?

1675 On housing lists there are currently a total of 1,350 applicants on the pre- and housing list as well as a small number of the social lists. Only 69 people have been allocated flats in 2018 so far. With a growing and aging population, how does the Government intend to cater for demand and evolving and changing circumstances? What contingencies are in place for a hard Brexit? Where is the investigatory or enforcement process to minimise abuse of Government housing?

1680 I know that the Hon. Minister does try and help, but we must recognise that the system is fundamentally broken. We need to operate a system based on real need. We need to provide for families small and large, young single parents, the elderly, key workers and those with disabilities. The system does need a degree of flexibility, but above all it must be fair and cater for the needs of those most in need.

1685 Mr Speaker, on 26th November 2015, some two and a half years ago, I made a promise to those who entrusted their vote to my colleagues and I that we would speak for those people in our community who felt distant from politics and politicians. I have promised that, where I can, I will help; if I cannot, I will say, but I am here to listen.

1690 It has become apparent to me, Mr Speaker, that the Chief Minister likes to use the opportunity of this debate of the Appropriation Bill not just to report to the House on the public finances of our community but the state of the economy generally and our political future facing all of us.

1695 Almost two years after my election I was asked by the leader of the party, Keith Azopardi QC, to lead the parliamentary party in this House after the Hon. Daniel Feetham stepped down. It is a great honour and privilege to be able to serve my community in whatever capacity I am asked to serve. It is, of course, right at this juncture that this House pays tribute to the crucial role played by the Hon. Daniel Feetham in driving the party forward in Opposition after 16 years in Government. Opposition politics, as everyone in this House will know, is a hard, difficult and isolating endeavour, but at the best of times it can be one of the best experiences that each of us will have. It can also be brutal, but it is also rewarding for each one of us on this side of this House. Serving our community in key domestic areas such as housing, employment, health, skills, social services and care and understanding the plight of our community has been a privilege and an honour.

1700 It has also been an eye-opener because, despite the constant spin from the benches that drive the New Dawn propaganda machine, there is an endemic and growing discontent from the public as to the Government's administration of our public affairs. Not one day goes past that each of us on this side of the House receives a complaint about this Government's mismanagement of the domestic agenda. The discontent, of course, is also coming from the Government's own supporters and they are becoming very vocal.

1705 As I believe we will demonstrate through our various contributions, that we are fundamentally at odds with the Government in respect of the substance, or lack thereof, and the form of the Appropriation Bill.

1715 To end my contribution, voting against the Budget is not a decision to be taken lightly but it stands as an important message to the public, for whose money we are responsible for, that you as your elected representatives genuinely believe that the financial underpinning of our public services is being threatened by the bad management of our public finances and we on this side of the House will not support the Big Lie Budget.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks.)

1720 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I... Thank you. Thank you. Had thought we were going to hear the Leader of the Opposition's speech, but now that Mr Phillips has ended his contribution can I propose that the House should now adjourn until three o'clock?

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess until three this afternoon.

The House adjourned at 12.41p.m.

1740

This document provides further details of the departments and matters for which the Chief Minister has Ministerial responsibility. In order to reduce the length of the speech delivered in Parliament by the Chief Minister, these matters are highlighted in this document, in the form of a report by the Chief Minister. This document will be laid before Parliament on the day of the Chief Minister's Budget Address for 2018.

1745

1750

Mr Speaker an important part of the revenue aspect of the year I am reporting on, and the year we are estimating for, comes from the collection of corporate and personal taxes from economic operators in our economy. In that respect, I think most taxpayers will agree and will have appreciated how in the financial year 2017/18 the Income Tax Office has continued to improve the processes for the assessment and collection of taxes in Gibraltar.

1755

Mr Speaker, as you are aware, there is an increased global tax transparency drive regarding exchange of information. The Income Tax Office complies with all international obligations and has during the last financial year exchanged information, both automatically and on request, with treaty partners under the applicable conventions and directives emanating from the OECD and EU.

1760

The Income Tax Office has a progressive strategy to develop intelligent systems, provide bespoke suitable staff training and foster links with other tax authorities. In this respect reciprocal visits with HMRC have taken place in the last year and have proved extremely fruitful.

And also very important and as a key principle of basic fairness, the level of Tax and Social Insurance arrears continue on a downward trend. This is a direct result of the effective strategy, co-ordination and significant efforts between the Central Arrears Unit and the Income Tax Office. Both these departments continue working closely together with the common aim of ensuring taxpayer compliance in all material aspects.

The Income Tax Contributions has recently moved to modern fit for purpose facilities in a more centralised location with improved access for the general public.

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS

Mr Speaker, HMGOG is justly proud of its record of accomplishment in respects to Industrial Relations within the Public Sector. A cornerstone in this administration's policy, the Industrial Relations Unit that this Government has established has been strengthened in order to better meet the needs of Public Sector Workers and their representative organisations.

1775

Through the work of the IRU, negotiations have concluded in areas such as the Borders and Coastguard Agency where a Collective Agreement was concluded in 2017 with Unite the Union inclusive of increases to allowances, enhancement of the Borders and Coastguard Officers pay structure and other terms and conditions.

1780

Through the work of the Industrial Relations Officer and his team, as Minister with responsibility for Industrial Relations I now have regular contact with the three principal Trade Unions in Gibraltar on a fortnightly basis. In this manner, HMGOG can better take the pulse of Industrial Relations matters in the workplace, noting the salient points of their concerns and addressing these before they become a real problem. That being said however, it is important to emphasise that unions and Government will not always see eye to eye but through the forum that has been created, a real commitment to finding the middle ground to concerns that are palatable to all parties can now commence.

Vacancies in the Civil Service

Further to the commitment that I made during my 2018 May Day address, Mr Speaker, I reemphasise HMGOG's intention of permanently filling Civil Service vacancies that are currently 1790 filled by subcontracted staff. I am happy to report that we working with the GGCA towards a formula that will allow for phased intakes into the Civil Service that is not disadvantageous to incumbent subcontracted post holders whilst being sensitive and mindful of the posts' entry requirements.

1795 Upper Rock, Beaches, GHA & Bus Company

The fiscal prudence that HMGOG exhibits allows for continued growth, where necessary and appropriate, of Public Sector departments in order to better serve the interests of the community and Gibraltar PLC. My cabinet colleagues, Mr Speaker, will be able to go into greater depths of the recruitment of staff in the Departments under their Ministerial oversight, but I would like to highlight in passing some specific examples of the conservative recruitment that this Administration has pursued that is already paying dividends. At the Upper Rock and Beaches department and the Gibraltar Health Authority, a number of Craft Grade appointments have been made. Within the Gibraltar Health Authority, in this Administration's bid to repatriate services, Minister Neil Costa has overseen a significant expansion to clinical and medical cover through employment of additional staff, particularly through the localisation of posts of professionals working abroad and now returning to Gibraltar with the valuable skillsets that they have developed outside of Gibraltar. I would like to finish by commending Minister Paul Balban in his work with the Gibraltar Bus Company where over 15 employees were subject to indefinite variations in order to offer the fantastic, enviable and free bus service available to the community. Mr Speaker, what I have just described is by no means an exhaustive list of recruitment within the Public Sector but only a glimpse of the avenues where HMGOG engages in quality recruitment.

1815 Sheltered Employees

Finally, Mr Speaker, I would like to highlight an enhancement to the terms and conditions of sheltered employees working within the Public Sector who will now be able to enjoy sick leave and annual leave entitlements on par with the rest of the Public Sector employees. Dignified and quality employment for all our citizens is at the heart of the work that HMGOG engages in and it is hugely satisfying for us to stamp out discrepancies of this nature.

BORDERS & COASTGUARD

The Borders and Coastguard Agency, under the Guidance of its temporary CEO, has progressed as an organisation over the past 12 months. It finds itself in full running compliance with the 'General Data Protection Regulation' and now has a qualified Data Protection Officer to ensure that our personal data is accurate, safe, secure and lawful. BCA uphold the rights of individuals and their privacy.

The BCA, together with its law enforcement partners, now has arrangements in place with a BCO Fully Qualified DRM (Designated Risk Manager) to collaborate with MAPPA (Multi-agency public protection agency) to assess and manage the risks posed by sexual and violent offenders.

1830 Mr speaker, BCA has also taken on the issuance of Visas and Visa waivers and administration of applications for all entry visas into Gibraltar. It's proven to be a challenging yet successful year in accessing all applications referred by all the UK Visa application centres. The BCA has proven to be up to the challenge and performed an excellent job in issuing said visa waivers to our community, especially during the busy summer period where additional summer visa waivers are issued to allow our Moroccan community spouses and children who are still in full time education to visit their families working and residing in Gibraltar.

1835 The agency is continuously monitoring and reviewing to improving existing systems and relationships both internally and externally with our neighbours for the benefit of our Gibraltar. In conjunction with other law enforcement colleagues such as the RGP, HM Customs, GDP, Cuerpo Nacional Policia, UK Border Force, Home Office, Interpol, and other essential services the BCA have established excellent working relationships to keep Gibraltar safe and secure above all. Information provided by Interpol integrated in our IT systems play a major role in early detection leading to significant arrests of criminals issued with European arrest warrants.

1845 Our sophisticated border IT systems aids us to process in all our entry points; and the communication and good relationships between law enforcement colleagues across the globe is of up most importance.

1850 The BCA also undertake extensive House Checks throughout Gibraltar to assist the following departments; CSRO, GHA, Education department and the Housing department to ensure applications made to these departments are of persons residing in Gibraltar and complying with the rules and regulations to obtain such any other benefit.

1855 The Agency continuously support our locally registered shipping agents providing them assistance in movements of seafarers embarking and disembarking from Gibraltar. They support agents to ensure seafarers are able to transit to their destination. Their priority is to ensure movements of seafarers are done in a safe and secure manner through Gibraltar.

And in relation to the Extensive works carried out at the Eastgate commercial entrance with the erection of new buildings and the road works leading to our land frontier and part of the tunnel project we must praise our BCA Officers together with HM Custom officers who have managed to maintain a steady flow of inbound and outbound traffic.

PUBLIC SECTOR HUMAN RESOURCES

Mr Speaker, the Public Sector HR Unit continues to assist all government agencies, authorities and government owned companies. The department has concentrated on a review of the GHA HR systems in order to update and modernise HR working practice, working in conjunction with Care Agency HR to streamline processes.

They continue in their push to introduce change and have formed an integral part of the ERP team which is delivering latest technology for a modern approach to HR.

CSRO

1870 In respect of the Civil Status and Registration Office, I am happy to report that as a result of changes to existing practices and procedures, along with the relocation of tangible resources, a number of internal processes have been streamlined, bringing about a noticeable improvement to administrative efficiencies in the department. One such improvement is in respect of identity and civilian registration cards. By relocating the card printers to a site within Joshua Hassan House it has afforded the Civil Status and Registration Office the capability to make better use of its human resources and make the process faster and more efficient. Mr Speaker, the time taken to produce and issue an identity or civilian registration card has been reduced by fifty per cent.

1880 The department has also reviewed and re-drafted a number of its guidance notes and information booklets, providing up to date information on services relating to civil status, citizenship, registration of births, deaths and marriages. On the subject of marriages, the passing of the Conversion of Civil Partnership Rules in May this year has meant that couples can now covert their civil partnership into marriage. This important piece of legislation represents inclusion and acceptance and it attests my government's commitment to equality.

Gibraltar continues to be an attractive destination for weddings and civil partnerships as the number of ceremonies steadily increases every year. According to figures for this first quarter, along with the number of bookings confirmed at this stage, it is highly likely that this year we will surpass the 2017 figures, when a total of 1593 ceremonies were officiated by the Registry Office.

CUSTOMS

1895 This last Financial Year saw the full launch of the paperless, electronic Asycuda customs data management system. The system handles manifests and customs declarations, accounting, transit and suspense procedures.

1900 It runs on the very latest 2017 Harmonised System World Customs Organisation tariff, based on the EU 8 digit code nomenclature. The HS system is used by more than 200 countries and economies as a basis for their Customs tariffs and for the collection of international trade statistics. Over 98 % of the merchandise in international trade is classified in terms of the HS tariff. Asycuda is used in over 90 countries worldwide, and HM Customs Gibraltar has contributed greatly by introducing new and unique modules to Asycuda which are now in use in some of those countries.

1905 HM Customs, in consultation with the Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Small Businesses engaged in a training programme for all import and export stakeholders to ensure readiness before launch including presentations and question and answer sessions answered by the Collector of Customs.

In-house workshops were also delivered to customs staff.

1910 As at today, over 99% of all customs declaration forms are submitted via Asycuda which has reduced clearance times, facilitated trade and increased customs control capabilities and risk management whilst improving business efficiency by reducing paper use.

Following from the demolition of the old Custom House, this has now been relocated to Waterport Wharf in two separate buildings. These are fit for purpose buildings constructed using environmentally friendly fixtures. The new Drug Detector Dog Section will be housed in one of the buildings.

1915 A new enclosed holding area for commercial vehicles is well under construction in British Lines Road. It will enable Customs officers to carry out requisite checks on incoming and outgoing vehicles away from public view, in a safe environment and with appropriate equipment. It is expected to be completed shortly.

1920 The Customs Marine Section will shortly be relocated, with various alternative locations already identified and discussions are ongoing between the Collector of Customs and the Chief Technical Officer on the most appropriate venue and the designs of the new station.

Four new patrol vehicles will shortly be put into service as well as one already in place for the Dog Section. Other specialist equipment has already been provided to assist officers in the execution of their duties.

1925 A number of international seminars and workshops have been led by HM Customs both locally and abroad, including a recent one on modern Customs procedures for control of international trade in CITES listed species co-hosted with the UNCTAD Centre of Excellence and the Government of Switzerland with the support of the CITES Secretariat.

1930 The Government remains committed in the fight against illicit tobacco activity and is working closely with the Collector of Customs to amend the Tobacco Act even further to broaden the scope and penalties in the Act and such amendments will be made public shortly.

1935 Drugs and tobacco detections and seizures are up, a testament to the excellent work done by Customs officers both at land and at sea in what are challenging and sometimes dangerous situations. HMGOG remains committed in ensuring they receive the best training and equipment to service their needs and I thank them for their daily, sometimes unseen dedication to duty.

DRUG & ALCOHOL SERVICES

1940 Mr Speaker, I now move on to my portfolio responsibility in respect of Drug and Alcohol Services. This is an issue that we need to get right given the potential it has to make a positive difference on the lives of many within our community who suffer as a direct result of drug misuse. I have to declare a vested interest in this; not only as a politician, but as the father of three young children who wishes to protect them from the devastating consequences that substance abuse can exact upon any family. I am very excited to be dealing with this important area of Government policy.

1945 One of the first issues we tackled on my taking over was to reinstate more regular meetings of the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs. This has helped to give our work a more focussed and strategic steer and brings together experts and professionals across many fields. This is already yielding results, which will inform our future drug strategy.

1950 Our response to drug misuse needs to be evidence-based and has to meet the needs of our community. With this in mind, I have commissioned various research studies and have significantly enhanced the human resources needed to enable this to happen. We will be conducting a school-based survey among our secondary school students, which will be taking place early in the next academic year, as well as a wider drug prevalence survey. We are also working with all stakeholders in creating a National Drugs Database. We must acknowledge the important role the voluntary sector plays in minimising the harm that drugs and alcohol misuse causes. They will be widely consulted and their views will form part of any strategic responses.

1960 I could not tackle the drugs issue without addressing the Cannabis debate head on. We all know this is a fast developing area and there are many emerging opinions on this subject which are, at times, challenging to keep abreast of. Our approach is one based on common sense. The medicinal uses of cannabis and its derivatives is quite distinct from its recreational use, as is the cultivation of cannabis plants which are engineered to have no narcotic properties for a variety of legitimate uses. We have embarked upon an exhaustive process of consultation and research into all these facets, which will allow us to develop clear unambiguous responses.

1965 I am particularly proud to have under my responsibility, a dedicated and consummate group of professionals who work in Bruce's Farm Rehabilitation Centre and within the community providing an excellent level of care. Their dedication has turned around the lives of many individuals and families within our society. I intend to take this to another level. We will be expanding these services. This will make them even more responsive and accessible by developing a well-resourced team, in a purpose built facility within the community to augment the work done at Bruce's Farm, which de-stigmatises substance dependency. Our Drug Services are currently in contact with well-respected experts in this field, who are providing advice on how best to develop this service. It is testament to the success of our drug services that I recently had the privilege to meet an ex-patient of Bruce's Farm who is currently undertaking a degree in addictions counselling funded by the Government of Gibraltar. I am happy to say that 1970 a second person with a similar background will also be commencing this same course in September of this year. 1975

We will be imminently launching a dedicated drug and alcohol website that my team has been working hard on for the past few months. This will provide an authoritative point of reference for anyone wanting to know more about this subject or who needs to access help. The drug and alcohol team has also been developing an awareness campaign that will be rolled out over the coming months. We are also working with our educators in the development of a programme that will deliver the drug awareness message in the most effective way possible. One of our Education Advisers recently attended a conference in the UK where the latest findings in this field were presented. 1980

1985 As the largest employer in Gibraltar, we need to lead by example. I am therefore announcing that over the coming year we will be implementing a Drugs at Work policy throughout the public sector starting with the essential services. Our approach will not necessarily be a punitive one but rather will encourage those who may have a dependency to seek appropriate help. However, my Government is also clear that it intends to adopt a low tolerance approach to drug and alcohol misuse within the public sector as a whole. 1990

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Dr Joseph Garcia.

5       Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the first time I spoke during a debate on the estimates of revenue and expenditure was in 1999. I had been earlier elected on a by-election barely a few weeks before. This is therefore my 20th Budget and my seventh as a Member of the Government. Only Sir Joe Bossano and indeed you, Mr Speaker, have been here for longer!

10       I propose to start with a report to this House of work connected to our departure from the European Union. It will not come as a surprise to learn that this has been the subject that has most occupied my time over the last financial year. There have been over 500 meetings, engagements and media interviews linked to Brexit since the referendum of June 2016.

15       These are only the ones which I have been involved in directly, so that figure does not cover everything. More meetings have taken place at many other levels and with many other different people.

Mr Speaker, there is less than a year to go until we leave the European Union. We did not vote to leave. We did not want to leave. But now we have to get on with it. And that, Mr Speaker, is exactly what we are doing.

20       These have been an intense twelve months. The Chief Minister, the Attorney General and I have lived and breathed Brexit practically on a daily basis. It has been a real pleasure to work together with them, the Financial Secretary and with the wider Brexit team.

25       Mr Speaker, the Department for Exiting the European Union in the United Kingdom has an estimated 550 full-time employees. They are supported by well over 100 more at the UK Representation to the European Union, known as UKRep. In Gibraltar, we probably have less than 20 people dealing with different aspects of Brexit. These include staff based in London and in Brussels. However, we do call upon the expertise of different UK Government departments as and when needed.

30       We are all aware that Brexit is an incredibly complicated affair. It is complicated for the United Kingdom itself. We have the additional political challenge posed by our neighbour.

35       Mr Speaker, the House will recall that last year Clause 24 remained in the final version of the European Council's negotiating guidelines. That clause has continued to be restated several times as the UK/EU negotiations have progressed. The House knows that the EU draft text of the Withdrawal Agreement was published earlier this year. The section on territorial scope included Gibraltar shaded in green as agreed text. There was an asterisk in white background which referred to Clause 24 and which was therefore not agreed text.

It is important to bear in mind that Clause 24 is the position of the EU side. Their latest conclusions published last week once again made reference to Gibraltar in this context. This is not the position of the Member State United Kingdom and still less the position of Gibraltar. The European Council's decision to provide Spain with this purported veto was shameful. It is symptomatic of the very attitude that led the United Kingdom to vote to leave the EU in the first place.

For us, it was a base betrayal; 96% of us voted to remain. We thought that the EU would love us. We believed that Europe would embrace us. Instead, with that veto clause they did the very opposite. Faced with that betrayal, the Government is delighted with the solid support that we continue to receive from London, to date, as this process moves forward.

The Government, Mr Speaker, continues to engage closely with the United Kingdom Government on the details of our EU exit. We have worked together in lockstep. We have planned the way forward. We have discussed strategy. We have drafted papers. We have been very closely consulted at every stage. This co-operation is reflected in the wide package of measures agreed at the sixth meeting of the UK-Gibraltar Joint Ministerial Council. Those measures provided important reassurance to our financial services and online gaming industry in terms of continued access to the United Kingdom market. The House will recall that other measures agreed provided for British Citizens resident in Gibraltar to continue to be eligible for higher education fees at home student levels in England, both during the transitional period and afterwards.

On health, it was also agreed that Gibraltar would continue with the existing arrangements, for patients receiving free elective treatment in the United Kingdom. This marked the end of the first phase of Brexit for Gibraltar. It was cemented by securing agreement on the delivery of those UK bilaterals.

Mr Speaker, there continues to be solid support for Gibraltar across the political spectrum in Westminster and in the Devolved Administrations. The Government will continue to keep our friends in Parliament informed. We will maintain a high visibility profile for Gibraltar. It is important that our issues are not lost in the wider Brexit agenda.

Those who sit on the Brexit Select Committee of the Gibraltar Parliament have been briefed privately on the details of our EU departure. They will therefore know more about what is happening than I am able to tell the House today. There have been 10 confidential briefings to date. My hon. Friend, the Chief Minister, has also separately briefed the Leader of the GSD party more than once.

Mr Speaker, as we prepare to leave the European Union, officials from the United Kingdom continue to engage closely with the Government of Gibraltar and other European partners, including Spain, to address the practical implications arising from the UK and Gibraltar's EU exit. The Government of Gibraltar is directly involved in those meetings which are relevant to Gibraltar. The United Kingdom is the Member State responsible for Gibraltar in the European Union. They are also responsible for the negotiations as they affect the entirety of the British family of nations.

These are three Devolved Administrations, three Crown Dependencies and 14 Overseas Territories impacted to varying degrees by the UK's departure from the European Union – 20 territories in total. All of them have different interests that the Government of the Member State UK has to take forward. Anguilla is concerned about its border with EU territories in the Caribbean; the Falkland Islands want to continue with tariff-free and quota-free access to the EU market for fish, squid, lamb and mutton. Curiously, they supply fish and squid mainly to Spain.

The Channel Islands want to protect their trade with the UK and the EU in fisheries, agriculture and manufacturing. Bermuda and others are concerned about the ability of their citizens to travel into the EU after Brexit. All the OTs have concerns about the continuation of the existing generous EU funding streams that they receive. Every territory, Mr Speaker, has their issues.

Gibraltar is no exception, we have our issues too. It is no secret that there are seven areas under discussion as part of our own EU departure. These are: tax transparency and co-operation; police, customs and judicial co-operation; the border; tobacco; the airport and aviation; the environment; and the legal form that any possible agreements might take.

The Government remains willing to engage Spain in a positive and constructive manner as we prepare to leave the European Union. It is sensible that issues which want to be progressed by both sides should be on the table. The question of sovereignty is excluded; indeed, this has been made clear by Spain itself. In any case, for the avoidance of doubt, let me repeat that the sovereignty of Gibraltar is not a matter for discussion with Spain – Brexit or no Brexit. The discussions taking place now are EU-exit discussions.

It is obvious from the list of topics that some of the issues will be easier to resolve than others. For instance, much has been said about the greater use of Gibraltar Airport. We are happy to have a discussion with Spain about its enhanced use. We are not happy, however, and will not contemplate any proposals which impinge on our sovereignty, jurisdiction and control.

In this context, it is important to make it clear once again that the symbols and the ingredients of sovereignty are as important as sovereignty itself. Gibraltar has clear red lines. We know that Spain has its red lines too. As I have said before, Mr Speaker, there is space between for a practical, modern, non-sovereignty solution between the two sets of red lines.

Mr Speaker, quite apart from the political work, our departure from the European Union will require a considerable legal and administrative effort as well. That departure will be enshrined in an EU (Withdrawal) Bill in the same way as is happening in the United Kingdom. In order to make sure that there is certainty in the status of the law, the entire body of EU law will be copied on to Gibraltar's domestic statute book. There are two steps in this process.

The first is that all directly applicable EU law will be converted into Gibraltar domestic law on exit day. The second is that all Gibraltar law that has been made to give effect to EU rights and obligations will be preserved. Therefore, Mr Speaker, on exit day directly applicable EU law, like Regulations and Decisions, will continue to be considered as part of Gibraltar law and can be relied upon as such. However, these savings provisions will not be enough to ensure a smooth transition.

Some measures will only work in the context of EU Member State relations. These will involve, for example, the recognition of competent authorities, the exchange of information or the mutual recognition of licences. Other measures can be brought into Gibraltar law but will require changes in order to make them operable, by which I mean they will function as legal instruments in our legal order.

The EU (Withdrawal) Bill will include the power for the Government to change EU law in order to ensure that every EU measure is operable. It will also contain provisions that will allow for the implementation of any agreement reached in respect of Gibraltar's EU exit. However, that may yet be done in the context of a Withdrawal and Implementation Bill, as the UK are minded to do.

Mr Speaker, in order to get a complete understanding of which laws apply to Gibraltar we have examined in excess of 20,000 pieces of legislation. Taken together, these comprise the legal order of the European Union and these are principally the treaties, regulations, decisions, and directives. We have also undertaken an examination of our entire statute book in order to identify where individual EU measures have to be implemented or transposed.

We are working on the basis of a core of about 1,600 measures which are of relevance and need to be individually considered by the various government departments and the legislative drafters. That exercise is already under way. This is perhaps the most far-reaching legislative review ever undertaken in Gibraltar, veritably a mammoth task, and the Government is very grateful to everyone involved in the exercise.

Mr Speaker, work related to our departure from the European Union can be found at Head 12, Sub-Head 2(9).

140 I move on now to report on our office in Brussels. Not surprisingly, our EU Representation is itself heavily involved in different aspects of work as we prepare to leave the European Union. Therefore the office today is busier than it has ever been as a result of the ongoing Article 50 process. In addition to the 'business as usual' work that they conduct, are the demands and the challenges we collectively face as a consequence of Brexit. The office continues to gather vital intelligence 'on the ground' in Brussels.

145 It has been pivotal in informing the Government of developments in each of the EU institutions concerning Brexit. It has helped to educate influencers about Gibraltar's position in respect of matters that are of critical relevance to us. Gibraltar's network of contacts and supporters continues to grow. I should add that this is something which has not escaped the attention of Madrid.

150 An informal 'Friends of Gibraltar' group is now consolidated and relationships are being maintained on a day-to-day basis. Interest in Brussels about Gibraltar matters has never been greater. This is of course due to an increasing awareness of our position in these negotiations. However, the work of our assets in Brussels in generating this interest should not be underestimated.

155 Mr Speaker, over the last 12 months I have visited Brussels on three occasions, once with the Chief Minister, in July last year. The Attorney General has made several other visits during the year. Our Representation has been closely involved during all these visits and has been instrumental in securing meetings.

160 Mr Speaker, the European Parliament will have a final say on the outcome of the negotiations for the departure of the United Kingdom and Gibraltar from the European Union. It will have a vote on whether to approve or reject the withdrawal agreement. For this reason, the team in Brussels have dedicated much time to the work of briefing Members of the European Parliament on Gibraltar Brexit issues.

165 In the 2017 calendar year, Gibraltar Government officials or Ministers met informally with 79 MEPs of different nationalities, from different committees and from different political parties. Since 1st January 2018 to date, 40 more MEPs have been seen. Discussions with some of these MEPs have taken place on more than one occasion. This means that the number of separate meetings is in fact much higher. Records of every single meeting are kept. In relation to every meeting there is a purpose, an objective and a reason for the approach. Many of the MEPs concerned are among the most influential and experienced Members of the European Parliament. Some are the chairs of the parliamentary committees which are of most relevance to Gibraltar.

175 By way of example, the Government can confirm that it has exchanged views with each and every MEP forming part of the European Parliament's Brexit Steering Group. This is the group that is co-ordinating and defining the Parliament's policies as the Article 50 process moves forward. At times, this strategic lobbying translates into results that are measurable and tangible.

180 The House will recall that amendments hostile to Gibraltar were tabled by Spanish MEPs following an inquiry into money laundering, tax avoidance and tax evasion. Those amendments were highlighted prominently in the Spanish press. Predictably, that same Spanish press was silent when amendments were ultimately rejected by MEPs in a vote in the committee concerned.

185 There are other examples, Mr Speaker. Gibraltar has won votes in the European Parliament. We have also won votes in Committees. This is a result of the sheer hard work carried out in Brussels since we took the decision to expand our presence there.

The Government, at the same time, continues with its programme of organising or supporting visits for MEPs to Gibraltar. Last year, we welcomed nine different members of the European Parliament.

190 Mr Speaker, we have also had direct contact with the European Commission. On 13th July 2017, the Chief Minister and I met with the EU's Deputy Chief Brexit Negotiator, Sabine Weyand, and other members of her team. This was the same day that Taskforce 50 Team met with the First Minister of Scotland, Nicola Sturgeon; with the First Minister of Wales, Carwyn Jones; and UK Opposition Leader, Jeremy Corbyn. The meetings took place despite intense and desperate efforts from Madrid to prevent it from happening. It proved to be a good opportunity to explain Gibraltar's objectives and concerns.

I also had the pleasure to exchange views again with the UK Commissioner, Sir Julian King, earlier this year. Further meetings with Commission officials belonging to different Directorate-Generals have taken place over the last 12 months. The purpose of those meetings has been to discuss issues relevant to our ongoing membership of the EU and our continued obligation to observe and implement EU law.

Mr Speaker, as part of our policy to leave no stone unturned as we leave the EU, we have met with every single Member State. These meetings have taken place in Brussels, in London and here in Gibraltar. Meetings have also taken place with the Council officials co-ordinating Brexit matters. The House will understand that it is not in the public interest to disseminate detailed information concerning some of the contacts that have taken place. Communication with the UK's own Representation to the EU, UKRep, has also been fluid at all levels.

It is worth highlighting that in January I had a very productive meeting with the UK Permanent Rep to the EU, Sir Tim Barrow, and a separate meeting with the newly appointed Director for the UK-EU Partnership, Hermione Gough. I am confident that Gibraltar's concerns and priorities are thoroughly understood by the UK officials in Brussels. They know that we look to them to continue to defend our interests in the heart of the European Union on a day-to-day basis.

Mr Speaker, aside from the above, the office in Brussels continues to monitor and advise on EU legislative and non-legislative proposals.

It has also been involved with the following: (1) Keeping up to speed with developments in Brussels in Fintech and DLT Technology, working in conjunction with the Finance Centre Department and the Financial Services Commission. The office has also helped organise visits to Brussels with this purpose, ensuring that Gibraltar is well represented in prominent debates and discussions; (2) Arranging for me to make Gibraltar's case at a Brussels policy think-tank; (3) Conducting two visits to Strasbourg to coincide with European Parliament plenary sessions there, with a further visit envisaged later this month; (4) Organising and accompanying three visits of MEP assistants to Gibraltar. The last one took place just over a week ago. (5) Making arrangements for the October 2017 visit of Gibraltar students to Brussels. (6) Assisting with an event hosted in Gibraltar House to inaugurate the 'Friends of Gibraltar' Group, as well as hosting events for the Gibraltar Ombudsman, the Young Professionals in Foreign Policy group, Team Global and the British-Irish Parliamentary Assembly; (7) Attending leading think-tank events, networking events organised by other representations and organisations as well as conferences in Brussels, takes up another part of their time.

The Government is grateful to Sir Graham Watson, to Daniel D'Amato and to the team there for the work that they continue to do. The Brussels Office can be found at Head 12, Sub-Head 2(2)(b).

Mr Speaker, I move on now to Gibraltar House in London. The expanding diversity of challenges arising as the process of leaving the EU unfolds has also continued to dominate work at Gibraltar House in London. This is in addition to the important task of lobbying and keeping our many friends and supporters in Westminster accurately informed. The office on the Strand provides an effective working platform from which the Government can interact with ministers and officials in London.

As the deadlines established for the UK and Gibraltar's departure from the EU approach, engagement at a technical level has increased alongside the broader and intense political discussions that also continue. This has meant Brexit working groups from Gibraltar meeting regularly with their UK counterparts in London. Some of those meetings alternate between Whitehall and Gibraltar House itself. The networks that have been established and the detailed technical work that results from this engagement will become increasingly important to us as we leave the European Union. The indications are that this work will expand exponentially.

245 Mr Speaker, the flow of information and channelling of contacts in both directions has been an important element in the work carried out in London. Gibraltar House has evolved over the last couple of years. It has become the conduit for information gathering and analysis. It has been the visible face of Gibraltar in Brexit think tanks and events in London. It has engaged with UK government departments and officials. It helps to organise the flow of information into No 6
250 and to the Government here in Gibraltar.

The team at Gibraltar House attend parliamentary committee hearings. They engage with MEPs and Committee members where it is felt Gibraltar should put forward its views and concerns. Their work with both Houses of Parliament is very much a priority. Gibraltar House assists the All Party Parliamentary Group on Gibraltar with its secretarial functions. It reaches 255 out to new MPs and Peers who show an interest in Gibraltar affairs.

Bob Neill MP took over the Chair of the All-Party Parliamentary Group (APPG) on Gibraltar a year ago. He has been an important ally in getting the Rock's message across to the right people in No. 10 and in Whitehall. The APPG is a cross-party body which includes MPs and Peers. Members will have seen that Gibraltar has enjoyed considerable support in debates and other 260 parliamentary activity. The Government, and I am sure the whole House, is very grateful to Bob and to our friends in the APPG.

Mr Speaker, the Government has been active in putting across our views in Westminster as well. My colleague, the Chief Minister, has appeared before both the House of Commons Committee on Exiting the European Union, chaired by Hilary Benn, and the House of Lords 265 European Union Committee, chaired by Lord Boswell. Members will recall that in March this year Lord Boswell led a small delegation from the Committee to see the situation in Gibraltar at first hand.

It has been important for the Government to foster the support and loyalty we have enjoyed from many British MPs and Peers. Old friends like Deputy Speaker, Lindsay Hoyle, and his father 270 Lord Hoyle, are prime examples of that continued loyalty and support. But at the same time, we continue to reach out to new friends. We must get our message across and win support based on the merit of Gibraltar's case.

Mr Speaker, I would like to say a few words about Gibraltar Day. The annual Gibraltar Day event in London has been transformed. Numbers for the evening reception have been reduced 275 considerably; invitations are now far more targeted. Last year, the evening reception was hosted at the Gherkin on Monday 23rd October. Among the guests were 10 Ambassadors and 13 Deputy Ambassadors, as well as some 36 members of the House of Commons and the House of Lords. The Government also hosted over 100 members of the Gibraltar expatriate community to a Thanksgiving Mass and Reception in Fulham on the preceding day. Over 300 members of 280 the Gibraltar Financial Services industry met for a business lunch in the City of London. The new focus given to more targeted events provides greater value for money.

Mr Speaker, the number of political guests at the last National Day rally is a reflection of the political moment that we find ourselves in. Gibraltar played host to 26 MPs and Peers from 285 across the UK Parliament. Five members of the European Parliament also joined us; their programme included separate briefings from the Chief Minister and from me; a meeting with representatives from the Finance Centre; and a call on His Excellency the Governor.

Delegates attended the traditional National Day rally and they were also able to participate in a number of events marking the 50th Anniversary of the 1967 Referendum. It was a real pleasure to welcome the UK Minister for Europe, Sir Alan Duncan, to Gibraltar.

290 This lobbying work is a continuous process. Only this spring, the London office organised a breakfast meeting with the Chief Minister for the All-Party Gibraltar Group in the House of Commons. This was attended by 17 MPs. On the same day, at almost exactly the same time, I hosted another group of MPs here in Gibraltar.

295 We believe that such visits are crucial in deepening our understanding of the issues and the challenges before us. There is no better way to understand Gibraltar than to visit Gibraltar.
Those UK MPs who came here on working visits outside National Day include Dominic Grieve, Liz McKinnes, Robert Goodwill, Mike Gapes and Tom Brake.

300 Mr Speaker, our former governors continue to represent a great source of support and remain in close contact with the team in London. The London office also has a fluid relationship with the Scottish, Welsh and Northern Ireland Assembly representatives. Contact is maintained with many embassies in London including the Ambassadors of European Union countries. Many Member States of the EU have a particular interest in how Brexit may impact on Gibraltar. Our UK Representative Dominique Searle is regularly invited to official and diplomatic events in the capital in addition to formal working meetings.

305 Mr Speaker, the lobbying work comes to a head normally during the party conference season, and 2017 saw a record participation in such events. Gibraltar maintained its traditional presence at the Conservative, Labour and Liberal Democrat conferences. We also hosted a stand at the conference of the Scottish National Party. In the same way, we attended the DUP conference in Belfast for the very first time. Gibraltar hosted a reception or a lunch at each venue.

310 The high-profile speakers in these events reflect the support that Gibraltar enjoys right to the top of the UK political establishment. At the Conservative conference we had the Foreign Secretary, Boris Johnson; at the Labour Conference we had the Shadow Foreign Secretary, Emily Thornberry; at the Liberal Democrat Conference we had the Deputy Leader, Jo Swinson; at the 315 SNP Conference we had the Spokesman on International Affairs and Europe, Stephen Gethins; and at the DUP we had the leader and former First Minister, Arlene Foster.

Mr Speaker, we will never take our friends for granted. The Government will continue to work closely with them. We shall continue to reach out to all layers of public opinion in the UK.
We shall continue to consolidate and to grow our support in Westminster. I would add here that 320 Gibraltar was represented at the State Opening of Parliament that followed the last UK general election. We took our seat alongside Ambassadors and the representatives of other British Overseas Territories. In this context it is important to recall that UKOTA, the association of the territories, continues to be an integral part of our work in London. Gibraltar House is a regular venue for its meetings.

325 I explained how all of us will be affected in different ways as we leave the European Union:
despite these differences, the territories have much to gain from standing in solidarity with one another.

Mr Speaker, as we leave the European Union and one door closes, other doors will open.
Gibraltar, like the United Kingdom itself, is looking for closer interaction with the 330 Commonwealth. This year, on Commonwealth Day, we lowered the flag of the European Union and replaced it with the flag of the Commonwealth. This was an important symbolic gesture; a prelude of things to come.

Gibraltar has long relished its historic relationship with the Commonwealth family. This year, we attended a number of different fora around the Commonwealth Heads of Government 335 Meeting in London. We were represented at the Commonwealth Youth Forum, the Commonwealth Business Forum, the Commonwealth People's Forum and the Commonwealth Women's Forum. These engagements all proved to be very useful. Indeed, the young people who attended the Youth Forum were able to speak directly to the leaders of Commonwealth countries like Canada and Jamaica – as well as to the Prime Minister, Theresa May.

340 In 2018, Gibraltar also went to the Commonwealth Youth Parliament for the first time. This event took place in Jersey. Once again, our young people did very well.

In April, the Gibraltar flag flew proudly next to those of 70 of other territories and countries during the Commonwealth Games in Gold Coast, Australia.

345 At the same time, Gibraltar has continued its long-standing contact with the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association. The Minister for Equality, Samantha Sacramento, is a member of the Board of the Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians. The Minister for Culture, Steven Linares, is now an alternate in the Board of the Commonwealth Local Government Forum. Sir Joe Bossano has stepped up our engagement with the Commonwealth Telecommunications Union. Gibraltar has now joined the Commonwealth Enterprise and Investment Council.

350 Earlier this year, I met with the Secretary General of the Commonwealth, Baroness Scotland, at her offices in Marlborough Palace. I also met with the UK Minister for the Commonwealth, Lord Ahmad of Wimbledon.

Gibraltar will continue to reinvigorate our institutional links with the Commonwealth in the months and years to come.

355 Mr Speaker, the Government maintains a strong relationship with the Royal Household through Gibraltar House in London. This includes representation and attendance by Gibraltar at key ceremonial events including the annual Commonwealth Mass. The Government is working to include Gibraltar in one of Her Majesty's programmes, known as the Commonwealth Walkway. My colleague, the Minister for the Environment is leading on this matter.

360 Last year saw the first Royal visit to Gibraltar House in London. On 16th October, the Chief Minister hosted Her Royal Highness, the Princess Royal, to a reception there to mark her patronage of the Gibraltar Literary Festival. HRH unveiled a plaque to commemorate this patronage. The event was attended by speakers and sponsors of the festival.

365 Mr Speaker, I am happy to say that the Friends of Gibraltar continue to provide welcome support. They make regular use of the facilities at Gibraltar House. This is in addition to the considerable use of the building by the finance centre and by commercial and legal firms, as well as government departments and bodies.

I take this opportunity to thank Dominique Searle, Tyrone Duarte and the staff of Gibraltar House. They are Gibraltar's face in London and they continue to fulfil this role extremely well. Gibraltar House in London can be found at Head 12, Sub-Head 2(2)(a).

370 Mr Speaker, the office in Hong Kong works directly to my colleagues, the Minister for Commerce and the Minister for Economic Development. The Hong Kong office, as I have previously explained, has been included within my Head purely for administrative purposes together with the other two Gibraltar offices abroad. Since establishing our office in Asia in 2014, the aim has always been to promote, protect and further Gibraltar's interest in the Far East. This is the fastest growing economic region in the world.

380 The Office has hosted numerous Gibraltar delegations led by Ministers and private sector firms in China and has also introduced many firms from Asia to Gibraltar. It has driven significant media coverage in the region promoting Gibraltar as a jurisdiction. Private meetings with businessmen, regulators and officials have also been managed by the office in Hong Kong. This includes arrangements for a Memorandum of Understanding to be signed by the GFSC with Hong Kong regulators, related to our drive to attract DLT business to Gibraltar. The Government has worked hand in hand with the private sector to foster and promote Gibraltar's reputation as an attractive, safe and economically advantageous jurisdiction in which to conduct international business.

385 Mr Speaker, it will be clear to the House that the role of this office is commercial and not political. I therefore leave my colleagues to provide more details about its operation. The Hong Kong office is located at Head 12, Sub-Head 2(2)(c).

390 Mr Speaker, I now propose to say a few words about the Government's lobbying activities in Washington. Gibraltar and Spain have been engaged in a game of cat and mouse in Washington for a number of years. This started because the Spanish Government at the time stepped up its anti-Gibraltar rhetoric. They wrote to and met with Members of Congress who signed up to a resolution supporting Gibraltar. They have complained to those Congressmen and Congresswomen who have visited Gibraltar. They have protested to Members of the Congress and Senate Committees on external relations. They have also protested to those Congressmen who have met with us during our visits to Washington.

Indeed, Mr Speaker, they have been known to protest to Congressional offices even before such meetings have taken place and when our schedule has not been published. Quite remarkable! Nonetheless, Spain's efforts have proved to be completely counterproductive. A senior Congressman told us that no third party will dictate to him who he can or cannot meet. Other offices were curious to find out how Spain knew about our meetings in the first place. Despite this welcome reaction, it has become necessary to counter the misinformation against Gibraltar being put across by Madrid in the US capital.

This happens in several ways. First, Mr Speaker, our lobbyists Holland and Knight have held over 100 meetings with Congressional offices in the House and in the Senate, including with senior officials in the Trump administration, and multiple other communications. Secondly, we encourage members of Congress and of the US armed services to visit Gibraltar so that they can appreciate our reality for themselves.

In August, we hosted a visit by US Congressmen and staffers under the United Kingdom's MECEA scheme. That visit included two Republican Congressmen and one Democrat. There were also two Senator's Chiefs of Staff, four Congressional Chiefs of Staff and two other staffers.

There were two other visits during 2017. One visit was composed of three Members of Congress, including the Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee and the senior ranking Democrat on the Defence Sub-Committee. The other visit consisted of Representative Sanchez and Representative Meehan who came to Gibraltar for an event organised by the American Chamber of Commerce, AMCHAM. This year we were delighted to welcome another delegation from the Appropriations Committee which included a member of the US Air Force and of the US Navy.

Mr Speaker, the third way in which we counter Spain's propaganda is by making our own lobbying visits to Washington. These involve very tight schedules which often run to over twenty meetings in two full days. The House knows that Congressman George Holding tabled a Resolution which salutes the long-standing and historic relationship between Gibraltar and the United States. It also supports our right to self-determination as a UK Overseas Territory. This started with six Members of Congress. I reported last year that there were now 27. I am pleased to tell the House that this support has now increased further still to 47 Members of Congress.

Mr Speaker, as a result of Gibraltar's outreach and engagement with the US Congress and Executive Branch, there is now a broader appreciation of our position. Several Congressional leaders are concerned that Spain may take advantage of Brexit in order to advance their sovereignty claim. Some of them have advised Spain against this. A disruption of the status quo in this part of the Mediterranean is in nobody's interests. For our part, the Government will continue to present our side of the argument in Washington and in that way set the record straight.

Mr Speaker, it is relevant at this stage to say a few words about Spain and Spanish policy towards Gibraltar. In so doing, I am conscious that there was a change of Government in Madrid a few weeks ago, so much of what I have to say clearly relates to the period before that. I also want to make it clear that our lobbying in Spain itself has been led by the Chief Minister and his office. That said, I have also engaged Spanish political parties, except the Partido Popular, in places like Brussels.

Mr Speaker, we continue to try to understand Spanish policy towards us beyond its often noisy manifestations in the media. It remains our long-standing hope that progressive socio-political currents will one day triumph in Spain. If this were to happen it might become possible for Spain to finally see us as we see ourselves. This could be the basis for a fruitful partnership in areas where we share the same interests and the same concerns. In the meantime, we remain alert to any policies and actions designed to subvert our identity, our constitutional order, or our economy.

The vast majority of ordinary Spaniards are too busy with the real issues affecting their daily lives to think about Gibraltar. But the parts of the Spanish machinery of government that formulates its security policies and strategies continue to regard Gibraltar as an ‘anomaly’ at best, and as a threat at worst.

450 Two examples from different areas will serve to exemplify these attitudes. Each year Spain conducts a major maritime security and safety exercise known as MARSEC. This year MARSEC took place from 14th to 25th May. The aim of MARSEC is to improve the co-ordination between the Spanish Navy and all the national and autonomous bodies involved in maritime safety and security. It is an important exercise and good for the security and safety of mariners and cargo as 455 they transit the region. Unfortunately, the exercise also acted as the backdrop for Spanish naval incursions into BGTW.

These occurred just before the exercise started on 12th May, and then again on 15th May. Our friends in the Royal Navy deal with all such incidents proportionately and with immaculate professionalism. However, the incident on 12th May also required the intervention of our own 460 Vessel Traffic Services. They had to urge the patrol vessel Serviola to change its course for the sake of safety of navigation as a vessel was inbound from Europa Point towards our pilot boarding station in the Western anchorage at that time.

These incidents are unnecessary, unfortunate and potentially dangerous. But they occur because of the Spanish Navy’s insistence in seeing us as a threat, rather than as potential 465 partners.

The second example relates to the routine allegations that Gibraltar is a centre for money laundering. Spanish Judge José Grinda Gonzalez is a Special Prosecutor who has dedicated much of his professional career towards tackling the long shadow cast in Spain by Russian organised crime. Judge Grinda is rightly lauded for his work. However, on 25th May, whilst delivering a talk 470 about his work at the Hudson Institute, a prestigious think tank in Washington, Judge Grinda claimed Gibraltar is an example of a non-co-operating territory which was not transparent. He said that Gibraltar was ‘temporarily’ British; he said it was considered by Spain as a non-co-operating territory; he said that we are used by international criminal organisations to hide their wealth. Gibraltar was the only example he gave.

475 Mr Speaker, this is naked disinformation. It is intended to make out that Gibraltar is a security threat. It is hard to imagine that these slurs are not manufactured by more hard-line elements within the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and in related departments. This is the kind of disinformation we have to counter in Washington.

Gibraltar will continue to extend the hand of co-operation and partnership towards its 480 neighbours. The Government continues to hope that deep changes take place in Spain that might form the basis for a successful partnership in areas of mutual interest and concern.

I move on now, Mr Speaker, to civil aviation. As I said earlier, there have been discussions with Spain on the enhanced use of Gibraltar Airport. These discussions follow on from our planned departure from the European Union. They do not involve sovereignty, jurisdiction and 485 control; they involve EU-exit matters.

Our departure from the EU will change the dynamics of Gibraltar Airport issues as we have traditionally known them to be. Airport agreements in 1987, and again in 2006, made provision for the application of EU law on civil aviation to Gibraltar Airport. This had applied automatically and without question before 1987. In 1987, Gibraltar Airport was suspended from the EU 490 aviation acquis. In 2006 that suspension was lifted. However, the position once we have left the European Union will be markedly different. We will no longer be entitled to inclusion in EU civil aviation legislation by virtue of our membership of that organisation, for in under one year we will cease to be a part of it. Our relationship will therefore have to be redefined.

It is obvious, Mr Speaker, that the European Union has not tried to introduce any new 495 aviation legislation during the past year which includes a direct reference to Gibraltar. A number of such measures remain blocked by Spain in the Council. Clearly, there are some awaiting the UK’s departure from the European Union next March before making their next move.

The Government has already said that the Cordoba Agreement of 2006 provides a basis for discussion going forward. Indeed, it will be recalled that before our time in office the entire 500 design of the air terminal was premised on the opening of an access point on the Spanish side. There are corridors, walls, escalators, lifts and partitions that were put in place precisely in order to facilitate such dual access. Nonetheless, that agreement would itself need to be updated going forward as Gibraltar would now be outside the EU while Spain would remain inside it.

505 The view of the Government, Mr Speaker, is that there is space between the red lines of Gibraltar and the red lines of Spain to produce a sensible way forward. That can only be in everybody's interests. The return to power of the socialist party that signed the Cordoba Agreement may assist in this respect. It is still too early to tell.

In the meantime, the Government continues its vigorous lobbying in the European Union in order to increase awareness of our position. Let me add that we have always enjoyed the full support of the United Kingdom Government throughout.

510 Mr Speaker, my colleague, Gilbert Licudi, who has responsibility for commercial aviation, may comment further on the loss of Monarch Airlines flights following the collapse of the airline. I would like to concentrate on the repatriation effort. This ensured that passengers stranded in Gibraltar and the surrounding areas were efficiently repatriated to the United Kingdom. It could have been a nightmare scenario for the Airport. However, gladly, the logistics of the exercise proved to be a success. The co-ordination efforts between the Air Terminal Director, the Director of Civil Aviation, the UK CAA, the Convent and different Government entities worked extremely well. The repatriation of stranded passengers was conducted in an orderly manner and without significant problems.

520 Mr Speaker, the number of applications to fly an unmanned air vehicle, otherwise known as a 'drone', has increased significantly. The number of drone permits issued in 2017 was 30 – this is six times the number issued in 2016. In the first five months of this year, 25 have already been issued. Applications continue to rise. Gibraltar has three fully-qualified local drone operators. It would appear that business is booming for them given the number of requests for their services. I would like to thank the Department for the Environment and all other stakeholders for their rapid turnaround of all the requests received.

530 Mr Speaker, this year the Director of Civil Aviation has been consulted on a record number of applications for building projects. The new Airport Safeguarding proposals are working very well. The Government is encouraged to see the number of developers who continue to engage with the Director of Civil Aviation in advance of applications being submitted to Town Planning. This has resulted in support for development projects from the Director of Civil Aviation and indeed from the MoD Authorities at RAF Gibraltar. On occasions, aviation-related conditions have nonetheless been included to the planning permits.

535 Mr Speaker, I would like to thank the Director of Civil Aviation, Chris Purkiss, for his support over the last year.

The Civil Aviation vote is included at Head 13 in the Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure.

540 Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar National Archives are included under the Office of the Deputy Chief Minister. The programme of digitisation of the material at the Archives continues. A significant amount of historical material has not only been digitised, it has also been put online and can now be accessed from anywhere in the World. There are 1,238 registered visitors who consult this website on a regular basis. A total of 19,994 hits from 123 countries have been registered on the website of the Gibraltar National Archives.

545 The Government has continued to support the Archivist, Anthony Pitaluga. In 2017, he attended digital preservation workshops at Oxford University, where he was invited to speak to a global audience about our digitisation and digital preservation programme. In August, he attended a meeting of the Archives and Records Association of the United Kingdom and Ireland held in Manchester. This included training in respect of Archival Science best practice in terms of conservation, digitisation and digital preservation.

550 Mr Speaker, the Archivist has also organised a number of very successful outreach programmes during the last financial year. This included an open-air screening of original footage of the 1967 referendum and a film night series at the University of Gibraltar. The latter was fully booked.

Mr Speaker, on behalf of the Government, and I am sure of the whole House, I would like to congratulate Mr Pitaluga and his team for the wonderful work that they are doing. The preservation of our record of the past holds the key to the future. Therefore the Archivist knows that he can continue to count on my personal support and the support of the Government going forward.

The Gibraltar National Archives are at Head 12, Sub-Heads (1) and (2)(5).

Mr Speaker, the Archivist is assisting with events later this year to commemorate the end of World War I. This will include an exhibition of relevant historical material and photographs which will take place in November.

In addition to this, I am pleased to announce that Gibraltar will be taking part in the UK 'There But Not There' charity campaign. 'There But Not There' is a charity project which has chosen to mark the 1918 Armistice that put an end to a bloody conflict. It is the Centenary Commemoration for the end of World War I – this was supposed to be the War to end all Wars. Their objective is for individuals and organisations to purchase and install silhouettes of World War I soldiers in order to commemorate the fallen. In this way, the charity seeks to educate different generations about the ultimate sacrifice that was made. These silhouettes are available in different sizes. The Government will be purchasing a number of life-size models and these will be placed in different public buildings.

In addition to this, the Government has offered, as part of the commemoration, to project a silhouette image of a World War I soldier onto the north face of the Rock during the week of Remembrance Sunday. This initiative has been warmly welcomed in the United Kingdom. This year Remembrance Sunday and Armistice Day coincide on the same day.

Mr Speaker, as part of these commemorations, a book reflecting on the role that Gibraltar played during World War I will be published by Calpe Press. The book was written by Rear Admiral Albert Niblack and is his memoir of his time as the Commander of US Navy ships based in Gibraltar from 1917-1919. It carries an introduction by Professor John Hattendorf who is the Ernest J King Professor Emeritus of Maritime History at the US Naval War College in Newport, Rhode Island. Professor Hattendorf discovered the Admiral's account of the US Navy at Gibraltar which had gone unnoticed for several decades. The Professor is a member of the Gibraltar-American Council.

There were over 40 US vessels and 4,000 US sailors based at Gibraltar during World War I. Their role was to escort convoys in and out of the Mediterranean and elsewhere. The book makes it clear that Gibraltar became the principal convoy port of the world, with over one quarter of all allied tonnage touching here in order to be organised into convoys in every direction. Indeed, the American War Memorial in Line Wall Road was a thank you gift from the United States of America precisely for the pivotal role that Gibraltar played. Mr Speaker, I very much look forward to the launch of the book.

As promised in previous years, the Government continues to invest in our urban fabric and our unique heritage. We have focused on several historical sites. Many have been conserved, restored and are now open for the general public to enjoy. My colleague, the Minister for Heritage and for the Upper Rock, Dr John Cortes, has spearheaded those improvements. The Government, at the same time, will continue to improve and restore the Northern Defences.

Our dedication in bringing life back to the Princess Lines, the Queen's Lines and the King's Lines remains unwavering. This project will continue to receive the funding from this Budget which it rightfully deserves. Hanover Battery has now been cleared. About 50% of the Queen's Lines has been cleaned. The Government intends to focus our attention this year in not only removing debris from these Lines but also in providing utility infrastructure to the site.

Works in previous years have exposed an extensive area of previously hidden wonders: World War II bunkers; gun emplacements; battlements and galleries which date back to the 18th century; paths, steps, tunnels and viewing platforms. All are now visible nestled within a uniquely picturesque environment. Galleries have been cleaned and chambers used during World War II as headquarters are now accessible. The majesty of such engineering feats cannot be understated.

This year will see the continuation of walking tours of the area, kindly organised by the Heritage Trust and supported by members of my office. These have proven to be extremely popular. Mr Speaker, I would like to thank those members of the Heritage Trust for their time and their passion in presenting such facilities to the public. The Government is also grateful to the Royal Engineers who continue to assist with these operations. It is our vision to add value to such an experience by making this site a unique events venue in the coming years.

The Northern Defences are provided for at Head 102 Projects, Sub-Head 4(zzn).

Speaking of events, Mr Speaker, the Government plans to invest further in the Grand Battery which links up to the Northern Defences. The exact timing is not yet clear because this depends on the pace of the Northern Defences project itself. Our most important Battery stands defiantly facing Spain to the north. It is overlooked by the King's Lines and the Queen's Lines. This battery currently has a proud connection with the Royal Gibraltar Regiment based in Grand Battery House.

The Chief Minister and I have agreed with former Regimental Colonels to improve its external areas. This means that it will be better utilised as an events venue. Up-lighting of the monument will be provided, damaged fire steps repaired and a hard surface introduced in some areas to provide a home for our saluting Battery. This site holds considerable historical value as it has helped to define and shape our identity. Indeed, it has protected Gibraltar from the combined forces of France and Spain. In so doing, it kept Gibraltar British. It is also an area which, thanks to the Regiment, is being used to house events that are a part of our community's social calendar. The reuse of our historical assets in this way provides the most solid guarantee for their protection.

For the reasons that I have explained, there is an opening provision in this project at Head 102, Sub-Head (4)(zzq).

In these more modern times, Mr Speaker, the new battle line is in Europe. None of us banked on leaving the European Union when the last general election took place. Yet today that is the direction in which we are all headed.

The sheer volume of work and of meetings that this has generated has understandably taken up a considerable proportion of the Chief Minister's time and of my own time. We are, as we said before, leaving nothing to chance. We are leaving no stone unturned. This is what we promised to do. It is physically and logistically impossible to do more.

At the same time, we are delivering our manifesto: new schools are already under construction; new low-cost housing projects are in the pipeline; new sporting facilities will remain for our enjoyment after the Island Games next year.

All this has happened in the shadow of Brexit and, in the main, against the background of the most hostile Spanish Government that Gibraltar has known since the days of General Franco. This is, in itself, a considerable achievement.

Mr Speaker, I take this opportunity to thank my personal staff in Convent Place for their support over the last year. I am also grateful to the staff in the Lands Office and to the management and staff of Land Property Services Ltd. I also wish to take the opportunity to thank the Clerk and the staff of the Parliament, and you too, Mr Speaker, for your support.

Thank you.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Sir Joseph Bossano.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. Sir J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, this is our last Budget as members of the European Union. By the end of this financial year, Gibraltar will no longer be part of the territory of the EU and the external border of the EU will be the international Frontier between our country and the Kingdom of Spain.

I was first elected to this House, as you were, in 1972, Mr Speaker. We were both here when we voted to join the EEC in the Bill that came to the House of Assembly. I am sure we must hold some kind of record as having been part of the Parliament that joined the EEC and the Parliament that is leaving it now.

660

Optimists say that there is always a silver lining in every cloud, however black. I guess one silver lining of being outside the external frontier of the EU is that Spain can no longer claim that it is a mere fence – la verja, as they like to call it – which we always called a Frontier. So, after Brexit, the EU ends at this Frontier and what is on our side is not EU and, by definition, not Spain. At present, that is about it in silver linings; we shall see in nine months' time what else there is.

So we are back where we were in 1973 geographically and politically, but now in a world that in the intervening 45 years has changed beyond imagination and in the area of economics, driven by technology, changed more than anything else, and this is the challenge we face.

Mr Speaker, as the Leader of the Opposition, Mr Feetham frequently praised my commitment to prudential control of spending and to living within our means, values which he claims are now shared by the GSD which he led. This has always been my hallmark in this House and the core value of the GSLP. It is based on the political philosophy that our most important duty is to ensure that we can defeat any attempt by Spain to take us over. In order to do that, we have to be solvent and we need to have a rainy day fund to be able to cope with emergencies when our economy needs adjustment. He has said there has been no greater need for a rainy day fund than in these uncertain times, and I agree. So does, incidentally, the head of the IMF, who recently recommended to the EU that they should create a rainy day fund.

Regrettably, in government they rubbished the idea of a rainy day fund and proceeded to transfer all the ring-fenced funds to the Consolidated Fund and spent the money. What they could not transfer, but at one time threatened to, they simply deliberately ran down between 1997 and 2010, which was the reserves of the charity, Community Care. If they had done otherwise and added to what we left, our level of exposure to the Brexit dangers might not be so great; but they left nothing and we have had to restart from zero in 2011.

Mr Clinton has also expressed approval of my commitment to keeping spending under control, yet almost all the things they criticise are many of the things we did before 1996 in order to strengthen our economy. And they also, by the way, criticise us for continuing to do things introduced by them between 1996 and 2011.

685

I propose therefore, Mr Speaker, to do two things in my statement: evaluate where we are in our last year of membership of the EU, and address a number of the issues raised last year by the Opposition to put the record straight. I will only evaluate the economic position for this year because I cannot evaluate where we are going to be next year after March, except that we will not be members of the EU any longer and we have no idea what relationship, if any, the UK will then have with the EU; and that if there is one, whether it will be open to us to be a part of it, given article 24 and Spain's veto, and indeed whether we would want to be a part of it. No serious economist would venture to forecast the direction in which our economy will or should develop in 2019-20 or later years.

The prudential thing to do in such circumstances always is prepare for the worst and aim for the best. We can and should look at this point as a transition of our economy similar to the move from our dependence on the MoD expenditure in the 1980s.

One thing is clear: that the size and the costs of the public sector as it is structured at present is not sustainable, even without Brexit. There is a simple metric that we all need to understand – and we in this House are part of the public sector, so I include myself in what I have to say.

Prior to 2011 the public sector was growing in number and costs. It has continued to do so since 2011 and the Opposition has constantly criticised the growth, though in fact it has been little different from what was happening when they were in office, and indeed in the period

710 Things, however, will have to change. Controlling Officers have a duty to keep their Departments within budget. Ensuring that this is done is not my responsibility. Since I am responsible for public sector efficiency, my job is to ensure that we work better, i.e. more efficiently, in order to improve value for money and deliver improved services at the same or lower costs. Not keeping to budgets is in conflict with the policy of the Government to ensure greater efficiency.

715 I know that within the public sector there are many who understand the need to move in this direction, but there are also those who do not. In order to understand why this is a problem that needs to be addressed, there are only two figures we need to know: on average, public sector earnings are 25% higher than UK equivalents and 50% higher than the average earnings in the private sector. Each year these gaps get bigger, the gap between the lowest paid and the highest paid in the public sector and the average earnings gap between the public and the private sector. This is impossible to sustain economically and difficult to justify socially. The Chief Minister has explained the steps we are taking this year to address this issue.

720 In order to understand the problem, we need to realise that, in spite of the growth in the level of private sector employment prior to 2011 and since, the earnings gap has increased every year. This means that the growth needed in the private sector to provide Government revenue to meet the increasing cost of the public sector gets bigger every year. It is for this reason that it is unsustainable in economic terms. With the uncertainty we face as from next year, it is an issue that can no longer be ignored. We have a duty to try and put things right and rebalance the relationship between the public and private sectors of the economy.

730 It is a matter for regret that Mr Feetham, who claims to be committed to a policy of living within our means, last year accused us of creating austerity measures across the public sector under the guise of public sector efficiency. It seems I need to add to the list of things he does not understand what the public sector efficiency strategy, that I have responsibilities for, is.

735 We are seeking to increase the level of efficiency in the public sector by looking at working methods and the introduction of e-government that increases output without increasing manpower.

The Opposition accused us last year of overspending and austerity, both at the same time. Well, the public efficiency measures will ensure that we are able to maintain our public sector and avoid austerity, because austerity is not a matter of choice. Austerity happens the day when you do not have the money to do the things you want or need to do. It is to avoid finding ourselves in that situation that we have to examine how we deliver services and how we can improve what we do. The objective of the Ministry for Economic Development is to improve efficiency so that that day never arrives.

740 There are things that we do in the public sector which have not changed since you and I first joined the House, Mr Speaker. In the Budget of 1988 the first question the Government answered was from you, as Leader of the Opposition, and the answer was given by the Financial and Development Secretary, as was the norm in those days. The exchanges went as follows. You asked:

What was the total sum frozen by the Government when considering the Draft Estimates for 1988/89, as announced on the 30th March, (a) in respect of 'Departmental Bids' over and above the 'Treasury Allocation' for recurrent expenditure, and (b) in respect of items termed as 'Special Expenditure'?

The Financial Secretary answered:

Mr Speaker, the Government was unable in the time available between its election to office and the latest date for circulation of the Estimates to the House, to give full consideration to the details of departmental Estimates. It was therefore decided to accept, for the purposes of the Appropriation Bill, with some exceptions, related primarily to the policies of the new Government, the Treasury's estimates of departmental requirements in accordance with the formula adopted in recent years. Departmental Ministers will however give further consideration to departmental bids for additions to these Estimates, and a Supplementary Appropriation will be sought in due course in the light of this.

2. It would not be normal practice for the Government to reveal departmental bids for increases in public expenditure when these are not approved by Ministers. However, in the exceptional circumstances of this year's Appropriation Bill when the bids were prepared during the previous government's tenure of office

– when you were in Government, Mr Speaker –

it is prepared exceptionally to do so.

3. The figures are; for recurrent expenditure, £3.1 million, including £872K in respect of the Gibraltar Health Authority; and special expenditure of £½ million, including £96K in respect of the Gibraltar Health Authority.

4. To have approved these bids in full in the light of the Treasury's Revenue Estimates would have implied a deficit of £5.4 million for this year. The government is not prepared to contemplate a deficit of this magnitude and will seek to contain public spending within reasonable limits. This will be made clear during the course of the Appropriation Bill when the Government's policy on public spending is spelt out.

750 Well, this is an example of something that happens every year, when hundreds of man hours are spent by Departments on producing a list of things they would like to spend money on. The 'wish list' they call it. Members of the Opposition who have been in Government will know what I am talking about. This is done without reference to what is likely to be affordable given the 755 previous year's revenue, which is known to everyone. Then many more man hours are spent discussing these requests and removing many of them. It is how things have always been done, and this is often the only explanation as to why things are still being done in many areas.

We need to look at the detail of the workflow to see if things can be done differently. It is about working smarter, not about working harder. People can work very hard and produce very little value, through no fault of their own.

760 I recently participated in the biennial Forum for Commonwealth Ministers of Telecommunications and ICT in London. The Commonwealth countries represented by their Ministers for Telecommunications ranged in size from India with 1.2 billion citizens to Tuvalu with 11,000. In all cases, Governments were grappling with the issue of the transformational 765 changes of the use of technology in the public sector and the implications of artificial intelligence and the internet of things for the delivery of services, changes seen by most as dramatic as those brought about by the Industrial Revolution.

We in Gibraltar over the years have spent vast sums of money bringing in experts in order to provide electronic delivery of services instead of manual systems, but to date we seem to have precious little to show for such investment. I came away from the conference with the feeling 770 that we run the risk of being left behind, and that is the last thing we want to be doing at this point in time in our history.

In addition to working methods, the efficiency drive looks at how we procure supplies and other areas for possible savings. In the last two years we have concentrated on the GHA, simply because it was the biggest budget, working together with the Minister for Health and the senior 775 management team. The results can now be seen reflected in this year's GHA budget, which is close to what it was two years ago. Mr Feetham last year and in earlier years expressed the concerns of the Opposition on the growth in the size of the GHA budget since 2012.

To put the situation in context let me remind hon. Members opposite of the historic rate of increase of the GHA budgets. In 1988 we inherited a budget of £8 million from the AACR 780 administration. The GSLP Government increased that budget to £20 million by 1996 – two and a half times the original figure. Under the GSD, the GHA budget grew from £20 million to £80 million by 2012, four times the original figure. Since 2012 it has grown further from £80 million to £120 million, a 50% increase.

Let me make clear that by making this comparison I am not for one moment suggesting that 785 there are any grounds for complacency. There is a long road ahead before we get to where we should be across the public sector as a whole, but what has been done so far in the GHA shows that it is possible to exercise better control of spending.

790 Last year the Hon. Mr Feetham went into an analysis to justify his extraordinary decision as Leader of the Opposition to vote against the Appropriation Bill which provided the estimates of expenditure for 2017-18. And I am sorry that his successor has followed his bad example

This decision is being repeated this year. This is something that no Opposition had ever done before in Gibraltar's history so one would think it would take something unique to make it happen in 2017, to explain how this policy shift on the part of the GSD had come about, because it was only the four GSD Members present who voted against.

795 Mr Feetham was so sure of what he was doing he told us that history would judge his decision and that their speeches were going to be there as a matter of public record. Shortly after this, he resigned as Leader of the GSD and the Opposition and appointed the Hon. Mr Clinton acting in both capacities pending an election within the GSD. He then supported a non-elected Member of this House, Mr Azopardi as candidate, who had previously left the GSD 800 because he had joined it, in the process going against his own choice of candidate, the Hon. Mr Clinton.

I am not sure if the Hon. Member feels that history has already judged what he did and punished him enough for his mistake or there is still a final judgement to come in the future, based on the public record of the speeches he made in support of a policy of voting against the 805 annual expenditure, which of course is to pay for the civil service and all the other expenses that enables the Government to provide services for our country.

However, given that the Hon. Mr Phillips has endorsed the position of voting against the Appropriation Bill, and for the sake of the public record that Mr Feetham expects history to judge the episode by in future, I feel I have to show that his arguments last year were utter and 810 complete nonsense.

Mr Clinton, when he spoke after him, said he echoed the sentiments expressed by his learned friend, Mr Feetham, implying that he was not the instigator of the policy but was following the lead of his Party and Opposition Leader. However, he went further and stated that he could not support last year's estimate of expenditure or indeed any other Appropriation Bill presented by 815 us which, in his judgement, did not have the necessary facts and figures to arrive at an informed decision. This in fact means that for as long as this position remains the view of the GSD they will be voting against forever more.

Incidentally, the facts and figures for last year were also the same as the ones provided between 2012 and 2016 when he voted in favour of the Appropriation Bill. They are also the 820 same as the GSD's Appropriation Bills between 1996 and 2011; the same as the GSLP's between 1988 and 1996; and the same as the AACR's between 1972 and 1987.

So what was so special about last year? Neither Mr Feetham nor Mr Clinton sought to explain what was different about last year's Appropriation Bill to make them vote against. I will in due course and for the record show that their analysis was wrong in a number of areas mentioned, 825 especially that of Mr Feetham.

But at this stage let me point out something that should have been blindingly obvious to the two Members. What Mr Clinton implied last year was that he believed the information contained in the book for recurrent expenditure was but the tip of the iceberg of Government spending and that the bulk of recurrent spending was not contained in the Appropriation Bill.
830 This information was what they required should be shown and that unless they were shown the rest of the iceberg they would not vote for the tip.

Well, even if they had been correct in their assumptions, which they were not, there is no logic in their argument. The Appropriation Bill is the approval by Parliament for the withdrawal of money from the Consolidated Fund. The vote is to provide this approval without which no-835 one can get paid, (A Member: Exactly.) including the Hon. Members themselves who voted against, since Opposition salaries come from Head 5, Sub-Head 3(a).

So they do not vote for what they are being asked to vote – for which full details are being provided, as they have been, in the same form, in every previous Appropriation Bill since I joined this House in 1972 – because rightly or wrongly they believe there is a far bigger level of 840 expenditure, the iceberg, that was going to be spent in the last 12 months by the Government without them being asked to vote for it and without them being given an explanation for it. Well, the explanation that they had was for what they had to vote.

Even if this other version had been correct, which it was not and is not, one has nothing to do with the other and I will show why, Mr Speaker. It is the withdrawal of money from the Consolidated Fund that has to be approved. That is what this Parliament, the House of Assembly 845 before and the Legislative Council before, has ever had to approve.

Mr Clinton's concept of channelling Government company revenues and expenditure through the Consolidated Fund, which would then require a vote for the money to be spent by the company, is something that makes no sense whatsoever. It has never been put forward as a 850 GSD policy objective in any election. It is contrary to the way every previous Government has dealt with the running of State-Owned Companies in the 15 years of the GSD administration, the eight years of the GSLP before that and the AACR before 1988.

What is the rationale for this radical change in the public accounts of Gibraltar? What is it that Mr Clinton believes is happening, to come to the conclusion that the level of annual 855 recurrent revenue and expenditure in the annual estimates is the tip of the iceberg? Or, rather, was the tip of the iceberg in respect of the expenditure about to be incurred in 2017-18?

The tip of an iceberg, Mr Speaker, is known to be just 10% of the mass of the whole. So he was telling us that he was refusing to vote to withdraw £490 million from the Consolidated Fund over the financial year to pay for recurrent Government costs because the Government 860 intended to spend an additional £4.41 billion, the submerged 90% of the iceberg, on recurrent spending in 2017-18. Perhaps we can all agree that he must have been exaggerating a little bit when he made this comparison.

Certainly he was exaggerating the alleged hidden recurrent expenditure when compared to the estimate made by Mr Feetham who argued:

– these estimates of revenue and expenditure – is only half of the picture of what the Government has directly or indirectly spent ...

Well, actually we were supposed to be voting on what we were planning to spend and not on the forecast outturn of the previous year, which is the only possible interpretation of his use of the past tense. So he seemed to be saying that in the year 2016-17 the forecast outturn of 870 £475 million was only half of the recurrent expenditure we had incurred in that year, which according to him would have amounted to another £475 million not shown in the estimates and not funded from the Consolidated Fund.

So Mr Feetham's allegation at this stage in his argument for not voting, was that in 2016-17 we had spent an amount equal to the funding of the whole recurrent expenditure of the Government, an additional £475 million spent through the companies that year which was not 875 shown in the estimates. This of course is utter and complete nonsense and pure invention on his part, and incidentally does not fit in with any of his other arguments last year to explain his decision to vote against the Appropriation Bill.

His explanation went as follows:

The very simple reason for that – meaning that the expenditure in the book showed only half of what had been spent in 2016-17

is that the Government has borrowed some £772 million – let me repeat that: £772 million – that we know of, through Government-owned or controlled companies which it has used and continues to use to fund its expenditure, and none of that is reflected in this book that we are debating here today.

880 Well, whatever it is that the Hon. Member thought he was debating in the course of the Appropriation Bill, it clearly was not the Appropriation Bill, because that was a book. Moreover, he was obviously not talking about the estimates for 2017-18, he was only arguing about the estimates for 2016-17 that he had voted in favour of the previous year, because he had then connected the argument to the forecast outturn surplus of £75.8 million for 2016-17.

885 This, which he said the Chief Minister was saying poker-faced, was the result of the £772 million, we were told – the £75.8 million was a result of the £772 million. I would remind Members that we are talking about recurrent revenue and recurrent expenditure and that the £75.8 million for 2016-17 was the excess of recurrent revenue over recurrent expenditure. Mr Feetham was talking about borrowing, as if the borrowing was annually recurrent revenue used 890 to meet annually recurrent expenditure in order to create a surplus.

If anyone in this House has ever demonstrated he did not have a clue what he was talking about, no-one has done it as clearly and explicitly or as well as Mr Feetham did last year; and here is the evidence, Mr Speaker.

He then added:

But of course if the debt in Government-owned companies to the tune of £772 million – that pot of money – is being used to pay for expenditure that is properly the Government's expenditure, and that expenditure is not reflected in these accounts, it is not possible to say that the Government is running the public finances of Gibraltar at a surplus of revenue over expenditure.

895 Mr Speaker, this analysis of the recurrent expenditure of the Government and a surplus of recurrent revenue is so ridiculously wrong that it beggars believe how anyone who has been in Government can make such a statement.

So the Opposition was not able to judge whether we had made £75.8 million surplus or not during the preceding year 2016-17, because they believed Government companies had 900 borrowed £772 million and used some of it for spending that should have been included on the expenditure side of the forecast outturn for 2016-17. Amazing!

Let me explain to the Hon. Member how the book shows the difference he cannot explain by looking at the book, and then he does not have to invent outlandish explanations.

The 2016-17 Appropriation Bill which he voted for, estimated revenue of £590.8 million, an 905 expenditure of £517.5 million and projected a surplus of £20.3 million. The forecast outturn that he was referring to last year, for the surplus which he was quoting was £75.8 million – that is £55.5 million more than anticipated at the time the Appropriation Bill was approved by him in 2016. He told us last year he could not tell if this was true because there was £772 million borrowed by companies which had taken on expenditure that should have been in the book.

910 So if removing recurrent expenditure from the approved estimate was not the reason for the increased surplus, as I say, what was it? Well, the answer was under his nose in the book.

Expenditure was actually higher than budgeted at £578 million instead of £570.5 million, but the revenue came higher by a much bigger margin at £653.8 million instead of £590.8 million.

915 So increased revenue of £63 million, less increased expenditure of £7.5 million, increased by £55.5 million the estimated surplus in the 2016-17 Appropriation Bill of £20.3 million, to the forecast level of £75.8 million, a difference of £55.5 million.

Simple. All in the book.

In fact not only all in the book, the Hon. Mr Clinton knew it was all in the book and actually said so himself when he referred to the reasons for the surplus of £75.8 million. He said, I quote:

The Government's larger than expected surplus is entirely due to revenue being £63 million greater than expected.

920 Entirely due to this, not due to the so-called £772 million of eye-watering debt, nor the result of duty on property sales in any preceding years, nor the investments made by the Savings Bank in order to be able to pay the attractive rates of interest that it does to its depositors. No, Mr Speaker, entirely due to the extra revenue.

925 The analysis by the Hon. Mr Feetham last year was about the 2016-17 forecast surplus: but what did he actually say in 2016 when he voted in favour of the Appropriation Bill? The tone of his address then was so different that it is difficult to believe we are talking about the same person. He told us that we faced potentially the single largest threat to our economic model since the closure of the Frontier, and in his view in the history of democratic government in Gibraltar. As a result, he said it was important that the debate took place within a framework of sober analysis, prudence and realism. He then said that, in spite of his criticisms over four years of Government spending, it was his duty to steer a careful line between honest assessment and the need to maintain confidence and work with the Government to steer Gibraltar into calmer waters.

He then added:

To do otherwise would constitute a dereliction of duty and it is not what I am in politics for. ...

It is, therefore, a difficult Budget speech that I deliver today balancing, as I must, objective observation of the state of our public finances – which is my principle duty after all to this House – against a very difficult backdrop indeed 935 I ask myself, Mr Speaker, what on earth possessed him a year later to make him abandon that balance of the need not to undermine confidence in Gibraltar and, for the first time ever in our history, vote against the appropriation of funds from the Consolidated Fund to enable Government to continue functioning after July 2017? Or is it that they do not realise if they had the majority and were successful in not approving funds, on 1st August nobody in Gibraltar would get paid?

940 The arguments he used in 2017, which were flawed then and flawed when they had been used in previous Budgets with the same arguments, are not the answer. There was nothing new in the Budget of 2017 and nothing had happened lessening the Brexit threat since 2016. Indeed, if anything, it had got worse with the article 24 veto granted to Spain and the failure of the EU to respond to any of the compromises and ideas suggested by the UK. We are now much closer to the cliff-edge departure than we were in 2016, since to date the position has not improved.

945 So what was the reduction of expenditure in 2016-17 from the £772 million which the Hon. Member had in mind which prompted him to vote against?

950 He told us last year:

Today the Government comes to this House and says it has made a surplus of £75.7 million.

He made a mistake, he should have said £75.8 million. But there...

It is a complete nonsense when it is not accounting for expenses in Government-owned companies. A simple example – but by no means the only one, Mr Speaker – is that through Government-owned companies the Government is paying the commuted pensions of civil servants. That is traditional Government expenditure and that expenditure no longer appears in this book because it is being paid through Government-owned or controlled companies.

I interjected from a sedentary position, which I know is not allowed:

Which is a jolly good idea.

– that was my intervention.

Mr Feetham responded:

I hear the Hon. the Father of the House saying it is a jolly good idea. Well, Mr Speaker, that may or may not be so,

This requires quite a lot of explaining to put the record straight and demonstrate how confused the Hon. Member was and probably still is.

I was not saying it was a jolly good idea, Mr Speaker. I would not say that, since the idea was mine. But I can tell the House that I have been told by some highly qualified people that it was a brilliant idea. Be that as it may, all I was simply doing, was quoting what someone else had said in the previous Budget, the words that I had quoted.

This person in the Budget of 2016 said:

The commuted pensions of civil servants have traditionally been an expense of the Government and now it is an expense of Credit Finance Company Ltd.

The effect – and it does not take a rocket scientist to work this out – is that of course the Government does not have to pay that money directly itself, to pay for the commuted pensions of civil servants ... which is a jolly good idea, Mr Speaker, I am not criticising it.

Do you remember Mr Speaker, who said:

... it's a jolly good idea, I am not criticizing it

Wait for it. It was the Hon. Mr Feetham, who clearly had forgotten a year later what he had said in 2016. Thankfully, my own memory is still serving me slightly better than that and I can remember things I have said a year ago and indeed many years before. It is obvious that the Hon. Member is not a rocket scientist and a jolly good thing too, otherwise you would have lots of rockets exploding all over the place.

He was not criticising me in 2016 he just wanted it explained. Okay, I have done this before but I will explain it again and let's hope this time he remembers.

Mr Speaker, when the GSD decided to allow private sector employees to commute 100% of their pensions on retirement, I asked from the Opposition for the same to be done for Civil Service Pensioners. The then Chief Minister, the Greatest Gibraltarian of our time, did not reject the idea in principle but said it could not be financed. Well, I had thought of a way of financing it and we committed ourselves to doing it in the 2011 general election. It is what I call a 'Reverse Annuity'.

In defined benefit schemes, what you do is you accumulate a sum of money which matures when you retire. This sum is available to buy an annuity, which incidentally the GSD Government at one stage announced they would be providing using the Gibraltar Savings Bank, which I never criticised them for, but which they never put into practice. The annuity is the income paid to the pensioner purchased by the lump sum received from the pension fund.

What we provide is the opposite but with a similar mechanism. The civil servant retires and gets paid by the Government the pension, monthly, and can use this income to buy a lump sum, the commutation, by entering into an agreement with Credit Finance.

This was initially done for civil servants only, and in 2012 the then Hon. Leader of the Opposition approached me to ask whether it was going to be extended to Members of this House as he was interested in the facility. I told him I was planning to find a way of extending it as the only persons who otherwise would not be able to enjoy the opportunity of 100% commutation would be Members of the House, now that both public and private sector employees were able to do it.

Although originally he had some reservations, when I explained the mechanism in this House he saw the logic of how the system worked. So let's be clear, Credit Finance does not pay and has never paid Government pensions. Government pensions continue to be a direct charge on the Consolidated Fund as provided by law and does not require Members to vote the funds in the Appropriation Bill.

So nothing has been removed from the voting of the Appropriation Bill and therefore it is nonsense to say:

I am not voting because there is less in the recurrent expenditure which is the pensions no longer paid by the Government but now paid by Credit Finance in order to reduce this size of the expenditure of the Government.

1000 This is not the case now and has never been the case any time since 2011. The cost to the Government of paying Civil Service Pensions has grown, but is not included in the amount we are voting this year or in the amount we have voted in any year since 1973 when you and I, Mr Speaker, voted in our first Budget.

1005 The cost of pension payments from the Consolidated Fund was put by the GSD Government at £19.6 million in 2010-11. It was estimated to grow to £20 million by their last Budget for 2011-12 and the outturn was £21.5 million, an increase of £1.9m over the preceding year. It was estimated to cost £36.5 million last year when the Hon. Member voted against the Appropriation Bill and the outturn is now put at £37 million. The estimate for the coming year is £40 million.

1010 So, Mr Speaker, from the last Budget of the GSD in 2011-12 to the Budget for the current year 2018-19 the cost to the Government, which Mr Feetham said was no longer being paid by the Government, has grown 100% and is now put at £40 million instead of £20 million a year. This 100% increase over the last seven years compared with a slower increase in the last seven years of the GSD administration when the estimate in 2004-05 for the Consolidated Fund Pension payment was £11.5 million and grew to £20 million in 2011-12 – an increase of 74%.

1015 The cost to the Government of paying pensions has in fact grown faster than the departmental expenditure that is voted on and included in the Appropriation Bill, which has increased from an estimate of £316.6 million in their last Budget in 2011-12 to £512.3 million for 2018-19 – an increase of 61.8%.

1020 Indeed, I predict that the cost of pensions will continue to grow at a faster rate than the recurrent operating costs of the Government since this is something we have to control and to some extent are already doing. That is, we are taking steps to contain the latter but there is nothing we can do about the former.

1025 Whilst on the question of Credit Finance and the payment of pensions, I will deal also with the argument on the size of the non-Government debt, the eye watering non-Government debt, Mr Speaker. Let me just first remind Members opposite that I do not need any lessons from them on a sound and prudential approach to debt or public spending. I would refer Members to the first Budget of the GSLP in 1988 to which I referred earlier in the context of question No. 1 of 1988 from yourself, Mr Speaker.

1030 In 1987, by the way, the main Budget speech had been delivered by the Financial and Development Secretary as had been the case in every Budget since I was elected in 1972. The Constitution of 1969 made it mandatory that he should move the Appropriation Bill, which now is done by the Minister for Finance. This change, brought about by the 2006 Constitution was claimed by the GSD in the 2007 Budget to be evidence that we were now decolonised.

1035 If that were the case then we were de facto decolonised in 1988, because this is how the Financial and Development Secretary made a much shorter speech in the first GSLP Budget, a one-minute statement starting with the words:

I propose to make a very short introductory statement ...

– and ended with the words:

The only other thing I need to say, Mr Speaker, is that having spent most of my period as Financial Secretary restraining public expenditure with varying success, of course, it not only is an honour for me to move an Appropriation Bill which comes as closely to Treasury purity as it is possible for me to imagine.

Our first budget.

but that I have great pleasure as well in commending the Bill to the House. Having it is possible made that point, Mr Speaker, 'El Giri' will now give way to 'El Jefe'.

– as already mentioned by the Chief Minister.

1040 The Hon. Brian Traynor with whom I had crossed swords from the Opposition benches on many occasions had a sense of humour and we became very good friends.

In my 1988 contribution I concentrated on making clear that we would tackle the deficits but not borrow to cover them – which had been happening in the past. I said:

we do not believe in borrowing for recurrent expenditure and that therefore it will be our intention to use the powers in the Loans Empowering Ordinance which is in the pipeline for investments and not to finance recurrent expenditure

1045 A policy which I am glad to say was also followed by the GSD Government after 1996. However, it is also worth pointing out that the state-owned companies in existence were never included in the Government estimates then, during the GSLP Government or subsequent years of the GSD Government. Incidentally, as has been previously stated, it was the GSD who introduced borrowing by companies as an alternative to Government debt. This was initially done for the purchase and conversion of the Europort Building. And in reply to my question to the then Chief Minister, he said that although there was a slightly higher rate of interest it was not sovereign debt but debt secured on the value of the assets.

1050 The same concept was then used for the construction of car parks which was removed from the I & D Fund and where the revenue from the car parks was expected to service the loan, but in the end it was found not to be sufficient.

1055 The GSD in 2011, when the Hon. Minister Feetham was in Government, had entered into an arrangement to raise a company loan for the proposed Upper Rock Generating Station. There was to be a roadshow in the States to raise the money and a commitment of a 5% annual increase in electricity charges to create profits from the sale of electricity to service the loan. All of them outside the book.

What about the performance of the economy?

1060 The Hon. Mr Feetham last year said I was right to be cautious about the size of the future GDP. In 2007 when the Hon. Member joined the GSD Government I predicted that the GDP for 2008 would be £800 million. The view of the GSD Government, then expressed in that Budget by the Greatest Gibraltarian of our time, was not very flattering. Rather than reply to my analysis of the state of the economy in that Budget, the reaction was to tell me that my questioning of the figures did nothing for my credibility and even less for my waning reputation as a supposed economist.

Well, we all know that in politics you cannot please everybody.

1070 I was then predicting an £800 million result for the 2008 GDP. Three years later the GSD published the 2008 GDP and it was £806 million. So I had underestimated the figure. I also predicted the 2012 result at £1.2 billion, and the final figure came in at £1.201 billion, so I underestimated again, this time by £1 million. Based on the £1.2 billion, I predicted the result for 2015-16 of £1.8 billion. This year we have the final figure for 2015-16 and it is £1.794 billion – £6 million below my estimate.

1075 The projection for 2019-20 was £2.4 billion, a £600m increase in output over the four years. The projected estimate for 2017-18 is estimated at £2.18 billion – a £386 million increase in output in two years. This figure can go down as more actual results are imputed and estimates replaced, but if it stays at this level then there is a very good chance that we will meet our target or even slightly surpass it. I am more cautious than the colleague on my right.

1080 One of the main contributors to GDP growth is the growth in the payroll of the labour force. In the case of the construction industry this is the payroll of construction workers. In turn this is the best indication of how much of the growth of the economy is due to construction projects and can be deduced by comparing in different periods of time the number of construction workers.

1085 I have explained this before to Mr Feetham and Members of the Opposition, but they seem to have lapses of memory and they nonetheless insist on the basis of personal intuition that the growth in the economy is fuelled by Government construction projects financed by the eye-watering £772 million – this mysterious £772 million which appears in almost every Budget, with the figure changing every time on the way up.

1090 I will provide the Hon. Member opposite with the construction figures again to jog his memory, and update the information in the light of the 2017 Employment Survey Report tabled in the House which shows what the latest position is.

1095 I have previously compared the private sector labour market on different dates to establish the relative importance of the construction sector showing how it played a bigger role before 2011. This looked at the position in 2007, 2011 and 2015 which I remind Members of now, and add an update by including 2005, that is going back two further years, and 2017 so that we are looking at where we are today – the changes over six years instead of four years.

1100 The number of private sector jobs at the start of the previous period, 2007, excluding the construction industry, amounted to 13,340. In the four years to 2011 it grew to 14,038, an increase of 698 jobs, representing a 5.2% expansion of private sector jobs market outside construction. The growth in GDP was 49% in the same period. So it is self-evident that the private sector non-construction expansion can only have accounted for a small share of the growth – the growth was 49%, the non-construction growth was 5.2%, so that cannot have been responsible. The construction sector, however, increased by 701 jobs – more than the whole of the rest of the private sector together, an increase of 31.5% and evidently the main engine of the increase.

1105 This was the position under the GSD. Not since.

1110 In the four years from 2011, by comparison, the figures show the opposite. The GDP grew by 49.1% and the private sector, excluding the construction industry, increased in size to provide 2,926 jobs. Employees in the non-construction sector went up from 14,038 to 16,964 – 20.8% higher. The contrast with what was happening in the construction industry could not be greater. The extra jobs in the construction sector from 2011 to 2015 was 180, amounting to a 6% increase in the workforce.

1115 The evidence is clear: the growth between 2007 and 2011 was much, much more dependent on a public sector capital programme construction boom than has been the case in the period 2011 to 2015. Since 2015, non-construction private sector jobs have grown by almost 2,000 bringing the total since 2011 to 4,925. By contrast, the private sector workforce in the same period has grown by a mere 144.

1120 So the economic analysis of the Opposition, as expressed by Mr Feetham last year, as the Leader of the Opposition, was that the economy had grown in one year from £1.75 billion to £1.91 billion – he did not question the figures – an increase of £160 million. And that this £160 million was to a large extent due to the Government injecting hundreds of millions of pounds to produce significant economic growth. Hundreds of millions of pounds of Government money, plus private sector investment, to provide £160 million growth?

1125 Not rocket science, we were told. Well, certainly not economic science.

1125 Was there hundreds of millions of pounds being injected into the construction industry? In the construction industry there were 303 less workers in 2016-17 than in 2015-16. So, no hundreds of millions of pounds injected that year.

1130 Maybe the Hon. Member did not mean to apply his analysis to just one year. So let's look at what has happened since 2011. Did 144 more construction workers in 2017 than in 2011 produce the bulk of the six year growth and not the 4,925 workers in the other industries?

Are they serious Mr Speaker? Do they really believe anybody in Gibraltar will swallow all this? Do they really believe it themselves?

1135 It seems to me the explanation is that they decided a long time ago that the only way the economy could grow was on the back of a construction boom because it was what was happening between 2007 and 2011, the only time that Mr Feetham was in Government, and therefore they came to the conclusion that this is what must have also been happening since 2011, irrespective of the evidence to the contrary.

1140 Let me add one further comparison. I have given the changes in the composition of the private sector workers in the six years 2011 to 2017, construction workers 144 and the rest of the private sector 4,925. So let's look at the six years 2005 to 2011: the increase in that period under the GSD was construction workers up 1,321, not 144 – 1,321 in the construction; the rest of the private sector, 2,827.

Mr Speaker, the figures speak for themselves.

1145 The Hon. Mr Feetham and Mr Clinton have continued their attack on the Gibraltar Savings Bank, using the same arguments that they used before 2015. They seem to forget that the policy of the Government on the role of the Savings Bank was defended in a general election and forms part of our election manifesto. That is to say, we are doing with the Savings Bank what we promised we would do and received a mandate from the electorate to implement. This is to grow the size of the Savings Bank with a target of increasing deposits to achieve a deposit base of £1.6 billion by 2019-20, up from the £1.1 billion that we expected to have reached in 2015-16.

1150 In 2015-16, we actually fell short of the target with £990 million in deposits which, added to the reserves, came to a total of £1.016 billion. Since then we have had a higher increase in deposits from the public, both new and existing customers, and deposits recently stood at around £1.35 billion, up £360 million since 2015-16.

1155 I am sure Members opposite must be horrified to hear that the Gibraltar Savings Bank is doing so well, especially the Hon. Mr Feetham who told us last year that the Savings Bank was the culprit (Interjection) in what he described as the 'eye-watering debt of £772 million' – that he knew of – which, when added to the Government debt of £447 million, produced an even more eye-watering debt of £1.2 billion. A gross debt of that figure he said was running at 62.5% of GDP.

1160 Well, I will deal with his debt fabrication shortly, but let me just remind the House that the percentage of gross debt to GDP no longer has any meaning or relevance because he, in Government, removed the legal link between gross debt and GDP.

1165 So let's stay with the Savings Bank for a while longer. He told us last year that the Savings Bank in 2011 had £27.6 million of debentures and bonds from the public. He said,

In other words, money borrowed by the Gibraltar Savings Bank from members of the public owed to members of the public was £27.6 million. The total of debentures and bonds issued by the Gibraltar Savings Bank as at 31st March 2017 was £834.5 million.

1170 That represents an increase, Mr Speaker, of 3,023% in six years. Actually he was quoting the wrong figure: the Savings Bank did better than this, or worse on the watery eyes of the Opposition. The figure for debentures and bonds in last year's book was £902.3m, a 3,269% increase, and the final figure for March 2017 was a £921.9m increase, a magnificent – or, if you suffer from watery eyes – an eye-watering 3,340% increase, expected this year to have reached over £1 billion. An incredible 3,623% increase. I am looking at doing at even better, or worse in the eyes of Members opposite, in the next financial year.

1175 He then said this was not a sovereign fund. Well, of course it is not a sovereign fund. But describing it as a debt to the public is a strange way of describing what a savings bank or any other bank does and he never described it like that when he was in Government.

He then added:

The reason for that huge increase is that the Government embarked on a process, when they got elected, of shifting debentures issued by the Government directly, which legally counts as public debt, to the GSB, where it does not count as debt of the Government ...

– it is a debt owed by the Gibraltar Savings Bank, to members of the public.

Let's be clear, the Hon. Member thinks that this £800 million increase is because we took Government debt and put it in the Savings Bank and therefore the Government debt went down 1180 £800 million. Based on the figures and the language he was using, he was saying the growth from £27 million to £834 million in 2017 was paralleled by a drop of Government debentures and the replacement by the Gibraltar Savings Bank Bonds and debentures.

This, we all know, is totally false. In the first place there was no £807 million of Government debentures to shift to the Savings Bank. Secondly, in December there was £280 million in 1185 Government debentures which reached £318 million in March 2012. Thirdly, the debentures were repaid to members of the public who invested some of their cash in Savings Bank debentures, around £250 million. Fourthly, the Savings Bank in turn purchased £250 million of Gibraltar Government debentures, i.e. public debt, so the public debt was the same.

The result of this transaction was that the level of Government debt was reduced by £68
1190 million that the public took in cash, and that the public debt is still composed of the £250 million of debentures that the Savings Bank bought and it is the same as it was before the transaction took place, and the rest is the £200 million from the other banks.

For reasons that I cannot understand, the Members opposite think that it is very bad for the Government to borrow from its own bank and give it the benefit of the interest paid, but fine to 1195 do so from other banks and give them the benefit. Mr Speaker, the policy of the Government today on the Gibraltar Savings Bank is the policy of the GSLP Government of 1988 on the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

The GSLP increased the role of the Savings Bank in 1988 and developed it so that by 1996 it had £165.9 million instead of £2.7 million in 1988, a change I brought about as Chief Minister, an 1200 even more terrible percentage increase of 6,144% which the GSD of the time did not complain. If they had been suffering from watery eyes this place would be a lagoon now.

The Savings Bank's role has been correctly identified by the Hon. Member, Mr Clinton previously, describing it as fulfilling the function of a Development Bank. It did so between 1988 1205 and 1996 and continues to do so since 2011. In between, the GSD ran the bank down to nothing and if they ever get back into Government they will do the same again, given the remarks of Mr Feetham as Leader of the Opposition and Leader of the GSD in 2017 and earlier years.

Since when has anybody described a bank as having debts because it accepts deposits from the public? The only reason for doing so is to make it sound negative. Banks exist to take savings 1210 from the public and reinvest the money at a profit. This is what the business consists of. Or was it something different when Mr Clinton was running his bank?

The Government is proud of the role of the Savings Bank in providing a secure home for the savings of our people and putting those savings to work for the economic growth of our country. Mr Feetham talks of it as if it was something bad that we are trying to hide and he had 1215 discovered something that the public did not know.

Mr Speaker, he knows that as Minister for the Savings Bank I produce a report containing this information for our customers which gives details of the increases that are taking place in 1220 deposits every year. This is something that reflects the confidence that our customers have in the institution they see as a safe home for their money. He should ask Mr Clinton whether the bank that employed him as a director would have punished or rewarded him if the bank had increased deposits by over 3,000%.

So now we know that no Government debt was transferred from the Government to the Savings Bank in order to reduce the Government debt. The £447 million which was added to the 1225 £772 million to increase the eye-watering effect by combining it into £1.2 billion can now be discarded. The Government debt of £447 million is the reduced level of the Government debt from the GSD debt of £520 million in 2011. It is not money borrowed by us since 2011.

What about the £772 million of non-Government debt? The £400 million of the so-called debt is an investment in shares of Credit Finance Company Limited. Credit Finance has a money-lending licence – money-lending companies lend money that is how they make a profit for their 1230 owners. So if Credit Finance lends money to the Sunborn at a commercial rate of interest this is not a hidden non-Government debt, it is the debt of the Sunborn Company owners.

If the loan was to be made to the Sunborn Hotel that is berthed in Victoria Docks in London it would not matter in the watery eyes of the Opposition, because all the investments in loans in the UK shown in the list of assets of the Savings Bank are okay as far as they are concerned.

1235 If Credit Finance lends money to a former Chief Minister who pays interest and repays the loan by transferring to Credit Finance his entitlement to a final salary pension – and so do countless other Civil Service Pensioners – it is not in order to reduce the expenditure in the Appropriation Bill, as has already been shown, and it is not a hidden debt of the Government because the loan has not been made to the Government but to the individual.

1240 If the Savings Bank buys shares in Gibtelecom it is not a hidden Government debt, it is the purchase of an asset just as if it bought shares in British Telecom. If the GHA pays rent to RBS in respect of the building it occupies which the GSD as Government arranged, this is not hidden Government debt, it was a perfectly reasonable and acceptable form of meeting the needs of the GHA which we in the GSLP, in opposition, did not criticise when it was done. If they did the same in respect of the construction of car parks using the Car Park Company it is not a hidden 1245 Government debt, but creating an asset that produces revenue.

This is how the Opposition last year concocted a £772 million eye-watering hidden debt used, they said, to meet recurrent Government expenditure, when much of it was done before 2017, and some of it even before 2011. This is what was used to justify their incomprehensible vote against the Appropriation Bill. Indeed in the division vote Mr Feetham said ‘No’ and added 1250 ‘Account for the £772 million’ – so the link could not be clearer.

In closing, I want to say that the Training for Employment Apprenticeships and Vocational Training is working as intended and the results reflect the increase in Gibraltar employment. The October 2017 Gibraltar employment level at 11,130 was 910 more than in October 2011. This compares with an increase of 350 between 2005 and 2011, the last six years of the GSD 1255 Government.

We have had some success in placing unemployed workers in the private sector construction industry and elsewhere using the public contract requirement introduced in 2010 by the GSD, which I welcomed at the time.

In the 2011 Budget the then Minister for Labour said:

...there are many areas of employment within the private sector that are not attractive enough to the local unemployed. As I have stated in the past, few, if any, are clamouring to replace foreign labour in the private construction market, catering, hotels, shops, bars or restaurants.

1260 Last year, Mr Feetham said:

My heart breaks every time I see someone break down in front of me, as indeed they do, because they simply cannot find employment – any employment anywhere in any building site in Gibraltar.

I am happy to look into any cases of local unemployed persons able and willing to work, and help in any way I can if the Hon. Member provides me with the information. Similarly, my doors continue to be open to any employer in any industry who is interested in taking on apprentices for which my Department would provide financial support. And therefore I repeat my call that 1265 they should approach me directly, since approaching Mr Phillips does not enable us to engage as he is unwilling to provide me with the contact.

Finally, I apologise for having to cut my contribution short, as I will be flying to London this evening, to officially open the magnificent, new, asbestos-free Calpe House tomorrow morning. (Banging on desks) I will be back tomorrow evening and, as Father of the House, I hope 1270 Members will behave themselves while I am away. (Laughter)

As Patron of the Calpe House Charity, I would also like to thank Members opposite once again for their support, and especially the Hon. Mr Feetham for his initiative, at the start of the fund-raising campaign, in coming forward to donate his salary of one month to the charity.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

1275 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): How true it is that the truth will set you free, Mr Speaker. I move that the House –

Mr Speaker: I move a recess –

1280 Hon. Chief Minister: Sorry?

Mr Speaker: A 20-minute recess.

Hon. Chief Minister: I move that the House should recess for 20 minutes.

The House recessed at 5.07 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.19 p.m.

1285 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, in the immortal words of Emile Zola – I Accuse!

Mr Speaker, I accuse this Government of failing to produce a meaningful Budget and prudent Estimate Book for 2018-19.

1290 Mr Speaker, I accuse this Government of failing to meet basic standards of transparency and accountability in public finance

And, Mr Speaker, I accuse the Chief Minister of being the architect of this dismal state of affairs in respect of our public finances and thus utterly failing in his duty as Minister of Finance.

1295 And, Mr Speaker, these accusations are not mere rhetoric and I intend to prove beyond reasonable doubt each of those as being true.

And, Mr Speaker, as Zola himself reasoned, and I quote:

My duty is to speak out; I do not wish to be an accomplice in this travesty.

1300 The Government set out quite clearly in response to my motion in March, earlier this year that it was a pillar of GSLP policy not to have the Finance Bill presented at Budget time. As a result, Mr Speaker, nothing – absolutely nothing – that the Chief Minister has said today as regards any budgetary measures or tax changes has any practical legal effect when he sat down.

1305 If we need any proof of this we have only to look at Gazette number 4468 issued on 24th May 2018 in which three years of backdated Budget measures were introduced in one go. Indeed, we in this House today do not have the ability to debate or vote on those Budget measures as all that is in fact before us is the Appropriation Bill. If we had a proper Finance Bill, Standing Orders would allow for a reasonable recess to enable the Opposition to digest the measures and prepare a considered response. Evidently, Mr Speaker, the Government has no interest in scrutiny by the Opposition and regrettably there is not a great deal we can say about what he has announced today. But I will try and make some observations on what we have heard today from the Chief Minister

1310 Firstly, thankfully, I am nor a smoker, not am I a great drinker so the Budget's increases in terms of taxation in these areas are not something I will necessarily regret. The other measures that have been introduced by the Chief Minister, particularly in respect of intergroup losses will, no doubt be welcome by the Gibraltar Society of Accountants who I know were lobbying quite hard on this point, and anything that we can do, Mr Speaker, to enable the operations of business in Gibraltar to be effective and efficient should be welcomed.

1315 I must admit I am a bit mystified by why the Government is getting involved in the Damages Act and providing a Savings Bank product. Indeed, I would like to hear more on this from the Chief Minister as to what the rationale is for the Savings Bank to get involved. My concern is that 1320 if they offer better rates than anybody else in the UK or in Gibraltar, that they will effectively be affecting the discount rate, and I stand to be corrected, be effectively allowing insurers to give lower payouts. But again, I would welcome the Chief Minister's thoughts on this matter and why there is a need for the Savings Bank to get involved at all.

1325 Mr Speaker, there is of course one positive for the ladies in the community and that is the abolition of duty on handbags – if not somewhat discriminatory because the rest us poor gentlemen have no such tax perk. Talking about tax perks, there is not really much in the Budget for the working family. I do not see much in terms of tax breaks or other measures that the ordinary working family will see a result in their pockets. Indeed, in the public sector the pay of 2.5% increase is in real terms actually zero – they will see no real increase because, as the Chief Minister has said, in fact, he said, inflation in 2018 was 2.6%, in which case that will have a 1330 negative real effect on their take home pay packet.

Try as I must, I cannot quite get my head around – and no doubt he will enlighten us – as to the cap on the 2.5% increase and the 60 pence per hour cap; but this is something I would welcome more clarity on by the Chief Minister.

1335 What I was surprised to hear from the Chief Minister is about the 10% social insurance increase across the board. Now, Mr Speaker, I did criticise the Chief Minister last year for not having mentioned this during Budget time, and of course this year I do indeed welcome he has announced it as part of the Budget and not in advance. But this 10% increase in Social Insurance, if we are doing so well, and to quote him, as he knows I did quote him last year, when he was on the Opposition Benches in 2010 he said, I quote: 'If we are running surpluses, if we are in 1340 such good shape, tell us why it is then we need to further increase the cost of doing business in Gibraltar?' Which indeed, he is.

Mr Speaker, last year, when he announced the increases in March – in fact 10th March 2017
– the 10% increase which he announced, effectively cost employers on average an extra £183.56 per annum per employee. And employees took home £121.68 less on average per year. But 1345 those were last year's measures. This year, another 10% increase, but what we will see is that the employer will be having to pay an extra £189.80 per annum per employee; and employees will be worse off by £143 on average each.

1350 So, Mr Speaker, this is not really a Budget for the working family. Indeed, this is perhaps as the Government ominously predicted, a Brexit Budget. But you cannot on the one hand say, 'Oh, this is a Brexit Budget', and then on the other hand boast, 'It's never been so good!' Because the two just do not make sense.

As they say, if we had more time, we would have a more detailed analysis on this Budget but then, to be honest, there is not much to analyse in the Budget because there is not much in the way of measures. The only measure I perhaps can welcome is the capping of speculative profits 1355 on affordable housing which I think we can all agree is something we would not wish to encourage.

1360 Other than the absence of a Finance Bill, this Government has also slipped into the bad habit of taking the Supplementary Appropriation Bill for prior years well after the Budget debate. Not only is this illogical but also has the effect of delaying the Principal Auditor's report which we have still not had in respect of 2015-16. Mr Speaker, if I may remind the House this is what the Chief Minister said on 2nd March 2016, and I quote:

Because the main Appropriation Bills for the year are normally now debated in this House at around June or July of each year as part of the Budget session, this has meant that the annual audited accounts for the previous year have necessarily been delayed until the approval of these supplementary appropriations and the Principal Auditor has not been able to complete his audit of the annual public accounts until then.

And he goes on:

In order to enable the Principal Auditor to complete his audit of the annual audited accounts earlier and for these annual accounts to be laid in the House on a more timely basis – the Government has decided to revert to the earlier practice of presenting the Supplementary Appropriation Bills separately.

1365 Mr Speaker, the Supplementary Appropriation Bill for 2014-15 was published on 17th December 2015 and debated in Parliament on 2nd March 2016. The Supplementary Appropriation Bill for 2015-16 was published on 22nd December 2016 and it was not debated in Parliament until 6th December 2017, almost a year later! The Supplementary Appropriation Bill for 2016-17 was published on 12th January 2018 and we have yet to debate it in this House.

1370 It is evident that the Chief Minister cares little for the budgetary process and parliamentary scrutiny, and I can only assume he just wants to delay the publication of the Principal Auditor's report as much as possible because, Mr Speaker, Brexit cannot be an excuse for everything.

Turning to the Estimates Book and the Appropriation Bill itself: my colleagues will speak in detail as regards their respective areas but I have noted a general trend which is worthy of comment and in fact has been picked up by the Chamber of Commerce in their annual report.

1375 Total recurrent revenue peaked at £655.7 million in March 2017 and we now see the outturn for March 2018 to be lower at £635 million; and yet recurrent expenditure as a proportion of revenue – and again I say, as a proportion of revenue – is growing from 88% in 2017 to 94% in 2018, and in the estimates for 2019 to 96%. As the Hon. Sir Joe Bossano quite rightly pointed out, this is just not sustainable. This is a worrying trend that does not allow for much of a buffer should Government revenue suffer a downturn next year because of Brexit or for any other reason. And in those percentages I have included the £25 million that is appropriated to finance Government Companies, and which the Government include in the calculation of what they call 'a surplus'. But more on that later.

1385 Mr Speaker, and this is in spite of stealth increases in fees for everything from MOTs, business licences, fines, dog licences, zonal parking permits, housing rentals and today we see an advert in the Chronicle for 3% increase in rates across the board for residential dwellings. Stealth taxes.

1390 Of concern – and the real concern – is a projected decrease in the cash reserves of the Government from £127.6 million in 2017 to £96.1 million in 2019; and there would then be a consequential increase in net debt in 2019 to £339.9 million which is wide of the Government's manifesto target of £300 million net debt by 2020.

1395 Indeed it is surprising that in answer to my question 410/2018 the Government stated that as at 28th February 2018 it had £260.4 million deposited in the Savings Bank which I assume includes Government-owned company cash. And yet per the estimates Appendix L, as at 31st March 2018 this was expected to be only £164.6 million. I really would be grateful if the Chief Minister could explain where £95.8 million has disappeared to in just one month.

1400 It is frightening that from a balance of £308 million on 31st March 2017 it is anticipated that by 31st March 2019 only £127 million of the famous 'cash pool' will be deposited by the Government in the Savings Bank. Now, the Chief Minister may well reply, 'Ah yes, but the money is somewhere else'. Well, every session I ask for the Government's liquid reserves and holdings and I am refused this information. I ask this question every time I come to this Parliament and I am refused the information.

1405 Mr Speaker, what we are seeing, rather ominously, is rising recurrent expenditure, rising net debt, decreasing revenue and decreasing cash balances. I am afraid to say this, but it would seem we are heading for a sober reckoning with financial reality and we need to wake up to this now.

1410 None of this bodes well but it gets worse I am afraid. For the first time since I have been in this House the Government is actually anticipating what I would call a budget deficit, in that the closing consolidated fund reserve is lower than the opening balance. The outturn for March 2018 rather than a surplus as the Chief Minister proudly announced, is actually showing a deficit of £4.9 million which is mainly due to an extra £21 million required for the Improvement and Development Fund which in itself is recording a £7.6 million deficit – and that is a written deficit in their own book.

Mr Speaker, it is telling that the Community Care contribution for 2018 is not the usual £20 million as it has been for the last two years but in fact has been cut by 25% – yes, by a

1415 quarter – to the lowest level under this Government, to £15 million. This is very significant in that it means that the Government is actually now underfunding Community Care, whose annual cost in 2014 – which were the last accounts I have available to me – was £16 million. Community Care will, if the numbers have not changed significantly, and the Chief Minister kindly provided 1420 us today with some information as to the growth in eligible pensioners which he stated in 2009 was 8,213 and in 2018 was 11,693, so I cannot see that Community Care’s outgoings will be decreasing.

So if the numbers have not changed, and in fact I would say that the numbers have grown, Community Care will have to be eating into its reserves to fund its expenses. Is this what the Hon. Father of the House meant in his New People editorial? That the Government would be 1425 taking a contribution holiday to Community Care and that Community Care would have to look after itself soon until its money ran out?

Is it that it is starting to drizzle and we really need to dip into the rainy day fund? Mr Speaker, I was shocked to see that for 2019 the Government is actually projecting again what I call a budget deficit of £19 million, without taking into account its contribution to Community Care 1430 even at its 2018 level of £15 million. The Government is, for the first time, actually projecting a depletion of our reserves. This is indeed a Brexit Budget!

Looking at the Improvement and Development Fund the picture is not much better – in fact it is much worse. The Improvement and Development Fund in 2018 is being emptied such that from an opening balance of £7.9 million it is being left with nothing more than £319,000. The 1435 fortunes of the Improvement and Development Fund unfortunately are not set to improve in 2019 with the balance only anticipated to grow by £108,000 which, frankly, is peanuts.

Mr Speaker, for me it is the Improvement and Development Fund that has signed a death warrant for this Budget if it needed one. I do not need to bore this House with a Colonial Bookkeepers technical analysis. (A Member: No.) I hear a Member saying, ‘I am’ – well, I am 1440 proud to be one, because they are evidently not. It is simply this fact that makes this Budget an utter nonsense – this fact alone, which the people on the street will understand: other than £1,000 – yes, Mr Speaker, £1,000 – there is no, I repeat no, provision for the cost of the construction of the eight new schools which, as the Government has already disclosed, just the new comprehensives will cost £52.2 million. (Interjection) Nothing. If the other six schools are to 1445 be built at a conservative estimate, say, of £15 million each then the total spend would be £142.2 million.

Where is it in the Book? Can the Chief Minister show me the page, because I cannot find it! It does not exist; it is not in the Book. How can the Chief Minister stand up and have the temerity to say he has got record surpluses, when he is not even accounting for most of the expenditure?
 1450 It is a nonsense!

And, Mr Speaker, if that is not bad enough, there is no provision for the £20 million wastewater treatment plant again, other than £1,000. And he stood up this morning and said, ‘Well, we are going to be breaking ground before the end of the year’. So where is the cost – £1,000?
 We know it is a £20 million contract. Can’t he put in £20 million? Can’t he put in £52 million? Oh 1455 no, because then he would not have a surplus and he would have an even worse deficit. It is a nonsense.

The one project that is recorded in the Improvement and Development Fund is the 2019 Island Games and I regret to say that unsurprisingly this is already significantly over budget.
 Over budget on the £16.5 million which is earmarked for it.

And, Mr Speaker, I can carry on. There is nothing in respect of a National Theatre; there is nothing in respect of the Grand Parade car park scheme. Even if the Government came back with a Supplementary Appropriation Bill next year for this money, we simply do not have it in either the Consolidated Fund or the Improvement and Development Fund by the Government’s own estimates for 2019. We would be bankrupt; we would only have £96 million! How are we 1465 going to pay for all this? Where is the money going to come from?

Mr Speaker, is this what the Chief Minister calls ‘careful calibration’? It does not add up, and the people of Gibraltar are rightly asking themselves: where is the money coming from? Where is it coming from?

1470 The answer to the question: ‘Where is the money coming from?’ – is simply this. The Government are running two sets of books – one public and the other one hidden and secret. The secret books of this Government are a travesty to our public finance system, as I explained last year. We have absolutely no visibility as to what the financial position of Government Companies is, and importantly what is happening to the £300 million by way of mortgage over six of our housing estates which house thousands of families?

1475 Today, we hear from the Chief Minister, ‘Well, actually, I spent £30 million of it on the Gibraltar International Bank’. All well and good. That is the first we hear of it – and more on that later. The Chief Minister gave a clue perhaps in the last session of the House because that is what we seem to be working on – clues, guesses, estimates. We do not see the full picture.

1480 He said a Government Company had awarded the contract for the schools and thus did not need to go through the procurement process for the awarding of the contract to Casais. So, I now have to guess that the new schools will be owned through a corporate structure that will enable the selling of parking spaces and other such commercial activity unheard of before in respect of our schools.

1485 Mr Speaker, the evidence of our eyes tells us the money is being spent on the schools, the University Accommodation block and the Midtown car park, but according to the Government’s Financial Records – and these are the official Financial Records – we are dreaming, because they do not officially exist. When we ask for the cost of these mirages we are told, ‘No, it is all commercially sensitive, we can’t tell you; we’re here to defend the interest of the taxpayer; you’re all terrible and shouldn’t be asking these questions’. I am sorry, it does not wash.

1490 I have not even touched upon the cost of the new affordable housing schemes – and funnily enough, neither has the Chief Minister – perhaps because by my own conservative estimate of £200 million is a dream too far even for the Chief Minister, given the current state of our finances, as I have just set out. We are told that the Minister for Housing will have good news in this respect. But alas, I would not put too much stock on her words, especially when she said memorably in last year’s Budget speech as regards Bob Peliza Mews and I quote – and this really is priceless:

... there has been a delay due to technical reasons of infrastructure. Infrastructure is an important preliminary issue and we wanted to get every detail right before making any further announcements.

This is priceless, Mr Speaker:

This may affect the footprint of the new development to some extent but not in a way that will be disadvantageous. I expect that the technical advice and the administrative process will be complete before the end of this year and I am delighted to announce, Mr Speaker, that we will be in a position to have started the process of selling our new flats and give so many people the opportunity to be homeowners once again

1500 Mr Speaker, fantastic phrase ‘technical reasons of infrastructure’. Or could it be that – (Interjection) It is going to be a school! So ‘technical reasons of infrastructure’ really should now be taken to mean – much as shortly or in the lifetime of this Parliament – is that there is going to be a complete change and nothing will be done on affordable housing.

1505 As regards the Minister for Housing’s accusation on Twitter that I am a populist. Mr Speaker, I am a populist. If speaking the truth about the need for 3% rent rises for the next 30 years to pay for the £300 million mortgage on the six housing estates makes me a populist then I will plead guilty. And the Chief Minister thinks me foolish if I make this remark, that I cannot therefore be very good at maths. Well, I suggest he check with the technical experts who gave us that same information, one of which is sitting right behind him. That was information from his experts and not my guess.

1510 Mr Speaker, this financial alchemy really has to end. We do not live in the Congo. The public deserves the truth and to know our true financial position from the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Or in Brazil. (Interjections) Madoff! [Inaudible]

1515 Mr Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member is entitled to be heard without any comments across the floor.

Hon. R M Clinton: I have asked him publicly to explain how the schools are being funded and he sidesteps the issue. I have asked about what is being done with the £300 million mortgage proceeds and the Chief Minister talks nonsense about having a 'war chest' and 'Sovereign Wealth funds'. Mr Speaker, he obviously has no concept of what these are and he hopes nobody else does. The Chief Minister either does not know the answers to these questions or simply cannot bring himself to tell the people the truth which is, quite simply and plainly, that we are borrowing heavily to pay for his concept of Utopia.

1525 Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister said in a press release on 26th April 2018 that he will, and I quote:

... deliver substantial 'rainy day funds' in excess of those ever held by Gibraltar before.

Well, I would really, sincerely like to know where they are, because they are certainly not in the form of the Consolidated Fund or the Improvement and Development Fund, given that his own projections for 2019 do not show that.

1530 Mr Speaker, I really have to explode this fallacy that the Father of the House is promoting in that he has set aside substantial rainy day funds in other places. In the GSLP/Liberal manifesto for 2015 he sought to explain what in his view a rainy day fund was and he said, and I quote:

It consisted in retaining reserves in a number of ring-fenced funds which were not available to the government to meet the recurrent running cost of the public administration.

The idea was and is that the Rainy Day Fund should be available to meet additional funding requirements if there were unexpected calls on government expenditure or unpredictable drops in revenue.

The only true Government rainy day fund that exists is, as its name suggests, the Contingencies Fund created under section 71 of the Constitution which for a number of years has held the paltry sum of £400,000. This fund exists so that if there has, and I quote:

arisen an urgent and unforeseen need for expenditure for which no other provision exists, to make advances from that Fund to meet that need.

That, Mr Speaker, sounds remarkably like the GSLP/Liberal definition of a rainy day fund – but it is evidently not being funded.

1540 The Father of the House likes to squirrel away money in different places almost as if a burglar was going to break in one night in the Treasury and raid the Government's coffers. Or perhaps he just does not trust any Government, including his own, not to overspend.

A Member: They are consultants.

1545 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, the surplus money held by Community Care is described as a rainy day fund in the GSLP/Liberal manifesto. However, it is a self-evident truth that it is simply not available to the Government to meet additional funding requirements. What it represents is a pot of money to pay pensioners should the Government fail to meet its recurrent obligations; it is their rainy day fund not the Government's. It cannot be accessed if there is a shortage in funding to meet Healthcare, Education, Housing or any other needs of the Community.

1550 In an editorial in the New People on 17th May 2018 called, I quote: 'Clinton's Community Care Nonsense' the following argument was put forward, and I quote: 'Should Gibraltar be hit by a period of low revenue, pensioner income will be protected by the fact that the Trustees have this rainy day fund available to them. By continuing to fund these payments to pensioners in 1555 times when the Government might not wish or be able to fund the payments itself, the Trustees of Community Care would be relieving the taxpayer of the need to make these payments. Hence the principal reason why the Community Care fund can properly be classed as a rainy day fund of the people of Gibraltar'.

Yes, Mr Speaker, it is Community Care's rainy day fund if the Government fails to meet its obligations. It cannot be and is not the Government's rainy day fund and to continue to describe 1560 it as such is utter nonsense. If the Government were a company it would not and could not claim its pension fund was its own money – unless you were Maxwell. What we now see in this year's Estimates Book is that the Government is indeed running down its contribution to Community Care this year, and as I estimated last year I cannot see the Government meeting its manifesto commitment of funding it to the tune of £230 million by 2019-20. Indeed, I am now concerned 1565 as to exactly where this £100 million already in Community Care is and how it is invested. I would rather see this large sum of money held and invested by the Financial Secretary, given the Brexit uncertainty we face.

Mr Speaker, I take this very seriously. As I said in the House last session I have complained to the Charities Commission in March this year because the last set of audited accounts filed by 1570 Community Care and its group of companies was for 30th March 2014. I have at the same time in March, with a chaser in April, written to the trustees requesting information on the investments held but to date as at today, other than an acknowledgement of receipt, I regret I have not had a response. It is regrettable because an understanding of the investments held would of course have informed this debate as to the liquidity of the surplus funds they hold, 1575 given that the drizzle seems to have started by this Government and the rainy day may indeed be soon upon them and us. I would therefore – I appeal – politely ask the trustees to please, please respond to my letter as soon as possible as it is a matter of public interest where they are investing the £100 million they own. That money was gifted to them by this Government, it is taxpayer funded, and we are entitled to know what they are doing with it.

I am also particularly interested to hear if they are funding any Government or private sector real estate projects. If this money is held in bricks and mortar, it is not liquid. Or, if it is liquid, I would like to know where it is. And certainly, Mr Speaker, despite our best attempts in the last session neither my hon. colleague, Mr Feetham, nor myself were able to draw the Father of the House as to whether this money was indeed or not deposited at the Gibraltar Savings Bank. We 1585 deserve an answer.

Mr Speaker, I will grant that the reserves of the Savings Bank itself could be deemed a rainy day fund, as they are indeed available to the Government. The Government's manifesto projected that the reserves of the Savings Bank would be £70 million by 2019-20. Given that its annual profits have been falling, this target will surely be missed as reserves are projected to be 1590 only £41 million in 2018-19 with an annual surplus of £4 million in 2018-19. The Savings Bank would have to make an extraordinary surplus profit of £30 million in 2019-20 to meet the Government's manifesto commitment. It is going to have to miss this target by a large margin.

The Chief Minister said the GSD Government left Gibraltar with zero. That is not true, Mr Speaker. When the GSD left office in 2011, the Government had £234 million in official 1595 reserves and a net direct debt of £285 million. For 2019, this Government is predicting official reserves of only £96 million and a net direct debt of £339.9 million. I am sure we can all do the maths – cash, down; net debt, up. Is this what the Chief Minister calls 'substantial rainy day funds' and that Gibraltar's finances will be stronger than ever before? Let him prove it, because I seriously do not see it. His own Estimates Book does not show it; and if it does, please tell me 1600 where it is, because I really do not see it.

1605 Mr Speaker, on the subject of Public Debt: nothing is more contentious perhaps than the question of what is our real level of public debt, that is indeed the perennial question that arises in these debates. First of all, I would ask GBC to correct the information on their website where they say that net debt is down 1% to £324 million. I am sure the Chief Minister will confirm that is not right – net debt is in fact up 2.8% from 2017-18 from £315 million to £324 million. I think the reason for that, Mr Speaker, is the rather roundabout way where the Chief Minister has compared our net debt figure to GDP and that is where the confusion has arisen. But in real terms, our net debt is not down; our net debt is up! Up, Mr Speaker. Up 2.8% from £315 million to £324 million.

1610 And on the subject of debentures and transfers from Government to the Savings Bank, I would like to have a quick extract from the Principal Auditor's Report for 2014-15, talking about deposits in the Savings Bank. It says: 'The increase of £274.2 million over the previous year is mainly a result of the issue of Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures including', and I quote here, 'the replacement debentures for Government of Gibraltar debentures that were redeemed earlier'. So what the Hon. Sir Joe Bossano is referring to, there was a transfer, as my hon colleague has referred to 'a transfer debt' from the Government books to those books of the Savings Bank.

1620 Now, Mr Speaker, the Chamber of Commerce has this year joined the debate, and they have simply asked for the question to be settled – which I do not think is an unreasonable request. I certainly would welcome an external review from a specialised body such as, for example, the UK Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy which is their speciality. The official gross direct debt of the Government of Gibraltar is £447.7 million – £323.8 million net as at 31st March 2018, which is made up of £247.7 million of debentures issued by the Government but held by the Savings Bank which I understand has no fixed maturity, and £200 million of bank borrowing. The bank borrowing from the last information available to me is provided at 1625 £50 million by NatWest maturing in March 2020, and £150 million by Barclays maturing in a tranche of £100 million in January 2019 and £50 million in June 2020.

1630 Mr Speaker, I note and am hopeful as to what the Chief Minister said this morning about seeking an extension of those maturities. Last year I tried to quantify indirect debt and this year I have come up with the following: Credit Finance – £400 million borrowed from the Savings Bank; GCP Investments Ltd, a slightly lower number now – £16 million borrowed from the Gibraltar International Bank secured on Government property; ES Ltd, the proud owner of our generating station – £55 million, Lombard Plc; Gibraltar Capital Assets Limited – £300 million, loan notes secured on six housing estates.

1635 Mr Speaker, that adds to the famous £771 million, in addition to the official gross debt of £447.7 million which would take us to a gross debt of £1,218.7 million as at 31st March 2018.

1640 But this year, I need to add a new element, and that is in the form of the Gibraltar Development Corporation, who have in fact borrowed £30 million from Government-owned companies in order to buy £30 million of B shares in the Gibraltar International Bank. I have no doubt that this injection of capital was needed and justified; it is the method of funding that I find unusual.

1645 This morning, the Chief Minister said that this £30 million came from the £300 million borrowing – well, that is the first we hear of it, Mr Speaker. And it begs the question why were not the B shares paid for by the Improvement and Development Fund, because there is in fact provision for it – there is actually the usual ubiquitous £1,000 allowance in the Improvement & Development Fund? Or is it that if the Government did that, it would create an even bigger deficit in the Consolidated Fund and a higher net debt? If the Government was perhaps concerned about increasing the deficit, if he wanted to be clever about it, he could have transferred £30 million from the Savings Bank's reserves to the Consolidated Fund to pay for it. 1650 But no, that would of course mean the use of a rainy day fund which would be difficult to explain politically and ruin the Government's manifesto.

1655 So £30 million has come from the £300 million? We still do not know what happened to the other £270 million, and the Chief Minister does not care, he will not tell us. Whereas the Hon. Leader of the Opposition pointed out it is not his money, it is not my money, it is not our money, it is the people's money. And it is the people's debt, more importantly.

So the solution is really quite simple: get the GDC to borrow the money and buy the shares. Simple, no Government Debt and the Government keeps its rainy day Fund. Wonderful!

1660 Mr Speaker, this is the ultimate in financial trickery and reinforces my argument that our finance system and Budget has been reduced to a farce by this Government. (Hon D A Feetham: Hear, hear, hear.) (Interjection) The Chamber of Commerce may be right in that the only way to resolve the famous debt question is to have an external review by experts, because at the moment the Government are fudging it.

1665 I now estimate our total gross figure to be at least £30 million higher at £ 1,248.7 million. And what is worrying is that the Government does not have a debt management plan to repay any of this debt, other than the Chief Minister making some nebulous comment on public television about half of the revenue a certain product – which I do not think was particularly wise. The sinking fund barely increases each year and we do not know how this £300 million is going to be paid back with the first payment due in 2031. The Chief Minister probably hopes to be well and retired driving around in his electric car by then.

1670 Mr Speaker, let us not be swayed by arguments that GDP has grown and thus our debt should be of no concern. The Institute of Chartered Accountants of England and Wales recently published a report called 'The Debt of Nations' and they had this to say about debt and GDP ratios, and I think it is worth quoting:

Although dividing debt into GDP is a common way to assess the scale of public debt, as a measure it depends on the quality of statistical practices around the world.

And I am quoting here:

GDP is not always reliable, may be incomplete, and can be subject to manipulation.

1675 Their words, Mr Speaker, not mine:

GDP is also not available to governments as a source of income. A better approach is to calculate public debt in proportion of the revenue that governments actually receive and use to service their debts.

1680 That last argument is precisely why we had a legal debt limit linked to our revenue and not to GDP. But, Mr Speaker, this Government abolished it because it did not suit them. Come to think of it, it is not entirely clear where the GDC got £30 million to buy the ordinary shares in Credit Finance back in 2014 either – another mystery. This Government likes nothing more than to create financial mysteries and it hates transparency – something it said it would embrace in 2011. Well, I have seen no evidence of it.

1685 Mr Speaker, since December 2011, this Government has created or acquired 37 companies. In answer to direct questions, the Government has actually refused to explain the reason for the creation of some of these companies. This is unacceptable in a modern democracy. We do not have an elected dictatorship, or at least we should not have – perhaps we do?

1690 Credit Finance's financial information on the Government's website still dates back to 2016 and it still does not have audited financial statements six years after its creation by this Government – not us, their Government, on 17th February 2012. That, Mr Speaker, to borrow a phrase from the Minister for Culture, is simply disgusting and the suggestion that the information on Credit Finance has not been updated on its website being due to the audit being completed shortly – where have we heard that before, Mr Speaker 'shortly'? It is just not credible coming from this Government. Shortly!

There is very little information available on Government-owned companies and when there is, it is the bare minimum possible. I am still waiting to hear from the Chief Minister for the full 1695 accounts of Gibraltar Capital Assets Limited, the company that borrowed the £300 million mortgage on the six housing estates. As I made clear last time in the last session of Parliament, this is information that its own Articles of Incorporation require for it to be made public at Companies House. I have heard nothing other than an acknowledgement of receipt from the Chief Minister.

1700 Mr Speaker, of the £300 million, again, we still do not know the terms of the option agreement by which the loan note holders may sell their interest to Government; and the Government refuses to provide the Opposition with a copy of the private placement memorandum setting out the terms of the loan notes. In fact, Mr Speaker, the loan note holders get more information than we do in this Parliament.

1705 And for reasons I have already explained we still do not have the latest report from the Principal Auditor; the accounts for the University of Gibraltar for 31st July 2017 are not finalised – and yet we are being asked to approve a tripling in its budget to £1.7 million in 2019 – a tripling, and we have no sight of their financial statements.

1710 And the Gibraltar International Bank has not yet filed its 31st December 2017 financials, even though they have to be with the FSC by the end of April each year and the Government gave them £30 million extra capital. From what the Chief Minister said this morning it is evident that in 2017 they did not make a profit, and that they are now in 2018 making a profit, which I welcome. But what is the big mystery? Why this show of holding back information? Just publish it, the same as any other entity has to.

And, Mr Speaker, it really is unfortunate that the 2017 statistical reports on tourism, unemployment, hotel occupancy and other matters have only just been tabled this morning – this morning! That does not really give the Opposition any time for any deep analysis. Of course, Mr Speaker, that is entirely what is intended, because the Chief Minister does not want us to analyse those numbers or hold him to account.

1725 I have to take issue with his explanation of some of the statistics. He talked about job creation: 956 more jobs created in the economy. Wonderful, but again the same as last year, he fails to say that only 65 went to Gibraltarians and that 720 went to Spaniards – i.e. 75% of that growth did not go to Gibraltarians it went to Spaniards, and he has the audacity to say that our people come first!

1730 Mr Speaker, the creation of a responsibility for public sector efficiency under the Father of the House was indeed something that we welcomed at the time. And I thought the phrase that the Father of the House came up with earlier this afternoon which is, I quote ‘Work smarter, not harder’ was perhaps something that the Government should have emblazoned on every Department, including the Chief Minister’s own.

1735 I have to say I have seen very little evidence of success to date from the Department for Public Sector Efficiency. A simple example being the use of private sector office space. On 31st January 2017 the Government entered into a 12-year lease for 323 Main Street at £100,000 per annum, which was originally to be used by the Savings Bank. Having then spent £216,222 and one penny on its refurbishment – and, Mr Speaker, we are talking about three floors – today, it appears abandoned, boarded up and empty. Yet in the same period we have seen the Statistics Office and the Audit Department relocated into the World Trade Centre, and neither of these departments are public-facing. So we will spend a minimum of £1.4 million on 323 Main Street over 12 years, which is empty, and move Government departments into expensive office space in the World Trade Centre. This makes no economic sense whatsoever. None!

1740 The other particular failure is unfortunately in the budgetary control of the Gibraltar Health Authority. The Minister for Health assured this House in his Budget speech last year that and regretfully I will remind him of it, and I quote:

The GHA has ended the financial year with ...

1745 And these are all his words, Mr Speaker –

... in my view, an unacceptable deficit. My commitment to our tax payers is that in my first year as Minister for Health, the GHA will come within budget whilst improving health care.

Mr Speaker, again, ‘the GHA will come within budget’. I regret to say the GHA is estimated to come in some £9.6 million over budget – over budget, Mr Speaker – and this is despite him having, and again I quote, and I was impressed when I heard this first:

... monthly meetings, held on the first Friday a week after the close of the month, with all Heads of Departments, where we review every single expenditure line by line. If any subhead is in deficit I will require a full explanation for all the reasons and the steps being taken to ensure that the next month will reflect expenditure within budget.

1750 What went wrong, Mr Speaker? I am sure the Minister for Health will enlighten us when he gives his Budget speech. But to be fair to the Minister for Health, it was my personal view and this last year’s GHA budget was perhaps a tad unrealistic, despite the Minister’s best efforts at budgetary control, for which I commend him.

1755 But, Mr Speaker, not to disappoint this year is of course the Minister for Culture who, Mr Speaker, has yet to learn what a budget is, (Laughter) and he obviously needs lessons from the Father of the House. Not content with exceeding his budget last year on the 2017 Music Festival by £1.6 million – which was bad enough as it was – this year he has beaten his own record which is worthy of a Guinness Book of Records entry, perhaps even an Olympic medal – he has beaten his own record with an eye-watering excess – over budget, which is really a loss – of £2.6 million! Yes, £2.6 million, Mr Speaker. (Interjection) More than half the annual running cost of GBC – that 1760 is for only two days of entertainment! What value for money; evidently bringing in MTV in 2018 did not help much.

I hope the Chief Secretary enjoys some success with his recently created ‘A’ Team comprised, I understand, of recently retired senior civil servants to keep an eye on Departments and expenditure. I of course naturally welcomed the announcement that the Chief Minister made of 1765 an external review of senior public sector salaries in Gibraltar, perhaps a measure that was long overdue.

Mr Speaker – and the Father of the House uses the term himself – ‘value for money’: that is what it is all about in the public sector, value for money. Value for money is about economy, efficiency and effectiveness which, regretfully, this Government still needs to learn or simply 1770 does not yet understand, other than the Father of the House.

I understand that attracting inwards investment is difficult, especially given the current Brexit environment, and I for one will not criticise the Government for its failure to bring the Bluewater project into fruition. However, it would be nice to learn something about the ‘new rock pile’ storage facility at Coaling Island, and of course what is going to happen to the Rooke site? We 1775 have heard nothing at all, Mr Speaker, from the Chief Minister as regards these two sites. I would hope in his response, that he will enlighten the House.

The Father of the House, although he is not here with us at the moment, is of course to be commended for his efforts in engaging with Chinese banks and construction groups and investors. I appreciate that this does take time and I sincerely hope we will see positive results in 1780 years to come.

Mr Speaker, turning now to some of my other portfolios being Small Business, Telecoms and Heritage. As I mentioned last year business licensing continues to be an issue needing simplification especially as regards the business premises requirement. I know the Federation of Small Businesses and the Chamber are working closely with the Government on this matter and I 1785 hope progress will be made soon. The recently published consultation paper on key legislation affecting businesses and commerce is of course to be praised and welcomed. We need to reduce obstacles to business and provide encouragement not disincentives to business – especially in start-ups.

1790 Mr Speaker, the introduction of private sector pensions is something to be welcomed and I look forward to hearing the views of both the unions and the Chamber and the Federation as to the best way to introduce these. I trust the Government will come up with a workable Bill after end of the consultation period and I look forward to the debate in due course.

1795 The world of telecommunication has never been so competitive and I really do now have a particular interest in Gibtelecom's financial performance, not just because it is now part of my portfolio of responsibility, but also because the Savings Bank is its sole shareholder. I note that Gibtelecom is doing its best to diversify its product range from fixed line to data storage and recently on-demand TV. I am, however, disappointed that its December 2016 audited financial statements are not yet available due to technical accounting issues that its auditors I am told are resolving. Gibtelecom audited accounts are usually uploaded on their website promptly every year and I look forward to them being finalised soon.

1800 But, Mr Speaker, I am particularly interested in Gibtelecom's plans for the Haven site. This was purchased from the Government in 2014 for £5.8 million, partly funded by way of a bank loan. And it has been empty ever since. In 2015 an application was made to the DPC for a two-storey extension to be built on the Haven site but now this has been replaced in March 2018 with a new plan seeking just refurbishment of the existing structure, and no extension. No doubt the forthcoming annual report will shed light on its plans for the Haven and associated costs and I look forward to reading the 2016 annual report in due course.

1805 Mr Speaker, last and not least, I welcome the publication of the long-overdue Heritage and Antiquities Bill. I have already had the opportunity with my colleague, the Hon. Mr Trevor Hammond, to have a constructive discussion on the Bill with the Minister for Heritage and in order not to anticipate anything that will be said in the forthcoming debate on I will leave it at that. We of course still have much to do on Heritage and I note the comments made by the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister as to the idea to enhance the Northern Defences. But I also look forward to hearing more from the Minister for Heritage as to plans for the Moorish Castle.

1815 So, Mr Speaker, in conclusion, as I said in my opening I will not be a party to this travesty that the Government calls a Brexit Budget. I accused the Government of failing to produce a meaningful Budget and prudent Estimate Book for 2018-19 and so I have proven, in that they have not included the cost of the new schools and we can see reserves are being depleted. I accused the Government of failing to meet basic standards of transparency and accountability in public finance and so I have proven in that there is a lack of information given on Government companies and indeed how the £300 million mortgage money is being used and spent.

1820 And, Mr Speaker, I accuse the Chief Minister of being the architect of this dismal state of affairs in respect of our public finances and thus utterly failing in his duty as Minister of Finance and so he must shoulder the responsibility – him alone.

1825 The people of Gibraltar deserve the truth and a meaningful Budget. I will not vote for this budget Mr Speaker, not because of petty partisan politics, but because put simply it is neither complete nor accurate.

1830 Mr Speaker, the lights will not go out, the schools will not close and people will not die as the Chief Minister suggested last year because of our voting against this Budget. We have a duty to hold the Government to account on behalf of the people of Gibraltar (Hon D A Feetham: Hear, hear.) and we would be negligent in that duty if we turned a blind eye to the Chief Minister's financial trickery. (Banging on desks) Trickery, Mr Speaker!

I stand by my accusations and will vote against this so-called Brexit Budget.

1835 Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, wake up, wake up, everyone! I move that the House do now adjourn to tomorrow morning at 10 a.m. if Hon. Members would care to wake up and now move back home.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Dr John Cortes.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):

5 Good morning, Mr Speaker.

I have rather a lot to say, so I will get straight into it. What is this Education Revolution? What is it about it that has some so excited and others so worried?

10 Mr Speaker, we have to see all that I am going to say against the backdrop that in the UK last year while there were 137,000 more pupils in schools there were 5,400 fewer teachers and 5,400 fewer support staff.

It is not about buildings. There are buildings involved of course, but what we are about to witness is a paradigm shift in education – a radical change in the theory and the practice. With the Department of Education shortly up to full strength for the first time in years, people will notice the difference.

15 Teachers and all staff, children, young people and parents will see positive changes in the way the Department engages with the public, the schools and the community as a whole. Policies are being updated or, where they do not exist, developed; workstreams on issues as diverse as bilingualism and Gibraltar studies, key stage alignment and introduction of co-education will reach out from the Department into the schools at all levels in the profession.
20 From September these working groups will be looking in detail into the challenges and the solutions and will make recommendations for successful outcomes from the roots up. You see, Mr Speaker, we were always serious about full transparency and involvement. This has been extensive in defining the needs in our new buildings and continues now in the run-up to the operational changes coming into effect next year.

25 Of course, there will be new buildings. These will be exceptional, designed in full consultation with the professionals, providing schools finally fit for the future, making our young people better prepared and better equipped than ever before. To summarise where we are on these: work is progressing apace at Notre Dame which we plan to open this coming September, and at the Comprehensive Schools, where we plan to inaugurate the two new co-education schools in 30 September next year. Work on St Anne’s School will commence in the autumn immediately after Notre Dame moves.

Mr Speaker, I am delighted to confirm that having listened carefully to the views of the schools, we will this year be commencing work on a new St Martin’s School, a new Bishop Fitzgerald School and a new Governor’s Meadow School, in keeping with our manifesto 35 commitment. I will be meeting with the respective head teachers tomorrow to discuss the plans and timescales in detail, with 2019 remaining the target year. We will also be proceeding with the plans to build a new Gibraltar College.

40 The new plans have brought Education into the public arena like never before. As part of this process the voice of the Teachers' Union, like that of all unions, is an important one to make itself heard and to be listened to. And while we may not have agreed on every detail, we are all listening to each other.

45 The Union executive is now meeting regularly with the Government, building on and beyond its formal Social Partnership, and we are working jointly on a plan with a number of key aims which include: to work in full partnership; to carry out an in-depth organisational review of how Education is administered; to create a structure to ensure educational decision-making is fully informed; to formally enshrine all important aspects of Education in legislation; to modernise the recruitment and selection process; and to carry out a long-term review of teachers and learning support assistants.

50 The detail of all this work is being worked out, but there is agreement on what are the core needs of Education. And I am glad to say a great deal of what the union is requesting was already being done and will be rolled out in the coming year.

Mr Speaker, I am very pleased at how we have worked through the issues and excited to see how we are working together in developing Education.

55 Quite apart from the new schools, we must not forget that we have many other schools. This year the Department of Education has engaged a full-time officer to lead on the maintenance and improvement of those we are not currently proposing to move. Works have been identified and a programme prepared, which includes major repairs to the schools that will remain in situ and urgent works to those that will be moving within the next year to ensure that they continue to be fit for purpose during the time that they continue in use.

60 Works during the last financial year have been many, including works in Bayside to improve school security; in Westside to prevent water ingress into the Sports Hall; in the College and St Joseph's Schools, and so on.

I am not going to go into all the details here, although the version of my speech which will be sent out by the Press Office will contain more of the detail.

65 Plans for the current financial year include: a complete roof replacement in St Mary's School to address water ingress and refurbishment in the school; replacement of the school annexe guttering in St Joseph's First and Middle Schools; and in St Pauls' School, refurbishment of a pilot classroom to evaluate the results in anticipation of the planned works programme for the next financial year when it will have a major overhaul.

70 Mr Speaker, my speech is going to be long enough as it is. If I were to go into details of what each school does by way of activities, functions, initiatives, productions, projects, fundraising and other charitable events, I would never finish. Each and every school is the equivalent almost of a whole Department. Cada escuela es un mundo, you could say, and a thriving one at that. I must at least thank each and every team in each and every school for all that they do throughout the year.

75 This year there have been many staff movements and promotions, with some still to come. I congratulate all those who have been successful and encourage those who have not, to continue to aim to progress. At this point, Mr Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to the lifelong work of Alan Mason, Head of St Paul's School, who sadly passed away (Banging on desks) after a long illness, and well before his time. I would also like to thank Kenneth Saez, Head of St Bernard's Middle and Pat Duarte, Head of St Anne's for their sterling work throughout their careers as they enter the final week of work before their retirement.

85 Mr Speaker, if I may now run through some details of what the Department of Education has been doing over the last financial year and some of the plans for next. The Chief Minister already in his address gave details of our investment in scholarships so I do not intend to repeat that. In addition to this, the Washington Internship in 2017-18 catered for an additional 21 students and will provide for another 20 this year.

At schools we have purchased a new much-improved bus for St Martin's School to replace the one that had been donated by charity years ago. We have finally achieved the installation of fibre-optic data cabling and enhancement of Wi-Fi provision to all the schools to improve and support the Apple Teaching with Technology project which my predecessor the Hon. Gilbert Licudi introduced in his time as Minister. We are commissioning software which will allow the introduction of electronic pupil attendance registers.

We continue to run the Gibraltar College Language School with all the benefits encouraging young people to diversify their knowledge of language will bring, and we are working on expanding adult courses too. We have responded to specific needs of children, for example, by the introduction of nursing assistance for pupils with medical needs such as PEG feeding, and by engaging diabetic nurses. The Mindfulness Initiative has been extended to all schools for teachers and pupils to develop positive learning techniques.

The Department has been participating in CHAMPS – the Children, Healthy and Active Multi-agency Programme – alongside the GHA, Public Health Gibraltar, the Care Agency, the Youth Service and the GSLA, and this was launched in the spring and is working together for the common cause of helping children and their families live healthy and active lives, including reducing childhood obesity.

Mr Speaker, last September a member of the Department started working with a small number of our young people with special educational needs in providing work placements, an initiative designed to give the students experiences that can support them to be better equipped for work. During the coming year we will be looking at how we can develop this service further to help young people with learning difficulties enter employment.

Mental Health is now being given the priority it not only deserves but seriously needs. I commissioned an in-depth study into mental health in secondary schools which has now been completed, and a similar one in primary schools is commencing. The study has for the first time ever gathered together statistics on the type of problems our young people are experiencing, and is making recommendations on how we can better prepare our teachers and provide additional support to them. This, and the primary school study, will inform a review of provision in which I will be working very closely with my colleague, the Minister for Health. As an indication of the sort of results we have obtained, I can say that the majority of mental health problems in secondary schools arise from anxiety and domestic issues. It is only by knowing what the problems are that we can start to deal with them effectively.

To this end, a few weeks ago we held a week-long training session for teachers, attended by over 120 teachers as well as other professionals and NGOs. This programme will continue to support both teachers in the excellent work that they do in this field and of course the work of the BEST team and the Educational Psychologists.

Once again this year, the addition of an Assistant Educational Psychologist role to the Educational team has enabled our existing psychologists to engage in more in-depth, complex work with the rising number of pupils with Special Educational Needs. We have also sent a trainee Educational Psychologist to the UK to complete her first year of the Doctorate in Educational Psychology and Child Psychology and she will be joining the team in September. The team continues to deliver on the weekly drop-in clinics aimed at parents and carers who have concerns about their children's learning, development or behaviour. They have also provided evening parenting courses for families of children between the ages of five and eight who have Autistic Spectrum Disorder, and this will be extended to parents of children who are teenagers on the Autistic Spectrum.

The Department of Education is working hard on developing child protection policies and procedures and is working with other agencies, including the RGP and the Care Agency to this end. The policy is being updated and training being provided, covering issues such as sexting, safeguarding and signs of safety.

Mr Speaker, one of the areas in which we have made most progress over the past year is in teaching and learning with digital technologies. All First Schools have received training in the use 140 of teaching and learning strategies with handheld devices with the last school receiving the initial training on 8th of last month. Of the Middle Schools, St Joseph's received their training in March, with Bishop Fitzgerald's and St Anne's planned for the next academic year. The rollout of handheld devices continues.

145 The response of both teachers and pupils to this initiative is tremendous. It opens up so many possibilities and the children love it. Working parties are now being set up to further develop the excellent work done in Digital Technology areas, such as the very successful Cyber Centurion and STEM fields.

150 As part of improving the use of IT, Education.gov.gi will be rolled out to all schools before the start of the next academic year, an initiative to streamline workflows and support the collaborative working practices now prevalent in our education system.

155 I must take this opportunity to congratulate all those involved in Cyber Centurion, including teachers, students and members of the private sector, as well as those involved in the Young Enterprise Programme, for their commitment and success. I intend to further pursue ways of involving business in supporting education and providing opportunities such as placements and internships for our young people.

The inaugural Universities Fair was held last February, hosted at Gibraltar University and supported by the Kusuma Trust. Ten universities were represented including Gibraltar University, and plans are well in hand for a much bigger event next year.

160 Most importantly, Mr Speaker, we are working on a fully revised curriculum for 2019. Curriculum 2019 will contain about 15 vocational pathways designed to cater for a range of vocations not currently covered in our education system. We are not yet doing enough for students who are either not academic or academically inclined or who, quite aside from their ability, want to take up alternative courses.

165 Mr Speaker, when I have attended the schools on exam results day, and shared in the excitement, my mind has always been with those who did not manage to get to the stage of sitting exams. Where are they? Where are the young people who left school early, or who do not stay on for A-levels? What are they doing? And most importantly, what are we doing for them? Curriculum 2019 will ensure that they all have the option of progressing further in a range of subjects not possible now.

170 In addition, and most importantly, we are working on a specific Access Curriculum providing a pathway for students with Special Educational Needs regardless of where they are in our education system. A working group of representatives from the three secondary institutions and St Martin's have been working with the Advisory Service to develop this pathway.

175 In order to inform the development of Education, members of the Department visited Finland, well known for its avant garde education policies. The visit provided an insight on teaching and learning, curriculum, pastoral care and vocational studies. Some of the ideas have already been incorporated into Curriculum 2019.

180 Mr Speaker, an exciting project in which the schools have been involved is Sustainable Schools Gibraltar, inspired by the EU ClimACT Programme. A forum has been set up between ClimACT, Education and the Department of the Environment, and already a Schools Working Party of over 30 teachers has developed the framework, and they have been doing extremely good eco-work in their schools.

185 Mr Speaker, I am pleased to report that the working party revising the 1974 Education Act has now completed its task and the final draft will shortly be discussed with stakeholders before publication as a Bill in the autumn. In advance of this, Mr Speaker, I will be activating something that is provided for in the current Act but which has not been in existence for many decades, and so I will shortly be appointing the statutory Education Council to advise me and the Education team on matters relating to education.

190 In listening to teachers on my regular visits around the schools over the past year and a half, there are regular issues that concern them. Clearly there is some anxiety about the changes that we are bringing about. That is natural and is positive and constructive anxiety, and we will work together to ensure smooth transitions.

Other concerns are more longstanding. One was the unreliability of internet connection which, I am glad to say, as I have already mentioned, has much improved in the past year. 195 Another is the length of time that the filling of posts takes from advertising to informing the applicants of the results. I am working closely with the Chief Secretary and the Human Resources Department to resolve this.

One concern that I have is the threat of losing our bilingualism. Being bi- or multilingual has recognised benefits to intellectual and social development and is proven to delay the onset of 200 dementia. Llanito is also part of the essence of what it is to be Gibraltarian. It is an intrinsic part of our culture, of who we are. Sadly, for a number of reasons, many of our youngest cannot hold a fluent Llanito conversation. Mr Speaker, we will work to ensure that the education system encourages our children to use both of our languages. My four-year-old granddaughter's rendition of Itsy-bitsy Araña, learnt at St Joseph's Nursery this year, certainly gives me hope for 205 the future.

My final niggle is the perception that there is still within the Education Department in the widest sense, that the Department stops at the Queensway offices. Mr Speaker, all of us who work in education, from Bleak House in the south to Bayside in the north, are part of one continuum and it is imperative that any sense of 'them and us' disappears. The new Director and 210 I are committed to ensuring that this happens.

Mr Speaker, I make it a point to make regular visits to all our educational institutions. What I enjoy most of my work in education is talking to teachers, other staff and pupils, understanding the problems, challenges, and successes for myself; and I want here to publicly thank all the schools for their hospitality and for always making me feel so welcome. I feel that I have made 215 many friends among the professionals in education.

Back to the revolution: Mr Speaker, just last week, I met with the Head students of our three secondary institutions – Mehwish Salman from Westside, Mathew Porter and Jasmine Mahtani from Bayside and Rebecca Pedder from the College. It was a serious, enjoyable, inspiring two hours of conversation. They made some extremely valuable suggestions and I was able to see 220 that we agreed on so much. I could see their excitement at the contribution that they make to their schools, their praise for the support that they get from their teachers and indeed they made a few very useful suggestions which I will be taking up.

And I reflected: it brought home something that is of course obvious, but that always hits me when I am talking to young people. That this is what it is about; that we have such a 225 responsibility to them; that I am privileged to be in the position that I am and that I will do everything I possibly can to ensure that they are well looked after and given the opportunities that they all deserve. Not just the high academic flyers – but them too; not just the ones who do their homework on time – but them too. Because it is not all about exams – but they are certainly important for some, but not for all. Because, Mr Speaker, we believe in a fully inclusive and equal society and we will ensure a fully inclusive and equal system of education for 230 Gibraltar.

Things are changing, from opening up vocational pathways to, as from this year, no longer streaming young children at year 3. We are open to change that is good.

Mr Speaker, this is the revolution I am talking about. We have to question, we have to progress, we have to reconsider and reassess; we have to change. 235

Mr Speaker, Grace Hopper, the American computer scientist and Rear Admiral – interesting combination – also known as 'Amazing Grace', said that:

The most dangerous phrase in the language is, 'We've always done it this way'

This is wisdom that transcends the ages. A long time before her, in 307 BC, King Wu-ling of Zhao, in NE China expressed the same sentiments in a slightly different way. He wrote:

A talent for following the ways of yesterday is not sufficient to improve the world of today, for those who use the old to define the new do not achieve change.

240 The work to bring about this change begins now. With the team across Education we can plan it and can drive it, but it is the teachers ultimately who will deliver it. It does not really depend on the budget, it depends on the teachers. We are blessed with a strong, motivated cadre of excellent teaching professionals and supporting personnel. It is to them that we, all of us, owe who we are and to them that we will owe the future.

245 Mr Speaker, those who have been to my office will know that Kermit the Frog has pride of place there. Its creator, Jim Henson, is known for the words:

Kids don't remember what you try to teach them, they remember who you are

Mr Speaker, I want to create an education way-of-being that will support teachers in a way that they will be able to deliver the best; that they do not have to worry about laptops not working or classroom temperatures being too low. I want teachers to be able to be who they are so that the children of tomorrow, as they go through their lives and take their place in our community will, just as Jim Henson said, remember who they are.

255 Mr Speaker, I also hold ministerial responsibility for public health. During the last year the Public Health Department was modernised and rebranded as Public Health Gibraltar and conducted or participated in many public events – including flu and antibiotic awareness; mental health; sun safety, including the very successful skin cancer screening day; smoking; men's health; education; breastfeeding; sports; dealing with senior citizens; diabetes; and so on – and was represented by the Director of Public Health at the Inter-Island Public Health Conference in Jersey.

260 The new health promotion website was officially launched last year and new leaflets and posters have been designed and infomercials produced on a number of different health issues. The hardworking Health Promotion team has organised a number of campaigns, including hearing, one with the Gibraltar Cardiac Association, and also contributes regularly to GBC Radio Health File and the Gibraltar Chronicle over many public health aspects during the year.

265 The Public Health Department launched its Health Improvement Strategy in January 2015 and a new three-year Health Improvement Strategy is due to be launched at the end of this calendar year. The content is under development but will continue to build on top-priority areas such as promoting healthy eating; reducing the harm from tobacco; preventing, detecting and reducing the burdens from diabetes; improving sexual health; and promoting mental health and well-being. In addition, the strategy will aim to make progress on two key manifesto commitments, lifestyle improvement and the self-care approach, to encourage all citizens to take control of their health and develop self-awareness.

275 Mr Speaker, the Public Health team is a small but extremely hardworking team. The head of the team is the Director of Public Health, Dr Vijay Kumar, who has functions both within the Gibraltar Health Authority and within my Ministry. Dr Kumar has for many years provided excellent advice to successive Governments on health matters and has worked extremely hard and extensively on many boards and committees and represented Gibraltar in meetings and conferences abroad, but above all has gained the respect and affection of Gibraltar. This year, he was awarded an MBE for his services. Vijay is retiring this year. I worked with Vijay from his arrival in Gibraltar when I was on the board of the GHA, and want to thank him for his work and support and for his tremendous contribution to our community.

280 Moving on to Environment, Mr Speaker, seven years is a very short time in politics when you want to achieve so much and have so much ground to make up. Let me start this section of my seventh Budget speech by saying that there is a huge amount more to do; but as I say this, I take comfort from the fact that many things that we now take for granted were unheard of just seven years ago and from the fact also that my voice is no longer a lone voice crying in the wilderness – so many others now care and are committed to continuing to improve the quality of our environment.

290 Seven years later, recognition of the importance of the environment has taken on new dimensions at a Gibraltar and an international level. The challenge to the environment of the future that EU exit poses cannot be understated. As Brexit looms near, our focus and priorities are realigning to ensure even greater recognition of this importance. As the Chief Minister and I have both stated on more than one occasion, Gibraltar must and will maintain EU environmental standards as a minimum. This is vital, not just for our own quality of life but for our international reputation and standing.

295 We must guard against those who would suggest that caring for the environment is a challenge to the economy. Those who think this could do well to recall American Professor Emeritus Guy McPherson saying, 'If you really think that the economy is more important than the environment, try holding your breath while you count your money.' (A Member: Hear, hear.) An economy based on sound environmental principles is longer lasting and more resilient, and 300 the economic benefits of green businesses have only just started to be tapped in our jurisdiction. I will be working closely with the business community during the coming year to bring these benefits to Gibraltar. But proof that it is perfectly possible to grow as an economy and progress on the environment is the extraordinary fact that as Gibraltar's economy continues to grow, as we have seen in this session, carbon emissions and our carbon footprint continue to fall. This is a 305 formidable achievement and very rare internationally.

My team – led by Environment CEO and Chief Scientist Dr Liesl Mesilio and Senior Scientist Stephen Warr – and I are working closely also with Her Majesty's Government and our colleagues in the Overseas Territories, who share many of our challenges and opportunities, to ensure that we adapt to a new, uncompromising form of environmental governance.

310 To this effect, we will shortly be publishing a 25-year environment plan. This is environmental stewardship and multi-generational responsibility, setting standards not just for ourselves but for future generations too. We are the first Government to fully embrace long-term environmental management, with all our policies and actions aimed at improvements beyond the short four-year terms of Parliament. The Chief Minister's aims for diesel is one clear example 315 of this. Nature does not come in four-year tranches. Much of what we do on environment takes time but reaps much longer-lasting benefit.

This strategy will be our blueprint over the next 25 years and will demonstrate our ambitious environmental aspirations. The strategy will be Government led, but will depend on civil society to seize the opportunities presented and assume its responsibility to play its role in the delivery 320 of environmental leadership.

The strategy is divided into three parts: governance, management and implementation. Each topic within these parts has corresponding objectives which will carry Gibraltar's environmental agenda forward to 2040 and beyond.

325 It will set targets in many areas, such as on reduction and cessation of the use of non-essential single-use plastic, like plastic bags, bottles and straws. It will include the time limits for diesel-fuelled vehicles and internal combustion engines set by the Chief Minister in this Budget. It will set targets on carbon emissions and other pollutants, identify incentives for energy efficiency, and much more.

330 The community is now fully willing to embrace these initiatives, much more than it was even a few short years ago. I was, for example, very pleased to see support for the principle of limiting the future use of diesel-powered vehicles in the Chamber of Commerce's latest annual report, just published. Businesses are already embracing these initiatives. The Hunter Group's work with Aquagib to provide a refill scheme, spearheaded by the Nautilus Project, is an example. This year Aquagib itself is studying locations for water fountains to further reduce the need to buy small 335 plastic bottles of water. More about plastics later.

At an international level, Gibraltar continues to seek inclusion in international agreements, including the Paris Agreement on Climate Change, the Bern Convention, the Barcelona Convention and the Intercontinental Biosphere Reserve of the Mediterranean.

340 Mr Speaker, the public service has to lead the way. Already, Government Departments, agencies and authorities, and many Government contractors, have a policy of not using plastic bottles after current stocks are used up. This Parliament has taken the same step – I believe the first Parliament in the Commonwealth to have done so – and I think we have to be congratulated for that. To show its commitment to sustainability, the Government has engaged a Commissioner for Sustainable Development, who will advise further on how we can drive this

The Green Filter is still driving continuous improvement throughout the public sector. Well over 500 building applications have been reviewed during the past financial year and the Environment Department continues to assist the Procurement Office in driving the environmental agenda into the new e-procurement platform.

350 Mr Speaker, waste management, including recycling, remains one of our key responsibilities and priorities. I am extremely pleased to report that recycling figures have seen a further improvement from those reported last year, with an increase of approximately 108% on our rates across the board. The biggest thanks for this achievement must go to the public. Without their contribution we would not be able to achieve this. We expect that this financial year will 355 see the commissioning of an expanded recycling facility near Europa Advance Road to increase our rates even further and improve the way in which we handle our urban waste.

I am extremely pleased that work has now begun in earnest on bringing about the new sewage treatment plant and we expect the project to be completed in 2020. An advanced works contract was signed in January and includes the design and survey work required for the final 360 planning, environmental assessment and preliminary site works. It is being carefully designed to fit into the stunning landscape of Europa Point. This development is a huge achievement. There were so many obstacles and setbacks, but it was not something that we could leave undone like others have before.

Sadly, we still have litter hotspots in our streets, and I once again appeal to the public to refrain from placing rubbish in the wrong places and/or at the wrong times. The Department's Litter Warden section is taking a zero-tolerance approach in this regard. Over 50 litter fines have been issued by this section alone in recent months. The Environmental Agency and the Royal Gibraltar Police, as well as the Environmental monitors and feedback team led by the Cleansing Superintendent, are also taking part in the collaborative effort to deter offenders. As a result, 370 there has been a reduction in the number of instances of fly tipping in some key hotspots. The use of cameras is undoubtedly helping the Department in tackling the problem and additional cameras will be deployed this year. Meetings of the Litter Committee, which I specifically setup as a platform to voice concerns and review progress have continued to take place constructively. The Environmental Safety Group's Clean up the World campaign continues to provide an 375 example as to how the citizen can contribute.

The Department is working with the Chamber to identify ways of improving the effectiveness of rubbish collection in many areas and I am very hopeful that the new cleaning contract, which contains a much wider set of requirements than the previous one, will go a long way towards improving the situation further. I would like at this juncture to repeat once more the 380 Government's commitment to the continuity of the workforce at this time of change.

Discussion and collaboration with NGOs continues. I meet regularly with the Gibraltar Ornithological and Natural History Society, the ESG and the Nautilus Project. I thank them and all other volunteers for their invaluable contribution to Gibraltar's heritage and environment.

385 The Nature Conservancy Council continues to be consulted on all issues associated with the protection of Gibraltar's natural environment in line with my statutory obligations under the Nature Protection Act.

I also continue meetings with the Brexit and the Environment Working Group and my Brexit Advisory Group, which is comprised of both public and private sector officials. This group attends regular meetings with me in London as we prepare for new working practices following EU exit.

The Department has once again successfully delivered its school environmental education programme. This year's theme focused on beating plastic pollution and culminated with the hugely successful celebration of World Environment Day on 5th June at Commonwealth Park.

Plastics, Mr Speaker, are now recognised as one of the largest threats to the natural environment, in particular the oceans, and potentially a very serious threat to human health. The Government has introduced legislation banning the importation of cosmetics and other products that contain micro-bead plastic. We are proud to be one of the first jurisdictions in the world to take such action. As we have seen, this Budget introduces significant measures towards furthering this aim. The Department is also working alongside well-known local retailers to reduce the use of single-use plastics. The work that is being carried out on this by the Nautilus Project merits special attention and praise and the 25-year plan I mentioned earlier will show that significant steps will be taken in this direction during the coming months.

The public and businesses have responded extremely well to both local efforts and Sky's Ocean Rescue campaign. Citizen involvement is key. And stopping plastic use will have direct benefits in the seas around us, where turtles, whales, dolphins and other animals are at daily risk of death due to our actions.

The forthcoming Island Games afford real opportunities to promote the environment, and my colleague the Minister for Sport will shortly be announcing some of these measures.

Mr Speaker, man-induced climate change is the biggest threat humanity has ever faced. In Gibraltar specifically, the near certainty of considerable sea level rise in coming decades and the increased frequency and severity of storms, already noticeable in recent years, will have a real and direct impact. Government remains fully committed to tackling the causes of climate change. As part of its obligations under the Compact of Mayors, Gibraltar continues to produce a city-level inventory of greenhouse gas emissions. Gibraltar is one of a handful of cities which have reported a fully complete inventory and has in fact been commended by the Carbon Disclosure Project, to whom we report, for the completeness of its submission. The results so far show that our carbon footprint is reducing by a very small amount. The mere fact that it is not increasing, despite a growing economy, is a sign of success, but we can do more to force emissions down and a strategy to achieve this is being prepared.

Carbon emissions from power generation in Gibraltar dropped significantly for the third consecutive year in 2017, even before the conversion to gas. The Gibraltar Electricity Authority reports that emissions dropped from 161,358 tonnes in 2016 to 152,287 tonnes in 2017. That is a total of over 9,000 tonnes, or nearly 6% less. Emissions in 2017 were over 27,000 tonnes less than in 2014, or a reduction of 15.3% in three years. This phenomenal drop is simply not usual in countries experiencing the kind of growth we have seen in this Budget.

Switching off lights and devices, changing to low-energy lighting and increasing the energy efficiency of buildings have been measures that we have been encouraging since 2012 and we are clearly seeing the results. We must therefore continue in earnest, as we can undeniably make a difference.

Investing in renewable energy is another key component of our climate change mitigation strategy. Works on a 3 mega-watt solar photovoltaic project are well underway, starting with the installation of solar PV panels in the New Harbours estate. I am also pleased to be able to announce a project that will see the installation shortly of solar PV panels on the roof of the Mid-Town car park. I am just as excited to be able to say that we will shortly be publishing a tender for the development of large-scale solar PV panels in key locations around Gibraltar. These green developments will help us meet our target of producing 20% of our energy from renewable sources whilst similarly reducing emissions and improving our air quality.

Discussions continue on identifying other renewable energy sources, with the possibility too of expanding the pilot wave power plant, which has been extremely useful to EcoWave in identifying technical problems and improving their designs.

The Energy Savings Opportunity Scheme (ESOS) is also taking shape, with companies having registered under the scheme and striving to carry out their energy saving obligations.

All this effort will tie in very nicely with an upcoming major legislative piece on which my team is working, the Climate Change Act, as well as our revised Climate Change Programme. These will help Gibraltar meet its international climate change obligations and harness the economic benefits of green investment.

Our air quality monitoring programme has continued to operate during this past year, thanks to the work of the Environmental Agency and the Government-appointed UK-based air quality consultants, Ricardo. The results for 2017 have just been presented to me and will, as usual, be published. Concentrations of nitrogen-dioxide increased slightly overall in 2017 compared with 2016, but the compliance status remains the same as in 2016 and the values remain below those of previous years.

Despite the small rise in 2017, Witham's Road still shows a strong decline over the previous decade. The rise is likely due to a combination of the effects of shipping activity, such as within GibDock, and the nearby construction site. Rosia Road monitoring site shows annual mean nitrogen-dioxide concentrations below the limit value of  $40 \mu\text{g m}^3$  for the second year running. We achieved this for the first time ever in 2016. This is a welcome achievement and suggests that the effects at Witham's were indeed local. The good news is that the preliminary data for 2018 show a steep decline in  $\text{NO}_2$  at both sites, and hence a strong improvement in air quality, suggesting that 2018 could have our best ever recorded quality of air at these sites. Both fractions of particulate matter, namely  $\text{PM}_{10}$  and  $\text{PM}_{2.5}$ , were also EU-compliant within our limit values.

Despite the positive trend continuing, I am still not happy with air quality in Gibraltar, as my aim is to see it compliant with the more stringent WHO guidelines. Air quality will, of course, improve significantly with the new power station and the permanent closure of all the other aged or temporary diesel plants, but this is not enough. Estimates suggest that in the south district the amount of pollution before 2011 could be apportioned approximately 80% to diesel power generation and 20% to traffic, so while the main contributing 80% will have gone by the end of this year, we need to work still on traffic, and of course on shipping. Therefore, I continue to work with my colleague the Minister for Traffic and Transport, supporting his courageous work in the STTPP to reduce traffic and reduce air speed and to encourage the transition from diesel and petrol through hybrids to electric vehicles – and we will see more progress on this in the coming months.

We continue discussions with GibDock in order to achieve total onshore power for ships in dry dock and alongside, and the GEA and the Port are looking at options for the installation of onshore power at the Port. Gibraltar will of course benefit from international measures on reducing the impact of marine fuel, which are imminent. The expected increase in the use of LNG for shipping will also have a positive impact.

Mr Speaker, during the course of the coming year an air quality monitor will be placed in the North District and I will be commissioning an Air Quality Plan to chart the actions necessary to continue to improve the quality of the air that those of us who live and work in Gibraltar breathe.

I will take a breath now myself!

Mr Speaker, last year saw an improvement in the water quality classification of our beaches. I am pleased to report that even Western Beach has seen an improvement during 2017 and the latest classification results show all of our beaches attaining excellent status. Never heard of this before.

As we are all aware, there have been several high-intensity Atlantic storms this year. These caused considerable damage to our beaches and delayed the commencement of preparatory 490 works. Despite the odds, the beaches were officially opened in time for the summer season. Some works are still ongoing at Camp Bay, given that the entirety of the revetment had to be redressed, although these works will be completed very shortly indeed.

Catalan Bay has also seen improvements this year with the entire beach facilities building, including toilets and showers, being refurbished ahead of the bathing season. A further sand 495 regeneration programme has been carried out in Catalan Bay and, for the first time, in Camp Bay, with approximately 10,000 tonnes of clean sand being deposited. I must thank our beaches and maintenance team for their hard work, which ensured that we were ready for the summer.

Mr Speaker, storms have not been the only natural phenomenon we have had to contend with this year. We have also witnessed a substantial increase in the number of Portuguese Men 500 of War and mauve stingers drifting into our beaches. Our lifeguards have been vigilant from the outset in order to maintain public safety. All our lifeguards receive an induction course on marine wildlife in addition to first aid and general lifeguard training. We have also worked very closely with the Ministry for Equality to include disability language and etiquette training as part of their induction.

505 This year will see the introduction of a beach cameras portal. The service will be operational this month and users will be able to check the state of our beaches online in real time, an excellent addition to our list of improvements.

Marine surveillance and research have become some of the Department's routine tasks. Great strides have been made ever since the Marine Protection Regulations were published in 510 2014 and this last year has been no exception as we continue to push the barriers of conservation action.

On the research front, recent developments include Department officials working alongside regional experts to gather detailed information on the cetaceans and marine reptiles that use BGTW. This work adds to the existing monitoring programmes developed in line with the EU's 515 Marine Strategy Framework Directive and the Barcelona Convention for the Protection of the Mediterranean Sea.

Our scientific dive team has also been busy and continues to work hand in hand with local diving clubs to collect valuable marine records. Shortly, dedicated anchor buoys will be deployed within the Seven Sisters marine conservation zone to enable divers to dive without the need to 520 employ damaging anchors.

Following on from last year's successful implementation of a temporary ban on fishing common octopus in Gibraltar waters, this year's initiative extended the prohibition to six weeks and introduced a new conservation measure whereby the maximum catch limit was restricted to 5 kg per person for two subsequent weeks. Other species, including groupers and common sea 525 bass, will also be subjected to similar conservation measures, in consultation with the Fishing Working Group, as part of the Department's wider Marine Conservation Strategy. I thank the members of the Fishing Working Group for their work and valuable advice.

I recently announced the creation of a dolphin protection zone in the north of BGTW within the Bay of Gibraltar. Additional measures, including a requirement to report any recreational catches of billfish species, such as the Mediterranean swordfish, have also been enacted. The Department's Environmental Protection and Research Unit merits special attention here since they are largely responsible for ensuring that the multitude of conservation measures implemented on land and at sea are adhered to. For this I am thankful and welcome the ongoing rapport with the Royal Gibraltar Police, HM Customs and the Royal Navy.

The Environmental Agency continues to advise me in areas of nuisance, building control, waste regulation, ship sanitation, COMAH, food inspection, water quality, housing, dust control, inspection of X-ray facilities, pest control and food import controls. They monitor the quality of our bathing waters, working in partnership with the Department. They service and calibrate our three air quality monitoring stations and liaise with the pollution specialists in the field.
535

Their new website has been launched, providing easier access to users for the dissemination of environmental information and all forms within the website can now be filled in and submitted online. Their mobile App, Gibenviro, continues to be improved and provides information to the public on a variety of topics, including bathing waters, air quality and recycling.

545 They also work with the Department and the litter wardens to complement the anti-dog fouling campaign. It is largely thanks to their efforts in collecting samples that fines are now being issued, which will lead to a reduction in dog fouling hotspots.

The Agency has been particularly active this year in its work with HSE and HSL in the UK in strictly ensuring the safety elements of the new LNG plant construction and design.

550 Mr Speaker, the appointment of a contractor for the maintenance of the planted areas in North Front Cemetery has led to a dramatic improvement. We have now appointed the contractor who will upkeep and it and ensure that the natural areas of vegetation are maintained to an acceptable standard. Works on planting more trees, on maintaining the surrounding walls, paths, toilets and benches continue. Areas are cleaned daily and the cemetery is kept as a safe, quiet place for visitors. I am happy to remind Members too that the review of the Cemetery Act is completed and the Bill is now on the Order Paper of this House. I stated last year that the cemetery is a difficult place in which to work. Not only do the staff manage the burials and exhumations, which in themselves are difficult, but they also carry out additional works and repairs and for this I thank them.

560 Mr Speaker, green spaces have crucial environmental benefits. As urban development progresses, the value of green spaces in Gibraltar increases. Contrary to what some say, there has been no decrease in green areas in Gibraltar in recent years. Development during this Government's tenure has been on brown or former brown sites. Indeed, the amount of green space has increased, notably with Commonwealth Park and Theatre Royal Park, and will now increase further with the new park north of the leisure centre.

The Department constantly monitors developments to ensure green areas are not lost, or that they are re-provided. Furthermore, we are continuously looking to increase the number of trees in Gibraltar and over 100 trees have been planted during the past year.

570 In December 2017, the Department launched Planning for Biodiversity; an urban wildlife conservation and planning guide, which promotes the protection and enhancement of our urban wildlife. Swifts are a feature of Gibraltar and part of our urban heritage. They also rid us of millions of mosquitos every summer. Bats are equally important at night. Gibraltar was probably the first place in the world to require swift nest and bat roost sites to be provided in all developments. We can, however, still do more to protect existing sites and enhance the population, and we will be leading on an initiative to do just this over the coming months.

575 Mr Speaker, we are encouraging walking around Gibraltar and will continue to maintain the paths on the Upper Rock. During the next 12 months we will also be creating two new public paths, one in the Buena Vista area and another new coastal path in the Europa area. We will link this network of paths with the Commonwealth Walkway initiative, which will highlight both our heritage and the importance of the Commonwealth family.

580 The development of the Gibraltar Botanic Gardens continues, with new schemes to improve the Alameda aesthetically and work towards sustainability. Significantly, the gardens continue to raise their profile as a global centre of excellence for the study and cultivation of cacti. The children's education programme is now one of the Botanic Gardens' flagship programmes. The gardens are now developing the Biodome, a new, bespoke education area. The management of the Alameda has decided to do this by seeking crowd funding and not Government funds, and plans are at an advanced stage.

585 Mr Speaker, it has been an exceptional spring this year and our Gibraltar Nature Reserve has been extraordinarily radiant. The diversity of wild flowers on display and abundance of fauna have caught the attention of many. If we add to this the multitude of improvements that have been carried out recently, we are surely progressing well along the path to a continuously improving nature reserve experience.

595 Against all odds and despite the severe storms that have battered the Upper Rock, our tourist sites have continued operating smoothly. The much anticipated Skywalk was officially inaugurated in March by Mark Hamill – Skywalker himself – and we are now proud to be able to say that we have yet another world-class visitor attraction within the Gibraltar Nature Reserve. Since its inauguration, over 57,000 customers have gone to visit the site and many have posted their pictures on social media. News of the attraction has reached far and wide.

600 Other parts of the Reserve have also seen improvements. A new audio guide system has been installed inside the WWII tunnels. The new system is allowing us to increase the throughput of people visiting the tunnels, whilst not compromising visitor experience and quality. I am also pleased to say that the attraction is now open seven days a week, as is the interpretation centre at O'Hara's Battery.

605 The Department has also taken over the management, regulation and maintenance of lower St Michael's Cave. Improvements to this hidden gem are presently being carried out and include a complete overhaul of all safety equipment and lighting. These improvements will secure the sustainable management of lower St Michael's Cave for years to come.

610 One of the key strategic changes implemented in the Reserve this year was increasing the entry fee for non-residents on 1st April. This increase adequately reflects the enhanced quality of our product and the addition of our new attractions and improvements. In April alone, the measure increased revenue by over £175,000.

615 Sometimes it is the smaller things that matter and we have paid attention to these too. New bins, picnic tables and balustrades are being installed in the Reserve and our reintroduction and captive breeding programmes have continued in earnest with both Barbary Partridges and rabbits being released. Indeed, the secretive Barbary Partridge appears to be secretive no longer. Such has been the success of the reintroduction programme run jointly by the Department and by GONHS, that they are appearing and nesting in many new locations. I remember being accused by a former GSD environment spokesman for being responsible for the extinction of this emblematic species from Gibraltar. I think that the GSD should have learnt by now that, given time, results follow. Commonwealth Park is another example of this – look at it now.

620 Great work also is being done by the Department and GONHS in the captive breeding and rehabilitation of birds of prey.

625 Plans are also progressing to create a new area of natural habitat in the area of Devil's Tower Road, which will be at the same time affording protection against falling rocks for road users.

Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Nature Reserve, our flagship product, is set to continue to improve and flourish while enhancing our unique biodiversity. We have more exciting plans for the future, which will this year include the setting up of an educational centre on the Upper Rock.

630 Going on to gulls now, Mr Speaker, as a result of our persistence, the long-term trend in the breeding population of gulls in Gibraltar continues to be one of decline. Despite the limitations in gull control that are imposed when working in an urban environment, surveys show that, although they do still create disturbance in some areas – I am very conscious of that – the urban population of gulls now appears to be decreasing as well. This often difficult and dangerous work, which includes removing nests from tall rooftops, is one of the most valued services that is performed for the public by the Avian Control Unit, and their efforts and dedication deserve to be recognised.

640 Mr Speaker, the management of our macaques shows how the control of the population is best carried out by means other than extensive culling, and where carefully managed use of contraception, with some selective removal of individuals, delivers notable results. There will always be periods of contact, but we have been successful over the past year in reducing the nuisance value considerably. Surgical contraception by way of laparoscopy continues and our veterinarian continues to treat a select number of macaques from most of the groups in close consultation with the macaque team. This seems to have resulted in a drop in the number of births this year, which should serve to stabilise the population in the future.

645 Mr Speaker, delivering home-grown environmental policy and legislation has always been a strong suit of this administration, as it was of the previous GSLP Government. The following pieces of legislation are planned for the coming year: the Climate Change Act, the revised Cemetery Act, a revised Animals Act, Pet Regulations, a Circus Animals Act, Balloon Regulations, the revised Heritage and Antiquities Act and the amendment to the Electricity Authority Act to allow renewable feed-in agreements.

650 Going on to electricity now, Mr Speaker, by far the most significant development in Gibraltar in the coming financial year will be the commissioning and putting into operation of the new gas-fired power station, whose first engine, as the Chief Minister mentioned yesterday, was very successfully tested for the first time this last weekend. The first consignment of LNG is expected to arrive for commissioning of gas during the summer, made possible thanks to the HSE-led safety safeguards, which have been meticulous and stricter than in any similar plant anywhere in the world. The new generators, initially manned by Bouygues, will contribute very significantly towards generation cost savings and a much cleaner and quieter environment. I would like to thank the GEA, its CEO Michael Caetano and the teams at Bouygues, Shell and Gasnor for getting us here. Most particularly I want to thank the Financial Secretary, Albert Mena, who has very effectively led on the complex discussions on contractual and practical matters and without whom this project would not have come to where it is now. The last 12 months have seen a huge effort going not only into the new power station directly but also into the associated new high-voltage distribution centres, infrastructure and the new high-voltage cabling network.

660 The GMES power station, the former MOD power station, although on stand-by mode, had unfortunately to be called back into service for a short period this last winter as a result of cold weather. It is, however, now very likely that it will be fully decommissioned within the next few months, just as the old OESCO station was some time ago.

670 Mr Speaker, I think it is also worth mentioning that the only recent power interruption occurred in January and was as a result of a high-voltage interconnector cable fault, due to aging equipment. Gone are the days of regular power outages due to lack of capacity – something that we promised to do in 2011 and that we have so successfully accomplished. Customers enjoy a power supply reliability in line with other western European countries, despite our lack of electrical connection to a European-wide grid.

675 The cost of fuel supplied during the last financial year continued to fluctuate, with £390.98 per tonne in April 2017, increasing to £458.48 at the end of January this year, before dropping slightly to £433.40 per tonne in March 2018. The impact of these varying oil prices has not been great, at least for the first half the financial year, given that the Authority had entered into a fuel hedging contract which had been in place for six years when the cost of fuel was considerably higher. The fuel hedge contract terminated in Sept 2017.

680 The Authority continues to upgrade and expand the Network and the Supervisory Control and Data Acquisition (SCADA) system used to monitor the generation and main distribution system, providing a better and faster response when dealing with the now very rare power outage scenarios.

685 Improvements to the public lighting network continue by replacing existing streetlights with LED and/or low-energy lanterns, thus further reducing overall consumption.

Training and development of technical and non-technical staff continued this year with an emphasis on safety and on the new power station project and its state-of-the-art technology. Employees have already started attending training courses organised both locally and abroad.

690 I turn now to water, Mr Speaker. I am pleased to report that AquaGib has maintained and improved on its levels of service and performance indicators in respect to both provision of potable and seawater, and for sewerage services throughout Gibraltar. In order to achieve this level of service, AquaGib has undertaken an expenditure of £11,556,000. It has continued to invest in capital projects as part of its asset replacement plan aimed at maintaining and improving the water infrastructure assets of Gibraltar. The approved investment plan is set at £3.2 million over the five-year period to March 2020. During this last year, a total of just over £½ million was spent on capital projects, which included the replacement of potable and seawater mains; replacement of water meters, and replacement and installation of new membranes for Governor's Cottage reverse osmosis plants, so increasing their efficiency.

700 In addition to the above, AquaGib has invested approximately £650,000 this period in replacing the high-pressure pump, energy recovery system and booster pump on each of the four reverse osmosis plants at Governor's Cottage. This investment has a payback period of just around two years and will result in a huge energy saving of approximately 30% per annum.

705 During the period, AquaGib has commenced on a long-term project with Government to further increase the potable and salt water delivery from Waterworks reservoir to the Westside area.

Mr Speaker, I now move on to my responsibilities for heritage. Having been at the helm of this division for a year and a half, I have come to believe that most people do not realise the extent of the fortifications, city walls, monuments, listed buildings and natural heritage sites which Gibraltar is privileged to have and has a duty to protect. Most of these heritage assets are by their very nature old, so their state of preservation varies. The Heritage Division of the Department, led by Marcello Sanguinetti, has commenced a refurbishment programme for these sites, most notably the making safe and repointing of the impressive Almond Tower at the Moorish Castle. This was in danger of collapse, so we are extremely pleased that a combination of teams from Technical Services, the Museum and their conservator, together with a specialist contractor, are in the process of restoring this magnificent structure. Other areas have included Southport Gates, the Garrison Library balustrade, the Military Heritage Centre and Princess Caroline's Battery.

720 Mr Speaker, a new archaeologist is now in post and will be assisting the Department in its duties, and one of the fundamental aspects of this is the issuing of advice to contractors and the Town Planning department. Over the past 18 months we have been extremely successful in de-conflicting heritage and development.

725 The scale of development in Gibraltar also means that there is a great emphasis on archaeological watching briefs. Such a brief led to the discovery of a whole network of bunkers and passageways at the Lathbury Barrack site, which as a result was properly surveyed and photographed.

730 Mr Speaker, we have carried out beautification works in the area of Europa Point using the magazine previously known as the Du Farol or 'the last shop in Europe'. Visitors there will no longer experience 'much cheapness', rather interpretation informing on the World Heritage site, history and natural history of the area and the use of the Strait throughout the ages. This information will now be seen by the many visitors and will also complement the new sports complex. Improvements to the area will now continue to the north, with the embellishment of the Nun's Well site already commencing. Both these projects will ensure that the eastern part of the Europa Point plateau remain open and accessible to the public.

735 Mr Speaker, the opening of the viewing platform overlooking the Gorham's Cave complex World Heritage site at Europa Road and at Europa Advance Road now gives the opportunity to view the caves where Neanderthals once lived and to receive detailed information on their story. A programme of visits to the site itself is now in progress and these are proving a great success.

740 Major works were also carried out at Vanguard Cave to protect the sediment slope from erosion by the sea. Gabions have been placed on the lower section and this protects it from the elements, especially in the light of what seem to be ever more powerful storms. Works were also carried out at Mediterranean Steps to stabilise a section that was creating minor rock falls and impacting on the entry point to the Gorham's Cave complex. These remedial works also help to make the area safe for the many users of Med Steps.

745 The caves continue to provide incredible items, such as the discovery last August of a Neanderthal child's canine milk tooth, and as a result, excavations for this year have been extended by one month. There has also been an expansion of the volunteer participation scheme and this year the Museum will have an unprecedented number of Gibraltarian students 750 in the excavations.

The importance of the exposure that Gibraltar gets through TV channels like the BBC, CBS News, Japan's NHK TV, or publications such as the New York Times and the Lost World book as part of the development of the World Heritage site cannot be overstated.

The Gibraltar Museum team continues at the forefront of research into the Neanderthals 755 worldwide, as is demonstrated time and time again.

Mr Speaker, we have developed an extremely honest and fruitful working relationship with the Gibraltar Heritage Trust, which continues to uphold the highest standards in defence of our common heritage. Their work would not be done without the tireless efforts of the Chair, the CEO, the board members and the countless volunteers who give of their time. These include 760 those working continuously on the embellishment and research work at Witham's Cemetery and the Fortress of Gibraltar Group, who recently discovered the location of a transmitter room that had been forgotten. As keen military enthusiasts, they have also helped in mapping out World War II sites for recording and future decisions on their use.

One particular group that we support is the Re-enactment Society, those tireless exponents 765 of our military history who give so much enjoyment every weekend in Main Street and Casemates and who very recently performed very successfully within the Great Siege Tunnels.

Mr Speaker, the Order Paper also includes a Bill for the new Heritage and Antiquities Act. This is the result of co-operation between the many stakeholders, including of course the Trust and the Museum. I would like to especially thank the Deputy Chief Minister for working with me on 770 this Act. His expertise as a historian has been particularly helpful in this journey; and of course my predecessor, the Hon. Steven Linares, who led on all the original drafting of what is a very complex piece of legislation. Work on this commenced nearly 18 years ago. I am very pleased to have been able to bring this to Parliament just over a year after I was entrusted with responsibility for Gibraltar's heritage. I must also acknowledge with thanks both the Hon. Roy 775 Clinton and the Hon. Trevor Hammond, with whom I have held constructive discussions on the Bill. The Bill has been well received by all stakeholders and will create a firm foundation for the protection, maintenance and promotion of our heritage assets. One great innovation is that all the listed structures will now be mapped out on GIS. Instead of just grid references, the full extent of the property will be shown together with a description and photographs. A special 780 thank you must go to my GIS officer Karl Netto for delivering this so efficiently and professionally.

Mr Speaker, my final area of responsibility is getting close. Urban renewal is moving apace, with landscaping initiatives carried out in conjunction with the planted areas division of the Department of Environment. Developments that have heeded heritage advice are regenerating 785 the Old Town area. A case in point is the Arches complex at the Old Police Barracks. This is a testament to what can be achieved. I urge developers to come and engage with us early to continue this trend. Many projects are in the pipeline, such as the development of Orange Bastion and the new schools. All will add to the improved visual and living environment for all our citizens.

We can also benefit from volunteers in this respect, as was shown with the repainting of 790 Referendum Steps by the Youth Service in connection with the anniversary of the Referendum, or the street art initiative that is about to commence. Gibraltarians take great pride in their homeland, and tenants' associations also go a long way in improving their surroundings for the betterment of all. This is something we applaud and encourage.

Mr Speaker, as proof of the success of positive collaboration, I use the example of the ex-MOD gatehouse at the entrance to the old Naval Dockyard. There were those who doubted it would be saved at all. It clearly demonstrates this Government's commitment to heritage, and I thank all those who made this happen, particularly the Chief Minister and His Excellency the 795 Governor for their personal support in achieving this.

800 The Garrison Library has now moved into a period of sustainability, conservation and outreach, providing open access to the library collections as against its institutional history as a members-only subscription library with limited access to the general public. The library is now used on a daily basis by local researchers and students alike, who make excellent use of its collections. Additionally, it has also become a hub for research gatherings for Gibraltar 805 University's PhD students and also supports many niche cultural events as well as the annual conference on self-determination, which it organises jointly with the office of the Deputy Chief Minister. I am very excited to continue to develop my working relationship with the library team with a view to ensuring we protect its rich historical and cultural treasure for future generations.

Mr Speaker, as I end, the world remains an uncertain place on many fronts, but Gibraltar and 810 its Government remain certain in its goals and aspirations. This is evident in all fields, including in this context the environment. Our aim now is to ensure that the environment is safe for the future, well beyond the life of this Government. We have the obligation. It must be our legacy.

And finally, Mr Speaker, a few thank-yous: to you, the Clerk and the staff of Parliament; to all the members of the teams in all of my Departments, agencies, authorities, and contractors; to all 815 the members of the many boards and committees for which I am responsible and where they invariably serve voluntarily; a special mention to the Attorney General and the Gibraltar Law Officers for providing advice and drafting legislation, overburdened as they are with Brexit; to the officials at 6 Convent Place, including the Press Office, Chief Secretary Darren Grech, Chief Technical Officer Hector Montado and Financial Secretary Albert Mena, for their often 820 unrecognised work and support; to Dominique Searle and the staff at Gibraltar House for their steadfast support and hospitality whenever I have cause to visit London; to the volunteers in the NGOs with whom I work; to the three unions who have members in my areas; and very especially to my Ministry and my personal staff for their support. I must, of course, make special mention of Derek Alman, who in my Ministry is leading on the new schools project.

825 I also want to thank and send my best wishes to four former Directors of Education who have left their posts in the space of about six months. Anyone hearing this out of context could be forgiven for thinking we had experienced a night of the educational long knives!

Former Director Ernesto Gomez retired as Chief Secretary and former Director Joey Britto retired as Senior Administrator. I thank them and wish them both well.

830 Darren Grech, former Director on temporary promotion, to paraphrase Shakespeare in the Scottish play, was from my team 'untimely ripped'. Darren was Director of Education for the first year of my tenure as Education Minister and I thank him for his dedication, his counsel and his commitment. I wish him every success in his new challenging role as Chief Secretary.

The fourth farewell is to someone who stepped in as Director, also on temporary promotion, 835 with no time to think about it, and who has stepped into the role with great effectiveness and wisdom – that greatest attribute of all. To Lilli Gomez, whom I call Lilli the Wise, an educationalist of the finest kind, who is retiring in a week's time with so much still to offer.
Thank you: few people who I have worked with have contributed so much to a role in such a short space of time, a role you fully deserved.

840 And finally, to congratulate and welcome the new additions to the Education team, Director of Education Jacqueline Mason and Senior Education Adviser Keri Scott. To quote the well-known ancient Chinese proverb, you arrive in interesting times. But this is not ancient China, so it is not a curse, it is a blessing – you will see.

Mr Speaker, thank you. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Gilbert Licudi.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr 850 Speaker, I will start my address with Tourism and Commercial Aviation. In the last 12 months the Gibraltar Tourist Board has continued to work effectively on promoting and selling Gibraltar as a top destination in order to attract more visitors to our shores, thereby developing opportunities and growth for the industry. The relevant figures were, in fact, given by the Chief Minister in his address.

855 It is, however, important to highlight that in 2017 total visitor numbers were up, tourist expenditure was up almost 20%, number of coaches coming to Gibraltar was up, hotel room occupancy was up, number of cruise calls and passengers was not just up but hit record highs in 2017, number of passengers by air, despite the collapse of Monarch in early October 2017, again hit record highs in 2017. All of these are objective figures which show that the approach by Government in marketing Gibraltar is bearing fruit.

860 I have mentioned, and it was mentioned also by the Deputy Chief Minister, the unfortunate demise of Monarch Airlines in October of last year. This left Gibraltar with a reduced service to London Gatwick and Manchester and saw the service stopped to both Birmingham and London Luton. As soon as the collapse of Monarch occurred, the Gibraltar Tourist Board contacted all airlines with suitable aircraft and operational bases in order to fill the gap left by Monarch.
865 Unfortunately, by early October schedules and aircraft allocations have already been decided for the following summer season, leaving very little room to manoeuvre to replace this capacity for this summer season. Despite this, we saw, after discussions with the relevant airline, the purchase by British Airways of the London Gatwick slots left vacant by Monarch. With this purchase, BA launched a six-times weekly service to London Gatwick for the peak summer 870 months of May to September, providing much-needed seat capacity during this busy period. BA has also continued to show its commitment to Gibraltar by announcing a frequency increase on its London Heathrow service starting at the end of October, increasing frequency from nine to 13 services weekly. Last winter easyJet also increased its capacity from Bristol and Gatwick by operating slightly larger aircraft on these routes and we are pleased to see that flights to Bristol 875 next winter will also increase to three per week from the current two flights.

Despite this, we continue to remain in constant contact with existing and new airlines with regard to recovering now unserved UK departure points. Furthermore, we are also exploring opportunities to new regional parts of the UK and we continue to participate in the ROUTES Europe event, where airlines and airports come together to do business.

880 Mr Speaker, the cruise industry, as the figures have shown, also continues to show consistency, and in 2018 250 calls are expected. This is an increase of just over 6% on last year and I am delighted to announce that 11 cruise ships will be making their inaugural calls to Gibraltar this year. Our consistent dialogue with the industry at the Seatrade Global events and through the membership of MedCruise maintains our reputation as a proactive 885 destination and one of excellence. Our partners in the local industry continue to play a vital role in the delivery of all services, as does our hospitality and retail industry as a whole, in ensuring a pleasant experience for all who come ashore.

Mr Speaker, during the 51st MedCruise General Assembly, held in Toulon in France last year, elections were held for a president and a new board of directors of the association. Nicky 890 Guerrero, Chief Executive of the Gibraltar Tourist Board, was elected to the board of directors comprising 12 members, with two other candidates representing large ports in the western Mediterranean. As I said in the relevant press release at the time, it is extremely gratifying to see that Mr Guerrero was elected to the board of directors of such an important association. This is undoubtedly a testament of the respect and high regard in which Mr Guerrero personally and 895 Gibraltar generally are held within MedCruise. Mr Guerrero has since represented the association at various high-profile events as Director for Partnerships and Events and thereby representing Gibraltar on these occasions too.

Mr Speaker, last year I attended the Monaco Yacht Show in September, where we were able to support the local yacht industry and the Gibraltar Maritime Association with their promotion 900 of the Rock to the yachting world. We expect to return to this prestigious event this year.

At the World Travel Market in London last year I launched the GTB's Year of Culture Campaign. For the first time ever the GTB held a major press conference at the International Media Centre, where the new campaign was unveiled by myself and the Chief Executive of the 905 GTB. The presentation was attended by over 60 journalists from the international media, the UK national and trade press. The campaign is a narrative of storytelling across the key cultural areas of the Rock. The Tourist Board is presenting this through visual footage and editorial in the build up to hosting the Gibraltar 2019 NatWest International Island Games. The concept is to showcase Gibraltar's extensive cultural activities and history leading up to the modern day. The theme 'A Year of Culture' is a celebration of Gibraltar's diversity, history and heritage and 910 highlights a number of themes which best reflect Gibraltar's spirit of endurance. The aim is to encourage a different perspective of the destination and a deeper understanding of what defines Gibraltar and its people today.

The themes were portrayed through an extensive online and offline media campaign that the Tourist Board ran this winter. The campaign commenced immediately after Christmas and will 915 be a continuing marketing initiative. It included for the first time a TV advert running throughout January in addition to a UK regional radio campaign in February and a mobile phone campaign, which was also trialled for the first time. The campaign also included destination editorial features in traditional national and regional newspaper titles, in both printed and online formats. A short-burst video is also being used to support the campaign on websites and 920 throughout social media.

We continue to promote niche market tourism and once again will be represented at the Rutland Bird Fair from 17th to 19th August of this year.

The MICE market, which deals with meeting centres and conferences, is receiving particular attention with two familiarisation trips by foreign operators specialising in this market, in 925 conjunction with the local industry, having already been held this year. In addition, one local hotel and tour operator co-operated with the GTB to hold an event at Gibraltar House in London for MICE market agents on 26th June, only a week ago.

The Gibraltar Tourist Board updated its website earlier this year. The update includes a fresh new look, including more image and video content and the availability of the website in 930 the Spanish language. The ease of navigation has been improved too, with faster access to the more popular sections. The website will be made available in other languages in the coming months. New sections include suggested itineraries for visitors to Gibraltar with different requirements. The events section has been given more prominence, building on the success of Gibraltar's increasingly popular cultural calendar. The UNESCO World Heritage Site, Gorham's 935 Cave Complex, is given a higher profile and the Gibraltar 2019 NatWest International Island Games will also feature throughout the year.

Our consistent activity on social media has proven the power of this medium. Furthermore, the ability to measure activity is a great asset.

Other activities included the release of a music video by popular Reggae artist Maxi Priest, 940 produced with the co-operation of the Gibraltar Tourist Board. The video was released via Visit Gibraltar, via the official Government Facebook page and also the GTB Facebook page, as part of the Government's tourism marketing strategy. After it was posted, the video was viewed more than 86,000 times in the first 24 hours. Maxi Priest also shared the original post on his own page.

945 This year we made a return to the FITUR travel exhibition in Madrid and presented the Year of Culture campaign to the Spanish market. In addition, and closer to home, the GTB led a delegation to Chiclana in Cádiz, where areas of mutual co-operation in tourism were discussed.

Event-led tourism continues to be a priority for this Government. Events now range from backgammon to darts, chess, music, food and literature. And sport will clearly play a major role 950 next year as we welcome the Island Games, no doubt bringing many visitors to the Rock.

Mr Speaker, I was delighted once again this year to introduce the Gibraltar Lecture at the FT Weekend Oxford Literary Festival. The lecture was delivered by Baroness Kennedy, who is one of Britain's best-known lawyers and has dedicated her professional life to giving a voice to those in need and to championing civil liberties. The lecture was sponsored by the Gibunco Group of 955 companies and is part of the yearly activities carried out to promote the Gibunco Gibraltar

International Literary Festival. Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar also sponsors the Green Room for the Festival at Oxford.

We are already looking forward to another excellent Literary Festival in Gibraltar in November of this year and we are very grateful to the Gibunco Group for their commitment to the Festival and their support at Oxford and Blenheim with the Gibraltar Lectures. This Government believes in delivering quality events throughout the year, not only for our residents but also for those who wish to visit us to enjoy these. I would like to thank all our sponsors and partners who help make this festival a great success. Last year, the festival was made more accessible with the use of induction loops, sign interpretation, more visual aids and the website also included soundbites. Indeed, the festival has led the way in becoming not only more accessible but also digital. We were also honoured last year to host a reception at Gibraltar House for Her Royal Highness the Princes Royal, Patron of the Festival.

The growth figures which we have seen reflect the continued confidence in Gibraltar as a destination for visitors. This level of confidence has been further demonstrated by the private sector investments we have seen in the expansion of tourist accommodation. In addition to the Holiday Inn Express in Devil's Tower Road which already opened its doors to visitors, the Indigo Hotel will be built on the Corral Road site currently occupied by NatWest Bank, and in addition there are developments planned for new serviced aparthotels on Devil's Tower Road, Engineer Lane and on the site of the vacant Continental Hotel, although this final application is still going through the outline planning process. In total, these developments will make almost 500 additional rooms available for visitors to Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, the results of the hard work carried out by the GTB, the Ministry of the Environment, the Ministry of Culture and Sport and all our partners in the tourism industry both here and further afield, are clear and speak for themselves.

Mr Speaker, I turn to employment matters. Again, the relevant figures on employment numbers and the record low unemployment figures were given by the Chief Minister during his speech. These figures are truly outstanding and show the commitment of this Government towards assisting members of our community in finding gainful employment. We now have in place a highly successful mechanism that has taken so many out of unemployment and given them worthwhile and meaningful jobs.

I will not repeat the figures mentioned by the Chief Minister but it is worth looking at the quarterly average for the second quarter in 2011, just before we were elected into office, which stood at 433 and compare this with the quarterly average for the second quarter of this year, which has just finished at the end of June and which stands at an all-time record low for the quarter, of 45.

Picking out figures at random which suit one's argument might be considered dangerous. What is important, however, is the trend. The quarterly average for the first quarter in 2017 was 216, for the second quarter of 2017 114, for the third quarter of 2017 85, for the fourth quarter of 2017 62, for the first quarter of 2018 57, and for the second quarter of 2018, as I have mentioned, 45. The trend is clearly and significantly downward to low figures of Gibraltarian unemployment the likes of which we have never seen before.

Mr Speaker, I do not believe that this is purely anecdotal or accidental. Nor can I take the credit for all of this. It is a testament to the hard work of all of those at the Employment Service, very ably led by Debbie Garcia, who have made this possible, and I pay tribute to them all and thank them for what they are achieving. Ultimately, the beneficiaries are all of those who have been able to find a job and who are on a daily basis actively assisted in their pursuit of employment. The Department of Employment continues to enhance and improve the quality of its service by making interaction with Government more efficient, effective and easier.

The Employment Service has, since the beginning of this year, met with various representatives of the business community in order to obtain an understanding of current and future employment-related needs. Meetings included the Chamber of Commerce, the Gibraltar Bar Council, the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses, the Gibraltar Society of Accountants and the Gibraltar Hindu Community. The Department has also recently contributed to a panel event hosted by the local branch of the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development, where members had the opportunity to ask questions regarding employment matters and express any concerns.

The Careers Section has developed and enhanced its provision extensively over the past 18 months. Employment officers, employment co-ordinators and employment and careers counsellors work together in providing the best possible support and advice to service users. The teams, ably led by the Employment and Careers Manager, assess individual needs and circumstances, match skills, qualifications and experience to available vacancies and identify possible future career opportunities. At the same time, the Employment Service has developed a high level of interaction with local employers and established direct lines of communication, thus ensuring that any advice and guidance given to users reflects accurately the needs and requirements of local business and industry.

The Careers Section also provides dedicated support, delivering workshops in CV writing, cover letters and interview skills as well as allowing opportunity to explore all the options available in the job market and potential career progression. The Employment and Careers Counsellor continues to work closely with the Department of Education, offering support and guidance for school leavers as well as providing onsite counselling at our secondary schools once a week. Through this, the Department of Employment forms an integral part of the overall initiative in working towards bridging the gap between education and employment, supporting individuals in their decision-making processes at such important stages of their lives.

The Labour Inspectorate is tasked with the enforcement of employment laws. They operate in a diligent and effective manner, always demonstrating our continued commitment toward eradicating illegal labour and ensuring that all our businesses are compliant with employment regulations. A new strategy and programme of inspections is underway, covering all sectors of business and industry, thus ensuring that a level playing field is maintained.

Finally on employment, Mr Speaker, regarding health and safety at work, I am happy to inform the House that the Health and Safety Inspectorate records a non-fatality record of nearly eight years. Training in this line of work is essential, particularly as we now enjoy 59 active large construction projects all over Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, I turn to the Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Service. 2017 has not only been a year of continued progress; it has also given the GFRS the opportunity to overcome and adapt to new challenges. As a whole, the GFRS responded to 1,519 operational calls, which includes actual fires, emergencies and false alarms. The Geographical Information System has been modified to enable live access to the Land Registry address system, which should improve the accuracy of deployed resources attending to emergency incidents.

As part of the GFRS fleet replacement programme, two new fire appliances – a rescue vehicle and a water firefighting vehicle – have been procured and now form part of the assets that can be deployed, with a combined value of approximately £250,000. These are now fully operational and proving to be a valuable acquisition. The second phase of this replacement programme is due to be completed towards the latter part of 2018 with another two appliances, both water firefighting vehicles. These are currently being manufactured and will have a combined value of approximately £300,000. The ultimate beneficiary of this replacement programme will of course be our community. In addition to the above, the Government has this year acquired a new auxiliary vehicle equipped with specialised rope rescue equipment that is used to support frontline operations.

During the month of December 2017, the GFRS played a major role in the planning of the GIBEX exercises in partnership with C3 – or Civil Contingencies – other blue light responders and partner agencies. The service is proactively involved in the development of multi-agency 1060 response plans for a variety of potential scenarios and is very much at the forefront of the consultative committees for promoting interoperability.

After 18 years of emergency medical care, on 22nd January 2018 the GFRS transferred its Emergency Ambulance Service to the Gibraltar Health Authority. The longstanding professional relationship between the GFRS and the GHA remains very solid. The GFRS will continue to make every effort to support GHA ambulance crews as and when required in the execution of their duties. In fact, in 2017, the Fire Control operators have mobilised the GHA Ambulance Service on 5,394 occasions.

1070 The GFRS forms a vital part of Gibraltar's future development as a modern and, more importantly, safe community with involvement in major projects including the pre-construction phase of the LNG facility. The main objective of this continued involvement is to familiarise themselves with potential risks in order to assist in the implementation and creation of emergency response plans. The primary aim of these plans is to mitigate the effects that an unlikely event could have on first responders, on our community and on the environment, by working in partnership with other agencies and emergency services.

1075 Mr Speaker, on the Airport Fire and Rescue Service (AFRS), considerable training and equipment upgrades have taken place during the last 12 months, with its firefighters having undertaken a number of courses in both operational and personal development areas. Earlier this year a large-scale training exercise was held involving air terminal staff and other non-emergency agencies who work at or support the terminal and its aviation operations. Numerous lessons were learnt and these have now been incorporated into the emergency plans. It was found to be an invaluable exercise for players who do not normally get the opportunity to practise but will nevertheless be depended upon to fulfil specific roles and functions in the event of an incident.

1085 Following from the tender awarded last year for the purchase of new firefighting assets, the first vehicle has been delivered to the AFRS on schedule. The next three vehicles have also now arrived. A period of competency and further specialist training for these new vehicles will commence to ensure that all the staff are fully conversant with the new technology and tactics that will be introduced with these vehicles. The vehicles replace the current fleet, which have become obsolete and not economically viable to maintain. These Rosenbauer Panthers will prove to be a significant upgrade and provide the airfield with a much enhanced firefighting capability and an assured element of resilience.

1090 Aviation firefighting is very much a compliance-led industry and the AFRS last year underwent their second UK Civil Aviation Authority audit, one which was undertaken jointly together with representatives from the Military Aviation Authority. Both these regulatory organisations gave the AFRS a clean bill of health with only relatively minor observations having been raised.

1095 The staff at the AFRS aspire with eagerness and enthusiasm to further their future development opportunities, both as individuals and collectively as an organisation. This ensures that the AFRS is well placed and fully prepared to respond to any demands that may be placed upon it either at the airfield or elsewhere in Gibraltar in support of the GFRS or any other emergency service.

1100 Mr Speaker, in March of this year the air terminal, as I have mentioned, exercised its role in the Airport Emergency Orders with the simulation of an aircraft declaring overheating to a wheel assembly, resulting in it becoming immobilised away from the aircraft stands. This required all agencies to respond and deal with the logistical implications of disembarking and returning passengers to the air terminal from a remote location on the airfield. Valuable lessons were identified.

1105 The air terminal took possession of another explosive trace detector to complement the other four already in service. These are used for the screening of passengers and hand luggage and are located at the different search areas. The extra unit will ensure that the Airport is able to remain compliant with current aviation security regulations and also provides the necessary resilience when any of the other units are being maintained.

At present the tender for the procurement of X-ray scanning equipment for the screening of hold baggage equipment is in its final stages. The new equipment will bring Gibraltar International Airport in line with other UK airports, which must have this equipment installed during the course of this year. The new technology makes use of computer tomography, which is very similar to that used in hospitals for CT scans, and will bring with it the capability of a much higher detection rate of threats and restricted articles.

Mr Speaker, the Government last year commissioned the National Air Traffic Services to provide a costed plan for the introduction of a contingency air traffic control tower. As was proven by the rock fall earlier this year in March on to Devil's Tower Road, the loss of the main air traffic control tower will automatically lead to the closure of the Airport to civil aircraft. Luckily this year's event led to a closure of ATC for less than 24 hours. In different circumstances, such as the aftermath of a fire, the closure could last for an extended period. The Government has therefore allocated funds this year to provide for an independent contingency facility, which will sit on the other side of Winston Churchill Avenue from the existing ATC tower.

Mr Speaker, I turn to the Port Authority. Last September, Manuel Tirado was appointed acting Captain of the Port and Chief Executive of the Gibraltar Port Authority. Mr Tirado and his team at the GPA continually strive to maintain Gibraltar as a centre of maritime excellence along with its partners and stakeholders in the local maritime industry.

Positive growth trends reported at the last Budget have continued this year, as highlighted again by the Chief Minister during his speech. We do not, however, take the healthy growth figures for granted and we will continue to closely monitor our tariffs against competitors, global and regional trends, and of course any impact resulting from Brexit. Overall, I hope to see the positive trends continue during 2018.

To achieve this goal, the robust marketing programme which the Gibraltar Port Authority has been actively engaged in for the last 36 months will continue. This strategy has seen direct engagement with ship owners and operators around the world as well as attendance at a variety of bunkering and shipping events in places such as Rotterdam, Singapore, Athens, Amsterdam, London, Tenerife, Jamaica and Fort Lauderdale. These marketing trips have helped to maintain the high profile of the Port of Gibraltar. The Gibraltar Port Authority will continue attending conferences and exhibitions, profiling the Port in tandem with its stakeholders as this approach has proved to be very successful hitherto. One recent example of this has been the Posidonia Exhibition held in Athens, Greece. This event, one of the most prestigious in the shipping industry calendar, brought our key partners together to promote the Port and to showcase the Gibraltar team rather than just the Gibraltar Port Authority.

The Port has also recently become a member of the International Association of Ports and Harbours, an association which promotes the interest of ports worldwide through strong member relationships, collaboration and information sharing that help resolve common issues, advance sustainable practices and continually improve how ports serve the maritime industries.

Mr Speaker, I am also delighted to announce that the upgraded Vessel Traffic Services system (VTS) is in the final stages of going live, with staff currently undergoing training and the new purpose-built office handed over to the Gibraltar Port Authority. This particular project demonstrates the Government's commitment to investing to improve.

With regard to Port finances, revenue for last year surpassed the estimated Budget figure of £4½ million, with a total exceeding £6 million having been received. The Port Authority has been working hard on initiatives to further increase revenue streams. One of these initiatives involves the revision of the Marpol Scheme – which involves the discharge of waste from ships – and tariff structure which took effect from the beginning of this year, with all vessels visiting British Gibraltar Territorial Waters, with certain defined exceptions, being required to pay the revised tariff as part of their calling costs. The result of this review and implementation, apart from additional revenue for the Port, is that all vessels paying the fee are entitled to a free discharge allowance under the new scheme, so not only are we improving our revenue income but providing the service for vessels to discharge in Gibraltar up to a certain limit. This also ties in with Government's effort to improve the impact that shipping has on the environment. The Port Authority has also undertaken a review of the bunker fee structure in close consultation with its 1165 bunker operators and changes to the fee structures took effect as from 1st April of this year. It is anticipated that the increase in bunker fees and annual bunker licence fees will also improve our overall revenue figures for the 2018-19 financial year.

Mr Speaker, I would like to thank the team at the Gibraltar Port Authority, ably led by acting 1170 Captain of the Port Manuel Tirado, who continually strive to maintain Gibraltar as a centre of maritime excellence along with its partners and stakeholders in the whole of the local maritime industry.

Mr Speaker, with regard to the Gibraltar Maritime Association, once again the Gibraltar Ship Registry has retained its 'White List' status worldwide for the third consecutive year. This is reflected in the annual International Chamber of Shipping's Flag State Performance Table for 1175 2017-18. Gibraltar also ranks high in its overall technical performance levels by the 'Paris MOU' and the 'Tokyo MOU' and is recognised as a quality register by the US Coastguard in their 'Qualship 21' system.

The overall Gibraltar fleet, both ships and yachts, at the end of 2017 stood at 1,261 vessels, down by just two vessels when compared to the previous year. The uncertainties of Brexit 1180 have had an impact on new registrations in both the Yacht and Ship Registries. Once we have clarified whether Gibraltar, and in fact the UK Ship Registry, either retains or loses EU member state register status or the conditions upon which they currently operate as an EU member, we will be able to target our services in Europe accordingly. The GMA is preparing for either scenario and has the flexibility and expertise to adjust its services. For the foreseeable future, 1185 however, it is business as usual at the Gibraltar Registry.

The GMA is continuously exploring new avenues to diversify its fleet. This year the GMA will be co-hosting a stand at the Monaco Yacht Show in 2018 with the Gibraltar Port Authority and the Gibraltar Tourist Board as well as the Gibraltar Yachting Association.

In the last 12 months the GMA has provided training to a number of independent 1190 authorities, including the UK Maritime and Coastguard Agency, the Cayman Islands Registry, the Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Service and HM Customs. Furthermore, the GMA's seafarer section continued to issue a significant number of provisional and full-term certificates in 2017, with more than 3,600 completed during the calendar year. Our new seafarers' portal has been slightly delayed in order to finalise software issues, but the GMA is aiming to 1195 finalise the facility and introduce it during the course of this summer.

The GMA is highly regarded for its technical expertise in maritime surveying. We are proud to be considered one of the best-performing ship registries in Europe.

HM Government's strategy for the GMA over the next two years is to continue maintaining 1200 its high quality of service, increase the fleet size by bringing in business from new geographic areas and further develop its position as a training hub.

Mr Speaker, on Civil Contingencies, the Office of Civil Contingencies continues to sit at the apex of Gibraltar's emergency planning, preparedness, response and recovery. Under the strategic direction of Gibraltar's Contingency Council, the Office of Civil Contingencies has continued to work hand in glove with the GCC's Executive Committee and the four Joint 1205 Operating Working Groups responsible for the land, air, maritime and cyber environments. Central to Civil Contingencies' work is the requirement to ensure that there is an appropriate level of preparedness to enable an effective multi-agency response to emergencies which may have a significant impact on Gibraltar's community. This could range from natural disasters, large-scale accidents or indeed terror attacks. Preparing together, training together and 1210 responding effectively together is what multi-agency interoperability is all about. Throughout this past year, the Office of Civil Contingencies has worked closely with the emergency services and other agencies and I will now touch upon a number of areas of their work.

A National Risk Register has been created and this is owned by the Gibraltar Contingency Council. The risk register sits at the heart of what drives our work and it is a robust, collectively

1215 understood assessment of the most significant risks in Gibraltar, based on how likely they are to happen and what the impacts may be. This information is used to inform a range of risk-management decisions, including the development of proportionate emergency plans and resilience capabilities. Risk-based emergency plans underpin an agreed, clearly understood and exercised set of arrangements to reduce, control or mitigate the effect of emergencies in both 1220 the response and recovery phases. Some of the plans that are currently being reviewed include the Major Incident Response Plan; Chemical, Biological, Radiological and Nuclear Response Framework; and the Liquid Natural Gas Plan.

We clearly recognise the importance of a high level of interoperability between all emergency responders and supporting organisations as a means to ensure an inclusive, 1225 collaborative approach to integrated emergency management. Work continues under the Joint Emergency Services Interoperability Programme (JESIP) to ensure that our emergency services develop their joint tactics, techniques and procedures. Plans are in place for the delivery of further multi-agency training under the JESIP banner for all our emergency services during the last quarter of this calendar year. This will also include training in response to a marauding 1230 terrorist firearms attack.

Significant investment has gone into Gibraltar's Geographic Information System. A bespoke incident management platform is being developed which will improve situational awareness across all agencies and at every level of command. Mapping tools will allow management zones to be clearly identified, as will the ability to mark the deployment and disposition of 1235 assets and define cordons, control points and access routes. All of this will assist commanders in gaining a better understanding of the incident they are faced with, and importantly it will provide all levels of command with a single version of the reality.

The emergency services and other agencies are required to remain competent to fulfil their roles in emergency preparedness, response and recovery. They must work together as a matter 1240 of routine, understanding each other's roles and responsibilities, underpinned by a systematic and sequential approach to individual and collective training, rehearsal, validation, learning and improvement. Similarly, there is a requirement to develop and assure resilience capabilities and arrangements through an exercise programme that is risk based, inclusive of all relevant organisations and recognises the cyclical process of learning and continuous development.
1245 Throughout last year a number of training events and exercises have been planned and delivered to ensure that organisations are best prepared to respond to any emergency or major incident.

Mr Speaker, turning briefly to international exchange of information, in addition to handling day-to-day exchange of information on request in tax matters with TIEA-partner countries and 1250 negotiating further international agreements, including Gibraltar's first double-taxation agreement, Gibraltar Finance has continued to lead on the implementation of the various international tax compliance-related initiatives. Gibraltar Finance continues to handle the day-to-day exchange of information in tax matters in accordance with the provisions of the bilateral agreements signed with numerous TIEA-partner countries over the years and to co-ordinate all 1255 matters relating to the automatic exchange of financial account information under the Common Reporting Standard in its various guises, including the relevant Directive and EU agreements with European third countries.

Mr Speaker, on social security, the total amount of benefits paid out by the Department in the financial year 2017-18 was £41,787,000. Despite Brexit, there are ongoing EU obligations 1260 which we have to meet. The Department is working closely towards the implementation of the Electronic Exchange of Social Security Information in Gibraltar pursuant to EU regulations. The primary aim is to set up an IT platform that will help social security institutions across 32 countries – the 28 EU member states as well as Iceland, Liechtenstein, Norway and Switzerland – to exchange information through structured electronic documents using a standard 1265 administration process for social security co-ordination activity at EU level. The project will deliver a central IT network to support the international exchanges, as well as a national application that can be utilised by national institutions to create, send, receive and manage electronic messages. The project is progressing at a fast pace, going partially live in August 2018.

1270 The Department is also actively involved in the process of vigorously testing the new DSS application program that will cater for the administration and payment of all 17 social security benefits. This will bring the Department into the 21st century and enable it to provide a more efficient and effective service to the public in order to meet the ever-growing demands. The system will streamline the information currently held in manual records and will incorporate a sophisticated analytical tool that will be instrumental in producing statistical data, therefore 1275 expediting our estimates and analysing of future expenditure in relation to any given benefit.

Finally on social security, in March of this year the Social Security (Open Long Term Benefits) (Amendment) Regulations were passed, giving effect to the Budget measure announced by the Chief Minister last year. Social Insurance contributions will accrue for the benefit of the contributor starting at age 15 as opposed to age 20, as had hitherto been the law. This applies 1280 to persons who are born on or after 2nd July 1997.

Mr Speaker, to end my contribution I turn to the Gibraltar University. The University, as we all know, is a creature of statute. All of its powers, responsibilities and obligations are derived from the University of Gibraltar Act. Although much work, discussions and research were carried out in preparation for the Act and the inauguration of the University, we were always conscious 1285 of the fact that there was no higher education institution in any place like Gibraltar which we could simply emulate or whose charter, legislative framework or bye-laws we could just adopt or apply. Certainly there was much to learn, and which we did learn, from other higher education institutions around the world, but we had the opportunity of choosing those parts of frameworks or provisions which we felt best fitted Gibraltar and adapting those to our needs as well as including new provisions specifically designed for this particular University.

We therefore created a University within a legislative framework which we felt suited the needs and aspirations of Gibraltar from a higher education perspective. It is a framework which expressly embraces the concepts of institutional autonomy and academic freedom whilst at the same time creating the structure to ensure that the Government's goals and aspirations when it established the University are met and that public funds are used in the manner for which they are provided.
1295

We knew from the outset that the University would have to develop, evolve and, if necessary, change over time having regard to the actual experience of an operating institution and to respond to any change in Gibraltar's needs and aspirations or even global trends in higher education. Now in its third year, there have been a number of recent developments at the University.
1300

There has been a change in management, with Prof. Catherine Bachleda appointed as acting Vice-Chancellor. She is also the University's Dean of Academic Quality and Professional Learning. Prior to joining the University, Prof. Bachleda was Assistant Vice-President for Academic Affairs at Al Akhawayn University – a not-for-profit, accredited, English-speaking, American-style university located in Morocco – where she was responsible for enhancing the academic quality and reputation of the university through faculty development, curriculum reviews, institutional accreditation and student academic and leadership development. Over the past 25 years Prof. Bachleda has worked in academia and/or industry in North Africa, the Middle East, the United Kingdom and Australia in a variety of management, quality and learning roles. I wish Prof. Bachleda well in her new role.
1310

Earlier this year the Government welcomed the appointments of Prof. Clive Finlayson MBE and Prof. Ian Peate OBE to the University's Board of Governors. Professors Finlayson and Peate are eminent academics who are internationally recognised as leaders in their fields. Prof. Clive Finlayson is the Director of the Gibraltar Museum and also has specific roles as Chief Scientist and Curator. Prof. Ian Peate is the Head of the School of Health Studies at the GHA and has worked in nurse education since 1989. The Government is extremely pleased with the appointment of Prof. Finlayson and Prof. Peate. They will enrich the Board of Governors and will no doubt make very valuable contributions to the University.

1320 Mr Speaker, another recent development is that the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority has been appointed as regulator of the University. This is an important step in the development of the University. In particular, the GRA was designated as the Gibraltar Authority for Standards in Higher Education and the Gibraltar Higher Education Commission under the University of Gibraltar Act 2015. Furthermore, the GRA was given powers to issue a 1325 Memorandum of Regulation to the University, to obtain information from the University and to issue enforcement notices if the GRA considers that the University is failing to comply with the 2015 Act or with requirements under the Memorandum of Regulation. Following its appointment, the GRA duly issued the Memorandum of Regulation to the University. The Memorandum of Regulation sets out how the quality and standards of education in the 1330 University shall be monitored; how compliance by the University with its functions, duties and obligations under the Act shall be monitored; how the use by the University of its funds, including any public funds provided to it, shall be monitored; how other aspects of the University's performance are monitored; how the University is expected to demonstrate effective governance and accountability; and how the University's autonomy and academic 1335 freedom are maintained.

Mr Speaker, in closing, I would like to highlight the significant contribution made to the University by Dr Darren Fa. Dr Fa is currently the Director of Research and Partnerships at the University. He was truly instrumental in the establishment of the University. Whilst he was still working at the Gibraltar Museum, Dr Fa was seconded to the Education Department to work 1340 with me on the University project. He accompanied me in travelling to numerous well-established universities around the world. Dr Fa worked tirelessly on the project and it was his recommendations that were accepted by the Government. He was the architect of the framework and structure which the Government adopted for the University. I wish to thank Dr Fa for his work, his dedication and his commitment to the University.

1345 Mr Speaker, I cannot end my contribution on the University without dealing with an issue raised by Mr Clinton during his address. He argued that Government contribution to the University was being tripled this year from £500,000 to £1.5 million. That is, in fact, incorrect.
Government contribution to the University is, in fact, being reduced this year. What Mr Clinton has done is to look at head 17 in the recurrent section of last year's approved estimates, which 1350 mentions a contribution of £500,000 to the University, and he has looked at head 43 in the current estimates, which mentions £1.5 million. He has then incorrectly jumped to the conclusion that the Government contribution has been tripled this year. What Mr Clinton has overlooked is that we have previously debated and passed in this Parliament a Supplementary Appropriation Bill whereby £10 million – as I recall, it was passed unanimously by the whole of 1355 this Parliament (Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear.) – was appropriated for the University. This was to fund the capital costs relating to the establishment of the University and the first years of operation. Last year, there was still £1.4 million left from the £10 million and this, together with the £500,000 appropriated under head 17, amounted to a Government contribution last year of £1.9 million, not £500,000. The £1.5 million in this year's estimates is therefore not a tripling of 1360 Government's contribution but a reduction of almost 25% of that contribution.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): How wrong he got it!

1365 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, he got it wrong (A Member: Terribly!) – and perhaps he might be forgiven and perhaps he is thinking now, 'Well, how was I to know that there was still £1.4 million left of the £10 million and that this was to be added to the £500,000?' – and Mr Clinton seems to be acknowledging that as if to say 'how was he to know?' Unfortunately for Mr Clinton, he cannot claim that, because the £1.4 million is, in fact, reflected in the book itself.
(A Member: Shame!)

1370 If Mr Clinton were to look at page 176 of this year's estimates, he would see under 'Improvement and Development Fund, Expenditure, Head 102 Projects' £1.4 million as a forecast outturn 2017-18, reflected in the estimate last year of 2017-18 as funding for the University of Gibraltar. So it is there, black upon white, in the book.

1375 Hon. Chief Minister: There it is: look at it.

Hon G H Licudi: It is also in last year's book, which is where Mr Clinton has found the figure of £500,000 as an estimate for 2017-18 under the Improvement and Development Fund of £1.4 million.

1380 In fact, if Mr Clinton were to add the actual figure – this is in last year's book – for 2015-16, the actual figure which is in this year's book of 2016-17 and the forecast outturn in this year's book of £1.5 million, he would find that this comes to exactly, to the pound, £10 million.

1385 So what Mr Clinton has done is use the wrong figure to reach the wrong conclusion, despite the right figures being in the very same book that he has been looking at. The difference from what he has argued and the reality of the true position is quite startling, from a suggestion by Mr Clinton of a 300% increase in Government contribution to the reality which is clear from the book itself and which is a reduction in contribution of almost 25%.

1390 Mr Speaker, this could be described as a schoolboy or rooky error by Mr Clinton, (Laughter) but it is not an error that we should expect from a qualified accountant, and particularly not from someone who prides himself in scrutinising and looking closely at books and figures, and especially by the person who is put forward by the Opposition as their expert in figures. (Hon. A J Isola: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

1395 Mr Speaker, the whole of Mr Clinton's speech and arguments were centred on an analysis of figures, and based on the extent of the error he has made on the University we must conclude that we cannot believe a single word he said (Laughter) and we must reject the rest of his analysis. (Interjections and banging on desks)

Mr Speaker, I would like to thank my staff and all those who work with me in the various Departments and organisations which form part of my ministerial responsibilities. I am truly grateful for their support and hard work during this last year.

1400 Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. –

1405 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am conscious that the House has been sitting now since 10 o'clock. I wonder whether the Speaker would agree –

Mr Speaker: I would prefer to carry on.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am thinking of you, more than anybody else.

1410 Mr Speaker: I am quite comfortable. I do not know how long the Hon. Mr Paul Balban is proposing to be, but we will go to a recess round about one.

Hon. Chief Minister: One or one thirty, I think.

1415 Mr Speaker: Okay, the Hon. Paul Balban.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will try to keep my contribution to the Budget debate this year as short and as to the point as reasonably possible while trying not to do any injustice to any of the ministerial portfolios that I am responsible for, or the many projects that have been completed or embarked upon during the past financial year.

1425 Financial year 2017-18 has been a very busy year for the Ministry of Infrastructure and Planning. The Traffic Plan has seen the need to work very closely with other Departments, including the Legislation Unit and IT and LD, who have been instrumental as many of the projects and schemes have required legislative changes and have depended on IT support.

Mr Speaker, if I want to grab people's attention, other than growing a beard there is only one thing I need mention and that is Zone 2. (Laughter) I have nothing more to say about my beard at the moment, but I will have plenty more to say about Zone 2 in a while.

1430 I will start my address by turning to my ministerial responsibilities for Technical Services. Technical Services Department continues to provide technical support to Government generally on a wide range of construction and engineering-related matters, as well as meeting their defined responsibilities of maintaining public infrastructure. These include coastal engineering works, cliff stabilisation schemes, works to retaining walls, together with the maintenance of 1435 highways and sewers.

The Department has also provided support on the implementation of several key projects related to the Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan (STTPP) launched in March last year. Most notably this year with regard to coastal engineering works has been the repair of the existing rock revetment at Camp Bay – damaged during the heavy storms experienced this 1440 year – in time for the bathing season. Cliff stabilisation works have continued this year with the construction of the second phase of a new high-capacity rock catch fence on the east side slopes.

Mr Speaker, no one can forget the large rock fall that occurred at the Aerial Farm site this March. Technical Services was responsible for overseeing the event from the moment that the 1445 rocks fell until the road was successfully reopened. The Department continues being involved, working closely with geotechnical engineers to assess the probability of future rock falls at this location and elsewhere. Above all else, safety is the most important consideration when it comes to rock falls, regardless of the inconvenience that the rock fall itself may cause residents or the population at large.

1450 Mr Speaker, the Infrastructure Section of the Sewers Department has continued to maintain the public sewerage network as part of Government's commitment in this area. The relining works to the existing foul sewer network along Devil's Tower Road were completed last year and this has provided additional flow capacity in the area. Works were also completed at various locations to provide additional flood alleviation measures in areas which were severely affected 1455 following periods of heavy rain.

Mr Speaker, this coming year Technical Services will continue its major desilting and cleansing works to the main sewer along Rosia Road and southwards towards Camp Bay. Major desilting and relining works are also expected to be carried out to the main sewer running under Line 1460 Wall Road from the area of the City Hall to NatWest House, together with general gully cleansing, manhole repairs and the general upkeep of the public storm and sewerage networks throughout.

I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank the Infrastructure Section and on-call officers of the Technical Services Department for their hard work and commitment during those 1465 times in the past year where Gibraltar has suffered from storms and very heavy rain. It is thanks to the hard work and dedication of this team – while most of us are at home, sheltered – that the impact of these storms is not greater on both our sewerage and road networks.

Mr Speaker, the Garage and Workshop continues to provide a service to maintain the fleet of Government vehicles, including the refuse collection vehicles.

1470 The Highways Section of Technical Services has continued to maintain and repair our roads and footpaths throughout the year. Roads especially have seen greater wear and tear this year as a direct result of ongoing development from both public and private sectors. Careful planning and thought is essential when considering what roads are resurfaced and when, because 1475 resurfacing is a very costly and disruptive exercise which is not long lasting near to areas of construction, due to heavy goods vehicles carrying heavy loads. There is a fine line between ensuring that our roads are kept in as good a condition as reasonably possible without investing huge amounts of taxpayers' money on projects that would be unfortunately short lived as a 1480 result of construction. Last year, major resurfacing works were undertaken at St Bernard's Road, part of Europa Road and along part of Rosia Road. This year, funding will be sought to see the continuation of our resurfacing programme in areas least affected by construction and road repairs will continue as necessary.

1485 Mr Speaker, pelican crossing lights and equipment continues to be replaced and maintained working jointly with the Gibraltar Electricity Authority. Countdown timers will continue to be provided at other crossings this coming year. Last year, new pedestrian crossings were introduced at Europa Road in the area of Shorthorn Estate, at Rosia Road by Bayview Terraces, by Harbour Views Estate on Westside Road, and most recently a speed ramp/raised zebra crossing was constructed at the entrance to Laguna Estate. These crossings are all aimed at improving our existing pedestrian routes and making access safer for all, as recommended in the STTPP.

1490 Road closures and diversions on the public highway are overseen by the Department to ensure co-ordination and the minimisation of disruption and are an important part of the work done by the Department, both for its own in-house works and for all other utility companies and contractors.

1495 I am pleased to announce that the third phase of the project to address Main Street's paving joints was completed last year and further maintenance works to the paving stones on Main Street will be completed this year. I would like to thank all the staff at Technical Services, the Garage and Workshop management and all technical grades within these departments for their hard work this past year.

1500 Mr Speaker, I will now talk about Zone 2. There is much to say about parking in general. This past 12 months has seen the STTPP pushing social boundaries, namely in the realm of parking but generally in the context of change. Parking is but one of those matters that evokes very strong and powerful feeling within the community, especially when the car has been an intrinsic part of us for so very long. Car ownership will arguably become one of the most challenging aspects to tackle in the future if we are to become an environmentally responsible society.

1505 Some parking initiatives have been very well received indeed, others have been less popular or even outrightly criticised by others, but nonetheless Zone 2 has been topical to say the very least, having featured colourfully within local conversation and in social media interactions.
Good, bad or indifferent, everyone has had something to say about Zone 2.

1510 However, it has been acknowledged by many, not least the Hon. Daniel Feetham when he recently stated here in a preamble to a supplementary question, that 'residential parking schemes are good but the reality is that this involves taking very difficult decisions'. The hon.
Member is absolutely right. A parking scheme does require many difficult decisions to be taken, they are really hard work and one size does not fit all. To prod the beehive from a distance with a very long stick and run away for fear of being stung, for fear of being unpopular with the electorate or even for fear of receiving the most lemons, is not what this is all about, in my 1515 opinion. (Laughter) This is all about leading and doing what one thinks is the right thing to do, and sometimes difficult and unpopular decisions need to be taken. This is what is expected from a Government. This is about trying to improve our environment and our health for us and for successive generations. It is about making life easier, even though it may not seem that way at first, while trying to achieve certain common aims and benefits for us all. I trust that the 1520 community at large may understand and perhaps even embrace the very difficult work that is being done as part of the STTPP.

Many other cities around the world are making considerable and sometimes very unpopular changes to the way they go about their daily lives, trying to achieve more sustainable living by encouraging alternative modes of travel and transport to achieve a reduction in pollution.

1525 Mr Speaker, it is already clear that the parking schemes are starting to show benefit. Residential parking schemes try to achieve better parking opportunities for residents while trying to accommodate visitors and commerce at appropriate times. Parking schemes also lead to the identification and the reduction of derelict and abandoned vehicles, which frees up even more parking space. In my mind, there are only two options: either do little, for the reasons I 1530 have already alluded to – that is, to avoid being unpopular; or try to tackle the matter in a way that is responsible, well structured, well timed and scientific in its approach.

For the avoidance of doubt, I need to stress yet again that all residential parking schemes are pilot and will therefore remain under scrutiny until the whole parking scheme is rolled out for all of Gibraltar. At this stage, when all of Gibraltar is zoned then the entire residential parking 1535 scheme will enter its final pilot phase as a whole. Because the effect of zoning cannot be determined at commencement, it is essential that each zone is allowed to settle, allowing time for stakeholders to provide feedback and designers to have the time to analyse its effects. Therefore, Zone 1 will not cease to be a pilot scheme simply because Zone 2 is implemented, nor will Zone 2 stop becoming pilot in nature simply because Zone 3 has been launched. This is the 1540 scientific and right way of doing things because no zone is an island, all zones are different and they react differently when there are more than one zone working in parallel.

Mr Speaker, it is not the intention of this Government, as surely it is not the intention of any other Government, to make life difficult for residents – on the contrary; but it is a well-known fact that we have a parking problem, or probably more accurately a vehicle ownership problem.
1545 Nevertheless, a brave scheme of this nature is seen by some as an ideal opportunity for political mischief and to try to score cheap but short-lived political points. Within just days of its launch, having hardly seen the light of day, the Opposition had already launched a scathing attack against Government, describing Zone 2 as ‘a sad indictment of the failure of the Government’s parking plan, and it should be scrapped’. Those were the words of the Hon. Trevor Hammond. I 1550 have not heard much more from the hon. Gentleman about Zone 2 lately – perhaps he is saving it all up for his Budget speech. In fact, I am not hearing so much about Zone 2 anymore. (Hon. A J Isola: Hear, hear.)

Mr Speaker, the STTPP I hope will be seen as a set of documents that will lay the foundations for the future regarding traffic, transport and planning. This is not my plan, nor is this the 1555 Government’s plan; this is our plan, Gibraltar’s plan, and it should be built upon by future Governments. The groundwork has now been done. Never before has a project of this nature or magnitude, scientific and solid in its grounding, been carried out in Gibraltar. The STTPP simply cannot be wrong. You may agree with certain parts of it, disagree with others, not all the concepts will be achievable, others may even be economically unviable, even socially 1560 unacceptable at this moment in time. Nevertheless, the STTPP should open our minds to the vast potential for change that exists for us. Add to it, contribute to it, be part of it.

Mr Speaker, let’s really think about this objectively. At the end of the day, the STTPP and indeed Zone 2 is not a political document or plan conceived in a smoky room by a political party 1565 some dark and rainy night for the mere sake of it. The STTPP, often lambasted politically by the GSD, was drafted by worldwide professionals in the field working closely and backed up by a working group comprising local technically qualified professional civil servants, the same civil servants who would have no doubt delivered this sort of plan to them had they been the party in Government – had they been brave enough. Yet one could almost sense the rubbing of hands in 1570 glee at the mere thought of the imminent political feeding frenzy about to be unleashed at the smell of fresh blood gushing out of what the Opposition thought was a lethal wound sustained to the Government’s parking plan, a plan which was in their opinion an ill-thought-out plan. At least that is what they hoped for.

Mr Speaker, just days after this political onslaught the picture had suddenly and dramatically changed in some of the areas of Zone 2 as residents started to receive their permits and began 1575 occupying their parking spaces. I have received many positive messages and letters from residents of Zone 2 who had been unable to use their vehicles for many years due to the massive parking problem within this area. This has now changed. Nevertheless, I am not stating that Zone 2 is perfect by any means. There still need to be more tweaks and we still need to take on board further feedback, but it is a very good basis from which to start.

1580 There are many different yet conflicting needs within Zone 2, and these still need to be considered thoroughly. Yet that one solitary reference to political bravery across the floor of this house that day gave me certain peace. It confirmed to me why the politically fraught issue of parking had never been tackled by the Members opposite in the 16 years that they were in Government. I knew then that I had to be on the right track in as far as at least putting such a politically brave environmental plan to the test. There is no Planet B, as Emanuel Macron recently put it.

1585 Only last week I announced the launch of Zone 3, which will cover a large part of the South District. Work on this scheme is ongoing and will go live this autumn. Zone 3 will therefore be my next challenge; following that, no doubt eventually Zones 4, 5 and 6. The biggest and totally avoidable teething problem arising from a zone scheme comes as a result of the delay in permit applications, despite the many press releases, official notices and advertisements issued, and even with an amnesty period the initial weeks of a parking zone are not fully indicative of how it will perform a few weeks after its launch and even later still. I hope that Zone 3 residents will be quick to apply for permits to avoid the issues that arose with Zones 1 and 2. I hope that Zone 3 is allowed time to settle down before it can be properly assessed and before it is politically shot down. I know for a fact that many residents are waiting in positive anticipation for Zone 3 to start.

1595 Mr Speaker, there has never been such a major overhaul of Gibraltar's parking arrangements and the challenge is certainly an exciting and interesting one. It gives us a very valuable insight into social parking behaviour and the differing needs of different sectors of the community. Parking for commercial vehicles is now being considered as parking schemes start to displace these vehicles from within highly populated residential areas. There are already plans in place to address these issues.

1600 I wish to thank our in-house technical team, especially our transport planner, Technical Services and all the civil servants involved in its planning and mapping out on the ground who have worked very hard indeed to make this very difficult project a reality. Residential parking schemes are no mean feat. From every single parking space that needs to be counted, drawn up, each single street line painted and every single street sign placed, from the legislation that needs to be drafted to the zone booklets that need to be written, a vast amount of work goes into each zone. Thank you.

1610 Mr Speaker, pay and display is seen as a way of allowing non-residents and visitors to park for short periods of time throughout Gibraltar and regardless of zoning. To this end, a further pay and display parking was recently introduced along Bayside Road, allowing short-term parking of those frequenting the marinas and sports facilities. Another pay and display area will shortly be created along the western end of Waterport Road below Waterport Terraces, which is currently under construction and will see parking provision double for residents, visitors and surrounding businesses and includes an extra motorbike parking area. This year, 10 new pay and display machines have been installed providing card payment technology. These are linked via a network to head office, allowing for quick response times when machines develop a fault. Older pay and display machines that have now been operational for over six years will slowly be phased out, making way for these smarter systems.

1620 Mr Speaker, as part of the STTPP, Government introduced a new bicycle-sharing scheme known as Redibikes in March last year. Redibikes is currently under review to see how it may be improved further so that we may try to encourage greater use. Adjustments are being made to the pricing structure, allowing for a longer rental period and therefore encouraging greater family and leisure use. Less used bike stations will be relocated to new sites near the beaches and close to hotels to help increase seasonal and visitor usage.

As an avid cyclist, I am extremely keen to see others take up cycling as a means of transport. The bicycle is an ideal mode of personal transport, cheap to run, easy to park and it helps to contribute to a healthy lifestyle and a clean environment. A major review of our existing road network is currently underway in an attempt to provide both segregated and shared use of our road network for this purpose. The introduction of traditional bicycle lanes throughout all areas of Gibraltar, as seen in many other cities, will prove difficult, perhaps even impossible, due to the lack of space available to segregate vehicles from cyclists. However, all effort will be made to provide cycle lanes where reasonably possible in order to encourage this healthier alternative to other traditional forms of transport and improve cycling safety. We will shortly be introducing a dedicated cycle route through Main Street and Irish Town on a trial basis operating outside of the busy commercial shopping hours. This will be a first step in trying to provide a safe, segregated cycle lane that will hopefully increase user confidence, especially in the more vulnerable groups like families and young children. There should be no real reason why Gibraltar may not be able to adopt cycling as a means of transport, especially away from the hills to the south. Extra bicycle parking facilities will also be provided in the next financial year to supplement those already provided this past year. Cycling facilities will also be included as part of the new comprehensive schools project. My colleague the Hon. John Cortes is as keen as I am to see cycling become a means of sustainable transport in Gibraltar and indeed within our youth.

Finally on this subject, I was recently very pleased to be able to congratulate a small business that introduced a number of bicycles into their home food-delivery service fleet. This small business has taken on board the very essence of the STTPP and is leading by example. I hope that other businesses may start to consider using bicycles or indeed greener fuels such as electric power in the future for their commercial needs.

Mr Speaker, the introduction of speed cameras in April 2017 provided, for the first time, the ability to help control speed in order to make our roads safer. The initial pilot scheme saw vast improvements in speed reduction, but it has since been necessary to tackle the issue of speeding motorbikes in certain locations. Improvements have now been carried out to allow rear-facing images to be taken of offending vehicles whilst still providing clear images of offending drivers. Rear-facing slave cameras have now been introduced at the original sites at Devil's Tower Road, Europa Advance Road and Rosia Road. Additionally, two completely new sites have been commissioned along Waterport Road and Queensway, well known as speeding hotspots, only last week.

The benefits of speed reduction are well known and include improved road user and pedestrian safety together with a reduction in noise pollution and emissions. It is unfortunate that investment in expensive equipment is necessary to ensure the safety of road users as a result of a small number of inconsiderate, unsafe and disrespectful road users. Nevertheless, as I have said in the past, this Government is fully committed to eradicating speeding on our roads.

At this point I must thank all staff who deal with the issuing of permits, and the management of our Government parking facilities at Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd. I would also like to acknowledge all those involved in policing the many parking areas throughout Gibraltar, and those responsible for overseeing the back office for the speed camera project, including Gibraltar Parking Management Services Ltd and the RGP. Policing is a vital part of any residential parking scheme.

Mr Speaker, the Ministry is also well on track to deliver on other STTPP related projects which will be announced as they materialise.

I will now turn my attention to public transport. The Government continues to give the bus service significant importance in light of the need to provide a robust and reliable means of sustainable mass transit. The Man buses continue to play a key role in providing the backbone to Gibraltar's public transport infrastructure.

The real-time bus tracker service has been an enormous success and is now operational on all bus routes.

A new night bus service, the N1, was introduced in April this year for the Upper Town and it now joins the N8. Night buses now access all areas of Gibraltar on Friday and Saturday nights 1680 and also cover other nights when there are special events. The night bus service complements the campaign against drinking and driving.

The Upper Town buses continue providing an excellent much sought after service to passengers and residents of Mount Alvernia alike, especially as a result of the wheelchair-carrying capabilities.

1685 Last August saw the introduction of a number of request bus stops throughout Gibraltar. This change in policy now means that drivers no longer need to stop at each and every bus stop on route when there is clearly no passenger waiting to board or any passenger wishing to alight, therefore improving the frequency and timing of the service.

1690 Mr Speaker, our transport inspectors ensure that all users and undertakings fully abide and conform to all the legal requirements under the Transport Act and allow the public transport offering to improve.

1695 Government continues to work with the GTA in order to identify strategies to better the taxi service throughout Gibraltar. The modified City Service roster has shown signs of an improved City Service this year to the extent that complaints are slightly down from previous years. I wish to congratulate the GTA Committee for their recent acquisition of two accessible private hire vehicles which can accommodate wheelchair users. I applaud the GTA Committee, who try to continue to improve the service provided by its members.

1700 I wish to thank management and all the staff down at the Gibraltar Bus Company, especially those behind the steering wheel who work many hours, day and night, to provide an exceptional and free bus service to locals in Gibraltar. I would also like to thank our team of transport inspectors who oversee and police all matters relating to transport in Gibraltar.

1705 Mr Speaker, the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Department have now agreed the introduction of the tachograph system with the UK Driver and Vehicle Standards Agency (DVSA). The necessary administrative procedures have now been agreed by way of a memorandum of understanding and service level agreement with the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Authority in the UK, the DVLA, who shall source tachograph cards for local drivers, operators and our local enforcement bodies.

1710 Mr Speaker, after transposing EC Directive 2009/40/EC, changes for motor vehicles undergoing their periodic roadworthiness tests, or MOTs, became effective as of 20th May 2018. These new rules and standards implemented by the European Commission are set out as an objective by the European Union and aim to achieve zero fatalities throughout our road transport network by the year 2050. Among other things, the new test regime will now categorise faults as either minor, major or dangerous. Motor vehicles found to have minor defects that have no significant effect on the safety of the vehicle or impact on the environment may be issued a roadworthiness certificate, but these will be reflected on the certificate with relevant advisory notes in respect of each of these minor faults. However, motor vehicles that have major or dangerous defects will automatically fail the test and shall not obtain a roadworthiness certificate. Testing will be more stringent with regard to the limit on smoke emissions, particularly in diesel-propelled vehicles known to cause more toxic emissions. Diesel particulate filters will now also be rigorously checked and vehicles found lacking these components during examination will be failed.

1715 Mr Speaker, in anticipation of what could become an electric revolution in the future, electric charging points were recently commissioned within the public parking area at Mid-Town car park. The first on-street electrical car charging point is expected to become a reality later on this year and is consistent with both the STTPP and the Department of the Environment's Thinking Green Environment Awareness campaign. These charging stations will complement the existing private sector initiatives around Gibraltar, which must be congratulated for embracing electrical car charging technology and who are also leading by example.

1720 Mr Speaker, in anticipation of what could become an electric revolution in the future, electric charging points were recently commissioned within the public parking area at Mid-Town car park. The first on-street electrical car charging point is expected to become a reality later on this year and is consistent with both the STTPP and the Department of the Environment's Thinking Green Environment Awareness campaign. These charging stations will complement the existing private sector initiatives around Gibraltar, which must be congratulated for embracing electrical car charging technology and who are also leading by example.

1725 Yesterday, the Chief Minister also announced Budget measures in support of those who install mechanisms for the charging of electric vehicles in their home or in a parking space or garage owned by them, and attractive further cashback incentives for electric cars and electric-assisted bicycles without a throttle where the engine cuts off at speeds of 25km per hour.

1735 Mr Speaker, the motorcycle Compulsory Basic Training Course (CBT) continues to be a tremendous success with around 400 new riders having passed over the last year. This initiative has been a massive step forward in promoting safety on our roads.

1740 Data sharing with the European Register of Road Transport Undertakings, known as ERRU, via the Driver and Vehicle Services Agency (DVSA) has allowed a better exchange of information between member states. The European Car and Driving Licence Information System, known as EUCARIS, is an example of an information exchange service used by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Department. The service provides EU member states with the facility to share and obtain car registration and driving licence information. Furthermore, the Department has now implemented the Cross-Border Enforcement Directive (CBE). This system provides cross-border access to vehicle registration information so that enforcement bodies may identify non-resident offenders. The Directive aims to facilitate the cross-border exchange of information on road-

1745 safety related traffic offences with all EU member states, thereby facilitating enforcement.

I wish to thank all the staff within the Department down at the MOT Centre, the vital counter and back office staff, vehicle testers, vehicle examiners and senior management, and especially the Chief Examiner, for their very hard work.

1750 Finally, I now turn my attention to my responsibilities for town planning and building control. The Department continues to deal with large numbers of applications seeking planning permission and building control approval. In 2017 there were a total of 612 applications. Some of these were large, complex applications involving assessment of environmental impacts through the EIA process, involving extensive discussions with applicants to try and achieve high standards of design and construction. Building Control issued approximately 250 certificates of fitness or completion during the period, which is slightly up on last year. In 2017, 56 planning, 1755 building and demolition applications were received by Government and MoD seeking advice and guidance, which are then taken into account by the Government or MoD in finalising their plans.

1760 In 2017, 14 DPC meetings were held in public. I am pleased to say that many people have participated in the democratic process to address the Commission at these meetings either in support of or in objection to specific applications. Additionally, the DPC's subcommittee also meets regularly to determine minor applications, which greatly helps to speed up the decision-making process for more minor applications. In 2017, there were 35 such meetings of the subcommittee. Agendas and minutes of DPC meetings continue to be made available online, together with application forms and planning guidance, ensuring that the planning process remains open and transparent and facilitating ease of access to relevant planning information and documentation.

1770 The e-planning service continues to operate successfully, allowing easy access to application details for the public and providing a platform through which applicants can submit their applications online. Town Planning staff have continued to develop the e-planning system throughout 2017. One of the more significant improvements that has been developed this year is the integration of the Department's geographical information system into the e-planning system, allowing easier staff access to geographical information when assessing applications. Other development work undertaken this year has included the introduction of a tool to allow staff to undertake high-level shadow analysis of proposed buildings, assisting staff when considering the potential impacts of new development proposals.

1780 Mr Speaker, I was pleased to recently announce part R of the Building Regulations in conjunction with my colleague the Hon. Samantha Sacramento. Building Control staff have been working very hard to ensure that this vital piece of legislation would become a reality for the well-being of all sectors of society regardless of their needs. Part R provides the necessary framework to provide and improve access and use of buildings by not just physically disabled people but also the elderly and those with hearing and visual impairments.

1785 Building Control staff are currently reviewing the Building Rules made under the Public Health Act with a view to updating all 11 remaining parts, bringing them in line with the UK and European standards, ensuring that standards are maintained and best practices achieved. This will ensure the health and safety of both the user and occupiers of the built environment.

The Tax Relief on Facade Improvements Scheme continues to encourage property owners to improve the appearance of their buildings. There were 10 applications under this scheme in 2017.

1790 My Department continues to work closely with my colleague the Hon. John Cortes, who leads on urban renewal. Our focus continues to be on identifying specific buildings in need of refurbishment and encouraging owners to undertake improvement works in order to maximise the use of these properties, thereby bringing new life back into these urban areas. The Department has also been closely involved with other Government Departments and agencies in the implementation of the street art initiative, which aims to encourage urban regeneration by 1795 the use of street art in selected locations.

Mr Speaker, finally, I would like to thank all the team at Town Planning and Building Control. I would also like to thank all my personal ministerial staff, whom I share most of my working day with, for all their help, support and very hard work during the past year and always. I also wish to thank all parliamentary staff for their hard work and assistance given to me throughout the 1800 year.

Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I am pleased to address this House for my third Budget 5 speech. Let me begin with the environment and the subject of air quality. Sadly, I raised this as a matter of serious public concern during the last Budget and the one before that, and it has been the subject of a motion taken during the course of this year, and yet there has been no real improvement – in fact, there may even have been a deterioration in our air quality due to factors which I shall come to shortly.

10 During the debate held in this House this March it was rather depressing to hear the Minister stand up and tell this House, as he and his colleagues always do, what a great job is being done.
We were told, for instance, how the finishing touches were now being put on the Environment Plan, which would safeguard the environment for future generations. We are over six years into this administration. For the Minister to stand up in this House in March of this year and say that 15 they are only now putting the finishing touches on a plan – which will no doubt be published
'shortly', because of course this Government will never actually give itself a deadline which would then lead to some sort of accountability, and of course no Minister wishes to be accountable for anything that they say in this House – it is laughable. Saying that you are doing great things for the environment is not the same as doing great things for the environment.

20 The Minister, in that same speech, told us that "if we focus on the science steady improvements have been made in air quality." Of course none of us would doubt the science.
The trouble is few of us trust the data gathering on which the science is based, particularly when we have independent scientists, subject matter experts and indeed organisations telling us that our air quality is very poor and has been measured as such. Add that to the anecdotal data from 25 people and something is just not right.

The Minister cites the new power station as something that will improve air quality, and it will when it becomes available. Of course we do not know when exactly that will be because the Government will not answer such questions, although at least testing has begun.

30 In almost the same breath the Minister says that the previous administration is to blame for not acting sooner with respect to a new power station, but it is this administration which scrapped the plans which were ready to go and have therefore created a huge delay in the power station programme. And of course the new station, when it comes on line, will not be fitted with electrostatic precipitators, as should be the case if you wish to use the best possible technology for cleaning emissions, as committed to by the Minister.

35 We will therefore have a power station in the heart of our urban environment – indeed the Government is moving all of our secondary education closer to it – which does not have the best possible technology to clean emissions and therefore may not reliably provide the cleaner air that we so much desire. Water under the bridge, I suppose; but we might at least, having chosen an urban environment for our power generation, make sure that in all circumstances it had the best possible technology for dealing with emissions – in all circumstances.

On the subject of best possible technology and air quality, it is necessary to turn to the situation at Gibdock. At present, many of the vessels that come in for repairs or maintenance have to run their engines in order to have power; there is no shore-supplied power available. Of course the immediate impact of this is that those who live in the area have to suffer the pollution emitted from those engines. It is known that marine pollution is extremely damaging to the environment and to public health, so this practice is absolutely unacceptable.

Some have argued that people who chose to live in the area of the dockyard would or should have been aware of this issue prior to moving in. This is nonsense, of course. Our community grows and changes and it is necessary for industry to move with the times, as it must do all over the world. Were it not so, we would be living in Dickensian conditions of smog with no appreciation of the damage being done to our health.

The Government has a tremendous opportunity now, with the renegotiation of the lease for the dockyard, to impose the requirement for shore-supplied power to vessels under repair. From the questions I have asked in this House – and I am happy for the Minister to clarify this point – the requirement for shore-supplied power has been decoupled from the negotiations over the lease and is being conducted separately. If Government was serious about imposing this requirement, I am at a loss as to why it would not be included in the lease negotiations, where Government may be able to apply maximum leverage for this. It makes no sense. But make no mistake, if Government fails to impose this requirement on Gibdock at a time when it has the greatest opportunity to do so, it will have done this community a grave disservice.

While on the subject of the dockyard I shall digress for a moment to talk about noise. I know that many residents of the area live with the constant stress of noise due to works at Gibdock taking place into the early hours. I know that complaints are made to the Environment Agency and that these are often acted on, but inevitably the problem returns. Clearly there is no sanction in place to discourage this unsociable behaviour and I would ask that Government do more to discourage, if not actually bring to a stop, this activity.

Noise pollution is not, of course, a problem limited to the area around the dockyard. It has to be understood that living in an urban environment will inevitably be noisier than being out in the countryside, but I sometimes wonder if Government does not go out of its way to compound the problem. With so much construction, walking round many parts of our community in the daytime is uncomfortable. Whether it is lorries delivering to these sites, the noise of piling, of jack hammers, of angle grinders or any of the other necessary but noisy work that goes on in these sites, it makes any stroll a most unpleasant experience. I would remind Government that encouraging people to walk more is one of their professed objectives. It is one of the reasons they are trying to make it impossible for people to park anywhere. Well, walking around many parts of Gibraltar right now is to have to put up with unacceptable levels of noise.

Government itself is guilty of contributing to the noise in a most unsociable way. I have received many complaints from residents in the Waterport area about the piling that has been going on at the site of the mega school: 12 hours a day of constant piling. People are at their wits' end, but does Government care? No. They have a deadline and that is all that matters.

The Chamber of Commerce raised concerns about noise levels this year in their annual report and they were right to do so. It is not just industry and construction either that cause problems. We seem content to allow certain motorbikes with incredibly loud exhausts – whether they are factory fitted or modified I do not know – to tear about our streets at all hours with impunity. In the still of the night, why should everyone's peace and rest be disrupted by one person? Why is nothing ever done to address this?

Dealing with noise pollution is important. It is another of those environmental factors that can lead to stress, and stress of course is known to cause other ailments. It is therefore a matter of public health and must be treated with importance and not ignored, or even exacerbated by Government-sponsored activity.

Returning to air quality, I have already expressed concern about the quality of data we gather through our monitoring stations, how that data is at odds with both people's experiences and independent expert opinion. From where we gather that data is also important. We have no monitoring of air quality at the north end of town, where arguably air pollution is at its worst. The Minister has committed to this in the past and of course in his speech he did announce that he will be committing to it now, and hopefully we will see that realised very shortly. It is more important than ever, considering the move of the comprehensive schools and the opening of the new power station. I ask whether he will commit to the commissioning of this monitoring station prior to the opening of the power station and the new school so we can properly understand what impact the latter has in the area. If the Minister is committed to a northern monitoring station as he says, I do not know why it has taken him over six years to deliver it. However, I reiterate if it can be delivered before the opening of the school and the power station, we will at least have an opportunity to assess what difference the new power station has on the air quality in that area.

I am actually surprised that extensive air monitoring has not already taken place in the area of Waterport, because it is one of our most congested locations. I would have thought that prior to making the decision to place a comprehensive mega school there, attended by every 11-to-18-year-old in Gibraltar, extensive air quality testing would have been conducted to ensure that we were not placing vulnerable children in a heavily polluted environment for a large part of the day. This area is close to the cruise liner berths, the power station, the bus terminal, has many of the heavy vehicles associated with construction passing nearby as it is the only route that can take their weight, and is susceptible to traffic jams at all hours of the day due the number of pedestrian crossings and the volumes of people emanating from the cruise ships. I would have assumed extensive air quality testing had taken place in this area prior to the mega school project proceeding. Can the Minister assure us that this is the case and can he commit to publishing the results of those tests, if indeed they have been carried out? This is actually about the health of the children in this community. I think it is a very important matter.

I would also advocate acquiring a mobile air monitoring station which can be moved to potential hot spots to understand the impact of events such as large-scale construction on the immediate environment. Such would also allow us to monitor areas like the East Side mountain of rubble, which I note is reaching extraordinary heights, and its impact in terms of particulates on Catalan Bay and the adjacent beaches.

Mr Speaker, vehicles still constitute a major, if not the major, contributor to poor air quality. But let me be clear: it is not just about the number of vehicles on our roads but also, and probably more importantly, the type of vehicles on our roads. The best vehicles, as far as air pollution is concerned, at least within their immediate environment, are electric vehicles. Unfortunately, despite some incentivisation, the idea of owning such a vehicle has not yet caught on. I suppose if everyone could afford a £100,000 Tesla maybe it would be different, but most cannot. We will see how the latest incentives impact on the use of electric vehicles. I appreciate that cost and access to recharging points will be a challenge to many, but there are many people who might make the switch and should be encouraged in that direction. In terms of Rock runners – that second vehicle that many families have for their daily trips rather than the weekly excursion to Spain – they are ideal, as neither speed nor range should be a factor locally. We must find ways to encourage greater use of vehicles ideally suited to our roads, and which of course are also virtually silent. I would also call on businesses, where they have vehicles, to examine and take seriously their own social and environmental responsibilities and seek, where possible, to make greater use of electric vehicles. I would hope such a call would receive the backing of the Chamber of Commerce.

At the other end of the air pollution spectrum are the many lorries, old buses and old diesel-engine vehicles on our roads. Many of the lorries are unfortunately associated with the construction industry, and with so much construction going on it is hard to see how we can better control them: perhaps better planning so that the amount of construction taking place at any given time in our small community is better controlled. I appreciate that Government need the income, but there are wider considerations than financial which should, indeed must, be brought into the equation, and high on the list of these must be air quality and public health.

I have said it before and I will say it again: the sale of the old and more heavily polluting buses to a private company so that those buses continue on our streets was a mistake. The Government cannot even cite financial gain, as they were sold for peanuts. This sale should never have happened and these buses should not be on our roads polluting our air today.

150

Then of course there is the privately owned diesel. It is true that all older cars are more polluting than the newest vehicles. Older diesels are particularly bad and I do not understand why Government does not do more to encourage people away from these. It was heartening to hear in this House that testing of vehicle emissions is now taking place during MOT testing. This is essential and it was remiss of Government to allow the practice to become occasional or hit and miss due to malfunctioning equipment. This is the vital test that must be conducted without exception and I hope this will be the case going forward. But in terms of encouraging people towards cleaner vehicles, are the incentives sufficient? Will the new raft of measures work? Time will tell. The announcement of the future elimination of the internal combustion engine is ambitious and laudable, but what of now? Even with the increased taxation, why is diesel still so much cheaper at the petrol pumps than petrol? Surely it would discourage the ownership of diesel vehicles if they were more expensive to run. I would ask Government to consider this and justify its policy on environmental rather than commercial grounds.

Now I must stray into the area of parking, as management of parking has an impact on air quality. It is all well and good to simply say people should walk, cycle or take the bus, and indeed people should be encouraged to explore the possibilities of alternate means of transport. It would help if the walking or cycling experience were more pleasant – and I recognise the paradox that fewer cars might mean more pleasant cycling or walking, but cleaner, quieter streets in better condition might also encourage people to walk or cycle. More on this later, of course.

Oftentimes people need to use their cars. That is the reality and Government recognises this, as if they did not they would not keep building car parks, but they so often give with one hand and take away with the other, making parking easier for some yet more difficult for others, with the net effect that people often find themselves driving in endless circles seeking somewhere to park and all the while polluting the air unnecessarily when, if parking were easier, all that pollution would not happen.

175

The removal of public parking in the Town area, the introduction of zonal parking and the sale of spaces in public car parks have all contributed to making the life of those who do not live in town but need to access town – which is nearly everyone who does not live in town – almost impossible. Government seems to have given up on the idea of a park-and-ride scheme for tourists coming across the Frontier, despite the car parks already being built. Reducing the number of tourist vehicles coming into town will reduce the competition for parking, reduce the number of vehicles on our roads and improve air quality. A park-and-ride scheme should have been a key objective to any strategic transport plan, yet Government have dismissed the idea completely.

And there is an important point here with respect to the 2030 vehicle targets set by Government. While residents strive to change vehicles in the future, will foreign-registered vehicles be at liberty to roam our streets and pollute our air? Will heavily polluting lorries, foreign or local, not be sanctioned in any way? Will public service vehicles, buses, still be diesel? None of this was made clear in the strategy.

Mr Speaker, we now have Zone 3 parking for the South District, in which there appears to be absolutely nowhere for people wishing to visit friends and relatives within this zone to park. The zones are not working: please go back to the drawing board.

Another idea dismissed by Government was the possibility of providing extra underground parking at Grand Parade. The idea seems to be anathema to Government, even though it could be built with private money. Instead, Government would prefer another ugly overground car park alongside and obscuring views of the Botanic Gardens. The Chief Minister has said it is not financially viable to go underground. It has been demonstrated to me that it is. It therefore becomes a question of aesthetics. I cannot imagine anyone in Gibraltar preferring the overground option unless they somehow have a vested interest in that option. Please reconsider and please go underground.

I do not wish to dwell overly long on the subject of parking; there has been much discussion in recent months. I would like to point one thing out, however: a parked car is not polluting; a car driving around looking for parking is. Make parking easier and there will be less air pollution.

Mr Speaker, I shall return to transport shortly, but to finish the theme of air quality, of course another way of improving this is to make better use of renewable energy sources, and Government is right to explore these opportunities. While I do not believe that the East Side wave generator has proven to be much of a success, the concept was worthy of exploration and it is pleasing to see the solar panels recently put up on the roofs at New Harbours, hopefully a trend that will increase as we go forward. I look forward to asking questions in the future about energy production from these sources and hopefully the other facilities that were announced today. We are a long way from the target of 20% of our energy production from renewables by 2020, if indeed that target is achievable at all in a community with the geographic limitations that ours has, but we are finally making a start and that is to be commended.

Questions remain over the means by which solar panel contracts are awarded. It is concerning that such seemingly lucrative contracts are being awarded without a tender process to high-profile figures in the GSLP. This is certainly worthy of greater scrutiny, as there are concerns with respect to both best value for money and cronyism. (Interjection) It is a shame that a project of environmental value such as this should have been tarnished through lack of proper commercial process. If there is one thing that the people of Gibraltar are absolutely sick of, it is the blatant cronyism and favouritism when it comes to the handing out of lucrative contracts. (Interjection)

Moving to the environment and planning, and in particular the planning of Government projects – because I do believe that the oversight of private developments is well managed from an environmental perspective – is it not time then that we moved away from the anachronistic position whereby Government projects are not subject to planning permission?

The last year has seen a number of Government projects rushed into commencement and I fear that the environmental filters that the Minister is so proud of have become clogged. For the sports complex at Europa there have been a number of events to raise some concerns. The way the Europa foreshore, part of our Nature Reserve, has been misused and continues to be misused in terms of its use as a laydown area for building materials is very unfortunate. Of course the area will recover, but this does not mean that the misuse of part of the nature reserve is acceptable. The dumping of rocks extracted from Lathbury at Coaling Island without any real appreciation of the environmental impact was unfortunate too. I asked the Minister for the environmental report that had been prepared for this latter occurrence at the time: none was forthcoming, unfortunately.

Rather more serious is the complete lack of any environmental impact assessment or environmental management plan associated with the mega school at Waterport and the school at Laguna. It beggars belief that these projects – and in particular the former, which is on a huge scale, though both are in residential areas – should proceed without the necessary environmental groundwork because the Government is in a hurry. It is precisely because of developments such as these that Government projects should be subject to the full planning process, so that political expediency does not outweigh environmental imperative. That the Minister for the Environment should also be responsible for the delivery of these projects exposes a conflict of interest in which the environment has paid the price: totally unacceptable.

245 Mr Speaker, another important project on which we have been told there has been progress this year is the urban waste water treatment plant. I am disappointed to see that there is only a nominal cost entry in the Estimates Book. I had hoped that the project would by now have been further along and that the days of pumping raw sewage into the sea would be coming to an end in the very near future. I hope that construction will begin soon on this project, an important 250 project for our community and one that has been a long time in coming. I do welcome that there has been some progress and I do hope that the Minister will keep us informed of further progress. I still do not understand why we do not have any numbers in the Estimates Book for it, but perhaps the funding of that project is coming from elsewhere.

Keeping to the theme of the environment and now venturing into those areas which are not 255 only the responsibility of the Ministry of the Environment, I come to the issue of cleanliness and tidiness in our community and its maintenance. I am fully aligned with the view that each of us has a responsibility with respect to keeping Gibraltar tidy. We must clean up after ourselves, we must clean up after our pets, we must dispose of our rubbish and preferably recycle what is recyclable. This is our civic duty and our responsibility as individuals, businesses or organisations, 260 and I fully support people being fined for littering and for not picking up after their pets. This does not, however, negate Government's responsibility to set the example and show the leadership which will encourage others to change their behaviours and do better.

Last year the Minister promised us that for 2018 Gibraltar would sparkle. I am afraid that that 265 promise has not materialised. A major criticism from both residents and visitors is that Gibraltar is dirty. When this is the case in our major thoroughfares, Main Street and Irish Town, what hope is there for the more outlying areas? The state of many of our streets, as was the case last year, is embarrassing. I am not going to dwell on this point, as it has been much discussed during the last 12 months; I will simply say that Government must do better for the sake of both residents and visitors.

270 The dilapidation and in many cases abandonment of many of our buildings is another matter.
The Government recently tried to pin this issue on private landlords. There may be a case for private landlords doing better, but again the example must be set by Government. Look at this building, sitting prominently in the centre of town and yet it looks shabby: peeling paint, dirt – it sets no example for others and creates a sense of more general disrepair. With the hundreds of 275 millions that Government are spending, surely a few quid could be found to give this building a lick of paint. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

I was recently exploring areas of the Upper Town. While not on the normal tourist trail, it still receives visitors with some frequency. I took the escalator, which was working – something I was told by residents of the area who stopped to chat was a rarity and I was very lucky. I stopped to 280 look at the green roof of the Engineer Lane car park, which appeared abandoned and certainly did nothing to enhance the area. It just seemed to be a feeding ground for pigeons, which was a pity because the idea is a good one but clearly needs proper looking after, something which is not happening. Time and again I came across beautifully refurbished buildings alongside brickedup and abandoned structures, and this seems to be the theme for large parts of the Upper 285 Town. Where there is private ownership, buildings have been renovated to high standards.
Those properties still under Government ownership lie empty and decayed. It is a bit rich in these circumstances for the Government to have tried to blame private landlords for the dilapidation of many buildings when they themselves set such a poor example. But of course where this Government is concerned, there is always someone else to blame. The concept of 290 accepting responsibility is completely alien.

This dilapidation of public property extends beyond our buildings to our streets, and here Government cannot blame anyone else but themselves for their condition, unless of course it is everyone else's fault for having the temerity to drive on our roads and walk on our pavements.
The state of nearly all of our streets has gone beyond a joke. They are, in many cases, an 295 accident waiting to happen: potholes, cracks, crumbling surfaces, uneven paving stones, lifted drains and manholes, poorly marked crossings and road markings, confusing signs. There is no end to the problems. All the while the Minister contemplates his Strategic Transport Plan and focuses attention on his pilot schemes, such as zone parking, which are bringing little benefit to the community as a whole and causing great angst to many. And of course the convenient labelling of everything as a 'pilot scheme' is once again designed to avoid having to take responsibility for the failures in a plan which took a whole term of office to put together. Anyway, while the Minister contemplates his plan, he has forgotten the basic needs of road users: reasonably smooth surfaces and decent signs and markings. This Government continually tells us that it wants more people to walk or cycle: well, make these activities less hazardous and perhaps people might.

Road safety is of serious concern, there have been two tragic incidents involving motorcycles in the past few months. I am sure that there will be strenuous efforts to establish causes in these events and I am sure should any factors be identified which contributed to these events they will be rectified, if they have not already. While I am not for one minute suggesting that the road conditions in any way contributed to these deaths, it does highlight the vulnerability of bike riders and the importance of eliminating factors which might lead to accidents. Proper investment in this area is crucial: it might save lives. Perhaps Government would consider the establishment of a road safety committee to review and recommend where improvements might be made.

Mr Speaker, I would now like to turn to tourism, a subject I have already touched upon when talking about the dirt and dilapidation because of the impression that these leave with visitors – impressions that they of course go away with and relate to family and friends, or even communicate more broadly on social media platforms. Tourism depends on having a good product and in that respect we are blessed with many, many natural attractions, not necessarily enhanced by recent additions. Those attractions need to be nurtured and they need to be marketed.

Looking at the figures over the past few years for tourist numbers and tourist expenditure, it really is alarming how since this administration entered office both plummeted in their first two years and neither has recovered to the highs that were seen in 2011; they have not even come close. If tourism is an important pillar of our economy, whatever this Government has done, it has been bad for tourism. They will no doubt quote global economic slowdown and other factors outside of Gibraltar, but the fact is the worst recent global economic crisis happened in 2008 and our tourism grew right through until 2011. The slump coincided with the arrival of the GSLP administration. (Interjection)

The Chief Minister speaks of growth in tourism. He speaks of records. It is a relief that there has been growth this year, but let's put this in context. In 2011 tourist expenditure was a shade under £280 million. For 2017 we reached a figure of £252 million, still £28 million shy of that high watermark set by the previous GSD administration. This is not the full story, however, as when the 2017 figure is adjusted for inflation, in 2011 terms it amounts to £225 million, a full £55 million short of the tourist expenditure figure for 2011. Fifty five million pounds. In fact, if this Government had only been able to maintain the 2011 figure, showing no growth whatsoever, over the last six years our economy would have benefitted to the tune of £396 million. That is the true story of the record of this administration when it comes to tourism: a loss to our economy of £396 million.

I do welcome the increase in the number of hotels. The recent opening of the Holiday Inn Express will, I hope, make access to longer-stay tourism less expensive and bring in tourists for more than a day, but this will still only happen if the product is right. Two areas of growth in terms of tourist numbers that have risen recently have been in aviation and cruise ship visitors. On the former it was unfortunate that Monarch Airlines ceased to operate; I certainly do not pin that on the Government. While the other airlines have picked up some of the slack in the system, the numbers of available seats and destinations offered has suffered as a direct consequence and demand for air transport very much outstrips supply at the moment, with a consequent impact on ticket pricing. (A Member: Hear, hear.) It is disappointing to note that the 350 Superbreak charter flights that were announced last year with great fanfare have not materialised this summer, but I am sure Government is strenuously exploring what other carriers may wish to operate to Gibraltar and I do wish them every success in what is a very competitive airports market.

355 As I said, cruise ship visitor numbers have also been rising steadily. Speaking with a number of Main Street traders, I have been given a sense that these visitors are not spending their money as they used to. I am sure Government is monitoring the real situation and will be working with the GFSB and Chamber of Commerce to understand whether this is the case, and if so, the reasons that lie behind it. While the number of cruise visits seem to peak this year, the programme for next year appears rather sparse at the moment with confirmed visits by cruise ships down by 50 and with over 150,000 fewer passengers expected. I am sure Government will 360 be working hard to improve this situation, but we are already in July and many cruise schedules will already have been set for next year. The picture looking forward is very worrying and should it not improve, Government will have some explaining to do.

The tourist product itself has not moved on a great deal in the past six years and we are certainly not exploring our gifts to their fullest potential. And now that we are charging even 365 walkers to go to the Upper Rock it is even more important that they be impressed. Bravo, I say, to the Re-enactment Society for their recent display at the Siege Tunnels. That is the kind of performance – bringing history to life – that we really should be doing more of. Bravo to them also for their weekly forays into Main Street. Their dedication is admirable. We need targeted investment to bring the core areas of our tourist product into the 21st century and create a 370 spectacle that will once again bring tourism in droves, happy to pay to access the sites. We are far from that at the moment.

For many tourists their experience is not a friendly one. They queue to get across the Frontier, then head up the Rock only to be turned away because they are no longer allowed to drive there – but they often do not receive this information until they get to Windmill Hill Road.
375 They drive back down and start the hunt for parking, and if they are lucky they might find something in Grand Parade. Off they go on the cable car to explore the attractions and spend some money, having spent half their available time already. But when they return to their vehicle they find it has been clamped – they failed to read the sign a hundred metres away telling them that it was a cleaning day. So they pay the fine and head back to the Frontier, 380 thoroughly fed up, and queue again to leave. You will say I exaggerate or cite the worst-case scenario. Well, it is the worst-case scenario, but a scenario being experienced by too many visitors when it should be experienced by none. If I went somewhere and had an experience like this, I would be very quick to tell anyone who would listen not to visit that place. (Interjection)

385 Government has invested considerable capital in a suspension bridge and Skywalk. Time will tell whether they are a success; the measure will be whether the number of overall visitor numbers goes up.

Let me just read the following quote from the GONHS Upper Rock Nature Reserve Management Plan published in 2006 and the Blueprint for the Gibraltar Nature Reserve Management Plan 2016, which I just point out once again is still a consultation draft in 2018 – 390 Government would not want to commit to actually publishing targets, after all; with that comes accountability and, as Minister Balban is finding out in his lonely press conferences on parking zones, no one in Government really wants to be accountable for possibly unpopular measures.

Back to the quote from the GONHS Management Plan. I refer you to the foreword. After a bit of nostalgia about the Upper Rock, we have:

Times move on, and with an open frontier and increasing tourism ... the Upper Rock is no longer the quiet place it once was. As urban areas ... become more densely populated, as bits of open ground get converted into buildings, as even its quiet heights of wilderness are threatened by Mickey Mouse ideas, the importance of the Upper Rock ... has increased.

395 Mickey Mouse ideas: what could the author have had in mind? And who was the author?
Well, yes, as he is well aware, none other than the Hon. Minister for the Environment, John Cortes. I wonder what must have gone through his mind when the proposal for the Skywalk was brought to him and then, just to cement the Mickey Mouse nature of the project, it was decided 400 to open the Skywalk using a Star Wars character from a Disney franchise. Does it get any more Mickey Mouse? The Minister must have paled when he heard about this idea. I suppose it is a lesson to us all on what we write in the past and how it may return to haunt us.

Mr Speaker, I would like to finish my contribution with Civil Contingencies and in particular the Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Service. I am not going to ask when their new fire station might be built. It was promised in the 2011 manifesto. The Chief Minister has said that Government are 405 not beholden to any incomplete commitments from that manifesto, even though before the last election they were saying that the manifesto had been completely delivered. The spin began on day one of this administration and has never stopped. A commitment made to an essential service has not been delivered. Still the Fire and Rescue Service lack the space to park many of their vehicles in a secure area. I would have hoped for a greater urgency in this matter; however, 410 it seems that the commitment to a new fire station has been put on the back burner.

With respect to the recommendations made by Sir Ken Knight in his report, I would ask the Government to describe what progress has been made in delivering these.

I am equally concerned at this juncture that the Fire and Rescue Service be provided with proper and up-to-date training facilities. Through my own research and through information I 415 have received, I have been made aware that what is currently available is inadequate to cater for the needs of the service, that maintaining competence in all of the varied rescue activities that the service may undertake is challenging and difficult. Inadequate facilities lead to substandard training, and where matters of critical incidents and life or death situations are concerned, substandard training places lives at risk, both those of the firemen and of the individuals 420 requiring rescue. This is a matter of some urgency that needs to be addressed. I would ask the Minister to look into this and determine what precisely the Fire and Rescue Service need to make the necessary improvements.

Finally, Mr Speaker, I would like to thank you, the Clerk and all those who work so closely with us in Parliament for all the support and the assistance they have provided throughout the 425 last year. Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Albert Isola.

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, if I may, before I start, just make a number of observations – I think on this side of the House we would be forgiven for not seeking to take lectures from the Members opposite in respect of quality of air.

It will not have escaped anyone in our community that the hon. Member, who stood for 430 election in 2011, was about to launch into the worst, horrendous, monstrous diesel-generating power station that Gibraltar's air quality could have ever suffered most from. And he comes and tells us that our air quality, despite what he just heard... It is as if he has prepared a speech and come to Parliament, and whatever he is told by the hon. Member in respect of air quality does not matter, because he has written his speech and that is what he is going to say, come hell or 435 high water. I think the hon. Member requires to draw breath, stop talking about Mickey Mouse and start listening a little better to what he is being told by the hon. Member who has done more for environment, for limitation of pollution and noise, and air and everything else in these years than any other Government has done before. (Banging on desks)

Likewise, Mr Speaker, when he talks about 'When are Government projects going to come 440 before the DPC? Isn't it time?' My gosh, it is not that long ago when he stood in the same party at the same election, where DPC meetings were held in secret, objectors had no right to be heard, the public were not allowed to listen to any development of anyone in Gibraltar. (Hon.
Chief Minister: Hear, hear.) And yet, Mr Speaker – (Hon. T N Hammond: Poor excuse.) Poor excuse? Well, Mr Speaker, let's try this one. There is a Bill before Parliament, which he should be 445 aware of, which is called the Town Planning (Amendment) Act, which actually says that Government is going to allow its own projects to come to the DPC like every other project. Is that not good enough? (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker, there seems to be no consistency or logic in anything that is coming from the other side of Parliament in these two days. I hope – and I am an optimist – that it will improve in 450 the deliveries that we are yet to hear. (Interjection) It is almost like wishing we had back Mr Montiel and Mr Netto (Laughter) and all the others who used to entertain us joyfully in those long Budget sessions.

Mr Speaker, Mr Phillips announced to this House and to the people of Gibraltar that for the second year running the GSD was going to vote against this Appropriation Bill.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): He's not here.

Hon. A J Isola: But of course he is not here to learn a little as to why he should not. But at least when I listened to him I thought to myself, 'Okay, can we really try and ascertain a reason 460 as to why?' He was not convincing, and I think that is probably in part because he is not convinced himself –

Hon. Chief Minister: He probably has not understood.

Hon. A J Isola: But the very arguments that he used were the same that were used by Mr Feetham last year, when he was, I have to say, far more convincing than Mr Phillips has been this year, and the Father of the House beautifully took this House through every single argument that Mr Feetham had put and explained to him and to the rest of us why it was wrong.

Yet Mr Phillips, in his unconvincing and shallow manner, continued, and what he said was 470 this: 'This is the Big Lie Budget.' Well, he talks about our leader, the Hon. the Chief Minister, being a master of spin. Well, he had better start learning from him because Big Lie Budget is a little spin that he thought he would roll out – unsuccessfully, unfortunately for him. It says absolutely nothing, because what is the lie? Big Lie Budget: what is the lie?

He then says 'intentionally hiding the true debt of our people', 'it is opaque', 'the Opposition 475 is handcuffed from scrutinising finances', 'the hidden debt', 'falsely misleading'. Well, there are two issues here, Mr Speaker. The first is that what is and what is not debt is defined in law, so what we have is what we have, and what they had for 16 years before is exactly the same system that we use today, that they used for 16 years and was used even before that. So what you define as debt is debt. There is no question about that. The argument used to be made by 480 my Friend Mr Feetham, but I think he has given that one up. So, if debt is debt and what is not debt is in fact what is structured through companies or off balance sheet is not debt under the official terminology of debt, then surely what we are doing, and what they did for 16 years, is absolutely right. That does not mean that anything is being hidden or anything is opaque. We are using precisely the same system that they used in accounting with this Appropriation Bill as 485 they did for the 16 years that they were there.

To say that we are hiding, that it is opaque, when we issue a press release informing our community that we have borrowed £300 million, when Mr Clinton can get up to this House and say, 'This is off balance sheet, this is off balance sheet, this is off balance sheet,' well, we have not done a very good job of hiding it if we had wanted to!

490 There is no intention to hide anything from anyone. It has been structured in a way that they should be very familiar with, because they almost invented it. And yet at the same time, when we issue press releases, when we make public the information on a very regular basis of what amounts are borrowed and by whom, it is 'hidden', it is 'opaque'. Mr Speaker, there is a GSD hash tag which says 'We deserve better' – I think we deserve better from the Opposition.
495 (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) I think the community of Gibraltar deserves better from the Opposition. And I exclude, obviously, the hon. Lady. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

(Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker, people in Gibraltar will remember the Hospital: off balance sheet. People will remember the car parks: off balance sheet. People will remember the power station there was going to be, but thank God we stopped it, so it is not off balance sheet too. Well, were those hidden? Were those opaque? (Hon. Chief Minister: Transparent.)

Mr Speaker, public debt is today exactly the same in its management as it was then, but this is the Big Lie ‘not when they did it’; it is only a big lie when we do it. With the greatest of respect, it is absolute nonsense. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

Mr Clinton then gets up and tells us that the school is going to be built and there is only a thousand pounds. We are pretty good at value for money, Mr Speaker, but not that good, and even he should know that! (Laughter) The hon. Member is being disingenuous because he knows, if he is the accountant that he thinks he is – until his bubble was burst by Mr Licudi earlier, before lunch this morning (Laughter) – that when you prepare the Appropriation Bill and the Estimates Book and the amount is either not certain because it is not fully defined or you are not yet sure how you are going to structure that funding, it is absolutely normal, and it is littered throughout the whole book, to put a provisional sum of £1,000. It is absolutely the normal way to do it – and they will not be surprised to hear they did it day in, day out, (Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely.) because it is the right thing to do, and that is what we are doing. But Mr Clinton comes to Parliament and tries to tell the people of Gibraltar, ‘They’ve put a thousand pounds in – they’re just hiding it from us.’ Nonsense. Absolute nonsense. It is a practice and a procedure that has been used repeatedly over tens of years in this Parliament in the Appropriation Bill. (Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely right.) (A Member: What nonsense!)

And then of course he comes and he tells us about the stealth of incoming fees. Stealth taxes: wow! So what does he mean? Surely if a man is worried about the amount of debt we have, which he says is a big number, surely he would want us to have more revenue, so surely he would welcome stealth taxes. No. But of course the truth is that there are no stealth taxes, because house rent, second increase in 35 years, of 3%. Is that a stealth tax? Landing certificates from £10 to £20 – first increase in 30 years: stealth tax. [Inaudible] increase, the first in eight years, and some since 1997: stealth tax. Tobacco licence fees, the first increase since 2005: stealth tax. Cigarettes, £1 per carton: stealth tax. Well, Mr Speaker, I cannot see anywhere in the Chief Minister’s brilliant address an example of a stealth tax. Maybe perhaps when we come back to Parliament after this sitting he can give us some examples of those stealth taxes.

He mentioned rates. The hon. Member should know that we actually do not manage the rates. The rates go with the net annual value, which has got nothing to do with Government’s interference with that. So, as cost of living goes up, as net annual values go up, so do rates go with it. It is an automatic process. Or is he suggesting we should stop that? Less revenue. What is he really saying?

Mr Speaker, the impact of Brexit on our business community is difficult to predict or quantify, as the moving parts that Brexit is comprised of are far from clear and continue to move in unpredictable directions.

The Hon. Mr Phillips –

Hon. Chief Minister: Who is now here.

Hon. A J Isola: – said ‘Brexit excuse’. Welcome. You know, Mr Speaker, if we did nothing else, because of Brexit, it would be understandable because it is the biggest singular challenge this community has faced in generations. And so to say that something is a Brexit excuse is to misunderstand or not understand at all the importance of Brexit.

And so, from my perspective, I have to say I am hugely proud of the work that the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister have done in all their work related to Brexit because it affects and touches my areas, which are those that affect the entire business community in 550 Gibraltar. To be told, as we have been, post-Brexit access guarantee in financial services, post-Brexit access guarantee in gaming – if that was the only thing that we got from those discussions which they have been having week in, week out over the past two years, that would be an achievement I would be proud of and everything else would have to suffer. But that is not the truth, as they know, because we have continued apace with everything else, as the hon. Members are fully aware.

555 As a consequence, we have continued to work, wherever possible, to maintain the business we have, whilst working to explore new opportunities and new lines of business which will increase activity in our community.

560 We have to accept that our new modus operandi will not work for all, and that there will be areas of change. We remain today where we were 24 months ago. We will work to deliver the very best results in the circumstances, working closely with the private sector in ensuring that our product lines across all areas remain relevant and fit for purpose in the new challenges and opportunities that Brexit will deliver and offer.

565 I have the privilege to work with the quite excellent executive team at the Gibraltar International Bank and am immensely proud of their work in providing our community with exactly what we asked them to do. Almost 21,000 accounts, increasing deposits and loans, a stable professional staff and an independent board of directors have delivered ahead of their own business plan a bank that will this year break into profit, provided there are no surprises. We must congratulate Albert Langston our Chairman and his board on delivering these results; and of course Lawrence Podesta CEO and Derek Sene COO, who lead the excellent team we are so fortunate to have at the bank. Our thanks are due to each and every one of them.

570 Mr Speaker, for our insurance community, Brexit remains an opportunity, as over 90% of Gibraltar's insurance business is with the United Kingdom; and with passporting rights from Gibraltar into the UK secure with the Chief Minister's work at the JMC, the effect has been to ensure that Gibraltar remains a unique alternative domicile for insurance businesses focused on the UK market.

575 We have two applications pending that are particularly interesting, because if authorised they will both have significant capital investment from day one. Whilst today Gibraltar has a number of very large insurance companies, the path to growth has, in most cases, come from organic growth over the last 10 to 15 years. The creation of new, highly capitalised insurers has been more prevalent in other insurance centres but would send out a very strong message that institutional investors have confidence in Gibraltar and its post-Brexit status.

580 Mr Speaker, there is a high degree of confidence in the insurance market. Currently, we are promoting the use of cell company structures, which will allow business continuity to flow through the post-Brexit transition.

585 Mr Speaker, Gibraltar Finance continues with its marketing strategy in the Far East in the insurance space. Structural changes to the Chinese insurance regulator in 2017 slowed our progress but we continue to gain traction and support. Relationships need both time and investment and so we will continue to travel to the Far East to articulate Gibraltar's compelling insurance proposition.

590 Finally on insurance, Mr Speaker, the rapid development of Gibraltar's FinTech sector offers other opportunities to create a complementary InsurTech hub and efforts are underway to promote Gibraltar to the InsurTech community.

595 Mr Speaker, we have continued to work with GFIA the funds association and the funds community in addressing their ambitions to update our legislative position and introduce interesting and innovative products in the new post-Brexit world of opportunity where a dual regime basis becomes possible. We are also looking at crypto funds and how best to better market these services. We continue to support in direct business development work with GFIA in their traditional markets in London and Switzerland.

600 Mr Speaker, the private client space continues to reinvent itself as it adjusts and prepares for Brexit. The challenges are obvious and we are pushing ahead with supporting this sector in our plans for this coming year.

This year has seen the introduction, on 1st January, of our innovative and ground-breaking DLT framework. Gibraltar plc has invested heavily in making this a reality and an incredible amount of work has gone into preparing and delivering these services.

605 Since January 2018, Gibraltar Finance has been delivering on a detailed and strategically formulated activity schedule, created to proactively drive home our very strong DLT message. We have researched and identified key markets and audiences and focused our marketing in these areas with some degree of success.

610 To date in 2018 this has resulted in attendances at the World Blockchain Forum in Miami; the StartUp Grind in San Francisco; the FinTech Week in Tel Aviv; a visit to Beijing, Hong Kong and Singapore, where we hosted two very successful events; the hugely renowned Consensus 2018 and Token Summit III, both in New York, where on both occasions I was invited to address the audience; Amsterdam for Money 20/20; Zug for the Crypto Valley Conference; and, of course, our traditional market in the United Kingdom, including London Blockchain Week and others. Our aggressive schedule will continue for the remainder of 2018 with conferences in Tel Aviv for

615 a Gibraltar Day event, San Francisco, Beijing, Shanghai, London and Latin America, and will include the second Gibraltar Finance FinTech conference here in October, full details of which will be made public shortly. We have also supported two private sector FinTech conferences in Gibraltar, the most recent being the Token Market summit which took place last week. Also in January of 2018, I addressed the Blockchain Technology Seminar in Davos, in the margins of the 620 World Economic Forum, at the invitation of the Global Business Blockchain Council.

We have of late been publicly welcoming some of the firms that are settling in Gibraltar – industry leaders such as Xapo, eToro, Huobi, Gnosis, Oxygen, RSK Labs, TokenMarket, Coinfloor, Covesting and Coindash, to name but a few – many more to come as we evolve as a centre for global enterprise in this field. We must also not forget the work being undertaken by GBX, as it 625 actively seeks a licence in the quest to become one of the world's first Blockchain exchanges. I have to acknowledge the support and work of all Gibraltar firms who have supported our development in this area, and for their relentless push with us in spreading the word.

In February 2018, we announced that we would introduce complementary but distinct legislation covering token sales. Working in partnership with the Gibraltar Financial Services Commission and the private sector, this complex work is in its final stages and should be before 630 Parliament in the very near future. I have already indicated to the Hon. Mr Clinton and Mr Feetham that I will share drafts as soon as I am able to, and then invite them to meet with the regulators and the people involved to better understand exactly what it is we are seeking to do.

635 We remain committed to protecting the jurisdiction and consumers in tandem, while providing innovative support to this nascent industry. Our vision remains one of attracting quality operators who will create long term, sustainable and mutually beneficial relationships.

Mr Speaker, the Financial Services Commission is actively processing some 35 applications for DLT licences – news on these is expected very shortly – with a similar number in the pipeline.

640 Our professional services providers are working as never before in providing quality advice and guidance to applicants and are raising their own game to meet the challenges that we face and meet the high standards we expect of them.

If all are licensed, this means 35 new businesses in this sector creating economic activity, employment and opportunity, and all created by ourselves as a jurisdiction.

645 There has also been spin-off in other areas of private client work with applications pending for e-money and, further ahead, more proposed banking licences. DLT initiatives are also creating a market for trust and company managers to provide their services. All of this translates into bottom-line revenue for our jurisdiction, which in turn benefits the entire community.

650 Mr Speaker, none of this work would have been possible without the support of the team at Gibraltar Finance under the safe and trusting stewardship of its CEO Mr Jimmy Tipping, whose knowledge and expertise in all things financial services is exceptional. I am most grateful, as always, for his work and that of his team, including Tim Haynes in London, who organise events and manage the offices, with no fuss and to our required standards of quality, effortlessly.

655 Exchange of information and UBO works continues smoothly and, I am pleased to report, effectively.

Mike Ashton has driven our insurance development with energy and enthusiasm, particularly in Asia and we are most excited about our prospects there, as well as of course our continued growth in the London market.

660 I must this year single out for special mention the work of Mr Paul Astengo. His efforts on the DLT front have been truly quite superb. He led the working group four years ago and developed the thinking which we are seeing succeeding today. He has led the work with the private sector and the regulator, and also the business development drive. He has spent most of this last year living out of a suitcase as he spreads the word around the world. Put simply, we could not have done this without him, and I and Gibraltar owe him a debt of gratitude, which I am happy to 665 acknowledge today. (Banging on desks)

The Finance Centre Council is a valuable and important part of our jurisdiction whom we interact with regularly and extensively, and in this year of consultations on our Legal Reform Programme, they have really demonstrated their value. They add tremendous value to our work as we together shape the future of this sector and its legislative platform. My thanks especially 670 to Peter Montegriffo, its Chairman, who is shortly to retire as the outgoing Chair, and all its members for their time and care – and as I mentioned before, Mr Speaker, especially in our consultation processes.

Our ability to sit round a table with the private sector and the regulator ensures that our decisions are informed and well considered. I am grateful to Samantha Barrass, the CEO, and her 675 team at the GFSC, and of course the board, for their continued good work. We have together developed the DLT framework and worked on a multitude of other important issues in all areas financial services, and I must particularly mention Sian Jones for her wisdom and expertise on everything Blockchain and Crypto. We are also making good progress on the Legal Reform Programme and I am grateful to Ernest and Julian at the GFSC for their work on this project.

680 Dealing now with the gaming sector, which continues to be a key sector of our economy, the combination of the remote and land-based industries provides direct employment for some 3,500 individuals, with the bulk of those working in the remote sector. There are also a large number of supply chain and support functions that are dependent upon that industry.

685 It is undeniable that the Gibraltar-based remote gambling industry remains the most significant in Europe, if not the world, but it is now sailing into headwinds. These are created not only by the uncertainties of Brexit and challenges around EU market access, but also because of increased industry consolidation as companies look to scale up, drive efficiencies and deal with increased regulatory costs in new and existing jurisdictions.

690 Our two land-based casinos have also recently announced their own plans for shared operations. It is important that we retain both the Sunborn and the Admiral facilities, and an enormous amount of work and goodwill has been invested in taking this project forward.

695 Whilst the number of remote licences held remains around 30, further consolidation will mean that the number of B2C licences is again likely to reduce this financial year. However, interest in Gibraltar as a licensing jurisdiction remains, with the licensing team dealing regularly with pre-application enquiries and a small number of substantive applications. Both the consumer-facing B2C and B2B games supply market continue to grow in scale, if not in absolute numbers, but there has always been variation in numbers within an upward trend that has continued since 2011.

700 In March, and following discussions at the Joint Ministerial Committee, the Chief Minister announced, amongst other matters, that the UK has guaranteed Gibraltar licensees continued access to the very important UK remote gambling market throughout the transition period and beyond. Gibraltar is the only jurisdiction to have received such an assurance. Much of the Gibraltar-based sector is UK facing and some 80% of UK remote betting and a very significant percentage of UK gaming is provided from Gibraltar to what is the EU's biggest gambling market.

705 We have made it clear that Brexit provides an opportunity to strengthen our operations with the UK, and our discussions with UK Ministers and officials have demonstrated that the UK does not want to see a shift in the critical mass of remote gambling operators away from Gibraltar. However, we can understand and will support our firms who are contingency planning and prudently assessing the political and business risks created by the nature and timing of Brexit 710 being unresolved.

Looking at the issue from a traditional business risk assessment perspective, whilst the probability of a hard or early Brexit and not being able to access EU markets from Gibraltar remains low, in our estimation, the impact of such an occurrence would be high. That situation could arise in the coming months but is effectively being planned for in 2021. This means early 715 decisions have to be made that will change some operations in Gibraltar. That is why we are working closely with our operators who are most immediately exposed to Brexit risk to construct a regulatory and licensing framework that is right for them and right for Gibraltar in terms of regulatory control and continued economic benefits for Gibraltar and all those who live or work here.

720 Our engagements have given us a strong degree of confidence that whilst operators may need to be flexible about the contingent location of some of their transactional technology, their people, both management and staff, prefer to be anchored in Gibraltar. They understand the personal and business benefits of being in this jurisdiction and we are working with them to develop alternate operating arrangements around technology, tailored to different Brexit
725 outcomes and each operator's unique business model.

In addition, the Gambling Division is now working closely with Government and the GFSC on DLT and crypto currency proposals in the gambling space, as well as considering how it might support the economy by considering business plans for gambling start-ups where the management of those start-ups have themselves a strong industry and regulatory track record.

730 Mr Speaker, I am clear that Gibraltar will not lower its regulatory standards or become a brass plate jurisdiction for remote gambling, but nevertheless the new post-Brexit world requires us to be flexible, innovative and to take a balanced view on new business models and technology platforms. We should be prepared to be an incubator for selected technology firms and this requires a shift in mindset and more flexible legislation which widens the regulatory 735 perimeter to include all firms employed in the provision of remote gambling services from Gibraltar.

There will also be a requirement to enhance co-operation with other gambling regulatory regimes, both EU and non-EU, to ensure that we remain at the heart of the wider remote gambling community.

740 I have previously indicated that the Government has been considering various models to replace the historic and essentially flat rate gambling charges paid by our licensees since 2005. This has proven to be a complex and challenging process with significant interest within and beyond the industry. For this reason we have consulted extensively with the sector. As a consequence, I can inform this House that Government has decided to roll out the arrangements 745 for both new licence charges and new gambling duties with immediate effect. To delay implementation would mean a 12-month delay and this is not workable, as the first due date for this year is 1st July. In sum, the industry is being moved on to a charging model with substantially higher annual licence fees, typically £100,000 for each B2C licence and £85,000 for each B2B licence, with Gambling Tax paid only by the B2Cs on their gross receipts, both gaming 750 receipts and betting receipts, at the very low rate of 0.15%.

As with any changes in tax modelling, there are winners and losers. My staff have been assiduous in ensuring those who are likely to pay substantially more have been kept abreast of 755 developments and indeed involved in the process, the reasons for the changes and how they will impact on them. Whilst no industry welcomes increased charges, they have appreciated the consultation and made their own adjustments. Conversely, those with likely reductions in charges have been less well informed so as not to encourage over or excessive expectations about reduced charges, and this model, which largely links charges to gross profit, will reduce the charges paid by many.

760 It must also be remembered that amongst our largest licensees are a number who have consolidated two, three and even four former licence holders in the interests of efficiency and global competition. Likewise, they and others are global suppliers and amongst if not the largest in certain markets and these charges are both fair and proportionate.

765 Again, I can assure the House that this new model is necessary and has been carefully developed to complement a constantly changing industry landscape. Ideally, the transition would have been initiated at an earlier point in the year and with more information available, but that detail will be provided in the days and weeks to come and I am confident that we have the right model and now is the time to introduce it.

770 Mr Speaker, our new Gambling regulator, Andrew Lyman, is now in place and he has been working side by side with Phill Brear to effect a smooth handover of responsibility. Andrew is an experienced man not just in regulation but also in the gaming sector and has already proven himself to be a safe pair of hands. I have every confidence in his ability to continue to hold high our excellent regulatory reputation in this important sector.

775 Phill Brear has gracefully consented to remain in an advisory role, dedicating himself to three key areas: firstly, to revive the review and amendment of our Gambling Act to make the regulatory regime fit for the future; secondly, the transition to a new gaming tax regime; and thirdly, an update of the industry AML/CTF code. I must thank Phill once again for his service and commitment to our gaming community. He has been a superb leader of our Gambling Division and a key player in our continued success these past 11 years. I am sure all Members will join me in thanking him and his wife Janet for their support of our gambling community.

780 Mr Speaker, turning to the Liaison Department, since the Department was created in 2013 it has operated as a support and problem-solving hub for the gaming and finance sectors. Lizanne and Tania deal with a wide range of services, ranging from fast-tracking employment permit applications to chasing up and/or expediting processes being managed by other Government Departments. I continue to receive thanks and compliments for the efficient work of this unit 785 and I am most grateful to Lizanne and Tania for delivering this. The work of the unit will now also be extended to support our new DLT firms.

790 Mr Speaker, I turn to Commerce and the Office of Fair Trading. Even though the Office is only in its second full year of operations, I am very satisfied with its ability to meet the ambitious objectives and responsibilities set for it by the Fair Trading Act 2015. The team, ably lead by Francis Muscat, continues to be actively engaged on a daily basis to assist businesses to set themselves up in Gibraltar as quickly and easily as possible within the requirements of the Act.

795 In conjunction with the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses and the Gibraltar Chamber of Commerce, we are currently reviewing a number of areas of the OFT work to simplify and improve these processes. I am happy to report that an amended Bill has already been drafted and that an advanced draft of the proposed subsidiary legislation to replace the business licensing provisions of the Act has already been considered by the Chamber and the GFSB. The Bill will be considered only once Members opposite have had an opportunity to consider the draft regulations, which I have also discussed with Members opposite and will share with them in advance of that.

800 We have also recently issued a consultation paper touching on a number of business related issues and we look forward to engaging further with the Chamber and the GFSB on all of these matters. I am grateful to them for their open and frank relationship, even if we do not always agree.

805 Mr Speaker, the number of active business licences continues to grow at a steady rate. There has been an increase in excess of 10% of licence holders since my address last year, despite a substantial clear-out of the OFT's system seeing the revocation of approximately 400 inactive licences. This increase reflects not only the vibrancy of our economy and business community but also the positive steps taken by the OFT to engage with other GoG Departments so that there is meaningful inter-departmental communication to ensure that all businesses are licensed and operating on a level playing field. Like some Members opposite have mentioned, it is our intention to make this a smooth and easier process; we appreciate there are issues and we are in the process of tackling these.

In the past year, a significant part of the OFT's efforts have also been dedicated to its new anti-money laundering and counter-terrorism responsibilities.

815 As the appointed Supervisory Authority for Real Estate Agents and High Value Dealers under the Proceeds of Crime Act, the OFT has worked hard to produce and issue detailed and easy-to-use guidance notes setting out the manner in which the OFT will regulate each of these sectors in accordance with the Act.

I am happy to report that as the OFT matures, it continues to constantly develop and review its internal procedures to ensure it provides its services to the public efficiently and to the highest possible standards.

825 Mr Speaker, I turn to my responsibilities for the Royal Gibraltar Post Office. I must start by thanking the entire RGPO team for their continued work and dedication in meeting the needs of our community whilst at the same time managing a complete relocation of services to the new mail centre and parcel office at Mid Harbours. Despite the technical teething problems arising from this move, normal service has now been resumed.

830 The RGPO review is progressing well and I am pleased to say that there is a constructive and positive attitude in this process. I must thank Mr Gareth Flower, who leads the review on my behalf, for his excellent work and indeed that of the team at HR – Collin, Lyzanne and Nadine – who have excelled in knitting together all of the issues and the various permutations that have been considered throughout this worthwhile process. Their work has been invaluable. My thanks also to the shop stewards and Unite the Union for their continued involvement in the review and the efforts made in making the final outcome of interest to all parties.

835 Mr Speaker, I am pleased to announce that Gibraltar has been elected chair of the Conference of Commonwealth Postal Administrations. This is one of nine inter-government associated organisations, which places Gibraltar in the mainstream of Commonwealth activity.

To commemorate this special year for the UK and Gibraltar, a stamp was launched on the last day of the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in London in April of this year.

840 Mr Speaker, my thanks to David Ledger and Sabina Pitaluga, and especially to Mr Joe Brosco, who has been invaluable to my Ministry in working through the review I mentioned earlier. My thanks to all the teams at the RGPO for their patience with me and their continued hard work during the course of this year, and especially the shop stewards who have been heavily engaged in the process.

845 Turning to technology, ITLD has been busy implementing measures to further develop and enhance internal Government systems across the entire spectrum of public services. By way of example, speed cameras are now linked to an automated ticketing application, which has revolutionised the way traffic offences are captured in Gibraltar. The result is that our roads are safer than they have been and police resources can be safely redeployed to cater for other community needs.

850 From schools to fire services to UBO registers and exchange of information, to planning and to transport matters, ITLD have been working to meet the increasing demands of the use of more and more technology. Their work is often not appreciated, as they beaver away resolving problems before they arise. We shout when we have a problem but do not thank them when we do not, which is 99% of the time. My thanks to Tyrone and Jonathan for driving the team forward in these challenging times, as they are stretched every which way as we work with them in delivering e-services. I am grateful to them and every single member of their team, who work day in and day out to keep our systems going. Their roles will become increasingly important as we embrace technology more deeply.

860 Mr Speaker, I turn to e-services. The Ministry of Commerce has been working tirelessly on the implementation of numerous platforms and digital services which represent the vanguard of becoming a truly digital Government and community.

865 Last year saw the introduction of the Procurement Source-to-Contract platform. All large Government tenders are now procured using the new system. The S2C software allows the Government to negotiate more value-for-money contracts and makes the procurement process more streamlined, standardised and efficient for both Government users and suppliers. Fifteen Government public service organisations are already on the system and the transition from totally manual to digital process has been virtually seamless. By digitising the purchasing process, the number of people required to deal solely with purchasing will be significantly less than with our current manual processes. Controlling officers will be able to be more involved in the day-to-day approval process for purchases, thereby resulting in tighter controls and savings. The investment in this type of technology is, frankly, a no-brainer. However, Mr Speaker, this is only the start. The Government has been working on two major projects which will start to bear fruit this calendar year.

870 Mr Speaker, eVolve is the name we have given to the Enterprise Resource Planning platform that we are implementing, which basically is the engine the Civil Service will run on in the not-too-distant future. The solution integrates core Government activity related to our systems, Human Resources and Payroll in a live environment. The system will enable core tasks to be automated across the entire Government process so that we can get on with more value-added work.

880 The other major project we are working on is Digital Services, which is about analysing core business processes and automating functions. At the moment, we are working with the GHA, the Employment Service and the Tax Office in order to bring some 32 existing services online. This is the first phase and the remaining services in these and other Departments will follow in the next phases.

885 Mr Speaker, we will continue to work to deliver real e-Government in a safe and sustainable manner and are reviewing our security systems and processes, including of course an evaluation of our cyber security risks and mitigating features.

890 The implementation of these systems represents a quantum leap forward for Government. Delivering e-Government is an enormous enterprise. We have expert support, an implementation team drawn from ITLD, the GHA, Treasury and HR, all working together to deliver these services for us. The team is led by Julian Baldachino, whose care and enthusiasm for this project is matched only by his deep knowledge of all Civil Service systems. He is a complete professional and a joy to work with and I have every confidence that his work will be appreciated for many years to come as e-Government is rolled out. He is ably assisted by Karon Cano, seconded to my Ministry from ITLD exclusively for this project and who is an understated and quiet expert in this field. My sincere thanks to them and the entire team.

895 Mr Speaker, I cannot conclude without thanking the staff at my Ministry for their continued support these past 12 months. Gareth, who joined me earlier this year, has already proven himself as a key player in the team; and Lourdes, my secretary, keeps me organised and, unusually, on time! I must mention Flavio Madeira, a long-serving member of our Department who has been unwell and is now recovering; and Karl Rose, who has stepped up to provide cover during this time. My thanks to them and the rest of the team for their work and support.

900 Mr Speaker, we live in challenging times. We are in good shape and the future is looking cautiously encouraging. Our partnership with the private sector across all areas is unquestionably bearing fruit, and they, as are we, are excited by the future. Government at this critical time is providing the leadership and confidence that our business community needs and together we shall continue to prosper. Mr Speaker, there is no lie in this, or indeed in any aspect of the excellent work we are doing and will continue to do.

Thank you. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Neil Costa.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, as I stand to deliver my 11th Budget address as a Member of Parliament and my seventh as a Government Minister, it continues to be my privilege to serve our community. On this occasion, I set out my second Budget contribution as Minister with responsibility for Health, Care and Justice.

915

On writing this year's address, I considered how best to detail the milestones and objectives that my various responsibilities have achieved in the past financial year. Every year I provide to the House an almost complete report, as it were, of all aspects of the business my various Ministries have conducted and intend to carry out in the financial year. It occurred to me, however – and it will, I hope, sincerely please Mr Speaker – that in the light of the many statements to the press, it would be of more benefit to provide an easily accessible link to the statements that detail manifesto pledges fulfilled and other achievements. Mr Speaker, should any member of the community wish to consider, they can go to the Government website at www.gibraltar.gov.gi.

As a result of providing a link containing the statements, I will address what I consider to be the most important projects that have been completed or unveiled. I will not enter into all aspects of any one project, as I dare say most members of our community will either have read or heard the news. I wish to stress that I struggled to decide which projects and improvements to exclude from my address. I therefore highlight to my many indefatigable teams that I thank each and every one of them and that no slight is meant if a particular measure has not been mentioned.

930

The work that I started in late October 2016 to integrate Health, Elderly and Social Care, as the Hon. the Chief Minister directed me, continues apace and I will set out some of the steps that we have already taken to align care in these settings. Similarly, as Minister for Justice, I continue to be in a position to move quickly in drawing up legislation.

935

Mr Speaker, I will commence with my responsibilities as Minister for Health. No one will doubt the huge strides taken to substantially improve access to our GPs. It is an important point to make that on a daily basis an average of 450 to 550 persons are seen by our fantastic cadre of GPs. The number of attendances on any one day, which can reach close to 600 persons, bears repeating and places in sharp focus the absolutely fantastic work carried out day in and day out by our GPs. I provide, Mr Speaker, a flavour of the most notable PCC reforms.

940

On 27th December, GP walk-in clinics were introduced for the very first time to deal with the winter flu season. Within days, appointment capacity in the PCC was markedly improved, with an average of 48 unused appointments every single weekday. The appointment availability has never been seen in the past and certainly not in the winter months, and our primary care services more than effectively kept pace with the winter flu surge that created media-worthy difficulties in European countries.

945

Nurse telephone results represents modern and well-established practice adopted in GP practices in the UK. Two qualified nurses were assigned to operate a telephone service, where patients are contacted to inform of routine clinical results, enabling patients to receive timely reassurance that investigation results have been entirely normal and, crucially, eliminating the need for patients to seek a further appointment with the GP.

950

Arguably, one of the reforms most requested by patients was that of evening clinics. Two highly experienced and clinically excellent GPs were recruited and on 21st May of this year the evening clinics commenced, running from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. on weekdays from Monday through to Friday. Evening clinics provide a welcome and seamless service to patients after they have left work.

960 The interrelationship between A&E and the PCC has been very closely scrutinised to understand the reasons for the high number of patients attending A&E for medical issues that could perhaps be better managed in the primary care setting. It bears repeating that almost the entire population of Gibraltar has attended A&E at least once a year, compared to 30% of the UK population. As a result, two young and dynamic full-time GPs have been recruited to work in the See and Treat service – nurses and GPs working together to see patients as they walk in through the door.

965 Further, a fully digitised telephone system, known as the MyGHA Automated Telephone Service and accessed by dialling 2000 7007, was fully activated at 6 p.m. on Sunday, 3rd June this year. As at the time of writing, a total of 511 appointments have been successfully booked via the new system. The PCC has received overwhelmingly positive feedback as to the ease with which appointments can now be booked.

970 A general practitioner with special interest in substance misuse and addictions started work at Bruce's Farm every Wednesday morning from 30th May. Dr Taylor's role is not only as a highly experienced GP in the PCC, but also to work closely with the Drug and Alcohol Awareness and Rehabilitation Services to significantly improve recovery from substance and alcohol addiction. To mirror Dr Taylor's role in Bruce's Farm, Dr Flores dedicates Wednesday mornings to run a GP clinic in Her Majesty's Prison, thereby creating a greater level of continuity of care for not only prisoners but also for those who may be connected with Prison and Rehabilitation services.

975 On 1st May this year a very experienced local GP was recruited to establish and run an extensively planned Sexual Health and Family Planning service. Based in the PCC, this will be a Well Person Unit and will incorporate well-man and well-woman health screening as part of a comprehensive, confidential and non-judgemental family service. Our patients will have access to an experienced and professional source of advice to help them make informed decisions for their family planning and commences in September of this year. The aim of the Well Person Unit, encompassing screening clinics as well as family planning and anonymous sexual health advice, means that any person attending can do so knowing that their presence at the Unit will not indicate the reason for their visit. An entirely non-judgemental, confidential and anonymous service is an absolute must for this service to succeed.

980 Mr Speaker, the new Primary Care Centre and the new Children's Centre is one of the most significant projects in my privileged time serving as Minister for Health. I have been deeply honoured to announce, along with the Hon. the Chief Minister, that by July of next year works will have been completed to deliver a new and fully bespoke three-storey primary care and community centre in the grounds of St Bernard's Hospital. Access to the new PCC will be through the main hospital. The ground floor will have 15 GP clinics with nurse practitioner and diabetic specialist clinics, a district nursing office and nursing clinics including the lymphedema suite and a nursing observation and treatment area. The first floor will consist of a further 15 GP clinics and the specialist clinics for dermatology. The second floor will have seven dental clinics and a central waiting and play area for children waiting to see their dentist. This floor will also accommodate the more specialised clinics, which, by virtue of being on the top floor, will be slightly more separate from the bulk of clinics on the ground and first floors, allowing these specialist clinics a greater level of privacy and quiet during clinic hours.

985 Physically separate to the new PCC, but next to the hospital and in every way integrated with the hospital and new PCC, will be the new Children's Centre – a project very close to the hearts of us on these benches and perhaps one of the most voiced requests by our community. The Children's Centre will combine the full range of children's medical health services in an environment designed specifically with children in mind, staffed by specialist staff, general practitioners and community and allied professionals all dedicated to the youngest members of our community.

1000 This seminal dual project will create new, modern and, in our view, future-proof facilities. Further, primary care will work much more closely with secondary care and the synergies

1010 between the GPs and primary care professionals will be far better with their secondary care and consultant colleagues.

Mr Speaker, being able to announce this project, let alone the impressive list of reforms and initiatives in primary care, makes me deeply proud of the achievements of all the PCC teams and the incredibly hard work by all my healthcare professionals and medical advisers who have the care of their community central to everything that they do daily. From me, Mr Speaker, to all of them, and I am sure on behalf of the entire House, thank you. (Banging on desks)

1015 Mr Speaker, from primary care I move perhaps rather unimaginatively to secondary care. The GHA's work in this area has been guided by five overriding principles: the first is effective bed management, sustained bed availability and improved patient access; secondly, improvement and expansion of services, including the repatriation of services; thirdly, establishing and embedding clinical governance structures and systems; fourthly, returning the GHA to financial balance to ensure value for money; and fifthly, improving the patient experience and increasing community participation in formal GHA structures. Mr Speaker, I set out only some of the most notable reforms.

1020 A new computerised flagging system was introduced at A&E and the Primary Care Centre to notify staff of all serious medical conditions or disabilities and of any assistance required.

As part of the objective to improve the patient experience and increase community participation in formal structures, it gave me great personal pleasure to establish the Advocacy Council for Healthcare Users with Additional Needs. The Council is formed by key patient advocacy groups. The meetings have been very productive and represent a new chapter for the GHA and a wonderful opportunity to work even closer with our patients and service users so that we can improve and develop care services that we provide.

1025 The House knows that I am presently negotiating the contract with one tertiary care provider in Spain and negotiating prices with other providers in the neighbouring area to successfully obtain best value for money, quality and convenience for patients and their loved ones.

Since the 1997-98 financial year, the sponsored patients budget spend has increased from £1.8 million in March 1998 to £19.4 million in March 2017, which represents an average of a 13% increase per financial year. This past financial year, substantial work has been carried out to take back proper control of our sponsored patients' plans of care by GHA consultants. The critical importance of ensuring that our patients' care is fully managed by one of our consultants and liaising with all other professionals has had the welcome effect of resulting also in efficiencies of £6.8 million compared against the sponsored patients budget of last year.

1040 I am very proud to note that in the last financial year we have seen a marked decrease in sponsored patient spending for the first time in many years. It is the first time in the last 11 financial years that Sponsored Patients has not gone over budget and has come in at a surplus in allocated funds. The significant reduction in expenditure in respect of one particular Spanish tertiary centre is allowing us to reinvest and plough our money into our Health Service, as we should.

1045 I remind the House of the many services already repatriated, such as vascular surgery; renal replacement; keyhole bariatric and colorectal surgery; specialist shoulder and ankle surgery, including replacement shoulders and ankles; urology and haematology.

Sponsored patients' allowances were revised in December 2012 by my hon. colleague Dr John Cortes, where patients who were in receipt of a disability allowance were given an extra 50% of moneys that they were eligible to claim. On 1st July 2015 my colleague again ensured that the weekly maximum allowance for sponsored patients was increased by 18% from £427 to £504 per week, with a corresponding increase in the allowances for those staying at Calpe House. Today, I am pleased to announce an adjustment to the daily allowance paid to sponsored patients whilst overseas. At present, the patient and escort receive a daily allowance of £15, which increases to £23 when the patient is admitted. This will now change to a flat rate of £25 per day.

Mr Speaker, at the GHA we are entirely committed to training our staff to the highest standard and to this end we have embarked on a programme to establish and embed clinical governance structures and procedures in the GHA. Various essential committees have been established at the GHA, all of which will contribute to the effective running of the organisation and ensure quality, patient safety and patient choice.

For me, the very heart of clinical governance must necessarily come from the feedback we receive from patients. In this respect, it is relevant to note that the GHA recently took on board all of the recommendations from the investigations carried out by the Ombudsman in his 2017 report. Many of these complaints could have been resolved quickly and efficiently by the GHA, and we failed our patients in not having done so. For every time we have failed anyone, Mr Speaker, I have no hesitation in sincerely apologising, for the GHA belongs to all of us and the systems we are trying so very hard to embed are to ensure that the system works immaculately for every single one of us. If I have said it once, I have said it a hundred times and I will never tire of saying it, that we must attend to each patient as though they were our own family and attend to every person as though they were our own flesh and blood. If we do not, the GHA will have to hear from me every time, until I stop receiving justified complaints.

As from January 2018, following the Ombudsman's recommendations, the GHA Patient Advocacy and Liaison Service reverted to its original system and handles all complaints in the first instance with the aim of providing a positive outcome before a formal complaint is filed. This change has already resulted in a staggering 40% decrease in the number of formal complaints in the first quarter of this year, compared to the same comparable period in 2016. In circumstances where the PALS service is unable to find a satisfactory solution, they themselves will register the formal complaint with the Office of the Ombudsman, even if the patient does not do so. Our patients, of course, can still continue to complain directly to the Office of the Ombudsman, entirely circumventing the GHA. This is because we are keen to receive advice on improvements in an open and transparent manner. We will never learn unless we act on warranted complaints.

Mr Speaker, I turn to bed management and whether or not it is possible, as I always maintained from the benches opposite, for not a single operation to be cancelled due to the lack of beds. The former administration certainly thought it was a fool's errand to even try. Let me remind the House of the charming, soft and kind advice provided to me in Parliament by the former administration. I quote:

What will the Government

– the GSD –

do to ensure that operations never have to be cancelled due to bed shortages?

Answer, 'Nothing':

There is nothing that the Government can do to ensure that no operation will ever have to be cancelled because of bed shortages. Not in the GHA, not in the UK, not in the NASA Space Centre and not in the Houston Medical Centre. Nowhere.

The Hon. Minister, realising that perhaps the words were a little bit bruising for the young Member, decided to sweeten the concluding statement by saying:

When the hon. Member

– that is I –

has a slightly better, broader and deeper understanding of the health service about which he waxes lyrical at the moment, he will understand that it is a nonsense to call for a guarantee that no operation will be cancelled due to bed shortage.

1100 These were the words and the actions of the GSD. Well, Mr Speaker, this hon. Member, who has a bad, narrow and shallow understanding of the Health Service, has ensured that not one single operation – not one – has been cancelled because of bed shortages since 11th January last year, not even three months into his new post. But of course to achieve the seemingly impossible, one at the very least has to try, which the former administration self-evidently did not. It may be one of the numerous reasons why we were elected with a fulsome 70% of our brothers' and sisters' votes, and given that Members opposite may win the election in 20 years' time or so, they will have sufficient time to ponder these facts and their abject failure in this important area.

1115 More recently, our greatly enhanced bed management system, which incorporates weekly multidisciplinary and multiagency bed management meetings, packages of care in the community, hospital-based social workers and our new rehabilitation ward, has yielded remarkable results. In this respect I feel it is important to quickly provide the House with the statistics to illustrate the effectiveness of the new measures.

1120 There were 52 long-stay elderly patients prior to the transfer to Hillside. Following the transfer on 10th and 11th June, we had a total of 26 confirmed long-stay patients in St Bernard's. Following the second transfer of long-stay patients to the third floor of John Mackintosh Wing on 17th and 19th April of this year, we actually had an increase in the total number of confirmed long-stay patients to 29. In other words, despite 66 additional beds in bespoke residential facilities designed, built and opened by this Government, we still had 29 elderly patients at St Bernard's Hospital, confirming what I had said, that additional bed availability has to work hand in glove with fulsome rehabilitation efforts. Consequently, with the active ongoing early identification of potential complex frail elderly discharges, the ongoing active management of packages of care and the multi-disciplinary team rehabilitation service commenced in Captain Murchison Ward, we currently stand at the entirely reasonable number of 11 long-stay elderly patients in St Bernard's Hospital without having added any more residential home beds.

1130 In this area I must therefore confess that even I am truly impressed by the fruits of our efforts. As at 17th June of this year, on average, bed availability has been 70 beds every single night, with a high of 77 available beds on two occasions in June. This represents a profound and remarkable turnaround in the bed availability in the Hospital and is one of our proudest achievements to date. This has required very hard work and dedication by all members of the GHA ERS staff and extends to other agencies, including the Care Agency. I am very proud, therefore, of every single member of my teams and I am sure that the whole House will wish to commend their excellent work.

1140 Mr Speaker, I turn to the School of Health Studies, which continues to provide a wide range of educational activities across the GHA and which has a special place in my heart as it allows our people to work whilst studying for their dream careers. It is right that we should do all that we can to nurture our community to pursue their passions, and few careers require such dedication, commitment, compassion and competence as nursing. From the caring, gentle touch and kind word to highly skilled competence, nurses are the engines of any health setting and we are proud to be investing significantly in our different nursing grades.

1145 The School of Health Studies offers three-year degree programmes in conjunction with St George's University of London and Kingston University London. Our students study full time at home, undertaking both clinical and theoretical teaching in various care areas. The programmes on offer include a BSc (Hons) in Adult Nursing. In addition, the School of Health Studies delivers 1150 Enrolled Nurse courses, Diploma Higher Education Nursing, and MSc Leadership and Management for Health Care Practice, in collaboration with Pearson Edexcel, St George's University of London, Kingston and the University of Salford. An extensive variety of programmes on continuing professional development is also delivered to staff at the School of Health Studies.

1155 Graduation ceremonies have taken place with the largest number of nursing graduates receiving awards in Gibraltar. All 14 pre-registration students graduated, with four achieving first-class honours. In addition, a further 10 professionals attained the level of BSc in Health Care Practice. Twelve enrolled nurses and members of staff from Occupational Therapy also received their QCF level 3 award, along with 17 healthcare assistants who received the Health and Social 1160 Care QCF level 2 award.

Mr Speaker, the following programme represents a personal coup for me, as I was continually told that it was impossible to deliver this degree at the School of Health Studies. Nothing lights a fire more under me to get something done than to hear the words that it is impossible to do – or, far worse, that it cannot be done because it has never been done before. (Hon. Chief 1165 Minister: Hear, hear.) As a result, it is with great personal satisfaction that I note to the House that the GHA will introduce a BSc Mental Health Nursing programme. The degree represents another exciting and hugely welcome milestone for Gibraltar, as this will be the very first time that a mental health nursing programme will be offered. The programme is being introduced to meet the needs of the ever-growing mental health care services in which the Government have, 1170 and continue, to invest.

Even further, Mr Speaker, the Care Agency is inviting applications for a three-year, full-time BA (Hons) course in Social Work, which will be delivered here on the Rock. This is also the very first time that a degree course in social work will be delivered. To this end, the Care Agency has been working with the Gibraltar School of Health Studies, Kingston University London and 1175 St George's University of London. In this respect it would be remiss of me not to thank my hon. colleague Miss Sacramento for having pressed me on this very matter. (Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear.)

Mr Speaker, I now turn to finance. As hon. Members know, the 2017-18 outturn for the GHA is £120.4 million, an increase of £1.9 million over the previous year. In 2017-18 we were – highly 1180 regrettably, although not for lack of trying – unable to meet our target, as some of the cost savings measures took effect late in the financial year. Let me tell the Hon. Mr Clinton that I feel the sting of the failure to come within budget far more keenly than he enjoyed pointing it out to me.

During the 2017-18 financial year, monthly financial meetings were held, where all main budget holders met with my hon. colleague, Freeman of the City of Gibraltar and Knight 1185 Commander Sir Joe Bossano, to action initiatives to manage our debt. These meetings proved enlightening and have had a positive effect on the managing of issues. The GHA will now establish subcommittees accountable to the main budget committee to obtain even more probity and value for money on expenditure. Historically, as the Hon. Mr Clinton knows, the GHA has increased its annual spend by circa 9.10% year on year. Without the positive influence of these meetings, therefore, the GHA would have certainly expended circa £130.7 million in this financial year. We have therefore drastically curtailed the historical over expenditure trend by circa £10 million and have only had a 1.25% increase on the 2016-17 financial end actuals. Not 1190 what I hoped to achieve, Mr Speaker, but certainly nothing to sneeze at.

1195 Further, it is important to highlight that in the context of the expenditure from the Consolidated Fund, the overall increase 2016-17 to 2017-18 was £14.6 million, of which the GHA only accounted for £1.7 million, demonstrating the effectiveness of the measures taken.

From a total of 41 other non-pay related recurrent accounts with an overall total approved budget of £50.9 million, 26% is allocated to GPMS, 28% is allocated to Sponsored Patients and a 1200 further 10% to the repayment of the lease and leaseback arrangement for St Bernard's Hospital at a recurring annual amount of £4.8 million. The remaining 36% of other non-pay related recurrent accounts is distributed amongst other clinical and patient demand-led budgets, with drugs and pharmaceuticals accounting for circa £4 million; this increase being mainly due to the high cost of chemotherapy medication.

1205 Mr Speaker, it is my pleasure to now turn to describe some of the more noteworthy advances in mental health. As the House will recall, the Crisis and Outreach Service was introduced within the Community Mental Health Team. The reform introduced an additional and very much needed tier of support for community patients outside normal hours.

1210 In conjunction with my colleague the Hon. Minister for Housing, whom I thank, the first supported accommodation initiative has been introduced. This initiative assists patients, previously admitted to hospital, to live independently.

1215 Mr Speaker, it gives me the greatest personal satisfaction to announce that a new and much needed service in the form of locally available Clinical Psychology for Children and Families is being set up to meet the increasing and expanding demands of children. It is envisaged that when at its full capacity this service, which will start in October, will be able to address the mental health needs of all of our children population and their families right here at home. The new Child Psychology team will be an integral part of the GHA Paediatric Neurodisability Service to ensure that all children, especially those with additional needs, are afforded timely and effective professional engagement by the comprehensive GHA Paediatric Multidisciplinary Neurodisability team. The Child Psychology team will also assist in the development of locally relevant, individualised care plans for children and their families, and to help all children be the happiest and healthiest they can be, and so growing up to be productive and valued members of our community.

1220 In summary, Mr Speaker, what my GHA teams have achieved in the last financial year I think is nothing short of remarkable, especially when we consider that we have spent virtually the same as the 2016-17 financial year, yet we have significantly increased the number of clinical staff, we have repatriated more and more services, meaning Gibraltarians can now access services locally, joint replacement operations have almost tripled, there have been no cancelled surgeries due to lack of beds and we have maintained sustained bed availability in St Bernard's Hospital. Moreover, as I had the privilege to recently announce in this House, we have achieved significant and hugely welcome reductions in all but one of our surgical waiting lists and are working hard to bring that laggard into line. All of this has been achieved by investing in our most valuable commodity, our excellent workforce, which is led by clinicians who are developing, empowering and supporting staff to carry out their work to the highest possible standard.

1235 In this important respect I take the opportunity to remind the House that the staffing levels at the GHA, of direct employment, have increased under this Government's term of office by 223.5 posts, ensuring the safest provision of care for all of the services repatriated. This is in addition to the expansion of our visiting consultant programme and the increase in the provision of existing services such as the Douglas Ferro Haemodialysis Unit, which now provides services from three days to six days per week, and the newly inaugurated Lionel Perez Cardiac Rehabilitation Centre, which boasts entirely new equipment and a refreshed and invigorated programme, all of which has already been announced. The GHA has also connected with other Government agencies such as the Care Agency, Education, Housing and Rehabilitation to provide truly holistic care to the people we serve.

1240 I am firmly of the view that the incredibly hard work carried out by the GHA staff in the last year, the return of the matrons to ensure the highest clinical and other standards on the ward floors, and the substantive leadership restructures at the GHA are but the beginning of a series of improvements. It has been my extremely good fortune to be surrounded by such excellent professionals.

I also wish to place on the record my most sincere thanks to the Hon. the Chief Minister and Deputy Chief Minister and the Hon. Sir Joe for the countless calls, emails and meetings they have afforded to me in which they have provided me with their invaluable advice and support. I thank all of them and I am sure the whole House will also wish to thank the excellent professionals at the GHA.

1255

Mr Speaker, I turn to the Care Agency's Social Services, and I start with Adult Services. The overall aim of Adult Services is to provide the highest possible standards of service to those adults who are vulnerable as a result of health or social care needs.

During the 2017-18 financial year, Adult Social Services received 847 referrals for social work and support, an increase of 240 referrals from the previous financial year.

Domiciliary care continues to be provided to assist vulnerable or elderly people at home. A new and robust reviewing system is in place to ensure care is provided to those in need. The implementation of this reviewing system has seen 390 individuals receive a package of care this year. This is an increase of 127 persons from the previous financial year with no increase to the budget.

The implementation of a social work team made up of two social workers and a social work assistant based at St Bernard's Hospital has resulted in a total of 83 patients having been discharged with packages of care to support their rehabilitation and recovery. In turn, this has helped prevent failed discharges by ensuring persons can remain at home with the support they require.

The Waterport Day Centre continues to provide an excellent and popular service to around 88 of our elderly citizens weekly, who have been involved in a range of different community events organised by the Centre's loving, kind and dynamic team.

Safeguarding awareness continues to increase year on year. In the last financial year, 41 referrals in respect of a range of different alleged abuse of vulnerable people were received and assessed. Additionally, training has been offered to safeguarding lead managers and investigating officers across the Care Agency and the GHA.

Expertise and specialism continues to develop in the area of work with people who sexually offend. The Adult Social Service has received training in working with partners of individuals who commit sexual offences. This is because partners of sexual offenders can be positive influences in their lives and help reduce the risk of reoffending. Additional training has been provided in working with individuals with learning disabilities who display behaviours of concern.

1280

Further, developments have been made in the area of working with people with learning disabilities at the risk of being sexually exploited. Training and case consultation was provided in February 2018 using the Signs of Safety model. This model will be extended to vulnerable adults within the community in this financial year.

Mr Speaker, I turn to talk about the work undertaken by the Child Protection Committee, which is responsible for co-ordinating with relevant organisations how they should best work together to safeguard and promote the welfare of children and young people and ensure that agencies provide an effective service. The Committee analyses trends in children's safeguarding issues to advise the Government on the development of appropriate services and resources.

To ensure the Child Protection Committee's ongoing professional development, the Care Agency organised their annual training. Over 50 practitioners attended.

The Child Protection Committee has generated awareness on the dangers of sexting, and it is envisaged all schools will receive presentations before the summer break.

Children's Services comprise a number of different services, providing for children and their families when in need of protection or support. As part of our manifesto pledges, the Family and Community Centre was inaugurated on 27th September 2017. This centre is a facility for our community, which aims to intervene and support families as early as possible. Since the opening of the Family and Community Centre there has been a steady increase in the development of different programmes and activities taking place for children and families, which are in line with the overall strategies for the Children's Service. These sessions have aimed to provide a welcoming and inclusive atmosphere where older children and young people are encouraged to take part in problem solving, activities and meaningful debates. The main focus during these sessions has been to provide children and young people with a space where they can be exposed to learning, self-awareness and develop community spirit.

1305

Mr Speaker, as the House knows, the Disability Service is made up of St Bernadette's Resource Centre, Dr Giraldi Home and several flats in the community. The service places great importance in ensuring its staff is equipped with the expertise and skills to meet the needs of its service users, and is continually committed in ensuring any training undertaken is specific to the learning requirements of its service users.

1310

The Disability Service ensures the highest standards of care for their service users, which ensures that all aspects of the person's care are considered and it combines both the medical and social care model.

1315

The Disability Service provides different types of accommodation to its residents according to their needs. Some of these properties are within the main residential services in Dr Giraldi Home, and others are flats in the community. Again, in this area the Disability Service works with their stakeholders, such as the Housing Department, so as to provide refurbishments in line with residents' needs.

1320

The person with disabilities is a person first and the disability does not define them. The Disability Service understands and promotes this; therefore, working in a multi-disciplinary manner is essential, as is working in partnership with other stakeholders. As such, the service has created an across-agency therapist committee and pathways of scope for services formed by occupational therapists, physiotherapists and other relevant practitioners in order to work together.

Mr Speaker, I am very proud of the achievements of all the Care Agency teams and the incredibly hard work by my social care professionals who care so passionately for our community. From me to all of them, and I am sure on behalf of the House, thank you.

It is with pleasure that I turn to ERS. An Elderly Residential Services Medical Team has been formed. This consists of a consultant geriatrician together with three GPs who visit ERS every weekday. This allows residents to receive an enhanced continuity of care by a familiar clinician and aims at reducing house calls by GPs from the Primary Care Centre.

The ERS nursing management together with the ERS medical team have reviewed and updated the existing minimum standards for residential and dementia care homes in Gibraltar. An inspectorate made up of senior nursing staff has been established and is tasked with visiting each of the sites. The inspectorate will seek to identify where there is room for improvement and ensure that any remedial intervention is undertaken. In June, an occupational therapist was employed to provide occupational therapy services across the ERS to meet the needs of the residents with the intention of improving quality of life and independence.

1335

Mr Speaker, the House will recall that earlier this year the ERS was able to open an additional floor at the John Mackintosh Home. The fully refurbished and dementia-friendly floor has resulted in capacity increasing from 54 to 70 residents. The Home boasts spectacular views, spacious bedrooms and common areas. The increase in capacity has also resulted in the releasing of beds at St Bernard's Hospital which will now be available for acute or planned admissions.

1340

We will shortly be implementing the outstanding parts of the Dementia Strategy and Vision. Some of these objectives of course have already been met, such as the opening of the new facilities, additional bed capacity, training on dementia, transferring dementia patients from an acute hospital to a dementia-friendly environment, dementia awareness and introducing dementia training to non-healthcare groups.

1350

In respect of Hillside and the Bella Vista Day Centre, whilst at these facilities service users are visited by a GP from the ERS medical team, staff from the Joint Memory Clinic, psychiatrists and associated healthcare professionals. These interventions mean, of course, that whereas previously a person living with dementia may have had to be admitted into hospital in a crisis, 1355 their situation can be effectively managed in their own homes with the support from a network of healthcare professionals and their own families.

Mr Speaker, I turn now to my Justice portfolio and I will commence with the Royal Gibraltar Police. The RGP has embedded its restructure, yet continues to reconfigure itself to meet existing and emerging challenges such as those posed by terrorism, which has led to the creation of an Armed Response Unit from existing resources. The ARU boasts a cadre of dedicated officers whose training and specialisations have increased to previously unachievable levels. A more insidious threat is that posed by cybercrime and the Government fully supports the RGP's efforts in this domain.

The RGP continues to invest in Gibraltar's future and therefore has maintained its school liaison officers. These officers continue to work closely with schools, youth clubs and other youth organisations. They deliver presentations to age groups, covering a broad range of subjects such as cyber bullying, sexting and drugs awareness. These officers are afforded specialist training and are regularly seconded to the RGP's Safeguarding Unit to deal with child abuse cases.

During the last financial year, the RGP increased its resources in this business financial area creating separate departments, the Financial Crime Investigation Unit and the Money Laundering Investigation Unit, that jointly make up the Economic Crime Unit. This unit is also developing a terrorism financing investigation capability.

The RGP's budget allocation in training has been substantially increased and has enabled the RGP to represent Gibraltar at international conferences across a variety of policing disciplines. The knowledge gained and the contacts established have served the organisation, and of course [inaudible] Gibraltar, well. Where possible, the RGP has identified and trained RGP instructors who can then deliver training locally at zero cost.

Following successful training, the RGP now has two fully trained crime scene managers. This, together with its increased pool of senior investigating officers, further enhances the Force's ability and resilience to deal with major crime scene investigations. In addition, these officers have now benefitted from training in post-bomb scene management, further expanding their skills set.

Government has made a considerable investment of over £165,000 to purchase the Livescan equipment and software that scans fingerprints electronically. This has improved exchange of information with other law enforcement agencies and the interrogation of external databases, enhancing the RGP's ability to perform effectively.

In sum, therefore, and whilst it is fair to say that Government's investment has served to enhance policing services, what is of inestimable value to our community is the capacity and capability we are building in our police services. A central tenet of policing, and indeed their core role, is the protection of life and property. Government's view is that our continued investment in this key pillar of society will enable the men and women of the Royal Gibraltar Police to continue to effectively do their jobs and keep safe the community they are a part of and serve. I am sure Members on both sides of the House will join me in expressing pride in our policing services.

In respect of our excellent judiciary, during 2018 the Rt. Hon. Sir John Laws was appointed as a new Justice of Appeal, increasing the complement of the Court of Appeal from five to six members. This increase will allow for more flexibility when forming a bench for our Court of Appeal sessions. Further, there continues to be no backlog at the Magistrates and Supreme Courts in respect of dates provided for criminal trials and for civil and family applications waiting for first hearing dates. As I have previously noted in the House, I continuously and closely consult the Hon. the Chief Justice so that, should the need arise, extra judicial resources can be put in place. I repeat once again, Mr Speaker, that as to date no such request has been submitted.

On 25th September Government engaged a Legal Profession Supervision Officer to work with the Registrar of the Supreme Court primarily on anti-money laundering and countering terrorist financing issues. This is a short-term appointment as the functions this officer is exercising will in 1410 due course be taken over by the Legal Services Regulatory Authority. On 1st November the Registrar issued guidance notes on anti-money laundering and combatting the financing of terrorism systems. There followed outreach programmes organised by the Legal Profession Supervision Officer and engagement with the profession in preparation for the Moneyval evaluation which will take place next year and which is being led by my colleague and indomitable workhorse the Minister for Commerce, the Hon. Albert Isola.

1415 The Gibraltar Courts Service continues to look at ways in which to improve their services and level of performance, supporting the judiciary and the legal profession, working with other stakeholders within the justice system to maintain a solid administrative structure through which the public can have access to a timely and efficient justice system.

I take this opportunity to thank our veritably independent judiciary, the Hon. the Chief Justice, the Hon. Supreme Court Justices and Registrar, our learned Stipendiary Magistrate and our Justices of the Peace for daily upholding the rule of law.

1420 Mr Speaker, I turn to matters regarding legislation. It has actually proved to be an incredibly busy year in terms of the primary and secondary legislation enacted. As a result, I have selected a hugely reduced number of enactments as no more than a flavour of the work that has been undertaken in this area.

1425 In February, Parliament passed the Proceeds of Crime (Amendment) Act. This Act expands the definition of 'unlawful conduct' within the Proceeds of Crime Act 2015 to include behaviour outside of Gibraltar by a public official, which constitutes gross human rights abuses of a person on the grounds that they have been obtaining, exercising, defending or promoting human rights or have sought to expose gross human rights abuses conducted by a public official, the so-called Magnitsky amendment. Any property obtained through this conduct will be subject to the existing civil recovery powers. This was in addition to a first set of amendments to the Proceeds of Crime Act, which updated our money laundering offences and made provision for moratorium periods, which may be extended by the court in respect of suspicious transactions.

1430 February also saw the publication of the Public Health (Human Tissues, Cells and Organs) (Amendment) Regulations, which makes provisions for Gibraltar residents to be able to register as organ donors. The UK transplant team will be contacted as soon as a potential organ donor is identified in Gibraltar, and this will allow for organs to be allocated to recipients on the UK transplant list. The UK transplant list also includes Gibraltarians.

1435 Following on from the work of my colleague the Hon. Minister for Employment and the Bar Council, this past year also saw the passing of the Legal Services Act, which represents the first major reform in this area for 50 years and ensures that our jurisdiction's legal profession is subject to more effective regulation. The Hon. the Chief Justice and the Bar Council are working hard to ensure that this Act may be commenced as soon as possible.

1440 In April of this year the Lasting Powers of Attorney and Capacity Act came into operation, making provision for lasting powers of attorney, advance decisions and introducing safeguards once mental capacity has been lost. The Act represents a paradigm shift as to decision making and to the care and treatment of those individuals who lack capacity. This legal framework empowers and protects those who cannot make specific decisions for themselves. It works hand in hand with the continuous efforts of the Government in increasing the awareness, early diagnosis and care for those with mental health issues and dementia. We must ensure that vulnerable adults are afforded, at a minimum, a certain level of protection. In turn, patients and their families will have greater peace of mind knowing that a person's wishes will be respected.

1445 In April, a Bill for a new Act to establish the office of Director of Public Prosecutions in Gibraltar was published. This is in accordance with one of the Government's key manifesto pledges, and I very much look forward to debating the Bill in this sitting of Parliament.

1450 Mr Speaker, the House will also recall that it voted unanimously to establish the Law Commission to receive and consider proposals for the reform of the law. The Law Commission is comprised of myself as the Minister with responsibility for Justice and HM Attorney General as ex officio members, together with a panel of highly distinguished and high-calibre local experts in different fields such as education, the environment, financial services and the law.

1460 The Law Commission is presently engaged in examining eligibility for parole licences, which in Gibraltar is usually possible after one third of a custodial sentence has been served, and whether 1465 the maximum sentence available in respect of certain offences in Gibraltar should be amended or local guidelines issued in this respect, so as to take account of differences between the UK and Gibraltar. These areas that the Commission is tasked to look into are matters in which I have
1470 a particular and personal interest and which I know the public in Gibraltar are also keen should be properly and fully examined. At our last meeting, the Law Commission received evidence 1475 from the Prison Board, the Probation Service and the Parole Board, and I wish to record my sincere thanks for their time and contributions, as well as my thanks to the Law Commissioners for also giving freely of their time on, I think, such an important endeavour.

1480 Mr Speaker, it is with great personal satisfaction to note that Government and the Bar Council agreed the reforms to the legal assistance regime, which were the subject of detailed discussions with the Bar Council and other stakeholders and are, in my view, a correct balancing between the need to significantly improve access to justice by increasing eligibility for legal assistance with the need to ensure that taxpayers' money is not used to fund unreasonable 1485 cases. We have increased the thresholds for financial eligibility, raising the £5,000 limit for earnings to over £14,000 and increased the capital amounts that may be held by applicants from £500 to £10,000 and allowing the first £50,000 of equity a person has in their property to also be disregarded when working out capital owned. I have no doubt that this entirely new legal framework will decisively and significantly increase access to justice to members of our 1490 community who most need it. Further, the introduction of the Duty Legal Representative Scheme, which will commence in October, will secure advice and representation to persons in custody 24 hours, seven days a week, thus guaranteeing arrested persons' human rights.

1495 Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Law Officers are currently under more pressure than ever because quite apart from the usual volume of work and converting the relevant Government pledges into legislative frameworks, they have to contend with the legislative realities of Brexit that the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister detailed. I wish to therefore thank them for their continuous dedication.

1500 It has thankfully, I am sure hon. Members will agree, been another uneventful year for HM Prison. The Prison Board continues to report a mostly relaxed atmosphere observed during their monthly inspections. Statistics in respect of prisoners' minor offences remain static at about

1510 Last year, on average, 23% of the Prison population attended educational classes, 32% made use of the gymnasium and 17% attended vocational classes. Inmates also made good use of the two counsellors available to them and attended Narcotics Anonymous meetings with regularity. Ministers of the various religious denominations visited the Prison weekly and offered spiritual support and guidance to prisoners. Indeed, religious educational classes were popular and attended by a quarter of the population.

1515 Additional initiatives commenced over the last 12 months include meetings with the senior management at the Department of Employment with a view to identifying and encouraging potential employers to offer employment to those leaving prison, affording stability and financial support to ex-offenders and contributing to the reduction of the reoffending rate. I am pleased to note that already one employer has come forward and engaged positively with this 1520 initiative, offering offenders an opportunity, with 12 offenders already having taken his offer of employment. Given the difficulties encountered by ex-offenders in such a small community, it is extremely gratifying to see such efforts being made, and the hope, of course, is that more employers will come forward in due course. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

1510 HM Prison is working closely with the Careers Section within the Department of Employment in support of individuals, identifying not just existing employment opportunities, but further training potential in the private sector. In addition, the Department of Economic Development continues to provide a framework in which training and employment opportunities can take place, including the provision of a counsellor for HM Prison. Further, those prisoners nearing 1515 release are also offered an employability skills workshop together with face-to-face life coaching, enabling them to gain insights and clarity towards their future goals, an intervention that not only unlocks human potential but also prepares them for the working world. The management team of the Prison Service very much welcomes the early intervention strategy and is happy to facilitate potential employers through the Department of Employment with face-to-face interviews with those nearing the end of their terms in custody with a view to 1520 offering gainful and meaningful employment within our community. Relatedly, during the last 18 months a total of nine individuals had drug testing imposed as a condition of their parole licences.

The Prison is also trialling the use of tablets for prisoners. This exciting project has been made possible by the ongoing partnership between the Prison and a UK provider of specialist 1525 equipment for use in prisons. These electronic tablets contain a wide variety of rehabilitation tools, inclusive of full educational courses in subjects such as mathematics, English, ICT and personal development. Inspirational videos, books and other material on a variety of topics, including health and nutrition, sport and preparing for employment, are included. An early survey of the trial showed that 78% engaged in learning, 67% engaged in personal development, 1530 56% in maths, 44% in preparing for employment and 44% in ICT.

It is envisaged that the next stage of the trial will provide for the infrastructure works necessary to allow for remote connectivity and also for a greater number of prisoners to be involved. Such connectivity will also allow for prisoners to directly interact with relevant departments in the Prison when confined to cells. For example, prisoners would be able to 1535 report a fault directly to the workshop department, or book an appointment with healthcare, or indeed make a complaint. It is a fine example of how technology can improve the lives of those in custody and indeed increase transparency and accountability of prison management.

Mr Speaker, it also gives me the greatest pleasure to report to this House that one of the salient issues for the service over this coming year is the implementation of the recently 1540 conducted resources review. Prison management has been working holistically with staff and union representatives over the last three years to discuss and address historical issues. In this financial year, selection boards have been held and five prison officers selected to start. The resource injection will allow for a safer environment, better training opportunities for officers and also facilitate the introduction of new programmes. This might include control and restraint 1545 training, effective searching procedures and general jail craft. The additional resources should also allow for better training in respect of specialisation.

Prison management remains committed to the ongoing rehabilitation of offenders, with a view to breaking the reoffending cycle and successfully reintegrating offenders back into society.
I thank the Prison Superintendent, his deputy and all our prison officers for their magnificent 1550 work. They truly represent the best of the public service, self-effacingly carrying out their duties with dignity and commitment.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Members opposite will not believe me, but when I had finished writing my speech I had hardly mentioned them at all. Then, as happens every year, I listen to their contributions and I feel duty bound to reply to some of their more outlandish comments.

1555 The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition says that the Hon. the Chief Minister is ignoring domestic matters on the altar of the excuse of Brexit. This is a Big Lie, Mr Speaker. In the first place, as the third Leader of the Opposition after Sir Peter Caruana, I appreciate that he needs to position himself slightly to the right of the kaiser in order to galvanise the social conservative grassroots of the GSD. I do not think that GSD diehards will forget any time soon that he stood 1560 with the PDP that ensured that the GSD lost the election in 2011. It is not, as the hon.

Gentleman likes to say, an exaggeration or a myth to so suggest. That is a big lie. It occurs to me, Mr Speaker, that these days, to succeed and to rise to the very top of the GSD like froth, one must have first inflicted the most serious wounds imaginable on the party they represent. On Messieurs Azzopardi and Phillips, assisting in relegating the GSD not just to Opposition but to almost extinction – the hon. Lady may well lead them to political oblivion – they are not only welcomed back, but they have taken over the GSD lock, stock and barrel.

The Hon. Mr Llamas, who walked out of the GSD to become an independent, is rewarded by being appointed shadow important Government responsibilities. It is not a criticism of Mr Llamas, of course. Good for him for wangling his way back in to such important responsibilities – although I do reserve judgement and the right to comment should he vote against the Budget in this financial year. I say this, as only this year Mr Llamas was unequivocal that it was wrong to vote against the Budget. The Hon. Mr Llamas had to say this on the matter, and I quote:

It was my view, Mr Speaker, at the time that I had to put Gibraltar first and my party second. It was my view that voting against the Budget, however much I agree with the arguments put in favour, Gibraltar in the context of a Brexit backdrop needs to unite. Mr Speaker, Gibraltar at this point in time, needs parliamentarians to have faith and to support the Government of the day and to show a vote of confidence in Gibraltar, in its economy, in its workers and in its public service. Mr Speaker, unfortunately the main Opposition Party, the GSD failed to realise the implications of their actions or lack thereof.

Eloquent words, Mr Speaker, with which we entirely agree.

In any case, it is a nonsense to suggest that either the Hon. the Chief Minister or the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister are ignoring the people of Gibraltar because of Brexit. It is quite the reverse, in fact. It is in order to secure the prosperity, the security and the stability of Gibraltar and the well-being of her community – them included – that our leaders are so almost single-mindedly dedicated in making sure they get Brexit exactly right. It is to get right the most fundamental question facing the people of Gibraltar today that the Hon. the Chief Minister and Deputy Chief Minister are working so hard, so efficiently and effectively, to make sure that the day after Brexit and the generation thereafter can all continue to enjoy today's prosperity, security and stability. No one can doubt their unceasing multi-faceted, multi-layered and multi-tracked diplomatic, lobbying, political and official endeavours in making absolutely certain that Gibraltar's position is at the very centre of the UK's negotiating position. The UK government's many reassurances to the people of Gibraltar are a matter of record and self-evidently the fruit of their labours. Only yesterday, as if to prove my point, the UK Prime Minister herself stated such commitments in the House of Commons. I have no doubt that Members opposite would have howled their disapproval if our leaders had not achieved such clear and unequivocal commitments to our country.

One thing, however, is clear, Mr Speaker, and that is that Members opposite will say whatever they think will afford them any political advantage whatsoever, and the last almost seven years is littered with the many inherently contradictory policy positions of the GSD, some of which I will expose now. The electorate, however, will not forgive them for putting petty party politics – the dreaded three p's – above the national interest. I, for one, am grateful to the Hon. the Chief Minister and the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister, as I dare say are the vast majority of Gibraltarians, whether they voted for us or not.

In any case, it is preposterous to say that the Hon. the Chief Minister is ignoring domestic matters because of Brexit. What on earth does the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition think that Ministers do? What does the Hon. Mr Phillips think I do every day, if not to serve the public in my areas of responsibility? This office, Mr Speaker, is not full time: it is all the time. Although, of course, the Members' opposite accusation does make perfect sense if one considers that after 16 years of leadership under Sir Peter it would simply have been inconceivable for any of them to have done anything without the imprimatur of the then emperor. The many reforms that I have announced in my areas of responsibility alone, some of which I have set out today, are 1610 more than ample proof that our leadership here today trust their colleagues to work on their areas of responsibility and achieve the Government's pledges. But in any case, even still they are wrong, because notwithstanding their constant travel in our national interest, there has not been one single occasion where the Hon. Chief Minister and Deputy Chief Minister have not

1615 Further, Mr Speaker, I could not believe my ears when the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition said that we are 'failing to address the concerns of the vulnerable'. That, surely, is the Big Lie. Has he not read of the increased amounts appropriated in this financial year for elderly care, social care, the Royal Gibraltar Police and the judiciary? Has he not read in the Estimates the 1620 millions of pounds being rightly spent on the most vulnerable in our community? Has he missed the statements on the opening of the Bella Vista Day Centre, Hillside Residential Home, the new floor at John Macintosh Home, the packages of care and home support for the most vulnerable in our community? Is he unaware that more than ever of our cherished elderly receive packages of care at home under this Government? Is he unaware of the excellent work conducted by our care workers and our social workers, who are taking care of our looked after children and our wonderful community at Dr Giraldo Home and St Bernadette's Centre?

1625 The statement that we fail to address the concerns of the vulnerable is as disingenuous as it is lacking in any thoughtful analysis. And in any case, all of this frankly is a waste of time. Surely the accusation does not lie in the mouth of Members opposite, as they have for the second consecutive year voted against the appropriations of moneys to pay for doctors, for allied health professionals, for nurses of all grades, for carers, for social workers, for domestic, industrial and catering staff and all the other panoply of professionals that are necessary to take care of the vulnerable, whom he falsely alleged we do not take care of. How does the Member opposite think – how do they think – that we can take care of one vulnerable person, let alone an entire 1630 community if we decided to dock their salaries? It is rather as if having voted for the Budget for the past five years and to have voted for the Budget to pay for doctors, they have walked into the surgery of one of the doctors, disagreed with the manner in which they are doing their surgery and decided to dock their pay.

1635 Mr Speaker, it is just not serious politics. I can well understand that they cannot possibly agree on every single item of Government spending, of course not; but surely they do agree that we need the entire range of resources to safeguard, to protect and to take care of our vulnerable. If they agree that they are necessary – and how could they not? – then by voting against the Budget they are saying they are not willing to pay for their salaries. It is that simple.

1640 The logical course – and I do appreciate that trying to elicit common sense from Members opposite is a fool's errand – is to vote in favour of the appropriations to keep on the ventilating machines at St Bernard's Hospital, among many other essentials, and set out the reasons why they disagree with any item of expenditure. And it is not I who says so only; it is the Hon. Mr Llamas, who so eloquently exposed the position of the Government only in February of this year, as if they would have done what they have done every year, except last year, except that 1645 the Hon. Mr Phillips' analysis was singularly and spectacularly bereft of any analysis, instead relying on wildly unsupported generalisations such as the unbelievably facile and utterly offensive statement that we are failing to address the concerns of the vulnerable.

1650 I will, of course, with the keenest reluctance, email paragraph 15 of his statement to every nurse, to every doctor, to every allied health professional, to every carer, to every social worker and to every police officer, so that it is made clear beyond peradventure, beyond any shadow of a doubt, that Members opposite think that they are failing the vulnerable. Or does he think that I and Members here actually go and administer IV drips to those who need our care? Does he not know that our job here is to vote for the appropriations of money, to allow the professionals to do their jobs, and get out of their way? Without the dosh, they cannot do the job. (A Member: 1655 Hear, hear.)

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Excellent. Excellent. Excellent.

Hon. E J Phillips: You might need [inaudible].

1660 Hon. N F Costa: It is they, Mr Speaker, therefore, who have failed our most deserving vulnerable members of the community. Let that be on their conscience, if they have any left.

1665 And his statement, of course, cannot be trusted or construed in any other way, because if Government is increasing the moneys that we spend on our wonderful professionals, if we are increasing their numbers, if we are increasing services, how can the hon. Member say that we are neglecting the vulnerable? It can only mean that it is to say that our professionals are not discharging their functions properly. The failure by the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition to afford this House any substantive analysis of what hon. Members opposite would do differently is compounded by the impossibility to divine the reasons for voting against the Budget, other than for cheap political theatrics. That is the Big Lie, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks) (A Member: Hear, hear.) (A Member: Absolutely.)

1670 At paragraph 32 of his speech, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition could not resist to briefly alight on the GHA action, notwithstanding the footage, thankfully recorded for posterity, of a Unite the Union official being less than circumspect in the language he used against some members of the GSD who shamelessly decided to politicise the action and who admonished them for trying to use industrial relations for less than noble partisan ends. Naturally, their actions backfired.

1675 Any suggestion that this Government would be involved in privatising the GHA or any aspect of the Health Service is as untrue as it is unjustified. That is the Big Lie, Mr Speaker. I refer the House to the statement of the GHA and Unite the Union of last year, where we were delighted to note that in addition to the 81 posts which had been successfully regularised, a total at that time of 57 adverts have been issued in respect of medical, nursing, ambulance, allied health professionals, consultant and non-consultant hospital doctor posts.

1680 Mr Speaker, the staffing levels at the GHA have never been higher, with an increase in overall staffing levels of direct employment rising by 25% over the last six years: 28 more admin support, 65 more medical and allied health professionals, nine more ambulance workers, 92 more nurses, 28 more industrials; 223.5 more people employed directly by the GHA.

1685 Not happy with vulgar generalisations which I have now explained why they are wrong, as all generalisations are innately – the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition then says, and I quote him again, ‘There are serious questions of value for money in the procurement of public contracts’, and yet took every conceivable shot when the GHA entirely properly awarded the management of the John Macintosh Home to the most competitive tenderer.

1690 This attitude is the Big Lie, Mr Speaker, and is just one manifestation of their inherently contradictory political discourse. This is because the former company charged the taxpayer more for two floors than the current operator charges the Government for three floors and an additional 18 beds. The current operator employed the carers previously working for the former operator: good for the public purse, where we can ask more for taxpayers’ money, and good for the residents, who will benefit from a total continuity of care. How can they believe anything they say, Mr Speaker?

1695 Then I heard the Hon. Leader of the Opposition say that we are not investing in the future. That is another big lie, Mr Speaker. Does the hon. Gentleman not hear himself speak? Has he not read any one of my statements on the School of Health Studies? Let me remind him. Since 2012, the School of Health Studies has seen 25 of our nurses qualifying as registered nurses, with eight further nurses due for completion in September of this year. Since 2012, 47 of our brothers and sisters have qualified as enrolled nurses, with an additional 17 qualifying in this year. Is he so blithely unaware of the facts on this one area, in which he professes so much concern, that he does not know, or does not care to know, that Gibraltar is well ahead of the UK in providing leading-edge training for health workers to enhance standards of clinical care? Learning while working, Mr Speaker: the very thing that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition says we are not doing. That is another big lie, Mr Speaker. How can they believe anything that they say?

1710 In any event and to conclude, it is no exaggeration whatsoever to say that it is my distinct honour to discharge important responsibilities for my community and with my community. I relish every moment that I have the chance, along with my teams, to better, to improve, to change a system that can provide better care for our community, to make life better for all those 1715 who come into contact with any of my services. My often repeated philosophy is that we must do at work what we would do for ourselves and for those whom we dearly love.

I wish to thank my Ministry staff who, day in and day out, bear the brunt of a sometimes bruising pace, a neurotic review of everything connected to my areas of responsibilities, my fiercely held view that lunch is for wimps and my emails before five in the morning and until I go to bed. They are truly a credit to the finest traditions of the public service: self-effacing, discreet, 1720 committed, passionate, not afraid of disagreeing with me and telling me what is what, fun and a pleasure to work with. Indeed, I will go as far as to say that I am fortunate beyond measure to have been offered such a magnificent group of people.

And, of course, Mr Speaker, I wish to thank you, the Clerk Mr Martinez, Kevin Balban, Dani Garcia and Frances Garro, and of course, again, Simon Galliano for your kindness, patience and 1725 assistance. Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, can I invite the House now to recess for 15 minutes.

Mr Speaker: Until six.

Hon. Chief Minister: Until six.

The House recessed at 5.41 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.59 p.m.

Appropriation Bill 2018 –
For Second Reading –
Debate continued

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Samantha Sacramento.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Budget address is my favourite time of year. It is an opportunity to focus on the achievements of the past year and of course plan for the coming year. This is now my seventh address.

1735 I must say that in current times, and the challenges that lay ahead for our nation in the context of Brexit, and while the whole of the Government is involved in considering the implications of this, I wish to particularly thank the Chief Minister, the Deputy Chief Minister and the Brexit team for steering Gibraltar so avidly through these turbulent times, devoted, as always, to striving to achieve what is best for our nation.

1740 Mr Speaker, let me start with my housing portfolio and in particular with important announcements in respect of the building of affordable housing. The Government will, over the next three and a half years, deliver on its commitment on affordable housing. A total of 1,500 new homes, as promised, will be built at the three locations that we have already announced on the Eastside, Waterport and Europort Avenue, despite the most acerbic aspersions cast by 1745 Mr Clinton yesterday, an attack which is completely unjustified. Mr Clinton seems to have found a new role in attempting to be populist, and while Mr Clinton is trying his best to mislead and sow doubt, I can assure you that we are progressing very well with the new affordable housing schemes. Things have, of course, changed since the context of my Budget speech last year in which I was quoted yesterday. That was in relation to one scheme and we now have another.
This is because we did not want delays with other projects to interfere with the delivery of our 1750 affordable housing. Mr Clinton is perfectly aware of this because we very clearly said so in a detailed presentation in September last year. Perhaps Mr Clinton needs reminding that Waterport Terraces took over eight years to be delivered by the GSD since it was first announced, or perhaps Mr Clinton also needs reminding of the OEM and Haymills fiasco in the GSD's poor planning in a desperate rush to build housing, which this Government had to rectify 1755 at great cost to the taxpayer.

Design work on Hassan Centenary Terraces on the Eastside is very advanced and the project will proceed to competitive procurement by the end of 2018. This will deliver a total of 650 homes over two phases with a target completion of the first phase for mid-2020 and the second phase during the first quarter of 2021. I can therefore announce that we are aiming to release 1760 final designs after this summer and proceed to the sale of the flats very early in the new year.
The design and development work for the other two estates is progressing well and will proceed in a sequential manner. The competitive procurement will follow as contract packages for each of the schemes are completed and issued. The target is to complete all of these affordable housing projects by 2021. Timings may need to be adjusted, however, as some phases rely on 1765 sites being vacated – such as Bob Peliza Mews, which needs the Waterport Power Station to be decommissioned.

The pricing for the affordable housing schemes will be set for each project once the construction costs are known upon completion of the respective procurement processes. The Government's aim is, of course, to keep these costs as low as possible in order to provide the 1770 greatest opportunity to those wanting to buy their new homes.

We are not, however, just focusing on the construction of the homes. We have changed how these will be allocated and the new priorities will make the process fairer to all. These have been announced numerous times. They will result in, importantly, giving priority to those who currently live in Government rental accommodation which would be vacated – and it is 1775 important that we maximise the housing rentals returned to stock. These will be followed by those who are on the Housing Department waiting list.

We are also changing the terms on which these properties will be held, ensuring that they be exclusively for owner occupation at all times and, more importantly, how these will be sold.
There will simply be no room for abuse or speculation for resale for profit, as the Chief Minister 1780 explained yesterday. This is not the intention of the creation of affordable housing that is subsidised by the taxpayer. This is just not fair and will not be allowed, and we are looking closely at the underleases going forward to ensure that we have the maximum protection. We will also further control who is eligible to purchase resales of affordable housing, as the terms of the original underleases were relaxed in 2008 for Waterport Terraces and thereafter, and we will 1785 return to the terms that were used in the original underleases for Montague Gardens and Harbour Views, which were stricter.

As we know, home ownership by way of co-ownership of affordable housing is what has in large part alleviated the housing problem in Gibraltar, and our commitment to continue providing for housing in this way means that we will avoid our community having to endure 1790 housing shortages as we have had to historically. But as we know, it is not all about affordable housing as not everyone can afford to purchase accommodation. That is why we are also committed to our tenants in rental housing stock. More of that in a moment, but as you know, we are also committed to providing further rental stock.

I am delighted to announce that we shall be building further purpose-built accommodation 1795 for the elderly. We are currently looking at different options as to optimal location for this. This is the best way to provide rental accommodation. When allocation priority is given to those on the pensioner exchange list, it means that for every flat built and allocated to existing tenants we recover a larger rental property. We are therefore essentially re-providing, but in a manner which offers not just better value for money in terms of construction but a much better quality 1800 of life for our elderly residents as well. These purpose-built flats are entirely accessible and promote independent living, and this is proved to have very positive results for our elderly community already.

1805 We have just come up to the first anniversary since the allocation of our wonderful flats at Charles Bruzon House and Sea Master Lodge. I have visited a number of times during the course of the year, including various social events that I have been invited to, and it gives me great pleasure and satisfaction to see how happy all tenants are, and the feedback is always incredibly positive. For many, the move has been life changing for the better.

1810 Given that we have had the introduction of these two new blocks and the recent upgrading of Albert Risso House, we decided to invest in a complete external refurbishment and reroofing of Bishop Canilla House, which also includes new lifts, in order to bring it up to the same standard as the other blocks aesthetically as well as to protect it from the elements, as we were receiving water ingress and dampness reports. The refurbishment will also increase the environmental performance of the building. The works have already commenced and are progressing well.

1815 In addition to meeting with the tenants' representative committees of these blocks for the elderly, I have also met with them all together in order to discuss issues that they share in common. Together with the committees, we are undertaking initiatives to promote active ageing within their living communities, and one of the things that resulted from those meetings was a request for us to waive Bingo Tax, so I am sure that everyone is delighted after the Chief Minister's announcement on this yesterday.

1820 There continues to be a great demand for housing for the elderly, and understandably so given the enormous positive impact that this has. The Housing Department is currently reviewing its policies in relation to accommodation for the elderly to make the allocation process even better.

1825 In addition to continuing to provide affordable housing and rental stock, it is also important that we preserve our existing housing stock for generations to come, particularly post-war housing. In 2009 the GSD, in a desperate attempt to raise capital, offered the sale of post-war housing rental stock. By offering to sell post-war housing stock to sitting tenants and family members, and even with provision to sublet and sell for profit, we lose valuable flats from rental stock. Indeed, regrettably, the criteria for sale was so loose that some who have bought do not even live in the flats, and incredibly – and it gets worse, Mr Speaker – some do not even live in Gibraltar. That means that, unfortunately, many of these flats sold are just lying empty in the estates. That is just unconscionable when there is such a demand for housing.

1830 People who purchased are starting to realise now that the deal was not a good one, not for them, not for anyone. It places obligations on the tenants who purchased to meet the costs of maintaining the common areas. It raised obligations for Government, even though we have sold them, because we retain the liability to manage and maintain the blocks for 12 years. It is not until 75% of each block is sold that Government can step out of the management and control of the flats and the building. This, Mr Speaker, when I give you the statistics, will show that will never happen. Indeed, the situation is so bad that many who have purchased have regretted having done so and many have approached me wishing to surrender the properties. Indeed, I have even been approached through a Member of the Opposition. Unfortunately, this was an ill-conceived idea from the outset and has served more damage than good, as a result of which we have lost 181 flats from the post-war rental stock.

1845 While the number of flats that we have lost throughout Gibraltar is relatively high, the cost of which re-providing would be much higher than the revenue yielded, the uptake per block as required is incredibly low. There are no blocks that are anywhere near reaching the necessary quota for the Government to step out, and even if the number of flats were to be taken globally per estate, for example, the estate with the highest uptake is Alameda Estate with a total of 53 flats sold in the whole of the estate, making it 29.9% of the estate. The estates with the lowest take up were Edinburgh Estate and Moorish Castle Estate, where three and four flats were sold throughout the whole estate respectively. Clearly no longer interest to purchase.

1855 When this became apparent to me last year, the sale of stock was frozen while we could give the matter proper consideration as to the best thing to do. The only conclusion that could be reached was that this badly thought through scheme does not benefit anyone and therefore has to be stopped. To continue this and perpetuate it was just not economically viable for Government, for those who purchased or housing tenants, and worst of all prospective tenants and those on the housing waiting list.

1860 Mr Speaker, yesterday we heard Mr Clinton, the new Mr Populist, when he tried to insinuate that having stopped the sale of these properties was somehow tied into the investment of the new estates. It is nothing of the sort, and alas Mr Clinton is wrong again. Mr Clinton is being taught quite a few lessons today, in the same way as when he criticised the increase of rent of 3%. Unfortunately, he did not seem to consider this an issue for the last two years. When we brought it up in the Budget speech initially in 2016 the Opposition were all for an increase in rent. When we debated it in Parliament in 2017 there was not a peep from the Opposition benches against the annual increase in rent. An annual increase in rent means that it is raised every year – surely Mr Clinton, as an accountant, had worked that out. Unfortunately, Mr Clinton, jumping on the populist bandwagon, had to complain about that as well, though he never thought that he had to complain about it on the two occasions that he had previously in 1870 the Parliament. Indeed, Mr Phillips, in relation to the 3% increase, said it was not enough and wanted us to go higher. He said that a 49% increase was too low. That is in Hansard for everyone to see.

In relation to the preservation of our housing stock, my job is to look at the bigger picture of our housing needs and the demands for our community, and it would simply be unfair and wrong to allow to proceed with the further dissipation of rental stock. So, in addition to stopping the scheme, in order to redress the balance with the stock that has been lost, those who purchased will be given the opportunity to sell them back to Government, and everyone who bought these will receive a letter with an offer for them to consider. Furthermore, by selling them back to us, those who may be interested in purchasing the new affordable housing will, by virtue of surrendering ownership and returning to being a housing tenant and giving us vacant possession, automatically fall in the first priority criteria for allocation.

1880 Having heard Mr Phillips yesterday, you would be forgiven for thinking that the GSD are now the champions for housing. This could not be further from the truth, and any concern on housing
I would say is a new discovery for the GSD as its importance was never on its radar before. I am so happy that they have discovered the forgotten estates after having forgotten them and neglected them for 16 years. But he is not fooling anyone, Mr Speaker. The GSD's track record on housing is nothing short of abysmal: it is tried, tested and failed.

1885 It is unbelievable, really, that they have criticised the major refurbishment works that we have undertaken to the largest of Gibraltar's housing estates – Glacis, Laguna and Moorish Castle – when everyone knows that during their tenure they were known as the forgotten estates. Estates that were left to rot, that were totally dilapidated, have now been transformed into totally new estates and will improve the living standard of the tenants. Yes, it has been a process, a long one, because it has been a project of great magnitude. It has been inconvenient at times, but it is certainly worth it.

1895 Moorish Castle is virtually complete and Glacis is also incredibly advanced and nearing completion too. In Laguna Estate, phases 1 and 2 are close to practical completion, with phase 3 ongoing and scheduled for completion by June 2019. Mr Phillips made much ado about the lifts yesterday. This has been one of the last things to progress, but is now progressing well and according to plan. Out of the 71 lifts in the estate, 40 have already been commissioned and there will be a further eight commissioned by the end of August, making the installation of lifts 1900 68% by then.

My last meeting with the Laguna Estate Tenants' Association was two weeks ago, when I met them and the Glacis Estate Tenants' Association with the Chief Minister. The meeting was very positive and we have established better means of communication between them and the 1905 Department and our links have been strengthened. One of the things that I pointed out to the tenants' associations at that meeting was in relation to works that require to be carried out on landings at Laguna Estate and that these were delayed and the delay was attributable to tenants not giving contractors access. Surprisingly, 40% of the tenants were denying access and this was 1910 considerably delaying progress for everyone. I am grateful to the associations for liaising with the tenants on our behalf to avoid this in future. I would particularly like to thank all housing tenants and their representative associations for their invaluable collaboration and support throughout the refurbishment programme.

Mr Phillips says that the GSD are preparing a policy paper on housing. I wonder how many of the PDP policies will make their way into that. As you will recall, the PDP wanted to demolish 1915 Moorish Castle Estate, (A Member: Ha, ha, ha!) an estate that we have invested in completely refurbishing and looks beautiful and which we and the tenants are justly proud of. Let those who live in the 184 households in the newly refurbished Moorish Castle Estate remember that next time he goes up there.

We will, of course, continue to invest in the refurbishment of our other housing estates, for 1920 which we have a very organised medium- and long-term plan. In fact, Mr Speaker, in last year's Budget address I announced that we would be refurbishing the remaining blocks in Catalan Bay and painting them in very vivid colours to make our beautiful Catalan Bay even more pretty and reminiscent of Portofino. This year, before the summer, we completed the refurbishment of one of the blocks in a beautiful canary yellow, and as soon as the summer is over we will start 1925 refurbishment works on the two remaining blocks. (A Member: Hear, hear.) Hopefully everything will be beautiful, ready and finished for next summer.

I must confess, Mr Speaker, that I do not understand what Mr Phillips means when he says that 18-year-olds should not join the housing waiting list. Why ever not? What exactly is wrong with that? Is he saying that because you are 18, you are not entitled to apply for housing?
1930 Everyone who joins, first joins a pre-list for a year, and the rate at which applicants progress will depend on their circumstances, so perhaps it is Mr Phillips who needs to read it properly – and by 'it' I mean the process. Of course, when managing the waiting lists the Housing Department will be perfectly aware of those who have expressed an interest to purchase affordable housing and have no desire to rent. It is a question of management, so not only is that criticism not 1935 justified, it just shows the little understanding that Mr Phillips has of the system.

The important thing when it comes to housing is to have good management of the lists, proper allocation and efficient turnaround of empty flats – none of these previously existed – and that is exactly what we are working on and are being very successful in this endeavour, I must say. Whereas in 2015 we had 127 allocations, we had 109 in 2016 and there were 312 last 1940 year. Even with the 130 flats generated by the flats vacated by allocations to the elderly flats, the balance is still greater and continues to grow. In fact, we are doing even better this year because already, at the midway mark, we have allocated 125 flats. So that is the success story of housing and this success is a direct result of the implementation of various initiatives, initiatives which we have been working very hard on to develop.

1945 So, unfortunately, Mr Speaker, I do not think that Mr Phillips will succeed when he presents himself as the new saviour of Government housing tenants. He told us yesterday that it was the number-one problem in his clinics. Housing has always been a problem in Gibraltar, but unfortunately the problem was perpetuated by the GSD. We are catching up and thankfully the progress that we have made is very good and I am very satisfied with it. Maybe Mr Phillips' 1950 understanding of the housing procedures is wrong because he bases his position on replies to his narrow questions in Parliament. In his short time as shadow of this portfolio he has not asked all the questions he needs to, so he has a very limited picture. In a way, he may be forgiven for that, but it would have been preferable if maybe Mr Phillips, if he really wanted to understand more, could have asked me directly. Unlike Mr Phillips, I grew up in one of our estates, as did every 1955 single member of my family, so I know exactly what that means.

1960 He calls for an overhaul of housing. Like the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Health, Minister Costa, my reply is the same: what does he think we have been doing? Of course we have been reviewing and overhauling housing. He should know better, because he knows that when I get something, if it is broken the first thing I do is try to fix it – and housing was certainly broken. Excuse the pun, but thankfully it is not broken beyond repair. In fact, I would go further, because the reason why I would say the overhaul in housing is so needed is because none of my predecessor GSD Ministers for Housing ever bothered to do so. Had they made an effort, then the review and the improvements may not be taking so long.

1965 We have made many changes, both at policy and operational level, and we will continue to do so. One important change that we are going to bring about is one that has been a long time coming. It may not be major in terms of allocation of properties, but it is important to a lot of people, and it is the change of nomenclature. Finally we will do away with the confusing RKB language, which means nothing to a lot of people, and we will substitute it for plain English and a description of a one-bedroom flat and a two-bedroom flat, instead of a 2RKB and a 3RKB.

1970 We are modernising all our procedures to make them more user friendly to our tenants – our customers. We encourage alternatives to cash payments of rent, particularly via the e-Gov portal, and we also encourage paperless e-billing so as to promote environmental initiatives.

1975 We are undertaking a review of the Housing Act, and there will be an important amendment to curtail abuse. Whereas the current Act precludes you from being a housing applicant if you own property in Gibraltar, we intend to extend this to include those who also own properties in Spain.

1980 We have also made great progress and established working protocols with other Government Departments, particularly so as to support vulnerable tenants and applicants. Mr Costa explained that to us a few moments ago, Mr Speaker. I will not repeat everything that he said, but it is an absolute pleasure to be able to be supporting the GHA, the Mental Health Services and Social Services in assisting them with the seamless provision of housing as soon as that is necessary. (Banging on desks)

1985 On arrears, Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister commented yesterday that making the right decision can mean making unpopular decisions. I think that, to start off with, holding the housing portfolio is quite an unpopular one; to have vigorously pursued arrears in the way that I have is even more unpopular. But if making me unpopular as a result of taking the correct decision is the result, then be that as it may. There is nothing popular, I can assure you, with tenants – at least those in arrears – in having to chase rent and not allowing people to make use of their parking spaces, for example, within estates because of their rent arrears, but it has to be done and it is being done.

1990 Speaking of arrears of rent, Mr Phillips had the audacity yesterday to say that the recovery of arrears this last year was appalling. For someone from the GSD, but more so its leader in Parliament, to say this simply beggars belief. The only reason we are here is because the GSD got us into this arrears mess and 80% of the arrears that we have were inherited from the GSD. (A Member: Shame!) Let me put this into context. When the GSLP left office in 1996, the balance of arrears was £655,031. This increased by a staggering 600% to £4 million when they left office.

2000 I commenced the recovery process and the initial recovery of arrears was much quicker initially. It may have slowed down in terms of financial recovery, but it is actually working better in other ways – and Mr Phillips would have known that had he asked me. The reality is that when we commenced the recovery of arrears, at its highest they reached just over £6 million. It is a real achievement that in a short period of time – and it has already been reduced by 20%, as we heard the Chief Minister say yesterday – we have reduced the balance of arrears by over £1,200,000. Of this figure, nothing has been written off and all this has been achieved with no additional personnel or Human Resource expense and no additional staff or overtime. Now this is the important figure, Mr Speaker. It is very significant that when we commenced the recovery of arrears, 2,474 households owed rent. As of today, whereas the financial figure has been reduced by 20%, the figure of households in arrears has been reduced by 38% to 1,543. That is the real achievement because it means that we are reducing the number of people who owe.

2010 Mr Phillips called it appalling. What exactly about continuously recovering rent is appalling? What he said is sensationalist but really makes no sense. Mr Phillips does not seem to understand that a lot of those who are in arrears are people, not just numbers. The officials in the Housing Department dedicate many hours meeting these tenants, trying to assist them with the repayments of their arrears. The primary objective is to stop arrears from accumulating, and we have done that, clearly, by engaging more tenants. Separately, it is to reduce the existing 2015 debt, and we are doing that too, continuously and consistently. In a lot of cases our tenants have genuine problems of hardship and we try to help them as much as we can. We differentiate between people who are able to pay rent and do not pay and are in arrears because they want to be, and people who do not pay arrears because they cannot pay arrears. We are here to help the latter and pursue the former. He can rest assured that we will pursue all of those who are in 2020 arrears of rent, are in employment, can pay and do not wish to pay. They will be distinguished from those who genuinely cannot pay.

We have been giving people every opportunity to pay. To exercise our right to pursue the recovery of our debt in court right now would cost not only money but time and resources and we would rather resolve debts directly with tenants, as we are, until we reach the point when 2025 we can no longer make any progress. I would much rather that the tenant spent money on paying the arrears and not on legal costs. Perhaps he thinks otherwise. The courts should only be used as a last resort, and for many I must say we are now reaching the last resort. Let there be no doubt about it: when the appropriate time comes and we are left with no other option, we will commence court proceedings against those who can pay and do not.

2030 Turning to my Equality portfolio, Mr Speaker, I am absolutely delighted with our progress and I can confidently say that insofar as the Ministry for Equality, this has been our best year to date. That, of course, only sets the challenge for us to improve even further in the coming year. This new Department has come a very long way in a short period of time. The real results are a testament to the dedication of the efficient and effective team in the Department of Equality.

2035 Our greatest success this year undoubtedly is the Disability Act. It has indeed been quite a watershed. This new legislation will serve to change the lives of people with disabilities in Gibraltar and it is right to say that the rights of people with disabilities have always existed in Gibraltar. The Disability Act endorses these rights by ensuring that public bodies and those discharging public duties take account of the inclusion of people with disabilities on an equal 2040 basis to others. In addition, we have also recently introduced part R of the Building Regulations that make physical environments accessible. We heard Minister Balban this morning and he explained what that entails.

The law and these legal changes are, of course, important milestones for Gibraltar, but the real work is putting these into effect and changing hearts and minds for people to embrace 2045 these principles. This is no easy task and can only be achieved through education and awareness raising. The Department of Equality has been very effective in delivering training to various target audiences on a range of matters on disability throughout the year. We see the results of this already and the visible changes to attitudes in Gibraltar.

2050 There is no doubt that the essential component of 2017-18 was the further increased awareness and training campaigns on disability organised and delivered by us. Indeed, many of the attendees have found the training so informative that they have participated in more than one of our training seminars.

2055 We must, of course, lead by example. The Department of Equality have therefore organised briefings on the Disability Act for all heads of department and senior Government officials throughout the public sector to ensure that everyone is aware of their responsibilities under the Act. A total of 128 senior officials have received the training already. In addition to the various seminars, the Department of Equality have also produced some information booklets which are available in hard copy and electronically. We have offered so many training seminars – very useful and they have been delivered by both local and UK professional experts.

2060 On autism we have delivered various. The subjects have been ‘What is autism?’, ‘Parental strategies and managing behaviour’, ‘Adolescence and puberty’ and ‘Maximising communication opportunities for children and young adults with autism’. ‘Introduction to working with people with disabilities, learning difficulties and autism; good practices and strategies’ was organised for those who volunteer with NGOs such as Special Olympics, the Brownies, the Guides, the Dukes, Faith and Light, and so on. The training has been so popular that we have had to run it several times, and we have now commissioned a further more intense tier 2 training. The interest, Mr Speaker, is huge, I can tell you. In the last financial year, 567 individuals took part in the seminars on autism and learning disabilities. This included 369 professionals and frontline Government staff, 108 parents or family members and 90 volunteers. An additional 236
2065 individuals have undertaken other disability awareness training. Of these, 42 are professionals or senior management and 194 frontline staff. I would particularly like to thank the volunteers who attend these sessions, not only for the voluntary work that they undertake in their organisations but for their enthusiasm and interest when they attend their training, which is usually held on Saturday mornings, so they even give up their Saturday mornings to attend our training.

2075 Furthermore, we are also delivering training on disability language and etiquette. This is something that we are now able to offer in house, as one of our equality officers undertook a train-the-trainer course so that he can offer the training himself and it is more cost effective and can be offered more frequently. So far, he has provided this training to the Gibraltar Bus Company and Calypso, all lifeguards and beach attendants and beach cleaning staff. The programme has started to be offered to civil servants and Government officials and we have a programme in place to deliver this to frontline staff in the public sector through the human resources departments. Previously, we had offered this training to public officers, particularly in the Tourism and Culture Departments, and to the private sector through UK organisation Attitude is Everything. Our aim through all this extensive training is to provide a holistic approach for the benefit of people with disabilities, so that they are free to enjoy everything that Gibraltar has to offer, just like the rest of us.

2080 All this training means that we are now much better equipped to develop better policies and strategies and others are more receptive to understand them and give them effect. To this end, the Ministry for Equality is working very closely with many Government Departments to improve practices and policies throughout.

2090 As a result of this learning and engagement, we have embarked on some very successful initiatives with the private and voluntary sectors. We now have, or had and will have, an Inclusive fair. We have been working with Cultural Services and the Self-determination Group for Gibraltar, making our fair more inclusive and sensory friendly. These innovations last year were extremely popular with families and were particularly beneficial to people with autism, epilepsy, visual and hearing impairments. We also last year, for the first time and also as a result of an initiative from the training, had an Inclusive session of the International Magic Festival in collaboration with its organisers Gibmedia. Gibraltar Leisure Cinemas continue to offer sensory screenings, another initiative that was born as a result of training and awareness that we provided. I wholeheartedly wish to thank all these private entities for engaging so proactively and making their services more inclusive, more welcoming and more comfortable for people with disabilities, their carers or families, and indeed everyone who has attended the training and in one way or another delivered to make Gibraltar more inclusive.

2100 Turning to race and religion, Mr Speaker, we have also worked very hard to deal with issues of anti-Semitism. Last year I was invited to attend the Auschwitz and Birkenau concentration camps by the local charity Learning from Auschwitz. As a result of that, I have been working very closely with the Minister for Education and my Department has been working very closely with the Education Department so that we can instil effective learning from the Holocaust to ensure that these values are taught in schools so that such hatred and such events do not occur again.

2110 As a result of this, while in Auschwitz, we met with a Holocaust survivor and a specialist Holocaust educationalist. We have since invited them to Gibraltar. They came over in December and delivered a talk, both in schools and to the public, on the Holocaust as part of the teaching, and it was very moving and very effective. It is so important that this message continues to be 2115 communicated. Indeed, what we did was we recorded the event and it is available online with subtitles so that everybody can hear what the speakers had to say.

Turning to gender equality, Mr Speaker, again this year has been our busiest yet on that front too, and we have an extremely busy programme ahead. We are looking at initiatives both in the workplace and at social levels.

2120 The economic empowerment of women is important – of course it is – and we have identified that women in the workplace are at a general disadvantage. You will be aware that yesterday I announced the Ministry of Equality’s Mentorship Programme for Women. This is one of the strategies that we are developing in order to close the gender pay gap. We wish to inspire women to achieve their best in the workplace and encourage them also to aspire to leadership roles.

2125 I have worked with the Minister for Employment and the Statistics Office so as to update this year’s Employment Survey to analyse in more detail the gender pay gap.

Challenging gender stereotypes is an intrinsic part of our gender equality strategy. It is vital that we do so, particularly with regard to professions and career paths. There is evidence to show that gender stereotypes affect subject choice, with fewer girls taking maths and science 2130 subjects, and consequently women are underrepresented in certain STEM fields. We are already working with the Minister for Education and the Department of Education and private sector entities to address that. I can think of another place, Mr Speaker, where women are underrepresented, but I know that my Friend opposite and I are both keen to see more women on these benches.

2135 We will also be offering training on unconscious bias, as this very often poses a barrier to progress on account of preconceived ideas and bias. Throughout the year we hold awareness and information events and these culminate in International Women’s Day in March, an awareness-raising event that continues to gather momentum, and this year was indeed another successful one.

2140 Mr Speaker, you will recall that very recently in Parliament we amended the Equal Opportunities Act to allow for breast feeding in public. I recall that the Hon. Mr Phillips asked me a question in relation to the compatibility of that Act and the rules. As I said at the time, I did not believe that they were incompatible and I am advised that they are not, because each piece of legislation has a different motivation.

2145 Another key strand of the Gender Equality Strategy is domestic abuse, where we have developed a national strategy to be rolled out over a five-year period. The strategy encompasses a number of new measures intended to eradicate domestic abuse in Gibraltar and provide support for both victims and perpetrators as well as their families. I am pleased to announce that as part of the strategy a number of professionals from the stakeholder Departments, 2150 including the Department of Equality, the RGP and GHA, are currently undertaking a course on violence against women and domestic abuse.

Very significantly, last year we worked closely with the Department of Education and all schools to raise awareness of domestic abuse in the lead up to the awareness day in November.
This was an incredibly effective initiative and I must thank, in addition to my staff who led on it, 2155 all teachers and heads who were involved in promoting healthy relationships and respect.
Prevention is key and therefore work carried out in schools is instrumental in embedding positive values and positive behaviours. It is important to continue to raise awareness.

Gender equality is not solely a women’s issue. It is, of course, something that affects men too. It is therefore important that we also mark International Men’s Day as a starting point for 2160 raising awareness of issues. We have been doing so with Bayside School for the last two years now and have already planned the initiatives for the coming year. We also plan to, this year, raise more awareness that affects our transgender community.

2165 Finally on equality, I wish to mention the issue of abortion – as Minister for Equality, as a woman in Government and one of only two in Parliament. Abortion is an issue for many women, and equally we must not forget that it is just as much of an issue for many men. As a Government, we are giving this matter very careful consideration to ensure that what we do is the right thing to do. We are listening to all the voices, as you would expect us to.

2170 While we consider what we will do in relation to the act of abortion itself, it is clear that our priority must be that abortions and the decision to do so must be a last resort and that those women considering them –

Mr Speaker: May I interrupt the hon. Lady? We are getting into deep water, and I do not think we should at this time on the Appropriation Bill.

2175 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): You have only got two pages left?

Mr Speaker: It is very difficult for me to judge how that can be relevant to the Appropriation Bill.

2180 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, if I might? I think, from what the hon. Lady has told me, she wants to reflect an aspect of the issue which might, first of all, have an effect on spending if a referendum were to be organised – I think the Lady wants to make that point; and second to reflect the aspect that relates to her Ministry of Equality and some of the work that they are doing there. I think it is just a reflection rather than anything else.

2185 Mr Speaker: I will allow it, but I want to warn hon. Members that we are not going to have a debate on that issue under the Appropriation Bill. Is that clear? Please carry on.

2190 I should add, of course, that I will be quite happy, whenever hon. Members want to bring a motion to Parliament, to debate the issue. It is not that I believe that the matter should not be debated in Parliament, not at all. It is just that I do not think that it is appropriate to have a wide-ranging debate under the Appropriation Bill.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

2195 As the Chief Minister explained, I am going through issues that relate to my Equality portfolio, and as I was saying, I think that it is important that all women who may be considering an abortion need to be fully supported and made aware of all their options. (Interjection) The matter, Mr Speaker, as you know, has been put to the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister as leaders of their respective parties, and they have put this to their respective executive committees and the matter is on the Chief Minister's agenda for discussion as a Cabinet item at next week's Cabinet meeting.

2200 Finally on equality, I turn to my role as the Chair of the Senior Management Board of MAPP. MAPP is the public protection board. The Hon. the Minister for Justice referred to it in his speech a few moments ago, so I will just explain that the multi-agency partnership is responsible for the assessment and management of risk posed by people who have been convicted of relevant sexual offences. This is an initiative that we commenced four years ago. We have invested greatly in the training of everyone who forms part of MAPP from the DRM's, the designated risk managers who are at the forefront and assessing offenders as to risk, to the management of these professionals at every level.

2210 Turning very briefly, Mr Speaker, since we are talking about acronyms and I have just referred to MAPP, I will now refer to one called GDPR. As Minister with responsibility for data protection, as we all know, GDPR was introduced on 25th May. We have introduced in our legislation and given effect to a European Directive on Data Protection. There has been a considerable amount of work undertaken by the Government because of course we need to comply with GDPR, but the awareness work on this falls on the GRA and we have all be working very closely together to ensure that data protection is given effect.

Mr Speaker, lastly, as you know, I tend to represent Gibraltar, together with my very good friend Mr Reyes, in CPA matters and we are very ably looked after by the Clerk of this House when we travel to the UK.

That just leaves me to conclude by thanking everybody, yourself and the Clerk and everybody in this House, and of course my staff, who I think, like the staff in the office of Minister Costa, know what it is not to have sometimes a lunch break – especially on a Wednesday when I am at the Housing Department. My staff are incredibly dedicated to the job that they have to discharge. Both of the portfolios that I hold deal with people who can be particularly vulnerable and I know that they are very dedicated to helping that sector of our community.

2225

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Lawrence Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, it is once again a privilege to rise and deliver my third Budget address.

During the last year, my insight into the community we serve has deepened. I have been able to continue helping and supporting the causes of those I can at times sympathise with, whilst at the same time try to persuade those who expect too much of a government to nurture an alternative perspective in which to contribute to society rather than take, take and take.

Before moving to address those areas of responsibilities I shadow, I shall touch upon initiatives I have led which to this day remain live issues.

In education it was clear to me that in the so-called education revolution, what should be the biggest objective – that is to prepare a future for the generations to come – was being expedited for political expediency. Presenting a project of this scale without proper consultation with all the educational professionals and the community at large was, in my view and in the view of many, the wrong way to do this. I launched an education survey which gave all stakeholders the first opportunity – and for students, retired teachers and parents the only opportunity so far – to engage and put across views which they felt should be heard. But the Government have not wanted to listen. They have trail-blazed ahead with minimum consultation, in particular on the mega school campus – something they were quick to criticise when the GSD proposed it in the 2015 election despite the GSD committing itself to a full consultation process and, I might say, in a much better location.

The Government are yet to convince the community and those of us on this side of the House on how it intends to manage the traffic and transport in the new schools which will accommodate, in the mega school, 2,500 students. They remain in consultation and have provided no details of any assessments made so far. Despite investing heavily in a Sustainable Traffic and Transport Plan, a document which I respect, the entire initiative could be undermined with the changing of locations of so many schools, and the Government have failed to seriously factor in the logistics of these decisions in a manner which can provide comfort to those awake to risk and emergency issues.

Therefore, Mr Speaker, I am concerned when I have not been convinced by the Members opposite that they have really thought this through. In 2015 the Members opposite proposed a set of plans after having been four years in office. Twenty months later, after the last election, they announced a radical shift from those plans without proper consultation. The scale of the development of land will have consequences, as this will inevitably shape Gibraltar's future, together with the sale of land at Bayside, St Anne's and St Martin's being sold to one developer – for what, we are yet to find out.

Finally, the Government has not been transparent with health and safety audits carried out in our schools. I strongly believe these audits should be published as a matter of good practice.

2265 In affordable housing I have worked to attempt to delve into the rental housing allocation process and the sale of affordable housing projects. It is right to ensure that rental housing is made available to those who need housing the most and cannot afford to purchase. I do believe and maintain, as has been publicly stated by Action for Housing, that during the first five years of 2270 this Government the Government expedited the allocation to those who had been on the housing waiting list prior to 2011, regardless of the needs of those joining the waiting list after that date who were perhaps more worthy of being allocated a property. I must say in a recent meeting of this House the Minister for Housing stated that allocations were being processed with a focus on needs, and this is to be welcomed.

I cannot be as complimentary to the Government with the allocation process for the 2275 affordable homes. After months of trying to obtain the statistics, the Government finally revealed that approximately 90% of flats sold by this administration had been sold on a 50-50 basis. When compared to the GSD sales for their last affordable housing projects, on average only 25% of properties were sold on a 50-50 basis. It is true to say that the GSD did fail to adequately protect the re-sales of these properties in time, but this Government did nothing to 2280 remedy that error, and in fact used the same lease documents as had been used in the past, exposing these projects to abuse. I am glad to note that they will be at least taking measures to limit abuse in the latest phase of affordable housing, but we are talking about affordable housing which should also be sustainable for generations to come. How can it be sustainable for this community to firstly allow applicants, regardless of income or need, to purchase at the 2285 percentage of their choice, committing the taxpayer to foot the percentage which remains with the Government but then to go and obtain a mortgage with the Gibraltar International Bank, which is also subsidised by the taxpayer? This is a dangerous policy, insomuch as it fuels the culture of expectation and all the associated perspective that comes with this.

I have also tackled tourism incentives. The Government launched the Year of Culture 2290 campaign; however, the beach night markets and open-air cinema events, which could have provided so much, have not yet been announced – perhaps they will be announced in the Hon.
Minister Linares's intervention. I do believe that this would have assisted in building our tourism offering as well as providing local entertainment to residents.

In public parking, I commend the Government for having recognised the need to enhance 2295 physical accessibility at Midtown car park. It showed a breakdown in inclusive planning, but I am glad that the Government acknowledged this and remedied it and provided adequate signs to assist users.

I believe that at this stage of the Gibraltarian story, as we look forward to tackling the challenges ahead with dedication and determination to succeed that we establish a commitment 2300 to each other and a sense of ownership in these challenges – the failures and the successes. But foremost we must be clear with the people we represent. We must be clear as to why decisions are made the way they are, why we need to work to foster and develop a keener community sense of responsibility, ownership, sustainability, honesty and accountability. We need parties to say it as it is, plain and simple.

2305 When the GSD proposed such policies during the last election, Members opposite were quick to describe our sustainable and prudent policies as austerity. Today, they are called investment.
Let's not spin this anymore. No party has developed a magic wand. If we need to raise revenue, explain to the people why. Let's not promise not to raise electricity to prove a political point, but raise rates and any other thing instead. The fact is that administrations can levy any of the 2310 revenue sources to create additional revenue to fund their financial commitments, but they should just be open and sensible about it.

Mr Speaker, the Government also told us how they had struck a fantastic deal with Neon Angel, an agent for MTV, for the staging of the music mega festival. They argued that these agents would be able to bring out better acts at reduced rates. Well, I am yet to understand how 2315 that has been achieved, given the Government have refused to answer any questions regarding the value of the contract given to Neon Angel in order to know how much money has been 2320 spent on the acts themselves as a whole. This community has spent a gross £5.6 million on the last Music Festival, a record high in expenditure with a record low in ticket sales, and the commercial interests of the agent have been placed before the interests of the community as we are simply blocked from scrutinising such expenditure. The Government said the reason for not going out to tender for the last and forthcoming events was the need to take the festival on to the next level and work with international media partners. I have concerns as to the explanations given and feel that we are paying more for less.

2325 During the past year I have also had the opportunity to represent this community at a Commonwealth Parliamentary Association UK conference on public accounts. It was enlightening to see how the Westminster Parliament operates with regard to government expenditure, whether direct from the government or via government-owned companies. This Government has taken off balance sheet borrowing to a whole new level, one which we the Members on this side of the House and the electorate at large have no insight as to how our 2330 finances are being managed – worse still, not even the Principal Auditor, an office which I trust would go beyond the auditing of accounts but assess the value for money of Government projects funded and delivered through these company vehicles. We are talking about hundreds of millions of pounds pumped through Government-owned companies such as GJBS. In fact, even in the Budget presentation uploaded to the Government website after the Chief Minister’s 2335 address, when you click on the segment relating to Government-owned companies the breakdown of information stops at the first hurdle. I would like to ask the Chief Minister if he will commit to lifting the lid on these companies and on all off balance expenditure and debt, so that we on this side of the House and the people we represent can access and scrutinise the decisions made by this Government.

2340 Now turning to my areas of shadow responsibilities, in health and care I must stress that the open door policy the Minister for Health shares with Members across this House is exemplary. On many occasions, all that has been required is a WhatsApp or quick email to resolve certain issues. I am extremely grateful to him for this, as it is this sense of co-operation which we have been elected to do. Despite any differences, we must work on cross-party issues and attempt to 2345 not politicise areas, as far as possible. I strongly believe that health is certainly one which we should steer away from politicising.

The facilities up at Hillsides and Bella Vista have got off to a good start. The feedback so far is extremely positive. It is therefore right to commend the Government for delivering these facilities. (Banging on desks) It must now expand and improve. However, I do feel for those 2350 residents suffering from the same disease in less adequate facilities such as Calpe Ward and Cochrane Ward. I understand we are making the best of what we have available and it must be acknowledged, but we must now focus on finding the residents of these wards made residential units to a more suitable location, in time. In this area we must think long term and plan long term.

2355 In mental health we must do more in order to support persons suffering from mental health in obtaining employment and supported housing, though I do welcome the one property that has so far been made available for this purpose. Persons with mental health are at times just as limited in taking care of themselves as, for example, are elderly persons or persons with disabilities who do qualify for domiciliary care.

2360 But we must also develop a strategy to tackle undiagnosed and deeply rooted, camouflaged mental health issues which only become apparent after the sad loss of life. I congratulate GibSams and all those who are giving of their free time for this cause and all those who are helping in their #itsoktotalk campaign, lifting the stigma associated with mental health. I congratulate the Minister for Education on the deployment of resources into our schools. I 2365 believe we must survey our community with the hope of uncovering the drives and issues affecting our community. Naturally, it is best for this initiative to be Government led, and if the Government decides to take it up I do not have to say that they will find across the floor Members willing and available to help.

2370 One of the issues facing the Health Service has been the abuse or inappropriate use of the Accident and Emergency department. I was quick to welcome the Government's introduction of two part-time GPs for evening clinics, adding to the walk-in clinics that have been previously introduced. I look forward to seeing the service grow and hopefully educate people in non-emergency situations, yet in need of medical assistance, a more adequate platform to access.

2375 The appointment system at the Primary Care Centre has challenged many administrations in the past. Will we ever get it right, I wonder? There will always be pros and cons. The fact remains that in the last nine years when I have personally had to interact with the Primary Care Centre, regardless of the system in place I have been able to find an appointment. However, the difficulty is reported to arise when you require a specific doctor to ensure that there is continuity of care for specific causes. I do not believe that this has been yet resolved and continues to be a problem amongst the community.

2380 The Government has recently introduced the telephone appointment system and I look forward to assessing this further and establishing the real value of this service, but after six years of awaiting e-Government I would have expected a more modern approach, synced with e-Gov and personal portals to access e-appointments, e-prescriptions, e-sick notes, etc.

2385 Mr Speaker, I look forward to the investment being made in our health infrastructure with the paediatric centre and the new Primary Care Centre together and also learning on the annual cost that this will represent. However, we must also look beyond the aesthetics and investigate the low morale amongst permanent staff, who I do not doubt are valued by all the Members of this House and the community at large but yet feel undervalued.

2390 The care sector has become more and more dependent on supply labour workers, with the percentage growing to over 40% of the workforce in many areas. We acknowledge the need for short-term supply labour workers, but there are many workers who are no longer short term but rather becoming a vital part of the public sector. Whether the reasons for not employing permanently are a consequence of Brexit or the long awaited e-Government or any other reason, we should be told; more importantly, the community should be told. There is no reason that I can think of why these workers cannot be employed via short-term contracts, cutting out the agency fees under which they are employed, affording the worker a fairer deal, including working conditions such as annual leave, sick leave and parental leave. The Government announced in March this year that it would not tolerate zero-hour contracts as part of the supply workforce it subcontracts. However, taking a step further into short-term contracts would mitigate any breakdown in continuity of care and, as I have just said, enhance working conditions.

2400 The GSLP committed to no privatisation, but what we are seeing across the public sector is an osmosis of privatisation. There are employees of Government agencies being transferred out to make way for supply workers. We fundamentally disagree with this policy.

2405 In my first Budget address I focused on the need for a Care Quality Commission platform. In March this year the Hon. Minister Costa stated that he was looking into this. Although not mentioned in his speech today, I do look forward to learning more about the progress being made in this regard.

2410 Mr Speaker, I look forward to actively working with the Minister for Health and Care on policies which will carry cross-party support, the first of which will be to seek the option to register miscarriages prior to the current viability date of 24 weeks.

2415 The GSD is also actively considering the current abortion legislation and whether or not it needs to be reviewed. We shall not be rushed into a decision given the emotive and sensitive nature of this debate. I will say, however, we are focusing first on the underlying reasons why abortions are sought and how best to tackle these reasons in order to reduce such situations.

2420 With regard to drugs and rehabilitation, the introduction of a specialised GP in drug addiction is to be welcomed. Addiction is a health matter, and the closer we work between the rehabilitation team and the health team, that will provide a fundamental link, but we must also focus on a successful secondary care plan in this sector.

2425 We must do more in terms of supporting recovering addicts in seeking employment and stability in their lives. During the next year I shall be campaigning for this, but also campaigning for a more rigorous strategy on recreational drugs amongst our youth. The Chief Minister will find cross-party support on this issue and I would invite him to include Members on the opposite side of the bench to make a contribution in this area. We fully support the need for a drugs strategy which is evidence based and the idea of a survey amongst students in order to establish what exactly the challenges are and how best to tackle them.

2430 With regard to medicinal cannabis, this subject has come to the fore of media attention following the recent case in the UK of Billy Caldwell. The Chief Minister is currently undertaking an exhaustive consultation process. We look forward to receiving the outcome of this process and the GSD remain committed to following the recommendations made by the medical professionals. With regard to the cultivation of cannabis, the GSD is grateful the exportation of this seems to have been disregarded and a non-narcotic version of the plant is being considered for the potential benefit of local patients.

2435 Mr Speaker, with regard to e-Government, I look forward to a new digital tax office, but six years on I would have hoped we would have been closer to digital citizenship by now. Individuals and businesses alike are crying out for a holistic system under one roof, from taxes to health, from education to employment. This project is extremely exciting. An efficient and real-time interaction with public services is to be welcomed, but I remain curious as to why, for example, fibre in schools has been outsourced on a lease to Sapphire whilst having a Government Department able to carry this sort of project.

2440 I must bring to light several complaints that have been brought to me by the residents of Bishop Canilla House, who claim to have been caged in by scaffolding for the last four months without any works being carried out on that scaffolding. This shows a lack of planning and consideration for our elderly in this regard. I have written to the Minister but I am yet to receive a reply.

2445 Also, I must recognise and state regret at the 337 reports of domestic abuse from January to May 2018. When compared to the last complete statistics online for the year 2014 of 177, this represents a comparative increase of 348%. No doubt the Mrs Gibraltar pageant has done a brilliant job in raising awareness; this could be one of the contributing factors in the significant rise. The Minister for Equality recognised this when it came to the fore on social media last November, announcing a domestic abuse strategy to be rolled out in the first months of 2018. Sadly, this has not happened yet, but I hear that it is in the pipeline ... It has happened, but it is not clear.

2450 In supported employment I am glad to note from the Hon. the Chief Minister's annex speech his commitment to the equalisation of annual leave and sick leave for persons in supported employment. I do remain conscious of the need to have stronger and better resourced supported internship programmes.

2455 Mr Speaker, last year I publicly spoke about my rationale for supporting the Budget, and further why I felt able to vote differently to the GSD. There is no need to re-ventilate that statement. What I will say is that this year we have had a proper internal debate and discussion and the collective decision is to vote against the Budget on the points which have been made before by the Hon. Mr Phillips and Mr Clinton.

2460 The Hon. Chief Minister said that the Opposition have been crying wolf year on year. I must say that that applies to all oppositions locally and internationally. More recently, after the 2011 Budget address when Sir Peter Caruana was Chief Minister, the Leader of the Opposition back then, the Hon. Mr Picardo, was quick to record a vlog with the hope of scaring voters and planting the seed of distrust and doubt as to what Sir Peter was saying on the state of the economy, who he named as being addicted to debt. It is the same rhetoric year in and year out, regardless of the administration in power.

2470 Fear will not drive the minds of investors. Investors will not factor in the voting decisions of politicians, for they are experts in their fields and they will be able to decide how to invest,

2475 where to invest and predict the return on their investments independently. However, what will factor into their decision making is the transparency and good governance of the Government of the day and it is this very issue which is regrettable in this Government's policy. I sincerely trust – and I mean it – that no Gibraltarian would ever want to intentionally jeopardise the economic future of our nation, more so those who stand for election and have earned the trust and respect of the electorate, but it is entirely up to the Government to come clean with its people and lay the cards on the table. Without knowing how well or how bad we are performing, by 2480 keeping a separate set of accounts behind closed doors, we are indeed blinded as to the true state of affairs.

Mr Speaker, once again I will end by thanking you and the parliamentary staff for the diligent work provided throughout the year. (Banging on desks)

2485 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, talking about collective responsibility, I think we all have a collective responsibility to ensure that we support the right team tonight in a few minutes when England take on Colombia, and I therefore move that the House should now adjourn until tomorrow morning at 9.30 in the morning

2490 Mr Speaker: The House will adjourn to tomorrow morning at 9.30.

Appropriation Bill 2018 – For Second Reading – Debate continued

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Wednesday, 4th July.

5 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Steven Linares.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, this is my 19th Budget speech and my seventh as a Government Minister.

10 I will begin my speech by giving a synopsis of what has been achieved over the last year in relation to my areas of responsibility. These are Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

15 Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Academy of Music and Performing Arts (GAMPA) has had another successful year. GAMPA is housed at 63 Flat Bastion Road. I am pleased to report that they have already outgrown those premises due to their huge success. GAMPA can now boast nearly 400 students. It is currently outsourcing space in South Barrack Road Recreational Rooms as well as the drama studio and the music room at Bayside Comprehensive School. Therefore, given its huge success, the Government has decided to allocate more facilities to GAMPA. I am pleased to announce that the Old Sisters Quarters beside St Bernard's Middle School will be made available to GAMPA. This newly refurbished building is expected to be ready this month. The premises will provide much needed space as from September.

20 In our 2011 manifesto we conceived of a scheme known as Learn an Instrument. This has taken the form of a campaign which promotes certain instruments which children might not necessarily be aware of. This year teachers of the Academy toured all first and middle schools in Gibraltar. They used what is known as the Charanga Music System, which encourages, excites and innovates digital music teaching and the learning of it. They have been able to recruit students to attend the academy on a regular basis.

25 The Academy has held a great number of performances and other initiatives, which include drama, choir singing and orchestral music. In the third term of the year 2016-17, from April to June, they participated in and organised 12 events; from September to December, in the first term of the 2017-18 year, they were involved in eight events; and in 2018, this year, from January to June they have been involved in 12 more events. Mr Speaker, a very successful and busy schedule.

35 GAMPA continue to work very closely with the Parasol Foundation in order to develop the Parasol Foundation Scholarship Programme. This programme has been designed to help the next generation of musicians and actors to develop and to have teaching contact and preparation time. The Government is pleased that the programme has been renewed for another year. Six scholarships for excellence and promise and for beginners who show potential have been offered. Further scholarships have been awarded to students who qualify under financial 40 hardship rules. This goes to the heart of our philosophy as a Government: no child should be left behind due to financial constraints. Ensemble scholarships have also been awarded in order to develop children's ensemble skills. The objective is to have such students eventually as a youth orchestra. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Parasol Foundation for the partnership they have established with GAMP.

45 Another part of GAMP's development programme has assisted Bishop Fitzgerald and Notre Dame Schools' learning support facilities and St Martin's Special School. This is through the provision of eight hours once a week of drama therapy with a fully qualified drama therapist. The Academy, as well as the Government, feels it is our duty to provide performances, opportunities and workshops to children from all backgrounds and intellectual abilities. So much, Mr Speaker, for ignoring the vulnerable. This programme is working very well.

50 The Academy is now an official examination centre which caters for students locally as well as from the surrounding areas. The Associated Board of the Royal School of Music exams have been held in Gibraltar for decades under the management of the College of Further Education, for the last three years these being conducted at the Academy, which at the moment has the best facilities. It is a great opportunity to offer all our local students the chance to have better examination conditions. These exams have also included Trinity Rock and Pop, which have proved to be very successful, and the Trinity College London drama exams.

55 Mr Speaker, I now move on to Gibraltar Cultural Services. They organise and supervise many events for and on behalf of the Ministry of Culture. Some of these events are carried out in conjunction with other Ministries. This has been the case with the first ever and most successful Youth Open Day which took place together with the Gibraltar Youth Service. The Literary Festival happens in conjunction with the Gibraltar Tourist Board. Also, together with other Government Departments, a street art project has been launched as part of the Government's urban renewal and regeneration policy.

60 GCS this year, on behalf of the Ministry of Culture, has commenced some new initiatives. They have launched the Youth Arts Jamboree as part of our cultural development programme. The aim is to create cultural, heritage and youth leaders of the future by providing a platform dedicated to young people. The first ever Artisans Christmas Market at Line Wall Road Boulevard has been organised. They have organised or supported other cultural development programmes, including the Fitness Gallery and the History of Art films at the Leisure Centre, amongst other events.

70 GCS is in the process of organising a number of retrospective exhibitions. They organised one depicting Gibraltar's fashion scene through the decades. This was a huge success and featured many local designers such as the late Johnny Pearce and the late Eduardo Viotto amongst many other individuals in the local fashion scene. They further organised Gibraltar's presentation at the Island Games 2017 in Gotland. The presentation was held to promote the Island Games that we will be hosting in Gibraltar in 2019. They are currently working to launch, in January 2019, an exhibition that will celebrate the life, works and legacy of Gibraltarian Elio Cruz. Works have also started for the July 2019 Island Games exhibition that will celebrate Gibraltar's participation at the Island Games from 1987 to date. This will be organised in conjunction with the Gibraltar Chronicle. All these exhibitions are part of our Government's ongoing cultural development initiatives.

80 GCS has been instrumental in promoting what is this Government's policy of exporting our culture to the rest of the world. We have now established a number of annual events which help local artists exhibit their works abroad. Such is the case with one of our artists participating annually in competitions at the Royal Academy summer exhibitions. The Gibraltar-Berlin Art Residency project will take place for the third year this month. This will see a Gibraltar artist taking up an art residency in Berlin, and a Berlin artist doing a residency in Gibraltar. This will lead to a book and an exhibition that will be launched in October at the John Mackintosh Hall. We have also supported four local artists to exhibit at the Bermondsey exhibition which was organised in London in October last year. Our latest endeavour is supporting and promoting a 90 cultural exchange between the Government of Gibraltar and the Diputación de Cádiz. This will see 18 Gibraltarian artists exhibit at the Diputación and works from the Diputación coming to Gibraltar's Gustavo Bacarisa Art Gallery in February/March 2019.

GCS is also charged on behalf of the Ministry with organising a number of annual events and festivals during the year. This includes GibTalks, which has proved to be extremely popular; the 95 Spring Festival featured the Young Shakespeare Company, who were especially flown over from the UK; and the ever popular Calentita. The list of events includes the autumn programme. There is a whole list, but I just mention the international art competition, the literary and poetry competitions, the Drama Festival and classical concerts, amongst others.

GCS has been working on updating the cultural register in line with current child protection 100 policy, as directed by the Child Protection Committee.

The Government, through GCS, has been able to acquire 30 new artworks for the Government's art collection. Most of these works are Gustavo Bacarisa originals and others were produced by many local artists.

GCS does not only organise events but is also charged with maintaining and looking after 105 cultural premises. On this front we can see how all the assets that they manage have been transformed. This includes the Mackintosh Hall and the Library. Ince's Hall has seen new light installation and all the facade has had structural works and a general facelift. The Central Hall, the Gustavo Bacarisa Art Gallery, the Fine Arts Gallery at Casemates, the GEMA at Montague Bastion and the Mario Finlayson National Art Gallery have all seen improvements.

110 Mr Speaker, the Government remains firmly committed to the development of culture locally and to exporting our arts at an international level. Therefore, as the Minister for Culture, I am delighted to confirm that Gibraltar Cultural Services, on behalf of the Government, will establish a Cultural Development Unit during this financial year. The Unit will introduce training programmes for cultural officials, groups, coaches, performers, administrators and persons 115 involved with our culture generally. It will support cultural organisations, develop generic cultural educational programmes and, most importantly, organise training in cultural leadership. It is imperative that we produce programmes that sow the seeds for the creation of cultural leaders in the future, in the same way as we do in sports.

Apart from GCS, the Ministry itself has organised many events during the past year. These 120 include events like the Jazz Festival and the darts tournament.

Mr Speaker, I will tackle Mr Clinton's contribution in relation to Gibraltar Calling, but before that I will tackle the contribution from Mr Llamas. Frankly, it does not make sense. Don't they talk to each other? Mr Clinton and Mr Llamas do not seem to be on speaking terms with each other. On the one hand Mr Llamas accuses me of not giving him enough information, then he 125 says that we have spent £5.6 million on MTV Gibraltar Calling. Has he read the Estimates Book? That is not the figure in the book at all, so where is he getting this figure from? When he said that last year we had a downfall on ticket sales, where does he get that information from? I would like to think that he is not getting into the habit of the GSD of saying porky pies: lies.

Mr Speaker, before I close on a purely cultural part of my address, I must also reply to the 130 Hon. Mr Clinton following his comments on the MTV Gibraltar Calling Festival. It is clear that Mr Clinton does not like the Music Festival; he has never liked it. Unlike the thousands upon thousands of Gibraltarians who turn out buying tickets every year, every year even more, and turn up to have a good time, Mr Clinton probably prefers a good book and some classical music. That is his choice. As a liberal, I would say do what you want. I like good books and classical 135 music too; however, I do not let that colour my judgement.

The hon. Member has explained about the cost of events. I would like to take a few moments to explain the value of the event as opposed to the cost. First and foremost, the expenditure includes £400,000 of moneys that had been spent on MTV Gibraltar Calling for 2018, i.e. the deduction in the Estimates Book from £2.5 million to £2.1 million this year. The following are 140 reports from MTV that monitor the reach of all of their programmes through adverts, marketing, social media outlets, etc. These also have a value in monetary terms. Social media value by artists using their Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and Snapchat accounts is estimated to be £306,000. Commercial value, monitored by exposure per minute of the Gibraltar Calling brand on Channel 5, 10pack and Comedy Central is worth £142,157. MTV has made a comparison with other of its programmes dedicated specifically to festivals. MTV Ibiza got 4,512,003 views, which have a value of £383,520. MTV Presents V Festival got 6.1 million views, with a value of £518,528. MTV Varne Beach got 3.5 million views, with a value of £297,709. And MTV Gibraltar Calling got seven million views with a value of £593,305, and on the general UK programming on other platforms the value is £255,464 – therefore, a total of nearly £1.3 million, exactly £1,296,926. That is why, though the expenditure this year has been higher, it has been worth every single penny spent.

The, as they say, ‘greatest Gibraltarian of all time’ used to tell me when I was on the other side, ‘You know, you’ – he did not even address me as ‘the hon. Member’ – ‘you know the cost of things but not the value.’ That was in relation to the disastrous Royal Theatre, where they spent, the cost was £10 million and the value was zilch because it had nothing to speak for it.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to my responsibility regarding the media. This is likely to be the most significant year ever for our national broadcaster, GBC. It is expected that late next year they will move into brand new premises at South Jumpers Bastion. Radio Gibraltar celebrated its 60th anniversary in February this year. GBC TV marked its 55th year in 2018. Despite their consistent service to our community, GBC has never been able to operate from adequate facilities, but it is time for change, and going forward our national broadcaster will operate from a state-of-the-art facility. GBC’s management team is fully focused on the relocation project. Design work is now at a very advanced stage, with the start of construction imminent. The new Broadcasting House will include two television studios and four radio studios, as well as two video-editing suites and two voice-over booths, together with studio and transmission control rooms, technical areas and functional office accommodation. Estimated completion of this project is towards the end of 2019 or early 2020. This financial year much of GBC’s investment in technology will be linked to the relocation project. Although ongoing equipment replacement continues, this necessarily impacts on the new systems being installed at the new Broadcasting House. The Corporation’s engineers and specialist consultants from the UK are devising plans of action to ensure that the existing facilities are able to continue broadcasting, with a seamless transition to the new building.

Gibraltar Freeview Ltd, which also falls under my responsibility and which operates the digital TV and radio transmitters, is also planning its own relocation of their systems from South Barrack Road to the new Rosia Road location. In a project of this magnitude, I am ensuring that all interested parties work together to arrive at the ultimate goal of having the best broadcasting facilities possible for GBC’s employees and the community as whole.

Notwithstanding the relocation project, GBC continues to inform and entertain local audiences. GBC maximises its budget to provide consistent programming for viewers and listeners. In addition to this, GBC News, GBC Sport, GBC Television and Radio Gibraltar are very active on social media platforms and via their website and apps.

Mr Speaker, TV programmes that can be highlighted from the past 12 months are the Gibraltar-related travel show Inspired by Madeira, the local history programme In their Footsteps, the local natural history series Rock Explorers, the Viewpoint series and notably its public debates, the City Pulse community show, the live FIFA World Cup Gibraltar qualifiers and numerous Christmas, New Year and Easter specials. There has also been an array of major outside broadcasts. These have covered events such as National Day, New Year events and the Three Kings’ Cavalcade, amongst many others.

Radio Gibraltar has not stood still either. It has refreshed its sound, co-ordinating with its diamond jubilee, and ensured it is present at a variety of public events through its community roadshows.

The GBC Sports Awards were deservedly expanded this year, with this having become a much looked forward to event by our local sports fraternity. As the Minister for Sport, I am delighted

195 that GBC should recognise the achievements of our outstanding sports men and women, and I take this opportunity to congratulate all of this year's winners.

Mr Speaker, another highlight of the past 12 months was the GBC open day. It raised a massive £127,000 – a true testimony to the generosity of Gibraltar's businesses and general public.

200 The community rallies around GBC every Christmas, practically as one large family, to raise funds for deserving local projects. GBC's employees deserve a very big thank you for leading on this and making it such a success.

Mr Speaker, we are proud of our television and radio stations, which consistently deliver, and so I have no hesitation in paying tribute to its management and staff for their passion, dedication and high editorial standards. It is not easy, given how expensive the media business 205 is, while having to compete with such larger foreign channels available locally.

GBC's Chief Executive assures me that work is already underway on programming for the next 12 months and beyond. There are several series in pre-production and the broadcast rights have been acquired for the live coverage of Gibraltar's games in the new UEFA Nations League in September and October this year and the Euro 2020 qualifiers next year. Plans are also in hand 210 for comprehensive coverage of the Gibraltar 2019 Island Games.

One innovation that will happen shortly is the introduction of closed captioning of TV programmes on air. For some time now, GBC has provided subtitles for the hearing impaired via its website, with this now being extended to programmes aired on television. Improved technology has meant that with a reasonable investment, systems are being upgraded both at 215 Broadcasting House and the Gibraltar Freeview Ltd digital multiplex for most local programmes on their repeat showing to include closed captioning. Although this will still be bound by a 24- to 48-hour delay in the production of subtitling from the initial broadcast, the move will soon provide Gibraltar's hearing-impaired community with a much enhanced opportunity to follow many of GBC's local programmes via the TV service.

220 I am confident that with the resources made available to GBC, and as the Corporation works towards moving to their new premises, Gibraltar will continue to benefit from and enjoy their own local TV channel and radio station.

I now move on to my responsibility as Minister for Youth. In the past year, the Youth Service has continued to reach out to our community. The service has increased its face-to-face work and has reached out to other Government Departments, agencies and NGOs in order for them 225 to work together to improve services for young people in our community.

The Youth Service is committed to personal professional development and constantly continues to update the skills of all its employees by offering them training. One of the courses the staff experienced was a very successful and inspiring day of personal professional development training that focused on personal well-being at work.

Safeguarding Children and Young People is paramount and the Youth Service is part of the Child Protection Committee. The Youth Service has increased its commitment to support child protection in Gibraltar. The Youth Service will continue to work towards the Signs of Safety model by being committed to taking a multi-agency approach in managing safeguarding issues and placing the welfare of young people at the heart of everything that they do. One of our senior youth workers is a member of the Safeguarding Children sub-group and a trainer for the multi-agency team. We can now say that all those working with children and young people go through a stringent process of vetting and training.

The Youth Service has continued to provide projects to all clients who attend the clubs – projects that develop young people's artistic, photographic and film skills, and programmes which involve residential camps. These camps develop a great number of life skills and enable young people to disconnect from technology-driven modern-day society. To this end the Youth Service have organised a great number of camps in the hinterland, where they have enjoyed outdoor education with a 'back to nature' theme, exploring and learning about the wilderness, 240 bush craft, nature and survival. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Luce

Foundation for help in funding these trips. On their return, young people who attend give a presentation to the trustees of the Luce Foundation highlighting the impact and the benefits of the trip to them.

250 The Youth Service is also involved with the community by participating in our annual cavalcade and producing floats, by getting involved in the Clean up the World campaign and by helping on flag days by raising funds for charity.

255 The Youth Advisory Council has been expanded to include the RGP, the Education Department, the GHA, the Care Agency and the Drugs Co-ordinator. This aims to develop a more co-ordinated approach between Government Departments and agencies when dealing with young people's issues.

260 The first ever Youth Day was celebrated in March this year. This new initiative was jointly organised between the Youth Service and the Gibraltar Cultural Services as part of their Youth Arts Jamboree month. It was a day to celebrate young people's achievements and for them to see what is on offer to develop themselves as individuals. The focus for next year's event will centre on forming a working group comprised of young people to make all the decisions and event planning for their day.

265 Meeting with young people and talking to them is vital. We now have a youth forum, renamed by them as the Voice of Young People. They are currently working on a directory for young people for them to know where they can source different services. This Voice for Young People does two things. Firstly, as the name now suggests, it gives young people a voice with which they can bring up whatever subject or concerns they may have. Secondly, it gives me and others present in the meeting an opportunity to understand their concerns. The Government can then solve the problems that they are encountering or implement their suggestions, which in most cases are sensible and, more importantly, are feasible.

270 Mr Speaker, ever since the Youth Service and the Royal Gibraltar Police signed a memorandum of understanding, both organisations have built and established a professional relationship of trust. They have made significant progress in many areas that have improved our service to young people and the community. As an example, a significant number of people have benefited from the RGP's joint funding through their Charities Committee of a residential weekend away. This will be held in October and it will allow young people to build positive relationships with their neighbourhood police officers and with the youth workers. Youth and community workers have also supported the RGP new recruits by providing training regarding working with young people in our community.

280 I am happy to say also that the Girl Guides' hut at the nature reserve is nearing completion. This hut, or centre, will be a great asset for the Girl Guides, who do an extremely invaluable work with young girls. This project had been in the pipeline for nearly 15 years. It had been presented to the previous administration and they did not think it a worthwhile project. We will continue supporting groups that work with young people, as do the Duke of Edinburgh, Scouts and now we have added St John Ambulance. The support is in the form of an annual grant given to them for the excellent work they do.

290 Mr Speaker, I now move on to my responsibility as Minister for Sport. As the House knows, the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority is tasked with the running of all sports-related matters. This includes the management of the Bayside Sports Complex, the swimming pool, playgrounds and parks. Part of the Bayside complex has been sold to the GFA in order for them to develop the national stadium. The GSLA will retain the hockey pitch, the Tercentenary Hall and all the pitches and grounds west of the complex, which include the Boathouse, the Padel tennis courts, the tennis courts, the jet-ski enclosure, the climbing wall and the Stay and Play Centre.

295 A programme of upgrading and refurbishment has been taking place. On the hockey pitch, for example, the watering system had been malfunctioning for an extended period of time and this resulted in increased water consumption, so investigations and upgrades were approved. This included the reconfiguration of the system's overflow and return valves to include the recycling capacity of the tanks. It also included the installation of new dosing pumps to sterilise the water recovered from the pitches themselves. These works were completed in August 2017 and have resulted in a total saving of £30,010.46 up to and including 31st March 2018. Aside from the obvious monetary saving, the system now recycles approximately 65% of the water and is in line with the Government's green policies.

Mr Speaker, all three Padel tennis courts have undergone a substantial upgrade. All three received new artificial turf, a much-needed lighting system and the installation of competition-grade perimeter fencing. The advice and suggestions of regular users were taken on board. This is one of the GSLA's most popular facilities and it has now increased in popularity further still as a result of the investment undertaken.

The Boathouse, which now houses the Island Games 2019 office, was given a much-needed facelift. It is now used regularly by many associations and has become the hub for the organisation of the Island Games.

The current red metal girders and fencing at the front of the Tercentenary Hall spectator stands render the first four or five rows unusable or at best offer extremely restricted viewing. These will be replaced by appropriate glass panelling, ensuring that spectators will have a full, unrestricted view in future.

At the swimming pool all works at the plant room are now complete and the modernisation of the system has meant that there is no longer a need for a weekly outsourcing of backwashes, chemical level controls and other related tasks. The existing maintenance agreement was therefore no longer required, resulting in a saving of £65,000 per annum. In addition, extra savings have been experienced through the reduction in chemical consumption, which is approximately 50%; and water consumption, approximately 40%. In effect, this means that the capital expenditure required for the upgrade has been addressed.

As with every financial year, the parks and playgrounds under the GSLA's remit have continued to receive relevant repairs and upgrades. The playgrounds at Chilton Court housing estate and Catalan Bay received major upgrades. The GSLA team are also constantly fixing and maintaining all the park equipment on a rolling basis.

Given the recent sale of the Victoria Stadium and in particular the Victoria Stadium Sports Hall, there is a need to provide a second covered area in the Bayside Sports Complex to meet regulations in order to host international netball events. The provision of a cover over the multi-use games area (MUGA) will not only address this issue but will provide an extra indoor area for all users during the normally wet autumn and winter months.

Works have already started on providing the Gibraltar Cricket Association with outdoor cricket nets. These will be retractable in nature and will make use of an area that was currently used for storage. This facility will replace the old permanent nets, which now lie within the footprint sold to the Gibraltar Football Association. The fact that the nets are retractable will mean that the GSLA gains an extra facility to use for schools, associations and other community-use activities.

GSLA management raised serious concerns regarding the staffing levels at the GSLA swimming pool complex. After an extensive review of the swimming pool complex it was decided to move to a three-shift system. Therefore, the GSLA opened two vacancies at grade 5 pool manager, initially. These vacancies were advertised internally with two Sports and Leisure officers as the successful applicants. Five other vacancies for pool operatives/lifeguards, grade 13, were also advertised as per standard protocols regarding recruitment from within HMGoG agencies, authorities and supply workers. The result of the recruitment is that the facility has now moved to a seven-day week offering, an extended service to the general public.

HMGoG, via the GSLA, have been involved with all the events held at the complex, both at a logistical as well as at financial level. These included UEFA Futsal International matches, the Gibraltar World Pool Masters 2018, the World Snooker Gibraltar Open 2018 and the Euro-Hockey Club Challenge II Men, to name but a few.

350 In addition, the GSLA offers logistical support and facilities for local sports associations to complete their league and development programmes. This support is offered throughout the year. They also assist schools in fulfilling their PE curriculum, both at the Bayside Sports Complex and at the GSLA Swimming Pool Complex.

355 The Summer Sports and Leisure Programme 2017 once again improved on its previous year's attendance. Five hundred and twenty seven children were registered with the main arm of the programme, namely the Sports Train and Stay Play programmes. The Sports Train offered sporting and leadership activities every weekday morning for 7- to 14-year-olds. The Children's Corner offered appropriate sport and recreational activities three days a week for 5- to 6-year-olds. The family evening sessions noticed a marked improvement in attendance, with sessions attracting groups totalling 80-plus on occasions.

360 The Stay and Play programme offered sport, physical, arts and leisure activities for children with disabilities five days a week. This element in particular needed to review its scheduling given the significantly higher attendances, and with this in mind the temporary staff complement has been increased for the upcoming programme.

365 In addition, the Care Agency was actively involved in the induction training programme for 2017, adding to the quality of delivery whilst safeguarding the interests of leaders and users alike.

370 The GSLA also worked in partnership with sports associations – 27 in total – to provide a wide range of sports coaching courses and taster sessions for children and young people. Other positive leisure providers also contributed to the programme, these being the Ministry of Culture, the Ministry of Heritage, the Ministry of Environment, the Gibraltar Health Authority, the King's Bastion Leisure Centre, Childline Gibraltar, St John Ambulance and the Gibraltar Kennel Club. Such is the success of the programme that the sponsorship arrangement with NatWest has been extended. I am therefore glad to report that NatWest will again be supporting the programme during 2018. The programme for 2018 was only launched last week. The 375 Government is grateful to NatWest for their continued support.

Once again, HM Government has supported local sports associations and athletes when travelling abroad to participate in official international competitions. This has been done via the Gibraltar Sports Advisory Council. In addition, sports development initiatives were supported. More so than other years and given the uncertainty that Brexit conveys, special consideration was given to attendances at congresses and annual general meetings. Active involvement in the dealings of international governing bodies has and will become one of the most important aspects of international membership.

385 As per the previous financial year, individuals who presented cases for financial support under the elite category have been supported after applications were considered on a case by case basis.

390 As Minister for Leisure, another of my responsibilities is that of King's Bastion Leisure Centre. I am happy that after three years being run by Leisure Management Services, the centre has gone through great improvements. They have managed to maintain the revenue for 2017 very much the same as 2016, with significant increases in the fitness gym. This is due to the fact that it is well maintained and well run on a commercial basis. The fitness gym and the recreation rooms have had ceiling panels installed, as the paint used to flake off due to dampness. The revenues are the same, despite the fact that membership fees are well below the market value. The games arcade has seen, during the last three years, a vast improvement in both sales and the quality of the equipment. Several new arcade machines were installed including a virtual reality Extreme Rides simulator. A very large LED panel screen, 15 m long by 2.8m high, has been 395 installed at the back of the bowling lanes to enhance the area and also to generate additional revenue from advertising for 2018.

400 By having a full-time maintenance team, many improvements to the Centre can be achieved. They have had to do a considerable amount of painting and repainting because of the historical nature of the building.

Mr Speaker, when the Centre was built under the previous administration, there were hardly any environmental considerations to the manner and form of the construction. So much for 'this Government does not do enough for the environment'. This means that the electricity costs are exorbitant. I know that the hon. Members do not want to hear this. To this end, glass panels to the roof were fitted with sun reflector screens to help keep the temperature lower, particularly during the summers months, and also to save on air conditioning electricity costs. Other parts of the roof have been replaced, due to the poor original design which has given the Centre problems for many years. An automatic glass door was fitted to the entrance of the tunnel. New LED lighting was installed on some of the arcade vaults as well as an LED strip in the passage leading to Commonwealth Park so that the entrance is more appealing.

In 2018 the Centre's main project will be to replace all of the bowling equipment – including pin setters, ball returns, lanes, new scoring system – with brand new equipment ahead of next year's Island Games. All the costs are factored in to the legacy of the Island Games project. We will also be installing a cashless card system whereby visitors to the Centre will be able to use a card which they can credit at one of our on-site kiosks. They will then be able to pay for all the services that we offer with the same card. This includes the arcade machines and the counters in the bowling, fitness gym and ice rink; all will be fitted with readers.

Mr Speaker, all other entities at the Centre are doing well. Boyd's is now a great place for functions. Just 4 Kidz is becoming ever more popular and the Leisure Cinemas is not only bringing the latest films to its screen but it is also having live performances from the heart of London's theatres. We are therefore hopeful that in the next two to three years the upward trend will continue. For this I would like to thank the management of LMS and all its workforce, who have really made the difference. They have contributed to its success. Thank you too to the entities that are part of the Centre – like Boyd's, like Rock Bastion, like the Leisure Cinemas – for being able to work together for the good of the Centre as a whole.

Mr Speaker, I propose to start my summary of all that is being done in preparation for the 2019 Island Games. I would like to take this opportunity to welcome to Gibraltar the International Island Games Association Committee and all the delegates from all the 24 Islands who will be with us for the next four days for their annual general meeting.

When I first thought of presenting to Cabinet the prospect of hosting the Island Games, the operative word that came to my mind was 'legacy'. This is how the London Games were sold to the citizens there. The hon. Member probably does not agree with that, about the legacy, but never mind – he can have his laugh: he who laughs last, laughs best.

I am obviously very grateful to all my Government colleagues who have embraced the concept and are actively working to be able to fulfil this goal. This is a collective goal and never in the history of Gibraltar has a Government invested so much time and effort in sporting projects than the GSLP/Liberal Government. This is going to be transformational.

I also ask people to be patient in the final year before the Games. Yes, there will be disruptions due to construction and preparation for the Games, and even during the actual Games, but in the long run this will be good for Gibraltar.

I can inform this House that all the sporting projects are on budget and on time. At Lathbury, we have a football/rugby pitch, an athletics eight-lane track and field facilities, a 52 m Olympic-size swimming pool, and parking spaces and stores underneath the whole of the complex.

At Europa Point we will have a multi-purpose hall as big as the Tercentenary Hall at the Bayside Complex. We will also have squash courts, a darts arena and indoor nets, as well as dormitories for visiting teams. There will be treatment, changing and conference rooms, as well as bars, cafeterias and facilities. This will be the home of rugby, squash, cricket and darts. It will be used by all indoor sports, such as netball, basketball, Futsal, badminton, table tennis, etc.

The Special Olympics complex is one which is dear to my heart. So much for not looking after the vulnerable. This complex will be transformational for many reasons. We are looking at facilities which will be fully inclusive in every way. The aim is also to provide sheltered employment there, and the complex will have state-of-the-art facilities for all.

455 The shooting range at the North Mole, together with offices, car parking and storage space, is progressing well. These will also be state-of-the-art facilities which will be ready for our Island Games but which will continue to be used for many years into the future.

The student accommodation at Europa Point, which I am leading on, is on track. Again, this will not only be used for the Games but it will be used in the future for students at the University, which is virtually next door.

460 Mr Speaker, the Government has a duty to be positive and to invest in the well-being of our community. This is what we are doing by hosting the Island Games in Gibraltar next year. The benefits are huge. From the outset we focused on delivering the best Island Games ever. When I have travelled to other such Games over the years, I have been stopped and praised by people who remember the Sunshine Games that Gibraltar hosted in 1995. Hosting an Island Games is a great honour and I can say now that the response I have had to date from everyone in our 465 community has been truly exceptional – not so exceptional on that side, I might add.

The members of the Gibraltar Island Games Association Committee are giving of their own time and expertise to organise the best Games ever. They are using the model of the Jersey Games. Therefore, the first thing they did was to form a company which would be managed and run by the (GIGA) Gibraltar Island Games Association. The company now employs three full-time 470 employees: the Chief Executive Officer, Games Director and Logistics and Planning Director.

Further, we have a number of subcommittees which are dealing with all aspects of the organisation. These include finance, legal, accommodation, transport, volunteers, commercial operations, security, Games operation, ceremonies and media. Each subcommittee has a team that work on their own remit. They report on a regular basis to the company. We also have 475 regular meetings with all collectively, to co-ordinate with each other. I would like at this point to highlight that all the members of the subcommittees are doing this work on a purely voluntary basis. On behalf of the Government, I would like to thank them all.

The Island Games office at the Sports Complex Boathouse is the heart of all the organisation of the Games. Things are moving very well and at a fast pace. I am extremely happy at how 480 everything is coming together on the organisational aspect. I have thanked everyone for the work that they are doing. However, I must single out one person for a special thank you and that person is Linda Alvarez. She has put her organisational skills and expertise to very good use.

I would also like to tell all our citizens that soon we will be launching a number of initiatives in relation to the Games. The Games belong to all of us. We must all take on ownership of the 485 Island Games. We will be asking for all in Gibraltar to show what they are really made of as a community and to engage in whichever form they feel they can contribute. The Games should bring us all closer together.

The benefit of the Games goes even further. It will showcase Gibraltar as a forward-looking society and it will expose the beauty of our country. It will also benefit our economy due to the 490 fact that we will have 2,500 athletes, coaches and officials on our shores for at least eight days. All our business and commercial entities will benefit. Many of us will enjoy the sporting programmes that we intend to put on during the Games.

All the work we are doing to create this legacy will not only be in bricks and mortar in the form of the facilities. The legacy will also take on the form of an industry. This sporting industry 495 can be developed further once the facilities are in place. We are already working at using these wonderful facilities to attract sporting teams to come to Gibraltar. We want them here not only to compete against us in tournaments but also to take time training and preparing themselves for the professional arena. Gibraltar will be well placed to attract this sort of market. This will then be a win-win situation, since we will not only host them to spend time and money here, but 500 we will also be able to learn from them as to the training schedules, nutritional aspects and the lifestyle of a professional sportsman. So I will end by saying to everyone in Gibraltar: let's get involved in the Games and be a part of it.

Mr Speaker, I want to close my address this year by saying thank you. I would like to thank all members of the Youth Advisory Council, the Youth Forum – now named the Voice of the Young 505 People – the Gibraltar Sports Advisory Council, all the cultural groups from the arts, drama, photographic and dance fraternity.

Thank you also to all the members of the governing bodies of the sports who are involved in delivering the state-of-the-art facilities which will leave a lasting legacy well after the Island Games has passed. I am grateful to the organising committee of the Island Games, who do this 510 without any financial interest; the team at AKS and at Orfila's that are producing all the architectural and technical designs for all the sporting and cultural projects with which I am involved. Thanks to all those at Technical Services who help me steer these projects.

Thanks also go to the staff at Gibraltar Cultural Services, at the Gibraltar Academy of Music and Performing Arts, at Leisure Management Services from Kings' Bastion Leisure Centre, at the 515 Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, at GBC and, last but not least, at the Youth Service.

Mr Speaker, thanks to you and your staff at the Parliament, and last and definitely by no means least, my staff at the Ministry of Culture without whom I would not be able to implement all the positive policies and manifesto commitments with which I am involved.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, sir, today I deliver my 11th address to this House in what is known as the Budget session, and throughout all of these 11 addresses, on whichever side of the 525 House I may be sitting, my contributions under the section dedicated to sports and leisure have always been the most enjoyable at a personal level.

On sports-related matters I wish to commence by saying that I am a firm believer in unity, wherever possible, for the benefit of Gibraltar's greater interests. I am glad to see that Government continues with the long-existing policy to assist all local sporting bodies to 530 overcome any foreign Government's politically inspired attempts to block our membership of international sporting bodies. The antics and shameful actions taken, above all by our neighbours to the north, are starting to wear thin and I pray that slowly but surely other sports governing bodies will judge Gibraltar's applications on their own merit and not allow themselves to be coerced by our neighbour's unjustified and often unscrupulous arguments. (Banging on desks) In the recent past, we Gibraltarians have rejoiced together in respect of landmark 535 achievements, namely the acceptance of the Gibraltar Football Association as a full member of UEFA and then FIFA. The policy of assisting other sporting associations will certainly continue to receive the Opposition's wholehearted support and I sincerely wish other sporting associations – such as rugby, amongst others – all the very best in their continuing battles to gain their respective international memberships, which are rightfully and legitimately theirs. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker, the GSD Opposition wishes the Gibraltar Football Association all the very best in finally having its own national stadium. It is particularly gratifying to hear that the stadium will now definitely be sited at the Victoria Stadium, a location first promoted by this GSD. (Two 545 Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) It seems that where there is a will there is a way, and therefore the GSD was not wrong from the outset in choosing the Victoria Stadium as the best site for a UEFA and FIFA fully approved facility. The terms and conditions settled between Government and the GFA in agreeing upon a lease means that the GFA will become the custodians of our much loved Victoria Stadium, and therefore we will offer our full support to 550 the GFA in this respect because there have already been more than enough delays in ensuring home matches are played at home – that means within Gibraltar itself. It was indeed a far more viable and attractive option for local sports lovers to attend and support our teams last week, who were playing their first qualifying home matches for the season 2018-19 in respect of the Champions League and Europa League qualification competitions.

I am sure this House is unanimous in wishing our teams participating within the Europa League all the best in their second leg games. (Banging on desks) Both Europa FC and St Joseph's have so far attained a one-all draw, so there is certainly everything to play for in their imminent games to be played this week in order to obtain qualification onto the next stage.

560 Our representatives in the Champions League, namely Lincoln Imps FC, proudly gave local supporters a day to remember by winning their initial match in the qualifying preliminary round against La Fiorita Montegiardino from San Marino. However, despite a very commendable effort, luck did not accompany us and they lost the next match against Drita from Kosovo. We now wish the best of Gibraltarian luck to Lincoln Red Imps FC for their forthcoming international game, which will be within the Europa League setup. (Banging on desks)

565 The forthcoming developments at Victoria Stadium should see an improvement to football facilities in Gibraltar. However, despite the fantastic and ambitious project to be undertaken by the GFA which will see the main pitch upgraded to an UEFA Category 4 stadium – all, luckily, at the GFA's expense through secured funding grants – there is still a great need for additional training facilities if our future generations are to aspire in any way to improve their overall standards. It breaks my heart to see so many Gibraltar-registered football teams having to go 570 over into Spain in order to be able to train in preparation for local and international matches. Indeed, more facilities are very much needed if we are to continue to aspire to progressing on to second rounds and beyond of the qualification stages in respect of the European Champions League and the Europa League itself.

575 The GSD continues to believe that, alongside the new upgraded facility which will soon be enjoyed by the football fraternity, there is still a great need for extensive training facilities in Gibraltar to cater for participants at all levels and in numerous sports. These facilities should ensure that the introduction and development of our youngsters into the world of sports, very often arising from our schools' curriculum and sporting clubs' commitments, are equally catered 580 for. It is the duty of the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority to make these facilities available for our general public at large who wish to partake in sporting activities.

The £16 million which become available to Government from the premiums paid by the GFA should be used wisely and in close consultation with all relevant sporting bodies across the board. This should ensure, as far as reasonably possible, that Gibraltar continues to produce 585 worthy local athletes and develops its wide-ranging sporting talents, often with results which make many of our sporting opponents in official competitions envious of our rather consistent good results.

Many Gibraltarians are currently heavily involved in carefully planned training sessions with the aspiration of proudly representing Gibraltar at the 2019 Island Games, which will for the 590 second time in the Games' history be held in Gibraltar. I am sure I again speak for the whole House as we offer our collective best wishes to all forthcoming participants who, through their committed efforts, will hopefully yet again make us proud of our ever-growing sporting fraternity.

New sporting facilities are currently under construction, as explained by the Minister, and 595 planned to be completed in time for the 2019 Island Games. These facilities will serve Gibraltar beyond the Island Games itself, and therefore it is essential that full consultation takes place with the pertinent sports governing bodies to ensure that both the present and immediate future needs of the sporting fraternity are met. The old Victoria Stadium sports hall now comes under the lease purchased by the GFA, so it is essential that facilities hereto provided under this 600 roof are re-provided in convenient locations. The Tercentenary Sports Hall itself has over the recent past proved extremely useful and popular to many sports participants and I wish the same degree of success in respect of the new facilities to be built. It is of utmost importance that the needs of sports participants are met in the new facilities being built, without cutting any corners.

605 With your leave, Mr Speaker, I would like to repeat an offer I made last year, as well as the year before that, during the Budget debate. Although I am a firm believer that individual sports governing bodies should be allowed to manage their own affairs with no political interference, I once again urge the Minister for Sports, in his capacity as Chairman of the Sports and Leisure

610 Authority, to take a particular interest to ensure that publicly owned facilities are used in a fair manner for the benefit of all sports lovers. There is both a duty and a moral obligation for the Sports Authority to ensure that, where desired by a club or individual citizen, membership in their relevant local governing body is open to all in an equal and fair manner. I offer myself to sit down and discuss with the Minister for Sports possible avenues which may be looked into in order to set up a special independent body tasked with matters pertaining to and requiring 615 arbitration related to local sporting issues. Some disputes have been dragging on for far too long and now I am hopeful that, by working together with all affected parties, solutions can and should be found.

Mr Speaker, I wish to reaffirm my personal convictions that through the collective celebration of social events participating Gibraltarians contribute towards reinforcing our identity, culture and history as a people and a community. Both the performing and fine arts fraternities always 620 prove themselves to be very proactive within their own specialised areas and I take this opportunity to congratulate all the groups and individuals who have done Gibraltar extremely proud through their international participations – and, I am pleased to say, in numerous cases even getting top awards. It is always a personal and collective pleasure to be able to say how 625 proud we are of the international achievements of our fellow Gibraltarians.

During their last term in office, Government purchased both the Queen’s Cinema and the Queen’s Hotel sites for the development of a theatre and related activities. There are somewhat mixed feelings among the local community as to how these sites will be developed and at what cost. Government announced through its 2015 election manifesto that a lot of progress on the 630 design of the new Queen’s National Theatre had been made in order to make the old Queen’s Cinema a venue for touring productions. It went on to say that, now that preliminary land-use designs had been finalised, they would continue to work with the committee of local drama experts to finalise the internal designs and facilities required, alongside exploring the possibility of commercial use of the theatre complex facilities. This now seems to be yet another matter 635 which still remains to be addressed ‘shortly’ – whenever ‘shortly’ may be. Could it be that after such a short period of inactivity the Committee of local drama experts no longer exists?

Government has set aside in this year’s Estimates £2.1 million in order to subsidise a two-day mega concert. However, the forecast outturn for last year in respect of this event has turned out to be £4.4 million and it is now confirmed that we had an actual expenditure of £3,485,441 for 640 2016-17. Given the costs of running the mega concert of the last two years, I would love to know how this year it is estimated it will cost slightly less than half of what the 2017 mega concert turned out to be.

But coming back to the Queen’s Cinema site, I sincerely hope that the development of this site will be real value for money and that our local culture, in the widest sense of the words, is 645 enhanced. Local performers often may be heard to say that if we can afford so many millions for a two-day event, then surely our local performers, entertainers and audiences are entitled to ask for a theatre which is fit for purpose and available throughout the year.

Mr Speaker, moving on now to educational matters, I wish to start by citing from a passage I very recently came across. It says:

Children must be able to play, study and grow in a peaceful environment. Woe to anyone who stifles their joyful impulse to hope!

650 With this in mind, I cannot stress enough the need to ensure we get it absolutely right when planning and building facilities which will serve our children’s educational purposes in preparation for adult life.

Much has been said in respect of Government’s projects for the re-provision and expansion of our school buildings. For our pupils’ benefit, I wish to recommend that decisions taken, or to 655 be taken shortly, should be based above all upon feedback received from the professionals in the field, namely classroom teachers themselves. Unfortunately, very recently – in fact, a month ago – the Gibraltar Teachers' Association highlighted that to date they have felt ignored and not consulted on the majority of the educational reforms that the Department of Education has embarked on.

660 Teachers, who wish to bring closure to the new school building debate, stressed that they continued to disagree with the project, citing the high levels of congestion in the Waterport area, the difficulty in evacuating the buildings in case of an emergency, the potential for unhealthy competition between the schools, difficulties in behaviour management and pastoral care – bullying, etc. – as issues of grave concern which they hope that Government considers 665 carefully in order to mitigate potential negative impact that co-location may have on the education and well-being of pupils.

Through feedback received from teachers I fully empathise with their frustration, in that there is no forum or structure for the classroom professionals to share ideas, concerns or expertise in a meaningful way. Teachers go on to say that very little information has filtered 670 down to them on plans to align key stages, introduce vocational education and provide a co-educational environment in the secondary sector. I look forward to seeing how the Minister for Education ... whom I am told acknowledged there had been an unfortunate disconnection between his Ministry and teachers and I sincerely hope he will address this issue in the immediate future with a view to making amends. Given that teachers have reinforced the need 675 for and importance of vertical communication on the current and future reforms in education, I sincerely hope that their voices are heard if the vision being acted upon by Government is to succeed. Again, I fully empathise with the teaching profession who, on the issue of co-location, feel a golden opportunity has been lost to explore different models within the constraints of the land available to achieve an optimum educational solution. Teachers feel that the issue is not 680 just about what is being provided, but about what could have been produced had there been more meaningful consultation with classroom teachers themselves.

As both a teacher and a past President of the Gibraltar Teachers Association, and someone who still has educational matters extremely close to his heart, I extend a recommendation to the Minister for Education to listen to and work as closely as possible with classroom teachers, albeit 685 alongside his management teams. Classroom teachers want to be part of any process that changes our education system and want to be involved in meaningful consultation before final decisions are taken. Surely the way forward proposed by these professionals can only but contribute to the well-being and best possible future of our children. This is something which I hope we can all agree is paramount.

690 Through their latest feedback, the Teachers' Association claim that we know that at present the majority of their members would be in favour of key stages alignment to coincide with the year in which pupils are scheduled to move from lower to upper primary, and likewise from upper primary to secondary schools. These realignments seem to make logistical sense in respect of providing teaching and learning resources which the schools necessarily require.

695 I would like to take this opportunity to also recommend to the Minister that in their plans for building and resourcing of new schools careful consideration be given to current trends in respect of developments in school curriculums. An example of this is the recent initiative already taken by one of our locally based private schools, which now offers computer science at both GCSE and A-Level. It is courses like these which will serve to prepare today's pupils to become 700 the skilled workforce which Gibraltar will need tomorrow. Indeed, the future will be dominated by digital technology.

Likewise, Mr Speaker, the GSD have in the past raised the concept of modern apprenticeships and we still believe we need to offer more in this field than we currently provide. Those pupils who do not wish to pursue an academic future need to be provided with the opportunity of a 705 modern apprenticeship programme, which if properly structured has the same standing as higher education. We need to create a gold standard for an apprenticeship programme, so that employers have confidence in the system. The time for investment is now, not just in formal academic education leading towards entry into higher education, but also in the co-ordination of training and skills through vocational courses that carry international accreditation.

710 Mr Speaker, desiring only the very best in respect of the forthcoming educational reforms, I cannot but end by reinforcing that the views of the professionals in this field must be heard and acted upon. There is no better formula for success than to cultivate a sense of ownership amongst all tasked with the education of our children.

715 Before I sit down, Mr Speaker, I, like many others, wish to take this opportunity to thank you and the staff at Parliament for the courteous and professional manner with which you deal with all Members throughout the year.

720 But in this year in particular, it is the 50th anniversary – that is, dating back to 1968 – that today's Minister for Education, Dr Cortes, and today's Shadow Minister for Education, namely myself, first became your humble pupils. Fifty years ago, when some Members of this House had not even been born, we, as mere students, young and naïve, learned a lot from our evergreen deputy headteacher. Mr Speaker, I am sure Dr Cortes and I still value all the careful and patient advice that you offer us.

725 As the Minister, mainly the lead or the head of delegation in the CPA set up, already mentioned yesterday, we have got to thank our Honorary Secretary, Mr Paul Martinez. He is very patient in the way he prepares our travel arrangements, the way he puts up with our needs, quite often working against the clock.

730 It has been a real pleasure that Members on both sides of the House have been able to work together on Commonwealth Parliamentary Association matters. Above all, it has been a pleasure to support the head of delegation, whoever that person may be at the time, to put forward and gain international Commonwealth support in our aspirations to self-determination and, above all, against the bullying tactics by our next-door neighbours.

735 I hope that the next few years will see us growing in success in the CPA. We have hosted CPA conferences in Gibraltar before and I believe the hon. Lady may soon be able to announce that perhaps there may be other minor CPA things happening. If that is the case, then she can rest assured of our support.

740 Mr Speaker, when we come to write down our memoirs of the CPA, I am sure the Clerk will help to jog our memories. We have been through thick and thin together: the hon. Lady and I have had good laughs riding on a tuk-tuk in Bangladesh but we have also had sad moments when we have been mugged in the streets of Cameroon. But it is all part and parcel of the daily life of a parliamentarian! (Laughter and banging on desks)

745 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, on that convivial and exciting note, I wonder whether we might recess for 20 minutes to allow Mr Reyes and Dr Cortes to take an apple to their teacher and for most people to catch up on this morning's magnificent edition of Panorama, which will help to set in context the next couple of hours of the debate.

Mr Speaker: The House will recess for some 20 minutes.

The House recessed at 10.58 a.m. and resumed its sitting at 11.20 a.m.

Appropriation Bill 2018 –
For Second Reading –
Debate continued

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

750 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, it is the first time that I rise to acclaim from both sides of the House!

This will be my 11th consecutive Budget speech, four of which I have delivered as Gibraltar's first Minister for Justice, one as deputy leader of my party and five as Her Majesty's Leader of the Opposition.

755 It has been a great privilege for me to have been able to serve the people of Gibraltar during that time and I want to thank everyone who during that time has helped me in my political journey over those and previous years, including those who have done so from an apolitical perspective, such as public servants in Departments that I have served and of course members of staff here in this Parliament, who have always been tremendously helpful.

760 Many thanks also go, Mr Speaker, to you, with whom exchanges that we have had have been almost as enjoyable as my exchanges –

Mr Speaker: I would like to think we have a special relationship. (Laughter)

765 Hon. D A Feetham: Indeed we have, Mr Speaker! Those exchanges have been almost as enjoyable as my exchanges with the Hon. the Chief Minister over the years, (Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear.) even if less acerbic, Mr Speaker.

I also want to extend my gratitude to the former Speaker of this House, Haresh Budhrani.

770 During my first Budget speech as Leader of the Opposition I said that the Opposition would never make political capital against the Government at the expense of this community or without clear foundation in truth or fact, but that what the Government could not do was equate its own narrow political interests with the interests of this community. They are not the same, Mr Speaker.

775 I am not going to stand here and pretend that on every issue the Opposition under my former leadership fell on the right side of that very difficult line separating party-political partisanship from what is in the best interests of the community, but on this issue, on the issue of the public finances of Gibraltar and the absolute mockery that the Government has made of these annual debates and the extreme economic re-engineering of the way the public finances of Gibraltar are managed, operated and indeed presented, we have been absolutely right and I am proud of the work that the Opposition has done in this respect. (Banging on desks)

780 We have been firm and there is no doubt that we have acted in the best interests of Gibraltar, a firmness that has included walking out of this House when the Government refused to answer questions on how the money in Credit Finance Company Ltd had been spent –

785 A Member: And properly [inaudible].

Hon. D A Feetham: – and it also involved, for the very first time last year, voting against these Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure. It was the right decision to take last year and it is the right decision this year (Banging on desks) and I can hold my hand on my heart and say that if I had to do it all over again, despite the steep personal political price that I would be made to pay for that decision, I would do it all over again without any hesitation (Banging on desks) because the logical consequence of our discourse in relation to public finances – that the Government is undertaking extreme re-engineering of the way our public finances are managed, operated and presented – the logical consequence of that is that we cannot vote in favour of these Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure.

795 That is not only my view, Mr Speaker: it is the view of the Chief Minister, because it is he who said to us for the very first time – and he was right and I was wrong on that occasion – he was the first one to say that the logical consequence of our position in 2016 was that we ought to vote against the Budget. (Interjections)

800 I was extremely hurt, Mr Speaker, by the contribution of the Hon. the Father of the House. Such was the venom (Interjection and laughter) of his criticisms of my speech last year that a former Government Minister sent me a text that said: 'Are you the only Member in opposition?

Te va gastar el nombre!

805 All those years, Mr Speaker, that I spent as Leader of the Opposition empathising with the Hon. the Father of the House – empathising - a quality that the hon. Lady who laughs, to my left, said that I lacked, and reiterated time and time again that I lacked. Buckets full of empathy directed at the hon. Member in all my speeches from this side of the House when he was tearing his hair out at forming part of a Government that was spend, spend, spend, funded by debt, debt and more debt. I told him to join our side because he would feel more at home here than 810 there.

When the Government had clearly lost its way, moved away from GSLP core values that he had invented, it was I who called for a return to the rainy day fund policy of the hon. Gentleman.

815 When he appeared on public television, explaining the fact that there had been huge overspend across Government Departments and saying that his colleagues had been hypnotised by consultants, I congratulated him from this side of the House, saying that he was the only Member of the Government – (Several Members: Brainwashed.) brainwashed, that's right that he was the only Member of the Government – who had managed to resist the insidious and the pernicious effect of those brainwashing consultants.

820 When the overspend on the mega concert reached £1.4 million in 2016 and £1.5 million in 2017 – this year it is going to be £2.6 million – the Hon. Mr Clinton and I took a leaf out of his book. We became disciples of him and we said, 'We are not taking tickets for the mega concert at taxpayers' expense.'

825 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Clinton never did. You always did.

Hon. D A Feetham: I even, on one occasion, said that he had become the only non-champagne-drinking socialist on the Government benches –

830 Hon. Chief Minister: Until we put the duty up! (Laughter)

Hon. D A Feetham: – and this year I would have said to him, congratulated him indeed, that he was the only socialist on the Opposition benches unaffected by the increase in duty on champagne. Indeed, when I could see that every single Member of the Government was thinking collectively, 'Oh, my God, there goes the price of bubbly!' he was stoic in his sedentary position.
835

Hon. Chief Minister: It gives me flatulence. That is what flatulence does.

840 Hon. D A Feetham: And then, Mr Speaker, when on Monday night I was wallowing in self-pity at having my affections and my empathy rejected by the Hon. the Father of the House, it suddenly dawned on me that the true target of his criticisms was not me but the leader of his own party, (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) because when he says that the public sector has become unsustainable, that not keeping to budgets is in conflict with the policy of the Government, it is an indictment of what has been occurring on the Government benches for the last seven years. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

845 Indeed, I also came to realise that it was an invitation by the Hon. the Father of the House for me to point the political cannons at the Chief Minister, because in using the term 'unsustainable' and in talking about 'not keeping to budgets' he is echoing the very criticisms and the very words that I have uttered from this side of the House as Leader of the Opposition in my main criticisms of the Government in the five years that I was delivering speeches from this side of the House.

850 Therefore, Mr Speaker, because I have tremendous affection for the hon. Gentleman, the Father of the House, and because that is not incompatible with his desire for me to point the cannons at the Chief Minister, I am now going to do precisely that.

Unfortunately, I have had to rewrite my speech and I have had to be far more detailed in the criticisms of the Government than I would otherwise have been. What I want to do, Mr Speaker, is to trace today for members of the public the inherently flawed, the woefully contradictory and indeed duplicitous nature of the hon. Gentlemen's economic discourse and indeed their policy that they have pursued since 2010 – not only 2011; 2010, when they were in Opposition – and why the hon. Gentlemen opposite, except for the Father of the House, I have to tell him, cannot be trusted when it comes to anything that they utter on the public finances of Gibraltar. I am going to explain and trace for members of the public why we have ended up in a situation where these Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure and the numbers they contain can no longer be trusted as a complete indication of the economic health of this community.

As the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition said during his erudite and impressive intervention on Monday, (Laughter) backed up ably by Mr Clinton as he always does, these books – indeed not only this book but every single Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure going back to 2013 – represent and provide only half of the true picture of what the Government has spent during that time and what the Government has borrowed. The other part, or £772 million worth, is hidden away in Government-owned companies in respect of which the Government refuses to answer questions. That is a complete break with the past, and the reason for that is that the hon. Gentlemen opposite were so desperate to get elected in 2011 that they set in motion a series of events that has led them to systematically destroy the ability of this Parliament to properly analyse the public finances of Gibraltar. (Banging on desks)

Members of this House will recall, and members of the public will recall, that in 2011 the hon. Gentlemen fought an election on two wholly contradictory bases. The first was that the public finances of this community were in a ruinous state and the public debt was dangerously high. That is what they were saying in 2010, an argument that he continued after the election because on 18th January 2012 he appeared in a special ministerial broadcast on public television with a national statement saying that there was a 'serious public debt problem', a 'serious public finance problem' and a £100 million black hole hidden behind an 'impenetrable curtain'.

Of course, there was only one problem with that discourse, and it was this: that if it was right, the prudent, sensible and reasonable thing for hon. Gentlemen to have done was not to have fought an election on the basis of a spending manifesto. Or if they did, in the same way as a month after that General Election he made that ministerial statement, he could have then said to the people of Gibraltar, 'Well, look here, the GSD have this mountain of debt hidden behind this impenetrable curtain and we cannot now fund the manifesto that we have promised.'

Mr Speaker, make no mistake, no one in the history of Gibraltar politics has promised more than the hon. Gentleman promised in 2011: £750 million in capital projects; a freeze on rents, rates, electricity; donating every single last penny of Government surpluses to Community Care. There has never been a higher-spending Government than the Government that the hon. Gentleman led from 2012 to 2015 and the one that the hon. Gentleman the Father of the House talks about unsustainability and talks about having to keep within budgets.

Of course, even in a benign political community such as the community that we live in, the contradiction of being broke in 2011 and then spending money like confetti was not lost on some seasoned political observers, because in late 2012 Christine Vasquez asked the hon. Gentleman to explain how it was all possible in the light of what he said barely 12 months earlier, and his response was that he had cured the problem!

Mr Speaker, it is of course not sensible to suggest that the public finances in 2011 were anything other than sound, but even with the soundness of those public finances it was simply impossible to pay for their manifesto out of Government revenue or through the Government's own ability to borrow directly. We simply did not have £750 million in the bank to spend and we did not have the capacity to borrow, as a Government, £750 million in order to pay for the capital projects that he had promised at the election.

The true reason why we find ourselves debating only half of Gibraltar's public finances today is that he wanted to deliver on a manifesto that was simply not deliverable without the kind of 905 shenanigans – because that is what they are, Mr Speaker – that we have seen over the last seven years of their term in Government. It is the Chief Minister’s pursuit of winning the 2011 election and re-election in 2015 that has led the Government down the road of opacity and has made it necessary for the Government to disable parliamentary scrutiny of the public finances of Gibraltar.

910 This is what he did, Mr Speaker. He started by transferring Government debentures, which rank as Government debt, into the Gibraltar Savings Bank. And I have to say I felt a little hurt by the Hon. the Father of the House implying that I did not understand that not all the Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures came from the Gibraltar debentures. Of course I do! You only need to look at the Public Auditor’s report – 121 in the latest one that he issued, and indeed it has 915 formed part of my address in previous speeches. The reality is that the Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures in March 2011 were £27.6 million, and according to the Hon. the Father of the House are just less than £1 billion today. Of course, prior to March 2012, transferring debentures from the Government to the Gibraltar Savings Bank would have reduced gross public debt – indeed it did – but it would not have allowed the Government to use the money in the 920 Gibraltar Savings Bank to pay for its manifesto commitments or Government expenditure. He knows that. On the contrary, it meant that the Government had less money to spend.

I will explain that. Every time a Government debenture was paid so that that money could then be reinvested into the Gibraltar Savings Bank, it involved a reduction in cash reserves of the Government. So, if you had a debenture holder of a Government debenture to the value of 925 £30,000, when that was transferred into the Gibraltar Savings Bank it involved a dual process. The first was the Government paying, out of its own money, £30,000 to the debenture holder, satisfying the debt owed by the Government to that debenture holder. He then transferred that money into the Gibraltar Savings Bank, but by doing that, every single time there is a transfer there is also an equal reduction in the cash reserves of the Government. Indeed, that is why at 930 the same time as the Government was reducing gross public debt by transferring and converting Government debentures into the Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures, cash reserves went down – from £234 million in December 2011 to £86 million in March 2013 and £73.2 million in March 2015. Not all of that is going to be explained by the transfer of those debentures, but certainly a large part of it, Mr Speaker.

935 It also had the effect of increasing net debt, and the consequence of that was that the Government also had less capacity to borrow, because it will be recalled that, at the time, our net debt ceiling, or the debt limits of this community – the Government’s debt limits – were pegged to net debt as a proportion of recurrent revenue. So, every time the Government put its hand in its pocket and paid out of its cash reserves for a Government debenture so that that 940 could be transferred into the Gibraltar Savings Bank, it had the effect of increasing net debt and it then meant that the Government was nearer to the legal borrowing limit. And indeed throughout 2013, 2014 and 2015 the Government was dangerously close to the legal borrowing limits.

So the Government, as a consequence of this policy, did not have the cash in the bank – 945 indeed, it had accentuated a problem with cash in the bank – and it did not have the capacity to borrow to pay for its manifesto commitments. So what the Government then did was amend the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act in March 2012, taking out the requirement that all investments in the Gibraltar Savings Bank be limited to cash deposits or their equivalent. In other words, prior to 2012 the proceeds of debentures in the Gibraltar Savings Bank had to be invested in cash or 950 their equivalents, very safe form of investments. After that date, and as a consequence of the amendment that the hon. Gentleman made, which we opposed from this side of the House, Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures or the proceeds thereof could be invested in anything.

Whilst I was already foreshadowing in 2013 the fact that the Government was gearing itself up to using the proceeds of the Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures to pay for its manifesto 955 promises, or at least Government expenditure, what I did not know until days before the 2013 by-election was that the Government had not only changed the law but set up a company called

Credit Finance Company Ltd into which it caused the Gibraltar Savings Bank to pay £400 million, which was then used to pay for the commuted pensions of civil servants and loans to third parties, amongst other things which have traditionally been an expense of the Government. And whilst the Father of the House, in his usual style of attempting to conflate the arguments, says to us, 'But this book contains the pensions that we pay to civil servants and it has doubled in the last few years,' of course it does, Mr Speaker, but the commuted pensions of civil servants is an expense of the Government and it would have otherwise been reflected in these Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure if they had not taken the decision to allow Credit Finance Company Ltd to pay for it. We do not know what the balance of that money, that £400 million, has been used for, save for this.

What we do know is that about £300 million – easily said, but think about it: £300 million – of that money in Credit Finance was then paid to Gibraltar Investment Holdings Ltd as a loan to that company, a Government-owned company that is at the top of the pyramid of all Government-owned companies and which the Father of the House rightly explained in this House had traditionally been used in order to fund the cash requirements of all Government-owned companies, save perhaps for GJBS, which he told me was self-funding. So, hey presto! By a miracle you have an injection of £300 million into Government company coffers without the Government having to borrow directly; indeed, without the Government having to make a contribution from its own cash. And then they have got the audacity to say that that does not distort the public finances of Gibraltar.

Let's think about it. If they had not injected £300 million from the Gibraltar Savings Bank into Credit Finance, into Gibraltar Investment Holdings Ltd, and the Government wanted, if it had the money – it did not have the money, but if the Government wanted to make that injection, it would have had to do so itself, which it is not doing because it is doing it via Government-owned companies and the money in the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

But what is extraordinary about this is that for a Government that issues press releases about everything and anything – and I exempt the Hon. the Father of the House from this as well; for anything and everything they issue press releases – they said absolutely nothing about the fact that they had set up a company and injected £400 million from the Gibraltar Savings Bank into it, which then had £300 million being injected into the company, Gibraltar Investment Holdings Ltd, that has always been used by successive Governments to fund the cashflow requirements of Government-owned companies.

No wonder that in 2012 contributions to the Improvement and Development Fund from the Consolidated Fund ... The Improvement and Development Fund, for those listening, Mr Speaker, is the fund that has traditionally been used by the Government in order to fund Government projects; the Consolidated Fund is the fund into which the Government pays all its revenue. Well, in 2012, contributions into the Improvement and Development Fund from the Consolidated Fund were £181 million, whereas the actual for last year was £25 million and the forecast outturn for this year is £26 million – 13% of what it was in 2012.

This is financial engineering of the most extreme kind. They have completely altered the way the Government funds its programme and the way the public finances are structured, and without a political mandate to do so.

When he was accusing the GSD of being addicted to debt and of the public finances being in a ruinous state whilst at the same time promising the lollies to everybody, he did not say to the electorate in 2011, 'But I am going to do it differently – I am now going to be using the Gibraltar Savings Bank and I am going to be using Government-owned companies in order to do so.' He did not say that. We only found out about all of this because I asked him the now infamous question in this House, 'Has the Government directly or indirectly provided any kind of financial assistance to the owners of the Sunborn?' and he said no. And as I was walking down Main Street one day, somebody took me to one side with a lot of mystery and said, 'That's not the truth – have a look at the company that owns the Sunborn because there's a mortgage in relation to that company.' And then I –

Hon. Chief Minister: Who was it?

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I am not going to tell you who it was! Mr Speaker, please! (Laughter) I know I am charitable nowadays, but that is just going to the extreme. Actually, he would be surprised if he knew who it was.

1015

As a consequence of checking the company that owns the Sunborn and seeing that there was a mortgage registered in favour of Credit Finance Company Ltd – that is how we found out that the Government had transferred £400 million from the Gibraltar Savings Bank into that company. Talk about lack of transparency! That a Government fails to inform the people of Gibraltar before and after a General Election – well, nearly after, because it was on the dawn of the by-election in 2013 – that it was going to be funding its projects and its programmes using Gibraltar Savings Bank money and Government-owned companies is appalling, it really is.

1020

What is worse is that this had to have been planned before the 2011 election. It had to be planned, Mr Speaker, because you do not change the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act three months after you are elected, as they did in 2012, and you do not start shifting Government debentures into the Gibraltar Savings Bank and then use Gibraltar Savings Bank money to transfer £400 million into Credit Finance and then £300 million into Gibraltar Investment Holdings if it was not planned. It must have been planned.

1025

When I ask the people of Gibraltar and the people listening to this debate who are you going to trust on this issue, I ask them to ask themselves this very simple question: do you think that you were not entitled to be told about this in 2011? And the answer inevitably must be a resounding yes.

1030

But it does not end there, because this modus operandi – that is what it is, a modus operandi – was repeated in 2015 and they kept the electorate in the dark about their true intentions during the 2015 General Election. There was a huge sense of déjà vu on this side of the House when the first two months post that election the Government changed the legal borrowing limits without having told the people of Gibraltar they intended to do that in 2015.

Not only did they do that, but then during the Budget a few months later the Hon. the Chief Minister announced for the very first time that the Government, through a Government-owned company, had borrowed another £300 million – mortgaged all the housing estates in Gibraltar – and they failed to tell the people of Gibraltar that in 2015.

1040

The consequence of that is that now our combined public debt is well over £1.2 billion; £1.2 billion as a consequence of two ‘Oops, I forgot!’ moments in 2011 and 2015.

1045

And it is even less transparent now than it was in 2015. In 2015 the Government published a little table which the hon. Gentleman in his New Year speech in 2015 described as a balance sheet for Credit Finance Company Ltd. It was nothing of the sort, but since 2016 they have refused to publish even that – how the money in Credit Finance is being spent – and the result is this: that we have a gross public debt owed by the Government directly of £447 million, but an extra £772 million debt in Government-owned companies that we know of, which the Government says is not debt.

1050

Again I ask the people of Gibraltar: is that a debt that this community, Gibraltar, owes? They may well hide behind us there, as the Hon. Mr Isola hid behind what he said – ‘What we have is what we have’ – and he said the legal debt is £447 million, hiding behind technical legalities. But when you strip away those technical legalities and you ask the question how much does the community truly owe, the community truly owes more than £1.2 billion. And we do not know, because they refuse to tell us, how much of that £772 million in Government-owned companies has been spent or is in cash – in other words, what is the cashflow position of the community likely to be in the future and what can or cannot we afford as a community in the future.

1055

We do not know what part of Government expenditure – in other words, the cost of running the Government – is being paid for by the proceeds of this hidden debt and therefore whether the Government is or is not running its account on a surplus of revenue over expenditure. What we do know is that even without that extra credit card that the debt in Government-owned companies represents, there has undoubtedly been over the last seven years an approximation between recurrent revenue and recurrent expenditure, and next year there is, as the Hon. Mr Clinton has said to you in his address, a predicted budget deficit, something that we have been concerned about over the last five years because undoubtedly there has been an approximation between the recurrent revenue and recurrent expenditure.

1065 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman said, 'Well, debt has to be properly invested; there is no problem with debt as long as it is properly invested,' and, 'Accumulated debt is bad for the community if it is not used for the benefit of the community.' But the problem is that we cannot see and this Parliament cannot see how this money is being spent. It cannot properly assess, even by their yardsticks, whether this debt is properly deployed and properly utilised or not.

1070 The Hon. the Chief Minister said, 'Well, we are investing in the public sector for the benefit ... and remembering the sacrifices of the evacuation and the referendum generation,' and he then said, 'And I prefer to make sure that we are living within sustainable means' – I think he said – 'rather than raise taxes.' But, Mr Speaker, does he not realise that in fact debt is deferred taxation and what the hon. Gentleman is doing is saddling future generations of this community with monumental debt? And we cannot properly see how that debt is being paid: that is the problem with this Government's economic discourse.

1075 Mr Speaker, I now move on to speeches from other Members of the Government that we would like to focus on. The Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister (Interjections) rightly pointed out that there had been 10 briefings, in relation to Brexit, of the Opposition. Indeed, I recognise that and I also recognise, for the avoidance of any doubt, that the Government is doing all it can in a very difficult situation. I hope that, as we recognise that, they would also recognise that if we had been on the other side of the House we would, in our own way, have done exactly the same – in other words, done whatever we could in order to safeguard the position of this community.

1085 But there is a significant difference between how we would have approached it and how they have approached it, because although they have briefed us on 10 separate occasions in relation to what they are doing in relation to Brexit, that is a far cry from what they should have done in the public interest, which should have been to work with the Opposition (A Member: Hear, hear) (Banging on desks) in order to ensure that there is a road map to best protect this community.

1090 In 2013, when I first became Leader of the Opposition, a role that I do not serve in today, (Interjections) I brought a motion to this House in which I called on the Government and the Opposition, three years before the referendum – we did not even have a date for a referendum – calling on us to work together in order to set out a road map for how this community approached Brexit if it happened, because even then I was concerned certainly that it could happen, even though I thought that it would not. Despite the fact that that motion that I brought to this House was approved unanimously by the House with amendments from the Chief Minister, not once did we meet from 2013 to 2016 in order to discuss these issues. That, I think, is a reflection of the way that the Government approaches these matters, which is briefings fine, but the reality of the situation is that the Government does not really want to work with this side of the House in order to produce a road map that is in the best interests of this community.

1100 Mr Speaker, I turn to some of the comments that were made by the hon. Lady, Minister Sacramento. She said during her intervention that it was wrong for the GSD Government to have allowed and to sell Government properties to sitting tenants. That is what she said, but doesn't she realise that just before the 1996 General Election, which the GSLP lost, they had committed themselves to selling Edinburgh Estate, and that when the GSD got elected in 1996 it ensured that Edinburgh Estate went into the housing stock? Does she not realise that? And does she not realise that we may have sold flats to sitting Government tenants, but what we did not do was hock and mortgage Government housing estates? Does she not realise that also? (Banging on desks) And when she said, 'Housing has always been a problem but a problem that they created

1115 and one that was at the low end of their priorities', does she not recall that we built at Bishop Canilla House; Mid Harbours, the first rental estate in Gibraltar since Varyl Beg, was constructed in the 1970s? Doesn't she recall that? Doesn't she recall that Edinburgh House – they would have sold – we made sure formed part of the housing stock? Does she not recall Waterport Terrace and Bayview, Nelson and Cumberland?

1120 How on earth she can say that the GSD did absolutely nothing for housing is really beyond me, and when you start losing arguments is when you start overstating your case, as did the Hon. the Minister for Housing during her intervention. What she should do is to make sure that her own manifesto promises in 2011 are kept to, because in 2011 they promised that they would make sure that everybody on the pre-list and on the housing waiting list in 2011 would be homed in four years if they were in Government, and there are still 178 people waiting for their homes. That is what she should do. (Banging on desks)

1125 Mr Speaker, I now turn to one of the areas under my shadow responsibility, financial services. This is one area where the Opposition is not going to make financial services susceptible – as indeed the gaming sector – to the normal cut and thrust of politics. We accept, and I have again no hesitation in recognising, that the Hon. Minister Isola is doing everything that he can in relation to this particular area, and I congratulate him for the effort that he has 1130 put in over the years that he has been holding that position. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

1135 There is no doubt that this is an area where Brexit is causing the most uncertainty and instability and there is also no doubt, in my view, that that uncertainty is not being helped by what the CEO of the Financial Services Commission, Samantha Barrass, described on 18th December 2017 as 'a new approach to enforcement by the FSC'. It follows statements that she also made to the Insurance Times that any criticism that Gibraltar is a light-touch regulator is outdated, with her comments being widely interpreted as a criticism of the regulatory regime under her predecessor.

1140 I want to make absolutely clear that the comments that I am about to make are not in any way, shape or form a criticism of the Government. I recognise that the FSC is independent of the Government, but I am under a duty to reflect in this House any concerns that I perceive in the finance centre and amongst professionals in relation to the enforcement regime being adopted by the FSC. That is my duty and that is what I intend to discharge today.

1145 Gibraltar has always had a very well-regulated financial services and insurance sector with an approachable regulator focused on risk and outcome. It is one of the reasons why professionals have been able to market Gibraltar so successfully as a business-friendly jurisdiction and indeed a jurisdiction of choice in a number of areas.

1150 There is no doubt in my mind, however, that this new approach to enforcement is harming the jurisdiction at a critical juncture, and there is considerable disquiet in the finance centre in general with what is perceived to be a testosterone-fuelled enforcement regime which may discourage new investment and may lead to existing operators questioning their place within the market.

1155 There are many excellent and impressive professionals working in the Gibraltar Financial Services Commission; indeed, the vast majority fall into that category. I also recognise that their job is a very difficult one indeed. If businesses fail, it is human nature to look for scapegoats and inevitably questions will turn to whether regulators could have done more to identify problems at an earlier juncture and prevent those failures or investor losses, but there is a balance to be struck post-enterprise.

1160 This new enforcement policy has, to many, become a runaway train, Mr Speaker. It has been described to me, by people who are measured and reasonable, as Taliban in its approach. I have professionally acted for and against the Gibraltar Financial Services Commission over the last 18 years and I have never seen a profession so concerned by this new approach to enforcement.
It is reflected in the statistics for last year alone – the last time that I asked this question in this 1165 House – when there were 10-fold increases in appeals to the courts from decisions of the Gibraltar Financial Services Commission.

I said recently that one area where the FSC needs to think carefully whether its new enforcement strategy is good for the jurisdiction is in the use of inspectors under section 8 of the Financial Services (Information Gathering and Co-operation) Act 2013, where a skilled person report will do just as well and is far less intrusive. The power of inspectors is phenomenally intrusive. An inspector can question employees of a firm on oath and will have unimpeded access to confidential information. Refusal to co-operate is a criminal offence. It has been traditionally used in cases of fraud and carries with it a considerable reputational stigma. Indeed, the power to appoint inspectors is not new. In relation to insurance companies it has existed in the Financial Services (Insurance Companies) Act 1989 for many years. However, because of its draconian nature, it has seldom been used in the past.

The one critical distinction, however, between the 2013 and the 1989 Act is who pays for the cost of an inspector. Whereas in the 2013 Act the regulated entity pays for the cost of an investigation, under the 1989 Act it is the Gibraltar Financial Services Commission that pays for it. The position can be usefully contrasted with the UK, where it is the regulator that bears the burden of paying for the cost of an investigation. Since the introduction of the 2013 Act, the FSC has made it absolutely clear that any appointment of inspectors would be made under the 2013 Act rather than any supervisory Act where the FSC would be forced to pick up the Bill. It is a decision that is driven purely by cost and the attraction of having wide, intrusive powers.

Mr Speaker, in any system of regulation that values the constitutional rights of regulated firms to privacy, you simply do not opt for the more intrusive and expensive option simply because a particular regulatory tool gives you more power. Constitutional rights should only be trumped where it is necessary and proportionate or a less intrusive power cannot be used instead.

One of the most important distinctions between an inspector and a skilled person, which is the other power that is available to the FSC, is that where a skilled person is appointed the regulated entity has the ability to negotiate the cost of a report directly with the expert, and it is not unusual for a cap on fees to be agreed. That offers regulated firms considerable protection against costs becoming uncontrollable. In the case of an inspector, it is the FSC that negotiates costs with the expert without the approval of the regulated firm. In my experience, the FSC agrees an hourly rate with the inspector, often a team, without insisting on any cap on fees. The costs run in the hundreds of thousands of pounds, and in some cases over a million. That is a huge burden to bear for regulated firms. I suspect that some of these appointments have been made under the 1989 Insurance Act, where the FSC had to foot the bill. There would be outrage by taxpayers if it became public that the FSC had agreed to open-ended engagements of this sort without any cap on fees.

There is also an overreliance on experts from the UK rather than Gibraltar, who are not familiar with this jurisdiction and are phenomenally expensive. As a Gibraltarian I find the notion that inspectors need to be UK professionals, with a token local added in the team just in case the natives complain, deeply concerning. We have all in this House chosen to make this community our permanent home, and when Mrs Barrass and some of her recent recruits from outside the jurisdiction go, we will continue to live here. They will no doubt go somewhere else and make a living somewhere else; we will not.

What I want to see is firm but fair regulation that does not discourage investment or make existing operators question their place in the market, which is the feedback that I am receiving about this new enforcement policy on behalf of the FSC.

I am really grateful to this House and to you, Mr Speaker, for the indulgence that you have given me in allowing me to reply to some of the Ministers opposite and their interventions, and again I want to thank everybody in this Parliament, the public servants in this Parliament, for all the hard work that they do in making sure that we are properly taken care of.

1215 Thank you very much, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I rise to address this House to deliver my speech in my third year as an independent Member of this House.

1220 I would like to start off by thanking you, Mr Speaker, for your usual direction and attention whenever I have needed guidance, which has always been a great comfort to me in view of the fact that I work alone in this House and usually need more steering than other Members, who enjoy a party structure and the mentoring of a seasoned leader. I also take this opportunity to thank the wonderful staff here in this House, who are always readily available to help me with whatever I need. Frances, Kevin and Daniel, led by Paul Martinez, thank you all.

1225 Mr Speaker, it has been common for the Budget speeches in our esteemed House to be read out in a rote manner, with all the figures of balances and increases or decreases in funding etc. being presented in a matter-of-fact manner. However, these figures and percentages often miss the reality of what is truly happening in our so-called robust economy. I have often felt – and now hear often from many of my constituents, both local business persons and individuals – that there are areas of the economy that have been forgotten and issues within the economy that need addressing.

1230 Let me start with the lack of an overall strategy. To be honest, this comment would require a review of our economy over the last 20 years and its transformation from MoD based to finance and gaming based, but I will summarise by saying that given the changing priorities of both private companies and global organisations like the OECD, surely our dependence on the above-mentioned pillars of our economy urgently needs reviewing. What has been needed, and is needed now, is a multi-faceted strategy that looks to the future of work and technology and how these two will be impacted over the years to come.

1235 It is also crucial to conduct a study of Gibraltar's Gini coefficient to get a clearer picture of the inequalities of this economy. With the announcement of GDP per capita at US$111,000, just under GBP85,000, our growth is commendable. However, when the minimum wage is roughly £14,000 per annum one questions the true equality of our economy. If our GDP is shot up by a minority of extremely wealthy individuals, we must know. We will not get a true reflection of the state of our economy until we are aware of how to fix its income inequality. Equally, it is important to identify the areas which will give us a sustainable and secure source of income and will work well into the future. You would think a socialist Government would be interested in levels of inequality and planning ahead for the economy of the next generation. At present, this is not evident.

1240 As for public expenditure, where does one begin? The last six years have seen unprecedented growth in public expenditure. There are many in our society aware that, at present, Government is the source of increasing business and trade, and I have spoken to many who raise their concerns.

1250 Given that Government last year, and this year once again, increased the Social Insurance costs by 10% in two consecutive Budgets, questions are being raised as to whether this increase was and is justified in contrast to the inflation rate and also given some of the less essential services that Government are currently providing. Most importantly, many have asked as to the Government-owned companies that are now playing ever-increasing roles in some sectors. I here refer to GJBS, Mr Speaker. The company is a fully Government-owned company, as I understand it. It was set up by the GSD to carry out construction projects for Government when other companies had let the Government down, but today it appears to be a company that works for the private sector as well, and this appears to give them an unfair advantage over other competitors.

1260 That is just one of the Government-owned companies I mention. There are others. (A Member: Hear, hear.) In the latest figures we can see that there seems to be an annual recurring funding of Government-owned companies to the tune of £25 million. I understand that how this is distributed is not fully laid out in the Government Estimates. On page 165 there is only a single line referring to this amount. Will the public at large know where and how this money – their money – is being allocated in this matter?

1270 Carrying on in the line of Government expenditure, it also appears that there are some areas where priorities are lacking. Our postal services are now costing the public purse in the region of £9 million per annum. In most countries the postal service actually makes a profit. In contrast, our Tax Office, in much need of a facelift considering the vital role it plays in our public funding, only receives just over £2 million. And of course there are stories of how many individuals are now receiving assessments from over five years ago and given sometimes a month to come up with any shortfall, and face fines in the event that these amounts are not paid on time. As for those fortunate enough to receive a rebate, well, they have had to wait similar times for these funds to be returned. Often it is the most needy of our citizens who pay for this shortfall.

1275 I must also mention one other area that troubles me and has come to light recently, and that is the recurring cost of the Prison Service. I know that we have a dedicated team of officers taking care of our prisoners. However, many of our prisoners have been interned for, at times, petty crime. At present there are about 55 to 60 prisoners and the cost of keeping them there is this year expected to be just over £3.2 million, approximately £53,000 per inmate per annum. I believe that this is a rather high figure and would like the opportunity to know more about how we are dealing with this issue, not just on a financial level but also on a human and compassionate level.

1280 Mr Speaker, I must move on, but these are just a few pointers on the state of public finance that I believe need to be addressed. I must now move on to key sectors.

1290 Turning to construction and housing, I will not bring up the GJBS matter now, as I have already mentioned it. I will here bring up the issue of how Gibraltar is being transformed physically and how the construction industry has of course boomed. There are many reasons for this and it appears from my understanding that demand for property in Gibraltar at present outstrips supply. This has led to a massive increase in developments for sale in the mid to upper price brackets that seem to be selling out even before the ink on the sales brochure is dry. However, we are in a crisis. There is a need for social housing like never before and it is the most vulnerable of Gibraltar who are suffering the worst. As an independent MP who juggles all portfolios, I can safely say that 90% of the cases that come to me are coming to me with housing issues. The waiting list for Government housing for one-bedroom flats is now over 600. Action for Housing have recently made public that some of our most vulnerable elderly members of society will not live long enough to see the day when they will be able to live in a decent home of their own. The rental market of apartments in Gibraltar is closer to London prices than ever before and there are locals who want to rent locally and are being forced to find accommodation in nearby Spain; this despite the massive expenditure on structural projects by the present Government. It is time for a serious review. The present Housing Act is in need of review and must not penalise landlords when it comes to social housing.

1300 Also on the issue of housing, I was gravely concerned to hear after a fire in an Upper Town estate that there are no fire retardants in communal areas of Government estates. A dog, which later died in the fire, averted the tragedy by alerting the building to the fire. I then raised questions in Parliament about this, all to no avail. In the wake of Grenfell, I believe we owe it to this community to provide the maximum health and safety standards to those residents living in Government estates who largely depend on the state for support. We are indebted to them to furnish them with adequate health and safety measures in communal areas and I urge Government to reconsider implementing such means to our Government estates as soon as possible. We should not have to rely on the heroism of pets to rescue the population of our estates.

1315 But back to the Budget. The wholesale/retail sector of Gibraltar has been a key sector of Gibraltar's economy ever since it provided goods and services to the garrison that was established in the 1700s. It has evolved in one way or another to provide for the local community and also for the visiting tourist. However, there are challenges in this sector and you

1320 have already seen the report made public by the GFSB. In the UK not a day goes by without some news of retailers and traders going under. Government would do well to support this sector, not necessarily with subsidies but with time and support to ensure that our offering is good for both locals and visitors alike. A review of import duties, the tariffs and the manner in 1325 which they are being collected is well overdue. In addition, our local business entrepreneurs are keen to know that their interests are also being considered when discussing Brexit with the UK, and not just the passporting issues that are affecting the finance and perhaps the gaming industry.

Mr Speaker, I know that this Government is investing heavily in the DLT/Blockchain space as a potential area of growth, and of course when one looks at how exciting this space is on a global 1330 level it is totally understandable. However, it is important that we look into the net benefits for Gibraltar as a whole in this industry and not just the privileged few. With this in mind, it would be a good time to make public what net effects are expected for the local population, and particularly with regard to our well-educated youth demographic, and ensure that there is a level playing field.

1335 Turning to gaming, the gaming industry appears to have been a boom for Gibraltar, but one of the costs of the gaming industry has been the massive influx of staff from abroad and the subsequent rise in rental rates in Gibraltar substantially affecting the local population in terms of long or short-term rentals. I alluded to the housing problem we are facing in Gibraltar earlier.
This Budget fails to implement specific measures to tackle the very unique needs of our 1340 economy, particularly with regard to many of the by-products it creates. Given that the income generated from this industry is an annual £13 million, would it be possible to allocate some of these funds to the building of the much needed one-bedroom homes that our society so desperately needs?

Turning to the Business Licensing Authority, the Business Licensing Authority was set up in 1345 order to regulate and possibly protect the local businesses from unfair competition. It was supposed to do away with the cumbersome and possibly illegal – in the eyes of the EU – Trade Licensing Authority. From my understanding, it has not been effective in the protection aspect, with many businesses from Spain and other countries able to trade and provide services without the licence required. There has also been a lack of regulation and enforcement from my 1350 understanding, and I ask Government whether they are aware of the difficulties that local established businesses are having and whether the BLA is actually fit for purpose.

With reference to taxation, I mentioned taxation earlier when I addressed the needs of the Tax Office and my opinion that it was one department that needed more attention, but I now refer to the tax code. More particularly, I refer to the complexity of the code and the two-tier 1355 based system. Is this two-tiered system still fit for purpose? And if so, how?

On another note in this area, I mention the two special tax categories of CAT2 and Hepps. My question is whether these categories to create wealth have worked for Gibraltar and where have the benefits been seen; also whether they are fit for purpose in today's world, because the world has changed substantially in terms of financial equality, and so have the public attitudes 1360 and perceptions regarding wealth inequality. It is estimated that 1% of the world's population controls over 85% of the world's wealth. In terms of Gibraltar, we cannot escape how the asset-rich individuals are doing well, and better as time goes on, as compared to many in Gibraltar who are not doing as well and seem to find no opportunities in this respect. We have in Gibraltar one of the highest GDP per capita, but we need to balance out that most Gibraltarian citizens do 1365 not currently fit into that higher level. So the question then is: who does? There seems to be no acknowledgement of this reality in the Budget, or any measure to placate this socially pernicious phenomenon.

Mr Speaker, with regard to the environment, I am glad to see that Government is giving the environment the attention it deserves and that this year's Budget has implemented green 1370 measures for our community. I also take this opportunity to thank NGOs like the Nautilus Project for raising awareness on the dangers of plastic and lobbying tirelessly in order to influence

Government to adopt such green incentives. There is no doubt that their initiatives and achievements have been worthy in this field. However, it is important that the citizens of Gibraltar understand that our economic growth and the unprecedented construction growth come at a price to our environment also. There must come a time when we need to take stock and decide that there is quality in good air, more greenery and less traffic.

As most of you will be aware, not so long ago a group of people and I founded a political movement, Together Gibraltar, based on the premise that we need more engagement from the general public in political affairs. Together Gibraltar has continued bridging this divide between people and power, and has proven a very effective tool for me to take the pulse of the community. The movement has allowed me, in the absence of a party structure, to understand the concerns of many members of our community, and one of the issues that Gibraltarians give most importance to is the quality of our air and the degradation of our environment.

1380

After a public meeting with an expert panel, I presented a motion in Parliament with a variety of initiatives to improve air quality, alleviate traffic pollution, revamp our waste disposal and create a long-term renewable energy plan. I also suggested the creation of a cross-party platform to supervise the overhaul of the environmental agenda, such that election cycles and varying manifesto commitments could not deprioritise the issue. Only consistent efforts and parliamentary consensus can guarantee the level of commitment this issue requires. We need the 20- to 30-year vision, the targets and governance structures in place such that this remains a priority but never considered in isolation of the economic growth. I am still in discussion with the Minister for the Environment about the motion and will continue to be proactive on the issue.

Mr Speaker, the creation of Together Gibraltar is perhaps my proudest contribution this year to the political landscape, and I say this with joy and an enormous pride in this community. The western world needs to do more to seduce its citizens, especially the young, into having an active role in politics and social issues, as it is proven that influence makes our societies better. While Gibraltar's economy booms and our GDP grows, our community stagnates in the advancement of the rights of women and minorities. And while more and more ambitious capital projects transform our geography, our green legislation and our efforts to improve our environment and mitigate climate change bear little to no fruit. While new, innovative sectors are introduced to our economy, we fail to make a comprehensive, honest effort to implement real transparency and accountability in our jurisdiction.

We have ample evidence of this. Women in Gibraltar, inspired by the #metoo global movement, have started demanding social victories that were achieved across Europe decades ago. We are seeing the fruits of people power unfolding before our very eyes, as active members of the community unite to demand the advancement of the civil rights agenda. I am sure many more agendas will follow, and that this level of empowerment will have a very positive impact on our community.

1405

Together Gibraltar has allowed me to make even stronger and closer ties with the other active collectives in our community. I have worked very closely with two collectives in particular, supply agency workers and private sector pensioners, both collectives who currently feel mistreated and marginalised by Government. We must not forget that a mark of a functioning society is when all stakeholders of the nation are represented. This is most salient in the case of the worker, the bedrock of any economy. It cannot be denied, however, that these collectives suffer from significant mismanagement, which has left many individuals and sectors in unstable situations. For example, in the health sector, external recruitment agencies are offering short-term contracts and undercutting wages, diluting the workforce and shutting out the employees who are contracted centrally.

There are several examples of exploitation, miscommunication and lack of foresight with regard to industrial relations by the current administration. For starters, the back-door privatisation of the care service, together with a general policy of reducing costs by privatisation of key sectors of public service, is damaging the morale of health workers. This is something I

1420

1425 pointed out in Parliament as far back as October 2016 when I illustrated the discontent and low morale on behalf of doctors and professional healthcare workers, warning at the time that this would undoubtedly have an impact on the quality of care received by the citizens of Gibraltar. It is, of course, important to be prudent and efficient in hiring, but our public health system must be prioritised as a vital service, and not a playground for privatisation. The morale of our healthcare professionals is fundamental to the quality of healthcare we receive. If we are to 1430 continue to improve this and other vital services to the community, the conditions of our public sector workers and the general quality of our employment must be protected.

And this problem is far from limited to the health sector. Across the board there are more positions taken by recruitment companies with workers on limited contracts, while the worker who has done their hours for several years may still be on a temporary contract, lacking rights and benefits and not being able to plan ahead in his or her life, when they should be made 1435 permanent. To make matters worse, this privatisation process has been executed in a manner that is less than transparent, which further raises concerns as to the motivation behind this dramatic policy turn by a socialist Government in name. And what came of the Future Job Strategy that was hailed in the New Dawn manifesto? Have recruitment agencies replaced this once popular initiative? The youth are our future and current workforce and they require 1440 security and long-term planning.

Similarly, older generations are concerned, especially those who worked in the private sector.
Promises have been made to private sector pensioners but very few have been delivered.

1445 While it is important to welcome the progress made for those at the bottom of the income bracket, it is also important that we do not allow those who have contributed to the growth of our private sector – from which, let’s not forget, we fund most of our public spending – to retire on what is effectively a subsistence wage, light years from the well-earned pension packages of the public sector.

The Private Sector Workers and Pensioners Association have lobbied and campaigned for 1450 over a decade, and I joined them this year in the demand for dignified living pensions. We said it then and I will say it again: it is an absolute ethical necessity that the promises made to our elderly on this issue are honoured. This is a collective made up of old age pensioners, our parents and grandparents. They are the people who have worked tirelessly to build our nation and our economy, who have contributed dutifully to the common pot and who now feel cast 1455 aside by their institutions. The Gibraltar Socialist Labour Party/Liberals will be in dire need of a change of name if things do not change soon. They are introducing market logic to state apparatus. Conservative governments in the UK will be proud when they find out that we are implementing similar policies here in Gibraltar under this so-called socialist Government.
(Banging on desk) I have a fan! (Interjections) We’ve rekindled, Mr Speaker!

1460 In his Budget address the Hon. the Chief Minister said part of living longer is about living healthier, and if we want to protect and provide quality of life to our ageing population, ensuring dignified pensions for all is a must.

Continuing with the health agenda, it is unfortunate to have to report that mental health issues are a great concern in this community, and that despite the steps being taken by 1465 Government and NGOs to improve mental health services, there is still a lot of work to be done on this matter. There is a great deal of concern in this community about the increasing number of cases and the lacklustre way in which they are being managed. In young persons in particular, for example, one in three calls to Childline last year was related to mental health, with 12% of calls relating to suicidal thoughts, something which sadly reminds us of this Government’s failure 1470 to date to fulfil their 2011 manifesto pledge of appointing specially trained mental health counsellors in schools.

However, Mr Speaker, I must, on the other hand, take this opportunity to thank my good Friend the Hon. Neil Costa at the Ministry of Health for his and his team’s – especially Ms Evelyn Cervan’s – sheer diligence and attention in servicing the needs of my constituents who, of 1475 course, in what is generally widely classified as the most important Ministry of all, often have extremely serious and time-sensitive issues and crises. Credit has to be given where credit is due and I am proud to thank the hon. Gentleman here publicly for assisting me to assist others, which is the reason why I am here in the first place, and his facilitating this challenge for me is something which I and the bucket loads of constituents I have brought to his attention are indeed eternally grateful for. Nevertheless, unfortunately, despite the sterling attention I and my constituents have enjoyed on a patient by patient level, I am sorry to report that the systemic issues at the GHA continue, largely due to poor communication and the aforementioned backdoor privatisation. The GHA walkout earlier on in the year should have been enough to serve as a warning; however, we have seen no signs of a change of policy.

1485 Similarly, I was sorry to hear little by way of developments by the Hon. Minister for postal services regarding the Post Office review which has been ongoing for over a year. In this time, good people, young and old, are working without contracts, without rights, without benefits, some for a period of five years already, while being loyal to the Government and continuing to provide a good service while they hope for permanent positions someday, so they can get on with their lives. We are talking about mortgages, we are talking about family planning, we are talking about general wanting to move on and grow the ladder in their lives – and this is just not right.

1495 On the issue of the latest cannabis developments to grow the plant locally and export, it is no secret that I have been campaigning for the plant to be used locally to relieve pain in sufferers ranging from Parkinson's to epilepsy. I am sorry that to date the Government has not gone far enough to regulate using cannabis in a medical capacity and I urge them to consider placing regulation as a matter of urgency, given its medicinal properties and the fact that every day that goes by, patients are suffering when they could be easily helped if Government allowed for this non-toxic substance to be available as another ailment on the market.

1505 Mr Speaker, on the subject of smoking, I would like to welcome the announcement by the Ministry of Health for making the GHA and all ERS premises smoke free as from this coming October, and I take this opportunity to implore on them, for the third or fourth time since I first raised the matter, to make smoking illegal in children's play parks. The image of toddlers and children picking up cigarette butts from the ground in my 'pushing the stroller' years, as well as the visual of adults smoking in a kids' zone, does not escape me and I will keep reminding this House of the need to enforce legislation to this effect until we achieve it. All that the hon. Gentleman the Minister for Health needs to do on this matter is extend the legislation due to come in in October to play parks as well as the GHA and the ERS.

1515 On other notes relating to the Health Ministry, even though it doubles up with transport a little bit, on the promised much-needed zebra crossing by the Hillside residential facility the people of Gibraltar would welcome updates, as it is imperative that the people of this community should have it easy and safe when crossing to and from visiting their vulnerable family and friends at the Hillside residential centre.

1520
1525 On the Education portfolio, it is no secret that on this side of the House all Members agreed with the lack of consultation and communication between Government and stakeholders on the very topical subject of the new schools, in particular the secondary schools. A few months ago Together Gibraltar held a public poll online to assess the most pressing issues for its members. Education and particularly the future of the new co-ed comprehensives was by far the most popular option. As of today, many vital issues – such as the challenges of key stage realignment to TLR restructuring, the pay structure and the general logistics of the co-ed revolution – remain unanswered, concerns which should have been allayed long ago considering the stage in the construction of the new secondary schools.

1530
1535 This issue created such a commotion that, if you will recall, Mr Speaker, in February the GSD and myself joined forces in order to communicate the message loud and clear that the Opposition was and is united in our concern for the way in which the new schools project is conducted, something which I think I can safely say we are all still monitoring closely. Teachers had come to us separately voicing serious grievances with regard to a consultation process

1530 which was being executed in a careless and disdainful manner. As a result, the collective felt helpless, ignored, and at times marginalised. Government responded to our grievances by issuing a statement commending the Government for the open and transparent process of discussion which it has already engaged in with the teaching professionals and support and administrative staff. This lack of empathy, this lack of self-criticism, is definitely not conducive to delivering an education revolution worthy of its name, and I hope there is a clear change of stance that allows for proper consultation going forward on this issue, because jeopardising the 1535 future of our education system and the return on such a massive public investment for the sake of ticking the box of campaign promises is not responsible government and both the educational professionals and the wider community understand this.

1540 Also on education, our special needs education mums and dads have reported many concerns about the inadequate facilities currently provided to our special needs children at St Martin's School, and although I know, and I am excited for the overhaul that we await, I urge Government to prioritise their needs and sensitivities in the interim period, also allowing for consultation with parents and teachers, who granted are best placed to assess the current and future needs of these children.

1545 Mr Speaker, I will not dip into the subject of abortion, as the public will be very clear by now where I stand on this sensitive issue in light of the conversations going on in our community, but I think it is important for you to know that Together Gibraltar has written to the Chief Minister and will be meeting with him in the weeks to come to discuss how this issue has been considered by his Cabinet and his executive, and move forward from there.

1550 Turning to the culture portfolio and in particular the MTV Calling Festival, I made a clear case in Parliament earlier on this year about the epic fail that was the worldwide MTV branding effort through the international media space. It was proved unequivocally through official statistics and figures, despite the noises on the other side of the House, that viewing figures were nowhere near what was apparently bargained for. So, given this reality, I urge Government to get it right this year, and that if we are going to remove a project of this size from our own 1555 home-grown organisers who have proved to have done it so well in previous years, to at least be honest with the public about the limitations of this branding potential and to cease projecting the show as one with a captive audience in the billions – because it just is not so, Mr Speaker.
Alternatively, we could just forget about the whole MTV hype and return the project to our Gibraltarian pioneers who had the vision in the first place to grow and nurture this festival to the 1560 success that it has become. (Interjection by Hon. S E Linares) It is never too late to put your hands up and do things properly.

Mr Speaker: Order, order. I call upon the Hon. Steven Linares.

1565 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The Chief Minister, you see, can always reply tomorrow on your behalf, so there is no need for you to say anything across the floor of the House.

1570 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, turning to our youth, I visited all the main youth centres earlier on in the year, and although some of the premises could do with a facelift here and there, most importantly I am pleased to report that our youth workers are doing a brilliant job in stimulating and caring for our youth and I am proud of the systems they have and continue to put in place in order to maximise the potential of our young ones.

1575 One thing I must flag up, however, is that in the Moorish Estate Youth Club there are some grave issues of health and safety, with one exit of the club dramatically leading on to a main and busy road. This has me really concerned and I implore on Government to find safer alternatives, as I dread to think what could happen to a child or teenager if they were minimally careless on exiting while a car drives by. Also, the kids and teens there were begging me to have a word with 1580 the Minister because they have missed being able to use their park and football pitch for years, due to building equipment being parked there. I know we brought this up in Parliament, Mr Speaker, and I was grateful for the Minister's answer at the time, but I would ask the Government to prioritise them and return to them these facilities as a matter of urgency.

1585 In the Justice portfolio and on the subject of legal aid, I take this opportunity to congratulate the Minister for Justice on the latest reforms and look forward to witnessing them first hand through the many constituents who have come by my office without a clue as to how to fund their cases. On their behalf, I thank him and hope the reforms as published will make a sizeable difference to their access to justice.

1590 And on another note, where the Prison Service is concerned, in March of this year vacancies came out for the Prison Service with eight applicants reaching the interview stages in April. Since then, the Prison Service staff are waiting to know how many new recruits – as agreed with staff, union and management – will be employed this year and when will the start date commence. So I would ask of the Justice Minister to kindly inform the Prison staff as soon as possible as to what agreements have been put in place.

1595 As an independent MP it is also my duty to flag any indication of political bad practices and raise awareness about them to the general public. There have been several examples of these situations throughout the year, some of which are still unfolding as we speak. The Calpe House controversy saw me confront this entire House, without an ounce of support from either Government or Opposition, about the many flagrant inconsistencies surrounding the purchase
1600 of the new Calpe House property in London. Instead of heeding mine and others' concerns in the light of the substantial abnormalities surrounding the purchase, I was subjected to yet another exercise of manipulation and demagoguery of the kind we are only too used to in this House. For flagging and investigating these signs of bad practices, I was accused of trying to destroy one of Gibraltar's most important charities, when nothing could have been further from the truth. Yet 1605 again we find our very own brand of perverse political meta-language at work. People must know, and must not be manipulated into thinking otherwise, that public inquiry, political checks and balances, or any form of lawful and well-intentioned attempts to audit and scrutinise public institutions should always be welcome and encouraged.

1610 It is the rot that plagues institutions in the absence of this scrutiny that threatens not only to destroy people's faith in that particular institution, but also their belief in the entire system. This, hon. Members of Parliament, is what we now call disenfranchisement, and it is a global phenomenon that threatens the most essential social consensus of our societies. Demagoguery, hypocrisy, party political Manicheism, plain and simple dishonesty – all these expressions of disingenuity are a grave threat to our social contract. In the age of information,
1615 any attempt to engage with the general public that is not honest and transparent is simply irresponsible – yet attempts to crush all forms of dissidence are commonplace in this House, I am afraid.

1620 I have led on other issues of morality in financial services, which affects professionals on both sides of the House and outside it because Gibraltar has to show that we are at the forefront of good practices and compliance moving forward, and I will not hesitate to speak out whenever I feel our international reputation is at stake.

1625 In Democracy in America Alexis de Tocqueville stated that 'the health of a democratic society may be measured by the quality of functions performed by private citizens'. Fortunately, change is happening. Today, many in our community have understood their responsibility and are executing functions of the highest quality. The future of our democracy has never looked healthier.

1630 In light of my interpretation of the Budget in broad terms, I voice my criticisms today unequivocally. However, I will be voting in favour of the Budget. The GSD Opposition, I am afraid to say, were opportunistic last year and are opportunistic again this year. When we vote in the Appropriation Bill, we vote to maintain and fund our essential services. I may have all the reservations in the world, but I cannot vote with the cynicism of the GSD Opposition, who seem 1635 to want to strip back essential spending and cause political mischief on the way. Further, Mr Speaker, let me just say that responsible governance is not austerity; it is investing in the most vulnerable. I cannot vote alongside a party that appears to offer a piecemeal alternative, so today I am voting in favour of the Appropriation Bill whilst also offering an authentic alternative – a progressive one, not a regressive one.

Exactly today is five years since I first stood for a political position in political office in a by-election, alongside the hon. Gentleman across the floor. I have learnt many things. Most of all, I have learnt that politics can be, and often is, quite terrible – the antagonism, the interests, the unaccountability – but the fact that politics can be terrible is exactly why we need to change it.

1640 It is common to analyse modern political history in broad economic phases. Post-war social democracy recovered nations ruined by war and created the strong middle class by public investment, but crises of stagnation gave rise to neoliberalism, with Reaganites and Thatcherites filling the mainstream narrative of financial independence and rampant individualism. This got us as far as the 2008 Crash, teaching us that promoting greed also promotes desperate inequality. Today we sit on the brink of a new phase, waiting for a new narrative – a post-neoliberal narrative, one that is honest with the successes and shortcomings of globalisation, one that is sober about the link between finance and politics, one that is indignant at the disunity caused by inequality. A new politics appears to be universally desired, whether in Europe or America.

1650 The only way to climb above this precipice is to be bold. We must embrace democratic resurgence. We must welcome the new generation of voters with an analysis that reflects their concerns: housing, employment, rights. If we fail to do this, our democracy will be caught in political stagnation. If we succeed, we will begin to usher in a new Gibraltar. A progressive vision that is representative of the people, not the elites. Yes, we are proudly diverse, but look around you in this House: have we done enough to enfranchise members of our community who might not be lawyers, who might not be white, who might not be male, who might not be financially comfortable? No, no, no and no, Mr Speaker. As unstable as global politics currently is, it has challenged our perceptions of apathy. It has challenged the infallibility of the status quo. It has even challenged how we see politics at its core. Politics can be frustrating and it can be terrible, but if it was not terrible I would not spend my time here trying to offer a new path. Our people are clamouring for it. They are the new path. Politics is currently terrible because it is tired. It has not represented the people in any deep way for a long time now. It is terrible because it is the establishment. It is not us, it is not we, the people; it is them the elite, them the ‘barristocracy’, thinking that they are in a courtroom at every session of Parliament – (Interjections and laughter) them, the men.

1660 When politics is we the people, it is progressive. It is moving forward with a bold march into the future, unafraid of fighting corruption, unafraid of tackling the housing crisis, unafraid of a Gibraltar fit for the interests of the people. And it does not start here, it starts out there, and out there more and more people want a new vision. Out there, more and more people want to see a democratic resurgence. Out there, we are seeing the beginning of a change that will give Gibraltar progress in here, and in turn will progress Gibraltar out there.

1675 The times they are a-changing, Mr Speaker. Time for change, as the Members opposite promised in 2011. More importantly, the people now know that change is possible. We used to hope for change, but now we know we can make the change and it is time to come together and offer our people a new deal for the 21st century Gibraltar.

Thank you.

1680 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, the person who wrote the line ‘the times they are a-changing’ became a Nobel Prize winner, and in doing so he had said, ‘I’m a poet, and I know it. I hope I don’t blow it.’ I will follow that view, I hope, tomorrow at 10.30 in the morning, when I expect to reply to all hon. Members.

I move that the House should now adjourn to then, given the clamour that there is outside to be able to buy lottery tickets for the Christmas draw. (Laughter)

1685

Mr Speaker: Before I adjourn the House, may I say that I often used to hear, here in the House, that great politician that was Peter Isola say that politics was about de bono publico – about the public good. If it is not about the public good, it certainly ought to be.

1690

May I thank hon. Members personally, because I think that the remarks that I made last year about the length of speeches have been very much taken on board. As a result, I think that speeches have been this year much more relevant and much more cogent, so I thank you all.

1695

I would also like to thank you, on behalf of the members of my staff, for the very kind remarks that they have made about the service that they give. I have also been thanked myself and I think I should tell hon. Members – which they probably know – that being in love, as I am, with this job, I would do it even if I was not remunerated.

The House will now adjourn to tomorrow at 10.30.

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Thursday, 5th July 2018.

5 Mr Speaker: I call upon the Chief Minister to exercise his right of reply.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, one must start the day as pleasantly as possible when dealing with something as important as the appropriation of £625 million. How can one not start at least by saying happy birthday to Mr Clerk, who is 59 today. (Banging on desks) I understand that all hon. Members, whatever side of the House they may be on, have something to look forward to this afternoon at least, as I am told that there is cake. (Laughter)

10 Mr Speaker, the House is meeting today, exactly five years to the day since the hon. Lady and the Hon. Mr Isola contested a by-election. It is the by-election that the Hon. Mr Feetham referred to in the context of some of the debates that we are still having five years on in respect of Credit Finance Company Ltd – just to set that in its historical context – but I think it is absolutely right also to congratulate the hon. Member on half a decade of service to the people of Gibraltar, in particular in the important role that he is carrying out these days.

15 Mr Speaker, I want to start by dealing with matters which have been ventilated in this debate in respect of the public sector, because I think it is absolutely right and proper that we start by recording that this appropriation is, in the main, an appropriation in order to ensure that the public sector in Gibraltar continues to have the ability to function. It is an appropriation – in other words, a taking of the money necessary to run the administration. The administration is not the 10 people sitting on this side of the House, Mr Speaker; it is us together with, most importantly, the almost 5,000 public servants of the people of Gibraltar, whether civil servants or in the public sector generally. It is them – not just us, but in particular them – that deliver the services that this community enjoys, that collect the funding that is the recurrent revenue of the Government of Gibraltar. It is the public sector in Gibraltar that deserves the recognition of Gibraltar for the work that they do and it is the public sector in Gibraltar that those of us who will vote for the Budget will be voting to fund. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

20 Mr Speaker, I want no one to think that there is anything other than fulsome support on this side of the House for the Gibraltarian public sector. On this side of the House every civil servant and every public sector employee of the agencies, the authorities or the companies of the Government of Gibraltar – which Members opposite set up – enjoys the full support of this Government.

25 Mr Speaker, I am the Minister for the Civil Service. I believe in a strong Civil Service. It is important that people understand that, because the Civil Service is a hugely important part of what Gibraltar is today, not just because of the numbers of people employed in it but because the Gibraltar we know is delivered by civil servants and public sector workers and what the Civil Service will enjoy from this Government is support, support, support – because a strong Civil Service, strong public sector, is the backbone of our administration. They are the ones who deliver the policies. They are the ones who make government happen. That is why Sir Joe Bossano was absolutely right that it is important that we are able to protect that public sector, because we cannot afford that they should be anything other than protected and strengthened, strengthened and enhanced.

I want to thank there, Ernest Gomez, who retired in January of this year as Chief Secretary of the Government of Gibraltar and who was Chief Secretary with me from the December in which I was first elected, for the work that he did in strengthening the Civil Service and taking it away from political control as it had been, something that we on this side of the House had no intention of trying to exercise.

I want to welcome and congratulate Darren Grech for the work that he will no doubt do as the new Chief Secretary of the Government of Gibraltar. I am very excited to see how Darren intends to build on the work that Ernest Gomez has done. Ernest Gomez did that work very largely supported by Frank Carreras and Joey Britto, and now Darren Grech is taking that forward for a new generation. When I appointed him, I said I wanted somebody who would be able to endure for more than a decade, somebody who would be the transition between one Chief Minister and the next – although I sincerely hope and believe that both those Chief Ministers will be of the same political complexion and ideology – because the Civil Service provides that continuity between administrations, and whoever the next Chief Minister of Gibraltar will be, she will no doubt be a socialist.

I think it is hugely important that it is therefore clear that with this Government in administration, with this Chief Minister as Minister for the Civil Service and the public sector, there will be no cuts in the public sector. That is not what is on the cards, Mr Speaker. There will never be any cuts in the Civil Service or in the public sector whilst I am Chief Minister. Efficiency, yes. Cuts, no. Proper control, yes. Austerity à la GSD, never. But there will be no waste either and I know that that is what controlling officers will help us to make sure is the case and how we will deliver efficiency, because they have all committed to that, to the control of waste. That is what we are saying and that is what civil servants and public sector workers are saying too. But we will never fall into the Clintonian trap of saying that Civil Service pay is not deserved in some way or that it is just based on relativities, although we do agree – and that is why I have announced it – we do agree with many civil servants and public sector workers that the actions of the former administration in creating so many administrations, so many authorities and agencies and companies, created an upsetting of relativities etc. which must be addressed. That is why, for the first time since the Bunkle and Roberts report of 1983, we are going to carry out a review of senior Civil Service pay.

Mr Speaker, we gave the public sector, the Civil Service in particular, something new when we were elected. We gave them relief cover, which means that every post is filled when somebody is not in post, when somebody is away. We are going to now move to leave aside the employment agencies that the GSD started to use in their time and we are going to move to fill the vacancies in the Civil Service with our commitment in respect of the complement of the Civil Service intact as it was when we were elected, and are going to do that working with the unions that have representation in the Civil Service. That is how we will work to deliver a much more modern, a much more efficient, a strengthened and enhanced public sector and Civil Service in Gibraltar.

Gibraltar's political circumstances are such that we have to pause for a moment to think of this. What would happen if a weak government were elected – if an extraordinarily weak government were elected? We have seen that in Europe. There have been moments when governments have been elected which have been unexpected, that have happened almost by a roundabout side-wind and nations find themselves where the government in effect cannot govern. Well, Mr Speaker, if that were to happen, the Civil Service would become the last line of defence. In other words, because Gibraltar is politically constantly under attack, perhaps more 90 than most nations, we have to have a stronger backbone for our administration than perhaps most nations do. And in that event, if I have one legacy when I leave as Chief Minister – and I hope I will have more than one – it is that I will leave a strong, strengthened, enhanced public sector, and Civil Service in particular, that will be able to see Gibraltar through any such eventuality.

95 Mr Speaker, dealing with the things that we heard more generally from Members opposite, we have not really been involved in a debate in the past three days. You see, in a debate one says something and the other side gives you a different opinion to what you have said based on what you have presented. That is what a debate is about. But in most instances, what we had –
100 aside from Mr Feetham, who, as usual, left nothing to be desired in the context of his contribution, which I will come to later – what we had was prepared speeches. ‘Here’s one I prepared earlier’ is what hon. Members might have said when they reached for their speeches. None of them took into consideration the things we were saying in order reply to them. The tell-tale was that we announced that we were going to do some things only to hear in reply, in purported response, them calling on us to do things we had just announced we were going to 105 do. That is not a debate. At Question Time what hon. Members want to do is debate, and in debate hon. Members just want to read us their requests that we should do things. Well, hon. members perhaps should feature – perhaps the Hon. Minister for broadcasting might care to propose this, given that the proceedings of Parliament are transmitted on GBC – perhaps they should feature in a renewed Blue Peter, where they can produce the one that they prepared 110 earlier.

Really, so much has been left to be desired in the contributions that were made, so I am going to make some references to demonstrate that in the context of the things that we announced and that they then called for. In fact, one of the things that is most telling is that even in areas where we are not making announcements, where we are in effect providing 115 explanations for things that they have said, or explaining the finances – Sir Joe Bossano in particular gave the usual tour de force, explaining issues and dealing with contributions that they made in the past, explaining why they were wrong – we face then the same baseless accusations in reply without taking consideration of the things that were put to them.

I was a little taken aback, Mr Speaker, by the lack of imagination that hon. Members displayed, indeed in the way that they even characterised their accusations. The Hon. the current incumbent Leader of the Opposition could not think of a new label for his address. The Big Lie Budget, he said this was. Well, I suppose he knows that that is the label of the 1972
120 General Election – the aftermath of which this House is still dealing with, Mr Speaker, with you and Mr Bossano! (Laughter) It is the unimaginative label that Mr Feetham chose for the 2015 General Election. They used it in 2015 to deliver the worst possible election result in a two-horse race in the history of Gibraltar. (Banging on desks) It had been used in 1972, and what original thought comes into the mind of the current incumbent Leader of the Opposition to use the same unimaginative label, the Big Lie Budget? But they used that phrase, that three-letter word which we try and avoid in this House. They used it in the way that you have not ruled is improper and I
130 have made no objection; but they used it, so I will use it too. I was surprised that Mr Phillips decided to go down that road, but perhaps I should not have been surprised at his lack of original thought, his lack of imagination. Perhaps I expect too much from him, but I suppose, like so many others, I was destined to be disappointed.

Or what about the other phrase that appeared during the course of the Budget – j'accuse – which is what Mr Clinton decided to pursue. 'J'accuse ...!', Emile Zola's famous headline in the Dreyfus Affair: 1898, Mr Speaker, 120 years old! But nobody was surprised that Mr Clinton should be living in the late 19th century (Laughter) and that he should have gone back two centuries for a phrase that he thought might fit, and the fact that he might be lacking in original thought and imagination also was of no surprise to anyone.

140 Mr Phillips went back 46 years for his theme; Mr Clinton went back two centuries for his theme. I am going to pursue that approach, Mr Speaker. I am going to go back, in describing this book and the things in it. In describing the good book that we are debating today, I am going to go back two millennia and I am going to tell them the things that St John is alleged to have said. I am going to tell them the truth, and the truth will set them free.

145 I know that one of the things that is in vogue is to go back to vinyl records, but scratched vinyl records are not popular even now and they are not going to become trendy by becoming scratched vinyl records. But the way that they keep going back to 1972, to 1898, it was almost as if we were being treated not to a modern Newswatch of events – we were being treated to a Pathé News reel of budgets past, or a pathetic newsreel of budgets past, over and over again.

150 When the Chief Minister sits down and the Leader of the Opposition gets up, that is a moment of important political set piece and the person who gets up has to be up to the task. But what a total damp squib we were treated to. It is important, Mr Speaker, that I set out clearly for those preparing the Hansard that I am saying damp squib: it ends with a ‘b’, not with a ‘d’. We are not in calamares territory. We are in the territory of a squib, which is something 155 that fails ignominiously to satisfy expectations, an anti-climax or a disappointment, as defined in the English dictionary. Apparently, a squib is a form of firework, usually cylindrical in shape, with a paper fuse at one end which provides a mild explosion. Well, Mr Speaker, as you can imagine, when it is damp it does not go very far, but nothing should have surprised us.

Mr Phillips, when he became the current incumbent of the post of Leader of the Opposition – 160 which I do not know how long he will hold for – gave an interview on Viewpoint and the next morning and the next day there was not one headline taken from it. The Hon. Mr Feetham when he goes on television usually makes headlines – usually for reasons, I have to point out, that are less than honest and entirely disagreeable etc. – (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Laughter) even a beige colonial book-keeper when he goes on television tends to make a headline, but for the 165 incumbent current Leader of the Opposition to go on Viewpoint and give a half-hour interview and for there not to be one headline or piece of news even after the interval on Newswatch from what he said demonstrates exactly why we should not have expected anything other than a total political damp squib of a speech when he got up to reply on the Budget this year.

Mr Clinton, of course, was no damp squib. He was more like a wet squib, entirely soaked: the 170 firework that just did not go off. But after Mr Phillips’s reply one can see why it was that the current leader of the GSD, who described Mr Phillips as his subordinate on television – ‘I have appointed Elliott as my subordinate’ ... Appointed – these are the things that happen in the GSD. Nobody is elected or voted for; people are appointed. Maybe that is why the current leader of the GSD decided that he had to go to the GRA to persuade them that in the event of the Chief 175 Minister making a ministerial statement it should not be the current incumbent damp squib Leader of the Opposition who should reply, it should be him, because if the moment came when a ministerial statement was required and if there was a requirement for a response because the circumstances in which a response is warranted were to be made out, I think even the current leader of the GSD felt that the damp squib would not persuade many. And so all of the 180 hullabaloo that we saw from the current leader of the GSD engaging the GRA etc. was all because of what he knew would happen when Mr Phillips was destined to reply to something.

But these are Brexit moments, Mr Speaker. Gibraltar cannot afford damp squibs. We have to be serious in our approach; we have to be engaging in our approach. And each of them – like 185 every other public servant in Gibraltar and every other civil servant in Gibraltar actually does and we do on this side of this House – each of them needs to do a full and effective day’s work with no excuses. They are earning too much money just to come here once a month and ask us a few questions. They need to do more, and that means stopping the hypocrisy of things being okay when they do them and not okay when we do them. They are paid too much for something as shallow and facile as that.

190 But of course the Hon. Mr Feetham, as a Manchester United fan, seems to have inherited the Mourinho style in this respect: when the team succeeds, it is down to him and his magnificent tactics; when the team fails, the players are not giving of their best. (Laughter) Well, Mr Speaker, at least I am satisfied that the public are seeing straight through all of them, Mourinho in 195 particular. All of their assertions are falling on deaf ears. Their hope to represent everyone – everyone – that has been their downfall, that which they accused us of in 2011. They used to say, ‘The GSLP wants to be all things to all men.’ They have tried to do that too, Mr Speaker, that which they accuse us of, the mote in their own eye. They have sought to run with the hares and hunt with the hounds.

200 However much I might have disagreed with Sir Peter Caruana, the former Leader of the House – the putative greatest Gibraltarian of all time, according to some – if there is one thing you cannot say about Peter Caruana, it is that he tries to be all things to all men. There are some men with whom he has absolutely no truck and some men with whom he has truck, but not everyone.

205 You cannot say about Joe Bossano that he is all things to all men. Joe Bossano is now a knighted political Marmite, Mr Speaker: you love him or you hate him. I would have him on toast! (Laughter)

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. Sir J J Bossano): No chance of getting toasted!

210

Hon. Chief Minister: No, indeed, because I love him so much!

Trying to be all things to all men just does not work, but it is typical of them to accuse us of that whilst trying to do it themselves.

215 This GSD is a shadow of its former self. The sun has now fully set on the story of the GSD. In their desperation to appeal to everyone they have appealed to absolutely no one. They are devoid of substance, devoid of original thought, devoid of principles, devoid of talent, of vision or of sense of duty to this community. They are, Mr Speaker, a void – and that is what people will do, it is clear to me, when it comes to the next election: avoid them.

220 It has become increasingly obvious that they are driven by personal ambition. There is bitter infighting which is not even hidden behind a curtain, there are power struggles going on which manifest themselves in rapping during the course of debates in this House, and they are unable to keep even a handful of the people who made that party great in the days when it was beating us in general elections. They cannot keep them as part of any esprit de corps to go forward. And it is not as if there is any white knight on a white charger in the wings trying to save the GSD. That knight slipped into the sunset in 2015.

225 On the economy, what have they said? Nothing. What contribution have we had from them on where the economy should develop or not develop and how to better improve the public finances? They have had a row with us about what is in the book and what is not. They have not told us what they think could make Gibraltar better, what they propose we should be doing to improve Gibraltar. None of that. And on our public finances they are wrong, wrong, wrong. On the economy they are weak, weak, weak, to such extent that anybody watching their performance in this House who is a voter will realise that their salaries are wasted, wasted, wasted.

230 And so, Mr Speaker, I am going to turn now to deal with each of their speeches in order of importance. I am going to deal with the independent Member last, not because she is any less important but because she is independent and she spoke last, but the rest of the speeches I am going to deal with in the order of importance in the context of this debate, given what they have said.

240 I will start with the speech that clearly, however much of a wet squib, was designed to lead the Opposition in this debate, and that is Mr Clinton’s. Mr Clinton came here looking for problems. People, when they come into debates, tend to say, ‘I am here to be constructive’; Mr Clinton may as well have started his debate by saying, ‘I am here to be destructive.’ He does not want to look at what is in front of him, he has no interest in the good book; he is trying to look for what is not in the book. He does not want to believe anything is positive. He is not about to project any of the things that we are doing. In fact, he does not want to see any project prosper. I think he would say no to everything proposed to him if he were ever to become Minister for Finance, which is the post that he covets.

He has said that the Minister for Finance should not be the Chief Minister. I am surprised therefore, Mr Speaker, that he went for the leadership of the party, because the person who is 250 leader of the party stands to be Chief Minister and he would have had to appoint somebody else, by his own standards, to be Minister for Finance – probably a lawyer. So the accountant would have been Chief Minister and the lawyer would have been Minister for Finance. Okay, that’s logical! But he would say no, as Minister for Finance, to anything a Chief Minister might propose to him. You see, I think he sees himself as an all-powerful Chancellor of the Exchequer.
 255 Can you imagine him, Mr Speaker, as Chancellor? I think all hon. Members would think that he would be probably the worst Chancellor in the history of chancelleries around Europe because he would say no to absolutely everything. He has had nothing positive to say about any project we have undertaken. Can you imagine it, Mr Speaker?

Minister for Education in the Cabinet: ‘Minister for Finance, we need to build new schools.’

260 Minister for Finance: ‘Accountant says no.’

‘We need to build a new Primary Care Centre.’

‘Buzz. Accountant says no.’

‘We need to build new facilities for the Island Games.’

‘Buzz. Accountant says no.’

265 Mr Speaker, accountant says no, accountant says no, accountant says no. He has not said yes to anything! No imagination, no vision whatsoever. But imagine, in that fictional Mad Max world where they might have won a general election a thousand years from now:

‘Please, Chancellor,’ says the Chief Minister, ‘we need to build more affordable homes.’

‘Buzz. Accountant says no.’

270 You cannot build families without homes and you cannot educate children without schools. You have to build them, you have to build them to the standard and they have to be to the standard required. Accountant says no, a bit like Little Britain and ‘Computer says no.’ But it really would be a little Gibraltar then, wouldn’t it? No progress whatsoever, no development whatsoever, no growth whatsoever and not going anywhere. Gibraltar and their Chancellor Roy 275 Clinton: accountant says no.

We need more homes for our people. We need more schools and better schools for our children. We need new primary care facilities. We need to provide better services. Accountant says no is not the answer. He would crush our people’s ambitions under his abacus. The 1970s colonial book-keeper would replace the engine of our economy that is the GSLP/Liberal 280 administration with a GSD engine that only has reverse gear. He would not take us back to the future; he would take us back to the past, to 1898, and indeed j’accuse Mr Clinton that that is where he would take us, back to the 19th century. He might shadow Heritage, but that is not a reason for taking us back in time! (Laughter)

I think the problem is that he sometimes does not see what is in the book. He loves the book.
 285 It is the good book for him. He wants more in it, more pages; he wants a longer thing to read. But he does not even look at what is in it. He asks us for accounts of this and of that, and then he does not look at the accounts, as the Hon. Gilbert Licudi MP demonstrated the other day in his very effective prosecution of him in respect of the accounts of the Gibraltar University. Although there are things in the book, he does not see them and he makes negative assumptions in order
 290 to replace his failure to understand, and he does that by creating the view that there is somehow something unsavoury going on. Of course, Mr Speaker, he is a man in his early 50s who has retired as a bank manager and has qualified as an accountant, and so people give him – or gave him – an element of credibility, they gave him a chance: ‘Oh, if Roy is saying this, there must be something to it.’ Now we have demonstrated, and today I will further demonstrate, that 295 he does not deserve that credibility because, every time, he prefers to infer something negative rather than seek to understand it. And so I am going to go through Mr Clinton’s speech in great detail to show that every single assumption that he has made is wrong, every single one of them. Not one of them is accurate; all of them are wrong.

300 Mr Licudi completely demolished him on the University, but then he went on social media when I posted Mr Licudi's demolition of him, and put up a rather pathetic riposte that said, 'Oh, Licudi wasn't dealing with recurrent, he's only dealing with capital.' Even that pathetic response was wrong, and that demonstrates there is no humility in the man, because if he has read anything, as I will demonstrate, he will have realised he was wrong and he should have just said, 'Fair enough, no problem – read the wrong line, got it wrong.' I will probably come to that later 305 in my speech, Mr Speaker, because I want to go through other aspects of what he said that were completely wrong.

Really, with Mr Clinton it is a question of turning up for a football match and then deciding that he does not like the rules of football and he wants to play handball on the football field, or, like Columbia, who turned up to wrestle against England a couple of days ago, not abide by any 310 of the rules. In the end the arc of fairness bends towards justice. Justice prevailed and England won, and I will show today why, if you turn up to play the rules of Gibraltar politics under the Gibraltar Constitution and the Public Finance (Control and Audit) Act, you cannot change the rules when it comes to interpretation.

This session, this appropriation, is about this book, not anything else; this book, under our 315 Constitution and under our Public Finance (Control and Audit) Act. Mr Bossano has shown in his intervention that this book is prepared in the same way as it has been and the things that are not in it were not in it before. I will have to do an element of that also, taking other examples which Mr Bossano did not take.

This is the Appropriation Debate: let's give it its full name. The word 'Budget' is shorthand. It 320 is about what we appropriate, or take, from the income that we have to run our affairs as a nation, and what we appropriate is in this book. In other words, of the £650-odd million that come in, the £624 million that we take from it is here. We cannot appropriate more than comes in, and that, if we did, would be what might produce a deficit, not the novel definition of deficit that the hon. Gentleman had to conjecture in order to try and persuade anyone that we were 325 heading for anything other than surplus.

Of course there are things outside the book as well, sure there are, but they are not hidden. How could they be hidden if he knows all about them because we told him about them? In their case, when they were in Government and those who were not in Government at the time – Mr Feetham was, Mr Reyes was – were cheerleaders for those who were in Government, except 330 Mr Phillips, who was a detractor of them then in the PDP, when they were in Government outside of the good book there were car parks, there was going to be a power station and a hospital. Were they hidden? Well, they were as hidden as the car park that we have done, the schools that we are doing and the power station that we have done. In other words, not hidden at all. They were just as hidden then as they are now.

335 Mr Feetham in 2003 said he was against the PFI. He has been consistent in that from 2003 every time that Sir Peter has not been in the room, (Laughter) and I will come to an analysis of that, Mr Speaker, later on. All the others have blithely gone along with having things outside of the book – car parks and power station etc. When they did it, it was fine; when we did it, it is hidden. But do they see that there is actually a complete and utter symmetry between what they did and what we did? They invented it!

I think they have to continue to pursue this line – although Sir Joe really indicated to them why they should not – because if they did not say that, what would they say? It is very difficult to give an Opposition speech that says, 'We congratulate the Government because unemployment is down to record lows. We congratulate the Government because tourist arrivals are up. We 345 congratulate the Government because of the work that Minister Isola is doing and how fantastically well the international bank is doing. We congratulate the Government for the work being done on the estates and for lowering the arrears. We congratulate the Government for the magnificent sporting facilities.' Mr Speaker, it is impossible. At least they congratulated the 350 Government, rightly, for the work that the Deputy Chief Minister is doing on Brexit and some of the work on air quality that John Cortes is doing – at least some of them did; some of them criticised it too. I recognise how difficult it is, given the reality of what we face them with and they have to invent something, but to continue to go down the same scratched record every year and that scratched record actually is the thing that they used to do themselves, denies them any credibility. If they do not make up a spurious argument, they have got nothing to say.

355 Of course there are Government companies – surprise, surprise – we inherited them. Of course we have borrowing – surprise, surprise – they introduced the concept. The borrowing is used for capital projects – surprise, surprise! I will demonstrate to them how they did that too and they were cheerleading at that time. (A Member: Rent-a-Goon's.) They have gone from cheerleaders to doing the rhumba of depression because of exactly the same music. The difference is that we are preparing the accounts of all the companies, which they did not 360 prepare. We are catching up on some since 1996. Yes, we are late. Of course we are late: we are two decades late on the ones that they stopped providing since 1996 because we had to rebuild the accounts; and we are late on some of the accounts for some of the companies that we formed – yes, true. But should we stop everything because we have not published the accounts?
365 Because we have not published the accounts of the companies of the companies that they did not provide accounts for, we should stop all activity just to satisfy one man's curiosity? Curiosity killed the cat and it is going to do for Mr Clinton's credibility. So should we stop the new schools and should we stop the Primary Care Centre etc. because we cannot satisfy Mr Clinton's curiosity? Of course we should not, because our community matters more than his curiosity, 370 even if accountant says no.

We are almost there with all of the years of Credit Finance Company Ltd. It is not for lack of trying that we have not been able to complete the accounts, but the problem is that the economy that we are dealing with, the economy on which they have made no proposals, is firing on all cylinders. That means that accountancy practices are very busy indeed. The first few 375 months of every financial year they are very busy with statutory deadlines for the banks and for insurance firms. They are busy because they have more business than ever, busy because Brexit has not destroyed business, which has stayed in Gibraltar. These firms do their statutory work ahead of anything else, and when they have done all this and they have resumed their work the accounts of Credit Finance Company Ltd will be ready.

380 I can assure him, Mr Speaker, that he will have the accounts filed in Companies House by the time we resume after the summer. And because it is a large company, the full accounts will be available to him, save for the first two years when it was not a large company, and then he can knock himself out. It will be balance sheet porn for him. (Laughter) He should not give us a blow-by-blow account of what he sees there (A Member: Ooh!) because we will have filed them, so 385 we will know what is in them. I do not know what it was that went through the hon. Gentleman's squib there... [Gasp].

On Gibraltar Capital Assets, I understand he has had a conversation with one of the Government's advisers and he is satisfied with what is going on in respect of those accounts. On Gibtelecom the accounts have required an assessment of the pension scheme, and that is why 390 they are delayed. On the Gibraltar International Bank, the magnificent accounts that they are going to file are ready. They are all in good time, so everything is going exactly as it should, subject of course to the underlying delay to the group of Government companies because of the two-decade delay that we have inherited from them. We will give the Opposition what they are required by law, which will be therefore much more than we ever had access to in respect of the 395 same companies when they were in administration. We are, you see, Mr Speaker, a new dawn in that respect, but their night still casts a long shadow because it was his decision not to file the accounts.

But we are not here, not to discuss those accounts; we are here to discuss this book. This is where the appropriation comes from. This book is what deals with the recurrent income and 400 expenditure of the Government and, as Sir Joe showed, it covers everything it has always covered. That is what the House needs to assess. In fact, in respect of recurrent activity, there is precious little in the companies; precious little! They created the Bus Company – GJBS has been there not since the GSD, since the GSLP – and the Airport, Mr Speaker. Other than that, there is no recurrent income in the companies. That is it. And they put that outside of the book too. They 405 put the Hospital outside of the book, they would have put the power station outside of the book and outside of the book they would have raised the cost of electricity to pay for it 5% a year for 20 years, 100%, or – as people remind me every time I say that on Facebook – more, because of the compound interest that that would have attracted. The car parks they put off balance sheet and the affordable homes, because the affordable homes have always been outside of these 410 estimates. The first instance was the Hospital. The housing are large infrastructure assets; they have never been put through the I&D, and a good thing too. Doesn't he know, or has he forgotten, or has the lack of corporate memory denied them the ability to understand the importance of the case against GRP in Madrid? Maybe he does not know – that is why Mr Phillips speaks from complete ignorance.

415 When the GSD were in administration they marched off site a Spanish contractor at Waterport Terraces. The liquidator of the Spanish contractor is suing the government for many tens of millions of pounds in Madrid – suing GRP, of course, because the housing is done through a company, not here; otherwise the claim for many hundreds of millions of pounds would have been against the Government for a Spanish liquidator. It is a good thing that the 420 liabilities of the companies are not the liabilities of the Government, and if there was a Government guarantee for the liabilities of the company, hon. Gentlemen would know, because they cannot pretend that the companies have guarantees of the Government because the Government cannot guarantee constitutionally and under the Public Finance (Control and Audit) Act without coming to the House for a guarantee.

425 So we have done exactly what they were doing. The power station: tick, just like them, in a company. The car parks: tick, just like them, in a company. The houses: tick, outside the book, through a company, just like them. And now the schools are going to go outside of the book. So what? I have told them already. I told them in answers to questions that we would make an announcement as to the financing of the schools when we had finalised the details of it. Well, 430 Mr Speaker, isn't it obvious? This is hardly a mystery, although frankly he is casting himself a little bit like Inspector Clouseau here, creating mysteries when things are straightforward. We told them the schools that are being built at the site of the new comprehensives are going to cost £52 million, so where is the secret? It is true that that £52 million is not reflected in the book, but I have told him we are not doing them through the book, just like the cost of the car 435 parks that they did, the cost of the power station that we are going to do, the cost of the Hospital etc. It is that simple. [Their virtue, in having done it that way they pretend is our vice for doing exactly the same thing.] In fact, when we debated it – again, because we have debates with them at Question Time, not at debates time – the Hon. Mr Feetham did an analysis to attack us for doing the schools too efficiently at cost. The sum total of the GSD attack on the 440 new comprehensives and the financing of them was to say, 'You're building too cheaply. Are you sure you're going to build it for this?' In fact, Mr Phillips yesterday said, 'It is going to cost £75 million. It is not going to cost £52 million, it is going to cost £75 million because it is not fitted out,' and Mr Feetham did one of his alchemic calculations and said, 'You're building for less than £1,000 per square metre. This is not possible, surely, because nothing has ever been built this 445 efficiently before.' So, in fact, there is efficiency here, no mystery. I am not Agatha Christie writing a mystery book for the hon. Gentleman. He is no Hercule Poirot exercising his little grey cells. He is more a Clouseau, bumbling over himself even when the evidence is just in front of him.

450 Given that he presents himself as a financial guru, the expert on public finance etc., it was so poor of him to get up and deliver one that he had prepared earlier in the light of the statement that Joe Bossano made going exactly to the core of what he was going to say, that he demonstrated that he is no expert at all; very poor indeed, ignoring everything Sir Joe had said.

And indeed, Mr Speaker, if any of this company borrowing outside of the book were a valid premise on which not to support the Budget, on which to vote down the Budget, then it would 455 have been just as valid a premise on which they should have voted down all of the GSD Budgets from 2002 when capital expenditure starts to be channelled by company borrowing under the GSD. What happens in each of those Appropriation debates? The GSLP votes in favour of the Budget. I will provide that in detail when I come to respond to the hon. the spiritual leader of the Opposition's speech, that of Mr Feetham.

460 I am going to go now, in more minute detail, not just through the concepts of what Mr Clinton has said but through the actual detail. He asked me for answers, so I am going to give him the answers, but he is not going to be very happy when he hears them; he is going to be very embarrassed, I think. In doing so, Mr Speaker, I will uncover that this is no Big Lie Budget, but that theirs was a big fraud reply. I will show that his theories are twisted and that they are 465 designed to twist the figures, and in that way it is his approach which delivers the financial trickery of which he – disgracefully, in my view, and unfairly – accuses all of those officials who prepare the numbers that go into the good book. So I accuse him, Mr Speaker. J'accuse Roy Clinton of being a transparent political fraud of the highest order and I am going to prove it. I am going to prove that he and Mr Feetham are of course entitled to their misguided opinions, 470 but what they are not entitled to do is to make up the facts as they go along. That is twisted, that is trickery and that is political fraud.

One thing that will become clear is that although Ms Hassan Nahon wants to exclude white male lawyers from this House, it seems that Mr Clinton would love nothing more than to be a white male lawyer, given his attempts to build a case against the Government, although I think 475 he tried to argue like an unconvincing middle-aged Rumpole and he tied himself in knots. There is nothing worse than an accountant trying to be a lawyer – or a lawyer pretending to be an accountant, to be fair. Only a very special creature could command both of those disciplines, and he is not one of them.

His first lament was that there is no Finance Bill: 'There is no Finance Bill,' he said, 'so I have 480 no time to consider what has been announced as a Budget measure.' Well, if that were a good reason to vote against the Budget, a very good reason to have voted against every single GSD Budget. There has been no Finance Bill in this House with the Budget since 1996. This is what he said:

Indeed, we in this House today do not have the ability to debate or vote on those Budget measures as all that is before us is the Appropriation Bill. If we had a proper Finance Bill, Standing Orders would allow for a reasonable recess to enable the Opposition to digest the measures and prepare a considered response. Evidently, Mr Speaker, the Government has no interest in scrutiny by the Opposition and regrettably there is not a great deal we can say about what he has announced today.

Mr Speaker, let's be very clear: there is no democracy in the world where the Government 485 turns up for a Budget with pre-printed drafted measures, because to do so would impact on the measures themselves. Duty is increased almost retrospectively, otherwise we would be giving importers an unfair advantage. Of course it is a surprise, because if there were a leak – if we produced a Finance Bill for discussion – then the exchequer, that of which he wants to be chancellor, would be deprived of revenue. If we were to do that we would be accused of not 490 looking after the taxpayer's interests. The Budget is intended to be a surprise, in the United Kingdom, here and everywhere else. The public speculate about what might go up and what might go down and only a handful of trusted advisers know for certain what is going to happen. That point is so straightforward he is embarrassingly wrong. Or does he think that in any other parliament in the world people are given advance notice of a Bill that says tobacco will go up by 495 50p and not see MPs rushing out to get a carton of 20 and fill their cars with diesel on the Saturday or Sunday before the Chancellor announces the Budget?

Then he moved on to the issue of Budget expenditure and he said:

Total recurrent revenue peaked at £655.7 million in March 2017 and we now see the outturn for March 2018 to be lower at £635 million; and yet recurrent expenditure as a proportion of revenue ... is growing from 88% in 2017 to 94% in 2018, and in the estimates for 2019 to 96% ... This is a worrying trend that does not allow for much of a buffer should Government revenue suffer a downturn next year ... And in those percentages I have included already the £25 million that is appropriated to finance Government Companies ...

500 Thank you for recognising that we do that, which was never done by the GSD – give £25 million to fund the companies that they set up. We started doing it in our first Budget after re-election in 2011, demonstrating therefore that there were companies that needed money.
And if he does not believe that, he should read the doomsday memo I received from Dilip Dayaram.

505 He says the threshold between the Government's income and the Government's expenditure 'is going to go from 88% to 94%, and I am very worried about that, and next year it's going to go to 96%. I'm very worried about that, that ratio from 88% to 96%. I am very worried about that.'
Keep in mind the issue of that 88% ratio, Mr Speaker, and he says it is worrying because it is going to 96% ratio.

510 Governments are prudent. We underestimate revenue and we overestimate expenditure.
That is how you do these estimates to ensure that you do not come a cropper. That is not novel.
Even a rookie accountant should know that. But if you look at the last 10 years' estimates and compare to the forecast, you will see that Government usually exceeds the gap – always, every year – by some margin. In other words, Government revenue is usually more than estimated – that is why we have estimated conservatively – and Government expenditure is usually on or thereabouts. In the time we have been in government we have made, on average, 141% above 515 our estimates. That means that our outturn was almost 2.5 times the estimated surplus when it comes to revenue. I am not saying that Mr Clinton is wrong to be cautious – he is right to be cautious; we are cautious too – but what he should not do is to try and mislead or twist in doing so. That does not mean that next year will be a fabulous year. I do not know what sort of year it is going to be, we will see towards the end of the year, but we on this side of the House at least, 520 and I think everyone in our community perhaps, except him and them, hopes that it will be a very good year indeed. What we do is we apply a consistent approach, a consistent formula to estimating and forecasting; and if we get it wrong, we get it wrong, but what we should not allow is that somebody should try to mislead and manipulate the figures. That is what he has done. He has manipulated the figures in order to get to this idea of a ratio of 88% going to 96%, 525 and I will demonstrate that.

530 Manipulating the figures is like massaging the figures, that thing which Mr Phillips in one of the banker phrases that he has regard for decided he would accuse me of: massaging the figures. Well, Mr Speaker, he is about to find that the only masseur in this House is Mr Clinton – and he did not give us a very happy ending in the massage that he pretended to give the figures.
He tries to argue that the revenue is becoming unbalanced: 88% ratio, 94% ratio, 96% ratio. This is a geeky point, but it is important to understand it and it is important to show how he got it wrong – embarrassingly wrong, in fact. He uses the average margin of ratio over 22 years to say that there is a worrying trend that does not allow for much of a buffer. That is how he gets to his ratio of 97.7%. In fact, what he is trying to do is baffle us all. With his crooked calculator what he 535 is trying to do is to look for an outcome that will somehow paint the worst picture of the economy. He obviously thinks that all the rest of us are intellectually bereft, or that we will be overpowered by his magnificent prowess. But we are not, Mr Speaker. It is a simple calculation of averages and percentages. What he tries to do is to try and misdirect the eye of fellow Members of the House and of the community.

540 Let's remember what he said: 'recurrent expenditure as a proportion of revenue ... is growing from 88% in 2017 to 94% in 2018, and in the estimates for 2019 to 96% ... a worrying trend that does not allow for much of a buffer ...' Those are his words, Mr Speaker – direct quote. This is a complete, fraudulent, manipulation of the facts. It is not correct because he does not compare like with like. You see, when he quotes the 88% for 2017 he is quoting the ratio for the forecast

545 outturn – (Hon. R M Clinton: No. Actual.) No, forecast outturn, and as I have said previously, we always underestimate revenue and we overestimate expenses, as any prudent accountant does.
Therefore, estimates laid before this Parliament for the year ending 31st March 2017, for which he quotes 88%, actually reveal a 97% ratio. He has got his numbers wrong. He has got to get out 550 the crooked calculator again. He has got his numbers wrong, so for 2018, the outturn for that year is indeed 94%, but the estimate when it was laid before Parliament for approval actually projected 97%. So if you want to find a trend and you compare apples with apples and pears with pears and you do not take a melon and compare it to a chirimoya (Laughter) the trend that you see is this: for the financial year 2012-13, 96% ratio; for the financial year 2013-14, 97% 555 ratio; for the financial year 2014-15, 94% ratio; for 2015-16, 97% ratio; for 2016-17, 97% ratio; for 2017-18, 97% ratio. Can he see the trend? Or shall I spell it out for him? There is no jump in ratio from 88% to 94% and then 96%. There is almost a metronomic, steady, consistent ratio of 96% to 97%: metronomic, consistent, prudent, cautious; no jump from 88% to 94% and then

560 So was this a rookie error again? Or is this actually an attempt at public deception? Well, he is no rookie anymore. He has been here for three years, so I am no longer going to give him the benefit of the doubt. We can no longer incline towards thinking that he is making mistakes. We have to incline towards thinking that this is an attempt at public deception.

This is hardly the worrying trend that Mr Clinton suggests, because if you look at the ratio in 565 the times when he was a cheerleader for the GSD, the ratios were still 96%. In 2004-05 the ratio was 99%; 98% in 2005-06. It carries on in the mid to high 90s. In fact, if they had contributed £25 million to the companies in expenditure, their ratios would have been off the 100% chart. So he had better get out the crooked calculator again and start doing the numbers and not pretend to say that there are ratios out there which should scare people, because the trends that he calculated are wrong. The trends are wrong. He needs to stop trying to fraudulently deceive 570 people, which is what he is trying to do, especially given the huge deficit that they left us in the companies, a real deficit – in other words, when there is not enough money, not a surplus, which is what he calls a deficit.

And then he moved on, with even less luck, to an analysis of the Consolidated Fund. He said:

Mr Speaker, I was shocked to see that for 2019 the Government is actually projecting ... a budget deficit

– a budget deficit, he said – of £19 million, without taking into account its contribution to Community Care even at its 2018 level of £15 million.

575 This is a continuation of the attempted public deception, a continuation of wanting to pull not the wool, the whole sheep in a jersey over people's eyes. Once again, Mr Clinton's Inspector Clouseau tried to play with the figures and tried to turn something that is transparent and positive into a negative, untrue mystery. By no stretch even of Steven Spielberg's imagination, or of the numbers as elastic as he might want to make them, are we projecting for a deficit of 580 £19 million, or any deficit at all. It is just not there. If he thinks it is, he should have gone to Specsavers. To say the contrary is to turn Mr Clinton's Budget reply into what it is: the Big Lie Budget reply. We are projecting for a surplus of £24 million. That is how surpluses are measured.
The surplus is added to the opening cash pile and the remaining cash is applied to the I&DF and gifted to Community Care. To say there is a deficit is utter nonsense, so much nonsense that 585 there is no definition of deficit even in the Longer Oxford English Dictionary of 20 volumes – which is my prize possession – that can be relied upon to make out the case that he advances.
He is getting quite nervous now, Mr Speaker. His fingers have gone, he is holding up the book, he is getting shaky. He is calling black white – or, in his case, he is calling black beige. He is deceiving in the face of the facts.

590 Take the last year of the GSD, the year 2011-12. They projected for a surplus of £21 million and they projected for a contribution of cash after the surplus of £86 million. By Mr Clinton's newfound measure, the GSD would have been projecting a deficit – a GSD deficit – of £64.5 million. If we apply his calculation to their book, the GSD went into an election year with a projected deficit of £64.5 million. Does he now understand how foolish his point is? The knight 595 would not be pleased to see his final financial legacy to the people of Gibraltar to be a Clintonian definition of deficit of £64.5 million. Is that seriously what he is saying? Of course he is not saying that, Mr Speaker. Nobody can interpret the figures in that way and we will not allow them to distort the figures in that way either, but it shows his complete and utter transparent hypocrisy.

600 He is supposed to be, in the presentations that they do of him, a shrewd accountant: he should know the difference between surplus and cash. And as we have explained previously, the obligations to the Ministry of Defence under the land deals require us to pay now those developers and contractors who are building the homes that we deliver under the lands deal, although we will receive the income in respect of the tenders of the properties sold in the next 605 financial years. But that was Sir Peter Caruana's land deal and his timing, by the way. We are performing on their obligations. As I told the House earlier, that means next year when the estimates are prepared you will see a large cash receipt anticipated in the year 2019-20 – not this book, the next one – when we sell the properties out to tender, and then there will be no need to contribute spare cash into the I&D. I said in my speech there was this two-year effect. I 610 could not have been more open about it, but I should not be surprised that he ignores it,
Mr Speaker, because he even ignored everything that Sir Joe Bossano said about the companies.

Then he went on to the Improvement and Development Fund. He said this, as if he were a political Pontius Pilate:

the Improvement and Development Fund ... has signed a death warrant for this Budget if it needed one.

This is because:

in 2018 it is being emptied such that from an opening balance of £7.9 million it is being left with nothing more than £319,000.

615 This was, Mr Speaker, as much nonsense as everything else that he said: a 'death warrant' with £319,000 left in the I&D. In fact, I almost feel uncharitable for having accused Mr Llamas of doing the in-and-out dance – in, out, in, out, and shake it all about – in politics, because the person I should have accused of doing the dancing is Mr Clinton. He is doing the Twist all the time, every time he gets his calculator out, what he does is the Twist. He tries to twist every 620 single figure, or at least he is trying to bend everyone round the twist trying to concoct an absolutely untrue and nasty argument about the estimates.

The first point I will take to disabuse people over the trickery he attempted is to explain the
I&DF. I am sorry that I have to explain it, but unfortunately it seems he does not understand it.
The Improvement and Development Fund is a fund the Government uses to meet capital 625 expenditure. This will be relevant to the explanation I give him later in respect of the University.
The balance of the Improvement and Development Fund at the end of the year is added to the Consolidated Fund and forms part of the Government's total cash reserves. So it does not really much matter where the cash rests, be it in the Consolidated Fund or the Improvement and Development Fund; it is the total of both of these funds that make up the cash reserve. Has he 630 got that? But because now he says that this is the death warrant of the Budget, I am going to have to explain it.

He said so much about the cash reserve being left at no more than £319,000 in the I&DF that he has tried to pretend it is a problem. Well, what happens every year is that unless there is a capital profit in the form of land sales or another capital item, is that an amount of money is 635 transferred from earnings to fund the long-term capital items. It is the equivalent of a family taking an amount from their salary and using it to refurbish their kitchen or bathroom, a one-off thing they are going to do. It is not something they do every year, they do it on a one-off basis; that is why it is capital – it is not an annual event.

640 We inherited an Improvement and Development Fund in December 2011 at £337,000 – death warrant territory, by the definition of Mr Clinton, but of course the death warrant should not be for this Chief Minister, it should be for the knight that he eulogised. The end of that year it was supposed to be at £750,000 – not £7 million, £750,000. In the two previous years the balance for 31st March 2011 was £500,000, death warrant territory; but in December 2010 it closed at £124,000, double death warrant territory. And the Minister for Justice then was the 645 Hon. Mr Feetham, Gibraltar's second Minister for Justice – as I will explain in a minute, not the first. A hundred and twenty-four thousand pounds: double death warrant territory, because if death warrant territory is £317,000, what is £124,000? Does he want to kill Sir Peter twice for that? Low balances in the I&D are nothing new and nothing that should sign the death warrant of a Budget, as Mr Clinton has sought to so dramatically put it. And what happens in the 650 following years shows my Government's prudence, Mr Speaker.

Mr Clinton should know it was the GSD that entered into the lands deal with the MoD, so we acquire land from the MoD but before we get it we have to build them homes for their people because their people are living in the properties that we are going to take. So, in 2012-13 we receive some plots of land, which are not residential, in some other areas and we get some land 655 sale value in, but then we have to start building. We receive £11.1 million in that financial year and during that year we spend £0.9 million in what are known as 'relocations'. So, at that time we had received £10.2 million more than we had paid out, but in order to ensure that this £10.2 million was not spent on things which were not the MoD lands deal obligations that we had, my Government made the prudent decision that the money should be left in the 660 Improvement and Development Fund. (Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Ring-fenced.) It was ring-fenced for the purposes of meeting the obligations of the lands deal which they entered into. And so the closing balance in 2012 - 13 was £10.7 million: £124,000 under them, £10.7 million under me.

The work then continues, and so by 2013-14 a further £4.7 million of sales, of the less large parts of the MoD estate which we acquire, but we spend another £2.3 million, so the balance of 665 works over receipts of income etc. was £12.6 million, which stays in the Improvement and Development Fund because my Government makes the decision to ring-fence the money in there, to be prudent and to ensure that we can deliver on our obligations. The same happens in 2014-15 and 2015-16, where the I&D grows further to £14.1 million and £19.4 million respectively, reflecting that obligation and where we are on sales versus the cost of building
670 those relocated properties for the MoD.

And then the balance starts to shift. In 2016-17 we are doing more work but we are receiving no properties by this time, so we are doing no sales. But this was planned for, it was designed to be that way – and they planned it. We inherited that and that timeline. What we did not inherit was the obligation to keep the money in the I&D; that was our decision, but they planned the 675 works – the period of the works and the handover of properties and when those would come – with the MoD and we adhered to it. So it cannot be a surprise to them unless they are not talking to each other, unless they do not know what the GSD left hand was doing now that the GSD right hand is complaining about it.

So, rather than top up the I&D Fund we run the balance down, because that is what the 680 money was there for. The money was there for the building of the MoD relocation, so that is what the money is being spent on. And so the estimate for the year ending 2018-19 is that the Government will have spent £59.4 million on the facilities at North Front and will have received at that point £23.6 million, because it is when the MoD move to those new properties that we have built that we then get the properties that we are selling. That is why it is not necessary to 685 keep funding the I&DF, not for any other reason. The Government has used the fund in the book as a tool to ring-fence and keep tabs on the money, on this specific project, and show and monitor for ourselves and for the House how the balance of the payments to the MoD is going.

At the end of this year, if everything goes according to plan, we will have spent £35.8 million more in delivering the relocations than the Government has received by way of revenue. I said as much in my speech. I told him there would be that two-year effect, but we also expect the revenue to come in the year 2019-20 to correct the imbalance – and we would have expected an accountant to understand that. Sometimes the flows do not occur in the same financial year, especially when you are building, but it is a commitment by the GSD in their last MoD lands deal which is contributing to the reducing cash whilst we continue to project for a surplus. It is no death warrant; it is the honouring of the agreements that they entered into. In fact, the balance of cash is made up of both the Consolidated Fund Balance and the I&DF balance, so it is either a rookie error or it is a mischievous accountant trying to distort things. In fact, Mr Speaker, I think now I have demonstrated that he should not call himself Rooke on Twitter, he should call himself Rookie – he should add an ‘i’ if he wants to have any credibility left, because better a rookie than a crook.

But given that the above balance is not really an issue, if £319,000 in the I&DF is a death warrant, what does he think about the £500,000 it was in 2011 or the £124,000 that it was in 2010? Is he going to turn a Nelsonian blind eye to that? If reducing it from £7.9 million to £319,000 is the death warrant, then the bubonic plague must have hit the I&DF in 2011 because in 2010, where I have told him the closing balance was £124,000, it reduced from an opening balance of £85,281,000 to £124,000, a reduction in the year of £85 million. How many death warrants does that deserve by his standards? We did not seek a death warrant, we did not disown the Budget, we did not distort it; we voted in favour.

What is happening is that the results that we are producing are too good and hon. Members opposite do not want to comment on them favourably; they just want to rubbish them and so they want to concoct trends and they want to concoct death warrants. The irony is he tries to turn our success against us. He turns a huge positive into a negative, or tries to. It is typical, but there is no chance, Inspector Clouseau, that you are going to get away with that. There is no mystery to resolve here. It is straightforward and honest, like people at the Treasury and the Ministry of Finance who prepare the estimates, straightforward and honest people, and those are the things he tries to twist.

Mr Speaker, he should listen carefully, I will say this only once: he is trying to cook the books. He takes the largest forecast outturn surplus ever produced in this Parliament, of £75 million last year, and he tries to identify a ratio that suits his purpose of 88% of expenditure over revenue. Next, he takes the forecast outturn for the year gone by with the Estimates Book that is before the Parliament for approval, an estimates book which he in any event had concluded was not worth voting for. And so a year with a very creditable surplus of £36 million higher than the ones that they ever declared, but of course does not produce the result that the £75 million one produces in ratio terms, he says produces a ratio which is unacceptable.

Mr Speaker, what you have there is the start of a sequence that shows what he alleges is the worrying trend, and then he tries to establish that and says we are going from 88% to 94% to 96% etc. But that I have demonstrated is also not true, so neither the death warrant nor the ratios. There is nothing here to warrant any of the concoctions that the hon. Gentleman is doing.

In fact, Mr Speaker, he is so embarrassed he is hiding behind a newspaper. He has not got his favourite beige Financial Times, he has got the magnificent New People in this House, (Two Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) and there is nothing better to honour the memory of Juan Carlos Perez than to see a Member of the GSD, who banned the New People from No. 6 Convent Place, reading the New People in this House out of sheer embarrassment and wanting to hide his face because the beige-pink pages of the FT would not do so.

But if he has the obvious transparent contempt that he has for me and for my people, and supposedly for the people of the Treasury and the civil servants, and he thinks he has these supposedly superior abilities as an accountant, he just could not believe that we would be delivering these results. The narcissist in him could not see beyond the end of his nose, Mr Speaker, so either he has not bothered to work out these ratios, he has not bothered to work

740 out the issues in the I&D before 2010-11 or he just wants to do anything he can to persuade someone, somewhere that this economy is going to crash – he is almost willing it to happen – but the evidence just makes it impossible for him to persuade anyone. If anything, what we show is consistency of approach – because this is not Congo, as he put it, in an obvious clearly 745 racist slur designed to cast aspersions; this is a mature democracy where things are done properly. Our civil servants, our Financial Secretary, our Treasury, our Ministry for Finance, all of them act properly and they are the ones he is attacking. Perhaps, Mr Speaker, what has happened here is that he is scarred by his own experience. The last time someone gave him a consistent return year on year of 12% and his bank invested, we know what happened: he sent 750 all the money to New York and it never came back. I should remind him that our estimates are delivering metronomic consistency.

Mr Speaker, consistency is a good place to start talking about his contribution in relation to the University. As the Hon. Minister for the University explained, the position is not as Mr Clinton alleged. Instead of us tripling the cost from £500,000 last year to £1.5 million, what has actually happened is that the contribution to the University has decreased from £1.9 million 755 to £1.5 million, a decrease of 25%.

I see he is reading the back page now, Mr Speaker, which is a particularly good part of that newspaper. I assume he is just looking down and listening out of sheer terror at what is coming next!

760 He keeps asking us for the accounts of companies, he keeps asking us for those, but why does he want them? What does he do with them? Because either he does not understand them when he gets them or he just tries to twist them for his own objectives.

For the record, Mr Speaker, the accounts for the first full year of the operation of the University cover the year 2015-16 – in this case, it is 1st August to 31st July each year – and they are available to the general public on the University's website. They also include the first period 765 of incorporation. From the first period, in July 2015, £441,951 was spent by the University in its recurrent expenditure, and that can be seen on page 17 of the accounts under the heading 'Financial Review of the University'. I have the accounts here. If hon. Members cared to look at page 17 they would see exactly the amount I am telling him: £441,951. That amount came entirely from Government funding and came from within the figure of £6,000,792 of funding for 770 the University by the Government.

There are different accounting periods here, Mr Speaker. Some of them end in March; ours and the University's one ends in July. But you can see this if you look at page 178 of the Estimates Book under the actual column heading for 'Funding University of Gibraltar'. The balance of the money was spent on the refurbishment of the premises and other capital items – 775 like equipment etc. – typical of something being set up.

The next period for the University was the first complete year of accounts, the year ending July 2016. The University opened in September 2015. During that year a further £1.7 million were the total running costs. Despite the accounts covering a full year, anyone with an accounting eye would understand that there are costs for the period of operation that reflect 780 less than a year. During that period, according to the University's accounts, the Government contributed almost £1.8 million to recurrent expenditure of the University with a significant amount contributed to finalise the construction of the building before the whole thing opened.
If we take the Estimates Book for this year again under the 'Funding of the University' you will see that we contributed £1.8 million. It is on page 176. If you add £6,796,613 contributed by the 785 Government in 2015-16 and the £1,807,387 contributed by the Government in 2016-17, you come to a total contributed by the Government to the University of £8.6 million. That is when the estimates were debated last year.

At that time, in this debate last year, Mr Clinton knew that the University was open – of course he did. He knew the University had started trading – we all did. Indeed, he could see for 790 the first period of account, from the University's published accounts, it needed £1.8 million to run that first year of operation, which was less than a year. Their accounts, the University accounts, say two things:

Direct grant funding from HM Government of Gibraltar represented the bulk of the University's overall income.

That is under 'Grant funding' on page 18. And under the heading entitled 'Looking ahead', it says:

The University expects that it will have a continuing need for support from the Government after the original £10 million appropriation is fully utilised in order to be able to meet the ambitious expectations that have rightly been placed on it and maintain financial stability.

795 But remember, Mr Speaker, their accounts are to July and that therefore the 2015-16 University accounts were available before the last Budget session. He did not have to ask for them from us; they were online.

The accounts of the University online say this:

The University's budgeted expenditure for the year to 31st July 2017 will be kept within budgeted levels of grant income tuition fees.

800 In other words, the University needed the same amount from the Government – which, as we have seen from their accounts, is £1.8 million.

805 So, with all of that information which was in the public domain etc., how did Mr Clinton think that £½ million under the recurrent head was going to be enough? What did he think last year we were giving them? A third of what they needed? A quarter of what they needed? What did he think the £1.4 million under the I&DF was for? Did he think we had been able to defer payment of the capital costs of the University when it had opened in September 2015? It had been open for some time. He knew the capital costs had been paid. He knew they were in the region of £6 million. But he has such an insatiable desire for accounts that when he gets them he does not seem to want to read them or understand them. Maybe he is just a hoarder of accounts and does not actually bother to read them. Then, when the Estimates Book is presented, he votes against it. But then when he picks up statistics, he has tried to discredit the Government by saying we are tripling the cost of the University.

810 All of this, Mr Speaker, you might have said, 'Well, it was all a confusion, everyone's entitled to have an off day, maybe he made a mistake; nobody's pretending they are perfect – even Mr Clinton's not pretending he's perfect.' But we have to look at what we actually said to each other last year, because all of these things I have referred to are accounts that he may have seen or may not have seen. What did we say to each other?

815 This is Mr Clinton's question last year on Friday, 8th July in this debate, in the Committee Stage and Third Reading:

Thank you. Mr Chairman, the last item down the list is the University of Gibraltar. I see a further amount of £3.25 million required for this coming year and £6.7 million for last year.

Is this to cover capital, I presume it is capital cost, is this part of the overall £10 million funding originally announced to the university and is it envisaged that this will be the final amount that the Government will be contributing towards the university.

And perhaps as a final rider, has the university provided any financial information to the Government as regards its funding requirement?

Mr Licudi, DPP, then says this:

this is just a balance of £10 million which I had announced would be contributed by the Government to the university. We have made some capital expenditure and there is a contribution to the university which is ultimately going to reach £10 million and that represents the balance which is payable in respect of that £10 million which had been previously announced.

820 Up to there, he can still rely on the fact that all of these things may have just led him to have an off day. But of course, Mr Speaker, as those of us who have been in this House with him know, he does not leave it there:

Mr Chairman, thank you very much for that. Is there any reason why the full £10 million was not paid up front?

There are some interjections there, Mr Speaker – I suppose it is Mr Bossano fainting at the thought of just giving somebody £10 million without accountability.

825 Mr Licudi says:

Simply because it was not necessary. The university did not need £10 million up front. It was originally a Government project and we were spending money on the project as and when we were required to spend those monies on the capital expenses and then on the recurring expenses once we started engaging staff.

The university then became a statutory body and has become an independent institution and we now have a contribution to make to the university as and when they require the money, up to the £10 million which we had indicated we would be contributing.

So there Mr Licudi had talked about the £10 million covering the recurrent. Up to there I would even now be prepared to give him the benefit of the doubt in respect of having missed it. What did the Hon. Roy Clinton say last year on 8th July in this debate at the Committee Stage?

830 The next thing he said – ‘by the mouth dieth the fish’, as we say in Spanish:

So, Mr Chairman, would I be correct in saying that the £10 million would cover both the capital cost and initial running costs of the university and how many years would that cover in terms of running costs?

Well, Mr Speaker, he says therefore in that question, ‘Ah, so the £10 million goes to recurrent as well as capital, does it?’ and the Member of the Government that is not transparent, that does not give information, that is hiding things, that does not deserve support for its Budget, says this:

Mr Chairman, that is correct. It covers the initial capital costs and the running costs of the university on the basis that it is a contribution to the University of Gibraltar Limited.

As I explained when we launched the project, and in particular we brought a Supplementary Appropriation Bill, I seem to recall in respect specifically of the £10 million and I explained exactly how those ... were going to be split up.

We anticipated that there would be largely around £6 million in setup costs and an initial recurrent costs for the first year and the opening phase, and then approximately something like £2 million a year. So the £10 million was always intended to cover the initial start-up phase the first year and then two more years of operation thereafter.

835 ‘Thank you very much, Mr Chairman,’ said Mr Clinton.

So now you see it is impossible to give him the benefit of the doubt and think that he did not know specifically that the £10 million contribution actually was also to cover the recurrent costs of the University. He specifically said so. He might say, ‘Well, look, fair enough, you got me – I forgot.’ I could not be clearer that appropriation of £10 million was for both capital and 840 recurrent expenditure. He knew it because he asked and he was told. Although the House had been told before he was here, whilst he was here, less than a year ago he asked that specific question and he had it answered.

But yesterday, or the day before, in answering the demolition job of his credibility that the Hon. Gilbert Licudi DPP – I mean MP – did on social media, he posted this:

The Minister for the University needs to attend one of its accountancy courses. Doesn’t he know the difference between capital spend and recurrent expenditure? Last year’s capital spend was £1.4 million and £500,000 recurrent expenditure. This year estimated recurrent expenditure is £1.5 million.

845 Ouch! Oh, ouch! Oh, Mr Speaker, especially after the accounts I read him from the University, which he has got, and in particular his own words – ouch! Credibility self-immolated! We do not need Gilbert Licudi to destroy his credibility – he has just done it himself. Talk about a grubby Facebook post, Mr Speaker. At least he does it in his own name; we will give him that much.

850 He must feel so embarrassed and deflated. How embarrassing must it be for him to hear me read his own words, which demonstrate that what he posted is so entirely incorrect, and in front of all his sycophants he has been shown to have got it completely wrong. The financial guru got it wrong on something as simple as recurrent and capital, on something as close to everyone's heart as the University, with all the accounts that he asked for, for everything, available, and his own words have demonstrated that he got it wrong. Double ouch! because he fought back and 855 did not say, 'Sorry, got it wrong, let's move on to the next thing.' Double credibility-smashing incident. Inspector Clouseau is on the ropes now, totally lacking in credibility.

Let's move on from that particular embarrassment. Another point from the Improvement & Development Fund:

other than £1,000 ... there is no ... provision for the cost of the construction of the eight new schools which, as the Government has already disclosed, just the new comprehensives will cost £52.2 million in this financial year.

860 Another reason, apparently, not to vote for the Budget, as if the use of token provisions – one line of £1,000 – were something new this year and unsurprising. But this is a token provision, which is the common way of opening a line, as we say, to ensure that you can spend on a project and then you can determine how the project is going to be finally booked. It has always been used in that way. It forewarns the House that there is going to be that expenditure. And that expenditure may then not go through the book – it may be done in the way that they 865 did it, through companies – but the initial expenditure may go through the book. It is normal. It has been done for years. So how can he say that because there is no provision for the cost of building the schools in the full amount – a balance to complete, in effect – this somehow deprives the Government of credibility? He knows that we have not gone to tender for some of the other schools, not yet. We have said that we are going to go for competitive quotes in 870 respect of the other schools, so how can we put in a figure if we have only got the figure of £52 million? In fact, they have already worked out per square metre what it is going to cost without the fitting out. How can there be a mystery? I have said when we have finalised the financing options we will announce it, so how can this in any way deprive the Estimates – this good book – of the credibility needed to support it?

875 We have signposted that we are doing something, it is there in the book, we have said that we are thinking of doing it in another way and we have said we will announce it when the time comes. What is the difference with the Estimates for 2009-10, where there was token provision for a number of things? There was token provision for borrowing. In fact, there was token provision for borrowing which is something that does not display itself physically. So, if I say I am
880 going to build schools and I say there is a line in and I am going to do it in some other way and I will announce how I am going to do it, I have said it and hon. Members know. But even if I did not say it, when I move Customs and I flatten the plot and Casais starts to pound, something is happening; and if there is a sign that says 'Building your vision' and it is the schools, they know what I am doing and they can then ask me, 'How are you going to fund it?' and I will say to them, 885 'I will announce it when I am ready.' But what about the 2009-10 Estimates Book, which has that token provision – which they seem to be so objecting to these days – in respect of borrowing? Borrowing is not physical. Borrowing does not require piling outside of Varyl Begg. So you put a token provision in of £1,000, then you do a borrowing and nobody sees it; it is a metaphysical thing. But do you know what the forecast outturn was, Mr Speaker, for that £1,000 token head 890 which the GSD in their Estimates for 2009-10 put in? Do you know what it was? Pop quiz – £189 million of borrowing. A head went from the token £1,000 to £189 million. From a position of gross debt of £200 million at 31st March 2009 end of year, the increase was by £189 million more, almost double the previous year. They doubled the gross debt in one year and they did it by filling a token head of £1,000, and at that time Mr Feetham was the second Minister for 895 Justice in Gibraltar's history sitting as part of the Government. That is what his party did. The hon. the greatest Gibraltarian of all time – according to some, Mr Speaker – did that and they did not complain, but they do now in respect of something which is physical, which is announced, of which they know the price and on which I have said I am going to make an announcement. Zero credibility. Inspector Clouseau fails to get his man again.

900 And then on the use of companies, Mr Speaker, as if this were something new. Joe Bossano gets up and gives them a brilliant thesis, explaining why it is absolutely right to continue doing that which they invented. He gets up, he ignores everything he is told, does not debate, just delivers the one he had prepared earlier. He is just so failing to engage that it is disrespectful to Sir Joe Bossano.

905 There are, in broad terms, three groups of companies. The passive holding companies – GAR Ltd, GCP Investments and Gibraltar Land Holdings Ltd – hold assets. Little change there between this administration and the previous administration. Active companies, the ones that carry out activities: the Gibraltar Bus Company, Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd, GJBS, Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd and King's Bastion Leisure Centre Ltd, all of them in place before December 2011. I am pleased 910 to see one of the people responsible for King's Bastion Leisure Centre Ltd, and for everything that that leisure centre does, in the House today, Mr Speaker – very welcome he is too.

The companies have not changed much. Many of them are funded directly by contributions from the Estimates Book, such as Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners or Gibraltar General Construction Company Ltd. They are funded from this overall contribution of £25 million, which is deducted 915 before the surplus is calculated. Mr Speaker, that is important. I have declared a surplus of £36 million this year, as high as any surplus they ever declared before. If I had been Sir Peter Caruana, I would not have deducted £25 million before declaring the surplus. In other words, the surplus would have been £61 million under the GSD.

Mr Speaker, the 50-50 construction companies, which are there to construct the affordable 920 homes: there is nothing new being done that was not invented by them, and in time immemorial nobody else has suggested that omitting these from the book is somehow financial alchemy, no one has said it is trickery – until Inspector Clouseau arrived on the scene trying to solve something that is not a mystery.

Car parks, well, they built car parks in this way with the rental income meeting the 925 expenditure. We refinanced their loans on the car parks and got a better deal. We built a bigger car park but we also put a coach terminus in it which produces income. And in fact, if we had sold all of the parkings – Mr Phillips and Mr Clinton bought some; they might have bought more – it would have been cost neutral at Midtown.

And then there is the power station, Mr Speaker. Is it that building a power station funded 930 through a company is somehow wrong? Well, they were doing exactly the same thing with the increase in electricity costs coming. That, however, was different in one particular way: it was completely secret that they were going to do that. They had said nothing in this House. That was not off balance sheet; that was off everybody's lips. When we arrived at No. 6 Convent Place we were told to pack our bags, to go to America on a roadshow with a particular bank to sell debt in 935 Gibraltar to pay for the power station and raise the cost of electricity 5% a year for 20 years.
Literally, get elected: step 1, doomsday memo, 'There's no money'; step 2, 'Pack your bags, we're going to America to raise money for the power station because that's what Sir Peter was planning to do the morning after the election.' That was secret, Mr Speaker. That was not financial alchemy, not worth supporting their estimates on. Maybe it is because they were going 940 to do it. When they do it, it is fine, and when we do it, it is fraud.

We have taken the same line they took. We do not say that this is in any way a fraud, except we are not going to be raising the cost of electricity, and we have done a much better deal than they have done because we are going to have a loan repaid over a 12-year period. So nothing much has changed, Mr Speaker. The big offence, apparently, is we are going to put schools 945 through this mechanism – but it makes a lot of sense to do so, and in fact some of the schools will also produce income because we are going to sell parkings under the schools, because 950 people in those areas want parkings. It makes a lot of sense to do this. Why is this so wrong? What is different to what they were planning to do? Or is it that he just did not know the party that he was joining? Does he not know what legacy it is that he is supposed to be defending? Did he really not look at what was happening? Is he so green behind the political ears that he is left to allege fraud – which is in effect what he is saying – in respect of the things that they did? Not the things we are doing; we did not invent them. Or the acquisition of the off balance sheet PFI funding, where they bought a hospital for £8.5 million and we are still paying and will be paying between £35 million and £40 million for it? At least Mr Feetham was always against it every time that Sir Peter was not in the room. But although Mr Feetham was entirely consistent in the defined circumstances I have illustrated in respect of being against the PFI, the current leader of the GSD was in the Cabinet when it was done. Maybe it was not much of a Cabinet then, maybe there was not much collective responsibility, but the current leader of the GSD – not the current incumbent Leader of the Opposition; we do not know how long he is going to be allowed to do the job for – was Minister for Health until 2000 and then, after that, Minister for Trade and Industry and Financial Services and was in the Cabinet when the allegedly infamous PFI deal was done. That was the first off balance sheet company borrowing that was done. Is that therefore now something that is wrong, despite the fact that they did it then and they invented it?

965 When they do things, Mr Speaker, we have to accept it is right; when we do it, it does not reveal the whole picture and we must vote against the pay of civil servants and we must vote to close down the Hospital. He turns everything that they did and was a virtue in their hands into a vice and a sin that must be punished into our hands.

970 He took great succour from the report of the Chamber. The report of the Chamber says that there should be an independent assessment because there is a dispute, apparently. Well, there is no dispute. They have just said that that which they used to do they think is wrong now. What the Chamber is doing, in my view, is like admitting that there is a dispute in relation to the sovereignty of Gibraltar or British Gibraltar Territorial Waters just because a Spaniard has claimed them. The Chamber report, before it says what he says it says – the sentence before, which he has shamefully failed to read, and if he were honest he would have read it – says this:

This administration, like the one before, has evolved a system of legal off balance sheet loans that have resulted in Government's account becoming somewhat opaque.

975 Because he said so. But they say in recognition that it was done by the administration before and they say it is legal, something which I note he and Mr Feetham have not attacked this year. They spent a number of years saying that this was illegal. After four or five years of hammering into them that they were doing it too, they have stopped saying it is illegal, but now they are still saying it is not proper. Even the Chamber recognises it is legal. This cannot be a genuine dispute. It cannot be anything other than, at its best, hypocrisy, or at its worst political schizophrenia, because you see, Mr Speaker, there is absolutely no drizzle for him to concern himself with. It might just be a bit of dandruff on his glasses, Mr Speaker, that he is confusing for drizzle. There are no two sets of books. There are two sets of principles: the ones they apply to themselves when they are in government and the ones that they apply to us. But this is not the Congo and we are not the boys from Brazil. What is clear is that if he were ever to become Minister for Finance, all this economy would get, all of our people, the only thing they would get from him is a no after no to every single project: 'Accountant says no' would be the answer to every request for funding in our community.

990 I want to deal with Mr Feetham now, Mr Speaker, and leave the political carcass of Mr Clinton to fester, but before I start, given that he was the one who introduced the fact that they were going to vote no to this Budget, I want to remind people – everyone listening, every public servant, everyone who draws an emolument from the Crown – that everyone will be paid after 1st August, thanks to us voting for this Budget and Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon. Everyone will be treated in the Gibraltar Health Authority on the basis of direct universal medical 995 coverage, thanks to the vote of the Members of this Government and Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon. Every fire will be put out, thanks to the funding of the fire brigade because of the 10 votes on this side of the House and Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon. And it is not frivolous to say this.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Of course it isn't.

Hon. Chief Minister: What if two Ministers had to go and travel and one Minister became ill? Mr Speaker, if we were not able to pass this Bill before 1st August because of their indulging their desire to vote against the Budget, there would be no money for salaries. We would have a Government shutdown. Or, if they had their wish and they had backbenchers the total sum of whom could outvote the executive, we would have no appropriation. What if I ask three 1005 Ministers or four Ministers to go outside into the antechamber for a coffee when the time comes to vote? What would they do? What if they were the ones that had six and I had five because of ministerial illness etc? Would they then really so blithely say, 'Oh, we're going to vote no'? They are saying no as a silly gimmick. It is a show. It is gesture politics. They do not really mean no. No means yes when they put up their hands. They want to see the funding continue but they do not want to put up their hands. It is very dangerous to say no when you mean yes, (A Member: Absolutely.) but like everything they do, they say one thing and they mean another. Black means white – or black means beige. Their words and their actions are set on a completely divergent path. It is like their words and the truth, they never meet.

So today, Mr Speaker, I will be asking that you call a division, so that history once again records exactly how everyone votes in this House, so that every civil servant knows who voted to pay them and who voted not to pay them, so that every patient knows who voted to treat them and who voted for them not to be treated, so that every child and every teacher knows who voted that our schools should open and who voted to close down our schools, so that every 1020 police officer and every customs officer knows who voted to fund the law enforcement agencies and support the rule of law and who did not, so that everyone in our community knows who voted for the continuation of functioning Government and who voted to shut it down. But I guess there is one silver lining, which the Minister for Justice will not like: every prisoner will know who voted for them to be released and who voted for them to remain incarcerated. And every single Member of this House and every single person in this community will know that I am not making it up, that I am not just saying it as a catchphrase, because when it comes to the division they will hear Mr Clinton say no. The accountant will actually be on our television screens: 'Accountant says no.'

Mr Feetham, however, of course was as eloquent as usual. You cannot deny the passion is still there, the fire under the six pack is still there. (Laughter) He built this great house of cards. Of course our common senior partner, a fantastic and honourable man who deserves the support of everyone in this House, always used to tell me that there was a QC in Gibraltar who used to build an edifice of eloquence in his cases – which I think Mr Feetham is trying to emulate – but that the way to beat him was to go for the bottom card because that is where the 1035 fault lay, that is where the mistake and the logic was wrong. And that is what the hon. Gentleman has done: the usual morass of eloquently explained contradictions.

1040

I thought it started a bit like a valedictory speech, saying thank you to everyone who had helped him in his career etc., thanking us all for everything. Dr Jekyll had arrived in the room; Mr Hyde was not far behind, of course. But he was doing his valedictory on the same day that he was telling Panorama that he is thinking of staying in politics. (Laughter and banging on desks) So fair and foul a day I have not known, Mr Speaker! (Laughter) But then it started to flow. The Big Budget Lie reply started to flow.

1040

Let's take the first easy one. If I show, just like Mr Licudi showed with Mr Clinton, that he misled or lied or in another way was wrong, then how can they believe anything else that they say? Mr Clinton has the disadvantage that his political carcass is now entombed below 1045 Mr Licudi's demolition job yesterday and the tank I have driven over his credibility today. So let's start seeing where Mr Feetham lies in his new role as just the spiritual leader of the Opposition rather than the de facto current incumbent.

1050 The first thing he said in his valedictory was that he wanted to thank everyone who had helped him as Gibraltar's first Minister for Justice. He was not Gibraltar's first Minister for Justice. The first Minister for Justice in Gibraltar's political history was the man he calls the greatest Gibraltarian of all time – only he calls him that (Interjection) – who, in a ministerial statement in this House from this position, said on 26th February 2007 that he would be sworn in as Gibraltar's first Minister for Justice until the election. And so he was, Mr Speaker; I 1055 remember the spectacle. But he repeats all the time that he was Gibraltar's first Minister for Justice – 'When I was first Minister for Justice ...' – although he was not the first Minister, he was the second Minister for Justice. It is about repeating a lie often enough so that people will believe it. He might have been the first Minister for Justice that had no other ministerial responsibility. He was Gibraltar's first and only dedicated Minister for Justice, because I suppose 1060 the man he calls the greatest Gibraltarian of all time had worked out that he could only really do one thing at a time, whilst every other Minister for Justice Gibraltar has had since then and had before him had other responsibilities. Mr Caruana had other responsibilities, Mr Licudi had other responsibilities and Mr Costa has other responsibilities. So it is true that he is the only Minister for Justice Gibraltar has had who could not do more than one thing at any one time. That is 1065 characteristic of the way that he builds the argument: 'I was Gibraltar's first Minister for Justice.' Well, you were not Gibraltar's first Minister for Justice – you have got the number one and the number two confused, and that goes through the rest of your speech: all the numbers are confused.

1070 He says he would never make political capital at the expense of the community! I am sorry, I am just remembering the last election campaign. But that is exactly what they are doing. They are doing it now, just like they were doing with the LNG nightmare and all the rest of it. They are misrepresenting reality to the whole of the community and to the international community, and that is bad for Gibraltar – although Mr Llamas, in a moment of his characteristic political honesty, said international investors do not listen to us; we can do what we like, they are not 1075 listening. That is making political capital at the expense of the community. In other words, he does the exact opposite of what he says he is going to do.

1080 He says he is not going to pretend that the GSD is always right, but he says that on the public debt and the economic re-engineering they are right in identifying what we are doing and that that is completely wrong and improper and therefore it is right to vote against the Budget. He cannot take another position. Having been persuaded hook, line and sinker to accept the facile arguments that Mr Clinton put to him last year, and having taken the GSD from supporting Budgets to not supporting Budgets, what could they do? When the time came to decide what to do this year, they had to defend voting no because they either sacrificed themselves and voted yes, having voted no, or they sacrificed Mr Llamas, who is the one who is going to have to 1085 change his vote. It was obvious what they were going to do and they had to somehow conject an argument to defend that, but in doing so – I am going to go for the bottom card in the house of cards that he created – did he miss, as he prepared his case ...? I do not mean to move him to tears, Mr Speaker. I do hope it is more a contact lens malfunction.

1090 Hon. Sir J J Bossano: It's the eye watering.

Hon. Chief Minister: It's the eye watering, yes. (Laughter) (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) I certainly hope not, Mr Speaker.

1095 Didn't he miss that the re-engineering happened between 1996 and 2011? He cannot have missed it. Like Mr Clinton when I read him his extract from the Committee Stage and Third Reading last year which demonstrates he knew the money was being used for recurrent spending in the University, he knows that the re-engineering happened under the GSD because he complained about it. When he was the leader of the erstwhile and putative Labour Party he 1100 used to say, and as he has said in this House, 'I have always been against the PFI.' So he cannot pretend that the re-engineering happened after 2011 and use that as the new putative reason to vote against the Budget – except, of course, when the man he calls the greatest Gibraltarian of all time was in the room he was sctum. But maybe now he also has to once again pretend that he was not against the funding in 2003 because his new leader, the current leader of the GSD, was a Minister when the funding was entered into, let's not forget, and there was collective responsibility even if there was not collective decision making, and a new hospital opened in February 2003 when the current leader of the GSD was a Minister and the funding was arranged when he was a Minister. That was PFI off balance sheet lending which we are still paying for and we have £35 million to £40 million to pay for. Mr Clinton was not there, but the current leader of the GSD was and he was in Cabinet – or whatever it was that they had in the Government – from 1110 2007 to 2011. He was a Minister when the Government of the GSD committed all of the mortal sins that he has complained of in the past 24 hours, all of them. I guess it makes sense because he has described himself as the fallen angel of the GSLP. We do not describe him like that, Mr Speaker, but just to make sure that we stick with the biblical allusions, what I have heard him described as in the GSD is as Judas – who is not one of the fallen angels but one of the disciples – 1115 not as an angel at all. He must see himself as he described himself to us during the Question Time, as a fallen angel, because fallen angels fall to hell and there they commit all sorts of deadly sins, including the deadly vice of company borrowing to fund capital expenditure.

And how deadly is this sin? Well, Mr Speaker, it is a mortal sin because it is mortal for his political credibility. In his first part financial year as Gibraltar's second Minister for Justice in 1120 2007-08 – remember, the election was on a dark, dank October morning in the middle of the year – a total of £50.3 million was spent on capital projects that year, £50.3 million on capital projects; £26.8 million was in the book; £23.5 million was spent through companies, almost 50-50. A mortal sin. But he did not vote for that Budget, because the Budget happened in June-July and he was elected in October-November. He was chairman of the party or something, I think. 1125 They give themselves nomenclatures by appointment in that party to give themselves – (A Member: General Secretary.) General Secretary, a very socialist name for a right-wing party! (Laughter) Yes, indeed, General Secretary. But I will not impute that to him, because he did not vote for the Budget. I assume that, given what we hear about collective responsibility in Cabinet in those days, if you were not in the Government how could you have control of that if you were 1130 just in the party? So I will not impute that to him. It was almost 50-50. The majority was spent through the I&D; a little less was spent through companies, but almost 50-50 – 46.7% was the ratio. But he has the temerity of accusing us of inventing the funding through companies of capital projects. He was General Secretary of the GSD but he was not in the House for that Budget debate, so let's put that to one side. If it was such a deadly sin and he should not be seen 1135 anywhere near it, he was not here when they did the PFI of the Hospital in 2003 and he was not here when they spent that amount, that 46% ratio through companies he was not responsible for because he was not sitting here at the end being told to shut up, as we used to see him – carrying just one portfolio he does not have that responsibility. But at least he knowingly joined the team that he knew invented it, because he had complained about the Hospital in 2003. He 1140 knowingly joined the team that invented it.

The following year, 2008-09, he was in this House for the Budget debate, so what happened to the fallen angel in the financial year 2008-09? It is the year of the financial crisis. He voted, as a Member of the Government, for that Budget in that Appropriation Bill. So did we, from there. In that year £80.2 million was spent on capital projects, £32 million was spent through the I&D 1145 through the book, £48.2 million was spent through the borrowing of Government companies, 60%, and he put his hand up and said yea to that, and for exactly the same reason he says now that he has to say nay to our Budget. That is what he calls the structure of companies and the funding through company debt of capital projects, the re-engineering of public debt.

Isn't he embarrassed when I point these things out to him? He has made a complete and 1150 utter fool of himself with these arguments. If he were in court, Mr Speaker, I think by now, with 1155 those two examples, the judge would have made a costs order against his client – and I think it is going to get a little worse. It is not going to get any better, because I am going to continue the analysis for him. He would have dismissed the case and made a costs order against him for advancing the case for not voting for the Budget. This is an analysis he should have done for himself – he has got all the books – before he made the arguments that he made.

1160 In the financial year 2009-10, when he was still Gibraltar’s second Minister for Justice, the spending on capital projects was £109.8 million: £39.9 million through the I&D, £69.9 million through the companies. I know that they are not very good at maths, especially their financial expert, Mr Speaker, so I have worked out the ratio for them: 64% of all the funding for all the capital projects in the financial year 2009-10, when he was Gibraltar’s second Minister for Justice, was funded through Government companies through debt. (Hon. N F Costa: Shame!) So, if anybody re-engineered the public finances and the economy of Gibraltar by introducing the concept of funding capital projects through company debt it was not us.

1165 It is like that terrible moment when your opponent turns up with an authority that you have missed: your spine goes cold, parts of your bladder open and your bowel does not behave itself. I assume that is what he is going through, Mr Speaker, because he should have checked all of this. Before he allowed the Hon. Mr Clinton to persuade him, he should have checked all of this – although I think I have detected something of a change, because they have moved from saying that all of this is illegal to now just saying that they do not like it and they are not going to vote in favour of it; a huge change, because they spent a lot of time trying to persuade people that the Government was acting illegally by doing exactly the same things that they had done. They could not dare to say it was illegal whilst Sir Peter was in the room because they would have been accusing him of illegality, but when Inspector Clouseau first comes on the scene he decides that there must be a crime and decides that there must be an illegality and it was all illegal and unconstitutional for a while, and then all that went away. I still remember the Hon. Mr Clinton on a Viewpoint programme where he is put against the ropes and the interviewer asks him, ‘But Mr Clinton, it was all being done in your time as well – is it illegal?’ and then, on Viewpoint, on television, in a recorded interview, he says, ‘Well, no, I just would prefer it done another way’ – an admission that their whole argument on legality and illegality was not worth the saliva through which they had uttered it. This year it is not illegal, it is just a travesty, Mr Feetham tells us, and re-engineering. But we are accused of all of this, this re-engineering.

1175 So the analysis I have done up to now for financial years 2007-08 and 2009-10 amounts to £240 million, of which £141 million was spent through the companies, 59% over two years in the way that they describe now as a terrible travesty and a vice. Mr Speaker, as it compounds itself the judge in that courtroom would have been dismissing his client’s claim that it was right to vote against the Budget and would be making a costs order against him personally on an indemnity basis – (Hon. N F Costa: Wasted costs.) wasted costs on an indemnity basis – because in 2010-11 £108.2 million was spent, £59.5 million through the I&D and £48.7 million through the companies, again the same vice, the re-engineering that they complained of. And in 2011-12, the last year, £157 million – £93.5 million through the companies, £63.9 million through the companies – a continuation of the practice that a man who describes himself as a fallen angel says is devilish and demonic.

1185 Well, I do not know if he has kept a tally, but if he had he would have found out that in the time that he was Gibraltar’s second Minister for Justice a total of £505.9 million of spending on capital projects was done through the companies by the GSD in those financial years – £254.2 million was spent through the companies by the GSD, Government projects funded through Government company borrowing; £254.2 million as a percentage of £505.9 million is 50.25%. More than half of the funding was done through Government company debt: financial trickery, re-engineering. As they say in Spanish, Mr Speaker, his face should fall of shame. (Interjection)

1200 To make matters worse, they made no contributions to the companies. They were leaving them unfunded on a year on year basis, and these companies also had recurrent costs; hence the eventual £100 million black hole. That is why we declare £25 million every year for the companies. That is why my surplus is not £61 million this year, it is £36 million.

1205 Mr Speaker, let him do another calculation. I bought him a calculator some years ago: if he is truly leaving politics, could he pass it over to Mr Clinton? He really needs it; it is not a crooked one like the one Mr Clinton has at the moment. It is quite an easy calculation. It is 25 by seven, 175. That is the amount of money that, just through annual contributions, we have paid to the Government companies every year before declaring a surplus, since we were elected in 1210 December 2011: £25 million every year to the Government companies, £175 million. There it is. No financial trickery. The vice of re-engineering debt was something that they devised and then it was a virtue and not a vice.

Mr Speaker, the judge now, having heard all of this, would say Mr Feetham has not just incurred a wasted cost order on an indemnity basis; he has advanced such an unsustainable case
1215 that it is clear that he was trying to mislead the court intentionally, which would be contrary to the overriding objective of litigation in the Civil Procedure Rules and he would have himself not just a court order – I reckon that he should be ordered not to represent clients again or be in contumelious contempt of the court for having intentionally attempted to deceive it, and be sent to chokey for a little while to purge his contempt in the Prison that he himself built no
1220 doubt with Government company debt.

All joking aside, Mr Speaker, it is that bad. It shows that when they accuse us of something it is something that they were doing themselves. He said I was the architect of all this, but he sat next to the architect of all this and called him the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, and his current leader – I do not know what he calls him, Mr Speaker – was part of the team that started 1225 it.

But this is fine, this is normal, this is gesture politics, but it is a gesture that got him into a lot of hot water. Doesn't he realise that what really did for him politically was the foolish decision to follow the Hon. Mr Clinton's lead and vote against the Budget? That is what pushed Mr Llamas out when he was at his weakest moment. Their final gesture last year; that is what did for him.
1230 And it hurts me a lot because he and I have been in politics against each other for years and it was down to me to finish him off – and he finished himself off and did not give me a chance of finishing the job I had started. People say that the hon. Lady finished him off when she said that he was using false identities on Facebook, and other people say no, it was Mr Llamas who finished him off because he left at that very difficult moment. It was actually the Hon. Mr
1235 Clinton, who perhaps is wiliier than we all think, who finished him off, because he is the one who persuaded him to go down the road of gesture politics and vote no, for a Budget that everybody has always voted yes for, on the most spurious basis that gets thinner and thinner every year.

I am very disappointed, Mr Speaker, because if it were down to him and me, one of us would finish the other off, not one's own political suicide, like we saw with him – although if there is a political Lazarus, he is making a bid to be it. This gesture politics of walking out of the House like he walked one day, gesture politics of voting against ... But even for the erudite presentation that he gave us, which was of course wrong from the bottom up, there was not unanimous support on his side of the House because the hon. Lady of course did not bang the table when he finished his speech. But she was not the only one. I detected that another Member of the 1240 GSD team was also rightly not banging on the table and sticking, I think, to his intellectual guns – but I will come to Mr Llamas in a moment. It is clear Mr Llamas has accepted the collective decision but he does not think it is right and I think what he said yesterday made that quite clear.

I think they are quite embarrassed by now, Mr Speaker, because they know they have been caught out. They know that all of the allegations of re-engineering they have pushed towards us are what they are responsible for.

In that context I suppose he was trying to deflect emotion when he said that he was hurt by the contribution of the Hon. Father of the House. Well, we know that he does hurt very well. I really genuinely think that the Oscar for a performance of a purportedly retiring politician should 1255 be given to him for the performance we saw last year. He does hurt very well. Last year he pretends to resign as Leader of the Opposition; this year he comes and gives what looks like the most Leader of the Opposition-ish speech we have heard from that side of the House. Much, much better, no. Much, much, much, much better than the current interim incumbent. And then 1260 he tells us in his Panorama interview that he will see what he does, he is considering his position. You see, he took a position in front of the cameras with tears in his eyes and then he moved that position on in his Viewpoint interview and he has moved it forward a step again in his Panorama interview.

It was clear to me last year, and I shared my view with many friends, that all he was doing – because I know him as if I had given birth to him, and I think he knows me the same way 1265 (Laughter and interjection) – was pretending to flip the fall guy at the next election. How does this work? It is very simple. I think he has confirmed it to me. He is slowly moving himself into the situation where he is going to be prevailed upon to stand for election next time round:
 ‘Reluctantly my family have agreed ... The party has asked me ... My experience ...’ etc. I sincerely hope he does stand for election – he knows how valuable a tool I think he is for us. He is going to 1270 do it because he expects that they will lose the election, then the leader who will have led them to lose that election will have lost three elections, two of them with one political party which the current incumbent Leader of the Opposition shared with him and one of them as leader of the GSD, and then he will say, ‘Well, now you have to put your leadership up again,’ and then he will be prevailed upon to stand for the leadership again, (Laughter) against Slim Shady and anybody 1275 else who might stand. (A Member: Hear, hear.) Well, you never know with Slim Shady – he might not make up his mind in time. (Laughter)

Good luck, Mr Speaker, to all of those who decided that they would not go off and form a new political party because they had been promised by the powers that be that Feetham was gone and that Feetham would not be in the line-up at the next election. So unfair to be talked 1280 about like that when you have given so much to that party, as he has – even his soul, because he did sell it to them. Mr Speaker, it is so unfair that they are acting in this way, but it shows you what a special kind of political party the GSD is and what a special kind of politician he is. In most parties the crisis arises when someone leaves, not when someone stays! (Laughter)

He had an Oscar last year for tears of a clown and he can have an Oscar this year for saying 1285 that he was hurt by the Father of the House. Coming back to the good book, he does try and play that tactic of the prodigal son wanting to return in some way and try and drive a wedge between the father and son in some way being the prodigal and wanting to return, but how can he pretend to do that? How can he say that he has been hurt by the Father of the House when he kept his hand down and his mouth shut when the time came to vote for the Freedom of the City 1290 for Sir Joe Bossano? (Two Members: Hear, hear.) I really thought that he might have stood up for himself then, put ambition behind him and voted to give Sir Joe the Freedom of the City immediately. If he had done that, I would have said he was not going to stand at the next election. He did not. It is clear to me that he will and it is clear to me that he will be a candidate for the leader of the GSD again in the future. I look forward to the return to battle, Mr Speaker.

He said he was a disciple of Joe Bossano. Well, at least he is starting to work out that he is not 1295 the fallen angel, that he is Judas, because if you are a disciple of Joe Bossano and suddenly you stand against Joe Bossano and you still kiss him when you see him – well, we know what happened at Gethsemane. Instead of all of that – because I think if he were genuine in all of this, his would be the case of longest political unrequited love in history – I am not going to go down 1300 the road of more biblical allusions about the disciples; I am going to stick with the first one I made. I have told this community and this House the truth and the truth will set them free.

But then he went on to the thinnest political ice anyone has ever gone on when he told us that the biggest problem that the community faces is the fact that we have grown the public sector and he accused us of creating this problem. Let’s be very clear: the largest growth in the 1305 public sector in Gibraltar’s history happened in his time in office in that period when he was Gibraltar’s second Minister for Justice. Doesn’t he remember? Those were halcyon, crazy days in 2011. The Employment Survey for October 2007 shows the public sector at 4,234 people. By March 2011 it was 4,427. By December 2011, March-December 2011, at the end of their last nine months in office, it had gone up to 4,804 – that is to say 377 people in nine months. The public sector grew 8.5% in nine months when they were in office.

Mr Speaker, I am told the stories. I am told it was an unending queue when he was the second Minister for Justice and he did unemployment clinics in his office. Of course Luis Montiel did not see anyone – he was down at Europort having coffee; somebody had to do it. So I suppose he de facto did two jobs, even though he only carried the name of one. In the four-year period when he was Minister in the GSD the public sector went up 570%, 11.9%, but in the nine-month period when he was giving people jobs to try and get them to vote GSD, it went up by 8.5% alone in that period. And he comes here to accuse us of that. J'accuse, Mr Speaker. I suppose it is a question of attack is the best form of defence, or not seeing the mote in your own eye.

1315

It is true that, as usual, he did not disappoint. He delivered a Leader of the Opposition speech on the public finances, on the Civil Service, on the public sector; and I suppose, although I disagreed with everything he said, he had to, he had no choice, because of course although he said that Mr Phillips's contribution was erudite he did not really mean it, he just had to say it. I suppose given one fib, a hundred fibs. It was the worst Leader of the Opposition speech this House has ever heard. I will deal with it in a minute, but come on, for him to say it was erudite was to push even his credibility to breaking point.

Mr Feetham has the passion and the fire under the six-pack but I did not get any of that the minute I sat down and somebody else started to reply. I say it out of jealousy. (Laughter and banging on desks) The one thing he has that I want, Mr Speaker! (Laughter) But to say that we are making a mockery of this debate is as untrue as everything else that he has said. A mockery is twisting the figures and I have shown they are the ones twisting the figures. Joe Bossano has shown they are the ones twisting the figures. We show it every year, Mr Speaker. We break down what they have tried to do. But at least I thank him for one thing: he moved us on a little bit from the Facebook post of September 2011 to the ministerial statement of January 2012. I suppose if I stick around for long enough I will get to work out what he thinks of my first Budget in June 2012.

1330

He said this: 'never been a higher-spending Government than the GSLP between 2011 and 2012' and he said that this has not been lost on anyone, in particular the public. I suppose not, but they must agree with what we are doing, whether it is what we are doing or what he interprets us to be doing, because they gave us 68% in the election and they gave him 32%. But the projects are there, Mr Speaker, they are going up and there is no bankruptcy. There was no bankruptcy in 2013, no bankruptcy in 2014, no bankruptcy in 2015, in 2016 – I think by 2017 he said there was not going to be bankruptcy. So there are no shenanigans, Mr Speaker. Or if there are, they are the same shenanigans as I have demonstrated that they were up to.

1340

They said the one difference is Credit Finance and the commutations of the civil servants. Didn't he pick it up in the subtle way that Sir Joe said it that it is paying the commuted pensions of public servants, not just civil servants, including a former Chief Minister? There cannot be anything wrong with that – no, otherwise former Chief Ministers would not be lending themselves to something which is a shenanigan. What we are doing with Credit Finance and what we did with Credit Finance was exactly the right thing to do for businesses, for hotels, for Gibraltar as a finance centre. And Credit Finance made a lot of money from it – although supporters of the hon. Member used to write to the press saying that we were going to lose Gibraltar's money on the rust bucket that they thought we were floating in, and then when it was there they said it would not make money, and now that it has repaid its outstanding and Credit Finance has made a lot of money in interest, they say nothing about it.

1345

They said that the Government in fact had said nothing about the formation of Credit Finance. In fact, Credit Finance was shown in the book in 2012-13 and there was a press release about it replying to his statement of January 2014. We said this – I am going to read it verbatim, Mr Speaker:

FEETHAM BROADCAST A TISSUE OF LIES

1360 – dated 21st January 2014, the apex of the fun that we were having with each other in public life –

The New Year Message by the Leader of the Opposition has served to confirm yet again that he says the first thing that comes to his head without bothering to analyse the consequences of his statements beforehand. He also behaves as if he has no knowledge of the actions and policies of the GSD Government of which he was a part until the end of 2011.

– we have told him all this before, Mr Speaker –

The result, as the Government will go on to show, is extremely embarrassing both for him and for the party that he heads.

Below is a summary of the some of the statements that Mr Feetham has made with answer from the Government in each case.

Mr Speaker, I am only going to deal with two – I think we made 10 points:

1. Statement: [Mr Feetham says] No announcement in Parliament or outside it of formation of Credit Finance Company Ltd.

This is wrong. Credit Finance was shown in the chart of Government companies presented in the approved estimates of revenue and expenditure for 2012/2013 which were published in July 2012 after being discussed and approved unanimously by Parliament.

2. Statement: Sunborn loan: Chief Minister had lied although it was a Government owned company that provided the loan and not the Government itself.

This is wrong. There is a clear distinction in law and in practice and in form and substance between the Government, on the one hand, and Government-owned companies, on the other. Indeed, it is a distinction that the GSD themselves used to make when they were in office. For example, when questions were put to them about money spent by the Government on legal advice or legal drafting, the answers given referred only to the work of the Government and not to the work of Government-owned companies.

1365 Mr Speaker, they make us repeat the same issue every year because they make the same points every year. If they were repeating their degree I think they would have been kicked out of university by now for coming back with the same thesis every year and getting it marked down – on facts, not on opinion, because you can have your opinion but you cannot make up the facts.

1370 If he does not want to stop being a glutton for punishment, so be it. I have explained that the accounts of Credit Finance are almost done, but this is just the same old debate again, nothing new to say, replaying their old Budget speeches, the ones which were not successful and all ended in tears. They need to give a little bit more to this community. They need to look again at their arguments. They need to come back with deeper analysis. They need to work more.

1375 The worst accusation that ever comes out of his mouth is that I complete manifesto commitments despite Brexit, or I complete manifesto commitments despite the doomsday memo, so what he is accusing me of is of keeping my word to the public in Gibraltar. He turns every virtue into a vice. If I had not done what I had said in the manifesto he would be accusing me of not doing what I had said in the manifesto. This is the politics of lose one way or lose the other, but I enjoyed his spirited and mis-argued contribution as usual, Mr Speaker. If he stays to save Gibraltar from me, as I think he was indicating yesterday in Panorama, I may just have to stay to save Gibraltar from him too. I could see that the edges of his mouth were foaming, Mr Speaker – rabid, as usual; passion, there it was. I do hope he has not become one of the wolves that he was complaining about.

1380 I was surprised he fell for the point that the Government is somehow predicting a Budget deficit. I think he knows enough to know that that point in particular is particularly bad, as made by Mr Clinton, and nobody will believe it. He is just allowing himself to be bewitched by the Hon. Mr Clinton. He has turned into his political Pied Piper and leads him astray.

1390 He moved on to say that he was going to deal with other matters that he wanted to comment on, just like a Leader of the Opposition, and that is when the House became a bit of a pantomime. Oh yes, he is! Oh no, he isn't! In spirit he is still the Leader of the Opposition, but his current portfolios are Justice – which he had said in an earlier article he was going to deal with – the emergency services, fire, Customs, the Prison, the Police, civil rights, equality, exchange of 1395 information, financial services and gaming. Apart from financial services, which he went on to, he did not say anything about those. He said nothing about civil rights, gaming, justice – he had advertised he was going to say something – the Prison, equality, exchange of information, but like the party leader that he still sees himself as being, he talked about Brexit. Well, he accepted – and I am graciously going to thank him for it – that we are doing everything that can be done in respect of Brexit; the second time he has said it, or the third time he has said it, I think 1400 demonstrates he is genuine about that by saying it on more than one occasion. But he said he would have wanted to be more involved in it – if they had been in government they would have involved us more. Well, look, all the evidence is to the contrary, because apart from Brexit the biggest challenge is probably joint sovereignty and in joint sovereignty we were not involved at all by the party led by the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, including the man who is now the leader of the GSD and is asking us for more involvement. There was not even a select 1405 committee. Now at least there is a Select Committee and briefings and we ask you at the end of each Committee meeting is there anything you think we should be doing and you do not say that we should be doing something that we are not already doing. But again it is obvious they say one thing and they do another, or they now say one thing when they did another.

1410 But there is one thing that is clear: of all the things that Daniel Feetham is, he is no damp squib and he is no wet squib either. We may be chalk and cheese, but neither of us I think is a damp squib and he should take that as a compliment from one gladiator to another, although I see myself as a bit more of a chess player than a gladiator.

1415 It is not for me to defend the Financial Services Commission in this House or indeed to denigrate the Financial Services Commission in this House or any other independent statutory body, but he said things which I think he said believing them to be genuinely a concern for people in the sector and I thought it was right that he should bring to this debate, given that the FSC is funded from this House, those concerns so that they should be heard and they should be on the record.

1420 I did think he was going to say more about the return of the other prodigal son, Mr Llamas, but I think he must have been prevailed upon to say nothing; otherwise, I am sure there might have been further resignations and other histrionics.

1425 One thing he said last year, Mr Speaker – which I have been meaning to take up with him since then – in his Oscar performance was that one of the things that had made it very hard for him and one of the reasons he had to resign was that he had had to do 14 hours of work a day in Budget week. He couldn't take it. Well, Mr Speaker, I say to all of them opposite: if you cannot do 14 hours of work a day, don't bother auditioning for any of these jobs, this one in particular but any of them – that one for sure! (Laughter) The Hansard should reflect 'points at the Father of the House' at that point, Mr Speaker. Fourteen hours a day is what I call a walk in the park. I 1430 would call it Sunday if I could. Expect to be up at 6.30 in the morning at least and don't expect to be asleep much more before midnight, and expect to be working every waking moment of the day – and if you are Joe Bossano, you consider six hours of sleep laziness. I do not think Sir Peter Caruana worked any less, except perhaps without the Blackberry, which is my way of working.
That is what we are talking about. This is not nine to five, Mr Speaker, it is not even nine to nine, and so if anybody thinks that 14 hours is a hard day, this is not a job that they can hack. They 1435 should find a day job; they should stick with it. And what I am saying is also true of senior civil servants who work at the same pace as Government Ministers and are giving everything they can to ensure that Gibraltar is able to succeed and continue to prosper in these difficult moments, because many of them work at exactly the same pace as Ministers.

1440 Mr Speaker, after telling us it was his third Budget speech, Mr Hammond seemed to get everything else that he said wrong. (Laughter) I did not know which Trevor we were going to be treated to, which particular episode we were going to watch today: 'Trevor and the drama of the exploding gas plant', or 'Trevor and the drama of the exploding water pipe on the school site, that did not explode', or 'Trevor and the social media predictions of flights that would not land and yet they did land', or 'Trevor and the drama of the terrible Budget speech where fines have 1445 gone up by 39% - oh, no, they haven't'. And fortunately, Mr Speaker, we got the latter, 'Trevor and the drama of the terrible Budget reply'. Nothing much to say and quite poor even by his standards.

1450 He started by complaining about air quality. I suppose it is all the gas on that side, all the hot air. But he did it in the year that we are shutting down diesel-burning power stations – and we are the ones shutting them down because they were going to produce a diesel-burning power station. In the year he is complaining about controlling traffic and parking which is designed to deliver less traffic, he argues for air quality and at the same time he argues for more parking so that we have more cars circulating, and yet he criticises us for a new power station that is not going to burn diesel and is going to be better for air quality. Is he saying that he would have preferred the diesel-burning stacks at the entrance to the Upper Rock when he is talking about 1455 air quality? He does not understand the air quality science at all and he gives credibility to Verdemar and those who come to Gibraltar with Verdemar. He should stop playing into the hands of those who are here to try and hurt Gibraltar.

1460 And then he complains about the location of the air quality monitors. He asks do we need a monitoring station in the north district. Well, do we need one to tell us that air quality is going to improve when we are about to shut down a power plant open in your time, 35 years ago, and replace it with a new power plant with best-available modern technology burning LNG? You might say it is a view that he has that we should have an air quality monitoring station in the north district, but the locations of the existing air quality monitoring stations were determined 1465 by them when they were in power. It is nonsense. He failed to make any changes to his speech despite the fact that John Cortes had given him information about the 15% decrease in emissions over three years – 27,000 tonnes less of carbon than in 2014 – and how air quality in 2018 was looking even better. Say 'I want to do more' but do not ignore what has happened.

1470 Clearly he does not trust our data experts, given what he said about them, but they are the same data experts that are used by the UK government and by the European Commission. Good enough for the Commission, good enough for the UK government but not good enough for Trevor Hammond, although they are good enough for John Cortes and all of his team who have degrees in this subject. Who should we listen to? The people they listen to? I do not suppose they want us to listen to the people who told them about the great explosion that there might 1475 be at the Port.

1480 And what about the electrostatic precipitators? Does he really think that we would not fit them if we thought that they were going to do some good? Genuinely they are no good in gas power stations because there are no particles emitted when the gas is burnt. The electrostatic precipitators move particles and it is gas that we are going to run them on. We are not going to run them on diesel. Unless there is a crisis in gas there will be no diesel burning, and even if we burn diesel in those engines there will be a lot less emissions than there ever have been from the engines that we have today and the engines that they would have had. What would their alleged financial guru Inspector Clouseau have to say about spending money on electrostatic precipitators which we are not going to be using? 'Accountant says no. Buzz', no doubt. Even 1485 now they are trying to make people fear the new LNG power station, questioning the technology and the reduction of emissions, which is much more than is required.

And then he says we are moving children into the area. Well, I do not know whether he has got the geography of this right. We are moving girls west a few hundred metres, we are moving

1490 boys southwest a few hundred metres and we are moving the power station west the same number of hundreds of meters and the emissions from the power station will be zero now. So who is going to do something that is somehow going to endanger our children? What we are going to do is close down the grimy old diesel power station before we move our children there.
 Or does he really think that anybody would believe the underlying accusation that we do not care about our children and the children of Gibraltar generally? That is the underlying 1495 accusation. You cannot say the words that the hon. Gentleman uttered without meaning that we do not care about our children. I will take any sort of allegations not seriously, but that is an allegation to take seriously. That point is callous and wrong.

1500 Then he moves on to say, 'Well, the LNG power facility is just water under the bridge.' I was grateful to him for saying that, Mr Speaker, because it demonstrates one thing. It demonstrates that they were never genuine in their concerns about the LNG power station, because if they were they would still be seriously trying to stop it.

1505 But his latest ruse is to say that people cannot walk because it is too noisy. That is what he said: it is not pleasant to walk anywhere in Gibraltar because it is too noisy. Well, look, I walk in the mornings, Mr Speaker, when I do not have to be here or need to rush somewhere else. It is a very pleasant experience. I walk past building sites; I understand why they are there. I walk past cars and I look at people sitting in them as I get to my destination more quickly – some of them magnificent second hand Audis powered by diesel. It is not unpleasant. All well and good to talk about walking, but it is too noisy. It is as if he wants to live in a Miss Marple village with Inspector Clouseau and him ignoring the realities of modern everyday life.

1510 He said – and this took the Crawford's Digestive – that the noise is sponsored by the Government. Well, if there is a law that allows the Government to make noise outside of normal working hours, it is a law that we have not relied on. I have not signed any certificates under that law. It requires projects to be brought here. He was the chairman, I think, of the party opposite when they passed that law in Government. It is called the Construction (Government Projects) 1515 Act 2009. At that time the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, according to them, was Chief Minister and Gibraltar had the benefit of its second Minister for Justice. That Act says:

'construction work' shall be construed widely and includes the carrying out of demolition, building, engineering or other operations in, on, over or under land or sea;
 'Government projects' are defined to include construction projects being undertaken by or on behalf of the Government or any company or other entity wholly owned and controlled by the Government;
 'the Minister' responsible means the Chief Minister;
 'restricted hours' means any time or times during the day or night during which any other law applicable in Gibraltar curtails, restricts, prohibits or sanctions the causing of noise, vibration, ambient airborne matter or any other source of nuisance or the execution of construction works for any other reason whatsoever.

1520 And what they passed into law under clause 3 is the right of the Minister to sign a certificate to allow noise and those other nuisances to continue. That is what they did. It is the opposite of what he says. The GSD is not concerned about noise pollution; the GSD passed a law to allow the GSD Government to do more noise pollution. Is he saying that the GSD now opposes that Act?
 Am I going to see a Private Member's Bill to repeal that Act come from him? That is what he would do, and if he does not, credibility zero on noise as much as on emissions and as much as on LNG. Credibility zero, Mr Speaker.

1525 He said that it is all very well and good to promote electric vehicles, but a Tesla costs £100,000; not everybody can afford a Tesla. Well, Mr Speaker, when I demonstrate that they are wrong about things which are so basic and so easy to determine it becomes obvious that it is difficult to believe them when we deal with other matters. A Tesla Model S, the one that the Chief Minister's car is, does not cost £100,000, it costs £55,000 – half. That is the Model S – we do not have the top of the range. It does go to Malaga Airport and back, by the way. The Model 1530 3 is expected to start at £35,000, one third of what he said it costs. He cannot even be trusted with the price of a car! He is not even a used-car salesman – he cannot sell you a new car, Mr Speaker!

1535 And then he says, 'Well, people need to be encouraged in the direction of cars.' Has he seen my measures, Mr Speaker? But he did not reply to them, although I read them out to him. My measures are in paragraph 208 in respect of fuel. One of things he said was that diesel is still so much cheaper at the pump than petrol. That is what he said. Not only does he get the price of the Tesla wrong, he then says the price of diesel at the pump is cheaper than petrol. I had just sat down and read him paragraph 208 of my speech. I had said this, Mr Speaker:

from midnight tonight duties on the importation of diesel will be increased by 12p per litre, from 25p per litre to 37p per litre; duties on the importation of diesel premium will be increased by 11p per litre, from 23p per litre to 34 per litre; duties on the importation of Unleaded 95 will be increased by 6p ... to 35p per litre; and duties on the importation of Unleaded 98 will be increased by 5p per litre, from 29p per litre to 34p per litre.

1540 Petrol is not anything other than the same or cheaper than diesel. In other words, diesel is more expensive than petrol. Diesel is 37p per litre, diesel premium is 34p. Petrol is 35p or 34p. How could he get it so wrong? If he gets it wrong on stuff as basic as that, how can we believe anything else that he says? All of these errors need to be pointed out.

1545 He says that parking is harder now. Well, Mr Speaker, it is harder for some; it is easier for others. A lot of beneficiaries of the residential schemes are very pleased indeed with the schemes. They do not write it on social media, they write to the Minister and tell him how pleased they are, many hundreds of them. But of course the zones are something that they are sometimes trying to take credit for. They say that they planned them and they were going to do them, and then they try and pretend to side with people when they are complaining about them. Are they going to undo the parking zones if they are ever elected? I suppose if they are 1550 going to decry the policies of the GSD that they represent, because they had planned them too ...

1555 He asks whether in 2030 foreign vehicles will still be allowed in Gibraltar if they are diesel powered or not. Well, I made provisions as to registration of diesel vehicles, not as to the ability to be imported on a daily basis by individuals, but I would expect they would still be allowed. But is he trying to make the point in favour of better air quality or against? He needs to make up his mind one way or the other.

1560 He asked will buses still be diesel. Well, I think not, Mr Speaker. I genuinely think not but I do not know. I am not going to predict what is going to happen in 12 years' time. If he wants to know, he should ask whoever is the Chief Minister at the time. She will be in a better position to tell him and her headquarters are likely to be at Watergardens even then.

And they say that we are not pursuing an underground car park at Alameda. I have already told them that we are reconsidering that because we met with GONHS and we met with the ESG.

1565 The issue of whether projects go to the DPC is in the Bill; it is before the House. So how can he then make the point seriously that we are doing no environmental impact assessments for the schools? What is he playing at? Is he trying to oppose the schools at any juncture? And the purported broken pipe – a good reason to try and turn the community against the project when it was not even that? Why do they want to stop the schools? The Department of the Environment has assessed both the dumping of rocks at Coaling Island and the schools. The 1570 Heritage Trust have actually worked with the Department of Education on the Old Mole Head and on the issuing of a heritage licence for that, and the Botanical Gardens are fully engaged in developing green areas so there is swiftness in all the schools, a positive environmental income. So how can he say that the environment has paid the price of neglect by John Cortes? Nobody can believe that, Mr Speaker. Zero credibility, no, less.

1575 I think it is just that he thinks that he is an expert ... An attractive photograph of a blue-tit on a Sunday afternoon does not make one an expert on the environment, let's be clear. So when he attacked the green roof at the Engineer Road car park what he did not know was that the car park's green roof was doing exactly what it was intended to do, even though it may have gone brown, because it is a green roof but it does not actually have to be green – like Green Party

1580 voters are not green. (Laughter) It provides a habitat for wild plants and birds. But he just does not get it, Mr Speaker.

And then he went on to cleanliness and attacked the staff of Master Services, who obviously are the butt of his criticism. Mr Speaker, having said that, he did say something about cronyism which is not even worth replying to, but how can somebody talk about cronyism and then talk about the cleanliness of Gibraltar when the Master Services contract was given for 20 years by them without tender, to their people, to their supporters? That is cronyism.

1585 He says Gibraltar is dirty. Well, that is why we went out to tender properly for a new contract, so that the men and women of what was Master Services are given the tools that they need to do the job, because if you do not give somebody the tools they cannot do a job – and we expect a marked improvement and they have our full support in delivering that. In fact, I should say they are not getting the materials, although we are paying for them.

1590 He talked about the abandonment of buildings, including this building. Doesn't he know that there are more refurbished buildings in the Upper Town now as a result of the work we have done as landlord ourselves and with private landlords, and 45 section 37 notices have been issued in the past year by an urban renewal officer? And this building needs a lick of paint – he uses that as an example in the Budget debate? More money has been invested in this building by us since we were elected than has been invested in the 200 years before since it was built.

1595 The private landlords who refurbish their property are doing a magnificent job. That was our policy; that is why we pursued the sale of Government's pre-war stock for those purposes. He has just become a political Nimbyist of the worst sort.

1600 He fell short, for a moment, of blaming us for traffic accidents, but then he went on to blame us for less people crossing the Frontier in 2012 and 2013, as if we were José Manuel García-Margallo and Mariano Rajoy personified. Or is it that he is suggesting that the five-hour queues, the four-year queues that we had did not have an effect on tourist expenditure and people coming into Gibraltar? He said the slump coincided with the arrival in government of the GSLP. Well, it coincided with the arrival of the government of the Partido Popular in Madrid. But he ignores the fact that the tourist expenditure is up 20% this year – more hotels, more arrivals. He is just trying to make up an argument.

1605 I am not going to throw back in his face that there might have been diversions because although the radar is now fixed the air traffic controllers are not trained and sometimes people may have had to go to Malaga, as Panorama said: 'The radar's down and you need to be retrained.' I am not going to say that we have lost a tourist or two and it's your fault. Let's be human. Let's understand that things happen which are outside of our control.

1610 He said we need targeted investment, and then when we make targeted investment like the Skywalker Sky Bridge they criticise that too.

1615 And then he became the defender of clamped tourist vehicles. Is he really arguing for a return of the GSD's days when locals are targeted for fines and clamping – or rather for fines, not clamping – and foreign vehicles are not clamped and get away with it? Is that really what he is arguing for?

1620 He said we do not want Mickey Mouse projects, like the person who wrote the Upper Rock report. What does John Cortes feel about that? John Cortes was the person who wrote the Upper Rock report and said he did not want Mickey Mouse projects, and he thought that the Skywalk was a very good idea because he is the one who commissioned it. I hope that makes the point clear to him that he got it completely wrong and he ended up making a monkey of himself. Oh, and by the way, the current interim Leader of the Opposition joined us at the opening of the Skywalk and I think thought it was a magnificent opportunity to see that excellent investment.

1625 The Fire and Rescue Services have had investment in new vehicles at the Airport and in the city service. He said nothing about that, but he said that we have to build a new fire station. If he ever gets into government, which I certainly hope he never does, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr Clinton, is there and he asks him for a new fire station, I think he will get the answer I predict: 'Accountant says no. Buzz.' So I do not think they stand much of a chance with them.

1635 Mr Speaker, I am conscious that it is 25 to two in the afternoon and that you have been sitting whilst others have had the opportunity to come in and out, and I wonder whether you might wish to recess for a few minutes or you want me to continue with the contributions of other hon. Members.

Mr Speaker: It is, of course, not just myself but also the Clerk, so it might be a good thing if we are able to stretch our legs for a few minutes. We will recess for 10 minutes.

The House recessed at 1.35 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 1.47 p.m.

Appropriation Bill 2018 –
Second Reading approved

1640 Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Continuing now in my reply, can I just for the record confirm that the Hansard of the Committee Stage and Third Reading in relation to the University I was reading out earlier is of Friday, 8th July 2016 and not 2017, just to ensure that the record is very clear on that.

1645 I turn now, Mr Speaker, to deal with the contribution from the Hon. Mr Llamas. Of course he knows that I would have enjoyed his contribution last year more than I enjoyed his contribution this year, but I did not detect in his contribution any desire to be anything other than constructive in his approach, and I laud him for that because I thought he was careful and thoughtful in what he said and how he said it. And he was careful and thoughtful also to show the work that he had done as an independent and the work that he wanted to continue doing, 1650 he said, 'whilst I remain a Member of this House'. So, even though he developed some themes that we agree on and he developed some themes that we disagree on, he I thought did so quite fairly and quite honestly in the way that he presented that.

1655 He talked about the scale of development in Gibraltar having consequences. Of course he is absolutely right, it does have consequences. We say those consequences are homes, offices, jobs and growth. How else would we build more homes and provide more jobs? No development would also have consequences: less homes, less offices, less jobs therefore, and less growth.

1660 More reclamation would lead to even more building eventually on that reclaimed land. But he made the assumption that the land at Bayside, St Anne's and St Martin's will all be sold to one developer. He is making an assumption there. That is not something that we recognise. It is not something that we think necessarily is the case. It might end up being the case but it is not something that Government now recognises as if it were something that is about to happen or is being negotiated. So, in that sense I do not know. I assume he is not making it up. Somebody must have led him to believe that, but it is certainly not the situation that we recognise.

1665 Then I thought that I detected in the way that he presented his views in relation to the lease in respect of affordable housing what I thought was a fair, equitable and balanced criticism of the lease produced by the GSD for the Waterport Terraces and Cumberland Terraces style housing. There I thought there was actually quite a meeting of minds between the Hon. Minister for Housing who is developing the affordable housing, myself and the Government and him and 1670 the position that he was taking, and therefore I would assume that, for reasons I will come to ... I think he feels bound by collective responsibility but I think I detected support – as I detected, I think, from others also support – for the measure with the special stamp duty in respect of affordable housing.

1675 I thought he criticised the fact that there is an absence of beach night markets and cinema nights announced this year but I had thought that it was the GSD that had most criticised the fact that we were holding cinema nights in the park, Mr Speaker. If only they had heard John Cortes every morning after each cinema night when he saw the state that people left the grass in.

1680 Mr Speaker, he is somebody who has said in his House honestly and openly that he is what I might call a Caruanista. I think he expressed it this way in this House and elsewhere: he supports the policies and the direction in which Peter Caruana was taking Gibraltar. Well, Mr Speaker, in that case he will have been supportive of the analysis I have done of how capital projects were funded other than through the Improvement and Development Fund by that very individual he has expressed a keen support for. In fact, he decided to stand for election when Sir Peter left Parliament, saying that he was concerned about the direction we were taking Gibraltar in. I think I have demonstrated to him today that it is exactly the same direction in terms of the objectionable issue, according to them, of a corporate borrowing for capital projects for the Government that Sir Peter had embarked us upon.

1690 I was grateful that he welcomed the new dementia facilities, because as somebody who has a relative who enjoys the benefit of that I think it is right that everyone in our community realises how lucky we are to have them, but I did not think it was right to suggest that we do not also afford the very same high standard of care in Calpe Ward and the other wards down at St Bernard's. They are afforded exactly the same standard of care there as they are in all the other facilities.

1695 His speech was more balanced than the other GSD speeches. In fact, his speech did not feel like the new GSD speeches feel. I must tell him, I think I will miss him in this House as a rational independent voice trying to do good even when we disagree with him. At least there is another.

1700 He welcomed the fact that we have added GPs to Accident and Emergency, although he rightly pointed out that the Accident and Emergency unit at the GHA sometimes are abused by the community. It is an issue that vexes this Minister for Health, as I am sure it has vexed others. I thought his views of the Primary Care Centre were balanced.

1705 I am grateful for the support he gave us on the Drug Strategy and on medicinal cannabis, although I think he is wrong to say that we have stopped considering the exportation of cannabis. We have not stopped considering it; we have not been able to make a determination on something. It is something that has been put to us. We are not going to discard it, as he suggests that we should quickly discard it; we are going to consider it carefully and we are going to reach a determination – which may be to discard it but may not be to discard it.

1710 I thought it was wholly ungenerous for him to describe people as having been caged in at Bishop Canilla House. That may account for why I have not seen my wife's grandfather for so long. Clearly people are not caged in at Bishop Canilla House by scaffolding. People at Bishop Canilla House have been asking us to repair the roofs on their balconies. We have moved quickly to do so. The Minister has developed different options, and better plans are now going to be the ones that are going to be implemented, and I think the DPC has also had an influence there on some of the balcony views etc.

1715 The increase in domestic abuse being reported I think we all agree is a very good thing. I do not think any of us think that domestic abuse is on the rise; we think the reporting of domestic abuse is on the rise. Dealing with it is on the rise, and therefore I think we are all on the same page that these are things that must not be swept under the carpet in the community, for sure, but they must also not be swept under the carpet in any family either, and if somebody is suffering from domestic abuse they must report it – they will have the support and our law enforcement agencies now have the training also to deal with that.

1720 He explained why he supported the Budget last year and why he feels he cannot support the Budget this year and he really put it down to an internal debate and him being able to form part of the collective decision-making process, even though he did not tell us whether he agreed with that or not – which is fair enough as a collective decision taken, and that collective decision is the one that is presented to the community. I must say that I leave this debate thinking that Lawrence Llamas, if he could, would be voting in favour of the Budget, if he was free of a three-line whip to vote against. It is very strange that there should be a three-line whip to vote against a Budget.

1730 I really think that saying that the things we say in this House and the things we say to each other do not matter generally to investors is a little short-sighted. I think investors do look at what is being said, they do look at the arguments being put and some of them could feel that the circumstances for investment in Gibraltar are not made out because if some of the things that hon. Members were saying were true – and none of them are, as I think I have 1735 demonstrated, in particular in the demolition of the credibility of the Hon. Mr Clinton's arguments – then that could be very negative for Gibraltar.

Mr Llamas has a brain, Mr Speaker; he has demonstrated that when he has been an independent Member of this House. He can look carefully, if not today in the heat of battle, at the Hansard of today, he can look carefully at the numbers and he can see that the things that 1740 Mr Clinton has said, when you subject them to detailed scrutiny, are not true. He can take his calculator to the Hansard and he can look at the Estimates Books, which he can come here and look at, and he will then be able to see that they have all been sold a pup – if he will excuse the pun, given his particular interest in matters canine. In fact, at some stage we were told by other 1745 fellow members of the GSD that that is all he was good at. I think he is good at much more than just matters canine. He can look at the Hansard and he can make up his mind for himself and he can see that they have all been sold a pup by Mr Clinton and he should not allow that Pied Piper to lead him also in a direction which is not a good one or a right one for this community.

I am grateful for some of the things which he said about the work that the Hon. the Minister for Housing is doing, because they were actually supportive of the work that she is doing on the substance and in particular in relation to the position taken in respect of parliamentary 1750 questions recently, although I do think that Mr Feetham is taking a slightly different view to the position that Mr Llamas has taken about people's rights to be housed etc. I guess I should not be surprised to see Mr Llamas and Mr Feetham taking slightly different views.

Mr Speaker, the argument – I think this came not just from Mr Llamas but also from 1755 Mr Feetham – that we are somehow selling all the MoD properties that are coming into our hands, and this is a sign of how the GSLP was acting with Edinburgh House etc. and Elliot's Battery, would be entirely to misconstrue the obligations of the Government which we inherited from the GSD under the lands deal. I think it is a point on housing but not a point that he made – I think it is a point that Mr Feetham made, because we are selling all of the walks in all of the 1760 Naval Hospital Hill etc. because that is what balances the land deal that they did, which required the sale, to highest bidders at tender, of those properties.

Mr Speaker, last year, on 23rd February, when we were debating the motion and whether Mr Llamas should be a member of the Select Committee or not, Mr Llamas said this:

I do not wish to reopen the reasons for which I left and resigned from the party I once stood for. For whatever reason and from the party's own admission, there was a communication breakdown on such an important issue and on the analysis of facts, I had been left out of a decision-making process on such an important Bill such as the Appropriation Bill.

It was my view, Mr Speaker, at the time that I had to put Gibraltar first and my party second. It was my view that voting against the Budget, however much I agree with the arguments put in favour, Gibraltar in the context of a Brexit backdrop needs to unite. Mr Speaker, Gibraltar at this point in time, needs parliamentarians to have faith and to support the Government of the day and to show a vote of confidence in Gibraltar, in its economy, in its workers and in its public service.

Mr Speaker, unfortunately the main Opposition Party, the GSD failed to realise the implications of their actions or lack thereof.

He was right then, Mr Speaker. I think that he put Gibraltar first then and his party second 1765 then. He is going to do, as an action, the opposite now. He is going to vote against the Budget, that which he said amounted to putting party first and Gibraltar second. He should not let himself down. He should think very carefully about what he is going to do.

1770 He has been let down, actually, already by those who threw him back into the party by promising him the Earth. They promised him that he would have a guaranteed place in the line-up, I understand; now they are telling him it is not guaranteed for next time. They promised him that Mr Feetham would not stand, but we all know now, in the analysis that I have done on what he said to Panorama and Viewpoint, that he might.

1775 So I think Mr Llamas should be honest with himself. He is likely, in my respectful submission, to be leaving politics at the next election. He should do as good a job now and from now on as he has been doing in the time he has not been shackled by party politics. He should do it with honesty, Mr Speaker. He should not accept a dishonest three-line whip based on twisted and conjected arguments to vote against us, to vote against the Budget, to vote against paying the Civil Service, to vote against the way that Peter Caruana used to do things when he was Chief Minister. And he should be honest with the way that he exercises his vote. There are only 17
1780 votes in this Parliament, in this community. We are a very privileged 17 out of 32,000. We have to be careful in how we exercise our votes here. He does not deserve to be made to go down in history as saying one thing one year and doing another thing another year. He does not deserve that; he honestly does not, Mr Speaker. Otherwise, he is going to have to spend his whole life wriggling off a hook that has been designed for him by his own people.

1785 'It was my view, Mr Speaker, at the time that I had to put Gibraltar first and my party second. It was my view that voting against the Budget, however much I agree with the arguments put in favour, Gibraltar in the context of a Brexit backdrop needs to unite.' Nothing has changed. The Brexit backdrop is still there. It is even more closely upon it. Mr Speaker, Gibraltar at this point in time needs parliamentarians to have faith and to support the Government of the day and to 1790 show a vote of confidence in Gibraltar, in its economy, in its workers and its public service. He was right then. He should not let himself down now. He should think very carefully about what he is going to say when the division vote is called.

1795 Mr Speaker, as usual, Mr Reyes delivered one of the more convivial and less partisan interventions in the context of this debate, as he always does. We agree, of course, with him in respect of support for sporting associations. He had a whole House supporting him on that.

Then he started to move into whether the GSD was right or wrong in relation to Victoria and whether they were right first. Mr Speaker, they were entirely wrong as to the mechanism to deal with it. This was the point. They had a proposal for them, aka the Government, to develop Victoria that would have meant taxpayers' money going into the development of Victoria. We 1800 know the cost is in the region of £30-odd million, which the GFA is going to have to spend there. I wager that if they had been elected and if they had a Minister for Finance who was not the Chief Minister, when he turned up for the money he would have been told 'Buzz. Accountant says no.' That is why it was absolutely right to structure the deal as we have, and in order to do so you had to go and ensure that there was nowhere else, because UEFA would have preferred 1805 it somewhere else, but having demonstrated to UEFA there was nowhere else it was possible to do a deal where actually the plan is developed and we get £16.5 million in, which then unlocks it for all other sporting associations.

Then his speech, when he started to talk about our football teams and what they were doing, became a little bit like one of those old Match of the Day reports. I almost expected him to move 1810 on to Leyton Orient 6 – Liverpool 10, Arsenal 3 – Manchester 0, because he was really getting into that sort of rhythm. Of course we agree that we need additional training facilities, and the project that they were going to advance would not have had the amount of additional training facilities that we will have. My heart breaks too when people have to go to Spain. If they want to go to Spain, they can, but if they have to go to Spain they should not and all of the facilities that 1815 we are developing will provide, I think, more than adequate training facilities also because we are developing for all sports but that does not exclude the GFA also, and a lot of what we are going to do is going to be providing also training facilities for other sports.

1820 But, Mr Speaker, if he thinks that he was going to get away with developing Victoria and developing additional training facilities in Gibraltar, the accountant would have been saying no to him every day of the week.

1825 I thought that he was actually unfair when he criticised us for using a VVIP facility because I think we have all used it at different times. I think it is good for us to meet there and it is good for us to have an opportunity to have a discussion. Criticising the facility has become a sport, now that Mr Clinton has been elected. Before, we all had the opportunity of meeting there and I think it discloses an element of hypocrisy.

Mr Speaker, we are listening to teachers in the education revolution. They are hugely important in this process. They are one of the most important factors: the teachers, the children, the professionals at the Department of Education working together, the politicians and all of the parties together are the ones who are going to deliver that excellent education revolution.

1830 He said that he empathises with the teachers in being against co-location and he thought that there was going to be too much competition between the schools. I think competition between schools is a good thing because I think it is healthy competition, and to say that they are against co-location means that they are completely ignoring the plans in their pamphlet at the last election for the mega school at Rooke, which was one school.

1835 Teachers will be fully involved in key stage alignment – that process has already begun – as they are in all other aspects of what we are doing.

Mr Speaker, I have one speech left to deal with on the Opposition benches. I think it is probably the least important of all those delivered, so I move on now to the damp squib.

1840 Perhaps I should have delivered the response I could have delivered before I heard him, which is what he did: he delivered a speech he had prepared before he had heard us. Again, this was the one he had prepared earlier and it was actually not very well prepared. It was a collection of soundbites and hypocrisies.

1845 He talked about the enclosure at the Music Festival – but he joined us there. I do not understand how somebody can actually argue against something they have done. Well, I suppose Mr Feetham is arguing against something he has done, because of the corporate borrowing, which is such an evil, when he was a part of the Government that did it; but he might be able to say, ‘Well, I was then under the leadership, under the thrall, of Sir Peter Caruana.’ But when you turn up yourself at an event at a particular enclosure, to then turn up and criticise yourself for it is really to take the damp biscuit. Isn’t he embarrassed to have criticised us for something that he did himself? At least Mr Clinton has the benefit of never having come to the Music Festival, to the enclosure, so if he criticises it I can tell him he is wrong and all the other things I tell him about that particular thing and the value of it etc., but he has never come before. Mr Feetham says it is terrible, but I think admits that he has been there and now has decided to change his mind. But the Hon. Mr Phillips does not even grace the debate with admittance that he has actually been there before criticising it.

1855 All he did was regurgitate quotes. ‘Big spender’ he said – well, I am spending on schools, on health, on education, on sports – but that we are not doing enough about Brexit. But hasn’t he just said that I am a big spender because I am spending on schools and education and sports and all the things that we are doing? What else should we be doing?

1860 I suppose seeing those distraught young men that he sees who want different jobs and do not know what to do – he should stop spending so much time with Mr Feetham and Mr Llamas, Mr Speaker. They seem to be the other two people who are distraught about the positions in which they find themselves.

1865 His speech was therefore contradictory. He delivered it without any panache or flair, but that is subjective. In fact, it was so shallow that after what I thought was another magnificent Budget for Gibraltar – which would have been countered, and it would have been good for Gibraltar to have it countered by a strong passionate Leader of the Opposition with an alternative view for how we should be spending – it almost felt as if this House had suddenly found itself beached

1870 upon a sandbank because the analysis was so utterly shallow, boringly so. He accused me of spinning, but he could not spin a plate.

1875 And then he decided to make an assessment of my life. He said it had been my annus horribilis. Well, I do not think he knows me well enough, Mr Speaker, to be that intimate in his view – we are not that close – but I have had a great year. We have had a new daughter, and that really does change your life; an absolutely magnificent year, as far as I am concerned, for my family. I am able to lead Gibraltar with the confidence of my Ministers and the public. It is a total privilege to be Chief Minister of Gibraltar. I have not had an annus horribilis. The only horrible thing this year has been the disappointingly flat an uninspiring speech with which my Budget speech was met when I sat down: no fight, no welly in him, Mr Speaker. It is fine – if he does not want to do the job, that is fine.

1880 Delivering the speech in reply to a budget is one of the reasons why the Leader of the Opposition’s job is the worst job in the world, because you have to prepare for it. It is very difficult. You have to react to something that is said. You have to have notes: if he puts up Social Insurance, say this; if he puts it down, say that. That is how you do it. That is how you prepare. He had not done any of that. But it is fine – if he does not want to do it, if his heart is not in it, that is fine, but do not pretend to do it.

1885 He said that we are doing nothing for young people. I am not even going to accuse somebody else of having written the speech for him, because given what I know of the characters of the other side, I think all of them would have done a damned sight better if they had written it for him. If it had come in on WhatsApp it would have been better. How can he say that we are doing nothing for young people? A thousand young people on scholarships and apprenticeships, of which there are a lot. Mr Bossano is blue in the face talking about the opportunities there are for young people – Mr Cortes also, and in Employment.

1890 He says, ‘What about the T-levels? Nothing has happened.’ Doesn’t he know, Mr Speaker, that the T-levels are due to be introduced next year in the United Kingdom? It is the new A-level. If he goes back to my speech when I first mentioned them, it is the new A-level for introduction in 2019. In the UK they are talking about delaying them. We are talking here to the GTA about how we introduce them to ensure that we introduce them properly. But how can he say that we have done nothing on the T-levels and we have not introduced them yet? They were not due to be introduced until 2019. Go on Google and do ‘T-levels’, Mr Speaker, and see when they are coming. Isn’t he embarrassed to be caught out on something as simple as that?

1900 He said that our contribution to Community Care was the lowest ever. Well, has he forgotten how low the contributions were in the time that they were in government? This is part of the argument of drizzling. They were zero so that the reserves would be depleted to zero.

1905 And then he went back to my arguments in 2011 on the per capita debt. Well, it is very simple. He can do the per capita debt calculation if he wants, going through all the company debt etc., now I have demonstrated to him that there was company debt then as well – so he might find it harder to sustain the argument, but if he divides £520 million by 32,194 people, he gets the answer for their per capita debt. If he divides £447 million by 32,194 he gets the answer for our per capita debt. It is down, Mr Speaker. If they want to include company spending, include all of that, well, let’s include all of their company borrowing as well, but what they cannot do is double count.

1910 The hon. Gentlemen say, ‘You have taken £300 million of loan, £300 million of borrowing’ £300 million of loan because they say that the investment on the housing estates is a loan, £300 million of loan. They put in that PF £300 million owed. Then they say, ‘You put £30 million into the Gibraltar International Bank, £30 million of borrowing.’ I say we have taken it from the £300 million. They say it is £330 million more of borrowing. No, it is not; it is £300 million of borrowing, if it is borrowing. They are doing that all the time. They are reaching a number because Inspector Clouseau is trying to bundle it all up with his crooked calculator and he is falling for it. He should have more respect for his own intellect and work it out for himself, and if he were working it out as if it were a claim for damages for a client he would know that he would not be able to double count that £30 million – just to give him one indication of the many mistakes that they are making.

1925 But going back to 2011 and using my arguments is – I always take it as – the greatest form of flattery. Mr Feetham did it every year that he was Leader of the Opposition – he still has done so by going back to my ministerial statement of January 2012 – and he has now done so by going back to 2011. As I am not shy of saying about myself, it was obviously, in 2011, the most successful Leader of the Opposition speech in reply to a Budget in history, because I was the only Leader of the Opposition who delivered one Budget response to a Chief Minister and then took over from him – so he can knock himself out reading it every time he wants.

1930 Anyway, he says we should deliver more growth in jobs for Gibraltarians and less for Frontier workers – 800 jobs for Frontier workers, only 75 for Gibraltarians. Doesn't he look at the numbers, Mr Speaker? There are only 45 Gibraltarians actively seeking employment. How can we get 800 of them into work? We can all continue to try to make more of them, but at the moment they are not available. Doesn't it even click about these things?

1935 And we are not doing enough to train people for a digital future. Doesn't he read the Chronicle every morning? You cannot be in politics in Gibraltar and not read the Panorama, not read the Chronicle and not look at all the ... Doesn't he know that CyberCenturian saw the largest representation in the finals from Gibraltar than from anywhere else? Four teams were from Gibraltar – one of them the team of all girls who advanced the furthest out of a thousand-odd and then 500 in the finals in all of the UK? Are we not doing enough for digital education in Gibraltar? The teachers who are doing that in the schools are magnificent teachers, Stuart Harrison in particular and Ms Gordon in the girls' school. They are dedicating their time. They are really investing in these children. We are supporting them in doing so. The digital education is there. Come on! Try harder, make some valid points.

1940 I think people protect their brains from his speech by not listening. In fact, I think it is his speech that inspired Mr Hammond to talk about noise pollution and how terrible it was. How can you come here and talk about plans for housing and talk about the forgotten estates when your photograph is in a manifesto that says that your plan for Moorish Castle is to demolish it? How is he going to go to the now magnificently refurbished Moorish Castle when the election is called – if he stands for election – and give his face to people there? Not thinking, Mr Speaker.

1945 And then he says:

how is it right that when each of our children reach the age of 18, parents feel the need to put their names on the social housing list in order to slowly creep up an archaic system to have the opportunity to buy into the Government co-ownership or be allocated a Government flat in the future?

1955 Two points. It was the GSD that lowered the age from 21 to 18. It was 21 before; they lowered it to 18. He is complaining that people are doing this for their children. And second, parents are not able to put their children on the housing waiting list; children have to put themselves on the housing waiting list. So the Big Lie reply, Mr Speaker, is the reality of what we are dealing with. The lies were all in their mouths.

1960 Mr Speaker, I have to deal with the hon. the independent Member now by telling her that she makes a terrible argument for inclusion and equality by starting out trying to exclude white male lawyers. (Interjection by Hon. Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon) We should have as much of a chance as everybody else, no more but no less. The hon. Lady cannot start this debate in our community about representation with a blatant political apartheid. I feel discriminated against every time she classifies me, with her father and all the others, as people who are overrepresented as a class in this political debate.

1965 She says 'so much for our robust economy' and we should look at the metrics and there is a lack of overall strategy – well, how can there be a lack of overall strategy when we have almost no unemployment, when all of the things that should be up are up and the GDP is up every year; that we should conduct a study of inequality because the minimum wage is £14,000 but the average top wage in our economy is $111,000 – well, because there are people who are on top

1970 wages and that inflates the average and there are people who are on middle wages and that 1975 inflates the average and there are less people who are on low wages. The average tells you that; otherwise, the average would be much lower if there were a lot of people on low wages. But look, I obviously agree with her in relation to the minimum wage. No other Chief Minister is able to point to a record where the minimum wage has gone up by 25% – well, no Chief Minister other than Sir Joe Bossano, because he introduced the minimum wage, so it went from zero potentially to the rate at which it was fixed by the GSLP when it won in 1988.

1980 Then she accuses us of not planning for the future. How can we not be planning for the future if we are investing in a thousand Gibraltarians every year to come back to our economy?
 How can we not be planning for the future if Albert Isola is out attracting good business to Gibraltar in the DLT and Blockchain space, in the financial services space, in the gaming space?
 How can we not be planning for the future? You would be seeing a tapering off of employment.
 You are seeing employment continue to rise. There are 28,029 people employed in our economy. It is more than a record. The ratio of residents versus employees is completely through the roof. At this rate, next year we will be hitting 28,500-29,000. If the growth continues, in three or four years' time a Chief Minister of Gibraltar will say, 'There are 32,000 1985 people living in Gibraltar, or 33,000 people living in Gibraltar; there are 34,000 people working in Gibraltar.' That shows you that our plan is working, but when we started there were 500 people unemployed. Give us the credit for that. She needs to check her facts.

1990 We believe that she can eliminate the party on the other side, because they are such a shower that if she gets her act together she can eliminate them from opposition and from this House – but she has to get her act together. So she cannot say that GJBS is a company formed by the GSD; it was formed by the GSLP, Mr Speaker. The GSD very often accuse the GSLP of having formed GJBS, until they were of course elected. GJBS is a company that is there for the Government of Gibraltar and for the people of Gibraltar. It is there to deliver some of the best work in our construction industry. It is there to deliver whenever we need them to deliver on 1995 time and on budget. And at the time of the 2011 General Election Sir Peter Caruana turned up in their yard and gave them a 16% pay rise overnight after the election had been called. That is a shenanigan if ever there was one, Mr Speaker. I am not accusing her of any of that, but I am just telling her the history of GJBS so that she is aware of these men and women who do such an excellent job for Gibraltarians. They deserve to be recognised for the work they do and nobody 2000 should be suggesting that they do anything other than compete properly in the private sector.
 And it is right that, although they are a Government company, they fairly and without advantage compete in the private sector. They do not get all the jobs that they compete for in the private sector. Some in the private sector do not like the fact that they are owned by the Government.
 Some say, 'If I have a dispute with GJBS, they have the Government's deep pockets to take me to 2005 litigation,' so actually they lose work in the private sector as a result of being Government owned.

2010 She talked about postal services costing us £9 million a year. We actually do not know where she got that from. We have looked in the book. Under head 51, 'Postal Services', the cost is £3.6 million. When you look at their receipts, which are in head 5, line 74, it is £1.8 million of revenue, so the net cost of the Post Office is actually £1.8 million. We do not know where she gets the £9 million from.

And assessments are no longer five years late in Income Tax, as she knows. We are bang up to date now and we owe less rebates than any Government has ever owed before. We are about two years into the process.

2015 She says that we are in crisis on housing. Well, Mr Speaker, we are not in crisis on housing.
 We want to be able to deliver the projects we have almost ready to go, but we are fighting to make them better, we are fighting to make them the best possible value for money. We are also fighting to make them fair to taxpayers and to everyone who has already bought an affordable home.

2020 But there was a crisis in housing in 1988 and the GSLP resolved it, and the housing waiting list by the time we left was 200, and we are determined to have what Pepito Baldachino always tells us is his greatest wish, which is for another Minister for Housing from the GSLP to get that total down from him because he holds the record, and we are pushing to achieve that and Samantha Sacramento is doing as much of a good job there as she is in dealing with arrears.

2025 She calls for a review of the Housing Act but I think we have already said that we are doing that, and for provisions of health and safety measures in common areas in rental flats, which ... the Hon. the Minister for Housing has got herself already into lemons territory in the context of actually taking people on because they have things in common areas etc. and she has done a very good job in order to be able to pursue that properly.

2030 I thought it was inelegant to use Grenfell as a way of hanging her hook in relation to the issue of housing. It is not necessary in Gibraltar to try and create panic or use that as a political tool.

We have announced reviews, for example in relation to Import Duty, and then she calls for a review of Import Duty. I think on those issues she needs to do more.

2035 She says she wants to see more young people involved in politics. I agree, but there are a lot of people involved in the young GSLP. If we can have more, of course we should.

And then she laments the final salary pension scheme, but she seems to forget that it was not us who did away with it; it was the GSD.

2040 She tells me to honour my commitment to private sector pensioner. I have. I am the only one who gave them a commitment and I have honoured my commitment; they just want more. Mr Speaker, we have given private sector pensioners who do not have a pension – or we have asked Community Care to give them and they have agreed to do so – the minimum wage per couple and 60% of the minimum wage per individual. They have come back and said that is not enough, they want £26,000 per couple. That is the latest meeting we had with them. They want £26,000 per couple. That is worse than unsustainable – it is impossible. And also remember that 2045 there are people in our economy who work and who do get pension funds for themselves and pay into those pension funds, and those who do not pay into those pension funds now want to be given £26,000 a year when they retire. And there are people who are civil servants who are in the final salary scheme and people who are public sector workers who are in the money purchase schemes, and those who are not and are not contributing should not be put in the 2050 position where they are as well off as those who have contributed. Nonetheless, I also entered into a separate commitment, which was to bring a Bill in respect of the creation of pensions of the private sector and that is now very well advanced and I expect to publish the Bill very soon, hopefully this year.

2055 Mr Speaker, how can she justify the idea that we are not socialists? Which Government has ever put up the minimum wage by 25%? None. Only the GSLP. And if we were not socialists we might not have hiked the duty on champagne.

2060 There is absolutely no question of backdoor privatisation at the GHA. In fact, one of the things that we are able to demonstrate is that in the GHA staffing levels have increased by direct employment by 25% over the last six years. In admin and support we are up 28, in medical and allied health professionals up 65, in ambulance up nine, in nursing up 92, in industrials up 28. The total is 223 more direct jobs in the Health Service in the time that we have been in government, so how can they sustain an argument in relation to privatisation? It is just absolutely impossible to sustain it.

2065 But look, I will tell her that I agree that there are moments when politics might seem terrible. She says we are trying to silence dissent in this House. Nobody is trying to silence dissent in this House but we are always going to be passionate in responding to someone who takes a view which is contrary to ours, and we expect passion back. There is nothing intended to silence dissent just because we are passionate in defending our point of view. Politics might be terrible. It does not feel terrible from this side of the House and it did not feel terrible when we were on 2070 that side of the House. However much we were battered, we always came back. We were honest in the positions that we took. I think that politics is the best profession. It is the profession that enables us to deliver change, it is the profession that enables us to build communities, and what we are doing here is we are building. Just look around you, Mr Speaker. Politics done the way we do it is the noblest profession. We nurture the architecture of society. We build our community. That is what we are doing. And we are not an establishment, we are not a baristocracy; I do not identify with those words, Mr Speaker. It is absolutely wrong to think that that is what we are, because if she goes out into the streets with us she will see that we are not treated like the establishment by our people, and we would never accept that we should be.

The times they are a-changing. They are indeed, Mr Speaker. It has been very hard for us to achieve it, but the times they are a-changing. There is no Gibraltarian now who does not get a job if they want one. There is no Gibraltarian who is deemed unemployable by the Government. There is no Gibraltarian who is not offered a cleaning job because Gibraltarians do not want to clean – there are many Gibraltarians who want and need to clean and are able to clean, if that is what they believe they should do. Mr Speaker, the times they are a-changing. We are delivering that change. It has been hard indeed, but we are delivering that change.

Even the fact that she is seen on people's television screens when she delivers her speeches is a sign of the change that we delivered – as those who are incarcerated at Her Majesty's Prison know, given the work that we do with them there to create opportunities for them. I think she has had the information before from the Hon. Minister, but we are doing a lot, as is Joe Bossano, to bring back into the world of work those who might have found themselves incarcerated for a period.

We are doing a lot on outreach through the Community Mental Health team and there is already a two-bedroom flat in the community for this purpose; and a lot of mental health service is being provided now for children, which we are working on.

On the Prison recruitment, Mr Speaker, I understand five people have already been selected and the human resources manager will soon be communicating to those who have been selected that they have got a job.

Well, Lady and Gentlemen, I think I have been able to demonstrate that a lot more rigour is required if you are going to come to this place earning almost £40,000 – by the way, you get the full public sector pay rise at your pay rates – to criticise on behalf of the community and not even check your facts. Hon. Gentlemen on this side in particular need to be careful because, without wanting to insult Mr Speaker in any way, in the old days in shorthand they used to say that if Hassan and seven monkeys stood for election they would win. So hon. Members need to be careful that she does not stand with at least six monkeys or better, because they might find themselves in a very difficult position.

If hon. Members heard a thud during the presentation by Mr Clinton, it was the thud of the Financial Secretary's jaw hitting the floor, and then the tsunami of thuds was all other accountants in Gibraltar having their jaws hit the floor as the signal from this place reached them in their places of work and they heard the things that they were saying. The Hon. Mr Clinton has got the book all wrong and he has led six of the seven Members opposite into the black hole of voting against this Budget. I think it is six but I do not know what Mr Llamas is going to finally do. It will be a real tragedy if he decides to follow them into that black hole.

He missed most of what is in the book. I have demonstrated that he asks for accounts and then he does not look at them. Accountant says no is not a way forward for this community. It is not something that is going to create a legacy, but with his credibility now as dead as a dodo, especially when people go back and read his speech and read the response that Gilbert Licudi gave him and read the response I have given him in detail, I think people will realise that there is no good reason for hon. Members opposite to vote against this Budget, they are just concocting a reason; and that if the University needs to run a refresher course, it should run it for him in respect of his accountancy qualifications, but I am afraid that I think he is such a laughingstock now at the University it is unlikely that they are going to want to run anything for him. He has been caught with his accounting pants down and it ain't a pretty sight. In fact, after all of this, when they go away and think about it at GSD headquarters – the hon. Lady will be pleased not 2125 to be there – I think they are going to be left with the hon. Member running around doing the Benny Hill jog with the leader of the party chasing him because he is going to be so disappointed at the way that he made him go against these estimates.

Mr Speaker, the ultimate a mi me pertenece the ultimate expression of the culture of entitlement, is to say that in respect of a book where this £635 million of appropriation and there is £600-odd million of revenue, there is nothing there to vote on and that everything is 2130 hidden. It is over £½ billion of revenue, it is over £½ billion of spending on all our public servants, on our civil servants, on those in our agencies and authorities, on the people who are going to deliver services, on the frontline services in education and in health. It is all in here, and what is not is what has never been in here before. And they are going to vote against all of that. They are going to vote not to pay civil servants, not to vote anyone in the public sector, to close 2135 schools, to close the Gibraltar Health Authority.

But look, in the end Mr Llamas is right, the Budget will pass. Investors are not listening to them, they say, so they do not care. They will continue the gesture politics of voting against. But after today he knows that he has been shown up as not being as clever as he tried to pretend.

But there is another tragedy, apart from the fact that Mr Llamas is going to be put in the 2140 position where he is going to vote against the Budget which I think he wants to vote in favour of.
The tragedy is that I spend more time defending Gibraltar and its accounts against other Gibraltarians than I do against people from outside of Gibraltar. That is a tragedy, especially today, as Mr Llamas said, when we should be united in the face of Brexit.

I only have one trick that I bring to this House, Mr Speaker, and that is the truth, and these 2145 estimates are the sword of truth. Their tricks are twisting and defrauding. I am not the king of spin. I cannot spin a surplus certified by the Treasury and the Ministry of Finance, and I do not need to, but it takes spin to turn a surplus into a deficit. What they do in order to sustain their argument is they create a Ponzi scheme of an argument – a fraud by any other name, because that is what a Ponzi scheme is, just like the current GSD, a fraud on the old GSD. In fact, the GSD 2150 is now led consecutively, apart from the interim period of interim leadership during the campaign, by two men who stood against the party for election, and indeed in this House it is led by somebody who stood against the party at an election. I never stood against the GSLP, Mr Speaker – (Interjection) never stood against the GSLP.

All I am doing is exactly the same thing that Sir Peter did from St Peter's chair, reporting the 2155 same numbers, giving you the same metrics, and so from St Peter's chair – for this is where he sat – I tell you, like St John told you, that this is the truth and the truth will set you free – free, probably, of membership of this House because I think they will be free of membership of this House if they continue in the vein that they are going in, but free nonetheless. Mr Speaker, if they stop lying about us, we will stop telling the truth about them; I promise them that much.

This is a great Budget: a Budget for Brexit success, a Budget that lowers the tax burden for 2160 working families, a Budget that ensures that Social Security is still the lowest in Europe, a Budget that lowers the tax burden also for middle-class families, a Budget for our collective health and our collective environment, a Budget to make us match fit for a prosperous future outside the EU, a Budget for those who are low paid and to provide incentives for those on higher incomes, 2165 a Budget for business and reducing costs of rates and other costs and keeping utilities low, a Budget for pensioners, a Budget for students, a Budget for apprentices and for those who want to do T-levels next year, a Budget for our children, a Budget for people with disabilities, a Budget of positive truths that they do not like but our community will relish.

Mr Speaker, their Big Lie replies will not deter me from saying that I commend the Bill to the 2170 House, but before I do I want to say one last thing. Last year Mr Llamas put Gibraltar first and his party second. When the time comes to vote this year, I wonder whether anybody ever should put Gibraltar second.

I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

2175 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 31st day of March 2019 be read a second time.

Appropriation Bill 2018 – Consideration of clauses commenced

Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. F R Picardo (Chief Minister): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House
5 should resolve itself into Committee to consider the following Bill clause by clause: the Appropriation Bill 2018.

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 10 31st day of March 2019.
Clause 1.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 2. Head 1, Treasury; Payroll.
15

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Other Charges.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I may, if I can ask the Government, on other charges, 20 subhead 6(a) circulating coinage expenses, which then cross-references down to Appendix N, page 225, if I could ask the Government: is this in relation to the replacement of the pound coins? And if I could just ask as well, what happens to the old coins?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, this debate is about the numbers here, which they have 25 said they are not going to be voting for, so I am surprised that they are asking us questions, because in this part of the debate what one does is assist hon. Members who may be wanting to support the Bill, try to make any changes that might allow them to support the Bill or to ask any questions which might elucidate or clarify something. So I am surprised that they want to ask 30 questions. If he wants get nit-pickety and difficult and ask questions, I do not think I am going to persuade him to vote in favour, given that he seems to have foolishly decided for other reasons not to be voting in favour, but I am surprised therefore that he wants to ask questions.

The answer to his question is that yes, it is for the replacement of the pound coins.

35 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I thank the Chief Minister for his answer. Does he know when the anticipated demonetisation date will be?

Hon. Chief Minister: During the course of this financial year.

40 Mr Chairman: Any other question on this subhead?
Other charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 2, No. 6 Convent Place; Payroll.

45 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I could ask the Chief Minister why the office of the Chief Technical Officer is now under No. 6?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, given that they are going to be voting against the Bill, I am surprised that they want to ask questions in respect of this Bill, unless the answers I am going to give them are going to change them.

50 The answer is because we think it is more appropriate that way.

Mr Chairman: Payroll stands part of the Bill.

55 Clerk: Other Charges.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, may I ask why it was that under subhead 2(b) other grants and donations, the outturn is going to be £1,064, over £1 million, compared to £575,000 in the estimates, and why the estimate for next year is £1 million?

60 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, in respect of the financial year that ends, which saw them not support the Bill that represents the outturn for last year, there has been other expenditure and this year we expect the expenditure will be around £1 million. That is why those figures are there.

65 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, can the Chief Minister give some indication of what sort of grants and donations he is giving from his office?

Hon. Chief Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I have given him on a number of occasions at Question Time in respect of that.

Mr Chairman: Any other question?

Hon. T N Hammond: Yes.

75 Mr Chairman: The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, under other charges, subheading 5 – Government communication, information and lobbying – I note that there is quite a substantial increase in the forecast outturn from what was estimated. It goes from £915,000 to a shade under £1.7 million, returning to £1.2 million as the estimate for next year. Is that purely associated with activities around Brexit, or is there another reason for that? And if it is around Brexit, is it appropriate that it comes out of the No. 6 budget rather than the budget of the Deputy Chief Minister?

85

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, in respect of the outturn for the financial year that they did not support the estimate for when we brought it in, there has been more expenditure than expected as a result of a number of different reasons and we think it is appropriate that it should come out of No. 6 Convent Place.

90

Given that we are the only ones voting for it, with Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon, I do not see why hon. Members want to go into this level of detail. If they were voting for the Bill, they might have the moral authority to ask us about where we are going to spend the money. They have said they are not voting for the Bill, not on the basis of what we have spent in respect of the outturn for lobbying or what we are going to spend next year.

95

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, so the Chief Minister cannot provide any detail whatsoever regarding the additional £700,000 almost of expenditure under that subheading?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Chairman, I can. It is related to that subhead.

100

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, that is not additional detail; that is just regurgitating what is in the book.

105

It is quite a substantial increase, I understand, but it was not that we were blind to the fact that Brexit was going to happen. The referendum had already come to pass by the time this estimate was put in and I just wonder if we may be provided with a little more detail, if such is available, as to where the additional £700,000 was spent.

110

Hon. Chief Minister: There is detail in respect of every single penny, Mr Chairman. Every single penny of the money that was spent in defending Gibraltar internationally in respect of Brexit and all the other issues which required lobbying, which was spent as a result of the vote in this House of Mr Llamas and Ms Marlene Hassan Nahon and the Members on this side of the House – because they did not support the spending, they did not support that we should spend money defending Gibraltar internationally, and lobbying either in respect of Brexit or otherwise ... There is detail down to the last penny but I do not think it is appropriate to share it across the floor of the House; otherwise, those we are lobbying to keep at bay will know who we lobbied and how we lobbied.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, we are not asking for the level of detail in respect of the naming of names, just perhaps as to how it subdivides between communication, information and lobbying perhaps, regarding the additional £700,000. Was it all in the lobbying box? Was it all information?

125

My understanding was that the Committee Stage was not about debating, it was about just trying to determine facts. The Chief Minister seems quite keen to continue debating where we are with respect to the various positions on this Bill. Regardless of that, I think it is the obligation of those in this House to examine how people's money is being spent and try and drill down into some detail, whether we agree with it or not.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): But you haven't voted.

130

Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly, Mr Chairman. The whole point of this Committee Stage is to decide, by looking at detail, how one is going to vote, not to look into greater detail in respect of something that you are going to vote against.

Hon. Members have made a decision two years in a row not to support the spending, so the spending that we are looking at in the forecast outturn is spending approved by Marlene Hassan 135 Nahon, Lawrence Llamas and the Members on this side of the House. The spending for the estimate for next year is the spending that is going to be done – because they have already said this is the case ... They are not saying, ‘It depends on whether you convince me or you do not convince me’; they have taken a position of principle that everything is hidden and there is 140 nothing here worth talking about because everything that is worth talking about is out of the Estimates Book.

And so, Mr Chairman, they are not asking us for detail in order to be able to determine vote, which is what the debate is about in this House, and what this Committee Stage is about. This is part of the debate. The Committee Stage is about looking at the detail in the context of the debate.

145 I have given them the detail, Mr Chairman, in the context of giving them a high-level view. I am not going to give them a more detailed view, in particular on something as sensitive as lobbying, where what they are asking me for could lead people to the work that we are doing.
Haven’t they heard the Deputy Chief Minister explain what happened in the course of his Budget speech in the Second Reading when he talked about what happened in Washington when he 150 turned up, where people, before he appeared to meet them, had already indications from other entities of what positions they should be taking in respect of Gibraltar?

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, under subheading 6, Protocol travel and entertainment, again I note quite a significant overspend, about 30% over budget, from £150,000 to £260,000.
155 Is that again entirely associated with Brexit, or was it a predictable overspend? Should it have been estimated last year? As I said, it is quite a significant overspend and could the Chief Minister perhaps give a flavour of where that spending went?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, the position remains exactly as I have set out in relation 160 to the position that they have taken, which is if they are voting against the Budget I do not see how they expect to be given more details. They have already indicated what their position is.

In relation to protocol entertainment, I think one of the problems is that hon. Members opposite, when we invite them to parties, eat more than we expect and drink more than we expect.

165

Mr Chairman: Other charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 3, Customs; Payroll.

170 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I may ask, on subhead 1(a) Salaries – and this is perhaps a generic question which goes across the book – does the estimate for 2018-19 take into account the public sector pay rise as announced by the Chief Minister in his Budget speech?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, the Budgets that they have voted in favour of – because 175 he started in this House by voting in favour of Budgets – and the both Budgets that they have voted against do not factor in public sector pay rises in any way. I think he has been told that on a number of occasions before, but I do realise that he forgets some of the things that he has asked us in other Committee Stages. In particular, we had an example of that this morning in relation to his forgetting about the recurrent expenditure in respect of the University and the 180 capital expenditure in respect of the University.

Mr Chairman: Is there any other question?
Payroll stands part of the – 185 Hon. T N Hammond: Sorry, Mr Chairman, just one from me.

Mr Chairman: Yes, the Hon. Trevor Hammond.

190 Hon. T N Hammond: It is purely to clarify for my understanding – no more than that, because I am not familiar with some of the terms, although I have read them before and if I am familiar I do not recollect. Overtime ‘conditioned’ – can the Chief Minister or the Government just explain what conditioned overtime is, as opposed to discretionary overtime?

195 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, exactly the same as it meant in 2016-17, which I think is a Budget year when they voted in favour of the Budget.

The Chairman: Payroll stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Other Charges.

200 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 4, Income Tax; Payroll.

205 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

210 Clerk: Head 5, the Parliament; Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? (Laughter) Payroll stands part of the Bill. (Banging on desks and interjections)

215 Mr Chairman: Other Charges. Any questions?

Clerk: Other Charges.

220 Mr Chairman: Otherwise I will not get my 1.89%! (Laughter) Other charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 6, Human Resources; subhead 1, Payroll.

225 Mr Chairman: Any questions?
Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

230 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 7, Immigration and Civil Status; subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

235 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Hon. Roy Clinton.

240 Hon. R M Clinton: Yes, Mr Chairman. Under 2(e) there is a line that appears: 'Post-Brexit printing of new British emergency travel documents, £10,000.' I would be grateful for some information as to why that appears now, in terms of what it represents.

245 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I am surprised that the hon. Gentleman, given that he has decided to vote against this money being spent although we may need new British emergency travel documents post Brexit, now wants details. But what they represent are new British emergency travel documents required post Brexit.

250 Clerk: Head 8, Government Law Officers; subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

255 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 9, Financial Secretary's Office; subhead 1, Payroll.

260 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

265 Clerk: Head 10, Drug and Alcohol Awareness and Rehabilitation Services; subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

270 Hon. E J Phillips: In respect of line 3, 'Secondment', can the Chief Minister give any indication as to the £553,000 – what that is for?

Mr Chairman: We have already voted You want to ask a question on that – is that it?

275 Hon. Chief Minister: No, we have already passed that.

Mr Chairman: Do you want to ask a question?

Hon. Chief Minister: It's okay, we will – 280 Mr Chairman: Head 10, Payroll, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

285 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 11, Public Service Support Unit; subhead 1, Payroll.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I may. I would be grateful for some information as to what the function of this new unit is for, given it is a new head of expenditure this year.

290 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, this is the section that they voted against last year when it was created also, and which they are intending to vote against this year also, which is to provide human resources support across the public service – which is not the Civil Service. Like everything else in this book, it is something that they are not supporting.

295 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I am not quite clear with the Chief Minister's answer. What exactly does this unit do across the Civil Service? What is its actual function? You already have GDC employees seconded to other Departments. This, from what I can see, is a new Department this year – it was not there last year – and has 13 people in its establishment and two from the Gibraltar Development Corporation. That is 15 people. Again I ask: what is the purpose of this 300 unit? He said to support the public service, but in what way?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, it is not the Civil Service is what I have told him. It is the public service, which is not the Civil Service. This is a unit I have told him was created last year, which they also did not support last year, to provide human resources support for public 305 servants who are not civil servants, throughout the public sector. They did not support it last year and they are not supporting it this year.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, sorry to labour the point but I really do not see that what the Chief Minister has just said actually provides any light to my question. What does this unit 310 actually do?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I do not know how many times I have to tell him. It is like human resources in the Civil Service but not for civil servants, because of the 5,000 people who are employed in the public sector not all of them are civil servants but only civil servants are 315 entitled to work with human resources of the Civil Service.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, may I?

Mr Chairman: Yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Before those members of the GDC were invited to form part of the Civil Service when we were in government, there were two, effectively, a separate 'human resources department' for the GDC. Is this something similar?

325 At the time I think the decision was taken – I am not clear what happened when the hon. Gentlemen took over in 2011 – I think that even those who formed part – there were only two or three people who formed part of that 'department' or who dealt with human resources for the GDC – then transferred to the Civil Service. Is this sort of reinstating something similar for the GDC?

330 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Chairman. This is across the public service. So now you have the Civil Service and then you have all of the rest of the public service, which includes the GDC, and what we are doing, which they did not support last year and they are not supporting this year either, is consolidating all of that in one section so that you do not have a human resources department in one agency and a human resources department in another authority and a 335 human resources department in another company. Instead, you have one human resources facility for all of the non-Civil Service public sector. It is more efficient, and if they were supporting any part of this spending – but they have decided not to support any part of the spending, because they said this just represents a big lie – they would, I think, want to support this.

340

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

345

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 12, Office of the Deputy Chief Minister; subhead 1, Payroll.

350

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

355

Clerk: Head 13, Civil Aviation; subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

360

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Chairman, can I ask: why is all emergency overtime zero?

365

Hon. Chief Minister: I thank the hon. Lady for that question.

Mr Chairman, the decision taken this year is that when we look at emergency overtime it does not seem right that there should be an amount specifically provided, because if it is an emergency that should be leading to that overtime then it should be something that should be covered from the provision that is made in the book for additional spending.

If one provides an amount of money for emergency overtime – and in some heads the hon. Lady will see that there was actually a specific amount provided for emergencies – we felt that that should not be provided by way of emergency, it should be provided by way of discretionary overtime payment being made available, which could then be used in any emergency. The discretion would, of course, engage to allow the payment in the context of that emergency.

375

It is not impossible to think that if you are providing amounts as emergency head, those emergency amounts could be found to be spent during the course of the year under the discretionary head because people would vire between one and the other. In the conversations we have had with controlling officers we have determined it is easier for controlling officers not to have the pressure of having an amount available for emergencies and it is better for them to be able to demonstrate that they have exercised discretion in appropriate circumstances, and that discretion includes in such emergencies as may become necessary when overtime is then required.

380

So she will see in voting to support this Budget, as she is going to do, that we wanted to be careful to ensure that that which is described as emergency is actually emergency.

385

Mr Chairman: That is Head 13, Civil Aviation, Payroll – stands part of the Bill.
And now Other Charges – also stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 14, Environment; subhead 1, Payroll.

390 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, can I ask if the newly appointed Commissioner for Sustainable Development is contained within this payroll list?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, the post of Sustainable Development Officer, which they are voting not to support the creation of, is not contained under these estimates which they are 395 voting not to support.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, can I ask then is the salary for the Commissioner for Sustainable Development coming out of head 14?

400 Hon. Chief Minister: It will come out of the head of Supplementary Provision, which they are also voting not to support, Mr Chairman, this year – unless anything I tell them persuades them to support it.

Hon. E J Phillips: Just a general point, Mr Chairman, in relation to the Chief Minister's 405 continual reference to the fact that the Opposition are voting against the Bill. We consider it quite close to tedious repetition. I think we all know where we stand in relation to the view on where the Opposition stands. If the Chief Minister could refrain himself from continuously repeating it in the tedious nature that he does and just answer the questions that we put to him relating to the particular point of our questions being asked. It is getting quite close to Mr 410 Chairman intervening in relation to that very point I have just made.

Mr Chairman: I do not feel that as Chairman really there is anything that I can do about it. I imagine the position is fairly unprecedented.

In the House of Commons the Appropriation Bill would be referred to a select committee, 415 and with the Opposition invariably having voted in favour at the Second Reading what goes on in the select committee I think would be fairly straight forward.

I do not have anything that I can base a ruling on. I cannot compel the Government to give the information which the Opposition is seeking. I am not in a position to do so. There is nothing that I can base my decision on.

Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. Gentleman is not asking you to compel me to give information or not give information; the hon. Gentleman is asking you to stifle me in debate. He is asking you to stop me from reminding them that they are voting against the Bill. He has asked you to prevail upon me to refrain from reminding them every time they ask a question that they are 425 asking a question about the detail of spending that they are not going to support, Mr Chairman. That is what he is asking you to do, which I assume is because he is embarrassed to have himself reminded constantly that for the second year running the GSD is going to vote against the estimates, which means that they are not looking at whether we spend a pound more or a pound less here or there as a way to determine how they will vote; they have made a decision –
430 on the premise I have already demonstrated in the Second Reading, with the support of the majority of the House, including some Members on that side of the House, which is not to be found with any credibility – that they are not going to be supporting the Bill simply because they say there is nothing here. That is what they have said. They said that this is a Big Lie Budget and they do not want to be reminded, every time they ask a question about the detail of this, that all 435 of the recurrent expenditure of the Government of Gibraltar is in this book and they have an opportunity to look at every penny that is being spent.

And they do not like the attitude of the Government? Well, Mr Chairman, the Government does not like the attitude of the official Opposition (A Member: Absolutely.) and we have made it very clear we think that they are being irresponsible in the way that they are voting and that 440 they are breaching a convention and creating a new convention that is a convention of irresponsibility, which does not look in the Committee Stage at the detail of spending and then enable hon. Members to determine how they will vote in respect of the Bill – it is a general in-principle view against the Bill on the basis that they do not have the information on the spending of the Government of Gibraltar, although there is £600-odd million of revenue here and 445 £600-odd million of spending.

That is what they do not want me to remind them of and I am going to remind them of it at every opportunity I have, and I encourage all my hon. colleagues to do exactly the same thing if they are asked any questions in respect of their subheads. And if they do not want to hear it, well, they can vote in favour or they can vote against, but we are entitled not to have our voices 450 stifled in the debate. It is not just oppositions that complain about their voices being stifled. I feel that Mr Phillips wants to stop me from saying the things which I think it is in the interest of the community that I should repeat so that everybody understands the negative consequence of the action that they are taking – and, Mr Chairman, I think it is absolutely appropriate and incumbent upon me as Leader of the House to do so.

455 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Chairman, just one further point. If one looks at the spirit of 52(4) on page 25 in Standing Orders, you have:

The Speaker or Chairman, after having called the attention of the Parliament or Committee to the conduct of a Member who persists in irrelevance or tedious repetition either of his own arguments or of the arguments used by other Members in debate, may direct the Member to discontinue his speech.

If one looks at the spirit of that, there is clearly tedious repetition of the same argument. It is very clear that the Opposition will vote against the Bill, as is common in other countries –
460 including the United Kingdom, Mr Chairman – and the point I make here is that the Chief Minister continues to tediously repeat the same point in respect of how we have voted on the Second Reading of the Bill. Mr Chairman, what we are undergoing now is a detailed assessment of the figures in the book.

465 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, how can it be tedious repetition – just dealing with that point – if I am dealing with a different question all the time but there is a principle underlying the answers that I am giving in every particular instance?

One does not put to them the Standing Order on tedious repetition when they make the same point for the past four years in respect of company borrowing although I have 470 demonstrated that they were doing the same company borrowing. I just refer to them as a scratched record.

Mr Chairman, I fully intend to remind them every time that they ask a question that they are asking a question under a particular subhead in respect of a Budget that they are not supporting, and if they are embarrassed about that they should just take a different view. If they do not 475 want to be reminded or they do not want to hear me, they can go out to the loo if they like, but I intend to say it because I think it is incumbent upon me, as Minister for Finance, as Leader of this House and as the elected political leader of this community, to ensure that the record reflects the action that they are taking.

480 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Chairman, can I just –?

Mr Chairman: Let me make my position clear – and I am the Chairman of this Committee now. The House is in Committee – we have a different situation completely – but as Speaker, generally when a matter is raised involving the Rules and Standing Orders, obviously, or the 485 proceedings of Parliament, I go by the Rules and Standing Orders. If there is nothing in the Rules and Standing Orders about the issue, then I have a problem because I then need to have recourse to other sources. The sources would be the proceedings of the House of Commons. You guide yourself by what happens in the House of Commons, you guide yourself by Erskine May. For all of that, time is required.

490 The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has raised an issue about the question of repetition.
That has to do with debates. I would submit – I may be wrong – that we are not in that territory; this is not a debate which is going on. The estimates are now in Committee. If anything, the Rules that might apply are from 43 on: ‘Committee on Estimates’. This is what this is now, Committee on Estimates. That is all that there is about the Rules: Rule 43. Other than that, there 495 is nothing that I can guide myself by. This is not a debate in the accepted sense of what is a debate.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Chairman, if I may, I just wanted to ask the Chief Minister why, in his view, even though the GSD Opposition have decided not to vote – which, as you 500 know, is a different position to mine ... why themselves, sitting MPs, are any less entitled or precluded from asking questions on the detail of this Bill.

Hon. Chief Minister: In a select committee like this one, in Committee, what we are doing is trying to determine the detail that will decide how we vote –

505 Mr Chairman: It is irrelevant.

Hon. Chief Minister: – and hon. Members have said (Mr Chairman: Irrelevant.) that they are going to vote against the Bill. They have already indicated that – 510 Mr Chairman: It is not a relevance.

Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly. Irrespective of the merits of the detail that we are looking at, they have said that they are voting against, so it is a little bit rich, in my view, Mr Chairman, that 515 they should now be trying to drill into every penny of spending when they have decided that they are going to vote against.

It is not as if we are not giving information; it is just that I am making the point that I think it is unfair that they are denying the heads that we are looking at of any vote, that we are not going to fill them in any way. In other words, they are voting against £1,000 going here or 520 £19,000 going there but they want to know the detail of why it is going there.

The detail is provided in the context of Committee to allow somebody to make a decision about what they do in a vote, but they said they have a principle position in vote. That is what we think is unfair, because it means that they almost have their cake and eat it. They decide to tell the world they are voting against, but then they want the information that they would have 525 had in the context of deciding whether to vote against or vote in favour. It is a position which I think is unfortunate for all the reasons I have set out, and that is why I think it is important, when they ask us questions, to remind them of that position.

The hon. Lady is voting in favour, so when she asks us questions she will find us not repeating the mantra to her because she has not said that she has made a decision already in principle to 530 vote against.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Chairman, just in relation to that point, the Chief Minister has expressed an intention to continue to preface every one of his responses to questions put to him by this side of the House in relation to the questions on the book. I would invite Mr Chairman to 535 reconsider the spirit of that Rule in the context of conduct more generally in respect of matters in this House. I do not want to labour it any further than that, Mr Chairman, but that is the submission I would make in relation to that point.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, the hon. Gentleman seems not to have seen the House of 540 Commons when Members are asked a question repeatedly and they simply retort that they refer the hon. Gentleman to an answer that they have been given before.

545 It is not by insisting or repeating something that hon. Members are entitled to change the answer that they get. Otherwise, if they do not like an answer, they just ask again in a different way and they expect that the answer they are given has to be different, otherwise it offends the Rule on repetition. Mr Chairman, I think that would be entirely unfair and, as I have said, I think I have an obligation to set out during the course of this Committee session, for the record and to be in our Hansard, that every time that they ask us a question they are in effect asking us questions and details about money that they are voting against spending. So their attitude is that each of these heads should be at zero, not at £19,000 or £216,000. They are saying it should 550 be zero because it is a Big Lie Budget. That is what they have said in the debate, so when they come here the question I suppose they are entitled to ask us is whether we could agree with them to reduce the numbers in respect of payroll in head 14, for example, to zero, because that is what they want.

555 Mr Chairman: The only sub-rule that I can find which could have some relevance – I am not saying that it does; it is very difficult to say ... Look at Rule 52(4):

The Speaker or Chairman, after having called the attention of the Parliament or Committee to the conduct of a Member who persists in irrelevance or tedious repetition either of his own arguments or of the arguments used by other Members in debate, may direct the Member to discontinue his speech.

I am not convinced that that Rule applies to consideration of the Estimates in Committee. It certainly applies to a debate, to what I would call a normal debate on a motion or a debate during the Second Reading of a Bill. That, for me, is a parliamentary debate. I think what goes on 560 and what has gone on over the years when the House in Committee considers the estimates in detail, I remain to be convinced to be sure... I am not sure that that is a debate and that therefore this Rule applies.

I may be wrong, but I am not prepared at this stage, without much more serious and further consideration of the matter ... that the cookie crumbles one way or the other. I am sorry.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Chairman, I am grateful for your clarification in relation to that. I would argue that, as Chairman in relation to a Committee where we are dealing with the conduct of a particular Member – in this case the Chief Minister – who is continuously and will continue to tediously advance his own argument in respect of the official position of the Opposition, which is well known to this House and well known to the public via television ... that the Chief Minister 570 intends from now on in to continue to preface every answer to the questions that we put to him in relation to this point ... It is not a debate, it is a Committee Stage, but he is prefacing that in a tedious repetitious manner.

That is the point I would make and, if one were to look at it in the spirit of the Rules, for 575 Mr Chairman to conclude that insofar as conduct we can dispense with the preface to every single answer to our questions in relation to that and just simply answer.

Mr Chairman: I take your point, but I am not prepared to give a definitive answer at this point in time.

580 Head 14: any other questions on Payroll? If not, it stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

585 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I believe we have a substitution page.

Mr Chairman: Notice has been circulated regarding a number of amendments to page 59. All hon. Members are in receipt of the proposed amendments.

Does anybody want to make any comment on them and ask any questions on those amendments? Yes, the Hon. Roy Clinton.

590 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Chairman.

You will forgive me if I adopt the same approach as the Chief Minister. As I have said in debate, this is a nonsense Budget. I believe the Chief Minister is playing games with the public.

Can he now explain to us, under Other Charges, 4 Subhead (d) Cleaning of streets and public places, where the amount for next year, £5.5 million, reflects the new contract just awarded?

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Chairman, as I have not yet contributed to this discussion at Committee Stage, what I am about to say by definition cannot be repetition, tedious or otherwise.

600 I cannot understand how the Opposition, who are voting against this Bill, are even contemplating spending time asking questions which are of no relevance to them because they are opposing it anyway. Having said that for the first time, if I am asked again I might repeat it until it is or is not considered tedious.

605 On this particular occasion, no, this is based on the still existing contract. The contract has just been awarded and it will have to be refined and so on, but we obviously have to publish the estimate based on the previous contract.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I thank the Minister for his answer.

In that case, would I be correct in saying he would expect to see a saving on that amount?

610 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, I cannot say that at this point in time.

A Member: Not in his interest.

615 Hon. R M Clinton: Well, surely – you have signed a contract – you must know the amount of the contract in relation to this number.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Chairman, the hon. Gentleman is completely wrong and he is as wrong about this as he is about all of the other nonsense that he told us during the course of the first part of the debate which is leading them to vote against this.

620 We have not signed a contract, Mr Chairman. A contract has been determined to be awarded by the procurement but there is first the hardening period, when all of those who applied have an opportunity to challenge if they did not receive the award, and then the contract will be signed.

625 Mr Chairman: Any other matter?

May I ask the Committee whether the amendments as circulated are agreed to? (Members: Aye.) Stand part of the Bill.

630 Clerk: Head 15, Utilities; subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

635 Mr Chairman: There is the small sum of £54 million there. Any questions? Right – how quickly £54 million are voted through. Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 16, Collection and Disposal of Refuse; subhead 1, Payroll.

640 Mr Chairman: Other Charges.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

645

Clerk: Head 17, Upper Rock, Tourist sites and Beaches; subhead 1, Payroll.

650

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 18, Education; subhead 1, Payroll.

655

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I may, again, given the nonsense of this Budget in that none of the cost of the schools is included, why is it that we have under the establishment a new position called Director of Estates? If all the schools are now going to be held through a Government-owned company, this salary presumably is going to be included within payroll – is that correct?

660

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, I am going to repeat something once, and therefore by definition it cannot be tedious and therefore it would fall outside the definition anyway. I still cannot understand why I am being asked, and not only are they voting against but they are actually calling it nonsense every time. Perhaps that is something that could qualify as tedious repetition after it has been said a few more times.

665

This is a post which is a transfer from elsewhere, from the Gibraltar Health Authority. It is the person who is dealing within the Department of Education, directing it as part of my Ministry, and that is why it appears here now.

670

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I am grateful to the Minister for his response.

Is he suggesting that this is a secondment or an actual direct transfer across of the previous position? I do not think, in looking at Appendix Q ... which appears at Appendix Q this year – starting salary £63,000, rising to £91,000 ... Is he saying that was under a different type of heading under the GHA before? Because it seems to me to be a new position entirely.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, a slip of the tongue. This a post that was formerly in No. 6, I believe ... No, then I am correct. It is a post that was formerly within the GHA and was transferred to the Education Department during the course of last year but could not be picked up in time for the last estimates and now appears here instead of in the GHA.

680

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, may I? In Payroll 1(d)(ii) there is £600,000 allocated to 'Special Needs Learning Support Assistance', and I am rather confused in how does that work or how does that differentiate to ... If you will allow, Mr Chairman, although it comes under Other Charges in 2(2)(p)(i), there is 'Assistance to Pupils'. By nomenclature alone I cannot understand the difference. They do seem to be assistances because one is of a temporary nature but is there every year and the other one seems to be more static. Perhaps the Minister can enlighten me on what the difference is and why under those two separate headings.

685

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, once again – with the high regard I have for my old school friend, the Hon. Mr Reyes – I do not see the point of repeatedly asking about something on which by definition again he is going to disagree with, no matter what I say, because he is going to vote against it.

690

695 Nevertheless, there is a distinction. The first one is the learning support assistants who are brought in to support particularly children with special needs. The second one is different. This is when children for example have special medical needs, like needing for PEG feeding a diabetes nurse may have to attend, for very young children who need injections and so on, and that is what the second one covers, not the more normal provision of learning support on a regular basis.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Chairman.

Can I come back very quickly – I think it comes under this area. The Minister was trying to explain that under the establishment the staffing levels ... he has given an explanation of the Director of Estates. Is that the same as –? Again, I may be jumping the gun, but under Other Charges there seems to be a contribution to Gibraltar Developments Staff Services. Is that part of the payroll? If not, I will wait for the other part and then ask that question.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I can answer it now. Again, I repeat – at the risk of becoming tedious now – that I do not think it makes sense to have this discussion, but nevertheless I will provide that information.

710

That is the person that I mentioned in my Budget speech who has been transferred from No. 6 Convent Place to deal with the maintenance and the refurbishment of all the schools that are not being moved to another location as new schools.

715

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Chairman.

So then, under the establishment section there is a post for a GDC staff introduced new for the year 2018-19 that was not there before. Can we have some light on what particular duties that member of staff will be undertaking?

720

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes. There are two posts. There is one who is Director of Estates transferred from the GHA, and the other one who is a GDC who was transferred from No. 6. There are two.

725

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Chairman, but my question ended with what particular duties does the GDC employee ... and there is only one accounted for in this book.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Well, I just said he is a person who is dealing with the maintenance of the schools and the refurbishment of those schools that are not going to be built anew.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, I am sorry –

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: We have one person who is dealing with and leading on the new schools project, getting all the information and liaising with the teachers and so on; and we have a second person who is dealing with supervising the maintenance, assessing what refurbishment is needed in order to keep those schools that are not moving in a good condition. I have said that three times already. I do not know how else to explain it, Mr Chairman.

735

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, in this last – 740

A Member: But you're not tedious. (Interjection by Hon. Dr J E Cortes)

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, I was just going to say that in this last explanation the Minister did clarify that now there are two different individuals, and therefore I have at long last, thanks to the Chairman's ... or what I hope the Chairman will feel relieved I have now understood.

745

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Thank you, Mr Chairman.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, just returning to the subject of Director of Estates for one moment, the Minister said that last year that post was within the GHA. I cannot actually find in last year's Budget Book a salary or a position associated with the post of Director of Estates. There is a position, Head of Estates and Clinical Engineering; I do not know if that is the post that will be referred to and that post has been renamed. Either way, within the salary section I cannot find a salary under the GHA for a Head of Estates and Clinical Engineering, so again we would like to ask: is this a new post, and if it is a transferred post, which post in last year's Budget Book is it and is it the same salary structure as is the case for this year under the title Director of Estates?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The person who is currently the Director of Estates transferred from the GHA was not replaced in the GHA in that role, so you would not find him this year in the GHA. (Interjections) Then it may have been removed in last year's book.

Hon. T N Hammond: So, Mr Chairman, is the Minister saying that the post has been transferred from the GHA to the Education Department this year but that the post was not in the GHA last year?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I think what happened in last year's book – although clearly that is another book that they voted against anyway, so again I am getting terribly confused about all this – if I remember correctly, is it was removed from the GHA but it was included in the Department of Education under 'temporary assistance'. (Interjection) I am assisted and I can see in last year's book 'Director of Clinical Engineering and Estates' – that is the one.

Hon. T N Hammond: Thank you. I thank the Minister. That is actually how I phrased the question. I asked him if Head of Estates and Clinical Engineering is now Director of Estates in the Department of Education. It was not clear and can the Minister clarify, because I cannot either find in last year's book the salary associated with Head of Estates and Clinical Engineering under the GHA or whether it had last year the same salary structure as that of Director of Estates this year.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Well, I do not know what the GHA did, but the GHA I think changed the title from Director to Head.

A Member: It does not matter.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Where do you have 'Head'? Is that in this year's book? In this year's book it is as Head?

Yes, it is the same post. It just says Head in one and Director in the other, but it is the same post. There has been no replacement, so there is no net increase in post; it has just been named differently.

Mr Chairman: Any other questions? Payroll stands part of the Bill. Other Charges.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Chairman, on subhead (2)(12) there is Student Support. I am grateful for the explanations given to me before about the special needs support assistance and the assistance for pupils, but what is this student support then catering for?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I hope I will not be asked much more now, or I will become tedious.

800 I believe this is a sum of money that is available which is provided to students away from Gibraltar who are suffering particular financial hardship. They have to make a case to a panel and there is a Budget there allocated to give temporary assistance to students who are away from Gibraltar who may be suffering particularly difficult circumstances.

805 Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. Sir J J Bossano): It has been there all the time.

810 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, it has been there forever. Fortunately, there has not been a great need to use it the last couple of years, which is why rather than just having the money there to one side we reduced the budget, and clearly there were exceptional circumstances – a little bit like the Chief Minister explained on emergency overtime we would have to see how we could support it, but this is a way we have been more realistic, rather than having a large figure there which we are not going to use, and this is why it is slightly reduced. But it is nothing new; it was probably there, Mr Chairman, when the Hon. Mr Reyes was Minister and he may not recollect.

815 Hon. E J Reyes: It may, Mr Chairman. In the state of cordial friendship and exchange of information that we have, he has now confirmed it is being used for exactly the same purpose as it was when I was a Cabinet Minister – and I am glad to see that at least that has been maintained, because therefore not everything the GSD did was bad. (Interjection by Hon Sir J J Bossano)

820 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Chairman, not only have we maintained that, but if the hon.
Member continues to look through the book he will find that we have increased the number of people who are on scholarships since he was a Cabinet Minister and there are now over a thousand at any one time, so I think he will be very pleased with what he sees. And not just that:
825 we are also developing more schools, although he will not find them all in the book, and we think that is a very important investment for our children's future – although they are voting against all of those things at the same time.

830 Hon. E J Reyes: And I concur wholeheartedly with the Chief Minister that it is thanks to the professionalism of our teachers that we are able to boast about having more students in further education.

A Member: Hear, hear.

835 Hon. Chief Minister: And only, Mr Chairman, as a result of this House voting £20 million that we can pay for them.

Mr Chairman: Any other question on other charges? Yes.

840 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Chairman, just in relation to item 2.14, Project Search, of the Big Lie Budget, will the Chief Minister explain or one of the Ministers explain why the decrease in funding towards this particularly important project?

845 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, given that their response was no more than a tissue of lies designed to try and persuade the community that this £625 million of spending is not something that should be supported, and given that they do not even believe – given that they say that our Budget is a lie – that there is this recurrent revenue, I am surprised he is not trying to persuade us to take the Project Search figure down to zero.

850 All he needs to do is cast his eye over it and see that last year we provided 10, we spent zero – and therefore why provide 10 again if we spent zero last year? – so we have left enough in, in case there is some spending to be done in the future. And we will support spending in respect of Project Search, although they are going to vote against it.

Mr Chairman: Other charges stands part of the Bill.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman –

Mr Chairman: The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

860

Hon. T N Hammond: If I may refer to subparagraph 10, Training and Development courses, can I confirm whether those are teacher training courses or student training courses?

865

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, repeated repetitions of a ‘Big Lie Budget’ make me hesitate in answering anything, because almost by definition then they are calling me a liar and I am sure that that is not allowed in this House. I think that is what perhaps is becoming tedious.

These are training courses for professional staff.

Hon. T N Hammond: I thank the Minister for that response.

870

With reference to subparagraph 9, Nurseries, I notice a nominal figure of £1,000 is in the estimate this year. The forecast outturn for last year was zero. What does Government envisage potentially having to spend money on with respect to nurseries under this particular heading?

875

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The assistance to nurseries, should they require them and should it be deemed appropriate to give nurseries which do not come directly under the Department some assistance under exceptional circumstances.

Hon. T N Hammond: So, Mr Chairman, would that be private nurseries then that may need assistance?

880

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes.

Mr Chairman: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, given the incomplete nature of this Budget, can the Minister explain why there was, in fact, no expenditure on Project Search in the outturn 2017-18, given that there was an estimate of £10,000?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, I am going to give him an incomplete answer – that was it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, the Government does not for one moment accept the premise that this Budget is anything other than entirely complete. It is a complete picture of all of the revenue of the Government in the Government revenue section of this book and a complete picture of the Government expenditure proposed to the House in the book, which is in fact an annexe to a Bill which is before the House and which we are debating today. Therefore, Mr Chairman, the Government does not accept for one moment any suggestion that this is an incomplete picture, and anything that we say henceforth must be taken with that caveat.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Sorry, Mr Chairman, I thought I had given my incomplete answer.

The Department has – as I said in my Budget speech, but again I know they were not listening because they did not change their responses – as I said in my Budget speech, we have engaged an officer who is doing the sort of work that Project Search was doing in a different way. So we are not engaging so much specifically in that project, although we may possibly re-engage in that, and that is why we have put a small amount there but we are doing the work in a different way.

Mr Chairman: Any other questions?
Education, Other charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 19, Heritage; subhead 1, Payroll.

910

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

915

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I may. Given that the Government has excluded large chunks of capital expenditure from this Budget, which obviously then affects its entirety, can I ask the Minister for Heritage about item 2.5, Contracted Services in Heritage, which in the outturn 2017-18 was effectively £1.5 million and is now reduced to £1 million? Can he advise how he has achieved a saving of about £½ million?

920

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, how can a reference to capital spending be relevant to the pages on recurrent expenditure that we are dealing with at the moment?

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): He needs to go to university. (Interjections)

925

Hon. Chief Minister: He has made a point about capital expenditure, and we are dealing here with recurrent expenditure! (Interjections)

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, is the Minister refusing to respond?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Chairman. What the Member is doing is prefacing a question for us in a way that makes it unintelligible, because he is asking questions of us in respect of recurrent expenditure and he has prefaced it by a remark in relation to capital spending. So what does he want to know about this recurrent spending head? If he makes that clear and he does not connect it to capital spending we may, despite the fact that they are not going to vote in favour of this Budget, demonstrate that we are trying to provide some information – which will not change their minds in any particular respect because they have come here with their minds closed to argument and they have come here to try and seek a shutdown of Government and they have come to try and seek a stopping of all Government services. Nonetheless, if he asks the question in a way that does not connect it to capital spending, we may be able to provide him with some sort of answer.

935

He is just finding himself in exactly the same position he found himself in relation to the University all over again.

945

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I am still waiting for an answer from the Minister.

Hon. Hon. A J Isola and Hon. Miss S M Sacramento: You have had it.

Hon. R M Clinton: The question is quite simple, Mr Chairman. Given that the Government does not know the difference between revenue and expenditure and recurrent expenditure, can the Minister confirm on item 2, Other Charges, subhead 5, whether the reduction in contracted services in Heritage from 2017-18 to 2018-19, in which he seems to save £½ million ... How has he achieved this?

955 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I will start by dealing with the point that he makes at the beginning of the question which then makes the rest of the question impossible to deal with: the Government does know the difference between capital spending and recurrent spending.

960 Hon. R M Clinton: In which case, Mr Chairman, at the very real risk of trying your patience –

Mr Chairman: Could I suggest, because my patience is also running out and I may decide to call it a day here and now ... I may decide to say a plague on both your houses, I am not going to waste my time here with this business.

965 Why don't you ask a straightforward question? I would suggest, as Chairman of this Committee, that you ask the Minister how does he account for a decrease from the forecast outturn of £1,465 to £1,095. Do not premise your question; ask the question and see what kind of answer you get.

970 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, may I?

Mr Chairman: Yes. I hope you do not add wood to the fire!

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, no, what I – (Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Chairman.) Mr Chairman, I beg your pardon – thank you very much.

975 That is why actually the point that my learned and hon. Friend the Leader of the Opposition made earlier has some merit, because we are now at risk here of descending into farce that does no credit to this House at all, and I would invite hon. Members to just ... We will, on this side, ask straight questions and they on that side could just simply answer them without getting involved with something that is really turning into something that I have not experienced since I was in 980 the sixth form at Bayside Comprehensive School – (Interjections) which I used to enjoy, I have to say, but it just becomes –

Hon. Mr Chairman: I must seriously warn hon. Members in this sense. We have been here since Monday. I have been sitting here for very many hours at the same time as I have been 985 taking, every single day, three dosages of amoxicillin 500 g. Notwithstanding that, I have been very patiently here, doing my job, and I intend to do it to completion because when all is said and done it is a job that I enjoy – and if I do not do it, somebody else is going to have to do it and find themselves in the same position as I do.

I think that, in spite of the differences between the Government and the Opposition, we have 990 had good debates in the House, good speeches in the last few days. We have now come to a situation where the procedure has always been relatively easy, but because of the fundamental dispute arising from the fact that the official Opposition did not support the Estimates of Expenditure ... arising from that there is a dispute between the Government and the Opposition and I am caught in between.

995 I am caught in between in a situation where I have reflected on that Rule. As I say, I think that that Rule applies to debates. It is the Rule for debating – debating motions, debating the Second Reading of Bills; I do not think it applies to Committee. A Committee on Estimates, usually speeches are not made. Questions are asked and answered, speeches are not made, and therefore I honestly, seriously do not think that that particular Rule applies to this situation.

1000 You have raised the matter. Since then I have made a few notes and reflected upon it. I am convinced that it does not apply. I may be wrong. I am not saying that I am infallible, like the Pope is supposed to be – which I seriously question in any case. I am not infallible, I may be wrong, but that is the extent to which I am able to give a ruling at the present time. Look, if I am wrong, I am wrong and next year we will have a different situation perhaps, but that is the position as I see it now.

I think it should not be beyond the realms of possibility, where genuinely information is being sought, to phrase the question in such a way that it is a straightforward question – and you may, as a result, elicit a straightforward answer. Try it. If it does not work, then I am wrong and you can preface whatever preamble you want to a question. (Interjection) That is all I can say in the interest of bringing this matter to a close.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I think that your advice to hon. Members opposite in respect of how they might get an answer to the question in respect of the contracted services in Heritage is very good advice and it would enable us to provide perhaps some of the information that they want.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Chairman, we will test the guidance that you have given in relation to that point. The next question that my colleagues on this side of the House will deliver to the Government will be a very straightforward question about particularly the figures. If it is met again with a preface by the Chief Minister in relation to that question, Mr Chairman, we will have to continue down the line of questioning with prefacing our questions, which will elicit the same response from the Chief Minister. We are willing to narrow the question as per your guidance, Mr Chairman; however, I expect, given the intention expressed by the Chief Minister that he intends to preface every single one of his answers with the restatement of our position, he should also take the guidance from the Chair.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, this is not about the preface that they are giving.

Mr Chairman: Let me say that since the matter was first raised by the Leader of the Opposition, I have noticed the Hon. Dr Cortes has been answering ... even the Chief Minister, they haven't... All the answers have not, since then, been prefaced by the same remark. I have noted that.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, what the Hon. the current interim Leader of the Opposition does not seem to appreciate is that this is not about the preface. The Hon. Mr Clinton said that the Government does not understand the difference between capital spending and recurrent spending. (Interjection) That is not 'I'm going to vote against because this is a Budget which is a lie, etc.'; this is an allegation that the Government does not understand the difference between the recurrent and capital expenditure. What on earth that allegation, which is an asinine allegation, has to do with asking a question at the Committee Stage is entirely lost on me.

I think you have given them very good advice as to how they could ask a question that might elucidate an answer; if they follow it, they might elucidate an answer.

Hon. R M Clinton: Very well, Mr Chairman, here goes. Under Other Charges, subhead 5, Contracted Services Heritage, would the Minister advise how he has arrived at savings between the forecast outturn for 2017-18 of about £1.5 million to effectively £1.1 million in 2018-19?

Thank you, Mr Chairman.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, the straight answer is in order to rise even higher in the esteem of the Father of the House, who would have been delighted to see the drop.

Yes, very clearly this was because last year we had initial setting-up costs in relation to the World Heritage site, which will not be necessary this year.

1055 Hon. R M Clinton: Sorry, Mr Chairman, this has nothing to do with – (Interjection by Hon. Dr J E Cortes) No, looks like a shift ... (Interjections) Yes, sorry, Mr Chairman.

Given what the Minister has just said, the new subhead 6, World Heritage Site Expenses, that is presumably just maintenance for the site?

1060 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: That is correct. It is ongoing expenses following the set-up last year.

Mr Chairman: Other charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 20, Technical Services; subhead 1, Payroll.

1065

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, if I may ask, under Payroll, subhead, subparagraph (f) Salaries, I note that there is no significant change in the full-time equivalents indicated. There is the removal of a messenger and the addition of a security guard/car park attendant, and yet the overall salary rate goes up by nearly £62,000. Can I ask why that increase exists?

1070

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Chairman, if we look at the estimate for the year 2017-18 and then the forecast outturn, you can see there has been an increase then. This is why the difference between the estimated 2018-19 is slightly higher; it is not significantly higher, so it is reflecting more or less a similar figure to the forecast outturn for 2017-18.

1075

Hon. T N Hammond: I am sorry, Mr Chairman, I do not understand the answer. The forecast outturn for 2017-18 is £698,000 and the estimate for 2018-19 is £760,000, indicating a £62,000 increase. If we look at the engineering and design FTEs, there is no change in personnel whatsoever, so is it just that the salaries of those individuals altogether are rising so that we arrive at a £62,000 increase? There are certainly no additional persons there to account for that significant increase.

1080

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Mr Chairman, the hon. Member needs to understand that in looking at the salaries of any one year he has got to look in the context of what has happened over a number of years.

1085

There are people who start or finish in different months of the year and there is a situation where, if he looks at the £760,000, he needs to look at the fact that it was £744,000 two years ago and that there has been a pay rise since then. So, for the same number of people in 2016-17 there was £744,000, and two years later you have got £16,000 more for the same number of people, given that in the meantime there will have been two pay rises and people moving up the scale.

1090

This kind of difference between one year and the other has to be analysed and can only be understood in the kind of movements that take place over a 48-month period. There is no difference in the manning level or in the cost.

1095

Hon. T N Hammond: I can accept that answer from the Minister. That is what I was trying to get at – is it that it is probably attributed to people going up pay grades, which does make sense to me. I was just trying to understand that. (Interjection) Well, yes, perhaps £3,000. I can understand that answer. That is what I was just getting at. I wanted to confirm that that really was the case.

1100

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Mr Chairman, the point is that if he just looks at the £698,000 and the £760,000, it may look as if there is an abnormal change taking place at that point, but if you compare the £760,000 with the £744,000 of two years ago, then of course the change is not significant.

1105

Mr Chairman: Any other question on Payroll?
Stands part of the Bill.

1110 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1115 Clerk: Head 21, Driver and Vehicle Licensing; subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill. Yes?

1120 Hon. T N Hammond: I have a rather similar question to the previous one in that again there is quite a substantial ... Whilst the overall headcount appears to be down one for the year, there is almost a £100,000 increase in salaries. Again, although I do recognise that the estimate for last year was £800,000, the forecast outturn was down quite substantially but then rises again to £750,000, which represents 15-odd per cent of the entire salary budget. I am just again asking is it down to the same reason – has the reduction in headcount had no effect and, bearing in mind there are only 26 staff there, can they all be going up? Can we have an explanation as to why the increase is so much?

1130 Hon. Sir J J Bossano: I think the... anticipation... for example, we get a very clear sequence. If the hon. Member looks at the Housing Works Agency, for years there has been a situation where they make provision for jobs which assumes the jobs being filled in the year and then it does not happen. That tends to happen with a lot of roles. That is to say, the fact that it went from £697,000 to £806,000 would imply certain vacant posts being filled. At the end of the year, if the posts have not been filled, then the outturn is closer to the previous year's actual of 2016-17. In £756,000 there will be some provision for jobs being filled, but they may not be filled within the year, in which case the final result will be closer to the £697,000 of two years ago.

1135 Mr Chairman: Payroll stands part of the Bill.

1150 Clerk: Head 23, Statistics Office; subhead 1, Payroll.

1155 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, under subhead (I)(g) of Other Charges, there is some wording in italic, 'Office Rent and Service Charges'. May I ask why there are no office rent charges at all, given that their offices are now in the World Trade Centre?

1160 Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Because that is what they were paying in the office they were in before, and in the new offices there is not such a charge – presumably it is included in the rental agreement that there is.

The £3,216 of 2016-17 – which is the only one really he is legitimately entitled to ask me about, because I think that 2016-17 was when he voted in favour of spending that money ... So 1165 the money was spent, which he voted for. Last year we did not ask for any money and this year we are not asking for any money.

Given that he wants the whole book to be in zeros, he should be celebrating the fact that he has got two zeros to his credit.

1170 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I thank the Minister, but still, if the Statistics Office is now in the World Trade Centre, is he telling us that the Statistics Office does not pay rent to the World Trade Centre, or does it pay rent to another Government Department?

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: No, Mr Chairman, the rent of the Statistics Office is included in the 1175 rental that there is for Government offices. This refers to what was being paid in respect of the area that they had in the New Harbours, where I think the parking facilities were shown as a separate element in the service charges, but in the new one, in the global amount of Government rents, which is in a global head, the Statistics Office is included as opposed to being included here.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I understand the logic of what he is saying. Can he point me to which part of the book the head is in which the global rent for Government offices would be?

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Well, I imagine it is in the one that says ‘Rent for Government offices’ 1185 [Inaudible] read the whole book. I know that I am supposed to have a better memory than him, but I know that there is a block vote on rent of Government offices, again which has been there every year. In head 1, subhead 9, in Treasury – which I cannot say he has already voted for, because he is voting against everything.

1190 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer.

Can I just, I guess for my information, understand the difference between this global vote that was done under Other Charges under Treasury, under subhead 9, to, for example the charges under head 22, Town Planning, which has its own office rents and service charges? What is the difference in approach?

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: I think many of these things are historical – that is to say they were done in a particular way before. There tended to be, before, a situation where many Departments did the same thing and the same items used to appear in many different Departments. Generally there has been a tendency, in terms of doing things differently, like the Chief Minister mentioned in relation to human resources – there was Human Resources in the Care Agency, a 1200 Human Resources in the GHA. So I think the move is that when changes take place, where it can be rationalised it is all put under one head, which makes more sense in the whole area of looking at improving efficiency. Sometimes duplication happens because there are different people in different areas of the public sector doing the same thing, whereas if there is one person doing it 1205 for everybody, there are potential savings.

We have not got a programme to do that everywhere as a decision – let’s do it all at once – but whenever a change takes place, we look at it on the basis of ‘Is the fact that a change is taking place an opportunity to do it in a different way?’ and then the opportunity is taken.

1210 Mr Chairman: Other charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 24, Economic Development; subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1215 Hon. T N Hammond: Sorry, Mr Chairman, just one, again referring to a similar theme to the last question that I asked, where we have a full-time equivalent reduction of four and yet we go from a forecast outturn of £850,000 to an estimate of £1.24 million in salaries. That does seem quite an extreme difference to account for simply in terms of pay grade increases, unless there are quite a significant number of vacancies in that Department. If that is the case, I will of course 1220 accept the Minister's answer. I assume the high estimate must be down to a high number of vacancies.

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Well, Mr Chairman, if he looks at 2016-17 it was £1,206, so what he is talking about is a difference of £24,000 in £1¼ million in a period of 24 months. The submission 1225 that is made reflects the complement, which is actually down by five.

Members will recall that one of the things I did a few years ago in the area of Economic Development was to bring the administration together, which was previously spread into the different units, particularly because the EU Funding Unit, which was a separate section in its own right, is something that is going to disappear in the very near future. By combining the different 1230 sections, we have been able to make some savings in anticipation of the fact that we are going to have a surplus of workers in that particular section who will have to be re-employed somewhere else, so that the vacancies that are there that are not filled in the main are the vacancies that may be covered temporarily in the knowledge that they are not going to need it to be filled because the EU funding is going to dry up after 2019.

1235 The provision has to be taken into consideration on the basis that the original figure was £1,206, we provided for less last year, and actually we spent considerably less than had been expected because we have actually reduced the number of people. The provision that we have got now is on the basis of 32 people being employed in all the areas. The only area where we see the figures going down is in respect of, for example, the EU Funds Controller. The different EU 1240 programmes that are in the list, in these 22, is the area where the saving is. But the provision will include the vacancies. The one there does include quite a number of vacancies – four or five vacancies.

Can the Minister explain why the Hospice actually has not followed through and what the intentions are, please?

1295 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Chairman. We had hoped to have been able to have commenced such a worthy cause in the last financial year; unfortunately, it proved impossible for us to do so. We think we may be on track to starting in this financial year, but of course we are already a few months into it, so it would not reflect the full amount.

1300 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Chairman, can I ask a question: why the estimate in the Cancer Relief Centre is so much lower than the previous forecast outturns and estimates of the last two years at £70,000?

1305 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, this relates to a bid made by the charity in relation to works to be carried out at the premises. Part of those works of course are being done in this financial year, as reflected in the forecast outturn, and the £70,000 reflects the estimate to complete the works in this financial year.

Hon. N F Costa: No, there is no cost at all.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, it is a very small point. Just regarding subparagraph 1(h), the cost of maintenance of security cameras seems to have almost tripled in the forecast outturn for this year. Is there any explanation for that? Clearly that is not expected to go forward, so there must be a very particular reason why it tripled in this particular year.

1345

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Chairman, it relates to mainly a cost of engaging a 24 hour security guard following the relocation of the compound from the Lathbury site. The CCTV has since been installed, so that is why the costs will then be reduced in this financial year.

1415

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, last year, you will see from the estimate there was an estimated contribution from revenues received of £4.5 million. We needed essentially £6 million

1420 to run the Department and therefore there was a need for an additional contribution to be made by the Government, as reflected in the estimates, of £1.463 million. The forecast outturn, hon. Members will see under Contribution from Revenues Received, which is actually the revenue of the Port Authority, has in fact been £5.7 million as opposed to £4.5 million, so we have had £1.2 million more of revenue. The revenue for this financial year is estimated to be over £7 million and therefore we are now running the Port Authority at a surplus rather than a 1425 deficit and we do not need the additional contribution.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I may enquire as to why the other charges contribution to one has gone up from £½ million to £1.5 million for 2018-19?

1470 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the speech delivered by the Hon. the Minister with responsibility for the University and to the reply I provided this morning, which sets out in detail exactly why that was the case.

1475 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I may enquire: on what basis has the contribution been trebled on recurrent expenditure from £½ million to £1.5 million?

1480 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, all of that is answered in the contribution both of the Hon. the Minister for the University and my contribution. I recommend to the hon. Gentleman that when the Hansard is available he prints it out and reads exactly what we explained to him in detail. In fact, I think the contribution by the Minister for the University may already be up on all the news pages and that sets out a lot of the thinking. I think all of this information has been provided. Most people I think have understood it.

1485 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, yes, but given that the accounts of the University for July 2017 are not available, I would like to understand from the Government how they have arrived at the level of contribution for 2018-19. Is this a request from the University? And if so, how has the Government been able to assess it in the absence of any audited accounts?

1490 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, in the same way as the Government assesses bids from any other Government Department that do not do audited accounts on a yearly basis at the end of March... or this particular year, and they present a bid as to what their requirements are going to be in respect of the year starting 1st April. This represents a contribution for this financial year of £1.5 million, which is actually a reduction of the trebling, a reduction of almost 25% of the total contribution that the Government made last year.

1495 Hon. R M Clinton: Yes, Mr Chairman, but we are talking here about recurrent expenditure in the books of the Consolidated Fund. How does the Minister assess the reasonableness of the University's request, given that, if I recall correctly, in 2016 the Minister went to great pains to tell the House as to the independence of the University? Does he have access to the University's management accounts? How does he assess the reasonableness of the request?

1500 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, I have just explained it. The University makes a bid for funding in the same way as other Government Departments make a bid and substantiate what it is that they need. In this particular case, I then had a meeting at the offices of the Financial Secretary with the Financial Controller of the University as well as the Board of Governors of the University, where we went through that bid and we determined the level of contribution that was required by the University for this particular year.

1505 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Chairman.
1510 Can the Minister then confirm that none of this is obviously in respect of capital expenditure? And can he therefore confirm that in terms of the University accommodation block, that none of that will be funded through this £1.5 million contribution?

1515 Hon. G H Licudi: Of course not, Mr Chairman, and that should be obvious to anyone, especially the hon. Member. (Laughter)

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Chairman.
1520 Can the Minister then explain to the House how the University accommodation block is being funded and by whom?

Mr Chairman: I am not sure that that arises under this head. It may be a proper question later on under capital expenditure, but I am not sure that it arises under this head.

1525 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Chairman; I will ask that question then later on within capital expenditure. I will leave it at that, thank you, Mr Chairman.

Mr Chairman: Head 43, Other Charges, stands part of the Bill.

1530 Clerk: Head 44, Culture; subhead 1, Payroll.

Hon. E J Reyes: If I may, Mr Chairman: section (c) under Payroll caters for allowances – perhaps the Minister could explain what type of allowances those are, because the actual expenditure in 2016-17 and the forecast for 2017-18 continuously surpass what we in the House have put down as an estimate for the last two years.

1535 Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Chairman, despite the fact that they are going to vote against, and I am willing for the hon. Member ... since he deals with Parliament and ourselves in a cordial manner, I will answer the question by saying that this is allowances for people acting within our Department. Every year we try to solve that and we put the same figure, but sometimes because people are acting upwards and there are vacancies that we need to fill ... that is why it happens.

1540 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, I understand that you incur the expenditure when you are acting for someone, but when you are acting for someone it means you are not paying the salary of that other person – so there should have been a saving in salaries rather than an overspend. How can we reconcile that position?

1550 Hon. S E Linares: Well, Mr Chairman, he will see that as we ... For example, in the estimates of 2017-18 there was £277,000 and there is an increase up to another extra approximately £30,000 in the total payroll. Therefore, he can see that we have gone at the same rate, and it should go even higher because, as the hon. Member knows, we are not now putting in the pay of the vacancies that are existing – we do not do that; we just put the pay of the people who are there. But there is acting and these are the allowances – these people who are acting upwards.

1555 Hon. E J Reyes: I am sorry, Mr Chairman, I do not quite follow. Perhaps I will explain myself. We have an estimate in salaries for 2017-18 of £219,000, yet we spent more because there have been pay reviews or whatever. But if the Minister is saying that those allowances have a high expenditure because they were people acting ... then you act for someone who is not being paid. This is why I feel there is somewhat of a discrepancy. There is not a saving in one and therefore 1560 an expenditure in another; there is an actual over-expenditure in both salaries and allowances which were for acting purposes.

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Chairman, if he sees the forecast outturn of £230,000 at the very top, and then this year it is £260,000 – we are expecting to fill some of the posts. What we have 1565 done in the allowance, which is the question he is asking ... we had the actual of £22,000, we have put £19,000 in the estimates 2017-18, the posts were not filled and therefore there is a £30,000 expenditure there; but we are expecting those posts to be filled, therefore £260,000 at the top, the increase, and therefore the £19,000 goes down to £19,000 again.

1570 Hon. E J Reyes: I can understand we are expecting the posts to be filled and I have no problem in understanding that you have an estimate of £260,000. What I am saying is £11,000 more was spent in 2017-18 than had been catered for in basic salaries, so therefore it does not 1575 tally that there was another £11,000 because people were acting for somebody. There is an increase in both. Had the salaries gone down, one could then logically follow – yes, all right, I have saved here and I have paid extra there – but we seem to have had twice the £11,000.

1580 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Chairman, because that whole argument is based on the fallacy that when people are being acted for the person who was originally doing the work is not being paid or is not also receiving the full amount of salary. You are paying somebody who is away from their post to the full salary that they receive, including any amounts that they may have on top of salary, and you are paying somebody to act for them also. That is the situation. If you then deal with something in the complement so that you are then better staffed and that does not happen so much, your salaries are going to go up. That is why you have got temporary assistance going down, because you expect to have less temporary assistance. But, Mr Chairman, as he 1585 knows – he has been in government before – the emoluments are paid from Treasury once confirmed and approved as proper and appropriate.

1590 Hon. E J Reyes: I understand. The Chief Minister has shed a lot of light. I could understand that in basic salaries we are catering for an extra £30,000 because there is going to be an increase in the complement of one post, but because the Minister had made the reference that there was going to be increase of personnel – if it is more than one, then there should have been a saving.

1595 But I will leave it, Mr Chairman. There is not great urgency on that, and if there are any queries during the course of the financial year I can always pose a question and give him due notice.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, if it is convenient, I think it may be appropriate to now seek to adjourn the House until tomorrow at 3 p.m. to continue with the session.

1600 The Chairman: The House will now adjourn to tomorrow afternoon at three.

Appropriation Bill 2018 – Clauses considered and approved

Mr Chairman: We are at head 44, and even though some questions were asked on payroll we did not take a vote, so I am going to suggest that formally, for the Hansard, that Head 44, Payroll, stands part of the Bill – and we are on Other Charges.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. E J Reyes: May I, Mr Chairman? In subsection (3)(h) there is an entry titled 'Maintenance of Armour Decking'. I do not recall the Minister having explained during his address what the Armor decking was. Can we have some light on that, please?

10

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, despite the fact that the hon. Members are against the whole of the book, I will just say the Armour decking is the decking that we use in the Victoria Stadium to cover the turf when we have a festival or whatever. That needs maintaining, and therefore that is a cost to maintain that deck.

15

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I can refer to subsection (3)(b) Mega Concert, given that the net budgeted cost on the estimate was £½ million loss and we came in at a loss of £3.1 million resulting in an overspend of £2.6 million overall, can the Minister advise what the reason for that was? And how confident is he in his projection for the estimate for the concert of 2018-19, given he is only projecting a £700,000 loss?

20

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, I refer the hon. Member to the hour speech that I gave, in which I gave explanation as to why this has happened. Subsequently the hon. Member voted against what I said, so he does not believe what I am saying – so I am not going to explain any more.

25

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, given that he consistently seems to be unable to keep the mega concert within budget, can he at least explain to the House why he was £2.6 million over budget? What specifically caused the overrun?

30

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, I refer the hon. Member to my speech, which took an hour. I explained and I gave explanations as to the cost and value and why this had happened, and therefore I will not answer any more questions.

35

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Chairman, in relation to the question by Mr Clinton, does the Minister not think that the people are entitled to know why there is an overrun in relation to the figure?

40 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, the people have been told because I mentioned everything in my speech – and probably the people were listening whilst you were not. (Laughter, banging on desk and interjections)

45 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Chairman, given that I am voting with the Budget and people may not have heard his speech yesterday, could we just have a brief summary of the discrepancy between the estimate of 2017-18 and the forecast outturn that is so large – £2.1 million, from what I see here.

50 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, we are very grateful indeed that the hon. Lady is going to continue with the convention that has developed in this House for many years; indeed, it was only broken last year for the first time. I hope that a new Opposition, which perhaps she might lead successfully into this House, might continue with this convention going forward in the future.

55 It is absolutely right that in Committee we would be dealing with the questions arising out of any particular line in the book, but I do think it is fair, despite that, that where the Hon. Minister has actually spent time setting out in detail what the answer to that question is during the course of his speech ... I don't think it is something that we have to elaborate on further. Having said that, the hon. Gentleman's speech is available online on the Government website and on other websites.

60 It is not that we do not want to answer the question, Mr Chairman; it is that the question is answered in detail in the speech in a way that does it justice, and we would not want to fall into tendentious repetition by repeating today that which we said yesterday.

65 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I have just had a chance to look at the Minister's speech and whereas he gave notional values for viewing on various channels, he has not actually explained the variation in cost – unless what he is telling this House is that he actually had to pay for this viewing.

70 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, I refer the hon. Member to my speech, which is very clear. I am clear as to what I said in my speech and why these things had gone over the limit, and I will not answer any more questions.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, the last question on this, then: at the very least the Minister does accept he has gone over budget, does he not?

75 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I think the hon. Gentleman – who has already told us during the course of his first intervention, when he got up to speak during the debate part of this Bill, that he was not supporting the Budget and actually had something to say about this particular head – knows that his view has already been fixed; in other words, has told us, 'Whatever you tell me, I am not going to vote to support this Bill.'

80 He made up his mind having seen the Bill, having had 70 or 80 days with the Schedule to the Bill, which is the book, and having heard my speech and indeed the speeches of the Deputy Chief Minister and the Father of the House. He has since also heard the detailed speech of the Minister which set out our views in respect of this – which are, I accept, totally contrary to his views, and that is not just in relation to the debate on the appropriation, it is in respect of this particular matter.

85 I must say he is the only one, Mr Chairman, who has always refused to attend the mega concert with tickets provided by the Government. All other Members opposite have at different times accepted or not accepted access to the Government hospitality at the mega concert; he has set out his position very clearly. And now he is asking us further detail on that which he has already told us he has made up his mind specifically – the mega concert – in respect of a vote

90 generally, which he has already determined is going to be negative. The Minister, rightly, has pointed him to the speech where he dealt with this matter in detail, and the level of detail that he has given I think is actually a great level of detail.

The hon. Gentleman comes back and asks him what he thinks is a black and white question: one line is your budget line, the other line is your actual line – did you pass your budget? Well, 95 Mr Chairman, if it is a question which is that simple – is it one is  $x$  and the other line is  $x$  plus one? – he is looking at the number and he knows the answer. If he wants to know behind that why the estimate was  $x$ , aka the Budget, and the result is  $x$  plus one, he refers to the hon. Gentleman's speech and he has there the details.

100 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, obviously they will continue to refuse any reasonable requests from this side of the House to account for their actions and their overspends, since they evidently do not particularly care to explain it to the public. But can I ask the Minister who is responsible for the concert: this coming year, 2018-19, is it going to be in exactly the same format as last year in terms of days, performers, performances, the agents? Everything will be 105 identical – is that correct?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, the Government does not refuse to answer questions – we sometimes even answer questions which are not reasonable questions – but the hon. Gentleman has prefaced his question in Committee with a preface that is entirely wrong.

110 The Government is not refusing to answer questions or provide information in respect of this or any other head. In fact, what the Government is saying is that in the Minister's Budget speech he has given a great amount of detail as to the specific line in the Estimates Book that deals with the issue of the mega concert, but now to follow up that question, which he has made with a preface that is totally contra to reality, with a question that asks what is going to happen this 115 year is to demonstrate that the hon. Gentleman does not just not have an interest in the mega concert when we are in this House – he does not have an interest in the Government statements in relation to the mega concert. The Hon. the Minister for Culture has held a press conference giving details to the general public – many of whom have not just welcomed the change but have already got their early-bird tickets – setting out the detail of the dates, how long the 120 concert is going to go on for, the format of the concert, and indeed the general public now know many of the artists who will be appearing in respect of their concert this year.

So I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for saying that we do not want to give information in respect of matters on which we have given a huge amount of information, so people can judge that when he accuses us of not giving information there is actually a lot of detail in the public 125 domain about that; and second, in respect of something which everybody who has an interest in the concert and any member of the general public, himself included, has access to.

Mr Chairman, to say that we are not transparent because we will not come back here to repeat to him the things we have said to the whole world is, I think, an excellent demonstration that his definition of 'transparency' is like his definition of 'deficit': the opposite of what the 130 ordinary meaning of the word means.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, may I? I have been, in the past, to the mega concert at the invitation of the Government. I stopped going in 2016 when the overspend was £1.5 million. That is one of the reasons why I stopped going; there were one or two others – in fact, I was 135 persuaded by my hon. Friend Mr Clinton.

Is this a particular head of expenditure where the Government expects, as the mega concert continues, there will always be an overspend and it is very difficult to actually keep it within a particular budget?

140 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I am very grateful that the hon. Gentleman has put the question as he has – and, in fact, in the context of doing so, instead of provoking, actually provided information. We now know why it is that he has decided not to come to the mega concert. It is not something he has rationalised for us before and I am grateful to understand it. I am afraid I add that to the list of things that he has allowed himself to be persuaded of by the Hon. Mr Clinton, where he has been led up the garden path by the Pied Piper analogy that I was developing during the course of my rather devastating intervention yesterday. (Interjection and laughter)

Mr Chairman, if I may say so, with respect to the hon. Gentleman, again I do not think he has followed the logic that we have put before the House in respect of this. As the mega concert develops, and in particular in the relationship that we have with MTV, we expect the cost versus value and benefit to be reduced, and income ... Now, the concert has to develop. There is a period over which we will see the ability to bring more people into the facilities where the concert is held. It may be held in facilities beyond Victoria Stadium in future, not just in one location. The value that the mega concert provides in terms of advertising for Gibraltar also increases. The hon. Gentleman in his speech provided a breakdown of the advertising value that is represented.

One of the reasons we think it is unfair to just look at the number in the line that is before the House is that you do not factor into that line the income that the concert generates, first; and second, you do not factor into the line the advertising value with the MTV deal. We know that there have been differences in respect of that, and so we have tried to assist the House by narrowing down, as the hon. Gentleman did in his speech, the value that we quantify in respect of the mega concert in a way that is scientifically calculated at the cost to the Government of the advertising that we would have incurred as cost if we were not having the mega concert. When you do that equation, what happens is that the cost starts to become a much smaller aspect of the event on the day in the context of the value. So, actually we expect the whole thing to move in a different direction. We expect to be more on budget to therefore see what the hon. Gentlemen opposite call 'overspend' come down and the value go up.

I think in that case, if he wants to review his decision to attend the mega concert as an invitee of the Government he might be able to quickly spin some logic which allows him to do that as quickly as he has spun the logic he has tried to spin today to explain to us why it was that he changed his practice – although of course it does show the House that he accepts that he made a mistake, given how he was dealing with the matter early on and then decided to change the way that he was approaching it.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Chairman, just in relation to a point of clarification in relation to the question we have asked, we have asked a question about the overrun, and that was asked specifically by Mr Clinton. I know it has been answered by the Hon. Minister and the Chief Minister has explained that as well, but just to be clear, insofar as the last two events in which I have personally accepted invitations from the Chief Minister, on both occasions commitments were made personally by me to two charities. I just want to make that very clear before he suggests that in some way we are supporting it. Two financial contributions and commitments have been made by me to two separate charities.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Chairman, I am very pleased to hear that, but I am very surprised that he should decide to tell us that two years after he made the first contribution to the charity. But look, I would have expected that he wants to contribute to charity not just in September of each year but that he should do so every month without needing to tell us. Most of us who contribute to charity do not advertise it, but I think it is absolutely right that he should do so and that he should not take the value from the taxpayer in respect of attendance at the concert for granted without providing some additional value in the context of what he does at the concert – which is to come and be entertained. Whilst Ministers spend the day entertaining others and working with gaming company executives and insurance company executives etc., he just comes to be entertained.

195 I am very pleased that he makes a contribution to charity. He should not think that he is the one who does so, although it is now clear he is the only one who wants to tell us that he does so.

Mr Chairman: The Hon. Lawrence Llamas.

200 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Chairman, I am trying to analyse the figures. If the £2.5 million which was appropriated for 2017-18 was done at the time when the contract had been already awarded to MTV and Neon Angel, and the total value of the marketing and the social media outlets and all that is £1.2 million, that would bring it up to £3,796,926. Where is the difference between that and the £4.4 million that is being paid out?

205 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, again I refer the hon. Member to the speech that I gave, in which I also explained not only the value but certain costs that were done last financial year for the concert this year. I went through it all. It is in my speech.

210 Mr Chairman: Any other question?

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Chairman, just one final question then: is it right to say that the contract was for £2.5 million but then MTV wanted to add an extra £1.9 million for marketing and monetary value for what they consider is value for money for Gibraltar?

215 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, he can assume all he wants but it is very clear in the way I explained it and therefore I still stick to what I said. And anyway, I said what I said and then the hon. Member voted against, so whatever I have said he has not wanted to take it. I have explained it and therefore he can assume all he wants. Whether the contract was £2.5 million or ... that is not correct. What is correct is what I said and my explanation, and I stick to that, Mr Chairman.

220 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, just to clarify, the hon. Gentleman's assumption is wrong, and to connect it to the hon. Lady's remarks in her Budget speech, they are wrong to think that the expenditure that they see in this year relates just to this year and to last year. In fact, there is expenditure, which is what puts us beyond the budget, which relates in some instances as far as three, four and five years ago in respect of those pioneers that the hon. Lady wanted to refer us back to, where we are still receiving invoices in respect of this particular line of expenditure – which we consider to be quite bizarre but which relates to this line of expenditure.

230 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, that is a very interesting comment by the Chief Minister. Is he able to quantify the element in that £4.4 million which relates to, as it were, old invoices?

235 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, they have told us that they are going to vote against it, whether they have an understanding and appreciate the detail or not, so I am not prepared to do the exercise. Neither do I know that this is finished, because of course in the immortal words of Donald Rumsfeld, we don't know what we don't know, and therefore we don't know what invoices in respect of earlier years we have not been provided with yet because of the difficulty we appear to have in respect of those earlier years.

240 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: I am really sorry if this comes across as a little bit ignorant, but are we then to expect that each column is not necessarily dealing with the year in question but backlogs from other years?

245 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, the actual column sets out the amounts paid in a particular year, so that for that you have only amounts paid in the particular year, but the payments may not relate to services actually provided in that year.

Let me take a different example for the hon. Lady, just so that then we transpose it to here. In fuel cost, fuel companies are much better at invoicing the Gibraltar Electricity Authority, so you expect to see that your 12 months of fuel cost in your actual column is what you paid for. 250 They are likely to be a month before the year and until a month before the end of the year, so you are paying 12 months, usually with 30 days' credit. In the context of this particular head of expenditure, you are seeing actual payments in the context of the financial year we are reporting on which do not relate to the financial year we are reporting on or indeed the financial year before, because we have been presented with invoices due and allegedly due in respect of 255 earlier years.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can he just give an example of that? I can understand that in certain sectors ... and, in fact, listening to what the Government has to say on this just reminded me that when I came back from the UK, for 10 years I had this situation with legal aid in the UK because 260 you are paid on account and sometimes then seven years later you would have a recoupment of the money that you had been paid because you had been overpaid, and that carried on for about 10 years. But of course that is legal aid. I just cannot think of an example in relation to this that would involve the presentation of invoices four years down the line. Could he give an example? 265

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, all invoices that one would expect to receive in some instances have been received out of the year in which they should have been received. For example, security invoices have been paid in years other than the actual year; services provided by 270 organisers – other sorts of services that have been invoiced in years other than the years in which they have been provided.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, just to give an anecdote, we have got an invoice from 2015 of a Dorito forklift that was used (Laughter) from 2015, and we got it this year.

275 Hon. Chief Minister: It's too delicious an anecdote! (Laughter and interjections)

Clerk: Head 47, Sports and Leisure; subhead 1, Payroll.

300 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, can I ask for your guidance? The section in 2(1)(a) under Contribution from Revenues Received – I know the revenues part then comes later on in Appendix J. That, combined with total additional contribution, comes to £5.491 million, which 305 coincides with the total expenditure shown in J – that all tallies – but since there are two distinct heads for one named the Contribution from Revenues Received, which shows an estimated increase and so on, is this the correct moment to ask the Minister how come we are relatively confident to predict that extra income from that section?

310 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, although again the hon. Member is not interested in the book, but is interested now, the revenues are coming from advertising. We are trying to see if we can get advertising revenue and we are going to increase the space where we advertise. And not only that – we are also charging now for events that happen around the periphery of what is the Bayside complex. For example, the MUGA area, which has traditionally been used by others, 315 which has come to a cost to the Government because it is all right for a privateer to come and do a concert there without paying a single penny, taking all the ticket sales and all the sponsorship themselves, and then we are left with an actual bill. The bill is the overtime of the people who have to open and close, the cleaning of the venue, the wear and tear. All that costs money, so what we have done is we have a regime in which we put the cost – we even add a 320 small profit, which is revenue, and then people can come and use it. That is why we expect this year to get some more revenue.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Chairman.

It does help to clarify the position much further. Can I take the Minister up on a further 325 example he has given me, similar to the MUGA? I know under the allocations made for community-use facilities – for which he kindly gives me a schedule, I think twice a year – there are allocations given to particular groups that then advertise on a commercial basis. Can he confirm I am correct in assuming that they themselves are now expected to make a contribution for the use of those facilities?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, absolutely.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, just to show that I am interested in the book, irrespective of what ... I even congratulate the Minister for having taken that initiative of imposing those 335 charges. Well done. (Interjections and banging on desk)

Hon. S E Linares: Thank you.

Hon. N F Costa: Come on! One vote!

340

Mr Chairman: Other charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 48, Financial Services; subhead 1, Payroll.

345 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

350 Clerk: Head 49, Gambling Division; subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

355 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 50, Commerce; subhead 1, Payroll.

360 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

365

Hon. T N Hammond: Sorry, Mr Chairman, I am just –

Mr Chairman: Yes, on Other Charges?

370 Hon. T N Hammond: I think so, although it may be under Payroll because I am slightly confused about the way the book is set out.

I am just looking at the establishment initially and I see that there appear to be four new posts created within the Department: a Chief Officer (E-Services Innovation), a Director of Strategy and Plans, a Director of Commerce, and an administrative officer. I can find two of those roles at the back of the book but I cannot find the Director of Strategy and Plans, so I cannot see a salary associated with that role.

375 I do note that under the personal emoluments in this subhead we do have a rise from the forecast outturn of the last financial year to the estimate for this year of nearly £½ million, which I assume is accounted for largely by those four new roles, but can the Minister confirm that that is the case – that it is down to those four new roles – and can he direct me to where I can find the salary of the Director of Strategy and Plans?

380 Hon. A J Isola: Yes, Mr Chairman, the roles are all transfers from other Departments. The Director of Strategy and Plans – I cannot direct him to the specific page, but what I would say is that the person is no longer with us, so the position will not be there this time next year, and the other positions are all internal transfers.

So yes, the amount that he is looking at in 1.1 is indeed that different transfer from other parts of the book into this one.

390 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, I am trying to use a bit of ex-civil servant logic. If the incumbent is no longer there, like the Minister has just said, and if we have no intention of replacing him, then why does it appear on the 2018-19 position? If what he is really saying is it is vacant and perhaps one may be appointed to that particular position, then on what page, could the Minister let us know, can we find what that salary scale would be?

Hon. A J Isola: Could you repeat that?

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I am trying to say that although I understand that that member of staff is no longer there, if in the establishment provisions for 2018-19 that position is catered for, it 400 means that at some stage, when Government deems fit, someone may well be appointed into that position during the year. He certainly will have the authority from this. Therefore that post, if it is advertised, should carry a salary scale – which we cannot find – towards the latter part of the book.

405 Hon. A J Isola: Yes, Mr Chairman, if it helps, the person was previously the Captain of the Port.

Hon. T N Hammond: I thank the Minister for that answer, Mr Chairman.

410 Can I just clarify? Doing a quick calculation, the increase in the amount for the personal emoluments in the 2018-19 estimates is £465,000. From the remaining salaries that actually are added to the Department of Commerce, we appear to have £101,000 for the Chief Officer (E-Services), we have £85,000 for the Director of Commerce and £31,000 for the administrative officer. That is £217,000, which still leaves us significantly in excess of £200,000 short to explain that difference. Can the Minister explain where the remainder is currently to be found?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Chairman, give me a minute – I do not quite follow the numbers.

The hon. Member has said there are, according to this, four new positions – and you have added them up to £200,000? The Captain of the Port was £128,000. (Interjection) Well, the Captain of the Port is, as I have said already, the Director of Strategy and Plans; £101,000, Chief Officer – that is £229,000. I need some help from – (Interjection) Yes. Director of Commerce ...

Mr Chairman, the number that it relates to is actually the total of seven people, which are five from the Ministry and some from Commerce as well – two from Commerce.

If it helps, the Chief Officer of E-Services last year was under Minister Licudi's head. He is our respected senior officer and he works for both of us, but this year he has been moved over to my book from my colleague's book.

425

Hon. T N Hammond: Okay, I thank the Minister. So the increase is down to seven posts. It is just that overall, in the summary, we have an increase of four posts, the majority of which seem to be either just movement within the IT Department, different gradings, and the rest are those posts that I described previously, one of which apparently no longer exists anyway so perhaps should not be in the 2018-19 estimates – I am not absolutely clear about that. So I am not quite sure where the book describes these seven new posts, when the summary total is for four new posts, of which I can see those four new posts under the Ministry but no new posts under Commerce.

435

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Chairman, I think the easiest way to explain is if you get, under establishment, the five from Ministry and the seven from Commerce and you add those up, you have 12 people, which you add the Payroll for Ministry and Office of Fair Trading, those two combined is the 12 people referred to on the previous page.

440

Hon. D A Feetham: And you are keeping the post of Captain of the Port – that is not changing, is it?

Hon. A J Isola: Captain of the Port comes under my hon. Friend's Ministry and his responsibility – and absolutely, yes.

445

Hon. D A Feetham: It's being redefined? He says, no.

Mr Chairman: Head 50, Commerce, Payroll and Other Charges stand part of the Bill.

450

Clerk: Head 51, Postal Services; subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

455

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Hon. R M Clinton: No – (Mr Chairman: Sorry.) Sorry, Mr Chairman. Under subhead 2(3), Outgoing Mail and Bulk Mailing, outturn 2017-18 pretty much in line with the estimate of £100,000; the estimates for 2018-19, £550,000?

460

Hon. A J Isola: It almost looks like a lie, doesn't it, Mr Chairman?

I think the provision there is for delayed payments in respect of terminal dues, which from previous years have taken some time to come through to us and being processed. So there is a provision there of £450,000 to deal with terminal dues from previous years.

465

Mr Chairman: Is there any other question?
Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 52, Gibraltar Audit Office; subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

475

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 53, Gibraltar Regulatory Authority; subhead 1, Payroll.
Subhead 2, other charges.

480

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: That concludes clause 2 of the Bill.

We now move to clause 3 of the Bill and we move to page 165 of the book.

485

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 55, Contribution to Government-owned Companies; head 1, Contribution to Government-owned Companies.

490

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 56, Transfer from Government Surplus; head 1, Payment to Social Assistance Fund Import Duty Transfer from Government Surplus.

495

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 57, Contribution to the Improvement and Development Fund; head 1, Contribution to the Improvement and Development Fund.

500

Mr Chairman: The small sum of £43 million can stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: That concludes clause 3 of the Bill.

We now go to clause 4 of the Bill and we go to page 164 of the Estimates Book. Head 54, Supplementary Provision; subhead 1, Supplementary Funding.

505

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, I was advised yesterday that the new post for Commissioner of Sustainable Development comes under this supplementary funding. The post itself is not detailed as one of the Government officers in the back of the book, so there is no salary associated with that post. Could the Minister advise what the salary for that post is?

510

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, the book was published on 30th April and the appointment of the post that the hon. Member is referring to happened subsequently and therefore could not be specifically identified post publication.

515

Hon. T N Hammond: That is fine, but can the Minister provide ...? I am assuming, as I have been told, it is coming out of the supplementary provision. Can I understand what amount is coming out of the supplementary provision for that post?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Whatever amount has been agreed should come with that post.

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: It is already in the book, anyway.

Hon. T N Hammond: The post is within the Minister's Department, I understand. Is the Minister not aware of the salaries of the people within his Department?

525

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Actually, the straight answer is no, I do not look into the particular salaries of people in my Department or any other Department; that is not part of my brief.

Hon. T N Hammond: As part of your annual budget, surely it is of some significance – going forward as well, not just in this year.

I would have thought there is nothing secretive. It is a public post and it is being paid for by the taxpayer. I would just be interested to know. Moneys have been allocated under supplementary funding for that salary and I would just like to know what the salary is, so I can add it, in my own notes, to the list of public salaries at the back of the book.

535

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, let's just be clear. What we are trying to say here is that this is a salary that is not reflected in the book this year but will be reflected in the book next year. That is the point that we are making. And the reason it is not reflected in the book this year is because the person who has taken the post took the post after the book had gone to the printers. So it will not be coming out of supplementary provision next year; it will be coming out of the general provision. There will be a specific item in the personal emoluments head of the relevant Department.

540

The hon. Gentleman should understand that the Ministers do not get involved in issues which relate to salaries. The salaries are the salaries from days of parity, brought forward with the relevant pay rises calculated, and now parity plus, and the concerns that I shared with the House about how relativities had been broken relate to how that will change in the future as the result of a review. But we do not agree salaries with people, for that reason, and I think that is why the hon. Member is telling me he has not got the information. I do not know whether the information is somewhere. We may be able to provide it to him – it is not something that we are able to tell him like that, but we may be able to write to him and tell him what the salary is after today. I think that is better.

545

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, I have no difficulty in that, but it is not included in the book. It is not included in what is before us today, but I am very happy to share that with the hon. Member either in correspondence or in reply to a question in this House.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, the only point I would make is that whilst I am being told it is not in the book, it is not specifically as a line in the book but it is in the book in that that salary is being taken from the supplementary funding, which is in the book – which is what I was told yesterday. If it is otherwise, if it is not being taken out of the supplementary funding, I am assuming that there will be a supplementary appropriation for that salary.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, it is being taken out of the supplementary funding because that is what the supplementary funding is there for, and so when you have instances like this, that is in effect where the money will come from for the period. It is not something that will come from supplementary funding year on year. We are not entitled to say to the hon. Gentleman – it would not be the right accounting practice – ‘Well, this salary is not provided for here; we are going to provide it for good from this head.’ That is not the case. It is only because of the timing, which I explained to him before, that there is not specific provision in the back of the book and that it is not provided for out of its relevant head, which I think will be the Environment head next year, and so it will be provided out of the Personal Emoluments head next year and it will be provided for somewhere in the back of the book in the appropriate way, depending on the method of employment etc. It would not come out of supplementary funding otherwise, so it will not come out of supplementary funding next year. That is the point I am making to him.

Hon. T N Hammond: I thank the Chief Minister for the answer.

If I could then ask the Minister, when he has an opportunity, to drop me an email perhaps with that salary. I would very much appreciate it. Otherwise, I will ask questions, but if he could consider that I am asking a question on that particular salary at this point in time, I would appreciate his response.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, there is no problem at all.

The reason it is not in the book is because the post happened after the book was published. That is the only reason. As the Chief Minister has explained, it will come out of supplementary funding. There could not be a line because there was not a line to put in at the time of going to print.

However, I will facilitate that information – if I may ask the hon. Member to drop me a reminder on Monday, just in case it slips my mind. I do not want him to then enter into an exchange on Facebook about it.

Mr Chairman: Anything else?

Supplementary Provision, head 54, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: That concludes clause 4 of the Bill.

We now move to clause 5. This is at page 168 of the book. Improvement and Development Fund Expenditure.

Head 101, Works and Equipment; subhead 1, Works and Equipment.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I may, Works and Equipment, (1)(a) Education, Refurbishment, Education Facilities and Equipment, £2 million – can the Minister confirm that that £2 million will cover all the works and equipment required for all 8 new schools?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, is the hon. Gentleman asking about the existing schools?

605 Hon. R M Clinton: No, Mr Chairman, I am asking whether there is any provision in here for educational facilities and equipment for the new schools in this line.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Chairman, then I am further flummoxed because the hon. Gentleman has told us that one of the reasons he is not voting for the Budget is because there is not provision here for the 18 schools – so how can he ask us that question now, unless he was dishonest in what he was telling the House when he was presenting his speech?

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I may, by way of explanation, what I am asking here is in terms of equipment. What he has made patently clear is the cost of construction is not in this book, but – giving him the benefit of the doubt – it may be the equipment is in the book.
615

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Chairman, in that case, if that is what he is asking for, then he is having a problem with his trends again, just like he had a problem with his trends when he was doing his speech.
620

If he looks at the amount spent in 2016-17 and the estimate and actual spent for last year and the amount spent for this year, isn't it obvious to him that this is just in respect of the existing facilities?

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, I am very grateful to the Chief Minister for that straightforward answer, but then given that at least one school we know of is due to open this financial year, being Notre Dame, and given that that will obviously require equipment, is he telling the House that he will be paying for it or providing it through corporate vehicles? Is that what he is telling the House?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Chairman. He is making the assumption – and he has had a problem with his assumptions in the past 48 hours – that there is no equipment available in the existing school, that our children in the existing Notre Dame are in empty classrooms, that nothing is going to move from the existing Notre Dame to the new Notre Dame and that the material in the existing Notre Dame is also not up to the standard required when the new Notre Dame opens – and he is omitting any value ascribed to the additional £200,000 provided.
630
635

Hon. E J Reyes: Have you finished, Roy?

Hon. R M Clinton: Yes.
640

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, on section (m), the contribution to the Sports and Leisure Authority, I see there is an estimated reduction of £240,000. Although I hope I am right in presuming that there may be less cost in respect of what we have always referred to as pitch 1 and pitch 2 in respect of football facilities which are now leased to the GFA, it does seem that for the upkeep of the remaining facilities – and it is the Sports and Leisure Authority, so am I correct in saying it not only includes what we put under the nomenclature of Bayside Sports Centre but also other areas that come under the Sports Authority – almost £¼ million seems to be quite a big setback. I do not know how we are going to be able to maintain the facilities which we all so gladly rejoice are of good quality.
650

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, the hon. Member must also consider that the maintenance is being done. As I explained in my speech, there are savings from the maintenance and therefore it is capital and minor works and we are doing it with people internally, and therefore it would be on the running cost, as opposed to the capital expenditure. So there will be savings there.
655

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, also, of course, the fact that the new facilities will be opening. That is coming and therefore if you are going to open new facilities you may spend a little less on maintenance of existing facilities which are going to be demolished. The hon. Gentleman has seen the GFA's plans, which involve the demolition of some areas, so amounts that we might spend in maintaining the old sports hall, for example – the old sports hall is now going to be demolished. You will do certain things but you will not invest the amounts that you would have put in with your routine maintenance. Every year you put in an amount of routine maintenance and the time will come now when that routine maintenance goes because we are moving out of the old sports hall in short order.

660

Mr Chairman: Is there any other question on head 101?

665

Hon. E J Phillips: Yes, Mr Chairman, just in relation –

670

Mr Chairman: Works and Equipment? (Hon. E J Phillips: Yes.) The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: In relation to (o)(ii) Rock Safety, Coastal Protection, Retaining Walls and Demolition, could the Hon. Minister explain the increase from £½ million to £750,000? We assume it is in relation to assessments arising out of the recent rock fall.

675

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, yes, that is correct, it is to do with the recent rock fall at Devil's Tower Road and also to damage caused by the recent storms this year to Camp Bay revetment.

680

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, just for my clarification, I did not notice ... Under (o)(iv) we have Road Maintenance and Resurfacing and a budget of £850,000. I know we have not come to head 102, but we also have Highways Resurfacing Programme. Can I ask the Minister what the difference is between the highways resurfacing programme and the road maintenance and resurfacing?

685

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, head 101 – the initial one the hon. Member just mentioned at £850,000 – covers contract maintenance works, and these include works to roads like road markings, traffic signs, pelican crossings and after-hours requirements. Whereas head 102 is directly related to resurfacing works for roads and does not include the other items such as crossings, speed ramps and other matters related to our roads.

690

Hon. T N Hammond: In which case – and I do thank the Minister for that response – the title of (o)(iv), Road Maintenance and Resurfacing, is slightly misleading perhaps.

695

Hon. P J Balban: Well, there is partial resurfacing to address the state of the roads. If, for example, there are potholes, then there is an element of resurfacing either the pothole itself or a small-area apron around it, and that does also include resurfacing of various minor quantities.

700

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Chairman, could I just ask, under item (i), the increase in the estimate from £1.1 million to £1.9 million – if I could have an explanation as to why the sharp rise?

705

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Chairman, there is a whole list of works that will come out from the capital projects, which of course the hon. Gentleman obviously will not be supporting, and relates to, for example, the new children's PCC, the new ambulance building, a new MRI project, an entirely new theatre – and I am really quite surprised that the Hon. Mr Lawrence Llamas in particular will not be voting in favour of the Budget, because I know that these are projects that are close to his heart.

Hon. Chief Minister: Put Gibraltar first!

710 A Member: Shame!

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, in relation to Works and Equipment (z), Launches and Customs, there is a provision for £1,000. I cannot see how a launch for Customs is going to cost £1,000. Can he just – 715 A Member: It's on eBay!

Hon. D A Feetham: Is it? Not even on eBay I do not think you could get a launch for £1,000 – although I do not know what 'launch' means in this context, I have to say! (Interjection) It is an inflatable dinghy, yes, that's right!

720 Can he just give more information about that? Is that a bid by Customs effectively for a proper launch and there is just a nominal token provision of £1,000?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, we had, during the course of the day yesterday, the opportunity of clarifying for hon. Members what it was that a line with £1,000 in it meant. It is a token, as has historically been the case, put in when we open a head for the purposes of determining whether we can progress with a project. And so of course the £1,000 is not because a launch is going to cost £1,000, but because we are committed to continue to upgrade the resources available to our law enforcement agencies.

725 He knows that we are the first Government to have acquired bespoke assets for our law enforcement agencies at sea. We acquired two interceptors for the Royal Gibraltar Police and two large vessels for the Royal Gibraltar Police, which they put to very good use in the summer months in particular, and for the Customs Department we have acquired two interceptors. There is now a need to consider the possibility of a larger interceptor vehicle for Customs and that is a process that has commenced, with the Collector of Customs leading on that with those in his Department who understand the costs and the type of requirements that they have. I do not know whether it is going to be possible acquire it in this financial year or indeed whether, if it is acquired in this financial year, we will be required to pay all or a part of the cost of the vessel. There may be a need for a deposit or there may be a need for the full amount to be paid. Whether the vessel is going to cost £100,000, £800,000 or more than £1 million, that is something that is determined once we have made the assessment of the vessel that we need to procure, but we need to be ready to make at least a deposit payment perhaps in the context of the timings that we are considering.

730 Hon. D A Feetham: It is a new ship rather than [inaudible]

Hon. Chief Minister: This is, therefore, for a new acquisition, given the answer I have given him, yes.

750 Mr Chairman: In the days of the House of Assembly, an item such as that would have a footnote 'Token'. That seems to be a practice that has been discontinued and which I suggest might still be relevant. It is not for me to decide; I just make the point that that is how it was done in the past.

755 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I certainly do not recall having dropped a term like 'token provision' in my time. I think it is just that it is clear to Members that £1,000 in the context of this head is a token provision and it is a token provision also in the recurrent head, unless you are dealing with a head which in a Department might be £1,200 total. For example, printing equipment, toners, etc. might be £1,200 one year or £800 the next; £1,000 there might not be a 760 token, it might be an estimate, and we do not put in less than £1,000 anyway. But in the context of these pink pages in particular, £1,000 is a token. It is literally – as I explained to hon. Members quite exhaustively when dealing with the point when it was raised by the Hon. Mr Clinton – accepted practice that we open a head with £1,000, which is therefore the token.

765 Mr Chairman: Any other question?
Head 101 stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 102, Projects; subhead 1, Roads and Parking Projects.

770 Mr Chairman: Any questions?
Stands part of the Bill.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, the GIS development on roads and parking projects, head 102 – that is (1)(b): what is GIS development?

775

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, that is the geographic information system which I referred to in relation to civil contingencies. It is in my speech.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am afraid I must have missed it.

780

Mr Chairman: Let's move on then.

Hon. Chief Minister: That is also a token.

785 Mr Chairman: Subhead 1 stands part of the Bill.
Subhead 2, Relocation Costs. Any questions? No. Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 3, Reclamation Projects.

790 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I may ask, the £600,000 provided for the estimate for 2018-19 – which reclamation project does that relate to? Is this the project for the rock pile by Coaling Island?

795 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, this is in relation to various reclamation projects, so the reclamations project – plural – head is the head that is always available not just in respect of one reclamation but a number of reclamations. It is the cost of investigatory works done etc. It is the cost of, in some instances ... It is not revetment repairs, because I seem to recall there is a head for revetment repairs, but there are some parts which require not a revetment repair but an additional small reclamation to shore up existing reclamations, and that all comes out of the 800 Reclamations Project head.

Mr Chairman: Any other questions on that?
Stands part of the Bill.
Other Projects – and there are a number of pages.

805

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, the –

Mr Chairman: Still on reclamation?

810 Hon. D A Feetham: No, 102.4.

Mr Chairman: Other Projects. As I say, there are –

Hon. D A Feetham: I beg your pardon.

815

Mr Chairman: – two or three pages.

Clerk: Subhead 4; Other Projects.

820

Hon. E J Reyes: May I, Mr Chairman? On (4)(a) the heritage building refurbishments, I know Dr Cortes referred to the Nun's Well and so on – I want confirmation that that £40,000 is, for example, in relation to that, because there is a small decrease from last year. I know it is led by whatever one programmes for a whole year, but is that to be taken as a heritage building since Nun's Well comes under Heritage but not necessarily a building? I am a bit in limbo.

825

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, sometimes I can work wonders with money but on this occasion that is included there.

The hon. Member will see that there is a provision this year of £30,000 for Garrison Library, which was not present last year. So approximately, taking (a) and (g) together, they are £70,000, which is quite similar.

830

Reassessing the priorities this year, there was a need to do some refurbishment work in the Garrison Library, so we decided to allocate that there specifically, so it is quite open and transparent. That is more or less what has happened there. We have divided it into two, but we wanted to ring-fence one particular amount to the Garrison Library, which has not had work done there for some time.

835

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Chairman, and I wholeheartedly support the Minister in ring-fencing that amount.

Am I right, in deduction, that the news given by the Minister that works will be undertaken for Nun's Well – would that a priori come then as part of that £40,000 or will that be a separate subheading?

840

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: That is the intention. It is going to be a fairly inexpensive amount of work that is being done, so that will come out of there.

845

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, just referring to subparagraph (b), the climate change and renewables, I notice there has been a steady decline in that particular budget. Given the Minister's speech and commitment to renewables and additional solar panels, is the Minister satisfied that that amount is appropriate, bearing in mind in previous years – and certainly in 2016, when less seems to have happened in that area, actually – we had an expenditure of £180,000 and now we are down to £40,000. And I was listening to your speech, John.

850

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, the hon. Member knows that I will never be satisfied when it comes to spending money on the environment, so that is a question that he need not ask.

855

But no, seriously – (Interjection) Actually, I did not hear that, which is probably just as well. I am not even going to ask. No idea. Hansard will report. Mr Chairman, the good thing is that climate change and renewables have now been assumed by many other Government Departments and projects and therefore the influx of funding that we needed in our first years following our election success in 2011 in order to get us out of the time warp that the previous administration had left us in in relation to climate change and renewables was needed then, but now there are many other Departments who are working ... Sport, for example, is doing a tremendous amount of work, some of which will be announced today in relation to the Island Games in regard to renewables; the GEA is also working and we are also working with private 865 entities on PPAs and so on, and therefore the amount of funds that had to come out of this was considerably less because so much else is happening.

870 Hon. Chief Minister: And there is an important point additionally here, Mr Chairman, which goes to one of the things that the hon. Gentleman said in his speech, which is far from the fantastical allegation of cronyism that the hon. Gentleman made, which has absolutely no foundation in reality, what he is seeing in these estimates is that there is a saving to the taxpayer in the contracts that are being entered into by the Department with private sector entities that are providing the solar panelling themselves at no cost to the taxpayer. And so it would be entirely wrong for the hon. Gentleman not to realise that in effect what we have been able to secure is investment at no cost to the taxpayer in respect of the capital value of the installation of solar panels.

880 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, (4)(j), Main Sewer, if you look at the right hand column: £175,000 for actual, end of 2017. Then you have an estimate of £600,000 for end of financial year 2018 with a forecast outturn of £300,000. And then for this year there is an estimate of £750,000. That indicates that the Government envisage that some more substantial works would be done to the main sewer, but those have not been done during this financial year and they are going to be done next financial year. Am I right in that assumption?

885 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, yes, this is due to a delay in awarding the tender and it has spilt over to the next financial year. That is why the figures show in this way.

Hon. D A Feetham: The tender for what?

890 Hon. P J Balban: There is delay in awarding the tender for the works to the main sewer and that was to do with the relining of the sewer. So, because the works were not completed in the last financial year, they have run over to this financial year and that is why it seems as if the £600,000 which was estimated for 2017-18 was not fully spent, and that is why it has increased for 2018-19 – because it includes the underspend for 2017-18.

895 Hon. D A Feetham: In other words, it includes work that has been done for 2017-18 but has not yet been billed or paid, or not billed or paid during that financial year?

900 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, it is works still in progress, so the ex-works, part of which were carried out last financial year and there are obviously more works to be done which will be carried out this financial year. That is why it appears that it has not all been spent, but part of it is included in the 2018-19 figures.

Mr Chairman: Are there any other matters that Members wish to raise?

905 Hon. R M Clinton: Certainly, Mr Chairman, yes. Under subheading (i), Wellington Front Infrastructure, I am just curious what that refers to because I was under the impression, and there was no forecast outturn last year, that that project was complete. I am presuming something has happened in the interim period. What infrastructure works would those be at Wellington Front?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, if I may assist, if he looks, there are two heads: one is the development and the other is the infrastructure. The development has finished, it is zero; and the infrastructure and works that were done originally, which still have not quite finished, are to do with the flooding of the whole area.

915 The hon. Member must have complained at the time because we were opening the roads, and we were putting dust all over the place, in order for the pumps to be extended towards the sea front whilst all the works were ongoing. That has now cured the whole of the flooding of Wellington Front, so that is probably the finishing off of that project.

920 Mr Chairman: Any other questions? The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Chairman.

Moving to head (zb), the Island Games Facilities, £5 million spent 2017-18, £14 million estimate for 2018-19, giving a total spend to the end of next year of £19 million, can the 925 Minister advise if included within that amount of £19 million are the accommodation blocks? I cannot see even a token head anywhere under Other Projects and certainly there is nothing under any other project that I can see under Other Projects.

Can the Minister confirm that, in terms of the original intention that the £16½ million from the GFA will cover the cost of the Island Games facilities, from that basis he would seem to be 930 already £2½ million over the anticipated cost?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, again the hon. Member does not seem to have listened to the Chief Minister in his reply when he says that we still do not quite yet know where the finances of the student accommodation will come from – and I am not going to repeat it. The moneys of the 935 Island Games are not for the student accommodation, that is a completely separate place, and the hon. Member is wrong in assuming that the £16.5 million that we got from the Victoria Stadium we are now on overspend, because there is a business model to the whole of the Island Games and all of the projects that we are doing, including the £16.5 million.

Hon. R M Clinton: I thank the Minister for his answer – in which case, then, given what the Chief Minister said about opening a head for projects here, I would be grateful perhaps if the Chief Minister can explain why there is not a head here in the book for those accommodation 940 blocks.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, because, Mr Chairman, in this instance it was not needed. In this instance there was no need to add a head here because we thought we were going to fund it through here. We were always clear that those accommodation blocks were not going to be funded through here; those were going to be funded through the corporate structure.

I think, as the Hon. Minister has said, it is important that the hon. Member understands that 950 in the context of the sporting facilities, as I said in my response yesterday – I do not know whether this was the part when he was reading that magnificent weekly publication that appears on Thursdays, the New People, (A Member: The truth.) which I recommend to anybody listening – that there will be other aspects of the sporting facilities that will produce income. And so it is not that the £16.5 million is the only amount available; it is that the £16.5 million and the 955 projects themselves produce income and therefore more money is available to spend on the projects and on the construction.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I thank the Chief Minister for his answer, but given what he has just said – I believe I can quote him accurately – that he thought that the project would not 960 be funded through here, otherwise it would appear here in terms of the things that would be funded here ... in which case is there – and I use this word hesitantly – a double dip here, in that we have (zzi) New School Projects, £1,000? Was it that the school projects are meant to appear here and there was a change of mind and now it is going through the corporate structure, or is it a failsafe just in case you want to use some of the Improvement and Development Fund? In 965 other words, Mr Chairman, is there any intention of putting any cost through on head (zzi) for the schools?

970 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, it is that in relation to the schools it is possible that some of the preparatory work may be charged through the I&D before it is transferred to a corporate structure that will be set up for that purpose. So there may be some expenditure here in respect of the new schools, whilst there will be no expenditure here currently envisaged in respect of the accommodation that has been referred to.

975 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I am really grateful to the Chief Minister for his explanations in this area. I will ask him this question, and if he does not have the information at hand I will ask the question in a future session: which corporate vehicle or which corporate vehicles are being used for the school projects and/or the accommodation block? Is he able to give us that information today? If not, I will ask that question at another session.

980 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I do not have the information. I am quite happy if he asks, as he knows we answer these questions. I am surprised, however, that he puts it in the context of this debate, because he has just told us he is voting against this book on the basis that we do not provide information on the corporate structure. He has asked the question and I do not have the answer – I have told him I will give him the answer, but I think that gives the lie to the theory on which they have based their vote.

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, Mr Chairman, one of the main problems that I had with the book and why I said it was the signing of a death warrant was not because of any deficit in the Improvement and Development Fund but because precisely there is no provision in here, other than a token £1,000 for the schools.

990 Mr Chairman, could I make a request of the Chief Minister, in his capacity as Finance Minister, in future Estimate Books to include the full organogram of corporate structures? As we know, it comes out in the published book but not in the Estimates Book that is presented to Parliament.

995 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I do not recognise what he has now said is the reason behind their decision not to vote for the book and his now, in my view, quite changed definition of the reasoning behind the language of the death warrant and how the flawed logic of the hon. Gentleman ... having tried to develop in his speech in respect of the Improvement and Development Fund.

1000 I hear his request, Mr Chairman.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, (4)(zo) and (zp) – apologies if the Minister for Justice referred to this during the course of his no doubt magnificent speech, I may have missed this particular part, but on installation of CCTV cameras, where is the Minister intending to install new CCTV cameras, or is that the replacement of existing CCTV cameras for new ones?

1005 And then this question of the criminal justice integrated IT system – what is that? I have never come across that before.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, I am afraid that I have to tell the second Minister for Justice that the moneys being spent here are in relation to the CCTV system in the Prison, which unfortunately proved to be so unreliable that we had to lock, stock and barrel replace it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Shame! You were the one responsible. Shame! (Interjection)

1015 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, unreliable when the second Minister for Justice put it in there – that is what I said.

1020 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, first dedicated Minister for Justice. (Laughter) But just let me drill – (Interjection) That’s right. The greatest Gibraltarian of all time had to be the first. (Interjections) I have to say I marvel every time that the Chief Minister uses the phrase ‘greatest Gibraltarian of all time’, which is not a phrase that I used – greatest Gibraltarian of our time, but every time he uses that phrase he looks at the hon. Lady, every single time.

1025 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: A private joke.

Hon. D A Feetham: Ah, a private joke.

Hon. Chief Minister: About you! (Laughter)

1030 Hon. D A Feetham: I am glad it is about me; I would be very upset if they were not talking about me.

1035 Mr Chairman, I do not quite understand that. If the CCTV cameras were so unreliable, the ones that we installed, and this was a project that was completed in 2010 – I think it was; it may have been the beginning of 2011 – why has it taken seven, nearly eight years for those CCTV cameras to be replaced?

1040 Hon. G H Licudi: Because for a while we were labouring with that system and trying to get that system fixed and repaired. In the end, it ended up proving more costly to constantly try to upgrade and repair the system and the view was taken that the system was just so unreliable that it had to be completely overhauled.

Hon. D A Feetham: And it is being overhauled this year?

1045 Hon. N F Costa: It should be finalised in this financial year.

Hon. D A Feetham: The Hon. the third Minister for Justice said from a sedentary position that he was responsible for this criminal justice integrated IT system. Could he just remind me what that is?

1050 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, we are all in a sedentary position, so it would have been rather inappropriate for the third Minister for Justice to spring to his feet and reply.

1055 The Hon. Mr Licudi would have, I am sure, during the course of his Budget contribution at the relevant time advised the House about the Cyclops system, which is an integrated system, and I myself gave quite a few details in the course of my last financial year’s speech on Justice, and all the details regarding that speech –

Hon. Chief Minister: They haven’t been listening for years.

1060 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, this is the system that connects all the various agencies that work in the criminal justice system – Police, courts, Prison, Government, legal officers, Customs – into one general IT system, which prevents the duplication of manual entering of all the different data, so that when one piece of information is added at the beginning, that information is available generally to all users of the system. And, for example, when somebody goes through the courts system and a decision is made, then the court records that in that system and then that is available both to the Police and the Prison Service. So it is an integrated system in that way.

Hon. D A Feetham: And that is being replaced this year?

1070 Hon. N F Costa: No, that is entirely different. No, that is being completed because it is a completely new system that we put in place, and which I worked on for a while, so this is probably now the last stages of that system.

1075 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Chairman, just a general question in relation to a number of subheads. In relation to (4)(zk), Statue for late Sir Joshua Hassan, again the criminal justice integrated IT system, the new school projects hot lunches and the Jewish Home, are these – just for clarification – projects that remain uncompleted and just carried over each year? Is that right?

1080 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, these are projects that are rolling forward. For example, on an issue like lunches there may have been expense; it is running up to a decision as to how they are going to be provided.

1085 In relation to the Jewish Home there are ongoing and now very advanced negotiations, which I hope will be able to produce a result which will be a magnificent facility for the Jewish community, which has, if I may say so, allowed us a lot of leeway since we were required to vacate the facility that they have, although we do provide the facility now in a bespoke floor of the John Mackintosh Hall and the old St Bernard's on the top floor. But I think that what will be provided as a result of the negotiations will be even better than what we envisage the Government will be able to do, and it is in partnership with others.

1090 Statues require design etc. and it is not something that sees the light of day in one financial year. Obviously the Hon. Mr Feetham would be delighted if there was the statue of somebody else here, I assume, but we are only providing for one for now.

1095 Hon. E J Phillips: I am grateful for that explanation and I appreciate the fact that clearly there have to be technical issues with some of these projects, and indeed further consultation particularly in relation to hot lunches, and that clearly is going to be tied up with the new schools project and how advanced that will become in due course. But I am grateful for that answer.

1100 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, I note that there is a provision at (zzd), Laguna Youth Club, and that is £50,000. There is nothing here on the forgotten club – Varyl Begg Social Club. Does the Government not envisage in this financial year making any kind of financial expense in relation to the Varyl Begg Social Club?

1105 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Chairman, I am afraid that the hon. Gentleman provokes me into explaining to him once again, almost at the length that I did yesterday – but don't worry, Mr Chairman, I will resist – how they fail to understand the book.

1110 I will try and explain it to him in this way. The Varyl Begg Social Club is presently in one place. It has to move to make way for the magnificent two new schools that are going to be provided; therefore, it is going to be put somewhere else. That is usually called a relocation and we have just talked about the head that provides for relocations.

1115 Hon. D A Feetham: What I asked, Mr Chairman, was therefore that this is not going to involve a rebuilding of anything – in fact, my understanding from the answers to questions about a month ago was that there was going to be some kind of temporary structures that were going to be erected in order to house the Varyl Begg Social Club, and then in the longer term you would look either to relocate somewhere else – and I suggested that it was going to go to Chilton Court – or alternatively build something else. Am I still right in relation to that? My understanding is that this is going to go in Portakabins somewhere in Varyl Begg, for which I would have expected therefore some kind of expense to appear here. I could be wrong.

1120 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Chairman, this is the point. The erections are provided for in the context of the relocations budget and there are more things in heaven and earth than are thought of in his philosophies of where we might put the club in the future.

1125 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I may ask, just for clarification, under (zr) we have an Urban Wastewater Treatment Plant, and then under (zzb) we have a Waste Treatment Facility. I wondered if the Minister could explain the difference between the two.

Hon. Chief Minister: Water, Mr Chairman.

1130 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: One is wet and one is dry, exactly. They are going to vote against the difference between wet and dry anyway. One is the sewage, the waste water; and the other is the solid waste, like refuse.

1135 A Member: So you would be the wet one. (Laughter)

Hon. R M Clinton: I thank the Minister for the explanation.
So the £20 million contract would be in respect of (zr) – is that correct?

1140 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The Urban Waste Water Treatment Plant is (zr), and if the contract he is referring to is for the urban waste water treatment plant, then that is correct.

Hon. R M Clinton: So, Mr Chairman, I take it, as there is no expenditure here, that the Minister is proposing to use the corporate structure for this contract – is that correct?

1145 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: That is a possibility.

Hon. R M Clinton: But, Mr Chairman, you have already, presumably, signed the contract. You must know at this stage how you are going to do this.

1150 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: We have signed the pre-contract; we are working on the contract. We know how we think we are going to do it, but that is it – we know how we think we are going to do it.

1155 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, with reference to (zd), the Bathing Pavilion, is that a provision for a new bathing pavilion or is that repairs or other works to the existing pavilion?

Hon. S E Linares: These are repairs to the bathing pavilion, which had a big battering with the strong weather that we had this winter, and these are damages which we need to fix.

1160 Mr Chairman: Any other questions? No.
Head, 102, Projects, stands part of the Bill. Subhead 4 stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 102, Projects; subhead 5, Equity Funding/Funding.

1165 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I note there is a token provision for the Gibraltar International Bank Ltd. Does the Government intend to use that this year as opposed to the GDC?

1170 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Chairman, I think the hon. Member can expect to see that line open now and in future in case there is ever any need to inject any more capital at short notice because the regulator may require.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I am grateful to the Chief Minister for that answer.

1175 I am not sure this is even a subhead; I guess this is an expired line for the University of Gibraltar. By the zero for 2018-19, just to confirm my understanding then, that the Government will not be providing any further capital equity funding to the University.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, the hon. Member is really a glutton for punishment. (Laughter) This has been explained to him again and again, and he even raised it yesterday under head 43.

1180 Having explained it at length, we went from a position of the hon. Member, specifically in relation to the £1.4 million, saying, 'Well, how was I to know of the £1.4 million?' to me demonstrating that he should have known because it is in the book that he looked at, and to the Chief Minister demonstrating that he actually did know because he raised it specifically in last year's Budget during the Committee Stage.

1185 During that interchange which the Chief Minister read, it was clear that the explanations that were given to him and the explanations that had been given by me in the past – and I really do not understand how the hon. Member still does not get it – were that we allocated £10 million originally, which we came to this House to debate and we appropriated for the University, of which approximately, we envisaged, £6 million would be for the initial costs, including mostly 1190 capital costs, and thereafter approximately £2 million a year for operational costs. And last year, because there was £1.4 million left over and this was structured, the £10 million in terms of the payment to the University was structured through the Improvement and Development Fund, even though we knew that some of the items that the University would be spending it on would be, for example, salaries – recurrent expenditure. But we structured it as a capital expense of 1195 the Government by funding the operational expenses of the University in this way – and the hon. Member knows it, and therefore the hon. Member knows that this includes not just capital but operational expenses, which includes the recurrent expenditure.

This year, the £10 million has been expired and the whole of the contribution by the Government is under head 43, I seem to recall, which is a contribution of £1.5 million to the 1200 University. That is for the University's operational expenses, and as the hon. Member will know, operational expenses of the University will probably be almost entirely recurrent unless there is a major capital project, but will inevitably involve an element of capital expenditure by the University. For example, if the University wants to buy a chair and a table, that may be a capital expenditure by the University, but it is coming out of Government's contribution to the 1205 operational expenses of the University year in, year out. That is why it is zero this year under the Improvement and Development Fund, because the £10 million have been entirely spent by the Government as a contribution to the University, including the £1.4 million that was given last year, and this year the contribution by the Government is under its recurrent head because we do foresee that there will be a recurrent need for the Government to make a contribution to the 1210 University. But that does not mean that the entirety of the £1.5 million will be spent by the University exclusively on recurrent expenditure. There may be an element of non-recurrent expenditure – for example, the example that I just gave him – and that is the way the Government has structured the payments to the University so far and the payments going forward, which I expect will now be seen under head 43 or the equivalent head from this year 1215 onwards.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 5 stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: That concludes clause 5 of the Bill.

1220 We now move to clauses 6 and 7 of the Bill. I believe an amendment to clause 6 has previously been circulated.

1225 Mr Chairman: May I point out, in respect of clause 6, that some amendments have been circulated substituting some figures, some of a typographical nature. Members have received notice of all these. I propose that they be approved. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Those amendments are carried.

Clerk: We now proceed to consider clauses 6 and 7 of the Bill.

1230 We turn to page 180 of the book. We commence with the Gibraltar Development Corporation, Appendix B.

Mr Chairman: Do any hon. Members have any questions on the Gibraltar Development Corporation?

1235 Hon. R M Clinton: Yes, Mr Chairman. Under the capital of accounts of the Gibraltar Development Corporation we have two items of expenditure which we are aware of and the loan from a Government-owned company. Is the Government in a position to identify the company that has lent £30 million to the Gibraltar Development Corporation?

1240 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I do recall the hon. Gentleman saying that one of the things he was trying to persuade the community of was that it was proper for him not to vote in support of these estimates because they did not disclose any of what was going through the companies – and yet, of course, he himself is pointing us to the disclosure there of funding through Government-owned companies of this £30 million, which we had already disclosed in 1245 the course of the discussion at Question Time and which is there in the book.

As I told him before, Mr Chairman, if he wants to write to me, I will give him the name of the relevant company.

1250 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, I will respect the Chief Minister ... I do not recall having asked him for the name of the company, but I will raise it by way of question in the next session.

Mr Chairman: Gibraltar Development Corporation, Appendix B, stands part of the Bill.

1255 Clerk: Borders and Coastguard Agency, Appendix C.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Gibraltar Electricity Authority, Appendix D.

1260 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Housing Works Agency, Appendix E.

1265 Clerk: Gibraltar Health Authority, Appendix F.

1270 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Chairman, I note under Recurrent Payments, number 11, Relief Cover, there was a provision last year for £2½ million and then they have gone over budget for £5½ million. Given that there has been such an overspend, which is actually in line with the actual for 2016-17, is it safe to say that the Government is underestimating the relief cover that they will require for 2018-19?

1275 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, the hon. Gentleman asks me whether the relief cover vote is sufficient given that we overspent in the last financial year, but if he were to look at the personal emoluments section he will see that it goes up from £44 million to £47 million and therefore we expect to be able to continue to fill in as many clinical and other vacancies as possible, thereby reducing the need for relief cover.

1280 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Chairman, I note also in item 26(2) the cost for the Paediatric Centre, which is £570,000. Is that the annual cost or is it an apportionment for the financial year?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Chairman, it will be an apportionment for the financial year.

1285 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Chairman, does the Minister for Health have the actual figure for what it will cost on a yearly basis?

1290 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, as I replied to the hon. Gentleman, that amount relates to an apportionment for this financial year. We have a very good idea of what the annual recurring cost will be. I do not have that figure with me, but I would be more than happy to provide it to him at the next session of the House; or, if he cares to write to me, I will email him that information.

1295 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Chairman, with regard to Item 42, for 2017-18 there was a provision of £1 million. It went up to £1.67 million, slightly lower than the actual for 2016-17. There is a provision again for 2018-19 of £1 million. Is it being underestimated, or is the Minister trying to fund this expenditure through another head? Perhaps I am not seeing it.

1300 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, I will ask the hon. Gentleman not to press me on the issue, save to say that this is a matter that is very much under active discussion with a particular company.

1305 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Chairman, I would like to ask why the Director of Human Resources and the Clinical Systems and Information Manager are being basically removed from the complement of staff from the GHA.

1310 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I gave a detailed explanation in my response, I think yesterday in relation to one of the heads that we were discussing, that the policy of the Government has been to consolidate all of the human resources officers across the non-Civil Service public sector, and one of the areas which attracts the most number of non-Civil Service public servants and which therefore had a human resources facility was the GHA. That facility is being pooled with the others also, and that therefore explains for the hon. Gentleman why it is happening.

1315 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Chairman, can I ask why the reduction in complement from seven to five in respect of senior biomedical scientists? On page 201, sorry.

1320 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, if he goes a bit further down he will see that biomedical have gone up by two. It goes from four to 6.5, Mr Chairman.

1325 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, I am just curious as to why, under subhead 35, Insurances and Claims, the Government seems to believe that there is going to be an increase in that particular expense of nearly £½ million, from £1½ million to almost £2 million. Is there any particular reason? Is Government anticipating any issues in this area?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, that relates to an increase in the premium because we have increased the cover for the GHA.

1330 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Chairman, just in relation to the same question, I note from 32 that there is a provision for compensation and legal costs – pretty obvious what that means – but in relation to 35, heading ‘Insurance and Claims’, does that figure comprise not just the premia and the increase in it but also any settlement of any claims that did arise but were not covered by the insurance policy?

1335 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, in answer to the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition’s question, it relates solely to the premium. The cover has increased from £7 million to £10 million and we are in discussions to increase from £10 million to £15 million.

1340 Hon. E J Phillips: The only point I was making is I did not really... Because it said ‘Insurance and Claims’, I would have thought that there may have been settlement of claims outside of policy.

1345 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Chairman, I appreciate the point that the hon. Gentleman is making. In the past, that subhead in particular had insurance premium or premia and claims. Given the way the book has been done, it remains with that title.

1350 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Chairman, if I can turn to the capital account under payments, works and equipment of £1.13 million to £1.9 million, can the Minister advise if that increase is in respect of the works on the new Paediatric Centre, or is it just other items that are generally required?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that I gave when we were discussing the pink pages. It is exactly the same answer.

1355 Hon. D A Feetham: Returning to the premium, does the Government envisage there is going to be a decrease in payments, in the level of the premium, as a consequence of the proposed changes to the level of damages that... well, the Damages Act that the Government is now proposing to introduce?

1360 Hon. N F Costa: I did not get the question – sorry, Mr Chairman.

1365 Hon. D A Feetham: The Government is proposing to change the law in relation to general damages in personal injury cases, involving obviously also medical injury cases or medical negligence cases. Does the Government envisage that the insurance premiums are going to go down as a consequence of the change to the legislation?

1370 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Chairman, the hon. Gentleman needs to understand what it is that we are doing. What we are doing in the Damages Act legislation is keeping the law as it is. In other words, we are ensuring that the ratios, the interest etc., payable in Gibraltar remain in respect of the same guidelines as are applicable in the United Kingdom. And so therefore we expect everything to remain the same. If we did not change the law, there would have been a sharp rise potentially in these costs.

1375 Mr Chairman: Any others? Yes?

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, can I just come back to that, because what he appears to be saying is that if the law were not to be introduced the Government could face a higher premium charge in relation to the insurers, particularly in relation to the GHA. That appeared to be what he was saying.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Chairman, I am not saying that.

The hon. Gentleman needs to understand what the consequence of Mr Justice Jack's decision has been, which is to create huge uncertainty for insurers – and the Government is an insured, not an insurer. What all insured would have found is that the uncertainty created for insurers as a result of the decision of Mr Justice Jack might have meant that all premiums for all insured, not just the Government ... Himself, as a motorist, and everybody else who takes insurance in our economy, whether it is legal professional insurance, personal injury insurance or any insurance, might have seen premiums in Gibraltar disconnected from premiums in the United Kingdom because damages and assessment of damages and the Ogden table and other relevant indicia of calculation of damages were being disconnected potentially for Gibraltar by the uncertainty created by the judgment of Mr Justice Jack.

Mr Chairman: Anything else?
Appendix F stands part of the Bill.

1395

Clerk: Gibraltar Health Authority Elderly Residential Services Section, Appendix G.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Chairman, under item 10 there is a significant increase in relief cover. Can the Minister explain the position and why he envisages such an increase?

1400

Hon. N F Costa: Well, actually, Mr Chairman, if the hon. Gentleman were to look at the actual of 2016-17, he would actually see that the relief was £3.2 million. Therefore we have used very much our endeavours during the course of this financial year and he will see that there is a huge reduction in the forecast outturn of this last financial year just passed, and we estimate that the relief cover that will be required for any instances where relief cover is required will come in at about that amount.

1405

He will also see that, in terms of personal emoluments, the figures have gone from £9 million estimate 2017-18 and £8.2 million of 2018-19.

1410

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Chairman, with regard to the dementia residential facility, the estimate for 2017-18 was £2.2 million and the forecast – (Interjection) Number (31), the Dementia Residential Facility. Right! It's on page 209. The estimate was £2.2 million, the forecast outturn was £2.4 million, and now it is estimated to go up in 2018-19 to £2.8 million. Is that in line with the agreed contract signed with the contractor, or is there anything...?

The same question applies, actually, for (33), so he might want to reply to both, given that both are on the rise.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, that is only because the opening was during the course of a financial year and this is for the full financial year.

Hon. L F Llamas: That is fine.
Now, with regard to (33), that was actually opened in the financial year 2016-17.

Hon. N F Costa: Because it was transferred from the GHA, so now it comes under ERS.

Hon. L F Llamas: But the first year, 2017-18, which was its first financial year as the day centre, was a full year – I believe it opened in March 2017 – so the £900,000 was the estimate for the full financial year of 2017-18, but the outturn for 2017-18 is higher than the £900,000, and then when you go to the GHA, because it is being transferred, it is going up again to 1430 £1.2 million. So basically, the first year to run was £900,000 and now we are going up to £1.2 million.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, as the hon. Gentleman knows, because he has asked me for it 1435 in the past, he will recall that Bella Vista was opened in phases, so it was opened in January and it was only for the first floor, and then as time progressed we opened the second and the third floor.

I would like to point out that the hon. Gentleman has not asked me about the John Mackintosh Home, where he will have seen a fantastic saving for the three floors, as opposed to the two.

1440 Mr Chairman: Appendix G stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Care Agency, Appendix H.

1445 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Gibraltar Port Authority, Appendix I.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1450 Clerk: Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, Appendix J.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, may I? Under subsection 17, the Europa Gymnasium, as a past 1455 civil servant, I understand and am well acquainted with the £1,000 token figure, like the Chief Minister explained before. In this particular case, instead of being £1,000 it is £2,000 that was put on last year and this year. Can the Minister confirm that this is still a token figure, albeit twice the provision made in other estimates, and that he still has no definitive plans in respect of costs or whatever he intends to do with the building?

1460 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Chairman, it is great to see that we do not pay the amount that we used to pay, and therefore we have gone down to £2,000. And, as the hon. Member rightly says, the forecast outturn is zero, so we are not paying anything now, whilst before we used to have to pay £12,000 every year. We have put another £2,000 because we reckon there might be 1465 some invoices that could come, and also to do with the fact that the GSLA will be giving allocations in the gym. It will be part of the community sports use and there could be certain costs, which are minor, up to the figure of £2,000.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Chairman.

1470 I understand that part, that there could be certain costs – there could be certain income, based on what was said before. Does the Minister know where the income ... albeit small at the moment, is that accounted for in the revenue question part that I asked before, or is there a separate head for whatever income may be coming from the Europa Gymnasium, seeing as it has got a subhead of its own in respect of expenditure? It does not come under a big heading but is identified by itself. In respect of income, does it have an identification of its own?

1475 Hon. S E Linares: If the hon. Member is referring to the income of the Garrison Gym ... Is he referring to income directly from the Garrison Gym? No, the income from the Garrison Gym should go to rent, because they are paying rent to the Europa Football Club for the parts that they are occupying. What I am saying is that the £2,000 is related to the whole of the gym.
1480 Remember there are two spaces. There is the one where the mezzanine is and the clubhouse, which is now Europa Football Club, as opposed to the gym which everybody is going to use. So there could be some cost and I envisage there will probably be something like electricity and things like that.

1485 Mr Chairman: Appendix J stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: We have now finished with clauses 6 and 7 of the Bill.
We now move to the Schedule. Parts –

1490 Mr Chairman: May I remind hon. Members that also notice of amendments was circulated to Part 4 of the Schedule, two small amendments, and also a consequential amendment to the explanatory memorandum, though there is no requirement to vote for that.
So, the Schedule stands part of the Bill.

1495 Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

BILL FOR THIRD READING

Appropriation Bill 2018 – Third Reading approved

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

1500 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the Appropriation Bill 2018 has been considered in Committee and agreed to with amendments and without any lies, and I now move that it be read a third time and passed.

1505 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for and Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 31st day of March 2019 be read a third time and passed. Is a division required?

Hon. Chief Minister: I call that the House should divide.

1510 Mr Speaker: Call a division, please.

Several Members: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Use of electronic devices

Mr Speaker: Before I invite the Chief Minister to move the adjournment, there is a matter I wish to bring to the notice of Members and there is something I think needs to be placed on record.

1515 In Parliament, we form part of the essential services. We are working here fairly late on a Friday evening whilst not everybody may be. I have circulated to all hon. Members a copy of an email that I have received. It is the first time I have done that. I do not intend to create a precedent – I will not be dealing, obviously, during the proceedings of Parliament with any email – but it does raise a number of matters which I think it would be very useful if I were to explain. I do not know how many members of the public will be watching the proceedings this afternoon, given that there are certain French-Uruguayan affairs going on at the same time, but it is important, I think, if only for the record, and then if necessary I will invite the Chief Minister and the Leader of the Opposition and any other Member to add anything that they wish.

1525 The Rules of Parliament do not cover every eventuality. Not everything is covered in the Rules of Parliament: nevertheless, how we dress is not covered, but we dress with all due regard and respect for the dignity of Parliament; consuming food on the premises, as it were, in the Chamber, is not covered, but Members, other than having perhaps a cup of coffee or a piece of chocolate or what have you, do not have a meal in the Chamber; previously, from time immemorial, even before smoking was outlawed, Members did not smoke. So all those things were respected by Members without them being expressly provided for in the Rules of the House. Not in all Parliaments do you see the respect for the dignity of Parliament that we can see here.

1530
1535 Technology has advanced. The House of Commons find themselves in the same position, that laptops are used and smartphones are used by Members of Parliament. There is nothing about it in the Rules and no big fuss is made about it if Members are using a laptop ... In the days when I was a Member we did not have laptops, we did not have smartphones; it just did not happen. But today these are realities of the life in which we live, and when hon. Members use technology there is no interruption to the proceedings of Parliament and in my view there is no lack of respect either for the proceedings of Parliament that they should be doing so. Moreover, I think it needs to be pointed out that they may well be carrying out additional work, contacting their heads of Departments or being contacted by the Civil Service; they may be checking important information. We have heard during the proceedings how immediately the speeches that have been made are now available on the Government website, so you could have a Member of the Opposition actually checking what it is that the Hon. Dr John Cortes said two or three days ago.

1545 These are matters which members of the public may not be aware of, and therefore I thought that it was important that I should place them on record. It may well be that not many people will hear about it, but they are on record and therefore in the same way they will go into the record of Hansard and they can be accessed by Members of Parliament.

1550 So I thought I should clarify. Hon. Members may be sure that I will not make it a practice, but I thought that they needed to have the background as to the matters that I have pointed out. As I say, if any hon. Member wishes to add anything, I would be quite happy for them to do so before I call upon the Leader of the House to move the adjournment.

1555 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I think I speak on behalf of all Members of the House when I thank you for having raised the issue because it has been raised with you by a member of the public.

Your clarification I think is an important one and it almost stands as a ruling from the Chair to the effect that mobile electronic devices, which do not interfere with the workings of the House and which enable Members to continue to discharge their functions as Ministers or indeed as Members of the House, are therefore permitted in the Chamber.

1560 From the point of view of the Government – I am sure also of hon. Members opposite – when we are seen to be on what in the old days used to be known as our telephones, we are far from making a phone call, because obviously that would interfere with the House, or indeed playing a game. Most of us do today a fair portion, if not most of our work, on our devices. I answer all of my emails and other communications from my device, and when I am seen looking at my device I am actually continuing my work. These days I receive precious few letters on papyrus; I receive most communications electronically. Therefore, I think all hon. Members of this House, if they are on a device, whether it is a laptop, an iPad or other tablet, or on their smartphones, what we are doing is working and continuing to provide taxpayers with the service that we have been elected to provide.

1570 I do not know whether anybody else wants to say anything before I ...

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, we would endorse the view that Mr Speaker has made, and indeed endorse the view that has been made by the Chief Minister. Indeed, we continue to communicate with the outside world once we are in this Chamber, and in fact we actually communicate with each other across the floor of this House via the same devices. We would support the observations and comments made by the Chief Minister in that regard.

1580 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on that basis now I would like to end the session by thanking the members of the Ministry of Finance who have been with us in the House today – (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) there was one member from the Gibraltar Health Authority, who is no longer with us – for the magnificent work that they do to enable us to compile the Estimates Book, the good book, that we have been debating during the course of this week and ensuring that we do so with complete and utter accuracy, fairness and utter transparency, something that I observe the whole House has welcomed.

1585 It has been a pleasure to have the opportunity to lead the House through this debate on the seventh set of estimates that I have presented to the House as Leader of the House and to do so sitting next to what is in no doubt on this side of the House for all of us the persona of the greatest Gibraltarian of our time, Sir Joe Bossano.

1590 Mr Speaker, I therefore now move that the House should now adjourn to Tuesday, 24th July at 11 a.m., when we shall be able to deal with other legislation.

1595 Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn to Tuesday, 24th July at 11 in the morning.

The House adjourned at 5.36 p.m.

BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Tobacco (Amendment) Bill 2017 – First Reading approved

Clerk: Bills – First and Second Reading.

A Bill for an Act to amend the Tobacco Act 1997. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Tobacco Act 1997 be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Tobacco Act 1997 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Tobacco (Amendment) Act 2017.

Tobacco (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Second Reading approved

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

30 As everyone in this community knows, and indeed everyone in the right-thinking international community knows, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar fully supports our law enforcement agencies in their fight against illicit activity, in particular illicit tobacco activity.

In the last six years, since we were first elected, we introduced a number of amendments to the Tobacco Act and subsidiary regulations under the Tobacco Act which fully supported the changes proposed to us by law enforcement agencies in respect of tobacco licences, so that the 35 Collector of Customs has more control over licensees.

Hon. Members will also recall the introduction of new special zones, and in particular red zones in the area of the Frontier and in some of our residential estates. The introduction of these tighter controls has, in effect, facilitated the eradication of the unattractive "Matutera" style activity, as it was known, at the entrance and exit points from Gibraltar, which did 40 absolutely nothing for Gibraltar's image.

Additionally, we have also ensured that tobacco shops in residential estates have been moved on, and this has dealt an important blow to the antisocial activity that had been allowed to fester in some of our residential areas. Furthermore, in 2016 we issued a new ministerial direction to the Business Licensing Authority to discourage the issuing of tobacco licences.

45 Mr Speaker, as I mentioned in my Budget speech earlier in the session, I will shortly present the House with further wide-reaching amendments to this Tobacco Act to further tighten controls and the movement of tobacco products and to extend the reach of the Tobacco Act beyond just cigarettes.

The amendments before the House today follow extensive consultation with the Collector of 50 Customs and are designed to curb illicit activity in respect of this commodity, as well as to protect the law enforcement officers who are, in the execution of their duty, dealing with their obligations under this Act.

The essence of the amendments is really best summarised in four ways. Firstly, there is the extension of powers to search retail premises licensed under the Act without the need for a 55 search warrant. This will facilitate the enforcement of the conditions placed by the Collector of Customs on tobacco retailers and better regulate the sale of tobacco products. The amendment will also provide stiff penalties where force or violence is used against customs or police officers executing their duties under the Tobacco Act, and consequently the amendment introduces the first either way offence contained in this Act. That is to say it creates offences triable in the 60 Magistrates Court or in the Supreme Court. The amendment also broadens the action as a result of which a person may be deemed to obstruct an officer in the performance of any duty or in the exercise of any power imposed or conferred on him under the Act, and additionally the amendment introduces offences in relation to giving false information to customs or police in respect of any tobacco.

65 Finally, Mr Speaker, I will be moving some minor amendments at the Committee Stage, of which hon. Members have been given notice.

I commend the Bill to the House.

70 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, we welcome the amendment to the Tobacco Act, and of course it is important to continue to strengthen the laws to curb illicit tobacco activity. Everyone in this House is committed to the anti-smuggling agenda and we welcome the comments made by the 75 Chief Minister in relation to those four areas that he explained in relation to the Bill.

I just have one observation in relation to the amendment that has just been handed up to us now relating to the removal of 'in either a retail or wholesale in a retail licence' and I would be grateful if the Chief Minister could clarify that.

80 Subject to that observation, we would welcome this amendment.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

85 Does the Chief Minister wish to reply? (Hon. D A Feetham: Can I –?) Oh, sorry, the Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, just to ask ... Obviously, as the Leader the Opposition has said, we welcome anything that tightens up the law in this area or takes us further down the journey in relation to ensuring that any kind of illicit activity is controlled and is dealt with in Gibraltar.

90 The Chief Minister mentioned a number of objectives in relation to the Act, and I note that one of them is free access to any premises by police and customs officers in relation to licensees – but in relation to assaulting or resisting officers and obstructing officers, these are offences that are contained elsewhere and are imported into this Act? I would find it very surprising if these were not already offences elsewhere, and I just wonder whether he could clarify that. Are we effectively consolidating or importing offences that are existing offences into 95 this particular Act?

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

100 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I thank hon. Members for indicating their support for this Bill.

If I can just deal first with the point raised by the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, what this Bill does is create rights of access to law enforcement agents – principally customs officers, who are the ones most often involved in the policing of the Tobacco Act – to access premises without a warrant. Under our regime, access to premises in respect of law enforcement officials must 105 always rightly be curtailed in a way that there are warrants issued unless there is actual commission of offences at the time, so that the entry is not something which is available as if law enforcement agents were able to access any property without consent from judicial officers where relevant, unless there is a serious arrestable offence etc. set out in the other parts of our law which regulate the procedure for police and other law enforcement agents to have access to 110 premises.

In this instance what we are doing is creating the right of access without warrant, and the Collector's view is that that is required to retail premises but is not required to wholesale premises. In the original draft both types of licensees were covered, but on reflection the Collector feels that that unimpeded access without warrant is required in places of retailing of 115 tobacco, given the concerns there may be as to the commission of offences there at the sharp end, at the coalface, and in respect of premises which are open to the general public. So we are dealing with a police officer or a customs officer or other law enforcement agent having access to that place and being able to see almost in real time the documentation that relates to sales etc. That is why it makes sense for the Collector to seek that access and he has asked the

120 Government not to seek that access in respect of wholesale premises, where he is satisfied with the access already provided for in the law.

125 Mr Speaker, my understanding in respect of the offences being set out in respect of obstruction etc. is that these are required in this Act with the provisions as to offences and to the provisions as to penalties, which are set out here in a manner that is not designed to consolidate in any way but to set out specifically under this Act as the Collector has considered appropriate and I understand is advised would be most helpful to ensure that law enforcement agents are able to go about their business with stiff penalties should anybody seek to obstruct.

130 Mr Speaker: I put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Tobacco Act 1997 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Tobacco (Amendment) Act 2017.

Tobacco (Amendment) Act 2017 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

135 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Immigration and Asylum Act 2018 –
First Reading approved

140 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to make fresh provision in relation to immigration and asylum and for connected purposes.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

145 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to make fresh provision in relation to immigration and asylum and for connected purposes be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make fresh provision in relation to immigration and asylum and for connected purposes be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

150 Clerk: The Immigration and Asylum Act 2018.

Immigration and Asylum Act 2018 –
Second Reading approved

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

As the explanatory memorandum accompanying this Bill explains, the Bill updates and streamlines Gibraltar's immigration and asylum legislation, in particular by replacing the 155 Immigration, Asylum and Refugee Act 1962 to make clearer and more transparent the requirements of Gibraltar's immigration system and, looking ahead to the outcome of the United Kingdom's departure from the European Union, to provide a framework which will be adaptable for the future.

The Act is intended to provide a clear and positive framework for those foreign nationals 160 whom Gibraltar welcomes as key contributors to its workplaces and its economy, to provide an asylum and humanitarian protection regime based on the highest international standards but at the same time to provide a robust system for the refusal of entry and residence and the removal of those persons whose contribution to or whose presence in Gibraltar is not acceptable or is a threat to the safety and security of our community.

The Act comprises six parts and one schedule and I think it is absolutely timely that the House 165 should now be considering this new Act in advance of the final outcome of the current Brexit negotiations to ensure that Gibraltar's immigration system is best placed to adapt to the future. This is not just about a new immigration relationship with the European Union, but also it is about tackling the increased security requirements on all governments around the world, to 170 screen those who want to visit or live in a particular jurisdiction and to ensure that we can take effective action to exclude and remove those who represent a threat to our society.

Most obviously the Act updates the constitutional changes of the 2006 Constitution to reflect the respective roles of His Excellency the Governor and of the Ministers of Her Majesty's 175 Government of Gibraltar in the administration of our affairs, in particular in relation to immigration. In fact, we have probably relied too long on officials using out of date means of implementing our immigration law and it is timely that we should be updating our legislation now as we prepare to leave the European Union.

The new Act will set out the principles of how our immigration controls will function and we expect that the basic framework it provides will be futureproof against the changes which Brexit 180 may bring. Some changes will be relevant for those currently here under the provisions of EU law, as that will be inevitable, but there will not be any changes to the broad approach that we have been adopting until now. In fact, much will depend on the final picture of the text of the withdrawal agreement and the future arrangements between the United Kingdom and the European Union.

The extant 1962 Act has been added to over the years in a way which mixes principles and 185 detail in a sometimes confusing way, and we shall bring forward sets of rules and regulations under this new Act to give those details and set out transparently, where possible, the conditions for entry into Gibraltar and the conditions applicable to those subject to immigration control in Gibraltar, and indeed also for setting out how people exercising what we have known 190 until now as community rights can go about having their rights recognised.

The 1962 Act has been used to implement certain EU provisions, in particular the provisions of free movement of EU nationals and the penalties for those trafficking persons across the EU, and so we need to ensure that a future Act is coherent for the longer term after Brexit and that its structure is not reliant on EU provisions.

195 So essentially, Mr Speaker, we are replacing an Act that was done before we were members of the European Union and which has been adapted for the past 46 years to reflect our membership of the European Union, with a new Act that will preserve those parts of our membership of the European Union which are relevant going forward and will be adaptable to the new regimes that will apply in future as we leave the European Union.

200 Mr Speaker, Part 1 is a key innovation in the introduction of a Strategic Policy Committee to put formally into place the necessary co-operation between Government Departments on immigration issues, in particular as regards future employment requirements which Gibraltar has and the way in which immigrants to Gibraltar can contribute to our society. That is in particular set out in section 4. And given the close consideration which will need to be given to 205 the status of EU nationals working in Gibraltar and the future impact of changes of EU law on our domestic immigration system, it is the Government's current intention to ask the Attorney General to chair this important Committee.

Part 2 of the Act sets out the basic principles of the structure of immigration control. Here, our overall policy objective is to ensure that a person subject to immigration control has a clear 210 status and the opportunity to prolong or change that status at each stage of what we might call his immigration career in Gibraltar. When a person no longer has that status and if he does not leave voluntarily, the Act will provide powers for the authorities to respond to remove or ultimately to deport him. Each person I think will have greater clarity now of his or her status and of the expectations on him or her to stay within the law in Gibraltar.

215 A key provision in this new Act is the publication of Immigration Rules which will set out the Government's policy on the admission of those subject to immigration control. We have not had any such public document in Gibraltar before and my intention is to ensure that those wishing to visit or live in Gibraltar have publicly available information as to the requirements they will need to meet in order to come here. This will be at least an objective statement and will remove the 220 subjectivity which decision-making can, on occasion, give rise to in this particularly sensitive area, and these rules will be non-legislative and will therefore be capable of swift change to take account of new categories of workers and investors which it may be in Gibraltar's interest to attract. Indeed, it should be said that it may be that there will be an element of turmoil in the context of the period after we leave the European Union, and if the United Kingdom and the 225 European Union are not able to agree a settled status for future travellers or those wishing to settle between one area and the other – and that is not an impossible outcome of the period before 29th March 2019 – then these rules give us the flexibility to adapt as those issues are settled.

Finally, Mr Speaker, this second part of the Act sets out the different considerations for 230 arrival by land, air and sea, and in particular hon. Members will see that in sections 16 to 18. It is interesting to note that despite being surrounded by British Gibraltar Territorial Waters on three sides, Gibraltar has not before had specific controls on entry by sea to Gibraltar. The approach we have taken now, as we move from almost zero, is a light touch one to reflect the nature of our important maritime business, not least cruise traffic, and to ensure that the position of those 235 subject to immigration control is taken into account without being unduly burdensome.
Nonetheless, of course, we have a duty to ensure that arrivals by sea do not represent a weak link in our security and immigration controls, and provided that the arrival of a person subject to immigration control is notified by either the Port Authority, or the captain of the vessel where no port authority exists, all persons will be deemed to have entered lawfully for a 24-hour 240 period and after that can, if necessary, seek to extend their stay. That particular provision for extension is in 17(7) of the Act. A person with deemed leave may nonetheless be questioned by an immigration officer and be refused leave to enter, in which case deemed leave ceases to apply in appropriate circumstances.

245 Mr Speaker, Gibraltar's compliance with the international norms for the status of refugees and those seeking refuge is currently provided for via regulations which implement EU regulations on the subject. Now, Part 3 of the Act will set out the principles of providing asylum and humanitarian protection and largely replicates the existing EU base rules. It is, however, the Government's intention not to commence Part 3 of the Act nor those parts of this Act which provide for asylum appeals until the United Kingdom and Gibraltar have exited the European 250 Union. That will avoid the complications of overlapping provisions for asylum procedures based on EU and domestic law, given the earlier lack of domestic legislation on this very important issue.

255 Part 4 of the Act begins the enforcement aspects of the legislation. It defines precisely the categories of refusal for which the legislation provides and the rights of appeal against such refusal. Earlier legislation has provided a right of appeal only for those exercising community rights or applying for asylum. The Government has decided to introduce a general right of appeal for all applicants, save for certain limited categories which are set out in section 49, most obviously security cases but also those who have been admitted to Gibraltar for only a limited purpose.

260 Mr Speaker, the fifth part of the Act sets out a series of offences, many of which were already there in the 1962 Act, to address issues such as illegal entry, assisting such illegal entry and trafficking. These include those currently required as a result of EU instruments, but go more widely to tackle those who assist illegal immigration globally, something that all hon. Members will know is happening around us and sometimes has an effect on us. Given the pressure in 265 certain areas internationally from human trafficking of persons escaping zones experiencing war and civil conflict, this is a most important provision to ensure that Gibraltar can play its own part in tackling such trafficking should it touch Gibraltar in any way.

Mr Speaker, finally, Part 6 contains the technical provisions for repeals, for savings, for transitional and consequential amendments resulting from the introduction of this Act, and this 270 Part also includes, of course, the powers for differential commencement of the Act, which is relevant to my comments about the later commencement of Part 3 of the asylum procedures.

The Schedule is providing the powers relating to the different role which different agencies will fulfil in respect of the new Act.

275 Mr Speaker, I will be moving some minor amendments, of which hon. Members should have had notice, in the course of the Committee Stage, which are self-explanatory and which are contained in the letter which is being circulated, or has been circulated already, to all hon. Members.

280 Finally, Mr Speaker, one of the important parts of the administration of our immigration controls is the men and women of the Borders and Coastguard Agency. The Government is today appointing a new Chief Executive Officer of the agency, as provided for in section 10 of the Borders and Coastguard Agency Act 2011, and it is the Borders and Coastguard Agency that will be at the sharp end of the administration of much of the work that the new Immigration Act will require.

285 Mr Speaker, the Borders and Coastguard Agency Act 2011 was one of, if not the final Act of hon. Members opposite when they were in power, having received its Royal Assent on 5th October 2011 and having been commenced on 14th October of that year, weeks before we won the election.

290 I wish to congratulate Mr Aaron Chipol on his appointment to the role of Chief Executive Officer of the Borders and Coastguard Agency under section 10 of the Borders and Coastguard Agency Act, and I look forward to working with him in the future.

Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House.

295 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, there is much to be welcomed in relation to this legislation. It is a modernising piece of legislation that modernises an Act that was woefully out of date and indeed created very significant problems for a number of British citizens who had Gibraltarian status. Indeed, there had been a number of occasions, that across the floor of this House we 300 have debated or discussed, where I have asked questions about situations where Gibraltarian men married to foreign women were blatantly discriminated against under the old legislation because their wives and indeed their children had no right of abode in Gibraltar, whereas if you were a British national Gibraltarian woman married to a foreign man he had the right of abode in Gibraltar and indeed so did her children. So this is very welcome because it deals with those 305 anomalous areas of discrimination that existed in the old law which were harking back to our colonial past. Indeed, there are other areas in this legislation which are very welcome indeed.

Mr Speaker, before the Opposition, however, makes a decision as to whether it is going to be supporting this Bill, or indeed abstaining – we will not be voting against – I would appreciate clarification from the Chief Minister on this. When I read this particular piece of legislation, I 310 thought that – and indeed on this side of the House, the colleagues ... we discussed it, and indeed the leader of the GSD took the view that it may have been premature, because under the previous legislation, although section 7, which is the section on people who have a right of abode in Gibraltar ... If hon. Members look at 7(2), virtually all of them – in fact, all of them – relate to people with a connection one way or another to Gibraltar, and those were the people
315 who had an automatic right of abode in Gibraltar. By virtue of European law, the position was that European nationals had the right of abode in Gibraltar by virtue of the free movement provisions in the various European treaties. Of course, you could discriminate against British nationals, and that is what allowed Members opposite in the 1990s to introduce legislation which allowed for discrimination against British nationals in the job market.

In this situation now, we are aware we are effectively looking at Brexit. We do not know, but potentially none of those free movement provisions are going to be applying to EU nationals, and in those circumstances it is right that Gibraltar might say, and the Hon. Chief Minister said, 'Well, look, we have got the possibility of introducing regulations where those regulations may extend rights of abode to European nationals in circumstances where British nationals may have 320 a right of abode in European countries,' and we do not know what is going to be negotiated, although quite frankly it looks like the situation is rather pessimistic as it stands at the present moment in time. But our concern is British nationals. What happens to a British national who is resident in the United Kingdom, who wants to come to Gibraltar and reside in Gibraltar? There are very strong links between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom and we are concerned that this Act at this present moment in time may send the wrong message by restricting... And if I am
325 wrong, the Hon. the Chief Minister will explain it to us and no doubt will persuade us that we are wrong, but I think that it sends a wrong message to have an Act at this present moment in time that restricts the ability of British nationals living in the United Kingdom to come to Gibraltar and have an automatic right of abode here in Gibraltar.

I understand that of course, administratively, if there is an application here in Gibraltar the Government and emanations of the Government could decide in any given situation to allow a British national wanting to come to Gibraltar the right of abode here in Gibraltar, the right to work here in Gibraltar, but at this moment in time we certainly feel uneasy about a situation where we are restricting the rights of British nationals living in the United Kingdom to come here 330 to Gibraltar, to live here and to work here, in the way that this Act appears to us to do, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Before I call on the Chief Minister to reply, does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill? The Hon. the Chief Minister.
335

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I thought it was surprising that the hon. Gentleman would get up to welcome anything that I did without there being a spectre of a reason of trying to raise a ghost that might allow him to grab a headline. But he is, of course, as usual, going down a blind alley with a dead end.
340

There is absolutely no desire on the part of the Government to send any signal to the United Kingdom and to its citizens other than that of deep friendship and continued partnership going forward, nor indeed any intention to change the right of abode that United Kingdom born British citizens may have in Gibraltar in the future.
350

355 I have already said in the context of my speech that there is a lot that needs to be taken into consideration in coming months and years as we see what the conclusions of the discussions and negotiations between the United Kingdom and the European Union will be, and in particular the aspect that relates to Gibraltar in respect thereof. But in respect of British citizens there is absolutely no need for the hon. Gentleman to remind us of the things that were done in the context of the 1st July law, when I think at that stage he was a member of the GSLP, or a 360 supporter of the GSLP – or he used to talk about his deep connection with the GSLP and used to accuse me of not being in the GSLP, except that now he wants to say that it is something that we did.

Well, Mr Speaker, it is something that happened in the 1990s for reasons that hon. Members are aware of. It is not something that is envisaged under the provisions of this Act, it is not something that is provided for under this Act, it is not something that is the intention of the Government, it is not the policy of the Government. We have not imagined the possibility of doing it, but the hon. Gentleman has. So if he thinks that there are any grounds on which one might want to discriminate against British citizens, we think he would be wrong to think that that is an appropriate road down which to progress and we have absolutely no desire 370 whatsoever to pursue that road. Indeed, Mr Speaker, he will know that I think it is fair to say that the relationship between Her Majesty's Government of the United Kingdom today and Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar today is stronger than it ever has been.

And so the hon. Gentleman is pursuing Casper the Ghost, but he is not here in the spirit of this legislation or in the letter of it.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make fresh provision in relation to immigration and asylum and for connected purposes be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against?

380 Hon. D A Feetham: Abstain, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The Opposition abstain. Carried.

Clerk: The Immigration and Asylum Act 2018.

385 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of this Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Freedom of Information Bill 2016 –
First Reading approved

390 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to make provision for the disclosure of information held by public authorities or by persons providing services for them and for connected purposes.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the disclosure of information held by public authorities or by persons providing services for them and for connected purposes be read a first time.

395 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the disclosure of information held by public authorities or by persons providing services for them and for connected purposes be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Freedom of Information Act 2016.

Freedom of Information Bill 2016 –
Second Reading approved

400 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

Mr Speaker, this Bill delivers a commitment from our General Election manifesto.

405 The House will know that a Command Paper in respect of the Bill was published on 9th February 2015. The practice of issuing Command Papers was introduced by this Government. It provides for a formal period of consultation with interested parties and with the general public. No comments were received from anyone during the standard period of consultation provided for under the Command Paper.

410 The Bill was first published on 14th May 2015. Lieutenant General Sir James Dutton was then the Governor. The Government owes the House an explanation as to the reasons why the legislation before us today has not been taken earlier. This had been the Government's intention. I should add that the Opposition has been informally kept abreast of developments throughout this period.

415 The cause of the delay was representations that the Government received from the United Kingdom government. A number of points were raised by the UK after the Bill was first published. These arose in relation to the application of the Bill both to the Office of the Governor and to communications between the Convent and the United Kingdom. There were lengthy discussions and a number of meetings took place throughout the spring and summer of 2015. A new wording was agreed between the UK and Gibraltar governments. That agreed wording was set out in a letter to the Speaker, which amended the Bill. The Government was then asked to hold back once again, so the Bill was not taken in Parliament, and instead the discussions continued.

425 Mrs Alison MacMillan was sworn in as interim Governor on 28th April 2015. In October, the Gibraltar Parliament was dissolved to make way for a General Election. A further wording was agreed after the election had taken place. Three changes were made to the Bill: first, the current clause 13 was added, entitled 'Governor's responsibilities and communications with the United Kingdom'; second, it was agreed that information exempt from disclosure under clause 13 would not be subject to review by the Information Commissioner – it would, however, be subject to challenge in the Supreme Court; and third, the ministerial certificate clause would not apply to 430 information exempt by clause 13. The Freedom of Information Bill was then amended once again. I should add at this point that a series of comments made to me in writing by the then GSD Opposition were incorporated into the Bill at that time. It was then republished on 24th December 2015 after the General Election. The second publication of the Bill resulted in a request for even further changes from London.

435 On 19th January 2016, Lieutenant General Ed Davis was sworn in as Governor. There were changes in personnel in London as well, particularly amongst Foreign Office legal advisers. Even more discussions took place. Those discussions continued throughout 2016 and into 2017. A number of proposals made to the Government were deemed to be unacceptable. I am happy to report, Mr Speaker, that the UK and Gibraltar governments have now, for the third time, agreed the areas under discussion. Those regulate how the legislation will operate in relation to the 440 Office of the Governor and to correspondence between that Office and Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom.

Mr Speaker, this toing and froing accounts in large measure for the time that it has taken to discuss the Bill in this House. I have given notice that I will at Committee Stage move amendments to the Bill. Most of those amendments are the result of those discussions with the 445 UK and the Office of the Governor.

Mr Speaker, the United Kingdom adopted Freedom of Information legislation in 2000. This covered England, Wales and Northern Ireland. Scotland has its own separate legislation, which dates to 2002. The UK Freedom of Information Bill was moved in the House of Commons by the then Home Secretary, Jack Straw. He opened by saying:

Unnecessary secrecy in Government and our public services has long been held to undermine good governance and public administration.

450 The recognition that secrecy without justification is not in the public interest is not a novel concept. The UK, for example, debated the matter for some 20 years before the Bill was finally introduced.

If I may, I would like to address certain general principles before dealing with other matters.

455 This Bill provides a basis upon which citizens will be entitled to access information that is held by public authorities. The basic principle of the Bill is that a person is entitled to information held by a public authority. The term 'information' is interpreted widely. It is defined in clause 2 as information recorded in any form. A public authority includes not just Government Departments but also a body or person that carries out functions of public administration.

460 The second premise of the Bill is that information should be disclosed unless there are reasons requiring it not to be disclosed. Clauses 3(3), 4(1) and 12(2) speak to that general theme. In other words, as far as possible and subject to specified exemptions, information requested should be made available. The Bill makes it clear that administrative discretion should be applied in favour of the disclosure of information. There are time limits, generally one month, in which information requests should be replied to.

465 The Bill establishes an Information Commissioner and provides for the Commissioner to give advice with regard to all matters relating to this legislation. This includes the question of the listing of public authorities in the schedule. The Information Commissioner will be the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority. Mr Speaker, I have given notice that I will at the Committee Stage move an amendment to the Bill so as to replace all references to 'Commissioner' with references to 470 'Information Commissioner' in the interests of clarity.

475 The Government recognises that a successful implementation of this Act requires careful management. This is why, rather than apply the Act across the entirety of the administration in one go, the Bill in clause 3(1) provides a mechanism whereby public authorities are to be listed in the Schedule one or more at a time. This listing will take place as and when public authorities are deemed to be in a position to comply with the provisions of the Act.

The mechanism for gradually populating Schedule 1 will be precisely on the advice of the Information Commissioner. The objective is to allow for a smooth and successful implementation of the Freedom of Information regime. This process will allow the GRA to deal with the matter in a more structured way. The House should also note that the GRA intends to 480 publish guidance notes for individuals and public authorities. This will explain exactly how it is envisaged that the legislation will work. There will be presentations made to Government Departments, to other public authorities and to interested parties.

Mr Speaker, the UK Act which was adopted in the year 2000, and therefore, did not come into force until 2005. In Malta, a Freedom of Information Act was published in 2008 but not fully 485 commenced until three years later. The reason for this was because the public administration had to adapt itself to the new system. The same will happen in Gibraltar. In that context it is important to bear in mind that every Department and public authority will now have to designate an existing member of staff as a Freedom of Information Officer. This officer shall handle requests for documents submitted by the public.

Once a public authority has been listed in the schedule, there is scope for the bedding in to continue, in particular during the first 12 months after listing has taken place. In that regard, there is a power to extend the time period set out in the Bill by up to six months by regulation which may be made by the Minister.

Mr Speaker, I am grateful to former Opposition Member Mr Bossino, who in 2015 submitted his comments to the Government on the Bill that was published before the last General Election. A number of the suggestions made on behalf of the then Opposition have been taken on board and are now included in the Bill as it now stands. I am also grateful to the Leader of the Opposition, Mr Phillips. We have met to discuss the Bill and the Government has been happy to provide the clarification requested in certain areas.

Mr Speaker, a further general point that may assist the House in considering the Bill relates to the exemptions which are provided for. Most of the exemptions that are covered by the UK Freedom of Information Act are to some degree replicated, except for five exemptions which exist in the UK and which have not been included in this Bill.

The first is an absolute exemption for information which is the personal data of the requester. In the UK this falls under section 41. The purpose of section 41 of the UK Act is to require the requester to apply for information under the data protection legislation. The Bill allows for such a request, but clearly the Data Protection Act also applies.

The second exemption relates to information intended for future publication, as provided for in section 22 of the UK Act. This exemption is subject to the public interest test.

The third exemption relates to public authorities which conduct '(a) the audit of the accounts of other public authorities or (b) examination of the economy, efficiency and effectiveness with which other public authorities use their resources in discharging their functions'. The same effect can be achieved in Gibraltar by simply not listing such bodies in the Schedule.

The fourth exemption relates to communications with Her Majesty, the Royal Family or concerning honours, which is found in section 37 of the UK Act and is subject to the public interest test. Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar does not engage in such communications and to the extent that the Convent does so, the rules are applicable to the Convent.

The fifth exemption covered in the UK by section 38 and subject to the public interest test is health and safety.

Turning now, Mr Speaker, to the specific provisions of this Bill, clause 3 provides a basis for the application of the legislation to public authorities.

Subclause (2) defines the circumstances in which a public authority is in possession of information. This occurs not only when it physically is in possession of the information but also when such information is held on its behalf by another person.

Part 2 of the Bill deals with access to information.

Clause 4 is of singular importance to the ethos of the Bill, setting out as it does that access to information is a legally enforceable right. It also sets out the eligibility criteria, which is based on age – a minimum of 18 years – and on residency.

530 Clause 5 sets out how to go about making an application to access information. It places two duties on the receiving public authority. In the first instance it requires that information is made available as soon as possible and in any event not later than one month, and that the information provided shall be up to date and accurate.

Clause 6 relates to the form and format of the information, which may be specified in the request. Reasons will be provided if the request cannot be complied with.

535 Clause 7 provides for an extension of the one-month period to two months where matters such as complexity and volume are an issue. The applicant will be informed in those circumstances where the complexity and volume of the information sought requires that additional time.

540 Clause 8 provides the basis for charging for information supplied, including how to treat requests for information where a public authority requires an advance payment. The scale of fees and charges is not contained in the Bill. As is common practice, such procedural matters are left to delegated legislation and thus a regulation-making power is included. The clause sets out the circumstances under which fees may not be charged. Where there is a charge to be levied, the public authority may seek advance payment after having notified the applicant.

545 There may be instances where a person seeking information is not able to formulate a request or may not be able to formulate it in such a manner as would allow a public authority to act on the request. Clause 9 therefore creates a duty for public authorities to assist both applicants and prospective applicants to the extent that it would be reasonable to expect such assistance to be given. Particular regard must be had to instances where requests may be formulated in too general a manner. In such instances, rather than refusing a request the public authority is under a duty to seek to assist the applicant in providing particulars that would allow the authority to respond.

550 Where the wrong public authority receives a request it knows that it must be addressed to another, it must, pursuant to clause 10, forward it and advise the applicant accordingly. Where an authority ceases to exist but its functions are taken over by another, the surviving public authority is required to deal with the request. Clause 10 also provides for the procedure to be followed where a public authority is defunct and its functions have also ceased. In such cases the functions will fall on a public authority which is nominated by the Minister or, absent such nomination, on the Gibraltar National Archives.

560 Where an applicant is not satisfied with the response by a public authority, clause 11 permits an applicant to refer the matter back to the public authority in question. On receipt, the public authority is required to revisit the matter and provide the applicant with written notification of its decision. Where it accepts that it has not complied with the provisions of the Act, it must set out the next steps and the time frame.

565 Mr Speaker, Part 3 of the Bill is about providing checks and balances. Freedom of Information cannot be safely operated without these. As such, clauses 12 and 13 deal with the exceptions to the duty to disclose.

570 In clause 12, for the exceptions in subclause (1) to apply, one of the exceptions in subclauses (4) and (5) must first be identified. In the case of subclause (5) there is also a public interest test to be performed.

By subclause (2) the presumption in favour of disclosure is made the default position.

Instances warranting non-disclosure include circumstances involving personal data, unreasonable requests etc., and these are set out in detail in subclauses (4) and (5).

575 In certain cases it may not be advisable to confirm the existence of the information sought. Such cases are catered for by subclause (6), which allows a response neither to confirm nor to deny the existence of the requested information.

Similarly, clause 13 sets out two exceptions to the right to information that relate to the Office of the Governor. The first is information that relates to the responsibilities of the Governor and the second is communications of the Office of the Governor, which is intended for communication to or discussions with UK government departments.

By virtue of subclause (2), these exceptions are subject to the public interest tests.

As in clause 12(6), subclause (3) allows a response to neither confirm nor deny the existence of the information. The reliance on an exception under this clause is not the subject of review by the Information Commissioner but can be the subject of an appeal to the Supreme Court under clause 20.

As previously alluded to, personal data may fall within the exception to the general rule. Clause 14 provides further details and is to be read in conjunction with the Data Protection Act 2004 to identify the sort of data which may properly be withheld.

The refusal of a request for disclosure under clauses 12(1), 13 or 14(1) needs to be made in writing pursuant to clause 15. Such notifications have to set out the reasons, including any exception relied upon. The applicant will also be informed of the right to ask for the matter to be reconsidered and also of the possibility of applying to the Information Commissioner for a determination, if applicable.

Notwithstanding the need for greater openness, there are occasions where disclosure would not serve the wider public interest. In such cases, as is provided for in clause 16, it is appropriate for the matter to be dealt with by a ministerial certificate.

Part 4 of the Bill makes provision for redress and other matters. Clause 17 of the Bill creates an Information Commissioner, which by subclause (2) is the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority. The function of the Commissioner is to determine, upon receipt of an application to that effect, whether a public authority has complied with the provisions of the Act. The Commissioner will either not make a decision, stating the grounds and informing the applicant of the same under the right of appeal, or serve a notice on the public authority setting out the steps to be taken.

At the Committee Stage I will be moving an amendment to the Bill in order to insert a new clause 17(a). This new clause will introduce a mechanism of consultation with the Office of the Governor where a public authority receives an application for information that relates to the responsibilities of the Governor. In such a case a public authority is under a duty to consult with the Office of the Governor prior to disclosure.

Clause 18 explains the role of the Commissioner in the context of the matters contained in the Act.

Where the Commissioner needs information in order to carry out its duties under the Act it may seek this from a public authority via an information notice in clause 19.

Clause 20 confers jurisdiction on the Supreme Court to hear appeals from the Governor's decision under clause 13 and the Commissioner's decision under clause 17.

A regulation-making power is set out in clause 21.

Mr Speaker, we are breaking new ground here in Gibraltar with this legislation. This is the first time that Freedom of Information legislation will go down on our statute books. Members will know, as I said earlier, that the UK has had such an Act on its books since 2000 and for Scotland since 2002.

The House will recall that former Prime Minister Tony Blair, who was ultimately responsible for adopting the UK Act, has since described it as one of the biggest mistakes of his career. In the UK around 120,000 requests are generated each year, 60% of which come from private citizens, and the Act cost £35.5 million to implement in 2005.

On 17th July 2015 the UK established an Independent Commission on Freedom of Information in order to review the workings of the Act a decade after it came into force. It was an advisory non-departmental public body. The Commission reported in March 2016 and concluded that the UK Act was generally working well. However, it made 21 recommendations to improve clarity and certainty around the operations of the Act. The Commission was dissolved after it reported.

630 Mr Speaker, our Freedom of Information legislation, like that of the UK and indeed elsewhere, will not be set in stone. On the contrary, it is essential that the workings of the Act are properly monitored. This is all the more so given that this process will be completely new 635 both to the public and for the administration itself. This oversight of the workings of the Act will be achieved through annual reports which will be submitted by the Information Commissioner and tabled before Parliament by the Minister in accordance with clause 22. Those reports will 640 provide this House with the opportunity to assess how the system has worked and to identify any changes that may be required to the manner of its operation in the future. Therefore,
Mr Speaker, the Government is fully committed to a full review of the workings of the Act in order to assess its operation. However, we believe that it is essential to ensure that the framework is finally in the statute books in order to get that process going; otherwise, the legislation will never get off the ground.

Mr Speaker, at Committee Stage I will be moving an amendment to the Bill to introduce a new clause 23 to make consequential amendments to the Data Protection Act 2004 and subsidiary legislation. This will mean that the term 'Information Commissioner' used in this Bill shall apply to the Data Protection Act and related subsidiary legislation to ensure uniformity.

645 Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? Yes, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

650 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, today we are debating part of cornerstone GSLP/Liberal policy; that is to say the GSLP/Liberal Alliance's self-proclaimed commitment to open and transparent Government. During the 2011 election campaign the GSLP unveiled with much fanfare their New Dawn manifesto, which promised our community a new style of government. In fact, I think it was the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister who said, 'We will be absolutely implacable in the 655 pursuit of changing the political system.'

Mr Speaker, in principle, the Freedom of Information Bill, which advances open government, is welcomed by those of us on this side of the House. However we have a number of comments on the Bill, particularly the application of section 12(4)(f)(i) to (v).

660 Before we deal with those points it is worth reflecting on the fact that it has taken the Government over six years and two General Elections to bring this Bill to the House – although I do appreciate the difficulties encountered by the Government, and particularly the Deputy Chief Minister, in dealing with elements outside the control of the Deputy Chief Minister, particularly with those that emanate from London.

In their Strongest Foundations manifesto the GSLP/Liberal Alliance committed to:

legislate to create the right for every citizen to have access to all Government information under a Freedom of Information Act based on the legislation in the UK. Subject to certain exceptions, this will allow every citizen to obtain copies of any Government documents – as the Government belongs to you and should not be controlled for the benefit of a privileged few.

665 I am, Mr Speaker, grateful to the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister, who met with me in order to allow me to share our concerns about the Bill. A number of largely mechanical and specific questions that we had in relation to the operation of the proposed legislation have been answered by the Deputy Chief Minister in our engagement and to some degree we are satisfied by those responses.

670 Our overarching comment is that the Bill as currently drafted could benefit from more fleshing out, and I note what the Deputy Chief Minister said about getting the foundation of this on the statute books now – or the framework, should I say – so that we can deal with any future amendments post a workable Freedom of Information Act coming into place. I also welcome the further explanation as to the operation of 12(4)(f)(i) to (v).

675 I am told in not so many words, and it has been repeated by the Deputy Chief Minister again today, that the proposed Act will radically change the way in which the citizens of our community interact with the state and request disclosure of documents which would have otherwise not been available to the public.

680 Mr Speaker, the Deputy Chief Minister has given us on this side of the House reassurances as to the proposed Act's remit and application and further explanation as to our question on section 12(4)(f). Subject to clarification on the points that we raise in relation to 12(4)(f)(i) to (v), we will support this Bill. We have been told that it is important to ensure that this piece of legislation is added to the statute books, and to some extent there will be much learning to do and potentially amendments once we have been given the opportunity to see how this type of 685 legislation can operate in the context of our resources and existing infrastructure.

I think the Deputy Chief Minister said in his contribution in moving the Bill that this has cost the taxpayer in the United Kingdom in 2005 some £35 million, so quite clearly it is going to ... It remains to be seen what type of request we will see and how our resources will be able to react to requests of this nature.

690 In light of what we have said, Mr Speaker, and in the event that after assessing how this Bill will operate in practice, should this legislation not deliver the required access to Government documents in the way that has been promised we would expect the Government to promote amendments before this House.

695 It is clear that the architecture of the Bill currently before Parliament has some features of the United Kingdom's Freedom of Information Act 2000 but it is not entirely based on it. There are a number of critical and significant differences. Whilst we on this side of the House do not support the wholesale copy and pasting of UK legislation on our statute books, given that we are our own jurisdiction and what may be good for the UK may not necessarily be good for Gibraltar, it is right that we learn from other nations' experiences, especially in relation to nations which 700 have systems of laws that closely resemble our own.

The purpose of the Freedom of Information legislation is to confer a statutory right to access information in relation to bodies that exercise functions of a public nature. The explanatory note to the Bill before the House states:

This Act provides for the disclosure of information held by public authorities or by persons providing services for them.

705 Mr Speaker, we will advance four points. The first one we make is in relation to the very description contained in the explanatory note. The United Kingdom Act, for instance, covers three distinct bodies: (1) one public authorities; (2) quasi-public authorities, such as the BBC; and (3) publicly owned companies, i.e. companies which are wholly owned by the government or a public authority.

710 For the purposes of the UK Act, the definition of 'public authority' encompasses, for example, any and all government departments: the House of Commons; the House of Lords, which is included in Schedule 1 to the UK Act; public authorities, such as local government, a creature of statute – the Local Government Act 1972; the National Health Service; higher education institutions, such as universities and colleges of further education; police authorities; other quasi 715 bodies, such as the Advisory Council on Misuse of Drugs; the British Broadcasting Corporation I said earlier; the Civil Aviation Authority; the General Medical Council; and lastly, importantly, any wholly owned companies of a public authority or quasi-public authority.

720 Interestingly, universities are caught by this legislation. Many in this House may remember the challenges by certain redbrick universities and Oxford and Cambridge in relation to the extent to why they should be subject to Freedom of Information. No amendments or any private Member's Bill have been brought to the United Kingdom to amend that, as far as I understand the position, and they are all caught by the Freedom of Information Act in the United Kingdom.

725 Mr Speaker, on the face of section 2 of the Bill it would appear that the Government has made provision for the Minister to schedule, as described by the Deputy Chief Minister, a list of public authorities which are within the definition of 'public authority'. I have been given certain assurances by the Deputy Chief Minister that examples would include the Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation, the University of Gibraltar, the Gibraltar International Bank and GJBS to name a few. I believe that all of us in this House and the general public would welcome a further explanation by the Deputy Chief Minister in that regard.

730 I know, from our very useful meeting that we had in relation to this Act, that there was every intention, as far as I understand the conversation I had with the Deputy Chief Minister, that they would all be included, and in the context of this, Freedom of Information legislation will be scheduled, as he has quite rightly said, by the Information Commissioner – but I would reiterate our request for clarification as to the extent to which that will be operational.

735 I did speak to the Deputy Chief Minister, Mr Speaker, about an amendment that was being moved to the Freedom of Information legislation in the United Kingdom by an MP there, in which it is suggested that even private companies that are offering services to the government may well be caught by that legislation if the amendment is moved at the Second Reading in the Westminster Parliament in October of this year. We on this side of the House consider that all bodies exercising functions of a public nature as defined in the Act should be captured by the definition of public authority. As the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister will appreciate, we have set out those concerns to him at the meeting and we would welcome a further explanation as to that.

740 Mr Speaker the second point that we raise is in relation to section 12(4)(b): a public authority may refuse to disclose information which is manifestly unreasonable. In our exchange, and as the Deputy Chief Minister is aware, the United Kingdom includes provisions in its Act for exemptions where the cost of compliance of the request exceeds an inappropriate amount and a provision for exemptions in relation to vexatious requests. In relation to the former, the public authority may charge for the provision of information where the request exceeds an appropriate amount, therefore protecting the right to access information even if the request is excessive.

745 It therefore seems to us on this side of the House that the Authority could reject a request that it believes to be manifestly unreasonable by reference to section 12(4)(d). If the request for information is formulated in too general a manner it can be refused by a public authority, which would seem to suggest that this deals with subject matter rather than volume. Logically, the words 'manifestly unreasonable' must relate to volume of the request, and if that is the case we do not understand why a public authority, when receiving a request, should refuse the request on that basis.

750 The United Kingdom Act does not deal with manifestly unreasonable requests, I assume given the resources available to it. However, it does provide for the refusal of requests which are vexatious, which the Deputy Chief Minister may wish to further consider. I know that we have had an exchange on this point. The Deputy Chief Minister has made the point that we may need to see how this particular section operates in practice, given that we clearly do not have the resources available that would otherwise be available to the United Kingdom, for instance.

755 The third point, Mr Speaker, is in relation to the 20-year rule. On 27th October 2015 the GSLP issued a report and policy paper on democracy, in which they referred to the implementation of a rule to disclose historic Government documents under a 20-year rule, proudly attempting to demonstrate that they had gone further than the United Kingdom legislature. The Government also committed to working on storing many historic Government documents electronically. This will make them searchable more easily for research and disclosure purposes, and it was said 'this is also an important part of the exercise of modernising the archive material available to all'. Mr Speaker, we have asked why the 20-year rule could not be included in this legislation and I am told that it appears to be working well in isolation, and therefore there are no plans, as far as I understand the Deputy Chief Minister's position, to centralise this within any process envisaged by the current Bill before the House. Apart from the practical implication, we would have thought that the 20-year rule should be embodied in statute rather than just a mere reference in 775 the manifesto and in fact the completion of that manifesto commitment and policy, and it is right in our view to give it a statutory footing.

Mr Speaker, the fourth point and probably the most difficult point in relation to the Freedom of Information is the exemptions that are set out at section 12(4)(f) of the Bill, which provides that a public authority may refuse a request which involves:

- (i) internal communications, including communications between public authorities,
- (ii) cabinet documents (whether in draft form or otherwise),
- (iii) communications between Ministers,
- (iv) briefing papers specifically prepared for the use of a Minister in relation to a matter submitted, or proposed to be submitted to Cabinet, 780 It is worth pausing at this point and reminding the House of the promise in 2011 and 2015 General Elections. They promised access to all Government documents and copies of any Government documents. It would appear, Mr Speaker, on the face of section 12(4)(f), that this may be curtailed and it would be helpful if the Chief Minister could in some detail allay our concerns in relation to this point. It would be helpful also if the Deputy Chief Minister could clarify what documents the public could request as a matter ... as it would appear that the right to access is being curtailed by this specific provision.

785 Mr Speaker, although the Deputy Chief Minister in his contribution to the House looked at various aspects of the UK Act, including I think section 31, it should be noted that the UK does not have equivalent provision in the Freedom of Information Act 2000. The United Kingdom does, however, provide that if a request for disclosure would be prejudicial to the effective conduct of public affairs, then it can be refused – and I refer the hon. Gentleman to section 36 of that particular Act. In our view, we may be, depending on what the Deputy Chief Minister says about this point, looking down the wrong end of the telescope and restricting the provision of information.

790 Mr Speaker, in summary, what the Bill does is create an absolute exemption to Government documents listed in section 12(4)(f)(i) to (v). In our view, there should be some form of qualified exemption which protects the right of the citizen to request information and also protects the Government from disclosing documents which would be prejudicial to the effective conduct of public affairs.

800 Mr Speaker, in summary, this is an important piece of legislation for our community and we do need to get it right. We on this side of the House will support the principle and rationale behind the Freedom of Information, but we must highlight the potential pitfalls and possible lack of statutory muscle in relation to the right to access of Government documents. And I do very much appreciate the Deputy Chief Minister's comment as to the reason why we are doing it now – otherwise this legislation will never get off the ground – but we would just highlight those potential pitfalls.

805 Mr Speaker, we offer our comments in a genuine way so that the passing of this Bill does not represent a missed opportunity for this community. As proponents of constructive and progressive engagement with the Government, we on this side of the House do not wish to oppose for the sake of opposing. It is for those reasons I have articulated, and despite the reservations in some of my comments that I have had, which in part have been allayed by the meeting I have had with the Deputy Chief Minister, I can confirm that the Opposition will support the Bill.

815 The only other approach that we could have taken in respect to this Bill was to propose a motion after the Second Reading under Rule 32, seeking the committal of the Bill to a select committee of the House. But given the Deputy Chief Minister's very productive meeting with us in relation to the comments that we have got on the Bill, we thought it helpful – and we agree with his analysis in terms of getting this Bill on the statute book so that we can at least take Freedom of Information forward in a positive way – that we would support the Bill at this stage

820 despite those reservations, and therefore this side of the House will be supporting the Bill,
Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute to the debate on the Second Reading of this Bill?

825 I call on the mover to reply.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, let me say first of all I am very grateful to the hon. Member for the tone of his contribution and for his constructive approach throughout this long wait we have had to endure to bring the Bill before the House. I will attempt to answer some of his points as I go down the list here in my notes, but obviously I understand ... I will try to do that 830 in the same tone and the same constructive way in which he did it, but he will forgive me if I have to point out a few points as I go along.

The hon. Member referred to our manifestos of 2011 and 2015 and he correctly highlighted the references made there to Freedom of Information and to it being based on UK legislation subject to certain exemptions, and it is correct to say that. I think I mentioned when we spoke 835 that we had also looked at the legislation in other territories and in other jurisdictions, particularly in small jurisdictions. Bearing in mind the issues that had arisen in the United Kingdom itself with Freedom of Information and how the Prime Minister who introduced it, Tony Blair, described it as one of the worst decisions he had ever made, and the cost of implementing the legislation and the burden on the public administration, I think it is fair to say 840 we wanted to be cautious in the approach we took to this and obviously to leave the door open to a full review of the way the system has worked. I think the hon. Member has indeed understood and acknowledge that.

In the same way, I am sure he will forgive me if I point out that Freedom of Information in the Gibraltar context was not something which we had invented and this was in the GSD manifesto 845 in 1996 as something which was going to happen in that period of time –

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): You would never have guessed.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: – and then it was repeated in the 2000 manifesto as something 850 that was going to happen in that term of office, and it did not happen either. And then in 2003 (Hon. Chief Minister: Intractable.) there was a reference to ‘availability of information’ rather than to Freedom of Information. But I say this in the spirit and in the constructive way in which the hon. Member has framed his own contribution before the House this morning.

I will just go down the points the hon. Member made. As I said, I will just answer the point on 855 the six years and two General Elections: I think it was 16 years and three General Elections, or four General Elections, in their case.

The hon. Member is correct when he says that the Act will change and will evolve. It is true. That is what we expect and it is the undertaking that I have given the House, that it is something which needs to be looked at. It is not set in stone. We do need to see how it works. The whole of 860 the public administration will be involved in the implementation of this Act, depending obviously where the questions are asked, so it is a mammoth exercise and something which is completely new to the system.

The hon. Member referred to the 20-year rule and that is a totally separate process which is not included in the Freedom of Information Act. As I understand it, in the UK they have the 865 30-year rule, which is not included in their Freedom of Information legislation either. But the reality is that in Gibraltar it seems to have worked well. We have had instances of members of the public requesting specific information. I recall at the very beginning one case that came to me from a former Leader of the Opposition who was interested in specific minutes of the Gibraltar Council which involved him. That went through the system and it came to me and I 870 said, ‘Look, this is something which should be determined by the Chief Secretary, not by the political Government,' so it went to the Chief Secretary of the time. I understand the information was disclosed to the person responsible. I am not aware of... No other requests have come to me, so the system, as we understand it in terms of these historical documents, seems to be working well, so I see no reason to change that – only to point out that it is not included in the UK Freedom of Information legislation either.

I think there is also a considerable amount of online data which is available now which obviously was not available earlier, and this did not exist before, apart from the fact that the archivist himself is very involved in extracting and extrapolating information and putting that information online to allow researchers and others to have access to that information from wherever in the world they may be. I think that process is also working well, independently of the Freedom of Information legislation.

As I said, it is not based on the UK only; we have learned from others. For example, in Guernsey there is no Freedom of Information legislation. They have a Code of Practice on Freedom of Information which sets out what it is that Members should be doing but not what they have to do, and there are no legally enforceable rights. We took the view that we would go further than them.

On the point of defining the public authorities and who you include in the Act or not, this is a discussion, as he rightly says, that we had when we met. I pointed out to him that although there are a number of categories which are listed in terms of what authorities should be included, there is a reference in clause (d) of the definition which allows the Minister to actually list a person or body declared by the Minister to be a public authority, and there are some of the persons or bodies that he mentioned where we would feel this should apply. But again there is a general caveat to all of this, which is that this is already a wide enough exercise as it is with only Government Departments, agencies and bodies, let alone extending that to other entities. But as I said, it is something the Government sees happening in the future. I would not be prepared to commit to which entities that would apply to, but certainly the power is there to go as far as – or further, indeed – than the UK.

When he asked me the question, the answer the drafters provided for me is that the UK provides for full designations also in a similar way, and that in general the UK public authorities include government departments, local authorities, the NHS, state schools and police forces. It does not necessarily cover every organisation that receives public money – for example, it does not cover some charities that receive grants and certain public sector organisations that perform public functions – but the discretion is there for the Minister or for the government of the day, this Government or any other government, to take a policy decision as to who to include or not as a public authority which would then be covered by the definition of the Act.

Hon. E J Phillips: Could you possibly just give way for one minute?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Yes.

Hon. E J Phillips: I am grateful to the Deputy Chief Minister for giving way just on this particular point.

What I did raise in my contribution was the specific statutory provision available in the United Kingdom for publicly owned companies to be scheduled in the context of their legislation. I think what I asked him for is clarification as to whether that is the intention of the Government – I think it is section 36 of their Act – to include publicly owned companies in the context of Freedom of Information requests.

I am grateful to the hon. Member for giving way.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the definition of 'public authority' at the moment includes, as the hon. Member said:

- (a) government departments;
- (b) any other body or other person, that carries out functions of public administration;
- (c) any other body or other person, that is under the control of a person falling within paragraphs (a) or (b) and—
  - (i) has public responsibilities,
  - (ii) exercises functions of a public nature, or
  - (iii) provides public services, or clause (d)

– which I referred to –

- (d) a person or body declared by the Minister to be a public authority.

925 The Government has not really considered this in terms of how far we are going to go, but certainly we are going to start with all the Departments, agencies, authorities and anything that comes under that definition, but then there is the scope and the power there to extend that even further at a given moment in time should we or any future government wish to do so.

930 The hon. Member then referred to clause 12(4)(b) on the ‘manifestly unreasonable’ point. On that one, when the question was asked the drafters did agree that there is a legal difference between vexatious and unreasonable requests. That distinction is made in the UK. Section 14 is headed ‘Vexatious or repeated requests’ and includes those requests which are groundless and those which are made repeatedly by the same person. ‘Unreasonable’, in the absence of a definition, will be interpreted here having regard to the particular circumstances of the case. It could be a vexatious request in terms of the UK definition, but it could also be one where the volume is such or even the costs are such that it would not be reasonable to expect the public authority to comply. But again, I think because we are breaking new ground here, all this would fall under that area where we really need to wait and see how it works and what type of requests come in, and that would allow us to take a view as to whether this is something which needs to be tightened up in the future.

940 I think the hon. Member then made the final reference to placing the Act before a select committee. I mentioned to him when we met that I felt that would simply delay the legislation further still and that we felt it was better, as a matter of policy, to put it on the statute books and get it working as soon as we can, then be able to review it fully once we are in the position to do that.

945 Thank you.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the disclosure of information held by public authorities or by persons providing services for them and for connected purposes be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

965

Clerk: The European Parliamentary Elections (Amendment) Act 2018.

European Parliamentary Elections (Amendment) Act 2018 –
Second Reading approved

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for the European Parliamentary Elections (Amendment) Act 2018 be read a second time.

970 Mr Speaker, this is probably the first consequence of our departure from the European Union and that is why this Act has been brought before the House today.

The elections to the European Parliament were last held in May 2014. They are held every five years and are thus scheduled to be held again in May 2019. This therefore necessitates an amendment to the European Parliamentary Elections Act 2004. This is because section 9(2) of Schedule 1 of the European Parliamentary Elections Act 2004 requires that a canvass be held on 15th October in any year preceding a European parliamentary election. This obliges us to conduct a canvass in October of this year, Mr Speaker. Given that it seems we will not participate in future EU elections, this would seem to be a futile and costly exercise to carry out. The Bill simply replaces a date for a canvass as set out above to a date to be appointed by the Chief Minister by notice in the Gazette. The Government intends to repeal the European Parliamentary Elections Act 2004 in our EU Withdrawal Bill. The reason we are not repealing the Act in this Bill is because the European Parliamentary Elections Act 2004 works in conjunction with UK legislation on European elections which apply to Gibraltar. The UK's EU Withdrawal Act 2018 will repeal the UK's European Parliamentary Elections Act 2002, but that provision has not yet been brought into force.

985

Mr Speaker, I therefore commend this Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill? Yes, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, we will support this Bill. Clearly we would not want to involve ourselves in a futile task as described by the Deputy Chief Minister, and clearly, which would lead to a huge cost to the public purse, and therefore we support this Bill.

995 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the European Parliamentary Elections Act 2004 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
1015 Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the conservation, enhancement and enjoyment of Gibraltar's heritage, antiquities and objects of archaeological interest, for the preservation of monuments, buildings, historical conservation areas and archaeological areas, to establish the Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council, to provide for the management of the Gibraltar National Museum and the Gibraltar National Archives, to provide for the continued existence of the Gibraltar Heritage Trust and for

1025 areas and archaeological areas, to establish the Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council, to provide for the management of the Gibraltar National Museum and the Gibraltar National Archives, to provide for the continued existence of the Gibraltar Heritage Trust and for connected matters be read a first time. Clerk: The Heritage and Antiquities Act 2018.

Heritage and Antiquities Bill 2018 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I beg to move that the Bill for the Heritage and Antiquities Act 2018 be read a second time.

1035 I do this approximately 18 years after the Government of the time undertook to review Gibraltar's heritage legislation and I am extremely pleased and proud to be doing so.

This Bill creates a new Heritage and Antiquities Act in order to reform and strengthen legislation pertaining to Gibraltar's heritage.

1040 I will now proceed with the main changes brought about by the Bill, but I do refer, Mr Speaker, to my letter to you of 13th of July. Although extensive, the proposed amendments at Committee Stage follow constructive discussions with the hon. Members opposite, the Hon. Roy Clinton and the Hon. Trevor Hammond, and with the board of the Gibraltar Heritage Trust. I am grateful particularly to the Members opposite for the constructive way in which they have gone about responding to this Bill, and indeed to the Heritage Trust, the National Museum and 1045 many others who have contributed to bringing us to where we are now. They also adjust a number of typographical errors.

Mr Speaker, Part 1 contains preliminary matters concerning the Bill. Under this Part, specifically clause 3, reference to an antiquity has been extended to include an object of interest. Consequently, this widens its definition, since it now encompasses an antiquity or 1050 object of interest. It includes, for example:

any object, whether movable or part of immovable property, which is a work of architecture, sculpture, graphic art, painting or any form of art or craftsmanship;

The scope of the application of the Bill is established in clause 4. This provision sets out that the Bill shall apply to the following four categories:

- (a) antiquities or objects of interest;
- (b) scheduled monuments or buildings;
- (c) scheduled historical conservation areas and scheduled archaeological areas; and
- (d) archaeological or historical areas of interest not scheduled under this Act, and these are situated in Gibraltar, whether on land or within British Gibraltar territorial waters.

1055 These four categories are at the heart of the Bill. They comprise Gibraltar's heritage and the provisions in the Bill are drafted with them in mind. They are a welcome change, providing structure and a clear departure from the current 1989 Act.

1060 Part 2 of the Bill establishes the Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council (HAAC). This is a new body. The functions of this body are wide and varied and include making its views known to the Minister on how to promote and secure the conservation, protection and enhancement of Gibraltar's heritage, fostering understanding and facilitating the enjoyment of Gibraltar's heritage, advising on Gibraltar's heritage – for example, advising that any activity in relation to Gibraltar's heritage always be carried out in a sustainable manner by a suitably qualified person, and identifying present and future issues which require or may require addressing in relation to Gibraltar's heritage. They also include, as per amendments contained in my letter to you, Mr Speaker, a requirement to consult owners of monuments or buildings before any action is 1065 taken on private property.

1070 Additionally, Schedule 1 sets out procedural matters relating to the HAAC and its constitution. In discharging its functions it must take account of certain prescribed matters, including the need for social, cultural and economic development in Gibraltar and the interests of the community in general. As well as the HAAC, in cases where the Minister requires advice on specific matters he may appoint other ad hoc advisory committees.

Part 3 of the Bill focuses on one of the categories outlined above concerning Gibraltar's heritage, namely the protection of monuments and buildings. It provides a definition of 'monument or building' and 'site of monument or building' which, as per my letter to you, Mr Speaker, has been amended so that the definition applies throughout the Bill. It operates on the basis of listing in Schedule 2 those monuments or buildings or sites of monuments or buildings, therein referred to as 'scheduled monuments or buildings', that should benefit from a regime of protection from damage or alteration through works. Damage, including damage by demolition through to depositing any refuse, rubbish or litter, is considered an offence.

It must be mentioned that the inclusion of any monuments or buildings or sites of monuments or buildings in Schedule 2 is done by order published in the Gazette. Furthermore, before making a said order to include, remove or amend an entry in the Schedule, the Minister must consult the HAAC, any other body which appears to him to have special knowledge and, where there may be ecological or other environmental implications, the Nature Conservancy Council. As can be appreciated from this consultation requirement, careful consideration will be given before a monument or building or site of monument or building is included in Schedule 2.

Furthermore, it must be noticed that works to a scheduled building or monument may be undertaken provided these have been authorised by the Minister with the issue of scheduled monument or building consent. Consent can be given subject to conditions pursuant to clause 15 and they may be modified, if the need arises, under clause 16.

Furthermore, where urgent preservation is required, the Minister may order remedial works to be undertaken and the cost thereof be recovered from the owner of the scheduled monument or building under clause 17.

Part 4 pertains to historical conservation areas. It allows certain areas of important architectural or historical interest to be listed under Schedule 3 as scheduled historical conservation areas. Inclusion of historical conservation areas in Schedule 3 will operate in much the same way as the system in place for listing of monuments or buildings in Schedule 2, by publication in the Gazette after the required consultation.

Again, as with entries in Schedule 2, demolition of scheduled historical conservation areas contained in Schedule 3 may only be undertaken provided it is authorised by the Minister with the issue of historical conservation area consent.

Mr Speaker, in the case of unoccupied structures within a scheduled historical conservation area the Minister may authorise urgent works to be carried out to the unoccupied structure if, following a report submitted by the HAAC or otherwise, it appears to him necessary for the preservation of the scheduled historical conservation area.

Part 5 deals with archaeological areas and archaeological findings. By listing an area under Schedule 4 as a scheduled archaeological area, operations that may be carried out within that area are restricted. As with other scheduled entries, scheduled archaeological area consent is required from the Minister. If any antiquity or object of interest is found within such an area, a person is required to report his findings to a police officer or to the curator within a prescribed period of time – that is 24 hours after the object has been found. Mr Speaker, no areas have as yet been entered in Schedules 3 and 4 and these will be considered by the newly constituted HAAC.

Part 6 provides for the appointment of an Archaeological Officer. It sets out the qualification required and the general functions of the post. Essentially the Archaeological Officer will advise Government on archaeological heritage and conservation matters and be responsible to the Minister. This is a new role absent in the 1989 Act.

Part 7 pertains to the Gibraltar National Museum. It provides for the appointment of a Curator and sets out his general functions. Property in the museum held by the Curator vests in the Crown, subject always to the terms on which they were acquired. Furthermore, property vested in the Crown in right of the Government of Gibraltar is held for the benefit and enjoyment of the public.

Part 8 establishes the Gibraltar National Archives and provides for the appointment of an Archivist and the role and general functions of the post. This was absent in the 1989 Act and falls under the responsibility of the Minister responsible for archives.

1125 Part 9 concerns the Gibraltar Heritage Trust. It specifically provides that albeit the 1989 Act shall be repealed, the Trust will continue to exist and operate as if it had been established under this Act instead. The functions, constitution and procedures of the Trust are contained in Schedule 5.

1130 Miscellaneous provisions are included under part 10, namely the creation of a register of scheduled monuments or buildings, scheduled historical conservation areas and scheduled archaeological areas. It also contains provisions on restrictions on the removal of antiquities or objects of interest from Gibraltar and restrictions on the use of the equipment. Most importantly, as per the amendment contained in my letter to you, Mr Speaker, this Part will now contain a regulation-making power allowing the establishment of a legal deposit library or 1135 libraries in line with other jurisdictions. This new provision prescribes that a copy of all published work appertaining to Gibraltar be deposited within a designated legal deposit library in order to cater and preserve Gibraltar's cultural heritage.

Mr Speaker, I commend this Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

1140 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I must begin by declaring my real interest in this Bill, in that I am a life member of the Gibraltar Heritage Trust and I have been now for a good number of years. Indeed, both the 1145 Minister and I are also perhaps in the unique position in this House of having both served as trustees at different times of both the Gibraltar Heritage Trust and indeed the Gibraltar Garrison Library Trust, and thus Mr Speaker, the subject matter of this Bill, is one that is both important and familiar to us both.

I first of all have to thank the Minister for agreeing to a meeting with myself and my 1150 colleague the Hon. Trevor Hammond, the result of which has been, I would say, broad agreement on a number of very constructive amendments which will, as the Minister has indicated, be raised at Committee Stage.

For the benefit of the House, Mr Speaker, the most amusing printer's devil which we discovered jointly was a reference on Schedule 2, Part 5, under the 'East side aircraft', where, 1155 under the title 'Location' was actually written in the Bill, 'Need to check if still there due to runway tunnel works', which I am sure, Mr Speaker, we should all agree should not be there.

Mr Speaker, this is a Bill which will enjoy the full support of Her Majesty's Official Opposition, but as in any legislation there is always room for improvement and different approaches, some of which I would like to touch upon.

1160 In reviewing the Bill, I have had to compare and contrast it with the Command Paper issued on 13th July 2015, the Gibraltar Heritage Trust Act 1989 – and I have even looked back at the old Museum and Antiquities Ordinance 1931.

The biggest difference to the 2015 Command Paper is that the Gibraltar Garrison Library Trust is no longer to be included in this legislation. The Minister has explained that he envisages 1165 bringing it in at a later date but did not want to delay the main Bill, which I understand. For the meantime, the Garrison Library Trust will continue under its own legislation but I would welcome the Minister's thoughts as to the possible designation or location of the legal deposit library being brought in as an amendment at the Committee Stage.

Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Heritage Trust is, of course, the biggest beneficiary of this Bill, in 1170 that they will now have the majority of seven elected trustees versus five Government appointees. As an NGO it will also have explicit financial support under Schedule 5, section

9(1)(d) in the form of ‘an index-linked subvention from the Government to cover employee and administration costs of the Trust’.

1175 Mr Speaker, the creation in this Bill of the Gibraltar National Archives is a welcome step which can only serve to help preserve our records for the benefit of future generations. My only observation in this respect is that the National Archives in this Bill comes under a Minister with responsibility for archives and not the Minister with responsibility for heritage, which although is perhaps unusual, I am assured by the Minister for Heritage will not result in any conflicts or inefficiency and is to be seen as complementary – indeed, two Ministers being better than one.

1180 Mr Speaker, looking now in a more granular way at the Bill, there are two main areas that I would have liked perhaps a little bit more thought and work on, especially when contrasting with the methods used in the United Kingdom.

1190 The other area of interest is the method by which buildings are to be included on Schedule 2, and this includes both public and private. From my reading of this Bill, there is no grading of listing, as in the UK, nor in fact as under the old Heritage Trust Act 1989, which has a category A list and a category B list. Now, everything on Schedule 2 is to have the maximum protection under the Bill, regardless of relative merit. As a lover of heritage, as the Chief Minister will attest, 1195 I cannot, of course, condemn this, but I wonder if perhaps a graduated listing system with differing levels of protection, as in the UK, might have been an option. This would also encourage private landlords to voluntarily seek listing of their property.

1200 Mr Speaker, I should point out that the Bill strips out entirely the rights of landlords to appeal notices of listing as currently provided in sections 42 to 48 of the Gibraltar Heritage Trust Act 1989. The Bill provides powers to list without an obvious appeal process, other than resorting to judicial review of a decision. To some this may appear as perhaps unnecessarily draconian and I would suggest could perhaps be improved upon in future.

1205 A general observation on this Bill is that the role of the Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council is in fact just that, advisory to the Minister and in fact has no powers in his own name. The Minister, in this Bill, has complete discretion in most matters, and – in jest – having played the part of Prince John to rave reviews in amateur theatre, he now seems to want to play the part of Henry VIII in some of the powers he will assume. I will illustrate this point by reading some of the main discretions allowed to the Minister in this Bill. I quote:

The Minister may, by order published in the Gazette, amend or vary the provisions contained in Schedule 1.

Subject to subsection (4), the Minister may, by order published in the Gazette, amend Schedule 2 ...

The Minister may by order published in the Gazette, amend Schedule 3 ...

The Minister may, by order published in the Gazette, amend Schedule 4 ...

The Minister may, by order published in the Gazette, amend or vary the provisions contained in Schedule 5.

1210 Mr Speaker, whereas Schedules 2 to 4 relate to the listing of protected items, buildings or areas, Schedule 1 relates to the workings of the Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council and Schedule 5 relates to the functions and constitution of the Heritage Trust.

1215 I can understand the need for the Minister to have the power to list items, but not necessarily the ability to vary the workings of the Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council or the Heritage Trust, which should, I think, properly, would have to come back to this House ordinarily by way of primary legislation.

Mr Speaker, as I said in my opening, I know the Minister shares a very keen interest in Gibraltar’s heritage, but my concern is when there may in future be another individual in that position with differing views and wide powers to ignore the advice given by the Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council. Who, then, will protect our heritage? The legislation as drafted makes no provision for guardians, who are neither Government Ministers nor Government employees, to take up that cause with any legal power in their own right.

Mr Speaker, having thus expressed my reservations on certain areas of the Bill, I do however recognise that in the round this Bill is a positive step in the right direction and does indeed provide new protections and flexibility in preserving our community's heritage, be it written or electronic, buildings, monuments, artefacts on land or under the sea, and for these reasons I am happy to support this Bill and recommend it to my colleagues on this side of the House.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute to the debate on the Second Reading of this Bill? The Hon. Danny Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much.

May I add my voice of congratulation to the Hon. Minister for bringing this Bill. I think that it is a seminal piece of legislation.

My hon. colleague Mr Clinton is absolutely right that everything can be improved, but this is the first major step in something of this kind in relation to heritage, which is very much needed in Gibraltar and it is something that the Hon. Minister should be congratulated on, as indeed anybody else who has had a part in producing this legislation.

For my part, there are two aspects that I would like the Hon. Minister perhaps to explain to this House. The first, and again my hon. Friend Mr Clinton touched upon this, is that in the UK there is a system of grading – you have ancient monuments, you have grade I, you have grade I*, grade II, grade II* – and it protects not only the fabric of the building but it also protects the interior of the building. We often forget that protecting buildings is not only about protecting the outside, the fabric of the building. There are very important architectural and historical features within a building that need to be protected.

I will always remember a conversation that I had with somebody who was involved in the demolition of Governor's Cottage some years ago, who said that there was a wonderful fireplace in Governor's Cottage and that fireplace simply disappeared. There are wonderful architectural features of that sort in many buildings in Gibraltar that really need to be protected, and I just wonder if the Hon. Minister can explain how we get to a situation where those public buildings, both the exterior and the interior of those buildings, are protected against that sort of, what in my respectful view is pillaging of our national heritage, so that that does not happen in the future.

The other point is that it is all very well to say that there is a legal obligation for somebody who finds something of architectural interest or value to report it within 24 hours, but the reality is that unfortunately we all want it to work differently but sometimes human nature does not work in that way. In the UK what you have is a system of legislation whereby, for example, anybody who wants to go on to a piece of land with a metal detector has to first of all, as a matter of law, ask for permission of the landowner. If something then is found on that land there is an obligation obviously to declare it, but a special committee is then formed in order to value the find and the value of the find is then divided as between the landowner and the person who finds it. In fact, what happens is that a museum or other public bodies are given an opportunity to purchase the artefacts that are found at the value that the committee values the artefacts at, and then the money is then paid half to the landowner and half to the person who finds it.

Hon. Members may be aware of an absolutely wonderful find very close to the motorway in Staffordshire – it is the Staffordshire Saxon Hoard, which is the largest Saxon hoard ever found in the United Kingdom. It is actually larger than all the other Saxon hoards put together. What happened there was that that was land belonging to a farmer and somebody who went on to 1270 the land and found with a metal detector the actual hoard. It was valued at £3.2 million by the committee, and museums were then told, 'You have got to raise the money in order to pay the landowner £1.6 million and the person who found it £1.6 million. Without having that type of 1275 legislation that at least compensates the person who finds something, it may be difficult to actually persuade somebody to hand something in that is of value. That is something that I urge the Government to take into account, perhaps not now but in the future, in order to marry it with this very important piece of legislation so that we make the legislation as effective as possible.

Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

1280 Mr Speaker: Is there any other contribution to the debate?
I call upon the mover to reply.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I would like to thank both the Hon. Mr Clinton and, in particular, the Hon. Mr Feetham for their energy in supporting this. I appreciate the comments 1285 that have been made.

If I may just refer to the two main points that the Hon. Mr Feetham has made, I think that the question of fireplaces and so on is adequately covered in the definition of 'antiquity'. Obviously we have to see how this evolves and how we actually implement all this.

I take note on the question of the finding of objects and so on, and I think this is one of the 1290 things that the new Advisory Council will take on board. They will have a long agenda for the first meeting and these are things that I think need to be addressed on an ongoing basis.

On the question of the Garrison Library, yes, that is work in progress. We did not want to delay this important piece of legislation, and that will come in at a later stage and fit in.

As far as the legal deposit of publications – which is an initiative of my colleague the Hon.
1295 Steven Linares, and I am grateful for all the work that he did in getting to Command Paper stage when he was Minister for Heritage – although it could be library or libraries, at this point in time the intention is that that should be the John Mackintosh Hall Library, which is the current active public library, but there are other libraries in Gibraltar, the Garrison Library and the University Library, which could also feature in the future.

I take the point that we have opted for one grading of listing. I think this will make it easier to 1300 administrate in a jurisdiction the size of Gibraltar and will reduce the complication of having all sorts of different applications depending on the grading. Certainly in the case of private land, all the ones that are currently included in the Schedule have been in consultation with the landlords and there will clearly be consultation with the landlord before any private monuments 1305 or buildings are added.

Mr Speaker, I note the Hon. Mr Clinton's concern as to who might be the future Minister for Heritage and I am grateful that he is very confident in the fact that I will protect heritage under the powers that I have – so those who care about heritage will clearly have to ensure that I continue to be a Minister for many years to come, and that will include the Hon. Mr Clinton!
1310 (Banging on desks)

I think that the Act does provide for wide consultation, and in fact some of the consultation processes were actually extended after the meeting that we held.

Mr Speaker, before finalising, I think I should say – and this reflects some of what we have been saying – protection of heritage almost by definition has to be work in progress because we 1315 are developing and creating heritage as we go along. Gibraltar's heritage, as we know, is extremely rich and we have a duty to respect it and to protect it continuously. I think that this Bill does not only do this but also provides a mechanism whereby this can continue to evolve.
The HAAC has a tremendously important role in this and already, as I have said, has a considerable agenda to deal with.

Mr Speaker, this Bill clearly proves the Government's commitment to ensuring that we look 1320 after our past as we look towards the future. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

1325 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the conservation, enhancement and enjoyment of Gibraltar's heritage, antiquities and objects of archaeological interest, for the preservation of monuments, buildings, historical conservation areas and archaeological areas, to establish the Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council, to provide for the management of the Gibraltar National Museum and the Gibraltar National Archives, to provide for the continued existence of the Gibraltar Heritage Trust and for connected matters be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against?
1330 Carried.

Clerk: The Heritage and Antiquities Act 2018.

Heritage and Antiquities Act 2018 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

1335 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

1340 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, with that I move that the House should ensure that this morning's proceedings are forever kept in Hansard and read in the future by those who look to Gibraltar's heritage and why it is protected, and that we break, at this seminal moment, for lunch until 3.30 p.m.

1345 Mr Speaker: The House will now recess to 3.30 p.m.

Order of the Day

Cemeteries Bill 2018 – First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to provide for the management and control of cemeteries. The Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to provide for the management and control of cemeteries be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to provide for the management and control of cemeteries be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.)
5 Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Cemeteries Act 2018.

Cemeteries Bill 2018 – Second Reading approved

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

The current Cemetery Act was commenced in 1889 and, needless to say, it required review. The purpose of this Bill is to revise and modernise legislation pertaining to cemeteries. To this 10 end, subsidiary legislation accompanying the existing Cemetery Act will be revoked and new subsidiary legislation, the Cemeteries Regulations 2018, will be put in place. These Regulations will be introduced when the Cemeteries Act 2018 is commenced.

The existing Cemetery Act only applied to the cemetery at North Front and did not extend further. This has been rectified in the Bill and it now applies to all cemeteries within the control 15 of the Government of Gibraltar. The Cemeteries Bill amends the manner in which the North Front cemetery itself is managed, and now follow some of the main changes.

Albeit the post of superintendent remains, this is short lived as it is intended that this post will eventually disappear. Instead, the functions currently exercised by the superintendent will be carried out by the Cemetery Authority in conjunction with the cemetery keeper. The post of superintendent will be determined by notice in writing by the Cemetery Authority.

A Cemetery Authority will be established, which will be responsible for the general management and supervision of the cemetery, and registration and control of burials. It will act in accordance with the policies of the Government. To this end, the Cemetery Authority will do all things it considers necessary or desirable for the proper management, regulation and control of the cemetery.

As provided for in the Bill, the Cemetery Authority may delegate any of its powers to a cemetery keeper. The post of keeper will continue in the new Bill, save that the keeper will now be under the direction of the Authority. More than one cemetery keeper may be appointed by the Minister by notice in the Gazette.

The Board of Visitors established under the current Cemetery Act remains, save that it is now known as the Cemetery Board, and it advises the Cemetery Authority on matters concerning its powers, functions and responsibilities under the Act and brings to the attention of the cemetery keeper any matters relating to the upkeep of the cemetery.

In regard to definition of 'burial', such a definition was absent in the existing Cemetery Act. For the sake of clarity it has now been defined in the new Act to include a human body or remains, cremated remains or the bodies of stillborn children or cremated remains thereof. Given the development in legislation since the existing Cemetery Act was drafted in the late 1800s, and specifically in light of the Crematoria Act 2008, it was appropriate to include cremated remains in the definition.

The definition of 'burial rites' has been revised and it is clearly stated within the body of the Act that burial rights do not afford any legal or equitable right to a plot of land. Instead, the Act provides that a burial right grants a person the exclusive right to burial on a plot of land, subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Cemetery Authority.

On the question of registration of burials in the register, the procedure for the registration of burials has also been modified, making it a requirement that specific information be entered into the register as soon as reasonably practical after each burial. The register will be maintained by the Cemetery Authority and may only be altered with the consent of the Authority. Additionally, an electronic copy of the register will be compiled by the Authority and is to be forwarded annually to Gibraltar Government Archives. This is a new provision in the Bill.

Removals or alterations remain the same, save that this power now lies with the Authority as opposed to the superintendent. This also applies to powers pertaining to the maintenance of good order and appearance in the cemetery.

Offences in the cemetery are not taken lightly and were in need of essential review, particularly the level of fines, which has now been increased. Previously, the fine for any person who made any 'noise or disturbance' or 'was guilty of any disorderly conduct' in the cemetery was liable on summary conviction to a fine of £5. This has now been increased to a fine not exceeding level 3 in the standard rate – that is, a £1,000 fine. Furthermore, offences in a cemetery have also been reconsidered and will now range from wilfully creating a disturbance in the cemetery, committing any nuisance in the cemetery, wilfully interfering with any burial taking place in the cemetery, playing any game of sport and remaining in the cemetery after it is closed to the public.

Mr Speaker, this Bill is essential in modernising Gibraltar's legislation. It replaces an Act 129 years old and clearly out of date. It will ensure better and more effective management of the cemetery and cemeteries and, together with the recent improvement in the landscape maintenance, will provide more dignity to the cemetery and to those who this community lays to rest.

Mr Speaker, I commend this Bill to the House. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill? The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Thank you, Minister, for that explanation of the Bill, which we will, on this side of the House, be supporting. It is an important update to the existing legislation, which, as the Minister has pointed out, dates back to the 1800s.

75 I think there is only one point that I would just ask for a little bit of clarification on, and that is on the establishment of the authority itself. How or who or what body does the Minister envisage playing that particular role? Clearly it is quite an important role.

In terms of the legislation, the cemetery, or as the Bill, or the Act when it is passed, makes clear, it will be cemeteries that are covered by this, are all obviously very important to our community. They frequently feature in the local press, where people raise concerns reference 80 their condition. I am sure this Act, when it is passed, will go some way to ensuring that a focus is maintained on the condition of our cemeteries and that they are looked after in an appropriate manner, bearing in mind their importance to our community.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the Bill?

The hon. the mover.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, yes, in order to clarify that, at this point in time the duties of the Cemetery Authority it is intended, at least in the short term, are to be carried out by the Department of the Environment, which is the authority that currently manages the cemetery. This may or may not continue in the longer term and I am looking forward to having discussions with the new Cemeteries Board as to whether they feel that there should be some different mechanism, but at this point in time it will be the Department of the Environment that will be 95 the Cemetery Authority.

I welcome the support of the Members opposite and obviously look forward to commencing this Act once passed and to updating the Cemetery Rules, which will be published at the time of commencement.

100 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to provide for the management and control of cemeteries be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Nature Protection (Amendment) Act 2018.

Nature Protection (Amendment) Act 2018 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

125 The Nature Protection Act was published in 1991. It is now 27 years old. This is a long period, during which changes may arise in scientific thinking and the status of plant populations. The changes to the Act take these points into account.

130 Taxonomy – the classification of organisms – is always in a state of flux. This is normal. Improvements in scientific methods inevitably lead to a fine-tuning of knowledge of relationships between species. The past decades have especially been important in this respect as advances in molecular analyses, which unravel patterns in DNA, have produced many rearrangements of plants classification, including quite a number of surprises. The updated schedules reflect this latest knowledge in nomenclature.

135 Another point is the changes that populations of organisms undergo over time. These take place constantly but at an accelerated rate in our rapidly changing world. Thus, some species in Gibraltar are comparatively more rare now than 27 years ago, and vice versa. These changes have been taken into account when upgrading or downgrading species' protected statuses. So too have any improvements in our knowledge of species populations and dynamics over the past three decades.

140 Finally, the Nature Protection Act Schedule 2 reverse lists, so that species that are not listed are automatically protected. The current changes provide more robust measures to ensure that only new species that have colonised the Rock naturally are protected, without providing protection to exotic invasive species or garden plants in the sense that it will not be illegal to deadhead one's pelargoniums.

145 The proposed changes will all result in an even more sensible and practical Act affording added protection to our special and important flora and I commend this Bill to the House. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

150 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

155 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, may I say the Minister's enthusiasm for this particular Bill is very clear to see and those of us on this side of the House will be supporting these amendments. It is obviously necessary to amend these lists from time to time and it should become ... it is a regular occurrence. So yes, we will be supporting the Bill.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question that a Bill for an Act to amend the Nature Protection Act 1991 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

The Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

170 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to establish the office of Director of Public Prosecutions under the direction of the Attorney-General and for matters connected thereto be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to establish the office of Director of Public Prosecutions under the direction of the Attorney-General and for matters connected thereto be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

175 Clerk: The Director of Public Prosecutions Act 2018.

Director of Public Prosecutions Act 2018 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

180 In accordance with one of the Government's manifesto commitments, the Bill establishes the office of the Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP). Currently, as there is no such position in our legislation, the day to day work of the DPP in Gibraltar has been carried out by the Attorney-General (AG). This arrangement is distinct to that in different parts of the United Kingdom where the DPP or the local equivalent and the Attorney-General or the local equivalent are two separate entities. Consequently, Government was committed to making the necessary changes so that our system would replicate that in the United Kingdom and in particular that in England and Wales.

185 The appointment of the DPP is set out at clause 4 of the Bill. Previously the Bill provided that such appointment would be done by the Government in consultation with the AG. However, after further discussions with the Attorney-General and in order to be absolutely certain that there is no question of the independence of the post, I shall be moving amendments at Committee Stage so that the appointment is made instead by the Attorney-General after consultation with the Governor. Furthermore, the person appointed must not only have relevant experience and expertise in criminal law and litigation, but also be a fit and proper person. I shall also be amending this clause to set out further the qualifications the DPP must hold.

190 In line with the amendments mentioned above, the AG, after consultation with the Governor, also retains the power to suspend and ultimately remove such person from office for misbehaviour, neglect of duty, material breach of contract of employment or instrument of appointment, incapacity, incompetence or bankruptcy.

195 As regards reappointment, once a person's appointment to hold office as DPP has expired he may be eligible for reappointment provided he has not resigned beforehand or been removed from office by the AG, again after consultation with the Governor.

200 The main changes resulting from this Bill, Mr Speaker, are as follows, namely the DPP shall head the Office of Criminal Prosecution and Litigation, akin to that performed by the Crown Prosecution Service in England and Wales; he or she shall carry out such functions and exercise such powers as conferred upon him or her under general special instructions issued by the AG in accordance with section 59(3) of the Gibraltar Constitution Order 2006; on a day to day basis carry out criminal law and litigation work on behalf of the AG; and may do anything that appears to him or her to be incidental or conducive to the carrying out of the duties. However, the DPP will not be able to act in any manner contrary to any instructions given to him or her by the AG or be able to act in cases where the AG has personally exercised a power or discretion.

205 Further, Mr Speaker, I wish to note that the Hon. Mr Feetham called me to discuss the Bill and he was happy to note that his concerns had been addressed by my letter to Mr Speaker of 14th June of this year. I am therefore pleased to count on the support of the hon. Members opposite.

210 For all those reasons, Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

215 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much.

220 Yes, as the Hon. Minister has said during the course of his address, the Opposition is going to be supporting this Bill. Mr Speaker, we had grave doubts about the Bill as originally drafted, which we felt could potentially be unconstitutional in terms of the way that the Director of Public Prosecutions was going to be appointed, but those have been dealt with by the 225 amendments that the Hon. Minister is going to be moving and therefore our support is for the Bill as amended.

Mr Speaker, just a little bit in relation to that before I come and say a few words about the post itself and how in particular this is a post that has also been adopted in other Overseas Territories. The post of Her Majesty's Attorney-General for Gibraltar is a post that is recognised in the Constitution and it is protected in three ways.

230 It is protected because the Attorney-General of Gibraltar is appointed by the Governor on advice of a specified Appointments Commission. So it is a specified Appointments Commission that effectively undertakes the process, interviews candidates and then will advise the Governor on the most appropriate candidate. It is designed to ensure that the process is independent, in particular of the Government, which is not unusual in most jurisdictions where the Attorney-235 General is not a political appointment. Remember that in the United Kingdom for many years the Attorney-General was a political appointment. I will come back to that in relation to Bermuda in a moment.

The Constitution also seeks to give the Attorney-General security of tenure by preventing the removal of an Attorney-General except in very specified circumstances, which have now been 240 clarified by the Supreme Court in the decision involving the former Chief Justice in 2009.

It also protects certain functions of the Attorney-General. Sorry, I beg your pardon, does the Hon. the Chief Minister want me to give way? (Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): No.) Sorry, I beg your pardon. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) It also seeks to protect certain functions of the Attorney-General, which are the functions that are prosecutorial functions. That is in 245 contrast with some other Overseas Territories where not only are prosecutorial functions also protected by the Constitution but advisory functions. Here in Gibraltar it is just the prosecutorial functions and those functions are functions that can only be delegated by Her Majesty's Attorney-General for Gibraltar. That is why when the Bill said that the appointment of the Director of Public Prosecutions was going to be by the Government, or the person who made the 250 appointment was going to be the Government on advice of the Attorney-General, we felt on this side of the House we could not support it because potentially it fell foul of section 59 of the Constitution. That is no longer the position, as a consequence of these amendments.

Mr Speaker, I think that this is a matter that in due course will have to be dealt with by any constitutional conference that is convened between the Gibraltar side and the UK side, because I 255 think that it is important that the role of Director of Public Prosecutions also be enshrined in the Constitution. Until very recently in fact – and I talk of very recently, the last 10 to 15 years – the only Overseas Territory constitution that provided for a Director of Public Prosecutions was Bermuda. Hon. Members may recall... In fact, in this Parliament I think it is only Dr Garcia who was a member of the Select Committee on Parliamentary Reform –

260

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): And the Minister for Economic Development.

Hon. D A Feetham: And the Minister, yes, but present today was only Dr Garcia, and Dr Garcia will recall that the draft constitution that was presented to the United Kingdom as a 265 start of the negotiations for a new constitution with the United Kingdom... I think the draft constitution was completed in 2001, it was presented to the UK in about 2002-03. He will correct me if I am wrong in relation to my dates, but that copied the Bermuda constitution in terms of Director of Public Prosecutions, which is that if there is in Bermuda somebody from the Parliament of Bermuda who is a legal practitioner, who is appointed as Attorney-General, then 270 the role of Director of Public Prosecutions is exercised by somebody else. That is designed to keep both roles separate. During the course of those negotiations we were told by the UK negotiating side that that was something that would not happen ever again in any other constitution the UK agreed to – that specific – and that is why it is not included in our Constitution. Otherwise, we would have had a situation where, for example, the Hon. Minister 275 Costa could have performed the role of Attorney-General under the Constitution that we proposed and then the Director of Public Prosecutions role would have been somebody else, who would have been independent of the Government. Therefore, even in 1999, 2000, 2001 it was envisaged by the Select Committee then that it was possible that the creation of a post of Director of Public Prosecutions was something that would have been beneficial for Gibraltar, albeit in those circumstances.

Since we negotiated a Constitution with the United Kingdom there have been several other new constitutions, and in fact the Cayman Islands, Montserrat and the British Virgin Islands have all decided that they would also have a Director of Public Prosecutions but that would be enshrined in their constitution to make sure that the Director of Public Prosecutions is independent in appointment, in tenure and in relation to its functions as I outline.

I just want to read to this House a passage from a textbook which is very good on British Overseas Territories, called British Overseas Territories Law. It is by Ian Hendry and Susan Dickson. The edition that I have is 2011, although my learned and hon. Friend the Leader of the Opposition says that there has been an edition that has been published this year. It basically says this, and I quote:

In the Cayman Islands, Montserrat and British Virgin Islands the Director of Public Prosecutions is appointed in the same way, has the same security of tenure and enjoys the same constitutional protection for his or her pension as the Attorney General. In Bermuda the Governor appoints a Director of Public Prosecutions in his or her discretion, may only remove the Director for inability or misbehaviour and on advice of an independent tribunal, and there is a constitutional protection for the Director's remuneration and pension. These various provisions provide a high degree of constitutional independence for the Directors of Public Prosecutions in these territories, the importance of which cannot be overstated.

I think that is an important quotation and I think that when the time comes for us to review our existing Constitution this should be one of the issues that should be at the top of our list of priorities to make sure that the independence of the Director of Public Prosecutions is enshrined in our Constitution.

I am told by the Leader of the Opposition that in the UK the Attorney General is still a political appointment. I do not know how much further that takes the debate.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): The opposite of what you said.

Hon. D A Feetham: Was it the opposite that I said? Sorry, I beg your pardon. If that is the impression that I caused this Parliament, I apologise. I was not 100% certain whether the position in the UK about the Attorney General being a political appointment continues even today. I knew that until very recently a government Minister was also the Attorney General, but I was not 100% certain. It was not my intention to create the impression that that had changed in the UK, but in any event my learned Friend has asked me to clarify the position and I happily do so.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute to the debate on the Second Reading of the Bill?

I will ask the mover to reply. The Hon. Neil Costa.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, to take the hon. Gentleman's points hopefully in turn, in respect of whether the post of DPP should be enshrined in the Constitution in the same way that the post of the AG is enshrined in the Constitution in section 59, it certainly is not a matter for us here today. It would be a matter for a select committee of this House, should the point arise where there should be a further negotiation to further develop the Constitution, although without wishing to be political I daresay that the GSD would tell us that there would be no need because as far as they were concerned it achieved the maximum level of self-government. So it is surprising to hear the hon. Gentleman say that there may be a need to progress the 320 Constitution and indeed the need may arise in the future.

If I may take the hon. Gentleman to section 59(2), it says:

The Attorney-General shall have power in any case in which he considers it desirable so to do –
(a) to institute and undertake criminal proceedings before any court of law

And then, at section 59(3):

The powers of the Attorney-General under subsection (2) may be exercised by him in person or through other persons acting in accordance with his general or special instructions.

Therefore, what the Bill does is to provide a formal framework for the AG to be able to delegate that part of his responsibilities as are set out in the Constitution of Gibraltar.

325 Mr Speaker, the reality is that the creation of the DPP was as a result of various, I thought detailed, discussions. Of course, no one here is seriously suggesting that any Crown Counsel or any person previously carrying out the functions, in effect, of the DPP is anything other than entirely removed and entirely independent from the Government, so that Gibraltar has not 330 whatsoever of anybody discharging the functions of a Crown Counsel to have been anything other than entirely independent from the executive branch of Government.

To give the Gentleman comfort in the issues that he raises, he will have noticed that at the very end of the Bill, and as part of the changes that I propose to move at the Committee Stage, at clause 6 it says:

The Government may by regulations make such modifications or adaptations of any enactment except for this Act.

335 Of course it goes without saying that the lawyers in the House will know that you cannot amend a primary piece of legislation other than by coming to this House with a Bill, but it is in order to provide no doubt whatsoever that the contents of this Bill will not be able to ... any amendment through subsidiary legislation that we insisted that the words 'save this Act' be included at clause 6, which is to address the points that the hon. Member has made.

340 I hope that I have been able to address his issues.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to establish the office of Director of Public Prosecutions under the direction of the Attorney-General and for matters connected thereto be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against?

360

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to vary certain provisions contained in the will of the late John Mackintosh be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The John Mackintosh Will (Variation of Trusts) Act 2018.

John Mackintosh Will (Variation of Trusts) Bill 2018 –
First Reading approved

365

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

This Bill varies clause 22(b) of the will of the late John Mackintosh dated 6th March 1938. Clause 22(b) of the will states that the trust fund is to be used ‘for educational purposes for the benefit of children whose parents are resident in Gibraltar and in particular for the purpose of promoting the teaching in Gibraltar of the English language and of English history and literature and generally to promote and strengthen so far as practicable by educational means the ties between England and Gibraltar’.

The trust property included a piece of land on which a public hall known as the John Mackintosh Hall was erected. The property is let to Her Majesty’s Government of Gibraltar and is used for a wide variety of purposes not limited to educational purposes.

375

As we all know, the John Mackintosh Hall is one of our main cultural centres and is used for a wide variety of purposes, including conferences and lectures as well as musical performances and General Elections. As a result, the trustees of the Mackintosh Hall applied to the Supreme Court to seek to widen the use clause of the premises of the John Mackintosh Hall. In this regard the cy-près application was made to amend the terms of the trust declared by the will to enable the terms of the lease to cover the uses for which it was being used. However, the application was refused and in a judgment on 8th December 2015 the judge noted that a better course of action was to legislate specifically to allow the amendment of a similar fashion to such which occurred in 1967. In 1967 clause 22(b) of the will was subject of a variation by Act of Parliament whereby the terms of the will were widened in order to expand the definition of schools in England to include universities, colleges, higher education or similar institutions.

380

Mr Speaker, this Bill seeks to vary the terms of the John Mackintosh will so that:

the trustees of the Trust fund ... shall have the power, and shall be deemed always to have had power, to maintain ... the John Mackintosh Hall ... and to use or to allow the use of the John Mackintosh Hall ... for the following purposes –

(a) the cultural development of Gibraltar including lectures, theatrical activities, concerts and plays; and

(b) generally for the benefit of the public in Gibraltar including for professional and trade meetings, political activities such as rallies, meetings and general elections, whether in the English language or otherwise.

Mr Speaker, I therefore commend this Bill to this House.

390 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill? The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I am grateful, and I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for setting out the background to the Bill, particularly in relation to the judgment of the then Mr Justice Jack.

395 Just one point of clarification in relation to I think it is paragraphs 38 and 39 of the learned Judge's judgment, where the Judge talks about the alternatives between passing an Act in this House and also dealing with this by way of a trustee simply renting the John Mackintosh Hall to the Government. I think the suggestion by the Judge in court was either the trustees could rent the hall to the Government, which is what the Hon. Minister alluded to in respect of what has 400 happened in the past; or alternatively – not, as the hon. Member said, the better course of action – the alternative was for this House to pass an Act to vary the will accordingly. Of course we support the Government's position on that, but we just wanted to clarify the position that the purpose of this is to expand the use of it to non-educational purposes. But the two points raised by the Judge in his judgment were those two that I have explained. One is that it was an 405 alternative, not a better use. A better way of dealing with this but an alternative way of dealing with it.

It would be helpful if the Minister could just clarify his remarks in respect of those two points.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I am grateful that the hon. Member is going to vote in favour of this Bill.
410

I take his point. I should have probably said that there are two alternatives as opposed to one. We have taken this course of action. We believe that this is the best course of action to have taken, and that is why I am presenting this Bill to the House. So yes, I take the point about the judgment.

415 I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to vary certain provisions contained in the will of the late John Mackintosh be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to revise the law governing planning and development and for connected purposes be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Town Planning Act 2018.

Town Planning Bill 2018 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I beg to move that the Bill for the Town Planning Act 2018 be read a second time.

The purpose of the new Bill is to revise, modernise and strengthen the law on town planning.

440 Under the existing Town Planning Act 1999 the procedure for planning application and notification of a planning application was unclear and inadequate. The Department of Town Planning would often find itself in receipt of planning applications without supporting documents. This had a twofold effect. First, the Department would invariably have to chase applicants for outstanding documentation on various occasions. This was time consuming, 445 frustrating and an inefficient use of staff resources. Second, because the Department did not hold a complete set of documents pertaining to the application, this meant that members of the public were unable to inspect the complete application at the offices of the Department within the allowed timeframe and make an objection if they so wished.

450 The new Town Planning Bill 2018 has brought about a number of changes to rectify and address these concerns and other matters raised by industry-related professionals conversant with the Town Planning Act 1999 who wanted to improve the current regime. I shall now highlight these changes.

455 The term 'permits' in the Town Planning Act 1999 has been revised. Previously, under the Town Planning Act 1999, applications for planning fell into two categories: outline planning permission and permits. Under the new Bill, applications for planning permission now fall into outline planning permission and full planning permission. Collectively, the above terms are referred to as 'planning permission'. The reason they have been revised is to align them more closely with the widely accepted terminology used within the town planning profession. It is hoped that this will also reduce the confusion that sometimes arose with applicants, who often 460 had to obtain additional permits from other statutory bodies.

Outline planning permission is defined in the Bill as an in-principle decision to grant planning permission. It must be stressed that this does not allow the carrying out of development per se. This can only happen once full planning permission has been obtained. The advantage of keeping outline planning permission in the draft Bill is that it allows an applicant to learn within 465 the early stages of a proposed development, before incurring great expense, whether his application will have a strong likelihood of success. We wanted to keep this in the new Act.

Mr Speaker, the second category planning permission falls into is full planning permission. Full planning permission, previously referred to as a permit in the current Town Planning Act 1999, gives permission to develop in accordance with the terms of the permission and provisions 470 of the Bill.

The new Bill clarifies the procedure involved for making an application for planning permission. If a development does not fall within a class of development designated by regulations, the applicant has to follow the procedure set out in clause 22. If, however, the development does fall within a class of development designated by regulations, the applicant 475 has to, in addition to the procedure laid out in clause 22, adhere to the provisions set out in clause 23. Under clause 23 the application and all the supporting documents are submitted to the Town Planner, who then validates the application. The date of validation is crucial in this procedure, as only when the application is validated by the Town Planner will 21 working days start to run for members of the public to make representations on the application. This gives 480 objectors the opportunity to make representations within the aforementioned 21 working days.

This new provision, which was absent in the current Town Planning Act 1999, is an important amendment to the procedure on application for planning permission. Not only will it give objectors the opportunity to make representations within a stipulated time frame as mentioned above, but this emphasis on 21 working days will address situations where the public 485 participation period falls over a holiday period, for example Christmas, which in the past had the effect of limiting the opportunity for the public to view and comment on the application at hand. Another change in procedure is that we now require publication in the Gazette and two newspapers in Gibraltar. Previously, a daily and a weekly newspaper was specified.

Mr Speaker, the new Town Planning Bill allows an application for planning permission to be 490 made online by the applicant. Furthermore, the Bill makes it a requirement for the Development and Planning Commission to publish all applications received electronically. It is worthy of mention that this has been done since the e-Planning portal was introduced. This further enhances the transparency of the planning process. So too the Development and Planning Commission's decision will be published and made available online. Collectively, these provisions 495 will greatly enhance the public's access to information on applications that may affect them and will ensure at least a minimum period for public participation.

Mr Speaker, the definition of 'development' has been revised. Clarification is provided that development includes inter alia operations such as the enclosure of a balcony or veranda; removal, replacement or installation of shutters; removal, replacement or other alterations of 500 any window; and the replacement of existing roof coverings. It must be mentioned, though, that where said replacement of windows and shutters does not materially affect the external appearance of a building and is on a like-for-like basis using the same materials, then it does not constitute development. In these circumstances, approval needs to be sought under the Building Rules 2017.

It is important to emphasise and clarify for the avoidance of doubt that most building works will require planning permission under town planning legislation as well as approval under the Building Rules 2017. However, building works that do not constitute development under town 505 planning legislation and consequently do not require planning permission shall nonetheless still be subject to building rules and require approval from the Building Control department.

510 Additionally, the definition of development has been further amended to exclude works to the interior of a building from the definition. Therefore, works of this nature do not require planning permission, albeit, as mentioned above, they may still require building control approval under the Building Control Rules 2017. It must be noted, though, that patios, courtyards and other similar spaces are considered to form part of the external appearance of a building, thus 515 they fall within the definition of development and require planning permission.

Mr Speaker, Government projects are now subject to the planning process under the provisions set out in the Town Planning Bill. Consequently, certain classes of development as designated by regulations will be subject to public participation and will require a site notice and publication online. It must be said that, albeit currently Government applications have no public participation requirement under the Town Planning Act 1999, Government has been submitting applications voluntarily to the DPC for its advice and guidance.

In contrast to the current Town Planning Act 1999, the new Act makes it a requirement, as contained in Schedule 1, that meetings of the Commission relating to planning applications are to be held in public, subject to certain exceptions – that is in the interests of security of Gibraltar. This also applies to Development Appeals Tribunal meetings. It is also worthy of mention that anybody who makes a representation on an application shall be given an opportunity of being heard by the Development and Planning Commission at a meeting. This provision was absent in the current Town Planning Act 1999.

Under the new Town Planning Bill, the enforcement procedure, known as enforcement orders in the current Town Planning Act 1999, has been modified to enable the DPC to issue an enforcement notice where a breach of planning control has taken place. Failure to comply with said enforcement notice constitutes an offence. This differs from the arrangement under the current Town Planning Act 1999, where the DPC had to first criminally convict a person in court before enforcement proceedings could be commenced. It is hoped that this change will assist in the speedy enforcement of planning control and reduce the need to go through lengthy and costly court proceedings, except of course when a person refuses to comply with the requirements of an enforcement notice.

Additionally, the new Town Planning Bill now allows the DPC to take legal action and commence proceedings for an offence 12 months from the date of the commission of the offence or the matter complained of was discovered. This differs from the previous standards under the Town Planning Act 1999, where cases were required to be brought to court within six months, and also further highlights that time starts to run from discovery of the offence and not from the date it actually occurred.

Mr Speaker, appeals against enforcement notices were also absent in the current Town Planning Act 1999 and this has now been catered for. Equally, the penalty for being found in breach of an enforcement notice has now been increased to a fine at level 5 on the standard scale and to a daily fine at level 3 on the standard scale for each day the terms of the notice are not complied with. The level of fines within the new Act has also been increased in relation to stoppage orders and general offences.

Mr Speaker, the current Town Planning Act 1999 gave the Commission the power to modify planning permission. It did not cater for situations when applicants wanted to make minor amendments to planning permission after it was granted. However, we have now catered for this and the Bill allows an applicant to make an application to the Commission for a minor amendment to a previously granted planning permission. This provision gives the Commission the power to accept these minor changes provided that they are within the parameters stipulated therein. It also allows the Commission, if it considers it appropriate, the right to require an applicant to serve notice of the minor amendments on certain individuals and allows them an opportunity to make representations. Along the same lines, but in this case before planning permission has been granted by the DPC, the new Bill also gives an applicant the power to modify his application provided permission is sought and obtained from the DPC for such modification beforehand. If this power is indeed exercised by the applicant, the DPC may then require that said modifications sought are subject to the public participation process.

In addition to the requirements for notification, the Commission may require applicants for planning permission to bring the application to the attention of specified individuals. The majority of people within the vicinity of the land to which applications relate are thus made aware of the application.

Mr Speaker, finally, the new Town Planning Act provides a regulation-making power to regulate the painting of the external facade of any buildings and also provides a right of appeal to the tribunal from a decision by the Commission on advertisement of applications. This was 570 absent and not catered for in the current Town Planning Act 1999.

I commend this Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill? The Hon. Trevor Hammond.
575

Hon. T N Hammond: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

This is a very welcome Bill and I can assure the Minister that on this side of the House we will be supporting the Bill.

Of course, elements of the Bill originate in the GSLP's 2011 New Dawn manifesto. Obviously 580 they were not delivered during that period but they are now being delivered, so they are welcomed in that respect. It is a shame that the Bill was not presented earlier and seven years have passed, because obviously a number of projects – some of which may be considered controversial by some – have been put through by Government, which may otherwise have received more challenge through the DPC process. I am thinking, for instance, of the current 585 blocks being built at Europa Point, which are not necessarily the most popular and may have received some challenge. Nevertheless, I do not want to make this a political argument. To be honest, it is a welcome piece of legislation.

Coming to the legislation itself, I wonder if the Minister would consider or clarify why perhaps some of these points have not been considered as part of the Bill, or that they may be 590 incorporated going forward.

In terms of the appeals process – which I know in this Bill is a copy-paste, effectively, of what was previously there – as I said, the previous legislation allowed only planning applicants to appeal decisions of the DPC, which seems to load the process somewhat in favour of the applicants, and I thought perhaps that that was something that this Bill might have addressed. I 595 do regret not bringing it to the Minister's attention sooner but would ask Government whether they would consider introducing such amendment to allow objectors to appeal to planning decisions and thereby redress that current imbalance.

The newest and arguably most important part of the legislation is that requiring Government projects to be subjected to the planning process, a change which we on this side, as I have said, 600 wholeheartedly welcome. There is a caveat in that particular part of the legislation for urgent cases and I would ask the Minister to explain further how this clause might be invoked and in what circumstances – in other words, what might be considered urgent – because it would be unfortunate if such a clause were to be used as a matter of convenience out of political expediency. I am sure this is not the intention, but clarification would be welcome.

Mr Speaker, another question that arises from this section of the Bill is whether Ministers will continue to sit on the DPC when it is considering Government projects. There would be a very clear conflict of interest in such cases and I would again ask the Minister if such has been considered and would provision be made, when these circumstances inevitably arise, to deal with such conflicts by excluding Ministers or having Ministers recuse themselves, as perhaps 610 would be the case for other members of the Committee should an application be received from them specifically. The next step, of course, might be to remove Ministers entirely from the DPC, and I am sure that is something that may be subject to further debate and further discussion possibly at future General Elections; but doing so would clearly increase the independence of that particular body, the DPC, from the executive.

615 Mr Speaker, I say again we will be supporting this Bill.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on this Bill? The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Yes, Mr Speaker. I want to just highlight the seminal importance of this Bill, which is one that, in the same way as with the Freedom of Information Act, was originally trailed in our first manifesto and, for reasons which the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister and now the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning, Paul Balban, have explained, was not delivered in that original first period in government. They are now being delivered.

I was struck by one of the things that the hon. Gentleman said, which was the apparent regret on the side of Members opposite – representing, the last time I checked, the party that I used to know as the Gibraltar Social Democrats; their regret that we had not brought the Bill during the lifetime of the first period in government of the GSLP/Liberals. And yet, Mr Speaker, over lunch, just to amuse myself, I went back and read some of the things that they had said about this policy during the lifetime of the last Parliament under the former, former Leader of the Opposition. (Interjection) It was in fact Sir Peter Caruana – the man some opposite have wanted to describe as the greatest Gibraltarian of all time, for whom hon. Members threw a lavish party at Grand Battery House – who advised us to include the caveat that the hon. Member has described about urgency etc. should we be foolish enough to progress with the policy of having this particular Bill on the statute book and subjecting Government projects to the town planning process.

Indeed, Mr Speaker, when we used to criticise hon. Members opposite and say that when they said we were not transparent and that we had failed to be a new dawn, we reminded them inter alia not just of the publication of information that we do as a matter of course, which they do not even have to ask us for, which is covered by the Freedom of Information Act, but in particular in respect of town planning we used to say, ‘You didn’t have an open planning process. You held the planning meetings behind closed doors. You didn’t even publish the minutes.’ They said to us once, Mr Speaker, dealing with that issue and saying that we were reflecting that to them under the previous administration meetings would be held behind closed doors and minutes would never get published ... ‘But to such charges there are simple answers,’ their spokesman for town planning said to us during the lifetime of the last Parliament (Interjection) when he tells us that we should have brought this Bill. (Interjection) That was the policy of the GSD then and it remains the policy of the GSD now.

Mr Speaker, I suppose in the context of seeking a unanimous support and conviviality in the passing of legislation we just gave them a chance to think things through and a few years later what was the policy of the GSD then is no longer the policy of the GSD now. They have now aligned themselves with us and they are voting with us for this Bill, so I guess we are all commending the Bill to the House. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Does the hon. mover wish to reply?

Hon. P J Balban: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I think the Hon. the Chief Minister has already eloquently responded to most of the points across the floor.

I would like to thank Members opposite for supporting the Bill. It is a very important Bill. It puts right many things that were not addressed before and issues that the Department were facing for a while with procedure, and brings the legislation up to date, which is important.

I would also like to thank the Deputy Chief Minister, who left the Bill ready but for the full stop at the end. I thank him for the help while he was Minister with responsibility for town planning and building control.

Just to sum up then, as I said, we have gone a long way. The Chief Minister has explained how meetings of the DPC were not held in public. Nowadays they are held in public. This Bill also allows for the tribunals to be held in public, which were not the case also. So there is full transparency in that respect.

670 I think this Bill will not only help applicants but it will also help the Department of Town Planning and Building Control to continue doing the great work that they do for the Government.

Thank you.

675 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to revise the law governing planning and development and for connected purposes be read a second time. Those in favour?
(Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Town Planning Act 2018.

Town Planning Bill 2018 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

680 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

685 Clerk: Committee Stage and Third Reading.
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

690 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should resolve itself into Committee to consider the following Bills clause by clause: the Tobacco (Amendment) Act Bill 2017, the Immigration and Asylum Bill 2018, the Freedom of Information Bill 2016, the European Parliamentary Elections (Amendment) Bill 2018, the Heritage and Antiquities Bill 2018, the Cemeteries Bill 2018, the Nature Protection (Amendment) Bill 2018 and

Tobacco (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Clauses considered and approved with amendments

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Tobacco Act 1997.
Clause 1 as amended.

700 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the first amendment, which hon. Members will not see in the marked up version of the Bill that was sent, is of course the date, which at the moment reflects 2017 and will need to reflect 2018.

Mr Chairman: Clause 1 as amended stands part of the Bill.

705 Clerk: Clause 2.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

710 Clerk: Clause 3 as amended.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, that is the amendment, in red.

Mr Chairman: The amendment has been circulated in what I shall describe as a rather novel fashion. It is perfectly acceptable if hon. Members understand what it amounts to, but I want to make sure, because there is a departure from the more accepted form, that hon. Members are able to follow what the amendment is. If they are, then there is no problem and it will then be for the Clerk, acting on behalf of Parliament, to transmit the amended version for publication. Is that clear for hon. Members of the Opposition? Are they clear on what –?

720 Hon. D A Feetham: Tracked changes are much more useful and much easier to follow.

Mr Chairman: But it is a departure from the Rules, in a sense. Clause 3 as amended stands part of the Bill.

725 Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Mr Chairman: Members have received notification. To clause 14 there is an amendment. Is it agreed to?

Mr Chairman: Clause 14 as amended stands part of the Bill.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, may I? On Schedule 2, part 5, the Minister gave a notice, the 'Bombay Bristol bomber', and after that the entry alongside 'East side aircraft', referring to the part of the location. He is now clarifying that by putting 'off Eastern Beach'. I just want to make Mr Chairman aware that behind the Speaker's Chair I did have a word with the Minister, and if the Minister can confirm that at some future date when the Government is ready for it, the whole of Part 5 needs a bit of clarification on the locations. We are talking about submerged heritage and although it does pinpoint how deep down it is, we have no idea. The amendment the Minister proposed has certified that the East side aircraft is actually off Eastern Beach, but the others, one has no idea whether to search on the East side or the West side of the Rock. What I am trying to say is that we have no difficulty in accepting this, but the understanding, for the record, is that the locations will be actually modified or better pinpointed in future. Perhaps the Minister can contribute to this one as well.

960

Mr Chairman, I did explain it to the hon. Members who met with me, but the Hon. Mr Reyes was not there. This has all been plotted on GIS and therefore this will be available in hard copy officially as a formal document in the Minister for Heritage's office and will also be available in electronic form. So it will be absolutely clear exactly what the limits of all these sites are. This will be available, I am informed, as soon as the Act is commenced.

965

Hon. E J Reyes: It is acceptable to me, Mr Chairman; it is just a question of someone reading the Bill when it becomes an Act there, unless there is some specific note that says, 'Go to the Minister's office to find the location' is just ... One has to rely on something other than primary legislation to know the exact location. I am just making an enquiry as to the validity if one sits in an office and looks at the actual Act.

970

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: It is stipulated. I am just having the legal draftsman who worked very, very hard on this and all the other Bills... just checking the exact location, but there is a reference to that.

975

I thank my legal adviser for that. In section 12 (2) it says:

Schedule 2 shall be in such form as prescribed by the Minister and accompanied by such plans as deposited at the offices of the Minister with responsibility for heritage.

So that will be the formal register, so to speak, of the Schedule and it will be there, available both in hard and electronic copy. So it is clearly specified that that will be there.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful for that clarification, Mr Chairman.

1020 Mr Chairman: Could I seek clarification from the Hon. the Minister that clause 4(1), once amended, will read ...? Would he explain exactly how it will read when those amendments are made? It will not be the Government. Will it be 'The Attorney-General shall in consultation with the Governor appoint a person by notice'? Am I correct?

Hon. D A Feetham: Did Mr Chairman say 'shall'?

1050 Mr Chairman: The amendment of which notice has been given is to take away 'Government' and substitute in its place 'Attorney-General' –

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, that makes sense.

1055 Mr Chairman: – and therefore it will read: 'The Attorney-General shall in consultation with the Governor' – (Hon. D A Feetham: No.) No?

1060 Hon. D A Feetham: No, there is no 'shall' there, because this is a removal. It is 'may only remove', not 'shall'. So, what it reads is: 'The Attorney-General after consultation with the Governor may only remove' –

Hon. N F Costa: No, Danny, Mr Chairman is referring to clause 4; you are referring, I think, to clause 4(6). (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Yes, Mr Chairman was referring to clause 4 and therefore he has correctly read the substitution of – 1065 Hon. D A Feetham: I beg your pardon. I was reading that and thought this cannot be 'shall' because it's missing one.

Clerk: Clause 4 as amended.

1115 Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, if I may, just on paragraph 22?

Mr Chairman: Clause 22 or paragraph? Is it clause 22?

Hon. T N Hammond: I believe it will be clause 22 – yes, 22(1)(a) is what I am referring to. I notice that there has been a subtle but possibly significant change from the previous Act insofar as it now reads:

a certificate stating that the applicant is the sole owner of the land to which the application relates;

It used to say 'is an owner of the land' and I just wonder, for my understanding, why that change was made and what is the effect of that change. Presumably it is possibly the case that there could be multiple owners, and how will that impact on their ability to apply?

1125 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Chairman, this refers to applications where there is only one owner – that is a sole owner. If there is more than one owner, then this would not apply.

1130 Hon. T N Hammond: In which case, could the Minister perhaps point me to the section that applies to multiple ownership? I am not quite clear on where that section would arise.

1135 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Chairman, actually 22(1) (b) is when there are multiple owners. So section 22(1)(a) is for when there is only one, sole, owner, and the following section, which is section (b), is when there is more than one owner.

1140 Hon. T N Hammond: Yes, I understand that, but in a case where perhaps all the owners are of one mind, in other words they all wish to make an application – for example, a building where there are three owners and they want to put a lift in the building and they wish to apply as one – paragraph (b) does not really make for that particular provision, so I am slightly confused. What paragraph (b) says is that yes, if there are multiple owners an individual who wishes to make an application must notify those other owners. What is not clear to me is if there are multiple owners all of the same mind, what process would they follow, because at the moment this only applies to a sole owner.

1145 Hon. P J Balban: If there was more than one owner, they would still have to provide proof that they were in agreement. They would not be accepted. If it is only one sole owner, then (a) would be relevant. Otherwise, if it is more than one owner, even if they commonly believe that they want a lift in a block, they will still have to prove that the other owners are parties to that application.

1150 Hon. T N Hammond: So, if I understand it then, one of the owners – because he would not be a sole owner – even though they are all of the same mind, one of the owners would have to approach the other owners in accordance with paragraph (b) and go through that process. There is no way for them to put in a joint application for the property.

1155        Wouldn't it be sensible to have a process for a joint application where owners are of the same mind? It just strikes me as making it more straightforward for everybody involved if you could just have a single joint application in those circumstances.

1160        Hon. P J Balban: I would need to speak to Legislation, but I would assume if there is proof that the, say three, owners are in agreement and there are three signatures on one application ... I suppose that is something which can be considered and I will refer that back to the law drafters. Otherwise, there is no guarantee, unless there are three consents, that all three are happy with that application.

1165        Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, the reason I ask is purely because the previous legislation did not have that provision; it just said 'an owner', and so this change has been made deliberately in this Bill. I assumed perhaps there was some precedent, there was some reason why that change had been made and that the experience of the DPC indicates that there is value in making the change. But what I am understanding is that there is not necessarily any real value and it is just perhaps hindering a certain sector who may wish to make a joint application.

1170        Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I am told that this was because there have been applications before where someone has claimed that they are one owner. So the idea was if you are a sole owner then there will be no need to seek permission or approval from anybody else. There have been cases that have come to the Department, hence leading in the need to change or draft this section of the law.

1180        Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Chairman, I can understand the need to demonstrate where a sole applicant is making an application for a piece of land or... that they need to demonstrate that they are the sole owner, and were they not the sole owner and other applicants have not come forward for the same project there would clearly be a need on the part of that particular individual to seek the approval of the other owners, if they have not come forward. But surely where you have a situation where there are a number of owners all of the same mind and they have all signed the application, wouldn't it make sense to have a facility for them just to be able to sign the application rather than have to go through a separate process whereby one of the owners – and, I do not know, there could be 16 other owners of the same building – that one of the owners has to approach all of the other owners, who are in agreement with him anyway just to comply with part (b)? It would be far more straightforward, surely, if the application itself could be signed by all the owners to say, 'We are of one mind'.

1190        Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I am just being told that if it is of help, what can happen is we can say, as part of clause 22(1)(a), 'a certificate stating that the applicant is the sole owner/s'. So we can add 's' and that will maybe address the issue.

1195        Hon. T N Hammond: If we said 'is/are the sole owner/s', that would obviously deal with that issue, so that would make sense, yes.

1200        Mr Chairman: If we are going to have a small amendment to that, I require it in writing. Let me see it before you circulate it.

1205        This does not make sense, the English: the applicant cannot be the sole owners: applicant is singular and owners is plural.

Perhaps 'sole owner/owners', possibly? The amendment would then be: 'That clause 22(1)(a) be amended by substituting for "the applicant is the sole owner" the words "the applicant is the sole owner/s".' Is that understood? Effectively, by omitting the word 'owner' in 22(1)(a) and substituting therefor the word 'owner/s', it is either one or the other.

Hon. T N Hammond: In which case, Mr Chairman, surely grammatically it would have to read 'The applicant is/are the sole owner/s'.

Mr Chairman: But there is only one applicant. There would be one application made on one single form, and that would be on behalf of owner or owners.

Okay? That is then the amendment. Is that approved? Call it out. Clause 22 as amended.

Clerk: Clause 22 as amended.

Progress of Brexit negotiations – Statement by the Chief Minister

Clerk: (iii) Communications from the Chair; (iv) Petitions; (v) Announcements – the Hon. the Chief Minister.

10

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, by your leave I am going to make a statement on the progress of ongoing Brexit negotiations in respect of Gibraltar's departure from membership of the European Union alongside the United Kingdom.

15

As hon. Members will already know, the Deputy Chief Minister has convened a further informal meeting of the Brexit Select Committee of this House for tomorrow. This will be the 12th such meeting, resulting in at least as many hours of confidential briefings. At these meetings hon. Members have been briefed in careful detail about the ongoing discreet contact that the Government has had in the context of these negotiations. These contacts include discussions with Spain in its capacity as one of the remaining 27 member states of the European Union.

20

Mr Speaker, I addressed the nation on 28th March this year, one year before the date when our departure from the EU will be legally effective, in order to set out as much detail as I could then of what the EU discussions were likely to entail. I told the community then that we were entirely confident that the Withdrawal Agreement must and will fully apply to Gibraltar. I am even more confident now that this will be the case. That means that any mechanism agreed between the United Kingdom and the European Union for orderly withdrawal and continued market access will fully cover Gibraltar and that we will enjoy continued access to the EU single market until at least the end of the transition period.

30 The work that the Prime Minister is doing in Salzburg today will, I sincerely hope, also move the United Kingdom and the EU closer to such arrangements. In that context we have also sought to establish new lines of co-operation with the EU, and in particular with our neighbouring member state, Spain. Indeed, successive Governments of Gibraltar have sought such a relationship before, and we have done so without the need for any compulsion or threats of veto. We have done so because the people of Gibraltar have consistently sought good 35 neighbourly relations and we have consistently sought to demonstrate our belief in the European ideals. That has always been our nature and that is the work that we have been trying to discreetly do.

The Partido Popular administration of Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy took two distinct approaches to the Brexit negotiations. The first approach was spearheaded by Jose Manuel 40 Garcia Margallo in his time as Foreign Minister after the result of the EU referendum. He stated that the position then of the Partido Popular, the government in Spain, was that Gibraltar would have to accept the joint sovereignty proposals we had rejected in 2002 if we wanted a future relationship with the European Union. When he was replaced by Alfonso Dastis, the position of the Partido Popular, set out by the new minister and by Prime Minister Rajoy himself, was that 45 Spain would not be seeking to advance its sovereignty claim in the context of the Brexit negotiations for the Withdrawal Agreement. Indeed, in my statement in March I said that our people would have heard, and I quote, 'repeated statements from Spanish ministers setting out that sovereignty is not a matter they are seeking to raise in Brexit discussions'. I said also that I knew we would all welcome that, although we would be sceptical and alert to ensure that that remained the position throughout. We have been, Mr Speaker.

I am also pleased to be able to tell the House that the position of the PSOE administration of Pedro Sanchez has not changed in respect of the issue of sovereignty – that is to say the position of the Spanish government has not changed in relation to the negotiation of the Brexit 50 Withdrawal Agreement.

55 Hon. Members will therefore have been surprised to see some Partido Popular politicians in the past 48 hours suggesting that it has been a PSOE decision not to attempt to progress the sterile Spanish sovereignty claim. The fact is, Mr Speaker, that there has been no attempt to advance that sterile claim either under the Partido Popular or the PSOE in the context of these exit discussions. If there had been, everyone knows what the answer from us, on behalf of the whole House and Gibraltar as a whole, would have been: it would have been firm, clear and 60 absolutely negative.

We have had to be careful, of course, to ensure that the ingredients of sovereignty, including jurisdiction and control, have also been clearly understood not to be negotiable, and in that carefully circumscribed context we have advanced in respect of those areas denominated as 65 'irritants' by some. As I said at the time of my statement in March, we have considered matters related to the unlawful suspension of Gibraltar Airport from the European Civil Aviation rules despite the Cordoba Agreement of 2006 in respect thereof and the £84m airport that Members opposite built pursuant to it. We have also considered other matters of lower political profile. These include: firstly, our removal from unfairly compiled and maintained
70 Spanish tax haven blacklists and better co-operation between our tax authorities, as we have been proposing for years under successive Gibraltar Government administrations; better traffic flows at the Frontier; co-operation on police and customs matters, including curbing cross-Frontier smuggling in both directions and how best to ensure that we discourage illicit trade in specific items subject to excise and special duties; and better environmental co-operation,
75 especially in relation to air quality and the protection of the environment in the region of Gibraltar and the territory made up of the municipalities of the Mancomunidad de Municipios of the Campo de Gibraltar as a whole.

I also said in March that I was unable to say more about the structure and detail of the discussions we are engaged in. I said that I was unable to do so without endangering the real opportunities for progress that we had identified and not out of a desire not to be totally open with our community – although we would, of course, be fully briefing Cabinet Ministers and elected Opposition Members.

Mr Speaker, I do not feel that the time is yet right for me to be able to say more, but I will say this to the House and to the nation. Every time that the term ‘bilateral talks between the United Kingdom and Spain in relation to Gibraltar’ is wrongly attributed, both the United Kingdom and Gibraltar governments have repeated that such a description of the discreet discussions that are ongoing is not accurate. Both governments have repeated that there is no such separate bilateral process in relation to Gibraltar between the United Kingdom and Spain.

And although I will not say more, I know that everyone in this community will have heard the statements from the former Prime Minister of Spain, Mr Rajoy, about discussions with Gibraltar at the end of a European Council meeting in the spring. A transcript of his remarks published in various national and international media – and in fact there is a video of his remarks – reads as follows:

The conversations with Gibraltar will not deal with the issue of sovereignty because one thing is Brexit and another is that we maintain our position, as could not be otherwise and as everyone understands ...

– he said, when asked if Spain had now left the issue of sovereignty ‘totally to one side’.

Right now we are talking about Brexit and the issue of sovereignty is not being addressed here.

I think it is important that these words be recorded in Hansard for posterity, or indeed perpetuity, which may be a more appropriate word.

Additionally, this week, the current Spanish Foreign Minister, Josep Borrell, has spoken candidly about these discreet discussions in a breakfast forum in Madrid. His remarks have been widely reported. A transcript of his remarks, published in various national and international media, reads as follows:

The EU is negotiating, through Mr Barnier, the conditions of the UK’s withdrawal and has stated that in order for the withdrawal agreement to be applied to Gibraltar, this must be through a bilateral agreement between Spain and Gibraltar that we are negotiating. Even though [Mr Barnier] is not part of that negotiation, he is following it closely and he knows that without agreement on this, there will be no agreement on Brexit. As the Brexit negotiator, he is the first one to be interested in us reaching an agreement. That’s what we’re working on and I think we can be optimistic ... and I believe we are very close to a solution for the withdrawal agreement. What we are negotiating is not the return of Gibraltar to Spanish sovereignty, or the sharing of that sovereignty, but the conditions under which the withdrawal agreement can be applied to the territory of Gibraltar on very specific issues ... The President of the Government [of Spain] told Mr Barnier yesterday that Spain’s goal is that the agreement with Gibraltar should not be the last obstacle on the road but rather the first step toward the withdrawal agreement. In other words, that we should not get to the end and be in agreement on everything except Gibraltar, but that the agreement on Gibraltar should be the first step toward the final Brexit agreement.

Again, Mr Speaker, I think it is important these words should be recorded in Hansard.

As to the substance of the discussions, it is fair to say that we are not dissatisfied with progress. There is a long road still to go. But, like the Spanish Prime Minister is reported to have told the EU’s chief negotiator, we too hope that matters related to Gibraltar might be the first element of the Withdrawal Agreement and the future arrangements to be agreed in a positive spirit of co-operation between the UK and the EU, and between Gibraltar and the member state that is our closest neighbour, Spain.

That means that we would likely be finalising a differentiated deal to the rest of the United Kingdom as we leave full membership of the European Union. Some thought that that would not be possible. Indeed, some thought that we would be wrong to pursue such a solution. Yet today, some 26 months on, I am able to tell you confidently that the need for such a differentiated solution has been understood as much in London as it has in Brussels and in Madrid. Today I am optimistic that we will soon not hear more of sterile vetoes when it comes to Gibraltar and our future relationship with the EU. I sincerely believe that we will be able to talk 115 about a future for Gibraltar which provides not just for a continued, enduring, political relationship with Britain, but also of a continued, enduring, political relationship with Europe.

Considerable work has been done by the team I assembled in the immediate aftermath of the referendum to seek to secure the realistically deliverable opportunities that arise in the context of Brexit.

120 There is no deal to announce yet, there is not yet any definitive text beyond the Withdrawal Agreement to pore over that can be published, but there is an element of goodwill. There is understanding of what no deal can mean for the whole of the Campo de Gibraltar also. And I believe that there is a desire to see a future relationship which provides certainty to residents of Gibraltar and to citizens of the Union: certainty in protecting established rights, certainty of 125 Frontier fluidity and certainty in our continued relationship with Britain.

But Mr Speaker, as ever when it comes to international treaties in relation to Gibraltar, or indeed anything else, the devil is in the detail and we will remain entirely vigilant that there should not be any attempt to try to advance in areas of sovereignty or other unacceptable aspects of what might eventually be agreed or the form in which it might be agreed. That would 130 never be acceptable to any Government of Gibraltar or to this Parliament, but we will continue to seek a future in which Gibraltar will continue to have a relationship with the European Union that will deliver prosperity not just for us, but for all the Campo around us also.

Already we have seen our commercial access to the United Kingdom markets assured. We have seen health, education, gaming and financial services access secured as a result of the work 135 that we have done with the UK government. Now we hope to be able to say more in coming weeks of what else we have been able to secure for the future.

Mr Speaker, it is important that I should record the thanks of the Government for the work that is being done by the Government's Brexit team. In particular I must record the thanks of the Deputy Chief Minister and myself to the Attorney General, whose EU expertise is unrivalled and 140 who has been a huge asset to the nation at this time. The Financial Secretary is sharing also in some of the work that is being undertaken. Also alongside them are many other members of our public sector who have been called upon to assist us in the preparations and progress of these discussions in the different relevant areas.

I also want to thank Members opposite, Mr Speaker, who make up the Brexit Select 145 Committee for having respected the confidentiality and integrity of the briefings to date and for their constructive comments in this House about the work that the Government is doing, in particular Mr Feetham and Ms Hassan Nahon.

Finally, Mr Speaker, it is expected that the final arrangements between the UK and the EU will be finalised in coming weeks. At most, it would appear that eight weeks is now the limit for 150 reaching a potential Brexit General Affairs Council of the European Union in mid-November. We will be involved in continuing discussions and meetings of variable geometry between now and then. We will therefore not be able to hold monthly meetings of the House in that period. At this same time, we will also be attending the annual political conferences of the political parties in the UK as well as the meeting of the 4th Committee of the General Assembly of the United 155 Nations. And throughout this period we will be at what one might call 'peak Brexit'. Those who are addicted to the 24-hour news cycle should be ready for many ups and downs and many peaks and troughs, and indeed a little bit of drama.

We must all keep in our minds that this process is a negotiation that has been visited upon us all not by any action or desire on our part, but by the decision of the British people, at the suit of 160 Brexiteers, that we should leave the European Union.

Today, Mr Speaker, as a result, after questions I will move into Bills, as it will be necessary for me to take a number of Bills on the Order Paper, some of them, if possible, before the end of September. The House will then resume for consideration of Bills and, after that, will then resume again for questions as soon as possible.

165 Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: In keeping with established practice when a ministerial statement is made, hon. Members of the Opposition may ask questions for clarification purposes. They may ask questions; they are not entitled under the Rules to make a political statement, but I invite them to ask questions to clarify anything in the Chief Minister's statement that they wish to know more about.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, we have a Brexit meeting tomorrow, so therefore any questions that I have in relation to this we can ask tomorrow after considering in detail the Statement the Hon. the Chief Minister has made.

I did want to say a few words on behalf of the Opposition with Mr Speaker's indulgence, if that is at all possible; if not, I will sit down and will not labour the point any further.

Mr Speaker: The problem is that 'a few words' becomes a political statement, and that, as I say, hon. Members of the Opposition are not entitled to do. Hon. Members of the Opposition are entitled to make personal statements, but the Rules do not allow for them to make a statement of the nature the Chief Minister has made. Nevertheless, as per established practice over the years, they are able to ask questions for clarification. Surely it is within the wherewithal of hon. Members to phrase questions in such a way that they are getting more clarification from the Chief Minister and, if necessary, making their views known. That is the practice which they use, in any case, at Question Time, so it is not particularly different.

Hon. D A Feetham: The difficulty with the course of action that Mr Speaker proposes is that we have been, as indeed the Chief Minister has recognised during the course of his contribution and Statement to this House today, been very, very careful not to divulge anything that has been imparted to us on a confidential basis within the context of the Brexit Select Committee.

It is very difficult from this side of the House to divorce ourselves from information that has been imparted to us in that context in devising questions of the Chief Minister on his Statement, and therefore it could lead to us effectively asking questions that place the Chief Minister in a difficult position, or indeed questions that we would not wish to ask in public.

I was going to say a few words, but Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: If I understand the hon. Member more clearly, if what he wishes to do is make a statement which broadly speaking is in support of the Government, then I have no problem in allowing that.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.
On behalf of the Opposition –

Mr Speaker: A short statement.

Hon. D A Feetham: It will be.

On behalf of the Opposition, I think it is important that we publicly state in this House what our position is on a statement of importance such as the Chief Minister has just made.

It is incumbent on me, on behalf of my colleagues, to wish the Government Godspeed in relation to its endeavour in reaching the best possible agreement for Gibraltar. Ultimately we are public servants working for the people and no public servant would do otherwise; we are also either business owners or employees, or have children who take advantage of our education system; we all use the GHA. All of those are dependent in one form or another on the Government successfully being able to navigate what is a minefield and successfully come back with an agreement for Gibraltar.

I will also say this, Mr Speaker: that of course, having said that, there is a difference between this side of the House and that side of the House. I have recognised on many occasions that the Government has kept the Opposition fully briefed in relation to the discussions that have taken place between the Government and the United Kingdom, and indeed also, I recognise having been subject to the Statement that the Hon. the Chief Minister has made, its discussions directly with Spain. I have never said that publicly, but of course now that it has been said in this House by the Hon. the Chief Minister I recognise that we have been briefed in relation to those.

The difference, Mr Speaker – and I do not wish to make this in any way, shape or form subject to the political cut and thrust that one has in relation to other issues – is that of course we would have, had we been in government, fully involved the Opposition of the day in the process, in those negotiations and in those discussions, as has happened in the past, in particular between the AACR Government and the then Opposition.

Mr Speaker, therefore, in that context, we will continue to keep a very close eye on developments and by necessity we need to reserve our position as an Opposition, having not participated in those discussions, in what emerges ultimately from this particular process, and of course comment at that stage.

I will say this, and I have been asked by the leader of the party to make these points, which are apposite in my respectful view: first of all, any talks that are taking place have got to be structurally sound, and by that I mean that bilateralism between the United Kingdom and Spain is out of the question. In that context, I have heard what the Hon. the Chief Minister says and of course on this side of the House it is, of course music to our ears. It is right and the Government is absolutely right to engage with Spain directly in relation to these talks. What the UK is negotiating with the EU may well be apposite to the UK but may not be apposite in respect of Gibraltar and it is right that the Government should engage directly with Spain in order to attempt to reach the best possible solution and deal for Gibraltar, of course always bearing in mind – and again I do not doubt the Chief Minister's words and assurances to this House and I welcome them – that in that context there is no question of either sovereignty, jurisdiction or control being on the line in any of the discussions that the Chief Minister has had, or his officials have had with Spanish officials.

Mr Speaker, lastly, I also want to say this. It is certainly true, from briefings that we have received – and I mention this because again the Chief Minister has said so during the course of his intervention – that both the PSOE and the PP before it were approaching this from the point of view of parking sovereignty, parking jurisdiction and control and concentrating effectively on issues that are of mutual benefit to both Spain and also Gibraltar. But I wish to make a point that I have made always when I have gone to Spain and I have given speeches in Spain or lectures at universities, which I have done on many occasions: that to do otherwise and to pursue its sovereignty, jurisdiction or control concessions – which will never, ever be acceptable either to the Government of Gibraltar or to Her Majesty's Opposition here in Gibraltar – is effectively to condemn the process to no agreement at all because no Gibraltarian is ever going to agree to those types of concessions, and all it does, all it ultimately will do is effectively push Gibraltar towards seeking greater political links with the United Kingdom, and that is not in Spain's interest.

With that, I end my contribution and I wish to thank Mr Speaker for his indulgence in allowing me to say those words.

Mr Speaker: Does the Chief Minister wish to reply to any matter raised?

The hon. Lady – does she wish to raise any point?

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I would like to thank the Chief Minister for his Statement and, for my part in this little corner of the House, I want to thank the Government for all the hard work that they are putting into the Brexit negotiations and say unequivocally that I recognise that this Government has a mandate to manage Brexit and they are doing the best job

270 that they possibly can and right now is not the time for political point scoring, divisions and trying to get one over on anyone. We are all in this together. If there comes a time to nit-pick on the Government's performance on Brexit, the time will come, but I think right now we all need to focus our energies together, try and be constructive and support the Government for a future which we all want to work out for every single one of us.

Thank you.

275

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, thank you for the opportunity to reply to those points.

280 I do not know that the right to respond to a Statement under the Rules is any different whether one is going to – 285 Mr Speaker: What used to happen during the 20 years when I was a Member is that in practice they were not allowed to reply, except on some occasions when it was a matter of foreign affairs – then Speakers were somewhat more liberal. Without going as far as they do in the House of Commons, I think it is beneficial to Members and to Gibraltar generally that a statement such as that made by the Hon. Daniel Feetham ... that opportunity should be given, which also gives the Chief Minister an opportunity to further elaborate.

290 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not think that the hon. Gentleman has made a statement which is lacking in controversy, and therefore unfortunately I think that we may have strayed into territory that may not necessarily be in the best interest of Gibraltar.

295 I will try and deal with the points made in a way that is as circumspect as possible, but I would commend Mr Speaker that the rule as to how and when Statements are replied to should be followed for the purposes of ensuring that we do not err in the way that we might have today.

300 Mr Speaker, I have not said that we are engaging directly in contact with Spain in the way that I think the hon. Gentleman has interpreted. I have said that we are being discreet about the type of contact that we are having but I have repeated and read into Hansard for this historical record the words of the former President of the Spanish Government and the words of the current Spanish Foreign Minister so that nobody will be able to point to the Chief Minister of Gibraltar as having indicated what the nature of the discussions being held has been.

305 I think that is very important, Mr Speaker, because if one is loyal and faithful to a process which one enters into and one has said that we are going to be discreet for a reason, and others are not discreet, then it is important that it is the lack of discretion of others that is reflected. I think it is an important point, Mr Speaker.

The hon. Gentleman has then erred directly into controversy by saying that if they were the Government they would have fully involved the Opposition – as if we had not, Mr Speaker – in the negotiations, like he says the AACR did – 310 Mr Speaker: Let me answer that, as the only living member of the AACR. Under the discussions on the Brussels Agreement the AACR did not involve the Opposition at all. The AACR only involved the Opposition prior to Brussels at the time when they were appearing as petitioners in the United Kingdom, and on one occasion in 1981, when Mr Francis Pym was Foreign Secretary, I myself accompanied Sir Joshua with the late Peter Isola and Mr Peter Isola 315 was present at the talks with Francis Pym. Subsequent to that, there was no occasion, between then and when we left Government, when the AACR involved the Opposition in anything to do with Brussels.

Hon. Chief Minister: That is exactly the point, Mr Speaker, and I am grateful for that.

320 Additionally, Mr Speaker, it is particularly important that when hon. Members make points as to what they would do we must judge them not against what others did but against what they did. So it is all very well to say, 'We would have done, if we were in government, what the AACR did' – and, Mr Speaker, my recollection of the historical record that you have set out as to that time is exactly as you have provided – but hon. Members were in government in 2002 when the 325 joint sovereignty issue came and hon. Members were in government in 2005 and 2006 and subsequently when the Trilateral Forum was engaged and the Cordoba Agreements were produced, and they did not involve the Opposition. So, for hon. Members to say, 'We would have done what others did' but not to reflect on what they actually did the last time that there was an opportunity for engagement I think strays into controversy, because I am sorry to say to 330 them that it is not believable that they would have acted now in a way that is different to the way that they acted in 2005 and 2006 and 2002 and 2003. Indeed, Mr Speaker, I know that there were many voices urging the then administration to involve the GSLP Opposition in the discussions in Cordoba so that what emerged was not a GSD deal, it was a Gibraltar deal, and similar sentiments were expressed on the Spanish side that the PSOE should involve the Partido 335 Popular, and to an extent they did but then there was a rejection of that by the other side.
Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman cannot, in my view, get up and say something which incurs into that level of controversy without expecting me to reply.

Mr Speaker, finally, I was surprised that in the context of what we were discussing today he should explicitly say that he was going to act as ventriloquist for the leader of the party, who is 340 not present in the House. (Hon. D A Feetham: Doing a Lazarus.)

We have heard that there may be judgements on what we do once it emerges. Well, Mr Speaker, that is probably the biggest non-statement in history: 'Once something is done, we will see whether it is rightly done.' Of course that is when you will judge when it is rightly done.

345 And that things must be structurally sound: well, Mr Speaker, I have just said in the House, for the purposes of Hansard, that we are satisfied that things are structurally sound. And I think hon. Members know enough about what is going on, in the context of the confidentiality of the briefings that they have had, to know that things are structurally sound.

And that we are always bearing in mind issues of sovereignty, jurisdiction or control: I have said so specifically today, Mr Speaker.

350 The other issue that I was surprised to hear the hon. Gentleman raise was in fact a repetition of the position that I had set out on behalf of the Government and the whole Parliament that Gibraltar would never engage in a dialogue, in a process or in a discussion, let alone a negotiation, which sought to engage sovereignty simpliciter or indeed the ingredients of sovereignty and sovereignty, jurisdiction or control. But, Mr Speaker, I am not going to come to 355 this House to advise Spain what is in her interests or not; I will leave that to others.

I do recognise that I have gone into the controversial aspects of what the hon. Gentleman has said; he has said them, so I feel politically I have to deal with them.

360 I also want to thank him for the things he has said, other than those points I have taken, which are supportive of the position of the Government, and I think the hon. Lady's expression of it was as eloquent as his when he started, which is that we are, in effect, all of us in this together. In the same way as Lord Denning said that European law had flowed into the rivers and tributaries of English law, the consequences of Brexit will flow into the rivers tributaries and veins of everything that we do as a community and everything that the United Kingdom does as a nation after 29th March and as a result of the arrangements that are entered into for 365 withdrawal, if any such arrangements are entered into, as I sincerely believe they are likely to be entered into. So this is going to affect everything, whether it is the Health Service and who can work in the Health Service, who is able to trade from Gibraltar and what they are able to trade in and how they are able to trade, every aspect of our lives will be affected, whichever side of the House we sit on, whatever political ideology we pursue. And so I thank hon. Members opposite 370 for those parts of their interventions that recognise that and those parts of their interventions that non-controversially supported the work that is being done by the Government.

PAPERS TO BE LAID

Clerk: (vi) Papers to be laid – the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table the 375 Annual Report of the Gibraltar Police Authority for the year ended 31st March 2018.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Questions for Oral Answer

TOURISM, EMPLOYMENT, COMMERCIAL AVIATION AND THE PORT

Q446/2018

Disembarkation of sick crew member from MV Capetan Vassilis – Results of investigation

Clerk: (vii) Reports of Committees; (viii) Answers to Oral Questions.
We commence with Question 446/2018. The Hon. T N Hammond.

380

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, with reference to Questions 77 and 78/2016 and in respect of the investigation conducted by the Port Authority, has the Government made the conclusions of that report public; and if so, can the Government advise where they can be found?

385

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi):
Mr Speaker, I can confirm that an investigation into the disembarkation of a sick crew member 390 from the MV Capetan Vassilis on 10th January 2016 was carried out by the Gibraltar Port Authority. It appears that the findings of that investigation were not made public at the time despite the comments made by the Chief Minister and Mr Balban to Parliament in answer to Questions 77 and 78/2016. This was, as I understand it, an oversight.

I can, however, Mr Speaker, confirm that the findings of the investigation were that there 395 were failures to follow established protocols relating to the disembarkation of sick crew members by the Duty Port Officer, the vessel's local agents, the contracted launch service and the Port Medical Officer. The report concluded that the disembarkation in breach of established protocols occurred because the Gibraltar Port Authority were not provided with all the relevant facts concerning the sick crew member and the Duty Port Officer did not question the vessel 400 following a medical declaration of health which stated that there was a sick crew member on board.

Following the investigation, the following actions were taken by the Gibraltar Port Authority.

(1) A letter was sent to the vessel's local agent advising them that the GPA considered that 405 their failure to follow prescribed protocols was a breach of the terms of their licence and that the GPA was minded to suspend their licence for two weeks. The agent was invited to submit representations to the GPA. Following receipt of those representations, the penalty which the GPA proposed was itself suspended.

410 (2) A letter was sent to the operator of the service launch which evacuated the crew member from the vessel, stating that the GPA had identified various failings by the operator which the GPA considered amounted to a breach of the terms of their licence. The letter stated that the GPA was minded to suspend their licence for seven days. They were invited to submit representations to the GPA. Following receipt of those representations, the penalty which the GPA proposed was itself suspended.

415 (3) The Port Medical Officer was asked to attend a meeting with the Captain of the Port in order to assess what lessons could be learned for the future.

(4) A verbal warning was given to the Duty Port Officer which was to remain in his personal file for a period of three months and the officer required to receive remedial training on the relevant procedure and protocol.

420 (5) A Port circular was sent by the Captain of the Port to all shipping agents and operators which stated:

Following a recent incident I wish to reinforce the importance of the need to alert the GPA as soon as you become aware of a medical case, whether it requires medical attention or not, on board a ship bound for Gibraltar. This includes ALL vessels expected to enter BGTW and those conducting OPL transfers outside of BGTW.

In particular, I would like to remind all agents/operators that it is ESSENTIAL that they have GPA approval prior to any patient being disembarked. The GPA, in consultation with the GHA will advise/arrange for a doctor, paramedic team or ambulance to attend either on board or at the point of disembarkation, as directed by the GPA. The GPA port launch or a service launch will be used for transfers.

The doctor or ambulance paramedics will inform the GPA on the condition of the patient before such patient is permitted to be landed at Gibraltar.

This procedure also applies to any crew member who needs to attend a medical clinic. GPA is to be notified prior to disembarkation of such crew member.

Finally, Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the results of the investigations and the actions described above were provided to Mr Isola, who was the Minister for Maritime Services at the time, and Mr Balban, who was the then Minister for the Port. Both Mr Isola and Mr Balban were satisfied with the steps taken by the GPA on this matter.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for that comprehensive answer – just a couple of points from me.

As a report was clearly presented to the Ministers at the time, would it be possible to have that report shared, if it is still available, with the Opposition?

430

A number of measures were clearly taken subsequent to the incident, which is heartening to see and hear. In terms of the lesson learning that may have taken place – the Minister did refer to a lesson-learning session with the Captain of the Port – could the Minister perhaps clarify what lessons specifically were learned from this incident, apart from the actions that he has already described?

435

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I will start with the last point. The lessons were very simple. There are established protocols which were not followed. There is a very clear procedure in respect of vessels entering BGTW which has a paragraph on medical cases and all the steps that are required to be taken prior to disembarkation of a sick crew member. Some of those steps were not complied with and the lesson was quite simply that people needed to be reminded that those steps were required to be taken; that there are responsibilities firstly of the Duty Port Officer at the GPA, secondly of the agent of the vessel that is coming into Gibraltar, thirdly of any service launch that is used to go out to the boat, and fourthly of the Port Medical Officer. There were lessons and possible breaches in respect of each of those items and the lessons were that the protocols needed to be highlighted and reiterated. They did not need to be rewritten, they did not need to be re-established, because they existed already and they are very clear in their terms, and therefore the issue was how it is necessary to highlight and reinforce the importance of following those protocols which did exist and which continue to exist in the same 450 form because there was nothing to change in terms of the protocols or procedures – it was just the fact that those procedures were not carried out in this particular case.

445

As regards the report itself, I was careful in pulling out the findings. The report does mention names, but I am happy, if the hon. Member wants to see, on a confidential basis, the conclusions of that report, I can let the hon. Member see that. But, I was a little bit averse to making the whole of the report public because of the names that are mentioned, but I have been very clear in terms of the findings of the report and the actions which were taken as a result of that report.

Hon. T N Hammond: Clearly, Mr Speaker, there are matters of data protection which need to be considered; I fully understand that. If the Minister would share the conclusions as they are written, I would very much appreciate that.

460 Just one point on the established protocols – they are clearly effective, if followed; that seems to be one of the conclusions that has come about from the report. How are those expected to enact the protocols – obviously the GPA, the agents – made aware of those protocols? Is it part of their training, part of the job? Where are those protocols established that they might be able to determine in a future event – maybe something happens two, three or 465 four years down the line, where corporate knowledge has faded... that we can be assured that everyone is still aware of the protocols, where to find them and how to follow them?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, these are obviously internal protocols of the procedures of the GPA. They set out very clearly the responsibility primarily of the Duty Port Officer at the time and the communication that the Duty Port Officer has to make.

I cannot answer directly the question as to whether or where they can be found, but my understanding is that all agents and ship operators – all operators that are subject to licences and have to do with the Port, such as agents and service launch operators – are made aware and that this protocol is disseminated. That is something that I may need to confirm to the hon. 475 Member, but certainly the protocols are clear and training is given at the GPA level in terms of its own officers as to the need, because in the protocols it is not just protocol in relation to medical cases – medical cases is one section of the whole protocol which sets out the procedure for dealing with vessels entering British-Gibraltar Territorial Waters.

So there are various matters that need to be taken into account, including, where there is a 480 medical case, the steps that need to be taken in order to ensure that what happened in that particular case, which was essentially a disembarkation of somebody without those procedures being taken and without being clear as to precisely what the sick crew member had before being disembarked and before being taken to the quayside.

485 Mr Speaker: One last question.

Hon. T N Hammond: I do not want to labour the point, so would the Minister be happy perhaps if I write to him asking some specific questions on the detail of this? I know you will not have the answers to hand, so it would not be fair to ask you, and the questions maybe do not 490 arise directly from the original question. So, if the Minister is happy, I will write to him and just ask those questions in more detail.

Thank you.

Q447/2018

Housing estate refurbishment works – Frequency of inspections

Clerk: Question 447, the Hon. D A Feetham on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

495 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm the frequency of inspections by factory inspectors over the last 12 months at all housing estates in which refurbishment works are being conducted?

500 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the frequency with which factories inspectors undertook inspections over the last 12 months at housing estates in which refurbishment works are being conducted is as follows: 505 September 2017, 10; October 2017, 8; November 2017, 6; December 2017, 0; January 2018, 5; February 2018, 15; March 2018, 9; April 2018, 5; May 2018, 6; June 2018, 8; July 2018, 9; August 2018, 6. Therefore, in that one year, that 12-month period, the total number of inspections at housing estates in which refurbishments are being conducted was 87.

510 I would also add, Mr Speaker, that in respect of that very same 12-month period, the total number of inspections carried out by housing inspectors, including those housing estates, amounted to 671 in just a 12-month period.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

515 Hon. R M Clinton: I am sorry, Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Minister: how many factories inspectors are there at present?

520 Hon. G H Licudi: I believe the answer to that is three, but I may need to confirm that with the hon. Member.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, have there been any health and safety issues that have arisen as a consequence of these inspections that have been brought to the Minister's attention?

525 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, unless I go through the whole list of what it is they did and inspected on every single item ... The question simply related to the frequency, (Mr Speaker: Statistics.) statistics. This was a statistical question; I have got the statistical information. I do have a full report, but unless I go through it item by item, then that is not within the question.

530 I am happy for the hon. Member to raise that with me separately or invite him in a subsequent meeting if the hon. Member wants. It is just that the question was statistical and the information I have provided is concentrated on what was the statistical nature of the question.

535 Hon. D A Feetham: No doubt Mr Phillips will take up the Hon. Minister's kind offer, but may I ask this: that nothing has grabbed the Minister's eye, so to speak, in terms of any concerns that have been raised by the factories inspectors, that perhaps the Minister has taken a personal interest in?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I can confirm that no specific concern in respect of those 87 inspections has been raised with me.

Q448/2018
Unemployment –
Rate as at 12th September 2018

540 Clerk: Question 448, the Hon. D A Feetham on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips. (Interjection by the Chief Minister)

Hon. D A Feetham: Hombre, te dije de que I am doing a Lazarus here, you know!
Can the Government state the rate of unemployment as of 12th September 2018?

545

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi):
550 Mr Speaker, the average number of Gibraltarians registered unemployed in the second quarter of 2018 was 45.

Clerk: Question 449 –

555 Hon. D A Feetham: I have some supplementaries in relation to this.

Mr Speaker, obviously those are the people that are registered as unemployed, but as Minister for Employment does the Minister take an interest in relation to statistics from this point of view: how many people there are, for example, on the books of agencies on zero-hour contracts or on very few hours contracts?

Let me just explain the reason why I am asking this. Of course, you may have 45 people who are unemployed, but if you have another 45 who are on zero-hour contracts the reality of the situation is that they may be employed because they are on the books of the agency but really they are not in active employment as anybody outside in the street would understand it. Is that something that the Hon. Minister has looked into and taken an interest in?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, not in terms of my own responsibilities as Minister for Employment, because what the hon. Member is suggesting, or what it would essentially entail, is that in respect of all supply workers around Gibraltar, in respect of any such contracts which the hon. Member would have, I would have to take a personal interest in calling each agency and finding details of each particular employee registered with the Employment Service. From the Employment Service point of view, which is what I am answerable for and which is what the question relates to, there clearly is a collation of statistics and the answer that has been given is a statistical answer, but a lot of work goes on behind the scenes in terms of the employment clinics seeing people and making sure that you match vacancies to the people with the right skills. So a lot of work goes on in order to achieve the sort of statistics that we ultimately see reflected in the answer that I have just given, but if the question is do I call every single person that registered any kind of contract to find out how many hours each particular person works, the answer is no, I do not do that.

580 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Hon. Minister, bearing in mind that he is a Minister within a socialist Government – that is socialist with Liberal friends, but socialist Government – a socialist Government should take an interest in how many people out there are on zero-hour contracts or a handful of hours in their contracts, which will make a mockery of unemployment figures if there are hundreds of people out there, because you see that same way in which you 585 can mask true unemployment in Gibraltar, or indeed, at best for the Government, it would mask how many people there are in real jobs, because if you are on a zero-hour contract you are not in a real job.

I have to say, Mr Speaker, that I am astonished and astounded in equal measure that the Hon. the Minister seems to simply disregard the question as if it were something that only idiots falling from a tree would ask, which is a question that no doubt is relevant and pertinent to those people who are languishing in those zero-hour contracts.

Mr Speaker: But it is not relevant to the main question, which is about the number of people registered as unemployed, and no doubt when he reads Hansard the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition will ask a separate question, asking the Minister whether he knows how many people are on zero-hour contracts.

So you do not have to answer and certainly you do not have to defend the extent to which you are a socialist.

Next question.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, although it is true that I do not have to answer, and certainly it is more than true that I do not have to defend the extent to which I or my party, the Government, with the Liberals, have socialist credentials, the fact that not only was the question raised and asked but there was an accusation there of masking real figures and an expression of astonishment and astoundment by the hon. Members, which I do not think can be in equal measure ... Well, that falls well behind the astonishment and how astounded we were in much greater measure than the hon. Member has expressed today when we learnt, just before General Elections, on a programme that the hon. Member on GBC appeared on with me, that it was the hon. Members of the GSD who were in fact masking the relevant unemployment figures (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) and we learnt on that day, through the mouth of the hon. Member who is today asking the questions and who is suggesting that there is masking involved, that the GSD had been not just massaging the figures but hiding hundreds and hundreds of unemployed persons. When we came to know how much the Future Job Strategy was going to cost, or his own assessment of how much it was going to cost, we learnt that the reality was that there were around a thousand people unemployed when their figures gave a totally different answer. So don't give us any lectures on masking, and have a look at what you did.

A Member: Hear, hear.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): At least on our side there was a happy ending, we were elected. (Laughter)

Mr Speaker: Hon. Members are now debating. We are moving on to the next question. (Interjections and laughter) Yes, a question.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

May I ask the Minister, in relation to his answer – because the question was specifically about the rate of unemployment on a specific date and he gave the number 45 – from the Government website unemployment statistics, it refers to 'Unemployment quarterly average, Gibraltarians', so I ask the Minister: is the answer he gave just for Gibraltarians, or does that include all people who are entitled to register as unemployed?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the answer I gave specifically referred to the average number of Gibraltarians registered unemployed in the second quarter of 2018, and those are the figures that are generally given.

Although it is true that the question referred to rate of unemployment as of a particular date, 12th September, traditionally all these questions have been asked on the basis that the figures and the statistics are compiled on a quarterly basis and therefore always given.

640 I have examples of other questions that have been asked by Mr Phillips and previously by Mr Bossino specifically on this issue and on all occasions the answer is: 'The quarterly average of unemployed Gibraltarians for the last quarter' or 'for this particular quarter' in 2013 or 2014 'was x', so we have followed the same format that we have given in the past.

645 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer.
Is it then possible that in fact the number could be higher, even though he is only referring to Gibraltarians?

650 Hon. Chief Minister: I will tell the hon. Gentleman what I can do to assist, Mr Speaker: I see the general figure, not the figure which is broken down into Gibraltarians or others, and the general figure is the same as the figure the hon. Gentleman has given to Gibraltarians, which is, I believe, less than one-sixth of the number of people that the hon. Gentleman said, either in that same programme or in another, would constitute full employment for Gibraltar.

Q449/2018
Fast launch licences –
Approvals

655 Clerk: Question 449, the Hon. D A Feetham on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, given that Mr Speaker prevented me from having a happy ending, but can I say that I do not agree with the way that the hon. Gentlemen opposite have characterised my performance during the course of that debate.

660 I proceed to questions. Can the Government state the number of fast launch licences that have been approved since 26th November 2015?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

665 Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, nine fast launch licence applications have been approved since 26th September 2015.

670 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, when an application is made for a fast launch in Gibraltar, do the authorities consider the purpose of the licence? Presumably. Does he have any information in relation to what the purpose of those applications for the licences for the use of the fast launch was to be in relation to these prospective licensees?

675 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, there is a procedure. This is governed by statute. It is dealt with by the Gibraltar Port Authority and they will have the criteria which they will follow. I should say these are not referred to me; these are matters that are dealt with by the Gibraltar Port Authority. The ones that are referred to me are where there is an application for an exemption from the fast launch regime. Hon. Members may recall that when we made the small boats marina there was a provision made for an exemption for certain types of vessels from the fast launch regime up to a certain limit, in particular how fast the launch could go, not exceeding 680 40 knots in particular. But as far as I can see, all of these launches are simply recreational boats.

Q450/2018

B_tween Benches – Intention to install

Clerk: Question 450, the Hon. L F Llamas.

685 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, will the Government be installing the locally designed B_tween Benches?

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Housing and Equality.

690 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, yes, sir.
I want to take this opportunity to sincerely congratulate Mrs Ruth Massias Greenberg, on behalf of the Government, for her vision and sensitivity in coming up with this prize-winning design which the Ministry of Equality part sponsored. Mrs Greenberg won the third prize in the Street Seats International Design Challenge. Every Gibraltarian will have been proud to see her take that prize, especially for such a worthy purpose. Government will therefore definitely be 695 taking into consideration the availability of this new bench when replacing and/or installing new street benches. I very much look forward to seeing the benches installed in various appropriate locations to be identified.

Q451/2018

62/4 Flat Bastion Road – Complaints raised by previous tenant

Clerk: Question 451, the Hon. L F Llamas.

700 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, on behalf of the Official Opposition I would like to associate ourselves with the support for Mrs Ruth Massias Greenberg and congratulate the Government in their quest to install these benches in Gibraltar.

705 With regard to Question 451, can the Government provide a schedule with a list of complaints raised by the previous tenant of 62/4 Flat Bastion Road received by the Government up until June 2018, including the date and the nature of the complaint?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

710 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the information requests personal data relating to an identifiable individual and is therefore contrary to the GDPR or Data Protection Regulations.

715 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I will accept that that is the advice which she has received with regard to data protection. Nevertheless, I have been to visit this property. This property was handed over to Mr Gomez two and a half months ago –

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Sorry, Mr Speaker, on a point of order, I think the hon. Gentleman should not stray into mentioning names across the floor of the House. I think it is against the Rules that we should do so. I think he can probably find another way of describing 720 the gentleman. I would suggest he say 'the tenant', for example, rather than mentioning the name.

Hon. L F Llamas: Okay. I do apologise, Mr Speaker. It is just because it has been published in the press locally and he has given his permission. But in any event I appreciate that and do take 725 the point.

I did go and visit the tenant who received this property two and a half months ago and there are some serious issues which have not been dealt with, which I am told by the people who live around this property are problems that have been historic and have not been dealt with.

730 Would the Hon. Minister for Housing accompany me in visiting this property to see for herself what the issues are and whether it is acceptable for somebody to have received this property in this condition?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Gentleman is quite remarkable in the approach that he is taking, in the sense that perhaps if the hon. Gentleman wishes to 735 accompany the hon. Lady in her role as Minister, with her very full days, stay in the office as late as she does, do all the things that she needs to do structurally in respect of the Housing Department, he might then at the end be persuaded that, actually, for the Minister to go to each one of the properties where there may be a report which is then dealt with in keeping with the criteria and timing that each report requires – with now no backlog, thanks to the work that the 740 hon. Lady and previous Ministers for Housing under the current administration have done – he might find that picking out from simply the press the one case that has got media attention is not the appropriate way to deal with things.

In fact, it would be entirely inappropriate for prioritisation of works to be done on the basis of who shouts loudest on social media, who puts it on a newspaper or a broadcaster. In fact, 745 what the hon. Gentleman would be doing would be assisting somebody to jump the queue, assisting somebody to reprioritise himself in a way that is perhaps not appropriate, or indeed breaking the rule that Ministers are there to set policy, not to go on the ground to actually be doing the getting rid of the 'escaliche' and then doing the repainting. That is not the role, Mr Speaker. I know that he is in the political stable of the man who used to go out to the 750 building sites, not to see how it was going but to redesign the staircases, throw his hat on the ground and kick the wheels of the Jaguar, but we do not do business that way.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I will try another way. Is the Minister aware of the issues that are related to this property which are causing the tenant considerable stress regarding historical 755 issues, as well as part of the repair and refurbishment that the property has undergone which is not up to standard?

For example, one of the things is a shower plate which is 43 cm high. Obviously, I appreciate that Ministers are here to set policy, but there are times where Ministers have to go in and see how that policy is being implemented. I am sure that the Government would not appreciate it if 760 the work is not being done to a standard they would be satisfied with.

Hon. Chief Minister: I see, Mr Speaker, the argument is the clerk of works argument – I get it, and that is exactly the point. None of us – the hon. Gentleman, I think, included, and none of the others opposite alongside him, or indeed the hon. Lady, who is not there – none of us are 765 qualified as clerks of works. So we might be able, as lay people, to say the shower has not been fitted, in a way that looks, even to a layperson, to have been fitted properly, or the sanding has not been done in an appropriate way in keeping with the view of a layperson, but the hon. Gentleman is not just inviting us to do things which are, in my view, inappropriate, he is inviting us to do things that none of us are properly qualified to do and which might incur expense for 770 the taxpayer in a way that is inappropriate.

I think the hon. Lady is as aware of this case as she is of the many other cases that are being dealt with. He will be very pleased to know – and I wonder whether he does know, but given that I cannot ask him a question I will say that I assume that he is very pleased to know – that the number of jobs waiting have been reduced by a factor of 90-odd per cent, that there are 775 very few jobs waiting and the jobs that are waiting are being dealt with and given the appropriate priority that they have.

I think he gives away the nub of this issue in the way that he rightly prefaces his question by saying that this matter has been historically abandoned. Maybe those who historically abandoned it are the ones who are responsible, not those who are presently fixing it.

Q452/2018

Building of rental homes –
Government commitment

780 Clerk: Question 452, the Hon. D A Feetham on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. D A Feetham: Further to Questions 168, 269 and 397/2018, is the Government in a position to update this House on when an announcement will be made as to the Government's commitment to build homes for rental?
785

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, an announcement to this effect was made in my Budget speech a few months ago.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, there is another question on the Order Paper, that has been posted by Mr Phillips, in relation to the number of people who were on the housing waiting list in 2011 and who continue to be on the housing waiting list today. The last time that I posed that question, it was 178. Part of the reason, as I understood the answer that the Hon. Minister gave 795 at the time, for those 178 – and we have got to bear in mind that it was a manifesto commitment from the parties opposite that anybody on the housing waiting list and the pre-list in 2011 would be housed in four years, so we are talking about seven years and they have not been housed ... Part of the explanation the hon. Lady provided was that many of those were one-bedroom flats and that there is a shortage of one-bedroom flats in the Government's 800 housing stock. Therefore the question – and I apologise for the preamble, but I needed to place it into context – the question is this: in the Government's plans to build new rental homes, can the Government give a commitment that it will cater for those people in order to make sure that those people are housed and that we do not have a shortage in the future of one-bedroom flats?

805 Let me say this as well in that context: that we are not just simply talking about young people who are on the housing waiting list. We are also talking, for example, about people like fathers who may unfortunately be divorced and they are allocated a one-bedroom flat. Those are the type of people as well that we are talking about and it obviously does create a lot of harshness for a number of people.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Prologue, narrative, epilogue.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, after that excessively long supplementary question, which I do not think even complies with the Rules and Standing Orders, the answer is ... Do we 815 aim to house the people on the waiting list? Yes, of course, and my job as Minister for Housing, when I set the policy of the Housing Department, is to look at the demand that we have for housing stock, the shortfall that we have in housing stock and introduce and implement policies which match and meet the demands of both.

820 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the question is, and I will repeat it in short terms: is the Government planning to build one-bedroom flats so that the majority of those 178 – that was the figure that she gave last time round – are properly housed and that this problem with scarcity of one-bedroom flats does not arise in the future?

825 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I do not believe that I have to build one-bedroom flats in order to meet the demand for one-bedroom flats.

Q453/2018
Rent arrears –
Amount owing

Clerk: Question 453, the Hon. D A Feetham on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

830 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, further to Question 398/2018, can the Government update this House as to the amount of rent arrears owing as from 12th September 2018?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

835 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, this information is currently available on the Government website as at month end August 2018.

Q454/2018
Fire Safety Review –
Publication

Clerk: Question 454, the Hon. D A Feetham on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

840 Hon. D A Feetham: Further to Questions 399 and 400/2018, can the Government confirm that it is now in a position to publish the Fire Safety Review?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, my answer to Questions 399 and 400/2018 refers.

Q455-6/2018
Housing waiting list –
Update by category; numbers on list since 2011

845 Clerk: Question 455, the Hon. D A Feetham on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. D A Feetham: Further to Question 401/2018, can the Minister update this House as to how many people are on the housing waiting list by category and by reference to RKB1 to RKB5?

850 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Question 456.

855 Clerk: Question 456, the Hon. D A Feetham on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government update this House as to how many people who were on the housing waiting list on 8th December 2011 remain on the list?

860 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, there are 124 and the breakdown is as follows: 1RKB, 111; 2RKB, 2; 3RKB, 8; 4RKB, 2; 5RKB, 1.

Those in the 2-5RKB category have been offered at least one home.

865

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady has chosen to answer two questions in one answer and it is not clear from – (Miss S J Sacramento: Same answer.) Well, if it is the same answer, is she saying that the only people on the housing waiting list by category and by reference to RKB1-RKB5 are the people who were on the housing waiting list on 8th December 2011? That cannot be right.

870

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, because that is not the question. The question this time, as was the same question on the last occasion, which is referred to in answer to this one – is ... The question wants to know those who were on the waiting list on 8th December 2011 who remain on the waiting list, and these are the figures. I am glad to say that the numbers are remarkably reduced.

875

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Hear, hear.

880 Hon. D A Feetham: So, Mr Speaker, of the figure that she has given me of the people, that she says are very reduced, but we are talking about the people who were on the housing waiting list as at 8th December 2011 ... of those, 124, the bulk, are waiting for 1RKB? Yes, that is the answer.

Again, I return to the previous questions that I have asked and the answers the hon. Lady has given in relation to that. I think that she said ... I am paraphrasing. What she said to this House was, 'Not necessarily,' when I said, 'In the Government's plans to build rental accommodation is the Government planning to cater for an increased number of 1RKB, because there does seem to be a problem with 1RKB?'

In light of the fact that there are 124 people who were on the housing waiting list on 8th December 2011 waiting for a 1RKB, what precisely is she doing in order to cater for these people? It does appear to me, from the numbers, that there is a shortage of 1RKB in Gibraltar.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, no, Mr Speaker, because he seems to have misunderstood. On 8th December 2011 there were not 111 people – 111 people are those that remain. The number of people on the 1RKB waiting list as of 8th December 2011 was 1,046. So, when I said earlier that it has been reduced considerably, that is what I meant. The pace at which we have been dealing with this is incredibly fast and we have been making allocations, and of this 111 remain.

Mr Speaker, in answer to the previous question in relation to the building of flats for rental, I referred the hon. Gentleman to the announcement that I had already made in my Budget speech, but because the hon. Gentleman probably does not know or does not remember what my announcement was in the Budget speech, that is what has given rise to the questions he is now asking. If the hon. Member were to refer to my Budget speech, then the answer would be clear.

What I meant in reply to the previous longwinded supplementary question, Mr Speaker, was that to be able to provide accommodation for a specific configuration of flat does not necessarily always mean that you have to build that specification of flat; it can also be dealt with in the way that you manage the allocations of flats and the strategic priority in the allocation, and by combining the way that we do that together with the announcement that I made in my Budget speech I am confident and I am satisfied that we will deal with Gibraltar's housing needs very efficiently indeed.

Hon. D A Feetham: But, Mr Speaker, that answer is not going to, with respect to the Minister, be any consolation to all those people who were on the housing waiting list in 2011, in respect of which the Government is in breach of their 2011 manifesto – namely, to house those people within four years. If there are 111 – and I apologise, I thought she said 124, but if there are 111 people who were on the housing waiting list in 2011 waiting for a one-bedroom flat and continue to wait for a one-bedroom flat, it does appear to me that there is a problem with the allocation, with finding enough one-bedroom flats for those people, because that is the bulk of the people who remain to be housed who were on the housing waiting list in 2011. Could she explain the reason why the bulk of the numbers are 1RKB numbers?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, can I just assist the House, because the hon. Gentleman has forgotten the explanations that we gave at the time.

This is not something that they are asking us about now; this is something that we volunteered at the time at the end of the last Parliament when we realised that we had been able to comply with our commitment to everyone on the housing waiting list except those on the 1RKB list, because the ones that are not on the 1RKB list, unless I am wrong, have had a proposed allocation but have refused it.

So the 1RKB list is deceptive to a very great extent, not just for the reasons that the hon. Gentleman has indicated which create difficulty, which is not just the elderly and those who might find themselves in situations of marital breakdown etc., who actually do not want a one-bedroom apartment because those who find themselves in a situation of marital breakdown are on the list for a one-bedroom but they want or need a two- or three-bedroom because many of them have children and they want to be able to have their children with them, and this creates other issues. But in particular there are a lot of people on that list who are young people who put themselves on the list in order to be eligible to purchase accommodation when it becomes available, and the first criteria for purchase of affordable housing is whether you are on the housing waiting list. Many of them hold over for legacy reasons. In other words, they have just put themselves down on the list at the age when they can but they are still studying, even now, or there are other reasons why they have not been able to take up the right to purchase and they are not so keen actually to have a one-bedroom accommodation provided to them.

I have said before and I will say again that one of the things that hon. Members did well when they were in government – except that we have had to repair one of them, Bishop Canilla House, and I think there is a question on the Order Paper later – was to start to provide housing for 945 elderly tenants who needed one-bedroom assisted housing. That is the best accommodation we can provide for one bedroom, to use the existing housing stock to then release to many of those on the one-bedroom list properties that are larger because they actually do need them because they have children and they are in the process of working through that their children should be with them, etc.

950 So we all understand what the issue is and we all understand that those people in that 111 number have been on that list since before 2011, and resolving the problem has been harder than any of us expected for good social demographic reasons unrelated to making available a one-bedroom property. I think if we are going to have an informed debate across the floor of the House, that has to be factored into the equation.

955 This is not just a question of today having 111 one-bedroom properties and that would be fixed; it would not, it is much more complex than that. I think the hon. Gentleman knows that, or at least with this information will be able to factor that into his determinations of how to take this forward in a way that might be complementary to the way that the Government is trying to resolve this issue also.

960 Hon. D A Feetham: Can I thank the Chief Minister for that answer, which certainly I have understood, and indeed I would expect that in relation to these 111 there would be young people who, setting aside the Government's manifesto commitment in 2011, may well not be a priority.

965 If the Government cannot provide the answer to this question, which is necessary in order for us to assess the nature of the problem as well, then if it could be provided at a later date by way of exchange of correspondence, we are happy with that, but can the Government give numbers and drill down into the numbers? In relation to those 111, how many are we talking about who are just simply young people who have gone on the housing waiting list because they want to buy, or alternatively they cannot buy; young people who may not be a 'priority' compared with others?

970 But then you have the category of cases, of people who have come to me in my surgeries – normally it is men who are divorced – who are having to live in very difficult conditions with their mothers or family members, who have been waiting for a one-bedroom flat, which again is not adequate for those people, but the policy of the Government is exactly the same as the policy of the GSD and I have said in this House that in Cabinet, in discussions when I was in government, I 975 personally did not agree with the policy, but nonetheless it was the policy of the GSD administration and also of the present Government to only give those people one-bedroom flats.
So they are only waiting for one-bedroom flats, even though they may have two or three children, and we want to just drill down into the nature and categories into which these 111 people fall.

980 If she does not have the information in broad figure numbers, then we are quite happy to write to the Hon. Minister and ask her for the information.

985 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, it is not a breakdown that I have, but having said that, it is something that, as I said earlier, I am satisfied we will cure when we build the houses for rental, as I announced in my Budget speech.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Standing Order 7(1) suspended to proceed with a Government Bill

990 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am afraid, as I indicated to the hon.
Gentlemen before, we might not be able to continue for very long today and I now have to adjourn the House. In fact, the House is going to adjourn to a little later than I expected.

But before I do, I do need to do a reading of a long title. And so, Mr Speaker, I beg to move under Standing Order 7(3) to suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with Government Bills.

995 Mr Speaker: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.
We now suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with a Government Bill.

Standing Order 7(1) suspended to proceed with Government Statement

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move, under Standing Order 7(3), to 5 suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with a Government Statement.

Mr Speaker: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Brexit negotiations update – Statement by the Chief Minister

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I rise to provide further information to the House and to the public about the ongoing negotiations for the departure of Gibraltar and the 10 United Kingdom from the European Union.

In making my address today I am conscious that the current Spanish Foreign Minister, Sr Borrell, made an address yesterday to the Spanish parliament's foreign affairs committee.

In the time since the Parliament last met and I updated the House, further rounds of negotiations have been held with the Spanish negotiating team. As hon. Members know, as a 15 result of these ongoing negotiations I decided not to attend the meeting of the Fourth Committee of the United Nations General Assembly. Instead, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister attended the UN session in New York and delivered the address on behalf of Gibraltar. I think all those of us who viewed Dr Garcia's intervention will have seen that he did an excellent job in representing Gibraltar in that forum, (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) and it is 20 important that I should reflect that the Government which I lead considers that attendance at the UN is an essential part of the defence of Gibraltar. My decision not to attend this year was driven only by the exigencies of the Brexit negotiations. I was able to make that decision safe in the knowledge that Gibraltar's position would be ably and properly represented by the Deputy Chief Minister.

As a result, I travelled to London last week with the Deputy Chief Minister and the Attorney 25 General. Dr Garcia went on to New York and I remained in London to co-ordinate and strategise with colleagues in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. On Wednesday I travelled to Brussels. On that day, I led the Gibraltar team in the negotiations, which lasted until the early hours of the morning. The negotiations were held in the residence of the British Ambassador to the European 30 Union, on Rue Ducale. The Deputy Chief Minister travelled from New York direct to Brussels in order to join us after his address at the UN and at Princeton University. We subsequently returned to Gibraltar late on Friday. The Attorney General remained in Brussels to continue the work of analysing and drafting documentation over the weekend.

35 During the course of Saturday in Gibraltar I was able to brief the whole of the Cabinet on the latest progress of the talks. I was also able to brief members of the Brexit Select Committee. I want to thank all members of the Select Committee, in particular Mr Feetham and Ms Hassan Nahon, for their support to date.

40 In the early hours of Sunday morning, the Deputy Chief Minister and I returned to Brussels to conduct a further round of negotiations. That evening, the negotiating teams of Spain, the United Kingdom and Gibraltar reconvened at Rue Ducale. We finished in the early hours of Monday.

45 Hon. Members will know that at that stage it was expected that the whole Withdrawal Agreement would have been finalised by Monday. A meeting of the Sherpas of all the remaining 27 Member States was expected for 4 p.m. on the Monday, which would have confirmed agreement from the Member States to the draft agreement. In fact, as anybody keeping an even cursory eye on the news would know, the final agreement on other matters proved elusive and has not yet been finalised.

50 Mr Speaker, the shape of the application of the Withdrawal Agreement to Gibraltar is, however, clearer now as a result of these further negotiating rounds. I want, therefore, to say something about the structure of the deal that is being put in place.

55 There is now a fairly final Protocol on Gibraltar, which will be a part of the Withdrawal Agreement. I think it is important to keep in mind that the Withdrawal Agreement is between the United Kingdom and the European Union. That is to say it is not with each or any one of the Member States; it is between the UK and the EU. Additionally, the various Protocols that will be an integral part of the Withdrawal Agreement are also entered into between the European Union and the United Kingdom. The Protocol on Gibraltar is no different. It is not between the United Kingdom and any particular Member State; it is between the United Kingdom and the European Union. And this is text which is agreed, as it has to be, with Task Force 50, the group of legal experts of the European Commission that have carriage of the draft Withdrawal Agreement 60 as a whole with the UK team at the Cabinet Office and the Department for Exiting the European Union. The Protocol follows, in great measure, the structure of the Protocol on Northern Ireland, which is already published. It also addresses aspects of the structure of the arrangements being entered into.

65 Some of my reflections today arise in the context of Sr Borrell's remarks yesterday. The Protocol on Gibraltar between the United Kingdom and the European Union is not yet finalised, but there are not many points outstanding. Sr Borrell said yesterday that it was almost closed. He said also, more categorically, that it is closed and 'in green'. Mr Speaker, I interpret that as a reference to the analysis undertaken before the summer by the European Union's Chief Negotiator, Michel Barnier, and the former Brexit Secretary, David Davis, of the text of the 70 Withdrawal Agreement with different parts in different colours. The green parts of the text were those that were agreed.

In those circumstances, I believe that there is genuine reason for optimism that there is no longer any question mark whatsoever over the inclusion of Gibraltar in any transitional or implementation period. There is no longer talk of vetoing Gibraltar's inclusion in the transition or 75 implementation period. In fact, Mr Speaker, I think it is clear that neither the United Kingdom nor Gibraltar has ever doubted that this would be the case.

Beyond the Protocol, there are also to be a number of sets of practical arrangements reflected in various memoranda of understanding. These will reflect the co-operation in areas where both sides have identified irritants, as I highlighted in my Ministerial Statement in March 80 and in my last update to this House.

At this stage, we have reached a large measure of agreement on the substance of four such memoranda. The first of these sets of practical arrangements will deal with the implementation of the rights of citizens which are protected under the main Withdrawal Agreement.

85 The second will deal with matters related to the environment. As all hon. Members know, this has been an area on which Gibraltar has long wanted to co-operate with our neighbours. We have only one environment. There is no Planet B, as President Macron has rightly said. The environment knows no frontiers and we have long been keen to see co-operation in this area on a basis which is clearly without prejudice to the sovereignty, jurisdiction and control position on which we would never compromise, expressly or impliedly, in any respect, in particular in 90 respect of Gibraltar's British Gibraltar Territorial Waters.

The third memorandum addresses matters of police and customs co-operation. In this area there has long been an excellent regional co-operation between our respective law enforcement agencies in many respects. Unfortunately, there have also been some very high-profile instances of a lack of co-operation occurring between law enforcement agencies. We sincerely hope that 95 we can leave disagreements behind and move toward more fluid co-operation. Mr Speaker, the only ones who should tremble at the thought of this new approach to co-operation should be criminals.

The fourth memorandum will deal with matters relating to the trade in tobacco in order to progress the shared agenda of wishing to control illicit tobacco activity and to protect our 100 respective legitimate markets. This has been a key area of concern for me since my election, as hon. Members will know. In fact, in my time in Government I have already increased the price of tobacco in Gibraltar by 148% since my election. I have said, as recently as at the last Budget, that I consider this commodity to be on a permanent price escalator and that the health consequences of tobacco consumption concern me and the Government greatly. In this 105 particular respect, I sincerely hope we will be able to move forward in the co-operation we enjoy with relevant agencies and competent authorities across the Frontier. The work on this memorandum is not yet finalised, however, and we do want to continue discussions to seek agreement.

Finally, Mr Speaker, we are also seeking to try to agree a tax treaty to settle the perennial 110 misunderstanding by some in Spain of our internationally accepted tax system. This memorandum is also not yet agreed. I do not know if it will be possible to reach final agreement in respect of this matter at this stage, but we continue our discussions to seek agreement. The technical work on this memorandum is being ably undertaken for Gibraltar by the Financial Secretary and the Commissioner of Income Tax and their Senior Crown Counsel.

115 On the Airport, as Sr Borrell told the Spanish Foreign Affairs Select Committee yesterday, the position to be reflected will be the position of status quo. We have not found the PSOE government of Spain prepared to move to implement the arrangements agreed in Cordoba by the former PSOE government of Spain in this respect. Hon. Members know that those of us on this side of the House had our reservations about the Cordoba Agreement. There were aspects 120 of it that we did not like at all. Be that as it may, the Cordoba Airport Agreement was defended by them in the 2007 general election and they won that election. As a result, they went on to spend in excess of £84 million of taxpayers' money implementing the Gibraltar obligations under the Cordoba Agreement. The Government of Gibraltar takes the view that the Gibraltar side has complied with its obligations under the Cordoba Agreement and we are ready to see it come 125 into effect. There will be no change or progress in respect of enhanced use in relation of Gibraltar Airport, however.

Finally, Mr Speaker, I should reflect both my continued optimism that we will be in any 130 implementation period agreed, as well as the reality that the negotiations are not yet over. For that reason, it is not yet possible or prudent to share publicly our own analysis of each clause and how we have ensured that Gibraltar's interests are entirely protected.

It is important that we should keep in mind that these negotiations have reached the 135 advanced stage at which we are under a PSOE administration. The President of the Spanish government has repeatedly been positive in the remarks he has made about Gibraltar. When he first spoke as Prime Minister in the Spanish Congress he spoke of going beyond the eternal sovereignty claim and using Brexit to create a positive dynamic with Gibraltar. In New York at the United Nations he spoke of a new relationship creating mutual benefit for Gibraltar and the Campo de Gibraltar. And in the informal summit in Salzburg he was clear about the fact that there are two different levels to the withdrawal aspects of the agreements: the UK-EU level and the practical level involving arrangements between Spain and Gibraltar. Today, in Brussels, President Sanchez met with Prime Minister Theresa May and tweeted his view that he was confident that it was possible to reach a common agreement to finalise the Brexit negotiation and in respect of Gibraltar in a constructive spirit. We have welcomed that positive approach that leaves to one side the stale Spanish position on sovereignty, as was specifically agreed by Sr Dastis and confirmed by Sr Borrell and his President, Sr Sanchez.

Mr Speaker, I will not say more as the negotiation is not yet over. It is therefore not yet possible to publish the text. That moment will come as soon as final agreement is reached and the whole and final Withdrawal Agreement is published. But I am sure that I speak for every Gibraltarian when I say that we would never agree to anything which would in any way compromise, de facto or de jure, the sovereignty, jurisdiction or control of any part of the territory of Gibraltar or of British Gibraltar Territorial Waters.

I want to end by thanking all those who have supported me in this negotiation. The Deputy Chief Minister, the Attorney General and the Financial Secretary have been the core team. The Cabinet have been fully involved. The UK teams from the Foreign Office, HM Treasury, the Department for Exiting the European Union and the Cabinet Office have been enormously supportive and helpful.

Mr Speaker, I think for now that is as much as I should say. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I call the Leader of the Opposition, I trust that I do not have to remind Members of the Opposition that established practice over the years has imposed limitations on the extent to which Members of the Opposition can intervene in response to a Ministerial Statement.

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, cognisant of your warning to hon. Members regarding long contributions and statements, I will be short and brief and I will conclude with asking two questions for further clarification.

In general terms, Mr Speaker, we welcome the Chief Minister's statement in which he updates this House as to the progress of the ongoing Brexit negotiations as we, along with the United Kingdom, prepare to leave the European Union. It is right that we record that the Chief Minister has sought to provide a fuller and more lengthy briefing to my hon. and learned Friend Mr Feetham and my hon. Friend Mr Hammond at a meeting of the Brexit Select Committee last Saturday.

The Prime Minister told the British Parliament on Monday that insofar as Gibraltar is concerned there have been positive and constructive negotiations taking place but that they are still in progress. This was also repeated by the outgoing British Ambassador to Spain, Simon Manley, yesterday alongside an upbeat assessment of the potential outcomes for Gibraltar's future prosperity and that of our neighbour. We have been told by the Chief Minister that we are moments away from agreeing the terms of a Protocol to include Gibraltar in any Withdrawal Agreement and transitional arrangements reached between the UK and EU, and we are again told of his continuing optimism in relation to that. We understand from the Spanish Foreign Minister, Mr Borrell, that the Protocol for Gibraltar's inclusion in the UK and EU Withdrawal Agreement is practically sealed.

Whilst it is the Government's choice not to seek our full participation at any stage in the process over the last two years, and whilst we reserve our judgement on the handling and outcome of those discussions, we wish the Government all the very best in the delicate and technical work that remains in securing and protecting the best interests of the people of Gibraltar.

190 In relation to the Protocol and the five underlying memorandums so as to achieve the so-called 'soft landing' for Gibraltar in the wider context of our departure from the EU, we appreciate that the Chief Minister and his team bear a very heavy burden of securing the best outcome for our community, and that is why we continue to offer our assistance by way of full participation – and we again repeat that offer today.

195 To my questions, Mr Speaker. The first is: can the Government confirm that once the memorandums are agreed in principle, that the Chief Minister will make a detailed statement to this House as to their terms and his assessment of the actual and potential implications of the five memoranda?

Insofar as our second question is concerned –

200 Mr Speaker: We can take one at a time. I think it is preferable to give the Chief Minister –

Hon. Chief Minister: No, I would rather –

Mr Speaker: Do you want to take them all?

205 Hon. Chief Minister: I am grateful.

Mr Speaker: What about from other Members, if they so wish?

210 Hon. Chief Minister: I will take one at a time.

Mr Speaker: One Member at a time, very well. Carry on.

215 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, in relation to the second question, a number of people in our community continually come up to Members opposite and ask the question, 'What is the contingency?' or 'How far are you involved in the process?' Of course, our answer to that is that of course we receive full briefings from the Chief Minister and his team. But one question I have is in relation to the contingency planning for a no deal and whether the Chief Minister could explain in more detail as to what steps have been taken by the Government to plan ahead, insofar as a no deal. I am grateful.

220 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I thank the hon. Gentleman for those questions. I do think he has got up to deliver a speech and then asked two questions. I do not think that is in keeping with the Rules of the House and I want to record that.

225 The hon. Gentleman in giving his address has said that he was grateful for the fuller briefing that we were able to give in private. We have given very full briefings in private. Hon. Gentlemen do not know anything that we do not know about these negotiations. But I do say to them, because in the context of those discussions they have made suggestions which we have taken on board: what else does 'full participation' mean? Is it that the hon. Gentleman is saying that I should be taking Members of the Opposition to the discussions and to the negotiations? That has not been the case in the context of the way that they conducted the affairs of this nation at 230 the time when we were facing the joint sovereignty negotiations between the UK and Spain etc. We have chosen to go out of our way to ensure that we brief hon. Members in great detail about everything that is happening in the negotiation. Indeed, Mr Speaker, one of the reasons I came back at the weekend was in order to be able to very fully brief the Cabinet and very fully 235 brief them in exactly the same terms so that they were aware of everything that was happening. We were able to look at the texts as they were on Saturday morning. If full participation means that the hon. Member thinks that he is going to become a part of the core team in the negotiations or that that is prudent or wise, or indeed that a person who is not even a Member of this House might be included in that negotiating team, I have to tell him I do not think that that is in any way sensible or reflective of the way that things are done.

240 Finally, Mr Speaker, in respect of the two particular questions that he asked: would I publish the memoranda once they are agreed in principle? I will publish the memoranda once they are agreed and it is agreed between all of the relevant actors involved in respect of the memoranda that they will be published, not just when they are agreed in principle, as soon as we are able to.

245 Believe me, Mr Speaker, I want to publish them as soon as I can so that people can understand what the issues in those memoranda are and can see our analysis of every single word that has gone into them and the interplay between each word in each memorandum and the Protocol and other memoranda.

Finally, on the issue of contingency, the work of the Government is very, very, very advanced. This community is probably one of the few in Europe that understands what a contingency in respect of the non-movement of persons and the non-movement of goods might actually entail. We have lived through it; and in fact, indeed probably apart from the people of Berlin, the people of Gibraltar are among the few in Europe who in living memory will know what the contingencies entail. Just this morning I have seen an updated set of memoranda – internal

250 memoranda, not with anybody else – and spreadsheets setting out exactly the details of how things would happen and when work would start. But I would say this: it is important that we all keep in mind in Gibraltar that we have not benefited from membership of the Common Customs Union to date and the biggest contingencies arise – although they also arise in respect of freedom of movement of capital, potentially, and services – but the biggest contingencies arise

260 in respect of the freedom of movement of goods, and in particular the common customs rules, which would disappear for the United Kingdom overnight and for the European Union with the United Kingdom overnight in the event that there were a no-deal Brexit. Those issues will not apply to Gibraltar. It is common ground between Gibraltar and Spain, not just in the negotiating room but across the headlines that can be read around the world, that there will be no

265 interference with the ability of people to move freely, even if there is a no-deal Brexit.

And so, Mr Speaker, in those circumstances hon. Members should rest assured that plans are very advanced, in the event that there were no deal, to ensure, as I have said repeatedly, that on the morning of 30th March, even if there were a no-deal Brexit, there should be no materially adverse change to the life of any person who needs to cross that Frontier or who relies, on either side of the Frontier, on a service or goods moving to them or towards them in order to be able to continue to run their businesses or to live their lives as they have before then.

Mr Speaker, I should add, of course, however, that this is a situation which is not of our choosing. We have not chosen to enter this negotiation, we have not chosen to leave the European Union. The people of Gibraltar chose to remain in the European Union, but the sum 275 total of the choice of the British people was that we should leave and we prepare for that eventuality, although we did not choose it, and we negotiate our inclusion of the Withdrawal Agreement, even though we did not choose that there should be such an agreement.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

280 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I wish to thank the Chief Minister and the Government for the briefings that they have provided to the Opposition and I am very happy, not only as a Member of Parliament but as an ordinary citizen, to hear of the optimistic prognosis for the deal or the negotiations that are being had.

285 I want to remind the Government that I stand available for any help that I can give or any value that I can add at this crucial time for us all.

I feel, Mr Speaker, that I have to say, in terms of contingency planning, I want to confirm that I have been briefed by the Deputy Chief Minister on contingency planning at various times already as part of the Brexit briefings, on matters of transport fluidity, environment, law

290 enforcement and beyond, and I feel it is my place to let Gibraltar know that these matters are being looked at and have been discussed during the briefings that I have attended.

I take this opportunity to wish the Government well in finalising the negotiations. Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

295 Mr Speaker: Yes. Questions.

Hon. D A Feetham: Questions, yes, absolutely. I am not going to plough into another speech, don't worry, Mr Speaker.

I know what the answer to this question is, but it is a question that is posed to me and I think that perhaps I would like to give the Government the opportunity to deal with, so that perhaps 300 some people who have asked me the question understand it better.

What we are talking about in relation to this is essentially what the Government is trying to do – and I am asking the question – which is to preserve as far as possible the status quo, what we have now, for the next two years until the UK exits the European Union. But the Government 305 is also, in parallel, working towards a potential situation where Gibraltar has a permanent deal that may provide Gibraltar with more European Union than the UK desires for itself. Can I ask if the Government will not leave any stone unturned in order to protect Gibraltar's position in that regard and ensure that, in as far as is possible – and I certainly am optimistic that it is possible, and I recognise there are all sort of difficulties but I believe that it is possible – that the 310 Government will work towards that permanent deal that secures Gibraltar's position, I believe, within critical areas of the EU, if I can put it that way, for an indefinite period of time after the UK withdraws?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for the opportunity to 315 address this subject in this way. I think it is not disclosing any confidence that in the course of the discussions we have had there has been a confluence of opinion between us that this is in fact the right course, and I value the opportunity to be able to say that in fact in terms of the wider structure of this process – a process on which we did not wish to embark – there may be the opportunity, which we have sought from the beginning, to have what I have termed a 320 'differentiated solution' for Gibraltar.

That differentiated solution is not so much a part of the process of withdrawal. The process of withdrawal extricates Gibraltar from the European Union in its different sort of membership to that which the UK already had. So we have a differentiated membership of the European Union to the UK and therefore we must leave in a differentiated sort of way.

325 As we look to the future, I think it is clear that although there will be a political statement on what the future framework is likely to be, there will not be a legal basis for that agreement, and indeed hon. Members will have been seeing on the news the discussion on whether the implementation period should be extended etc. All of that relates to how long it will take to conclude what in effect will be a new treaty between the United Kingdom and the European 330 Union as to their trading relationship in the future.

Some of the things that hon. Members will have heard repeatedly relate to how the United Kingdom will approach the free movement aspects of that and some of the trading aspects, and one of the key issues that we talk about in the context of this discussion is something called 'static alignment' and something called 'dynamic alignment'.

335 Static alignment means that you agree to comply with the rules of the European Union as at the end of the implementation period, so you are bound by them until the end and then the question is are you then entirely released from those rules and do you fall back on what is morally acceptable in the world; or do you bind yourself into static alignment going forward in respect of the rules on labour, on the environment, on financial services etc.

340 Or do you go into dynamic alignment, which means that although you are not a member of the European Union you are in dynamic alignment with their rules as they change. The other side of understanding dynamic alignment is the way that the Rt. Hon. Mr Rees-Mogg might express it in the United Kingdom, or the former Foreign Secretary would say you become a vassal state because you are then implementing rules you have no ability to influence. So 345 dynamic alignment means you have access to the market in the future because you accept the rules which you cannot influence, or it means that you are a vassal state but you have access to the market in exchange for being a vassal state. So there are many points of view in that respect.

The question for Gibraltar is how do we calibrate our future relationship with the European Union, and as I sometimes might say in the course of discussions informally with British 350 colleagues, 'We might want more EU than you,' is the way that you might express it in shorthand because there might be aspects of free movement that are of great interest to Gibraltar, where we do not have an issue with immigration, where we have 14,000 people – and it is quite remarkable, Mr Speaker, when I became Chief Minister it was 6,000 people or 7,000 people –
355 14,000 people now cross the Frontier every day. And so I think it is hugely important to keep in mind that our attitude to free movement may be the complete opposite of the attitude to free movement that the United Kingdom may bring to the negotiating table when it comes to legally negotiating the future framework into a new international treaty between the United Kingdom and the European Union, and so we will need to be differentiating in that respect.

I think the choice to stay out of the Customs Union was absolutely the right one in 1972. I 360 have said on a number of occasions already that I do not know whether it is the right conclusion in 2020 or 2021 when we leave the European Union at the end of an implementation period. At that time the view might be – and I think it is a view that I hope we will take together in this House, Mr Speaker, or indeed in a future iteration of this House after the next General Election – that the right conclusion might be that we have membership in some way, shape or form, of the 365 Common Customs Union and have access to it; or it may not be, because there will be two sides to the coin.

Some will think that they can set a price for that, and if it is a commercial price, well, that is what nations negotiate about and that is how you adjust your markets, and you do so in the way that is most sensible for your people. If it is not a commercial price, and if anybody labours 370 under any misapprehension that anybody in this House or out of this House will be prepared to pay a price which is non-commercial, which crosses a line, or which, even if it is not ostensibly a red flag on sovereignty, we all understand – and I think people in Gibraltar understand this better than most anywhere else in the world – that it does go to the ingredients of sovereignty, jurisdiction or control, nobody is going to be prepared to pay the price here.

The same is true of access to the market in services, where the issue of dynamic alignment is not so obvious. In other words, with goods, dynamic alignment means your goods are homologated for access to the market in a particular way. With services the homologation happens in a metaphysical way, but you have to accept the rules to regulate your market in that way in order to have access to the market if the price is acceptance of the rules. Well, 380 Mr Speaker, as long as that is commercial acceptance of the rules and not, as I have said, anything else, then that is something that I think we have an obligation to consider. We would not be serving future generations of this community as well as Mr Speaker, the Father of the House and the hon. Lady's father did in 1972 – when they made the decisions that they made which created the prosperity that we have had for the past 46 years – if we do not make a 385 determination of what our final decisions are in respect of access to the single market in services and the single market in goods, what our decisions are in respect of the freedom of movement of persons and the fluidity that might come with that, and whether there are, or not, other potential Common Travel Area-like solutions that we might seek to mirror with the Schengen Area.

Those are the decisions we have to make. Those are the decisions that we have to bring to the negotiating table. I know that it has never been controversial in Gibraltar that there should be determination of disputes arising from the European treaties by the European Court of Justice. It is very controversial in the United Kingdom. So those issues which are the things I have

395 said before about our differentiated understanding of the European Union, our differentiated value to those things, the differentiated reality of our geography, all of those things together lead me to the same conclusion as the hon. Gentleman I think hinted at in the context of the question that he has put: that as we look to the future, all of these things are the things that we need to consider together and determine together, that the solution therefore that we end up 400 with, our future relationship with the European Union – and, Mr Speaker, let's be very clear, the European Union for us will start in La Línea – those decisions are the decisions that we now have to make.

I remember that in the old days we used to say 'the European Economic Community starts at Europa Point, ends at Four Corners and doesn't start again until the Pyrenees'. We have left that club. We are going to be talking to that club about how we can have a relationship with them in 405 the future, and that is going to be, for us, as important commercially as it is at a human level.
One of the things that I have been at pains to make sure is understood is that some workers may, yes, be Spanish, and they may, yes, live in Spain, and they may come to Gibraltar every day they work in our economy, but frontier fluidity is not just about that and it is not just about popping up to Marbella to do a bit of shopping or crossing over to eat some fried fish, or indeed 410 for some to come over here to purchase perfumery or any other commodity. That Frontier cuts across the heart and soul of many families and of many friendships, and seeing any barriers put up, in particular that those barriers should be born from something that happens on the 50th anniversary of its closure, would be a tragedy that certainly this Government, and I am sure all Members of this House, would not want to see, that would leave any stone unturned to ensure 415 never happens again.

Thank you very much. (Hon N F Costa: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton –

If you are going to ask arising from the last intervention of the Chief Minister, I think we are 420 going a little bit beyond what the most generous and liberal application of the Rules would allow. Is it a question on the original Ministerial Statement, or what the Chief Minister has now said in response to your questions? Otherwise, it is a never-ending process.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am going to sit down and I will not ask the question, but we 425 are facing the most important decision that Gibraltar has faced –

Mr Speaker: That is why I am being liberal with the rules.

Hon. D A Feetham: – in generations. The hon. Member has said something, and I think it is 430 important to emphasise an aspect of that because it is important for this community. I would ask the Speaker to give me the leeway to ask this question and not to be over-technical at this moment in time, because I do think it is in the interests of everybody.

Mr Speaker: Alright. Go ahead.

435 Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

I think that the Hon. the Chief Minister, if I may say so, is absolutely right: the Government has an obligation to future generations of Gibraltarians to leave no stone unturned in the manner that he has said that he will not. Indeed, he has a duty and an obligation to be, in my 440 respectful view, bold and ambitious in relation to this.

The question is this: does he not agree with me and does he not think that it is important that a message comes out from this House – certainly from the Chief Minister of Gibraltar – that this is a tremendous opportunity for Gibraltar and for Spain, and in particular for the neighbouring region of Spain, because if Gibraltar were able to reach a permanent differentiated deal that 445 gives us more Europe than the United Kingdom, the attraction of establishing in Gibraltar and the consequent economic benefits for the neighbouring region in terms of employment and economic activity would be absolutely tremendous, and that really we all have to work towards that goal with no sovereignty price attached, because if there is going to be a sovereignty, jurisdiction or control price attached, then it ain't going to happen and it will not happen with the support of this side of the House.

Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I do think this is important and I am grateful that you have allowed the hon. Gentleman to follow through on his questioning on this.

455 He knows me. He knows I am bold and ambitious and that fortune favours the bold. That is why 27 months ago the Deputy Chief Minister and I said we need a differentiated solution in respect of what the future represents for Gibraltar. It is also true, Mr Speaker, that we said that as people who believed in the European project. We continue to believe in the European project, but we are first and foremost British, and the United Kingdom is leaving the European 460 Union and we are leaving with the United Kingdom.

The European Union has not covered itself in glory in the way that it has dealt with Gibraltar in the past 24 months – probably the most apposite use of a number. (Mr Speaker: Or before.) Or, indeed, before, Mr Speaker. It is true that sometimes when things are going well we do not realise the value of things, but there have been a couple of real troughs for the European Union, 465 in my view, in the way that they have dealt with Gibraltar in the past 24 months, and I am sure that this is something that he and I can agree on and every Member of this House too.

But it is also true that we have said on a number of occasions – and I know he is echoing this in the way that he has presented his question – that Brexit can present an opportunity, and I have said on a number of occasions that I believe that opportunity can actually favour the whole 470 of the region. He may recall that I tried to express that earlier this year by saying that it was possible, if we worked in a way that was designed to be positive and constructive rather than negative and destructive, to create a rainbow of opportunities that would touch every part of the Bay of Gibraltar. I believe that is the case.

I believe that the future framework can allow us, in its detail, if we negotiate the right deal for Gibraltar ... that that right deal for Gibraltar is also the right deal for the area around Gibraltar and that it can bring that shared prosperity that others suggest that they want to see in this area, which is not in any way being denied to the area by Gibraltar. In other words, it is not as if we have got a big cake that we are refusing to give half of to the people who live around us. It is that we believe that if the people around us are allowed – because I am sure that they are 480 able – if they are allowed, to do the things that we do in the way that we do them, in the proper way that we do them, then they too can grow a cake like this. The mutuality of benefit is obvious, because we would want to be a territory that is prosperous, as we are, next to a territory as prosperous as we are.

I think, Mr Speaker, that as the hon. Gentleman has indicated, there are opportunities to do that in the future if those with whom we have to negotiate are not for one moment thinking of sovereignty, jurisdiction or control, because I think it is absolutely clear that they would get no truck with anybody in this House, or indeed outside it, and if they do think about how to design a good commercial arrangement that looks at the benefits that Gibraltar brings to the equation – the many geostrategic benefits that Gibraltar brings to the equation as well as the professional 490 benefits that Gibraltar brings to the equation – in that way I think we can create a real mutuality of interest and mutuality of benefit.

The first step, however, is an orderly withdrawal. Just to put that in context, we would be very unlikely to get to a positive differentiated solution going forward on the basis of us being in dynamic alignment with the European Union at the end of the implementation period, which is 495 where we are talking about being – the UK will continue to follow the rules, and so will Gibraltar, until the end of the implementation period – if we did not have the implementation period. So, if we were out on 29th March and the United Kingdom continued to have an implementation

500 period, then at the end of the UK's implementation period either we would have had to put ourselves into dynamic alignment without any of the benefits of the implementation period, or we would have to catch up if we were still talking about that. I think leaving us out of the implementation period would have been such a mark of utter bad faith that it might even have been possible to persuade all of us in Gibraltar who voted Remain, who have believed in the European project, who believe in this potential mutuality of benefit going forward ... they might have been able to persuade us that we were wrong about them all the time.

505 But look, those threats seem to have receded, common sense seems to have prevailed, and what the hon. Gentleman has suggested in the context of his question, which I have confirmed in the context of my reply, I hope, seems to be what we will see happening, which is that there will be an implementation period, that we will be able to have the benefit of that period to negotiate about the future and that we will look to that future in a way that seeks to create 510 mutuality of benefit and prosperity, not just here but elsewhere, because that is indeed in our mutual interest also.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

515 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I have three questions, so it is really quite simple and to the point. I heard with interest the Chief Minister mention that one of the protocols that is being discussed is in respect of a double tax treaty with the Kingdom of Spain, which I must say, to be fair, would be seminal if it is achieved for Gibraltar and would certainly set a precedent to any future double tax treaties. I would ask the Chief Minister: is he, in parallel, discussing a double tax treaty with the United 520 Kingdom? That would truly be a worthwhile exercise to conduct in parallel, so that in settling a treaty with Spain we also have a treaty with the United Kingdom. The treaty with Spain I understand will be more relevant to cross-Frontier workers who may suffer unjust double taxation in the interim, but I think it would be worthwhile to hear if there is also a double tax treaty envisaged with the United Kingdom in the same timeframe.

525 My second question relates to telecommunications. I have not heard anything so far about telecommunications. I wonder if that is also included within one of the protocols, or it may be that it does not arise from the discussions and it may be covered by some other international treaty that is not affected by our withdrawal from the European Community.

530 Finally, Mr Speaker, in respect of the control of the illicit tobacco trade, obviously we welcome measures in that respect but I would like to hear confirmation from the Chief Minister that, in respect of any fixed price differential being discussed with the Kingdom of Spain, that local industry is also being consulted on that.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Mr Speaker, I did not say anything about double taxation. I will read the hon. Gentleman the bit that I read:

Finally, Mr Speaker, we are also seeking to try to agree a tax treaty to settle the perennial misunderstanding by some in Spain of our internationally accepted tax system. This memorandum is also not yet agreed. I do not know if it will be possible to reach final agreement in respect of this matter at this stage, but we continue our discussions to seek agreement. The technical work on this memorandum is being ably undertaken for Gibraltar by the Financial Secretary and the Commissioner of Income Tax and their Senior Crown Counsel.

540 So I did not say anything about double taxation, but I have said – the hon. Gentleman has asked me whether we are pursuing a double taxation agreement with the United Kingdom – I have said as much in the context of the announcements that had been made after the joint ministerial council for Gibraltar's exit from the European Union. There have been a number of statements in respect of that already.

Mr Speaker, all of the memoranda and the Protocol are all about the implementation period. The only bit that survives thereafter, unless we decide to continue those arrangements, would be the arrangements in respect of citizens who are exercising EU rights. That is what the Withdrawal Agreement provides for. If the hon. Members are familiar with the Withdrawal Agreement, they will know that that is it. Anything which relates to the future is not being discussed now. This is what David Davis said would be the row of the summer in 2016, if necessary, but it was resolved by the European Commission on the first day of the first meeting in the first hour at the beginning of the summer, when he was told that the European Union would not discuss the future arrangements, just a political statement.

So, in that context, the issue of telecommunications will stay as it is until the end of the implementation period. Any future arrangements in respect of telecoms are not things that have been discussed yet. The discussion has not yet opened. That discussion does not open, other than potentially in respect of a political statement but no negotiations, until after the United Kingdom has left the European Union.

In relation to tobacco, Mr Speaker, we are confident that any differentials that may be agreed will not affect players in the market. We have talked to all those we talk to in the context of making determinations in respect of this commodity in the Budget.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Just one point of perhaps expansion rather than clarification. The Chief Minister has very well described the situation as it exists at present – the protocols, the memoranda and how they will work, and the fact that obviously the key players here are the United Kingdom, Gibraltar and the Kingdom of Spain. Could the Chief Minister perhaps give us an appreciation of – beyond the EU itself, breaking the EU down a little into its Member States – whether there has been contact with other Member States, whether there have been sympathies towards Gibraltar’s position shown, whether some have been hostile? Just a general flavour of where we stand perhaps with some of the other individual states who may be also key players in the overall process?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not think that arises from my Statement, but I am happy to provide the answer.

The fact is that the Deputy Chief Minister and, to an extent, me too, but I think the bulk of this work was done by the Deputy Chief Minister and is done by the Deputy Chief Minister in his capacity both as Minister for Europe and Minister for Leaving the European Union – contradictory titles before the Crown if ever there might have been for this period in our history – we have been in contact with all the permanent representatives. That means all the ambassadors that the Member States have in the European Union, in Brussels. Remember, Brussels is a capital where most nations have three ambassadors – the ambassador to NATO, the ambassador to the European Union and the ambassador to Belgium. So we have been in contact with all the permanent representatives of the other Member States of the European Union. We have been in touch with a number of those in greater detail because there has been a community of interest in respect of Gibraltar and their interests also, and there is of course also the view – which I do not mind sharing with the hon. Gentleman – quite extensively throughout the European Union that the EU and this particularly seminal moment in its history should not be used by any one party to advance any claims it might have in respect of another party or a part of another party when it comes to sovereignty etc. There would be little patience for any attitude other than the attitude rightly taken by Spain under Sr Dastis and Sr Borrell if they thought that they were going to bring sovereignty to the table in any way – and not just in any material respect but in any way. In that respect, the position of Sr Margallo I think was very clear, very well understood and very much not shared by any one of the other 26 remaining Member States, or indeed any one of the institutions.

Congratulations to Gibraltar Football Association on success in UEFA Cup of Nations

595 Clerk: Suspension of Standing Orders. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, before I read the suspension of Standing Orders – and I ran straight into the suspension before because it was the nature of the Statement – I think the whole House will want to join me in congratulating the Gibraltar Football Association for their magnificent home win on Tuesday evening against Liechtenstein, their second successive win in the UEFA Cup of Nations. I have seen so many comparisons to a London bus: you wait for ages – this is no comment on ours – and then two come along!

600
605 The fantastic work of ‘Chino’ in goal, both in Armenia and in Gibraltar, and a moment of utter joy that propelled me to hug the person next to me when the whistle was blown – and it happened to be my predecessor as Chief Minister. So the magic of football, Mr Speaker, knows absolutely no bounds and I am sure the whole House wants to congratulate the boys of the GFA for their magnificent performance. (Hon. N F Costa: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

Standing Order 7(1) suspended to proceed with Government motion

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move, under Standing Order 7(3), to suspend Standing order 7(1) in order to proceed with a Government motion.

610

Mr Speaker: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

GOVERNMENT MOTION

Social Security (Open Long-term Benefits Scheme) (Amendment of Benefits) Order 2018 – Motion carried

Clerk: The Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

That this House approve by Resolution, pursuant to section 46 of the Social Security (Open Long-Term Benefits Scheme) Act 1997, the making of the Social Security (Open Long-Term Benefits Scheme) (Amendment of Benefits) Order 2018.

615 Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port. I am proposing, not putting, the question. I am proposing it, and therefore I then call on him to speak.

The Hon. Mr Licudi.

620 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, following the Chief Minister’s Budget address of this year, which announced that the ‘old age pension will also increase in line with inflation’, the Order which is in draft before this House and which this motion is about seeks to give effect to that measure.

It is made, as set out in the motion, pursuant to section 46 of the 1997 Act. Section 46 says as follows and is headed 'Amendment of rates of benefit':

46. (1) The Minister may by order amend the sum in section 22 above and the sums specified in Schedules 1 and 2 below.

625 Section 22 refers to old age pension. Schedule 1 deals with sums of contribution, which we have dealt with separately, and Schedule 2 refers to the rates which are being amended by the Order attached to this motion.

Subsection (2) of section 46 says:

No order shall be made under this section unless it has been approved by resolution of the Parliament.

630 That is precisely what we are doing with this motion, seeking a resolution of this Parliament so that we can amend the rates of benefit so as to increase them in line with inflation, as set out by the Chief Minister in his speech during the Budget.

The rate at which it is to be increased is 2.5% with effect from 1st August 2018, which represents the rate which was also mentioned by the Chief Minister during his speech when he referred to inflation.

635 I beg to move the motion which stands in my name and I put the motion to the House.

Mr Speaker: If no other hon. Member wishes to speak, I will put the question.

640 I now put the question in terms of the motion proposed by the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Financial Services (Insurance Companies) (Amendment) Bill 2018 – First Reading approved

Clerk: Bills – First and Second Reading.

A Bill for an Act to amend the Financial Services (Insurance Companies) Act.

The Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

645 Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Financial Services (Insurance Companies) Act be read a first time.

650 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Financial Services (Insurance Companies) Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Financial Services (Insurance Companies) (Amendment) Act 2018.

Financial Services (Insurance Companies) (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
Second Reading approved

655 Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

Section 8(1) of Schedule 10 of the Financial Services (Insurance Companies) Act states:

Where the transferor is a Gibraltar or non-EEA insurer and any policy included in the proposed transfer evidences a contract of direct insurance or reinsurance, the Commission shall not approve the transfer unless—
... (b) it is also satisfied that every policy included in the transfer evidences a contract which was entered into before the date of the application;

660 The section envisages an insurance company seeking to transfer a portfolio after taking the decision to either cease operating from Gibraltar or cease operating in its entirety. The Act does not envisage the scenario where an insurance company would seek to continue writing insurance contracts despite wishing to transfer its entire, or part, as in this case, of its portfolio to another entity. An insurance company wishing to keep operating following a transfer to ensure that its market share and presence are maintained is precluded from doing so by the wording of section 8(1)(b) of the Financial Services (Insurance Companies) Act.

665 Mr Speaker, this amendment comes as a result of representations from a large Gibraltar insurance firm seeking to transfer out of its existing entity a part of its portfolio business, namely EU business, to a different vehicle. The group's restructure is being designed to circumvent the issues if Brexit is created and the sole and primary objective is that of protecting policyholders.
This restructure has resulted in significant cost to the firm itself, but to maintain its Brexit-proof, basically, UK business from within Gibraltar.

670 Mr Speaker, we have reviewed the EU Directives that have been transposed into the Financial Services (Insurance Companies) Act and the Financial Services (Insurance Companies) (Solvency II Directive) Act. The aforementioned Directives do not include any provision to limit the transferable folio to the date of the application as it does in the Financial Services (Insurance Companies) Act.

675 We would propose that section 8(1) of Schedule 10 be amended as follows:

Where the transferor is a Gibraltar or non-EEA insurer and any policy included in the proposed transfer evidences a contract of direct insurance or reinsurance, the Commission shall not approve the transfer unless—which are the words which deal with the amendment that I am proposing.
... (b) it is also satisfied that every policy included in the transfer evidences a contract which was entered into before the effective date of the transfer;

In the circumstances, Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

680 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill?

I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Financial Services against? Carried.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Traffic Act 2005 and the Insurance (Motor Vehicles) (Third Party Risk) Act 1986 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Motor Vehicles (Miscellaneous Amendments) Act 2018.

Third Reading approved: Bill passed

710

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Financial Services (Insurance Companies) Act be read a third time and passed. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Update re Protocol on Gibraltar

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I move now to adjourn the House.

Hon. Members will want to know that whilst we were considering the Statement that I made, President Sanchez of Spain has made a statement in Brussels in which he has told the assembled press corps that the Protocol on Gibraltar is agreed from the point of view of Spain. I thought I should just update hon. Members with that, given that we were discussing exactly that point.

I now move, Mr Speaker, that the House should adjourn to 8th November at 3 p.m.

Mr Speaker: I now propose that the House do adjourn to Thursday, 8th November at three in the afternoon. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Agreed.

BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Motor Vehicles (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill 2018 – Second Reading approved

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Thursday, 8th November 2018.

Bills – First and Second Reading.

We now proceed with the Second Reading of a Bill for an Act to amend the Traffic Act 2005 and the Insurance (Motor Vehicles) (Third Party Risk) Act 1986.

The Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I beg to move that the Bill for the Motor Vehicles (Miscellaneous Amendments) Act 2018 be read a second time.

The Bill has been pursued in order to allow for the exclusion of certain types of vehicles from falling under the definition of a motor vehicle within the context of the Traffic Act 2005 and subsequently the Insurance Motor Vehicles (Third Party Risk) Act 1986. The intention is to allow the use of certain types of electric bicycles in Gibraltar. As things currently stand, without these changes electrical bicycles will be subject to the same safety requirements and road-worthiness criteria as motor vehicles.

Mr Speaker, I propose to explain the following changes. Clause 2(1) amends the definition of 'motor vehicle' in section 2 of the Traffic Act 2005 by stating that a vehicle excluded under the newly introduced section 2A would not fall under this definition.

Clause 2(2) introduces a new section 2A in the Traffic Act 2005 giving the Minister the power to exclude vehicles from the definition of 'motor vehicle' by way of regulations.

Clause 3 amends the definition of 'motor vehicle' in the Insurance (Motor Vehicles) (Third Party Risk) Act 1986 to cater for any exclusions that are made under the newly introduced section 2A of the Traffic Act 2005.

In addition to these changes subsidiary legislation will shortly follow providing for the exemption of electrically assisted pedal cycles. The maximum continuous rate of power of the electric motor on these bicycles may go up to 250 watts with the pedalling assistance cutting off when a speed of 25 kilometres per hour is reached. This exemption will not apply to any electrical bicycles that are capable of being propelled by any other means of mechanical or electric device, more specifically buttons, cables or throttles.

Mr Speaker, I will also be moving an amendment to the Bill during Committee Stage. An amendment is required to correct a numbering typo after clause 2 of the Bill.

Mr Speaker: Is it a typographical error, or not? If it is typographical, I think there is no need to move an amendment; but if it is other than a typographical error, then yes. My reading of the Bill is that it is typographical and, if we accept it, you do not need to move an amendment.

So, before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I would just like to ask the Minister for some clarification because there is a lot of discussion in the community at the moment.

I think he provided the clarification when he described that the Act is not designed, or the amendments or such regulations are not designed to cover electric vehicles which may be operated through a throttle, cable or button. I believe that this amendment and the subsequent regulation is designed for a very specific type of pedalled bicycle and that the likes of electric scooters, as we see many of them, remain prohibited in Gibraltar – Segways and other vehicles like that remain prohibited in Gibraltar. Could I just ask the Minister: is that the case, or is it Government's intention to expand on the regulations to allow for a wider use of electric vehicles?

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the merits of the Bill?

I call on the mover to reply. The Hon. Paul Balban.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, yes, what the amendment to the Act really does is it permits the Minister to declassify at any given time a specific vehicle.

The purpose behind this one specifically is solely and exclusively for electrical bicycles, those which can only travel at speeds which do not exceed 25 kilometres per hour. They have to be pedal assisted and they cannot have any other means of propelling the bicycle forward, such as a cable or throttle etc. The way things stand at the moment, an electrical bicycle is classified as a motor vehicle because there is a motor. Albeit electrical as opposed to mechanical, it has a motor on board, so that is classified as a motor vehicle. What this allows me to do now is to make it that the electrical bicycle, with those specific requirements and conditions, now falls under the same category as a bicycle, and hence rules that apply for bicycles will apply to this specific type of electric bicycle. What will happen is that subsidiary legislation will be brought, specifying and stating what I have just said now. What this amendment does is it permits the Minister to be able to make that change.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Traffic Act 2005 and the Insurance (Motor Vehicles) (Third Party Risk) Act 1986 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

10

Motor Vehicles (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill 2018 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I beg to move that the Third Reading and Committee Stage of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

15 Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Litter Control (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: We now move to the First Readings of Bills and we commence with a Bill for an Act to amend the Litter Control Act 1990.

The Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Litter Control Act 1990 be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Litter Control Act 1990 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Litter Control (Amendment) Act 2018.

Litter Control (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

The Bill has been brought before us because of the need to update the legislation in order to allow our litter wardens to use every possible resource available to them, in particular CCTV, in the issuing of fixed penalty notices in relation to litter. The Act as it currently stands is ambiguous when it comes to the issuing of a fixed penalty notice unless it is given by hand, and so I propose to explain these changes.

Clauses 3(2), 3(3)(a) and (c) deal with the removal of the word 'give' to insert 'issue'. The purpose of these changes is to move away from solely giving a fixed penalty notice by hand and any ambiguities that the word brings. In issuing the fixed penalty notice, a litter warden is not limited to handing out a fixed penalty notice and we consequently allow several ways in which such notice may be issued. Clause 3(3) clearly states the ways in which such a notice under the Act may now be issued. The litter warden retains the ability to hand over the notice to a person but now can also address it and leave it at a person's last known address or send it by registered post. This will allow litter wardens to tackle any offences that are caught on CCTV.

Mr Speaker, in addition to these changes there will also be similar changes to subsidiary legislation in order to ensure uniformity throughout.

I commend this Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill?

The Hon. Trevor Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, I would just like to rise to say that we will certainly support this Bill. Any measures that assist us in controlling the amounts of litter that prevail on our streets is very welcome, and obviously anything that will assist those agents who are enforcing those laws is most welcome, so we will on this side of the House be supporting the Bill.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Litter Control Act 1990 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Litter Control (Amendment) Act 2018.

Litter Control (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I beg to move that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Animals and Birds (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Animals and Birds Act.
The Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Animals and Birds Act be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Animals and Birds Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Animals and Birds (Amendment) Act 2018.

Animals and Birds (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

Since 1948 when the Animals and Birds Act was originally enacted, animal welfare and rights issues have seen significant development. Awareness of the suffering of animals has risen and the public outcry that ensues in instances when animals have suffered cruelty or distress exceeds the levels of redress the law currently provides.

Only domestic, owned animals are protected under the current Act. The amendments, among other things, respond to public requests that cruelty offences have a wider application to animals for whom nobody is responsible. There is public condemnation of irresponsible behaviour which, whilst once commonplace, subjects animals to conditions which do not safeguard their welfare – for example, keeping cetacea in a dolphin area or keeping dogs in closed cars. The amendments to this Act seek to ensure such actions are prevented from taking place in Gibraltar.

There are a number of new provisions: firstly, the extension of the offence of cruelty. While section 5 already contains the offence of cruelty to animals, this only applied to animals with owners. It has now been extended to also protect wild animals from cruelty. The maximum sentence was not reflective of public sentiment in respect of behaviour which subjected animals to cruelty. Accordingly, we propose to increase the penalty for this offence to 12 months' imprisonment or statutory maximum fine or both on summary conviction, and five years' imprisonment on indictment. This is consistent with planned changes in UK law and conveys the message strongly that animal welfare is taken seriously and that irresponsible pet owners will not go unpunished. Whilst the offence of cruelty already included permitting an animal to be subject to cruelty, the meaning of this has now been clarified as failing to exercise reasonable care and supervision in respect of the protection of the animal from cruelty.

In relation to dolphinaria, given the abundance of cetacea in our waters, there are concerns that these animals could be taken into captivity for entertainment or display purposes, as was proposed some 10 years ago. Whilst the Nature Protection Act provides protection against taking cetacea from the wild, it does not prevent a person in Gibraltar from acquiring an animal which was already in captivity. We have therefore included provisions based on those in the Nature Protection Act which prevent any cetacea being kept in captivity, amongst other things.

In relation to animals in distress, we have largely based the changes on the English Animal Welfare Act 2006. A new Part 5A has been introduced into the Act incorporating extensive provisions to provide authorised officers with the powers to access properties where they reasonably believe an animal is in distress. These provisions will, among other things, provide the magistrates court with powers to grant a warrant to access residential premises and to make orders relating to the rehoming or treatment of the animal. It is expected that this will be used mostly in instances where dogs are kept in hot, closed cars. An inspector or police officer who finds an animal that is suffering may take those steps that need to be taken immediately to alleviate the animal's suffering. When an animal is suffering to such an extent that there is no alternative but to put it down, a veterinary surgeon must issue a certificate to that effect before the animal can be put down, other than in exceptional circumstances. The provisions also confer powers of entry for the purposes of dealing with an animal that is believed to be suffering or likely to suffer if remedial action is not taken. When an animal has been taken into possession and the animal is being retained, this section enables a magistrates court to make an order for the treatment, giving up, disposal or, if necessary, destruction of the animal.

In relation to abandonment of animals, the threshold required for the offence of abandoning an animal to be committed has been lowered. Whilst before it had to be shown that the abandonment took place in circumstances which were likely to cause the animal unnecessary suffering, this requirement has now been removed.

We have made provision for dogs' DNA to be obtained from their saliva rather than blood in circumstances where a veterinary practitioner considers that that is more important, for whatever reason – for example, if extracting blood would cause the animal extreme distress.

Whilst the Act previously only referred to an 'owner' of an animal a person would have been able to shirk responsibility for an animal by claiming they were merely looking after it on a temporary basis. We have therefore incorporated the concept of responsibility, whether on a temporary or permanent basis, as being an essential component of ownership. The new definition of 'owner' will include parents or guardians of children who are responsible for an animal, so that people cannot avoid liability for offences under the Act by claiming that the animal belongs to their children.

For the cruelty offence, 12 months' imprisonment or statutory maximum fine on summary conviction and five years' imprisonment on indictment has been introduced, which more adequately reflects the nature of the offence.

Regarding enforcement, authorised officers, a Gibraltar veterinary practitioner, who will be a qualified veterinarian, and HM customs officers have been added as authorised persons.

I would like to acknowledge the contribution made by a number of animal welfare charities in Gibraltar, including the Cat Welfare Society and Save Gibraltar's Street Cats, for having worked with us in arriving at this proposed amendment.

I now commend the Bill to the House. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desk)

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill?

Again, I call on the Hon. Trevor Hammond.

Hon. T N Hammond: Mr Speaker, again I think it is fair to say that on this side of the House we do welcome the Bill. It is an important Bill, and obviously looking after animals, whether they be pets or wild animals, is something that is a very human thing to do, I think, most importantly.

One element that I would just like to pick up on is a slight disappointment on my part and on the part of a number of Members on this side of the House that the sale of animals through pet shops is not covered by the Bill, or does not appear to be covered by the Bill. In the English law I believe it is covered.

The sight of puppies in pet shop windows all by themselves all day long, being gawped at by people, is something that I think should be a thing of the past and I wonder if the Minister would take some time to look at, at some point, amending the Bill in the future to cover such situations?

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mr Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, as my hon. Friend Mr Hammond has said, this is a Bill that is very much welcomed by the Opposition.

Pets are not only property, they are companions, they are members of a family and they ought to be treated as such. Some of the penalties that were attached prior to the amendments to cruelty to some animals were, quite frankly, absolutely ridiculous and an embarrassment to any modern society and the way that we look at pets as members of the family and also as companions.

The Hon. Minister said that society is more aware of the suffering of animals and he is undoubtedly correct in relation to that, but society is also aware of the impact of human activity on wildlife and animals in particular.

The Hon. Minister has referred to dolphinariums and dolphins, but there are other areas where we would like to see the Government really also move towards introducing legislation and I would like to mention some of those areas for the benefit of the Minister. Indeed, I have to tell the Minister that before the end of the year it is my intention to send to him proposed amendments to our legislation in order to deal with some of these areas that I am going to be mentioning in a moment.

The Hon. Minister, being a conservationist himself and an environmentalist, will know that about 20,000 elephants are killed every single year because of the ivory trade and also because of Chinese traditional remedies associated with body parts, not only of elephants but also of other animals. Indeed, the Chinese government, sadly, lifted the ban very recently on animal body parts for the purpose of Chinese medicine.

In 2016 the UK government introduced a partial ban on the sale of ivory. Since then, there has been a clamour in the United Kingdom for a total ban on ivory sales and I would like to see the Government be at the forefront of that agenda so that it shows the international community how seriously we take these kind of issues here in Gibraltar.

Also, the Hon. Minister will have seen the controversy that has occurred as a consequence of some American hunters being seen photographed with wild sheep in Scotland – trophy hunting, essentially. Trophy hunting is a massive problem internationally. Indeed, in Africa, for example, what you now get is the practice of canned trophy hunting. That is where lions are hand reared from a young age as cubs so that they are used to humans, and then they are released and hunted so that these idiots – because I can only refer to them as such, idiots – are then able to come in, pay huge amounts of money and take trophies to the United States and indeed to the United Kingdom.

Again, there is a significant push by conservationists and environmentalists – who are concerned that we are slowly sleepwalking towards extinction of many species, including giraffes, which have now gone up the scale of endangered species in Africa as a consequence of trophy hunting – to actually ban the importation of animal body parts that have been obtained as a consequence of hunting.

Even though we are a population of 30,000 people and this is a very small jurisdiction and a very small territory – and it is unlikely that we are going to get many body parts of African lions coming to Gibraltar and indeed it is but a grain of sand in a massive mountain represented by probably the products of ivory that we might sell here in Gibraltar – I think that Gibraltar needs to be setting an example in these areas. These are two areas that, for environmentalists and for conservationists across the world, it really is important and I would like to see the Hon. Minister – who I know takes these matters to heart and probably shares the sentiment, to the very last word, that I have expressed today – be at the forefront of that.

In relation to Lucy's Law, which is a law in the UK – I asked a question about this; it is on the Order Paper – it is not about the sale of puppies in terms of puppies being in a shop window and the effect that that may have on puppies; it is the fact that puppies that are sold by pet shops may come from puppy farms and breeders that are disreputable and that you may have, for example, a bitch that is producing three or four litters every single year, year on year, until that dog basically cannot produce any more puppies. That is really the mischief behind the introduction of Lucy's Law.

Of course, again we can say, 'Well, there has only traditionally been one pet shop here in Gibraltar, or a couple of pet shops, and this is but a grain of sand,' but I think that preventing cruelty to one animal is worth it. Therefore, introducing a law such as Lucy's Law here in Gibraltar to ensure that people buy from reputable breeders or indeed from homes, of which there are many because there are many dogs that are in homes looking for a forever home, as people who are actively involved in this area will tell you ... and those are areas that, in our respectful view, the Government also ought to be considering as well as this and indeed the other Bill that the Minister is going to be moving in relation to services.

I am very grateful to Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one point for clarification regarding the offences and the penalties that the Hon. the Minister described, the 12-month period and the maximum statutory fine. Did that recommendation by any chance come from the Law Commission that was constituted by the learned and Hon. Minister for Justice? I would have thought ... clearly there is a review of sentencing practice in our jurisdiction, together with parole – a separate issue, I know – and the Law Commission was particularly established ... and I welcome the learned Attorney in the House today because I know he is a constitute member of that Law Commission. I am wondering whether there was any discussion between the Minister for Justice and the Environment in relation to the penalty and the duration and the fines themselves. It is just that my understanding is that the Law Commission was looking at all sentencing guidelines, and whether there was any crossover with the Minister for the Environment.

Mr Speaker: Any other speaker on the Second Reading of the Bill before I call on the mover to reply?

The Hon. Dr John Cortes.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if I might first refer to the Hon. Mr Phillips' question, I am not aware of such discussion. There may have been at the level of the law draftsmen, who may have consulted, but certainly not me or my immediate team in Environment. But I think it is consistent with what the Law Commission wants to achieve anyway and a member of my team is a member of the Law Commission – Liesl Mesilio – and therefore it may well have been discussed at that level but I do not have any personal knowledge of that.

Mr Speaker, I am very grateful for the contributions by the Members opposite, in particular the narrative of the Hon. Mr Feetham. I would have loved to have heard that kind of narrative when he was Minister for Justice. It would have spared me a lot of grief and may even have kept me out of politics, (Laughter) but there we go – that's history for you.

Mr Speaker, if I may just confirm that I share concerns on trophy hunting. That is one of the points that I have not specifically looked at but certainly will. But I have good news for the Members opposite. My team has today finalised approving a draft Pet Animals Bill, which I hope to be publishing – once I have, obviously, taken it through Cabinet – as a Command Paper shortly, and I yesterday saw a first draft of an Ivory Bill in order to deal with the question of ivory and keep up with what is proposed in the UK so that we are consistent with the very important steps that the UK is taking in order to try and save the elephant from extinction.

Mr Speaker, I think that that is all I have to say on that. I think I have answered all the points. I am grateful for their support and I once again commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

35 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Animals and Birds Act be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Animals and Birds (Amendment) Act 2018.

Animals and Birds (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

40 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I beg to move that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Are all hon. Members agreeable to the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill being taken later today? (Members: Aye.)

Armed Forces (Gibraltar) Act 2018 –
Second Reading approved

45 Clerk: We now proceed to the Second Reading of the Armed Forces (Gibraltar) Act 2018. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

50 I take great pleasure in bringing this Bill to the Parliament. The support of our armed forces, British armed forces, is one of the key features of our unique and enduring relationship with the United Kingdom. It is one of the key features of our role as one of the British family of nations and indeed it is the key strategic feature that makes this Rock of ours such a geopolitically relevant asset to the United Kingdom and so desirable to others. It is in that context that we are today going to be able to appreciate in this Parliament a part of the growth and maturity of our self-government in the past three decades. That growth and that maturity has manifested itself in every iteration of our successive Constitutions since the Second World War. In particular it started to manifest exactly 30 years ago when the GSLP first took over the executive branch in Gibraltar and started the work of de facto constitutional reform.

Mr Speaker, until 2006 the presence of British armed forces in Gibraltar had been covered by successive Armed Forces Acts of the United Kingdom since 1952 as periodically refreshed from time to time. The UK Acts were extended to Gibraltar in the UK legislation itself. In its 2011 iteration the mechanism for the extension of the application of the Act to Overseas Territories was amended so that it was an Order in Council that would provide for this, as opposed to it being contained within the Act itself.

Hon. Members should know that in the United Kingdom there is a convention arising from times of civil war that Parliament must renew its armed forces legislation every five years. There was a coincidence in the refreshment of that Act in 2006 with our 2006 Constitution. In fact, as a result of the current iteration of our Constitution, hon. Members will also know that there is a convention between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom that no legislative Acts are done by the UK for Gibraltar without Gibraltar's express consent. That has resulted in the sparse use of Orders in Council in respect of Gibraltar.

For that reason, the 2006 Armed Forces Act was not extended to Gibraltar. There was an agreement between the then administration of the Gibraltar Government that a piece of Gibraltar legislation would be enacted to provide the same cover as the Armed Forces Act 2006. The Hon. Mr Feetham will recall that this was one of the matters on which he and Sir Peter Caruana kindly briefed the Deputy Chief Minister and me the week after the last election in their handover session with us at No. 6 Convent Place in December 2011, just days after the glorious new dawn of socialist and liberal government.

Mr Speaker, this was the position set out in both Houses of Parliament in the United Kingdom when these UK Acts were being considered in 2006, in its refreshment in 2011 and its latest iteration of 2016. With the agreement of the current Government that I lead, the UK's 2016 Act has also not been extended to Gibraltar, given our commitment to make a Gibraltarian law for this purpose. The net effect of that is that whilst a person serving in the United Kingdom armed forces is subject to the terms of the Act and it applies wherever in the world the service person is, executive powers are not available in Gibraltar in the absence of an Act of this Parliament.

Indeed, Mr Speaker, I think it is important that I should quote for hon. Members and for Hansard the references made by the Secretary of State for Defence in his presentation of the Second Reading of the Bill for the Armed Forces Act 2016 in the House of Commons. This is the clear and most recent statement of the position as seen from the United Kingdom Government as to the territorial ambit of the 2016 UK Act. The Rt Hon. Mr Fallon said this:

Clause 13 brings the Armed Forces Act 2006 back into force in the Isle of Man and British overseas territories except for Gibraltar. Under United Kingdom law, the 2006 Act has always applied to members of the armed forces, wherever in the world they are operating, and that will remain the case. That means that a member of the armed forces commits an offence under UK law if they do something in another jurisdiction which, had they done it in England or Wales, would have been a criminal offence. In addition, the 2006 Act originally formed part of the law of the Isle of Man and the British overseas territories. However, the Act expired in those jurisdictions in 2011. Clause 13 and the schedule to the Bill revive the Act in those jurisdictions so that, as it currently has effect in the UK, it will also be in force there. That ensures that things that members of the armed forces might do under the 2006 Act in those jurisdictions, such as the exercise of service police powers of arrest or search, would be lawful there not only as a matter of UK law but as a matter of the local law. It also ensures that the civilian authorities within those jurisdictions can do things under the 2006 Act which they might not otherwise have powers to do under the local law, such as the arrest of a person suspected of a service offence under a warrant issued by a judge advocate.

An exception is being made for Gibraltar. This is because we are currently consulting the Government of Gibraltar on how best to extend the provisions of the 2006 Act—and, therefore, of the Bill—– which hon. Members will recall is the renewal in 2016 – to that territory.

Mr Speaker, after many years of negotiation and discussion, we have now agreed a text of a proposed Armed Forces (Gibraltar) Act, which is in this House for debate today.

95 It is also undoubtedly true that the events of February 2016 at Gibraltar Airport, when a stand-off ensued between officers of the Royal Gibraltar Police and officers of the Ministry of Defence, brought into sharp focus a jurisdictional gap in our law in respect of the presence in Gibraltar of Her Majesty's armed forces. This Bill addresses those issues by applying in Gibraltar certain provisions of the UK's Armed Forces Act 2006. It does so whilst respecting the primacy of 100 the Royal Gibraltar Police as the lead law enforcement agency throughout Gibraltar and the primacy of the Gibraltar Constitution. It could not be otherwise, and this Government – and, I am sure, every Member of this Parliament – would not countenance any other solution. Indeed, if I may say so, I think that the actions of the Royal Gibraltar Police on the day in question have been demonstrated to have been entirely proper and a conviction has in fact since resulted 105 outside of Gibraltar.

Hon. Members will also be aware that by section 35(2) of our Constitution there is a provision which reads as follows:

Except with the consent of the Governor, acting in his discretion, signified by the Chief Minister, the Parliament shall not proceed upon any bill (including any amendment to a bill) that, in the opinion of the Governor, acting in his discretion, signified as aforesaid, concerns a matter for which he is responsible under section 47(1).

Mr Speaker, those of course include defence and internal security. I am able to signify that consent to the Parliament today. And so now we are about to take the step of seeing through 110 that commitment to make in this Parliament and for ourselves the law that will regulate the presence of the British armed forces in Gibraltar.

This is an important step in the emancipation of the people of Gibraltar. At the time of the last world war, Gibraltarians were oft not best treated by some parts of the hierarchy of the British armed forces. Many are the stories of Gibraltarians having to get off the pavement for a 115 British officer. There are photographs to remind us of the different use of sanitary facilities for UK-based civilians of the Ministry of Defence, as opposed to Gibraltarians and other aliens. Those days are long gone. Our relationship is now one that arises from our common British citizenship, a relationship of partnership and complicity in pursuit of British foreign policy interests.

120 After the last world war, Gibraltarian families who had been evacuated returned to Gibraltar. Self-government developed. The Ministry of Defence, which had long been the guardian for Britain of a fortress that was also our home, slowly ceded control of it to the emerging civilian authorities. The 'useless mouths' that had been removed from their homeland had returned to become masters in this place. Slowly, civilian self-government established itself in Gibraltar.
125 Parts of the estate previously controlled exclusively by the Ministry of Defence were released to the Gibraltar authorities. A City Council became a Government. Our nation was listed as one of the non-self-governing territories subject to the United Nations decolonisation process. The right to our land and the right to self-determination became the rallying cries of the Gibraltarians. Successive Governments entered into successive Lands Memoranda with the 130 Ministry of Defence as more and more land in our small geography has become surplus to defence requirements and has been made available to the Gibraltar Government. No longer do our people inhabit only one third of the Rock, with the rest taken over by the armed forces. That ratio is now a thing of the past. And now, in a final step in this important process of this fortress passing from military to civilian control, the regulation of the British armed forces that had

135 previously ruled the roost in this place will arise from legislation passed in a Parliament elected by direct universal suffrage of the people of Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, for all those reasons, this is a seminal moment and all hon. Members will want to reflect on it as such.

140 Moving now to the substance of the Bill, it is important that hon. Members should bear in mind that the Bill will only apply to two very specific types of persons. The first category are persons who are subject to service law, a term which is defined in clause 2(2)(a) and which effectively means members of the UK armed forces. And the second category are civilians who are subject to service discipline, a term which is defined in clause 2(2)(b) and which effectively 145 means civilians with a close family or employment nexus to the UK armed forces. I shall be referring to these two categories of persons collectively as ‘persons subject to the Act’.

Importantly, Mr Speaker, technical discussions are currently ongoing as to the application of the Act to members of the Gibraltar Regiment. The relevant provisions of the Bill that will apply the Act to the Gibraltar Regiment – clauses 2(2)(a)(ii) and (iii), (c) and (d) – will be brought into effect once those discussions have been concluded.

150 Clause 4 makes it clear that the Act will not apply to ordinary civilians or to civilian property.

Clause 25 makes it clear that the Act will not affect any right conferred upon any person by the Gibraltar Constitution.

The Act, in fact, comprises five Parts. Part 1 contains the interpretation clause setting out the definitions of the key terms of the Act and it also contains provisions for the entry into force of 155 the Act, including the power for differential commencement dates, which is relevant to my comments a moment ago in respect of the Gibraltar Regiment.

Part 2 is the most important part of the Act. Clause 3 makes provision for the application of the UK Armed Forces Act in Gibraltar.

160 Clause 5 confirms that service authorities shall have jurisdiction in Gibraltar in relation to persons subject to the Act.

Clause 4 specifically provides for the Act not to apply to civilians. In fact, section 4 states this, and I think it is important for the House to reflect on the exact terms of the clause:

Nothing in this Act is to be construed as permitting the exercise by any service court or service authority of any jurisdiction, powers, functions or competences under the Armed Forces Act over a person who is a civilian.

Additionally, the section provides that:

The exercise of any jurisdiction, powers, functions or competences under the Armed Forces Act in Gibraltar does not limit any right of a civilian in relation to any civilian property.

165 As I shall explain, Mr Speaker, the remaining provisions of Part 2 set out the cases where the RGP and the military police shall exercise exclusive, primary or concurrent jurisdiction in Gibraltar in accordance with the mechanisms for close co-operation between both police forces that the Act establishes.

170 Clause 7 grants the service authorities exclusive jurisdiction with respect to the offences punishable under forces law but not otherwise under the laws of Gibraltar. A prime example of such an offence would be where a soldier is absent without leave (AWOL).

175 Clause 8 sets out the cases where the service authorities enjoy primacy of jurisdiction. That is to say the cases where a person subject to the Act commits an offence that is punishable under both forces law and the laws of Gibraltar and jurisdiction is granted to the service authorities.
The main criterion for determining such primacy in favour of the service authorities is that the offence arose out of and in the course of that person’s duty as a member of Her Majesty’s armed forces or as a civilian subject to service discipline. Other cases concern offences committed against other military persons or against military property and offences against the security of the United Kingdom.

180 In all other cases, primacy will vest with the RGP. So, for instance, where a soldier commits an offence against a civilian or civilian property, primacy of jurisdiction will vest with the RGP.

As an example of the spirit of closer co-operation between both police authorities that will result from this Act – and I am sure all of us will welcome this, Mr Speaker – clause 10 provides that one police force may waive jurisdiction in favour of the other where they both consider that the circumstances so require.

185 That spirit of closer co-operation will best be exemplified by the requirement set out in clause 13 that the Commander of British Forces in Gibraltar and the Commissioner of Police shall enter into an operational protocol between their respective forces setting out the circumstances and manner in which jurisdiction, power and competence shall be exercised by one or other of them or concurrently. Such protocols between the civilian and service authorities exist in the 190 United Kingdom and in the Sovereign Base Areas in Cyprus and one has already been agreed for Gibraltar. It will become effective on the same day as the Act enters into force. It is the first time that such a protocol will exist in Gibraltar, and I greatly welcome it. The Protocol is intended to support the practical application of the Act by providing a guide to the co-ordination of approach to policing in Gibraltar between the RGP and the service police. Both forces have shown their 195 commitment to establish close and regular support, consultation and co-operation, which they have recognised as being crucially important and essential in order to promote a clear and effective working relationship between them to achieve their common purpose of upholding law and order in Gibraltar.

I am aware that a lot of work has gone into the drafting of the Protocol and I would like to 200 express my deep gratitude to both police forces for the efforts they have made to reach agreement on the Protocol and to better understand each other's concerns. In fact, here it is worth just reflecting the deep and sincere gratitude of Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar to those who have delivered this Act, Mr Speaker.

Principal thanks must go to the Attorney General, Michael Llamas QC, who has spent many 205 hours working with Vice Admiral Tony Radakin on this sensitive matter, to whom we must also record our thanks.

Current and former Commissioners of the Royal Gibraltar Police Ian McGrail and Eddie Yome and their respective teams have worked to deliver a sensible protocol with their MoD 210 colleagues, together with, if I may say so, Command Secretary Richard Johnson. Their sensible approach makes the workings of these new rules possible.

Mr Speaker, I am leaving a copy of the Protocol agreed between the RGP and the MoD in the antechamber for Members to be able to consult its terms, if they wish.

Central to the Government's own concerns in this area have been the delicate issues of 215 policing outside of MoD premises. The guiding principle in this respect is set out in clause 12 of the Bill, which provides that, as the general rule, the service police will not exercise any power of entry, search or seizure outside MoD premises in Gibraltar. This is supplemented by the Protocol, which establishes that outside MoD premises the service police shall be employed subject to such arrangements with the RGP as are set out in the Protocol and only insofar as 220 such employment is necessary to maintain discipline and order among persons subject to the Act. This is in itself consistent with the Agreement regarding the Status of Forces of Parties to the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation 1951, which applies to Gibraltar pursuant to the UK's Visiting Forces Act 1952, which was extended to Gibraltar, in those days by Order in Council, in 1954.

Schedule 1 of the Protocol contains a clarificatory agreed list and a map of the sites which 225 currently constitute MoD property, for the purposes of determining where that is today in the geography.

The remaining provisions of Part 2 contain further aspects of co-operation, such as how the RGP will give effect to a warrant issued by a judge advocate in the United Kingdom under section 313 of the UK's Armed Forces Act for the arrest of a person subject to the Act,

230 procedures for detention pending decisions on jurisdiction, safeguards against double jeopardy and a reiteration of the jurisdiction of the civilian courts and authorities in Gibraltar.

Part 3 of the Bill deals with desertion and absence without leave. It creates certain offences relating to the armed forces, including where a civilian knowingly aids or abets a person subject to service law to commit the offences of desertion or absence without leave.

235 It also grants police officers of the RGP powers to arrest any person who is unlawfully at large or who is reasonably suspected of being an unlawful absentee and to deal with such persons where they surrender themselves to a police officer.

The final Parts of the Bill deal with various general provisions that enhance the co-operation between the RGP and the service police, such as a person in service custody being detained in 240 Gibraltar's Prison pending his or her removal from Gibraltar.

Clause 25, as I said earlier, makes it clear that the Act will not affect any right conferred upon any person by the Gibraltar Constitution. This is a hugely important clause in the assertion of the jurisdictional primacy of the Gibraltar Constitution. I think it is important to reflect it entirely in this debate and I therefore propose to take Members through the whole of this section. The 245 section provides as follows.

No provision in this Act may be construed as in any way affecting any right conferred upon any person by the Constitution; and any act, whether undertaken pursuant to a provision within this Act or which is undertaken in Gibraltar pursuant to the Armed Forces Act, is subject to the Constitution.

250 The second subparagraph reads that for the avoidance of doubt, a person may seek to enforce any right or obligation conferred by or imposed under the Constitution irrespective of anything provided for in this Act or the Armed Forces Act.

The third paragraph says that no provision in this Act or in the Armed Forces Act affects the civilian court's powers to make orders with respect to any application before it concerning a 255 matter provided for in the Constitution.

The fourth subparagraph provides that, for the avoidance of doubt, a person by virtue of this Act or by virtue of the application of forces law by this Act may apply to the Supreme Court where that person believes that any right conferred by the Constitution has been violated.

260 The fifth paragraph of the section provides that the Supreme Court may, on hearing an application under subsection (4), make such orders as it deems fit, including any temporary order.

And most importantly, the sixth paragraph provides that nothing in the Act or in the Armed Forces Act itself shall affect the right of a person who is detained at a place against that person's will from applying to the Supreme Court for a writ of habeas corpus or other prerogative 265 remedy.

Mr Speaker, there can be no clearer statement of the utter primacy of the Gibraltar Constitution than that contained in section 25 of this Bill.

270 Clause 26 allows the Chief Minister, in agreement with the Governor, to make subsidiary legislation for the administration of the Act, and the consultation there between the incumbent Chief Minister and the incumbent Governor is required because of the section 32 nature of this legislation, which cannot be moved without the consent of the Governor.

Clause 27 preserves the immunity of the Crown in right of Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar and of public officers in Gibraltar for any damage or anything done or omitted by any service authority to be done under the Armed Forces Act.

275 That is the extent of the Act.

Importantly, Mr Speaker, I also want to reflect what I am sure is the position of every Member of this House in support of that particular part of the British Army that is so innately a part of our DNA, the Royal Gibraltar Regiment – the Barbarians, as they are known by nickname in the British Army. They are part of the core of what Gibraltar is all about and part of how we 280 express our Britishness and our British citizenship also. Now they are providing services beyond Gibraltar for extended periods, away from their families, taking risks just like all other members of the British armed forces. As far as Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar is concerned, there is no reason whatsoever why they should be dealt with in any manner that is not entirely in keeping with the manner of treatment of all other members of the British Army; X factor included.

Mr Speaker, more generally now, I think this Act is the product of the work of all Chief Ministers and all Ministers of Gibraltar – starting from our very first Chief Minister, Sir Joshua Hassan; through Sir Bob Peliza, a military man himself; yourself; Sir Joe Bossano, who led the de facto constitutional revolution of 1988; and Sir Peter Caruana, who delivered the 2006 Constitution; as well as the contribution of the Government that I lead.

290

This is the product of our constitutional maturity and our growth as a community and as a nation. It is the effect of the work that every single parliamentarian in their own way has done to grow our democracy and mature it to its current state. It is the effect of the work of every Gibraltarian who has worked to mature our nation as we – the civilians who flocked to the Rock in the aftermath of the British liberation of 1704 – now assert by our law what rights the British armed forces have on this our Rock.

295

That is the normal balance in any modern, constitutional, democratic monarchy, and as from today it will be the position in Gibraltar. We will cross a Rubicon today, a massive coming of age in many respects, as we create these rights for our British armed forces with great pleasure, because the British armed forces are our armed forces too. They are the defenders of this Rock, they are the defenders of freedom and justice around the world, they are the best of Britain and in so being they are also the best of us.

300

And so, Mr Speaker, I heartily, proudly, and I beg to say historically, commend this seminal Bill to the House and I congratulate this nation of ours for this collective achievement. (Banging on desks)

305

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill?

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, we welcome and echo the words of the Chief Minister in respect of this seminal piece of legislation.

I, for one, in particular do welcome this after being a lawyer for the Ministry of Defence for over a decade in the past. I have enjoyed many interactions with the Ministry of Defence and the GDP and lawyers in London in respect of many constitutional issues that have arisen before and not before our courts but issues that have arisen over time. Therefore, it is with great pride that I see the Government putting a Bill before this House to regularise and modernise that relationship, and particularly in relation to our jurisdictional law.

Mr Speaker, starting with the last point that the Chief Minister made in respect of the Royal Gibraltar Regiment, of course they are members of the British Army and of course they are members of the extended British family. I would echo that and support the Chief Minister entirely in what he says in respect of the Royal Gibraltar Regiment.

320

It is clear that this piece of legislation puts issues such as the standoff that we had at our Airport in the past, and hopefully issues like that will be a thing of the past, and I am grateful that the Chief Minister has explained that that, in a practical way, escalated parts of the discussions that the Chief Minister and his Government have had with the British government.

325

Mr Speaker, I agree to a certain extent ... the Chief Minister said that these are now almost – he did not use these exact words, but these are the last colonial vestiges in our community and I am glad that this piece of legislation continues to move Gibraltar forward and modernise our relationship, particularly for our young soldiers who are doing fine work overseas and in Gibraltar, and therefore we on this side of the House welcome this very important piece of legislation and again repeat and echo the words of the Hon. Chief Minister.

330

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on this Bill?

335 I call on the mover to reply. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I welcome the words of the hon. Gentleman. I welcome the fact that hon. Members have concurred with the view of the Government as to the substance and the background of this Bill and what it means in terms of – and it is a word that the hon. Gentleman uses, not one I use – ‘colonialism’ and the coming of age that I expressed in a different way in the context of my own intervention.

I think this is a hugely important moment. We must not think that we are simply creating an Act to deal with the day-to-day administration of the armed forces. That is the practical effect of what is happening here. The important thing is that we are the ones doing it.

345 I think this must also reflect in the relationship that there is between the Government of Gibraltar today and the United Kingdom government. It is true that it has not been easy or quick for us to produce a Bill which has met with the agreement of the United Kingdom, ensuring that it does what they feel needs to be done in respect of their armed forces and the way that we felt needed to protect our Constitution. In fact, that process went through two administrations, the former administration and my current administration. But we have got there, Mr Speaker.

350 It might have been very easy – if I may say so, just to pick up on one of the things that the hon. Gentleman referred us to – for the incident at Gibraltar Airport in February 2016 to have resulted in the agreement between the Government of Gibraltar and the Government of the United Kingdom not to have an Order in Council extension of the Armed Forces Act to have fallen apart and to simply have seen the Armed Forces Act then applied to Gibraltar from London. In fact, that strengthened the resolve for there to be a Gibraltar piece of legislation; it strengthened the relationship. The Protocol that I will leave in the antechamber is a very full document that works even through examples to ensure that different police authorities understand how to deal with issues as they arise. I am sure, Mr Speaker, that given the nature of the relationship today and the practical effect of what this Bill will do, that those sorts of regrettable incidents will never occur again and I believe that with the support of the whole House together we will take a huge step today as a community.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the application in Gibraltar of certain provisions of the UK Armed Forces Act 2006, for the application of that Act to the Royal Gibraltar Regiment, for the exercise in Gibraltar of jurisdiction, powers and competences by service authorities and courts in certain circumstances, for the creation under Gibraltar law of certain offences relating to the armed forces and for matters connected therewith or incidental thereto be read a second time. Those in favour?

370 (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Armed Forces (Gibraltar) Act 2018.

Armed Forces (Gibraltar) Bill 2018 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of this Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): I have the honour to move that the House should resolve itself into Committee to consider the following Bills clause by clause: the Armed Forces (Gibraltar) Bill 2018, the Animals and Birds (Amendment) Bill 2018, the Litter Control (Amendment) Bill 2018 and the Motor Vehicles (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill 2018.

380

In Committee of the whole House

Armed Forces (Gibraltar) Bill 2018 –
Clauses considered and approved with amendment

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to make provision for the application in Gibraltar of certain provisions of the UK Armed Forces Act 2006, for the application of that Act to the Royal Gibraltar Regiment, for the exercise in Gibraltar of jurisdiction, powers and competences by service authorities and courts in certain circumstances, for the creation under Gibraltar law of certain offences relating to the armed forces and for matters connected therewith or incidental thereto.

385

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, just to give notice to hon. Members that I intend to move an amendment to clause 2. It is in writing and it will be circulated shortly, in time for that stage of the proceedings.

390

Clerk: Part 1, clause 1.

395

Mr Speaker: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 2 as amended.

400

Mr Speaker: Let me see it, at least.

405

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the amendment – which hon. Members I think will now have – in effect provides the power necessary, which is not otherwise in existence in our law now, for the officers who are discharging the role of service policemen to have the ability to carry batons, handcuffs and incapacitant sprays, which are the sorts of – I hesitate to say ‘weapons’ – implements with which we expect our own Police to be able to carry out their duties.

Mr Speaker: Does any hon. Member wish to comment on this proposed amendment?

410 Clerk: Clause 2 as amended.

Mr Speaker: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 2, clauses 3 to 17.

415

455 Clerk: The long title.

Mr Speaker: Stands part of the Bill.

Armed Forces (Gibraltar) Bill 2018,
Litter Control (Amendment) Bill 2018,
Animals and Birds (Amendment) Bill 2018 and 460 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the Armed (Amendment) Bill 2018 and the Motor Vehicles (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill 2018 have been considered in Committee and agreed to with some amendments. I now move that they be read a third time and passed.

465 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Armed Forces (Gibraltar) Act 2018, a Bill for an Act to amend the Litter Control Act 1990, a Bill for an Act to amend the Animals and Birds Act and a Bill for an Act to amend the Traffic Act 2005 and the Insurance (Motor Vehicles) (Third Party Risk) Act 1986 be read a third time and carried. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Brexit update

470 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I rise now to adjourn.
Before I do, just by way of information to hon. Members, the Deputy Chief Minister and I were yesterday involved in further travel related to Brexit negotiations. Depending on diary commitments, we expect we will be seeking to further brief hon. Members of the Brexit Select Committee either tomorrow or Monday on the latest state of play and we anticipate that there 475 are likely still to be between and seven and 21 days of activity in respect of the work that we are doing to deal with Gibraltar-related matters relating to or arising from Brexit. Hon. Members will be contacted by the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

I therefore expect, Mr Speaker, it will be possible for us to return to the House on Thursday, 22nd November in the afternoon and I would propose that we adjourn to that date at 3 p.m.

480 Mr Speaker: The Chief Minister is proposing that the House do adjourn to Thursday, 22nd November at three in the afternoon. The House will now adjourn to Thursday, 22nd November at three in the afternoon.

Standing Order 7(1) suspended to proceed with Government Statement

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Thursday, 22nd November 2018.

Order of Proceedings: Suspension of Standing Orders. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

- 5 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move, under Standing Order 7(3), to suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with a Government Statement.

Mr Speaker: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Brexit negotiations update – Statement by the Chief Minister

10 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, despite the parallel storm that has been raging on Gibraltar-related matters, I returned yesterday from Madrid with the Government's Brexit team, where we have negotiated the final details of the package of measures that will apply to Gibraltar in the context of our withdrawal from the European Union together with the United Kingdom.

15 This morning I briefed the Cabinet and the members of the Brexit Select Committee. I expect to make a full ministerial statement to the nation on the nature and effect of these Gibraltar measures sometime next week. By then, we hope, the European Summit to be held on Sunday, 25th November will have reached final agreement on the draft Withdrawal Agreement and the political declaration which has just been published and which sets out the framework for the future relationship between the European Union and the United Kingdom.

20 Today, I will update the Parliament on the progress made in this week's negotiations in Madrid and the meeting held with the Prime Minister in Downing Street last week.

Mr Speaker, the Withdrawal Agreement, as hon. Members know, contains a Protocol on Gibraltar. The Protocol refers to a series of memoranda of understanding and a tax treaty that will underpin the operation of the Protocol. Those are the documents that we have been discussing and I am glad to report today that agreement on all of these documents is now virtually complete, subject to a common final political agreement. Work has been finalised on negotiations of substance in respect of all matters.

25 The four MoUs concern citizens' rights, tobacco market access, co-operation on environmental matters and co-operation on police and customs matters. The tax treaty sets out provisions on fiscal transparency and tax residency rules typical of what is found in a double taxation or information exchange agreement, those types of agreements that we have with many countries around the world and which we have long wished to have with Spain. All of these MoUs, except for the tax treaty and the citizens' rights MoU, create obligations only until the end of December 2020. That is to say these agreements are only for the 21 months of the so-called transition period between March 2019 and December 2020. Unless we agree otherwise, they drop dead then.

All of these documents are the product of a long and intensive negotiation that has lasted virtually the whole year. Nothing in these documents compromises any of our red lines. Nothing in them alters in any way whatsoever our Constitution and our constitutional competences. There are and there will be no concessions on matters of sovereignty, jurisdiction or control. In fact, they are expressly arrangements entered into without prejudice to all sovereignty positions. Indeed, neither do these documents require us to do things that we have any problem in doing. I can assure all Members that the terms of the MoUs are far removed from what others might have wished them to contain.

Mr Speaker, we are now presently engaged in a legal scrub and text stabilisation of the documents and the necessary translation of them, and we are confident that they will be ready for final political agreement and approval by Sunday. This means that as long as the Special European Summit on Sunday reaches final agreement between the EU27 and the United Kingdom, the terms on which Gibraltar will form part of the Withdrawal Agreement have been finalised and Gibraltar will benefit from the transitional period. This is what was at stake at this stage of the complex Brexit negotiations and this is what we are on the verge of achieving.

Mr Speaker, our objective for the first phase of the Brexit negotiations was to secure continued access to the UK markets. We achieved that in October last year. We are now on the verge of securing our objective for the second phase of the Brexit negotiations. That is to say our inclusion in the Withdrawal Agreement and the transitional period.

It is of critical importance that we bear in mind that without our inclusion in the Withdrawal Agreement, Gibraltar alone would have faced a cliff edge on 30th March 2019. That is to say EU law would have continued to apply to the United Kingdom for a transitional period running to at least December 2020, but not to Gibraltar. This was not the result we would have wanted. It would provide no certainty to businesses and to individuals. It is therefore with a great sense of satisfaction that I am able to inform the House today that, notwithstanding the threats that we have faced, notwithstanding the considerable challenges that we have faced, notwithstanding the claims that some voices have wrongly suggested Brexit presented Spain with the best opportunity it has had in the last 300 years to acquire sovereignty, or some part of it, over Gibraltar, Gibraltar will nonetheless and despite all of that be part of any Withdrawal Agreement and transitional period if there is one. This will secure a vital period of legal certainty for businesses and citizens that will last until at least 31st December 2020 and during which the future partnership between the United Kingdom – including Gibraltar – and the EU will be negotiated.

The memoranda of understanding and the tax treaty will be accompanied by a number of other documents, letters and political declarations, all of which are also being finalised as I speak. All of these documents form a single package that must be read and understood as such. I will explain them in some detail in my ministerial statement once they have all been finalised and the EU27 and the UK have reached an agreement on the withdrawal process.

There are two additional points I would like to make. Firstly, during the course of this week, the Spanish government has publicly expressed its misgivings with how Gibraltar has been treated in relation to one aspect of the Withdrawal Agreement. This concerns Article 184 of the Agreement, which Spain interprets as compromising the role it wishes to play in determining how the UK's future partnership with the EU will apply to Gibraltar. Let it be clear that this has nothing to do with what we have been negotiating, which is the terms of the differentiated involvement in the Withdrawal Agreement for Gibraltar and our inclusion in the transitional period and not the terms of the future relationship with the EU. That is not what we are dealing with at this point. Indeed, those who have criticised the Gibraltar Government for not having 85 obtained now a more enduring and permanent deal for Gibraltar at this stage of the negotiations continue to profoundly misunderstand how the Brexit negotiations are being conducted and how the legal texts must be interpreted. Perhaps the events of the last 72 hours may have served to clarify this.

Secondly, the memoranda and the tax treaty we have been negotiating underpin the operation of the Gibraltar Protocol that forms an integral part of the Withdrawal Agreement. 90 They are therefore the product of requirements contained in the Withdrawal Agreement. That Agreement is an EU Treaty, which is a formally binding treaty under international law entered into by sovereign states. Gibraltar is constitutionally not, and constitutionally cannot be, a separate party to such an agreement. This said, it is important that the Protocol and the MoUs are understood in the light of Recital 2 of the Protocol, which states that the Protocol is to be 95 implemented in accordance with the respective constitutional orders of the United Kingdom and Spain. This recognises that the rights and obligations set out in the Protocol and the memoranda are enjoyed and performed by the Gibraltar Government in accordance with the terms of our Constitution. This much was specifically confirmed in my meeting with the Prime Minister in Downing Street last week. Therefore, nothing has been imposed upon us and nothing will be 100 done which is not in accordance with our Constitution. All the commitments entered into, whether under the Protocol or the MoUs, concerning Gibraltar have been negotiated by Gibraltar and the United Kingdom together. They are commitments entered into only as a result of the consent of the Cabinet of Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar having been expressly given. The Government is the guardian of the Constitution as much as this legislature or the 105 judiciary may be. We would not have countenanced agreeing to anything which might have resulted in our constitutional order somehow being compromised.

Mr Speaker, assuming all other hurdles to agreement are therefore surmounted, we must now also start to consider in greater detail what our future relationship with the EU should be after withdrawal. In great measure that is also a consideration of what we want our relationship 110 to be with Spain, our neighbour, after our departure from the EU. We have never questioned that geographically we access Europe principally through Spain. Our geographic gateway to Europe is Spain. We have, therefore, more reasons for co-operation and discussion with Spain than we de facto do with any of the other remaining EU nations, so we wish to continue in our discussions about the future, to engage directly with Spain also in the spirit of co-operation and 115 positive engagement we have enjoyed in this withdrawal phase of the negotiations. No one should think that we read any part of the Withdrawal Agreement in any way that would persuade us to avoid that genuine, human and political reality. Nobody needs a veto to bring us to a table.

Too often, Mr Speaker, Gibraltar and its people have been lost behind a fog of international 120 legal theory. At this critical time in Europe's history Gibraltar can be the strongest foundation stone for a future relationship between the UK and the EU, not a rock on the road to agreement. That is our firm commitment and resolve.

Mr Speaker, as far as we are concerned, Brexit is a bad thing for the whole of Europe. (A Member: Hear, hear.) Brexit without an agreement for orderly agreed withdrawal would be an 125 even worse thing for the whole of Europe. And for us Brexit is as bad an idea today in reality as it was in theory at the time of the referendum, but for us it is always best that we stick with Britain, despite Brexit. We have stuck with Britain in the past and we will stick with Britain in the future.

Mr Speaker, I look forward to the publication of the memoranda and to debating their 130 content and effect with colleagues in this House. I will be happy to clarify any parts of my Statement that hon. Members wish me to clarify today. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

135 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, conscious of your warning, we appreciate the indication that we will be permitted an opportunity to respond to the Government's Statement on the current position as regards Brexit and its impact on Gibraltar.

It is important, as Her Majesty's loyal Opposition, to reflect on the momentous week in politics both here and in London. Whilst we are an optimistic and positive community, there is a growing concern amongst many in our community as to what positive measures have been secured for Gibraltar as a result of this process on which the Chief Minister and his team are said to have worked day and night for the last two years. Clearly we all want to achieve the best deal for Gibraltar, and to that extent of course the Government has had our support in these negotiations. We did not wish to leave the EU, so any deal will be worse than remaining in the EU.

145 The Chief Minister, on 15th November, issued a statement confirming that the number-one priority of the Gibraltar Government has been achieved, namely the terms of the Withdrawal Agreement and the transition period will apply to Gibraltar and that, as a consequence, Gibraltar will not crash out of the EU in March 2019 and that things will largely remain as they are until the end of 2020. The Chief Minister also confirmed that the Government of Gibraltar has been fully involved in the negotiations as they affected Gibraltar, whilst also stating that the Withdrawal Agreement, the Gibraltar Protocol and the underlying memoranda will come to an end on 31st December 2020 – of course, with exception to the two that the Chief Minister highlighted in his contribution just now. The Chief Minister has been steadfast in his support for Mrs May's efforts and fast to confirm that the deal is good for the UK and therefore Gibraltar as a member of the UK family.

The Chief Minister has issued several conclusions: (1) that the Withdrawal Agreement, or the deal, subject to the formal agreement and ratification by the EU and the UK, is far better for Gibraltar than crashing out of the EU in four months' time; (2) that the Protocol contains absolutely no concessions on sovereignty, jurisdiction and/or control and there are no issues of bilateralism that can cause any concern; (3) there are no matters which in any way change our fundamental position on key issues; (4) the Chief Minister confirmed on 15th November that he would expect to make a ministerial Statement explaining the Protocol and the memoranda this week – he has now confirmed that during the course of next week those memoranda will be explained in detail to the people in a statement to the nation. In summing up, the Chief Minister confirmed that he was satisfied – and he again repeated that word today – that the aspect of the proposed Withdrawal Agreement which relates to Gibraltar works for Gibraltar.

160 Mr Speaker, Her Majesty's Opposition provided its initial reaction on the same day and we stated that it was too early to do a complete evaluation of the impact of the deal on Gibraltar. It is clear that the Protocol refers to at least four UK-Spain memoranda. These have not been published and we have not been allowed advance copies of these documents so as to be able to study their content and implications. We understand that there are other documents that the Chief Minister and his team are working on; therefore, we will need to carefully analyse and evaluate their impact, once they are published in full, to assess whether this is the best deal for Gibraltar in all the circumstances or whether they contain features which are adverse to our interests. We acknowledge that we have had briefings from time to time ahead of all public statements by the Chief Minister, and when the remaining documents are available we will refer the matter to the party's Brexit policy group to review. Thereafter, we will make a statement on our view of whether this is good or a bad deal for Gibraltar.

175 Mr Speaker, the latest demands by the Spanish Foreign Minister and Spanish Prime Minister in recent days calling for our exclusion from negotiations as to the UK's future relationship with the EU, or the Withdrawal Agreement, until our future relationship has been negotiated bilaterally between the UK and Spain is clearly unacceptable. At best it reflects Spanish party politics, political electioneering and playing to Spain's domestic audience; or, at worst, it represents more than just an 11th-hour spanner in the works. We will all hold our collective breath to see how the next few weeks pan out.

190 There has also been speculation in Spain whether the government there will table a proposal for joint sovereignty in the context of our exit from the EU and the future relationship. Certainly from these benches opposite this is entirely unacceptable to the Opposition and the people of Gibraltar.

195 Mr Speaker, the position of the Spanish government raises further concerns as to the Spanish government's commitment to adhere to any agreement over Gibraltar. For now, we will reserve our assessment until such time as the position becomes clearer but continue to express our misgivings. I am sure that we share the dismay of the whole House that Spain should be seeking to exclude Gibraltar from negotiations on the future relationship with the EU until it gains a political advantage. The Government will need to remain vigilant that nothing is changed in the current text of the Withdrawal Agreement to further undermine Gibraltar's position.

200 Mr Speaker, we fully appreciate that the Withdrawal Agreement is temporary in nature in large measure, but we have expressed our initial misgivings about whether the Withdrawal Agreement, the Gibraltar Protocol or the full memoranda and the tax agreement meet our objectives to lay the ground to secure actual benefits for the people of Gibraltar and our businesses beyond a very short 21-month period.

205 We have also questioned whether Gibraltar has lost time over the last two years towards the opportunity of recalibrating our relationship with the EU on a more permanent basis or whether this set of arrangements represents an intrusion into our affairs by Spain. We await the publication of the documents so that we can make a full evaluation. We think the sooner the Government publishes these documents the better, so that the public can make up their own minds on such issues. We will not rush to judgement on such questions.

210 On another note, there remains a significant concern in our community in relation to our readiness and preparedness for a no-deal Brexit. We have been told that there are detailed contingency plans for all levels of Brexit, and we would appreciate clarity as to what levels of Brexit the Government are referring to.

215 Mr Speaker, we have understood that these are challenging times, which on the Chief Minister's own assessment are difficult and dangerous. There have been times in our history where we have faced challenges together and we have offered to assist the Government on Brexit in a spirit of unity. The Government has chosen to shoulder the whole burden of this challenge and simply provide the Opposition with briefings from time to time. That is their right and of course that has meant that we have not had any effective ability to participate or influence the shape of these arrangements that we will now have to fully and properly scrutinise once the documents are published. The Government has had significant leeway from us and political space to negotiate and conclude these arrangements, which we have given in the best spirit and in the public interest.

220 Mr Speaker, there is much political speculation as to whether the Brexit deal, if concluded by the European Council on Sunday, will make it through the British Parliament in December and the consequences if that were not to happen. We must be ready for any eventuality in this constantly evolving process. Indeed, there are growing voices in the UK for a people's vote or second referendum if the Brexit deal does not make it through the Parliament. As things stand, this may look unlikely, but for our part we have made it clear that if in the UK political dynamic momentum grows so that there is a vote on either supporting this Brexit deal or remaining in the EU, we would support such a vote.

230 I much suspect that there will be a month ahead of constantly shifting sands in this Brexit debate. We do not set out our stall on this possibility and agree we should be concentrating on the emerging Brexit deal and whether this is ultimately good for the people of Gibraltar.
(Banging on desks)

235 Mr Speaker: Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for his statement in respect of what I have said to the House today, and I discern a number of points which I think he 240 was asking for my clarification on, so I shall endeavour to provide it as succinctly as I can.

Mr Speaker, yes, there are four memoranda which we have not yet published, but I think it is important that hon. Members reflect to the whole community that they have seen the memoranda at every stage of their development. They have not been able to take copies away and I recognise that a full analysis requires one to be able to review the documentation, but 245 members of the Brexit Select Committee have been able to see the documentation and I have today, during the course of the briefing we have had, informed them that as soon as we have what is known in this business into which we have been thrown as a text stabilisation – in other words, when we have the final texts; and we are not at final text yet, it is still going through legal scrub, as I told the House – we will endeavour to provide it to hon. Members immediately, even 250 though that may not be the date of publication, so that they can start doing their assessment. I would have thought that they have understood now that these are at the moment unpublishable texts because they are not yet stable texts.

The hon. Gentleman then took us to the issue of the topical Article 3/Article 184 read across in the Withdrawal Agreement and the issue of how Spain, in his interpretation, was throwing an 255 11th-hour spanner in the works, and I think it is a reference to a statement that we ourselves issued earlier in the week when the issue first arose. I think the important thing that we need to make clear ... I think the message that the Government is sending, the message that the whole Parliament is sending and that we have been sending as a community for many generations, is that Spain does not need a veto to get us to a table. In other words, the fourth largest economy 260 in Europe does not need a whip to get the smallest economy in Europe to sit round a table with it and have a meaningful discussion about co-operation. We genuinely, I think from all sides of the community, believe that as long as we are not talking about issues relating to sovereignty, jurisdiction or control – as long as those things are respected – we yearn for a normal neighbourly relationship and that those things that would deliver genuine growth and prosperity 265 across the board, not just for Gibraltar but for the whole region, are the things that Gibraltar believes we should be doing to mutual benefit. And so there is no need for us to be under the cosh of whatever may emerge in the next 48 or 72 hours, or under the cosh of a clause 24 style reference in negotiating guidelines, to be forced to do that which we wish to do. I think that is what I discerned from what the hon. Gentleman said was an element of common ground 270 between us.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman then went on to this issue of whether we had lost an opportunity to recalibrate our future relationship with the European Union. I do not think today is the day for me to tell him that he got things wrong in his understanding of the architecture and structure of the Brexit negotiations. I just refer him to that part of my Statement where I 275 made clear that – at the insistence of the European Union in June of 2017, I think, now two summers back – the EU made very clear that its interpretation of the Article 50 process was that there would be first only a discussion about withdrawal, and only once withdrawal had occurred a discussion about the future. And so the hon. Gentleman is saying that we have not been able to achieve that which the United Kingdom has not been able to achieve because it is set out in 280 the interpretation of the Commission and of the Council in Article 50 of the Treaty as it is. In other words, ‘You cannot do the recalibration at this stage, because we will not allow it.’

I agree with him that I think that was a massive mistake on the part of the European Union because it compartmentalised the process of negotiation in a way that was neither good for the United Kingdom and therefore Gibraltar, or indeed for the European Union, but that is the 285 political reality with which the negotiators were faced. And if I may say so, they are sometimes subject to I think quite brutal criticism in some sections of the British press and in some parts of the British Parliament, but the negotiators – not the politicians, the officials who have engaged across the floor from each other, who come with parameters given to them, which are in some instances unnegotiable parameters – have done exceedingly well to be able to produce at least a 290 document; whether you like it more or you like it less, they produced a document. But that document does not recalibrate the relationship for the future between the United Kingdom and the European Union because that is what the European Union has said it is not prepared to do.

There is now a political declaration that has been published, I think an hour ago. That political declaration sets out the parameters for the discussion in the future that might lead to that recalibration, and it does not mention Gibraltar because it is not mentioning the territorial scope of the discussion that is to be had. The territorial scope is set out in Article 3 as interplayed with Article 184, which is not in my view an axe across the territorial scope but an important reference to who is and is not covered potentially by those discussions, something which the Prime Minister, in relation to Gibraltar, has made repeatedly clear is inclusive of Gibraltar. But in respect of the recalibration, I think the hon. Gentleman needs to read again what I said.

300 In terms of preparedness for no deal, Mr Speaker, we are ready for any potential eventuality. It may sound arrogant for a government to say that, especially the government of a small community, because all of Europe is looking at what happens in the event of no deal; it is not just the United Kingdom that is looking at planning for all eventualities. But of course there is only one part of Europe, apart from West Berlin, that has had to deal with a blockade in living memory, and so I do not believe that a hard Brexit, or a no-deal Brexit, leads to a blockade, but a lot of the things that we might have wanted to consider doing in such circumstances we already do for ourselves as a matter of course. So if, for example, we were about to fall off the European grid for electricity, we never formed part of the European grid of electricity. If we were to fall off the European mechanisms for the purchase and sale of water, we produce our own water. But insofar as matters which are to be dealt with have had to come into consideration, all of them have come under consideration and all of them are eventualities that we are ready for.

Our aim is therefore to ensure that people and businesses can continue to go about their ordinary lives on 30th March in the same way as if a hard Brexit – which we all hope does not happen – had not happened, and we are ready for that eventuality. I have said, I think in the evidence I gave to the Select Committee of the House of Lords, that the planning had been done and the implementation would start after 1st January next year if we were then in a situation where there was not yet a deal. Having lived through European brinkmanship in the past six months, I will not know that there is not a deal until 11.59 on 28th March, I think, but certainly by 1st January we need to start the implementation process in respect of the planning that we would have done.

Then the hon. Gentleman said that this was a difficult and dangerous time and that we had not involved them in decision making. Well, I think to be fair to us, in the process of giving the briefings that we have given we have always asked them whether they think that we should be doing something more; and if I may say so, with the very greatest of respect to hon. Members opposite, I think Mr Feetham on occasion has made a number of suggestions and indeed the hon. Lady, and he and others I think have said more than once that the Government has done everything possible and left no stone unturned. I appreciate that hyperbole sometimes infects those who are announcing something which they believe is successful and that success has many fathers whilst failure is of course an orphan, but if you have said that somebody has done everything humanly possible and left no stone unturned, I wonder what it is that they were going to tell us to do that they have not already said that we have done. But we are open to ideas, of course, as we tell them at the end of every meeting of the Brexit Select Committee.

I want to thank members of the Brexit Select Committee, all of them across the floor of the House, for the work that they have done with us and the understanding that they have brought to the discussions and the useful contributions that they have made in the process of those meetings – and, if I may say so, also in some instances outside the course of those meetings in some of the things that they have said not about the Government but about how matters should be dealt with. But we do not have a government of national unity and we did not think there was a need for a government of national unity, and I think the fact that the nation continues to prosper and our economy continues to grow demonstrates that we were not in a situation where we should have gone for a government of national unity.

Historians – therefore likely the Deputy Chief Minister – will write for themselves in future and determine when the moment of greatest difficulty and danger arose for this community, whether it was after the referendum on 24th June 2016 or whether it was during the course of the joint sovereignty campaign pursued by both the government of the United Kingdom and the government of Spain in 2002 and 2003. If historians conclude that the moment of greatest difficulty and danger was in 2002 and 2003 and not in 2016, then they will ergo also conclude that we did the right thing by not having a government of national unity now that there was not as much danger and difficulty as in 2002 and 2003 because they did not have a government of national unity in 2002 and 2003 or indeed a joint sovereignty select committee where they might have asked us what we thought. They only heard what we thought in the context of the debates in this House.

I do nonetheless think it is a little harsh of him to say there is no ability to influence, because I think they have influenced and Mr Feetham in particular has put some ideas, as I said in the context of my earlier discussion.

Mr Speaker, finally, I think the hon. Gentleman dealt in his final contribution with the issue of the potential second referendum. I have been on record, I think since July 2016, saying that the terminology of ‘second referendum’ was, in my view, wrong. I was harshly criticised, I think, by Members opposite at the time when I told the Financial Times and other international media that I did not think that there should be a second referendum because you do not go back and ask the same question again, and that is what you would describe as ‘second’. If anything, there might be a democratically legitimate opportunity, once a deal had been done about what the future meant, to put that to the people as opposed to the reality of membership of the European Union. That would not be a second referendum, it would be a first referendum, a new referendum on a new issue: now that you know what your options really are, do you wish to (a) stay as you are, or (b) go to this new status? I do not know whether it is possible to put a third question on the ballot paper, or a third option on the ballot paper; that might be democratically not so valid and the Electoral Commission might have something to say about that.

My view was very clear in July 2016 – I have not changed my view – but the political reality that this community has to deal with is that that is not an option at the moment. If it were to become an option – and I think Mr Feetham has said something about that very explicitly in that respect, with which I do not disagree – if that were to become an option, then the position of the Government of Gibraltar, and I think the position of this Parliament as a whole, would be that having participated in the 2016 referendum the people of Gibraltar should of course also be included in the franchise for such future consultations, ‘people’s vote’ as it is now called in the vernacular.

Mr Speaker, I think I have dealt with all the matters that the hon. Gentleman has raised. I think I have dealt with that already in the context of 2002-03.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I rise to seek clarification on a point, but firstly I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Gibraltar and the UK governments for their hard work and solid defence of our people by protecting our sovereignty and constitutional position in the draft Withdrawal Agreement, as well as the rest of the work they have done and continue doing at this key juncture of Brexit negotiations, which are of course so crucial and vital for the people of Gibraltar. I am pleased to note the optimism of the Chief Minister and that we are at a stage where the memoranda of understanding between us and Spain are reaching the final stages with what looks like a reasonable set of agreements for the future. Of course, we have to remain aware of the reality that we still have to wait to see how the Withdrawal Agreement will be voted on in Parliament, because without the Withdrawal Agreement passing through Westminster all of these agreements could well come to nothing and I therefore sincerely hope this will not be the case.

395 I would like to seek clarification from the Hon. the Chief Minister regarding Spain's position on discussing the matter of joint sovereignty. Spain has openly talked about the tabling of this issue for future talks or negotiations, so I would like to ask how the Chief Minister will manage this aim of the Spanish government and whether it would stand any chance of impeding a workable deal which benefits both sides of the border. Would that be our own backstop, 400 Mr Speaker?

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I want to thank the hon. Lady for her contribution today 405 and indeed all her contributions when we have debated this issue and I have updated the House in the time that I have been trying to ensure that the community gets as much of the information on Brexit that we are able to share.

I am sorry, I just quickly needed to read that message coming in.

If I may, Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Lady is raising a point that the hon. Gentleman raised in 410 the course of his statement and that I did not deal with, and I do not know whether that is what the hon. Gentleman was pointing out to me. It is absolutely true that the hon. Lady will have detected I think two or three occasions when some who have current responsibility have said that they will be considering tabling the potential for joint sovereignty in the context of the negotiation of what future arrangements should apply between Gibraltar and the European 415 Union. I have heard it a lot, actually, in the last three months, but I have heard it more from those who do not have a responsibility than from those who do have a responsibility. I think this is an important point, because the hon. Lady will know in her work with us in respect of the Brexit Select Committee that the really seminal moment comes when the former-former Spanish Foreign Minister, Sr Margallo, is moved on by his party and Alfonso Dastis, until then a career 420 diplomat – in fact, the permanent representative in Brussels of Spain – became the Foreign Secretary of Spain. Sr Dastis moved matters on quite considerably and quite quickly and he was the one who set out the new Spanish position, after Sr Margallo, that the issue of sovereignty would not form part of Spain's claims in the context of the Withdrawal Agreement. So when they were in a position of responsibility, the Partido Popular through Alfonso Dastis were not 425 pursuing joint sovereignty. I think it is true to say that there are nuances in what they said which limited that position to the stage of withdrawal, not also to the future negotiation.

Mr Speaker, I thought the best and clearest position on this was actually put by Spanish State Secretary Marco Aguiriano, who I had the pleasure to meet earlier this week, in an interview 430 that he gave last week when he was pressed as to why they had not put joint sovereignty to the Gibraltarians in the context of this discussion. He said, 'Well, if we do, we can, but they will get up and go.' And yesterday in a radio interview he said that he had been in meetings with the top tier of Gibraltarian representation in the Brexit negotiations and when asked whether he had put the issue of joint sovereignty he said, 'They would just literally have shut their bags and gone.' Mr Speaker, that is the political reality and the sooner that everybody in Spain 435 understands that the people of Gibraltar are no closer to accepting the principle of dilution of our sovereignty today than we were in 2002-03 – the moment of potential greatest difficulty and danger that we may have faced until June 2016, or 1967 when it was last put to us – the sooner we can move on to a mature and genuine political relationship between neighbours.

Absolutely it should be clear beyond peradventure to whoever is misguided enough to want 440 to countenance it that the people of Gibraltar will never pay a sovereignty price, (Two Members: Hear, hear.) in particular for something as esoteric as access to a single market.

I do not know that people have not misinterpreted in some ways what our 96% support for remaining in the European Union means. The people of Gibraltar voted 96% to remain in the European Union because we thought that was the best way to defend ourselves against the 445 Spanish sovereignty claim, not that we are so pro-European – although we may believe in the European project and its ideology – that we are prepared to pay even a sovereignty price to stay in the European Union. That would be the upside down interpretation of our 96% vote.

And so, Mr Speaker, it heartens me to hear serving politicians of the Spanish government recognise that putting the issue of sovereignty and joint sovereignty is not going to lead to anything other than to negotiations not being able to flourish because the Gibraltarians are not going to engage in them, and I think it helps to evidence where people are in the democratic spectrum when there are others who say that it should be imposed on us. Those who seek to impose sovereignties on any others are not playing the democratic game. The conclusions of democratic games can go any way the people want, but the imposition of will can only go one way, as far as I am concerned, and that is right out the door – and I know that I speak for everyone in this Parliament when I say that and when I say that the Government of Gibraltar, whoever might be forming the executive, would never be prepared to countenance any proposal of joint sovereignty that would be put and that, in fact, the sooner we move on from that the sooner we move on to a good, modern relationship based on good neighbourliness.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just one point of clarification. Does the Hon. the Chief Minister agree with us that it is important that the United Kingdom hold a line in respect of Article 3 and the definition of the United Kingdom, which currently includes Gibraltar, and its interplay with Article 184, and that in holding that line it is important that the United Kingdom government does not agree to any watering down of language that gives Spain hope that it may be able in the future to extort concessions on sovereignty, jurisdiction and control as a price for reaching a permanent deal in respect of Gibraltar and its permanent relationship with the United Kingdom; and, indeed, that it is only by the United Kingdom being firm with Spain that Spain will understand that, actually, if it really was to agree something that is of mutual benefit to Gibraltar and the neighbouring region – which can be a very positive, very beneficial agreement – the only way to do so is in fact to park issues of sovereignty, jurisdiction and control and that today would be a bad time indeed to be agreeing to any watering down of language in the current Withdrawal Agreement? (Banging on desk)

Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I think that is a useful point to clarify the Government's understanding of what the state of the texts is, and I think the understanding of governments around Europe is that the Withdrawal Agreement text is closed. In other words, the Article 3 text and the Article 184 text form part of the Withdrawal Agreement, which includes the Protocol, and is closed text, and the political declaration and the future framework are also closed text and therefore there will be no change to the text of Article 3 and the text of Article 184.

There may be interpretive notes, there may be declarations. Treaties, once agreed, are immediately the subject of buyer's remorse by one side or the other and immediately declarations are made about interpretations etc. I would imagine that the airwaves are full of discussions about those things at the moment, but as long as the texts are sound, everything else in international law does not have the standard of enforceability that legal text might have.

485

But be that as it may, the provisions of Article 184 are provisions about an agreement to agree, and that is something that the Government of Gibraltar believes should be honoured in good faith and that the best demonstration of good faith that we have seen has been the repeated position of the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, who has set out that she is negotiating, from the word go, for the whole of the British family, including Gibraltar. There were some who doubted whether she would see that through into the Withdrawal Agreement and Gibraltar's inclusion in the Withdrawal Agreement. Well, Mr Speaker, Gibraltar is now included in the Withdrawal Agreement and in the transitional period, so those who doubted the 500 Prime Minister have at least got that piece of evidence to reassure them that she has stood her ground right the way through to the closing of the text and we are in the Agreement and in the transitional period. As long as there is an Agreement and there is a transitional period, we are in there with Britain.

505 The position that the Prime Minister has set out in relation to the application of Article 184 and the view of the United Kingdom is that she is negotiating those future arrangements in respect of the whole of the UK family including Gibraltar, for the benefit of the UK family including Gibraltar, and I think that is a clear and robust statement of position which she is now entitled to ask us to be less cynical and less sceptical about. I think everybody in this House is rightly cynical and sceptical about the assurances given to Gibraltar by UK politicians. Theresa May I think is one of the few who is entitled to say, 'I have demonstrated to you that I gave you an assurance and I have seen it through.' And she has, because in this phase 1 and phase 2 period in which we have been engaged we have had delivered to us the two things that we were 510 assured of: access to the UK market, phase 1; access to the Withdrawal Agreement and the transitional period, such as it may be if there is such an agreement by Sunday.

515 And so the hon. Gentleman is absolutely right that the best way to create confidence in Gibraltar is for the United Kingdom to be robust in the assurances it gives to Gibraltar and to stand by those assurances. What happens when Gibraltar is confident that the UK has our back is that we are confident in being able to engage in a safe dialogue with our neighbour and that helps us to get over the very difficult history that we have had with our neighbour and to demonstrate our still, in relation to our neighbour, sceptical and cynical approach to their approach to negotiations, but to at least demonstrate our willingness to engage and our good faith in trying to reach arrangements which are for the common benefit of all, always with what we might call in our bilingualism 'the fly behind our ear' that they will then actually perform on the obligations, always now knowing – and I think the hon. Gentleman will agree with me post 520 the expensive Cordoba experience, £84 million on an Airport and Spanish pensioners still being paid, something which I have never wished to see stopped – that we must calibrate our performance in a way that plays off continued Spanish performance. So we should not give open-ended commitments to perform obligations which are not linked to Spain performing obligations.

530 All of that, Mr Speaker, with a robust British Prime Minister behind you – who has demonstrated that she does what she says and that she does not wobble at the knees, as some others might have done, and at the last minute give way – is what builds confidence and enables us to go forward. That is what she has done on phase 1 – market access to the United Kingdom – and that is what she has done on phase 2, which is the Withdrawal Agreement and the transitional provision. A lot of people thought that we would not be in the position that we are in today vis-à-vis the support of the United Kingdom. We are there and I think the hon. Gentleman has recognised that in the way that he posed his question, for which I am grateful.

535 Mr Speaker, of course the best next step in that analysis is for Spain to continue to park matters of sovereignty, jurisdiction and control in order to be able to advance in areas which are not infected either by our very clear – and I am always impressed by Arlene Foster's way of expressing this, Mr Speaker – 'blood red lines' on those issues and indeed on the ingredients of sovereignty, jurisdiction and control, which are as important as sovereignty, jurisdiction and control simpliciter, and to be able to engage with us in a way that enables us to reach the 540 agreements and the arrangements for ordinary people who benefit from cross-Frontier movement, whether it is for trade or for personal reasons, to be able to benefit from that.

545 If there is one thing that I think it is helpful to have had in particular highlighted in the context of withdrawal – withdrawal; not the future, just withdrawal – it is the recognition of the benefit and value to the whole region of freedom of movement in the period of common membership of the European Union. Hon. Members will know from their reading of the Gibraltar Protocol to the Withdrawal Agreement that that is specifically recognised in the UK-EU document, and I think that augurs well for an understanding of the importance of free

550 movement going forward as we negotiate the future arrangements between the United Kingdom and the European Union and what will be of particular benefit in this part of the world.

I do not know whether I have dealt with everything that the hon. Gentleman wanted me to deal with. I will give way if he wants me to. I am grateful.

555 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I would just like to ask the Chief Minister about a very narrow point in relation to the tax treaty, which we discussed briefly last time the House sat, and I note that this time he has, in fact, used the words 'as the sort of things you would see in a double tax treaty'. What I would like to ask the Chief Minister are two things. Is this treaty capable of surviving or being put into effect into its own right outside the Withdrawal Agreement? Really what I am trying to say is: is it dependent entirely on the Withdrawal Agreement, or can it exist in its own right? And secondly, given that it would survive the two-year transition period, how long would this tax treaty be for? Does it not have an envisaged end date?

565 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have not said that we are entering into a double taxation agreement with Spain, having said that we were not going to. What I said was that there are tax residency rules which we are dealing with in that agreement of the type found in double taxation and information exchange agreements. Mr Speaker, the word precision is important in a Parliament where we are discussing our words, so I think it is important the hon. Gentleman have a look at the text of my Statement when it is published and he addresses what I have said, rather than what he wishes he had heard.

570 Mr Speaker, the tax agreement is not limited to drop dead on 31st December 2020 – I think I made it very clear that it was the former memoranda that fall dead on that date – because a tax agreement is not something you can put in place in such a short period. You need time to ensure that people are aware of the rules and to be able to make assessments which bring people and their information within the provisions of the agreement. Neither do we wish for there to be a definite period for determination of the obligations under the agreement. We want this to endure, Mr Speaker.

580 One of the issues that Spain has repeatedly used in the international media against Gibraltar is the issue of taxation, and therefore reaching an arrangement in respect of taxation with Spain is something that we want to see endure so that that weapon is not available in the past. We genuinely want to have an open and transparent relationship with Spain, as we do with many other nations, none of the others of which are our neighbours, in respect of taxation so far as it goes to residency rules etc. So that is one of the agreements that will not end at the end of December, and in fact I think I said so explicitly and I think the Leader of the Opposition recognised explicitly that I said that the citizens' rights memorandum and the tax agreement were the ones that did not end at 31st December.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to raise any question?

Standing Order 7(1) suspended to proceed with Government Bills

590 Clerk: Suspension of Standing Orders, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move, under Standing Order 7(3), to suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with Government Bills.

595 Mr Speaker: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: Bills – First and Second Reading.

A Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act 2011 so as to make certain Acts of voyeurism an offence.

The Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act 2011 so as to make certain Acts of voyeurism an offence be read a first time.

605

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act 2011 so as to make certain Acts of voyeurism an offence be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Crimes (Amendment) Act 2018.

Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
Second Reading approved

610

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

615

This Bill makes certain acts of voyeurism, commonly referred to as ‘upskirting’, an offence in Gibraltar. This highly intrusive practice typically involves offenders taking a picture under a person’s clothing without them knowing. This unacceptable practice has seen significant media attention in recent months, especially in the UK, where a campaign was led by victim Gina Martin. Gina was at a music festival in London when two men took indecent photographs of her by angling the phone cameras under her skirt when she was distracted. These images were then shared by the men on WhatsApp.

620

Reports suggest that in the UK there have been 78 cases of upskirting recorded by police since 2005, although they have been prosecuted under other existing offences such as the offence of outraging public decency. Gina campaigned for upskirting to be specifically made an offence and a Private Member’s Bill was submitted to Parliament. It did not pass its Second Reading, due to an objection by Sir Christopher Chope MP, who as a matter of principle objects to all Private Bills. However, after much outrage – understandable, in my mind – the UK Prime Minister, the Rt Hon. Theresa May MP, quickly intervened and adopted the measure as a Government Bill. The UK Bill is still working its way through the Houses of Parliament.

625

There is no harm, Mr Speaker, and I think everything to be gained, to criminalise specifically this vile behaviour.

I now turn to the clauses of the Bill.

Clause 3(1)(2) introduces the offences, under a new section 293A entitled ‘Voyeurism: additional offences’.

Subclause (1) makes it an offence for a person to operate equipment underneath a person’s clothes without their consent for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification or to cause humiliation, distress or alarm to that person.

635 Subsection (2) sets out a similar offence for recording an image beneath another person's clothing for the same purposes.

Subsection (4) stipulates that these offences will carry a penalty, on summary conviction, of imprisonment for 12 months, or the statutory maximum fine, or both. A conviction indictment will carry two years' imprisonment.

640 Clause 3(4) amends Schedule 3 of the Act by adding the new section 293A to the list of offences. Part 13 of the Act, which deals with notification requirements and orders in relation to sex offenders, applies to all those offences listed in Part 13, which will now of course include the new section 293A.

Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak to the general principles and merits of this Bill? The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Just simply to inform the Clerk that it is our indication to support the Bill.

650

Mr Speaker: Very well.

I now put the question – No? Ah, yes, my apologies. The Hon. Samantha Sacramento.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, attempting to take a photograph underneath a skirt, also known as image-based sexual abuse, is a gross violation of privacy and potentially an act of indecency; and whichever way, this is a form of sexual harassment.

655 This offence will mainly affect women, for obvious reasons, and therefore this law serves to protect women from these circumstances. As Minister for Equality, I am pleased to recommend this specific law, which is fit for purpose to combat this phenomenon. The introduction of this new law is good news and is yet another achievement from the equality lens.

660 Mr Speaker, any form of sexual abuse is an infringement against the rights of women, and as most victims of this act will be women it constitutes discrimination against women on the grounds of her sex. This new offence serves to enhance the recognition of women's rights to privacy, dignity and sexual expression.

665 We must do everything possible to protect women and girls from sexual offences and ensure that those committing such offences are punished. Therefore, Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Is there any other contribution to the Second Reading of the Bill?

670 I will now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act 2011 so as to make certain acts of voyeurism an offence, be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Crimes (Amendment) Act 2018.

Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

675 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of this Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

680 Clerk: Committee Stage and Third Reading. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should resolve itself into Committee to consider the following Bill clause by clause: the Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2018.

In Committee of the whole House

Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
Clauses considered and approved

685 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act 2011 so as to make certain acts of voyeurism an offence.
Clauses 1 to 3.

Mr Speaker: Stand part of the Bill.

690

Clerk: The long title.

Mr Speaker: Stands part of the Bill.

Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
Third Reading approved: Bill passed

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

695

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2018 has been considered in Committee and has been approved of without amendments. I move that it should now be read a third time and passed.

700 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act 2011 so as to make certain acts of voyeurism an offence, be read a third time and passed. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Brexit documentation

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should now adjourn to Thursday, 6th December at three o'clock in the afternoon.

705

Given what we anticipate will be the timetable of progress at a European level, it is anticipated – nothing is clear, it is anticipated – that we may be able to see the whole suite of documentation that I have referred to the House should be published either late in the weekend or early during the course of next week, and I should then have an opportunity of letting hon. Members have it probably long before that. If I can, by close of business on Friday I hope to be 710 able to let them have that document and that then there should be a period for the whole community to be able to see the documentation.

I expect then, as I have said, to make a ministerial Statement and then to come to this House to be able to have the debate in this House, so that hon. Members are able to put to the community their views in respect of those documents and what I have said about them in the 715 context of the ministerial Statement.

So I move that the House should now adjourn to Thursday, 6th December at 3 p.m.

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn to Thursday, 6th December at three in the afternoon.

The House adjourned at 4.07 p.m.

BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Mutual Legal Assistance (Council of Europe) Bill 2018 – First Reading approved

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Friday, 14th December 2018.

Order of Proceedings: (ix) Bills – First and Second Reading.

5 A Bill for an Act to give effect in Gibraltar to the Council of Europe's European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters made in Strasbourg on 20th April 1959.

The Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

10 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to give effect in Gibraltar to the Council of Europe's European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters made in Strasbourg on 20th April 1959 be read a first time.

15 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to give effect in Gibraltar to the Council of Europe's European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters made in Strasbourg on 20th April 1959 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Mutual Legal Assistance (Council of Europe) Act 2018.

Mutual Legal Assistance (Council of Europe) Bill 2018 – Second Reading approved

20 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

It is a pleasure to have the opportunity to present to Parliament what I am sure the House would agree is an important piece of legislation.

25 The Bill is framed to enable Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar to request the extension of the Council of Europe's Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters made in Strasbourg on 20th April 1959 to Gibraltar, as it presently does not apply. To extend the application of the Convention to Gibraltar would allow us to continue to assist in the fight against international crime through the gathering and exchange of information which will assist in the enforcement of the criminal laws of the participating parties. It will also allow for the request of evidence for use in criminal investigations and prosecutions. Common rules in 30 criminal legal assistance such as these achieve the aim of fighting crime.

As hon. Members are aware, this Bill has been certified as urgent as it stems from the Government's Brexit contingency planning. The Convention on Mutual Assistance has been identified by the United Kingdom as necessary to mitigate the effects of a potential no-deal Brexit. Hon. Members will know that Gibraltar currently provides assistance to and seeks 35 assistance from member states under the European Investigations Order Regulations 2017, which on their entry into force disapplied the Mutual Legal Assistance (European Union) Act 2005 to member states other than Denmark and Ireland. A hard Brexit will result in the EIO no longer having any force because it is a mutual recognition instrument and there will be an urgent and serious need to address this legislative lacuna. Further, the Government Law Office 40 has been working with the United Kingdom's Home Office officials, who have urged Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar to enact this legislation before the end of the year if the United Kingdom's ratification of the Convention is to be extended to Gibraltar by exit day.

It is relevant to note, hon. Members, that the Mutual Legal Assistance (International)
Act 2005 is the mechanism by which legal assistance in criminal matters may be provided 45 between Gibraltar and other reciprocating jurisdictions. Some of the obligations under the Convention are already implemented domestically in the Mutual Legal Assistance (International) Act 2005 and require no further implementation in this Bill. This Bill, which enables the Government to implement the obligations under the Convention, establishes common rules in the field of criminal matters between all the states parties to the Convention. Clause 16 of the 50 Bill clearly sets out that nothing in this Bill will offend the provision of assistance under the Mutual Legal Assistance (International) Act 2005 or any other enactment in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, the Bill consists of six Parts, made up of 17 clauses.

Clause 5 of the Bill provides for the Mutual Legal Assistance (International) Act 2005 to apply insofar as relevant defences and corresponding requests for legal assistance are concerned.

55 Clause 6 sets out the circumstances when assistance may be refused. These are additional to the criteria already contained in section 3(2) of the Mutual Legal Assistance (International) Act 2005.

Clause 7 allows for the execution of letters rogatory in Gibraltar. This provision sets out the powers and obligations of the judicial authority in Gibraltar should such a request be acceded to.

60 Part 4 sets out the circumstances and conditions where persons in custody may be temporarily transferred to a requesting state to provide assistance in the event they are required to appear as a witness.

Clause 10 deals with the circumstances where section 20 of the Mutual Legal Assistance (International) Act 2005 applies. Section 20 sets out the provisions in relation to the immunity of 65 witnesses when making an appearance before the judicial authorities of a requesting state.
Clause 10 sets out the circumstances when the judicial authority in Gibraltar should grant immunity under the Act.

Lastly, Mr Speaker, Part 6 contains general provisions. Clause 17 is an important provision within this Part as treaties between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom do not apply inter se. This 70 clause therefore allows Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar to extend the Act to the United Kingdom in the event of a request for assistance from or to the UK.

Mr Speaker, before commending the Bill to the House I would like to take this opportunity to place on the record my sincere thanks to the Members opposite for their agreement to the urgent certification and for voting, or at least for their intention to vote in favour of this Bill. I

75 think it is important that the world understands that our Parliament stands united in its solidarity to fight crime.

Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

80 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

85 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, very briefly. The Hon. the Minister for Justice reached out to us three weeks ago. He spoke to me and he also met with the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition in relation to this. We have no hesitation in supporting this Bill and the next Bill that we are going to be debating. Extradition and indeed mutual legal assistance are one of the fundamental pillars of the system of international justice and co-operation. Both Bills are introduced on an urgent basis because – and I hope that it does not happen and I believe that it will not happen – if the United Kingdom effectively falls off a cliff on 29th March and we have a hard Brexit situation, there is a need for these pieces of legislation in order to ensure that we can cooperate internationally in the field of extradition and in the field of mutual legal assistance, and therefore it is of fundamental importance for us as a Parliament to stand united, supporting these measures and sending a very clear message that Gibraltar is ready to co-operate with the international community despite Brexit and anything else that might come our way. (Banging on desk)

95 Mr Speaker: I now put the question –

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker?

100 Mr Speaker: Yes, sorry, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

105 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, just a short note, because I think it is important that this is reflected in Hansard. Section 35(3) of the Constitution, under which I have certified these Bills as urgent, does not require agreement between the Government and the Opposition as to the urgency and the cutting, therefore, of the period. We have traditionally sought that the power should not be exercised other than in instances where the Opposition is in agreement, but of course the Constitution does not require that agreement and there might be circumstances where the executive is required to signify that the power under section 35(3) is to be used absent that agreement.

110 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to give effect in Gibraltar to the Council of Europe's European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters made in Strasbourg on 20th April 1959 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

115 Clerk: The Mutual Legal Assistance (Council of Europe) Act 2018.

Mutual Legal Assistance (Council of Europe) Bill 2018 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

120 Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Extradition Bill 2018 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to provide for the extradition of persons pursuant to any Conventions, Treaties, bilateral or multilateral agreements that apply to and have been extended to Gibraltar or any extradition arrangement or agreements which have been entered into by the United Kingdom and extended to Gibraltar and for connected purposes.

The Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to provide for the extradition of persons pursuant to any Conventions, Treaties, bilateral or multilateral agreements that apply to and have been extended to Gibraltar or any extradition arrangement or agreements which have been entered into by the United Kingdom and extended to Gibraltar and for connected purposes be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to provide for the extradition of persons pursuant to any Conventions, Treaties, bilateral or multilateral agreements that apply to and have been extended to Gibraltar or any extradition arrangement or agreements which have been entered into by the United Kingdom and extended to Gibraltar and for connected purposes be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Extradition Act 2018.

Extradition Bill 2018 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

Once again, it is a pleasure to have the opportunity to present to Parliament a further important piece of legislation. The Bill is framed to enable Gibraltar to request the extension of the European Convention on Extradition 1957 and its four Protocols. The Convention and the four Protocols do not yet extend to Gibraltar.

The Bill would enable the Central Authority in Gibraltar to receive and issue extradition requests from and to other states and territories under international conventions, treaties and bilateral or multilateral agreements that have been extended to Gibraltar. Further, it will include any future arrangements or agreements that Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar would enter into.

Hon. Members will know that transnational crime is already caught under the Fugitive Offenders Act 2002 and the Transnational Organised Crime Act 2006. This Bill will instead cover crime that is not transnational in nature but caught by the criminal laws of a nation state or territory.

This Bill is based on the UK's Extradition Act 2003. Gibraltar is now in a position to offer a similar legislative framework by adopting the UK's model for legal assistance in the fight against crime.

160 As hon. Members are aware, this Bill has also been certified as urgent, as it stems from the Government's Brexit contingency planning. The Convention on Extradition and its four Protocols have been identified by the United Kingdom as necessary to mitigate the effects of a potential no-deal Brexit.

165 Further, the Government Law Office has been working with the United Kingdom's Home Office officials, who have urged Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar to enact this legislation before the end of the year if the United Kingdom's ratification of the Convention is to be extended to Gibraltar by exit day.

170 Gibraltar currently is able to execute European Arrest Warrants and also issue the same under the European Arrest Warrant Act 2004, which gave effect to the Council Framework Decision on the European Arrest Warrant. However, if there is a hard Brexit this will not be possible, as Gibraltar, along with the UK, will no longer be a member state and an alternative way of providing assistance needed to be found. This Bill will pave the way for the Convention on Extradition to be extended to Gibraltar, which in turn will allow us to extradite and seek extradition from those Convention states.

175 The Bill consists of five Parts, 123 clauses and two Schedules.

180 Part 2 contains provisions on the procedures for dealing with extraditions to requesting states pursuant to the treaties, international conventions and agreements that apply to Gibraltar. The clauses therein sets out the Central Authority's duties when a valid request for extradition is received and also set out what constitutes a valid request. The procedure for transmitting an extradition request to the Central Authority, the basis on which a magistrate can issue a warrant for the arrest of a person, the power to remand a person in custody or on bail and the execution of warrants and provisional warrants by police and customs officers are all covered.

185 Part 2 deals with the detail concerning the commencement of extradition hearings, including the relevant timescales. The powers and duties of the magistrate in an extradition hearing, the bars to extradition, sufficiency of evidence to be considered and questions of compatibility with the Gibraltar Constitution Order are also addressed. Similarly, competing extradition claims, consideration of the physical and mental condition of the person and the transmission of the case to the Central Authority for a decision on whether the person is to be extradited are also covered.

190 Further, Part 2 concerns the functions of the Central Authority, such as the provision of information, situations covering the prohibition of extradition, the deferment of an extradition decision and the time limits for ordering extradition or discharge.

195 Part 2 comprehensively addresses appeals, procedural appeals and the powers of the Supreme Court and the Privy Council. Provision is made inter alia for the time periods for extradition when ordered, the procedure when a request for extradition is withdrawn at the different stages of the extradition process and in cases of competing extradition requests.

200 Even further still, Part 2 addresses the basis upon which a person may consent to their extradition, situations when they are to be returned to Gibraltar to serve the remainder of any sentence imposed here, costs arising from discharge after court appeals, and repatriation.

Part 3 contains provisions relating to extradition to Gibraltar. The basis and conditions upon which a person can be dealt with in Gibraltar for an offence committed before their extradition and the remission of punishment for certain offences are also dealt with.

205 Part 4 concerns police arrest powers when there has been a warrant issued under Part 2 and the issue of search and seizure warrants. The powers of a magistrate to make production orders are also covered.

Part 4 sets out the relevant application processes, the procedure, the requirements and the powers of police officers when dealing with matters relating to extradition.

210 Provisions covering treatment after arrest are within Part 4, including the taking of fingerprints and samples, searches and examination and the taking of photographs. The Central Authority may by order also apply certain provisions of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence

Act 2011, such as intimate searches, the right to have someone informed when arrested and the right to legal advice.

215 Clause 101 empowers the Commissioner of Police to issue codes of practice in connection with the exercise of the powers conferred by Part 4, namely: the retention, use and return of anything seized or produced under this Part; access to and the taking of photographs and copies of anything so seized and produced; and the retention, use, disclosure and destruction of fingerprints, a sample or a photograph taken under this Part. The Commissioner of Police has issued draft codes of practice, and following the required process these will be published and 220 laid before the House.

Part 5 is the final Part. It contains miscellaneous provisions such as where there are competing extradition claims, the magistrates' powers in relation to deferred claims, re-extradition, special extradition arrangements, service of documents and the consequential amendments to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, so that certain relevant provisions can 225 apply where there are extradition proceedings under the Act.

Clause 120 empowers the Hon. the Chief Justice to make rules of court which supplement or modify those Criminal Procedure Rules and practice directions of the Chief Justice of England and Wales that apply to Gibraltar. The relevant provisions are currently found in part 50 of the Criminal Procedure Rules.

230 Lastly, Schedule 1 lists the conduct constituting an extradition offence and Schedule 2 deals with notifications where the provisions relating to a person's re-extradition applies.

Mr Speaker, I wish to thank the Hon. Mr Feetham for indicating that the Opposition will vote in favour of this Bill. I also wish to thank the hon. Lady for having indicated the same to me earlier on last week.

235 Once more, Mr Speaker, I think it is important that our Parliament stands united in its commonality of purpose, this time to maintain those elements of our criminal justice system that seek to ensure that those who have to face trial or sentence cannot avoid the consequences of their criminality by fleeing from a jurisdiction.

Mr Speaker, I commend this Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

245 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, we will support this Bill. I am grateful to the Minister for setting out the basis on which he has approached us in relation to consulting with us in relation to the Extradition Bill and I note what the Chief Minister has said in relation to any agreement. It is not for the Government to reach an agreement with the Opposition – clearly not – under the Constitution, but I am grateful for him reaching out to us and discussing this Bill with us.

250 There was one question that was raised, just in the course of the delivery of his contribution, in relation to the definition of 'Central Authority'. I do understand from my learned hon. Friend Mr Feetham that it has always been the Chief Secretary who has been the Central Authority for the purposes of these types of cases, but in reading the Mutual Legal Assistance (Criminal) Act I noted that the Central Authority has been the Minister for Justice in respect of those matters. Can the Minister explain, hopefully in his reply, why it has always been the Chief Secretary who 255 has been in receipt of those requests under this particular Act and the previous Act?

But insofar as what the Minister has said in relation to the criminal justice system and our support for it, I would associate ourselves with those statements and we will fully support this Bill.

260 Mr Speaker: I think the Hon. the Chief Minister will wish to place on record that we are proceeding pursuant to section 35(3) of the Constitution.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Thank you, Mr Speaker.

265 I think the Hon. the Minister for Justice has set out that I have certified, as I have indeed done so, under section 35(3) that the time available for consideration of this Bill before the House needs to proceed upon it is not able to be six weeks for the reasons of urgency that the Minister has already set out.

270 Mr Speaker: Does the hon. mover wish to reply? Yes.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I think that I understood the hon. Gentleman correctly when he asked me a question as to the Mutual Legal Assistance. If I can refer him to clause 4(2), it says the Minister or any such person or persons as he may designate by notice in the Gazette is the judicial authority in Gibraltar for the purposes of this Act, so it allows me the power to be able to nominate the Chief Secretary or any other official whom the Government deems would be appropriate in the circumstances.

Hon. D A Feetham: Just on that, my understanding of these – 280 Mr Speaker: The hon. the mover has given way to the Hon. Daniel Feetham. Carry on.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much. I apologise, Mr Speaker.
My understanding has always been with these notifications and receipt of requests that it has always been channelled through the Office of the Chief Secretary, and in fact if you actually look in other areas of the law where there have been requests that are made, they come to the Chief Secretary and then from the Chief Secretary they go out. I do not know whether that has been a relatively recent phenomenon – in other words, by ‘relatively recent phenomenon’ that it has been the last 13 or 14 years – but certainly when I was there in 2007 it was always the Chief Secretary and I think it is actually much wider than just these types of measures. The Chief Secretary was always the Central Authority for the purposes of receiving and directing requests. I think Mr Peralta may actually know a little bit more about this.

My learned Friend Mr Clinton says –

295 Hon. R M Clinton: Not learned, thank you.

Hon. D A Feetham: My quasi learned Friend Mr Clinton is saying that he is making decisions. The decisions are made by, for example, the Minister, or in other areas of the law it may well be the Attorney General or elsewhere, but it is actually channelled via the Chief Secretary and on advice of – in other words, he is not making independent decisions.

300 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I think just to provide some clarity, the Extradition Act stipulates that the Central Authority is the Chief Secretary. I mentioned in the course of one of my two speeches – it must have been the speech on the Mutual Assistance – that we enacted the European Investigatory Orders Regulations and so we disapplied the Mutual Legal Assistance (European Union) Act. When we did that, the Attorney General, if I remember correctly ... I do not have the Regulations in front of me, but I am quite certain that it was the Attorney General that became the Central Authority under those Regulations. We can pull those up and we can discuss them, but as I said during the course of my speech, the Mutual Legal Assistance (European Union) Act was disapplied by virtue of those European regulations and when the European Investigatory Orders Regulations came in, the Central Authority became the Attorney General. We have to confirm it by looking it up, but for the purposes of extradition it certainly is the Chief Secretary.

315 Mr Speaker: The situation now is that the Hon. Neil Costa has the right to reply. If any other Member wishes to add something at this late stage he will have to ask him to ... We make the assumption that he has not finished his contribution and that that is the only way under which he can give way to somebody else from the Opposition.

320 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, given that the issue has been raised as to the person who is the relevant Central Authority, and I have alighted, I think, on what it is that they are asking, we can very quickly check the answer for them, so maybe they can raise it at the Committee Stage and we will have the answer for them, I am sure, by that point.

325 Mr Speaker: I think we will deal with the matter at the Committee Stage.
I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to provide for the extradition of persons pursuant to any Conventions, Treaties, bilateral or multilateral agreements that apply to and have been extended to Gibraltar or any extradition arrangement or agreements which have been entered into by the United Kingdom and extended to Gibraltar and for connected purposes be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Extradition Act 2018.

Extradition Bill 2018 –

Order of the Day

BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Terrorism Bill 2018 – First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to make provision about terrorism offences, to make provision for the proscribing of organisations, to provide for orders for the freezing and forfeiture of terrorist property and funds, to provide for the investigation of terrorist offences and provide investigation measures, to make provision in connection with overseas terrorism, to repeal and 5 replace the Terrorism Act 2005 and for connected purposes.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an 10 Act to make provision about terrorism offences, to make provision for the proscribing of organisations, to provide for orders for the freezing and forfeiture of terrorist property and funds, to provide for the investigation of terrorist offences and provide investigation measures, to make provision in connection with overseas terrorism, to repeal and replace the Terrorism Act 2005 and for connected purposes be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision about terrorism offences, to make provision for the proscribing of organisations, to provide for orders for the freezing and forfeiture of terrorist property and funds, to provide for the investigation of terrorist offences and provide investigation measures, to make provision in connection with 20 overseas terrorism, to repeal and replace the Terrorism Act 2005 and for connected purposes be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Terrorism Act 2018.

Terrorism Bill 2018 – Second Reading approved

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill should 25 be now read a second time.

Unfortunately, we are all too aware that we live in dangerous times. Just this week in Strasbourg, terrorism has struck again. Even during our General Election campaign three years ago the Hon. Mr Feetham and I had to speak in the middle of that campaign, and he will no doubt recall with as much sadness as I do that we had to agree to suspend campaigning as a result of the brutal attack in Paris that year. Then in Berlin, in London, in Barcelona and then in Manchester. All of these great cities and others have suffered the scourge of terrorism in the past five years in Europe alone. Around the world terrorism afflicts too many communities and in our own lives we have seen our own Police now regularly armed with automatic weapons. We have seen Jersey barriers going up in our pedestrianised areas and thank God that perhaps our most fractious debate in this respect has been whether or not our particular style of Jersey barriers is more or less attractive. Thank God that we are able to have discussions about that, Mr Speaker.

The terms of this Bill, however, come about as a request from the Royal Gibraltar Police for the provision of certain powers that are available to their UK counterparts. As such, this Bill contains provisions which are found in the UK's Terrorism Act 2000, the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001, the Terrorism Act 2005 and the Counter-Terrorism Act 2018, each of those as subsequently amended. The Bill will also repeal and replace our own Terrorism Act 2005, and some of those provisions in that Act will be converted into new provisions of this Act.

Mr Speaker, given the length of the Bill I propose to speak to the various parts and not to descend into the relevant sections unless it is necessary to do so, although of course in reply if hon. Members want to ask any questions about any of the particular sections, we can look at them together.

The first part is a procedural part which defines what constitutes terrorism and also terrorist property. Terrorism, as defined in clause 4(1), is:

the use or threat of action where—

- (a) the action falls within subsection (2);
- (b) the use or threat is designed to coerce, compel or undermine the government or an international governmental organisation or to intimidate the public or a section of the public; and
- (c) the use or threat is made for the purpose of advancing a political, religious, racial or ideological cause.

Subclause (2) sets out the act, namely if it:

- (a) involves serious violence against a person;
- (b) involves serious damage to property;
- (c) endangers a person's life, other than that of the person committing the action;
- (d) creates a serious risk to the health or safety of the public or a section of the public; or
- (e) is designed seriously to interfere with or seriously to disrupt an electronic system, and the person committing the action either intends or is reckless as to whether any of the matters set out in paragraphs (a) to (e) is produced.

Having said I am not going to go into the sections, the first thing I have done is go into that section, Mr Speaker, because it is important that everything else that we talk about this afternoon is seen through the prism of the evil that we are trying to prevent, and that is the key aspect of what that definition brings to this section. The definition is cast in this way so that it is transitional in nature, so that the actions, property or risks need not occur in Gibraltar for the Bill to treat the action as terrorism. So, acts preparatory of terrorism, if they are carried out in Gibraltar, even if the action is eventually to be carried outside of Gibraltar, are of course caught by the definition.

Clause 5 defines what constitutes terrorist property, and when read with clause 3 property is given a very wide meaning indeed and includes electronic or digital property, which is increasingly valuable, whether in the context of legitimate activity or in the context of illicit, illegal activity of this sort.

65 The second part deals with what is a proscribed organisation under the terms of the United Kingdom Terrorism Act 2000 and how that proscribed organisation can become a proscribed organisation in Gibraltar.

70 Few organisations are proscribed in the United Kingdom and the reason for this is that prior to designating an organisation as a proscribed organisation the United Kingdom undertakes considerable work through its security services and with its international partners so that it only targets appropriate organisations. Much of this work is undertaken at a very high level of security clearance and subject to strict limits of confidentiality arising from the needs of security, of course. For those reasons, and as an exception to our normal practice, we have decided to accept, as a matter of Gibraltar law, a UK designation of a proscribed organisation for the purposes of terrorism. The reason for that is that we are simply unable to make a proper determination in this respect in Gibraltar that would withstand challenge. There could be nothing worse than making an organisation a proscribed organisation without the depth of security information necessary in order to be able to do that without the international reach with other security services that would enable us to do that in a way that would be cast iron and to find that organisations so proscribed would then be able to challenge the proscription in our courts and get themselves off our register of proscribed organisations. That would be an absolutely terrible result for Gibraltar.

80 It follows that an aggrieved person – a person who has been proscribed and considers that they should not have been proscribed as an organisation or person subject to the provisions of this Act – needs to be given a remedy. Since Gibraltar is not the custodian of the information that can properly lead to a designation, a person who is aggrieved for the reasons I have set out before is directed to make an application for de-proscription to the Secretary of State in the United Kingdom. Should this not be successful an aggrieved person will be able to appeal to the Proscribed Organisations Appeal Commission which exists in the United Kingdom. Those are such sensitive proceedings that they are actually closed proceedings, they are in camera proceedings, where the interested party is represented by a Special Advocate. Due to the sensitive nature of the information, the limitations on it being divulged and the steps required in order to maintain security of such information, it is not possible for Gibraltar to recreate that regime with a domestic regime in Gibraltar; it would be impossible for us to do so.

85 This second Part of the Act also creates offences in connection with belonging to or supporting a proscribed organisation.

90 Then the third Part, Mr Speaker, sets out offences relating to terrorism and there are four main groups of terrorism offences.

Clauses 12 to 15 create the group of offences concerning the encouragement of terrorism.

95 Clauses 16 to 24 are a group of clauses creating the offences concerning the preparation of terrorist acts and terrorist training, which can include travelling abroad, funding travelling and facilitating travel for terrorist training.

100 Clauses 25 to 29 are a group of sections which provides for offences relating to radioactive and nuclear terrorism related offences.

105 Clauses 30 to 34 are miscellaneous terrorist offences covered in that group of clauses and they include the use of noxious substances and hostage-taking. These provisions also cover the collection of information of a kind likely to be useful to a person committing or preparing an act of terrorism and cover the eliciting, publishing or communicating of information about members of the Police and other law enforcement agencies.

This Part has retained and added to the offences which were already there under Part IV of the Terrorism Act 2005.

110 Schedule 1 sets out a list of terrorist offences that are referred to in this Part 3 and these represent the parallel offences in Gibraltar law to those offences mentioned in the Council of Europe Convention on the Prevention of Terrorism – and that is how we bring them into our law.

115 The fourth Part of the Bill deals with finance offences and the forfeiture of materials which have been used to finance or promote terrorist activity. With respect to finance, the financing offences include fund-raising and other kinds of financial support for terrorism.

120 Clause 39 is actually a specific money laundering offence that is committed with terrorist property and will be familiar to those conversant with our money laundering provisions elsewhere in our legislation, whether in Financial Services Acts or in the Criminal Offences Acts. Along with this offence there are corresponding provisions for disclosure to the authorities where a person has a belief or a suspicion that arises in the course of a trade, business, profession or employment, and those are also dealt with in this Part of the Bill.

125 Clauses 56 to 61 actually make specific provision for court orders for the forfeiture of moneys or other properties connected with offences in this Part and also for the issue of restraint orders; so not just offences of moneys actually having been laundered or having been used for the purposes of facilitating terrorist acts but also to restrain those moneys.

This Part in effect replaces and adds to Part II of the Terrorism Act 2005.

The associated Schedules are Schedules 2 and 3. Schedule 2 defines the regulated sector and the supervisory authorities and Schedule 3 gives more detail of what the forfeiture procedures are.

130 Then Part 5 deals with the forfeiture and freezing orders more specifically and includes the power to forfeit and freeze terrorist property and to monitor the accounts of terrorists or suspected terrorists.

135 Clause 62 and Schedules 4 and 8 of the Bill are linked. Those contain provisions to prevent terrorists from gaining access to their money. They ensure that investigative and freezing powers are available wherever funds could be used to finance terrorism.

The Bill also gives law enforcement agencies the power to seize terrorist cash and the power to freeze assets at the start of an investigation rather than when the person is about to be charged, reducing the risk that funds will be used or moved before they can be frozen.

140 Clause 63 enables the Minister to freeze the assets of overseas governments or residents who have taken, or are likely to take, action to the detriment of Gibraltar's economy or action constituting a threat to the life or property of a Gibraltarian or a resident of Gibraltar.

Schedule 5, which is connected to it, makes further provision about the content of freezing orders.

145 Schedule 8, which I mentioned earlier in the context of clause 62, introduces account monitoring orders enabling the Police to require financial institutions to provide information on accounts for up to 90 days. The existing requirement to report knowledge or suspicion of terrorist financing has therefore been strengthened for the regulated sector, so that it is an offence not to report where there are reasonable grounds for suspicion.

150 Mr Speaker, the sixth Part deals with disclosure of information and is to be read in keeping also with the provisions of Schedule 6 of the Act, which deals with information disclosure provisions for public authorities.

155 Clause 71 clarifies and extends a number of existing provisions for disclosure of information from public authorities to agencies involved in criminal investigations and proceedings. The gateways ensure that public authorities can disclose information which is subject to a statutory restriction on disclosure for the purposes of a criminal investigation or criminal proceedings.

Clause 73 creates a new gateway giving the Commissioner of Income Tax and the Collector of Customs a general power to disclose information held by them for law enforcement purposes and to the intelligence services for their own purposes.

Schedule 6 deals with information disclosure provisions for public authorities.

160 Part 7 deals particularly with terrorist investigations.

Clauses 79 to 83 confer investigatory powers included in that Schedule 7, under which a financial institution may be obliged to provide customer information in aid of an investigation, and Schedule 8, which I mentioned earlier also in relation to clause 62, under which an account monitoring order may be obtained.

165 The eighth Part of the Bill deals with counter-terrorist powers and this Part of the Bill is divided into five principal parts. The first, which concerns clauses 84 to 88 under the subheading 'Suspected terrorists', provides the Police with powers to arrest without a warrant and to detain suspected terrorists. It also includes search powers in respect of premises, persons and vehicles.
170 Under section 85, a police officer may arrest someone without a warrant if he reasonably suspects that person to be a terrorist – and nobody in this House would expect that the position should be anything other than that. When a person is arrested under that section the provisions of Schedule 9 will apply to that person.

The second subpart of this Part concerns clauses 89 to 94 under the subheading 'Powers to stop and search in specified locations' and it contains broad powers to stop and search vehicles 175 and pedestrians in specified areas or places which law enforcement agencies will be able to deploy as a result of the passing by the House of this Act, but the powers are subject to a strict code of practice. The Commissioner of Police may give an authorisation under section 89 in relation to a specified area or place if a police officer reasonably suspects that an act of terrorism will take place and reasonably considers that the authorisation is necessary to prevent 180 such an act. The specified area must be no bigger, and the duration of the authorisation no longer, than is necessary to prevent such an act. So, there is an element of control there which is of course necessary. An authorisation under this section may authorise any police officer in uniform to stop a vehicle or a pedestrian and anything carried by the pedestrian. A police officer may then seize and retain anything which the officer discovers in the course of a search and 185 reasonably suspects may constitute evidence that the vehicle concerned is being used for the purposes of terrorism or the person concerned is or has been concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of an act of terrorism. That is a very wide panoply from the commission of the act to the preparation of the act or the instigation of the act of terrorism.

The third subpart of this eighth Part of the Bill relates to parking restrictions. I am not going 190 to go into that in any detail.

The fourth subpart relates to port and border controls and contains a single clause, clause 100, which is supplemented by Schedule 10, and this provides for the examination power at ports and borders for police officers, customs officers and borders and coastguard officers.

The fifth subpart comprises clauses 101 to 107 and taken together with Schedule 9 these set 195 out the regime for granting bail following arrest in addition to periods of detention and the treatment of suspects who are detained.

A suspect's detention must be periodically reviewed in accordance with Schedule 9. The first review must be carried out as soon as is reasonably practicable after the person's arrest, and all subsequent reviews must be carried out at intervals of not more than 12 hours. A review officer 200 may authorise a person's continued detention only if satisfied that it is necessary on one of the grounds set out in paragraph 30 of Schedule 9, which includes, but is not limited to, the need to obtain further evidence, to preserve evidence, to allow for the result of an examination or analysis and to decide whether the detained person should be charged with an offence.

Extensions of detention must be authorised by the court by the issue of a warrant of further 205 detention but the total amount of time a person may be detained is up to 17 days. This is significantly longer than for other crimes, although it is the same period as is currently applicable in the United Kingdom.

The ninth Part of the Bill deals with notification requirements.

This Part comprises clauses 108 to 133 and it makes provisions about the notification of 210 information to the Police by certain individuals convicted of terrorism or terrorism-related offences. When in the community, such individuals must provide the Police with certain personal information, must notify any subsequent changes to this information and confirm its accuracy annually. An individual who has had a notification requirement imposed on him may make an application for review and the Commissioner of Police and the court may amend the 215 notification requirements or may make an order which ceases the notification requirements altogether.

Schedule 12 makes provision for notification orders. A notification order might be sought in respect of a national of Gibraltar who has been convicted of a foreign terrorism offence and who is deported to Gibraltar on release from prison abroad. It might also be sought in respect of a foreign national with such a conviction who is in or is coming to Gibraltar.

Schedule 13 makes provision for foreign travel restriction orders which may, in specified circumstances, be made by a court in respect of a person subject to the notification requirements, restricting that person's overseas travel.

Schedule 14 lists the offences in which, during sentencing, a terrorist connection is to be considered an aggravating factor for the purposes of passing sentence in respect of that individual.

Part 10 of the Bill deals with terrorism overseas, and as suggested by the title of this Part it makes provision for conduct that takes place overseas and in part gives effect to the UN Conventions for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings and for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism. An amendment which I will be proposing at Committee Stage introduces a provision along the lines of section 25 of our Terrorism Act 2005 to ensure our extradition laws may be used in relation to offences under this Part also.

Finally, clauses 141 to 151 contain further technical provisions relating to police powers, consent to prosecutions, defences, corporate liability, etc.

Schedule 15 provides general powers for police, customs and borders and coastguard officers including powers for them to exchange information. In other words, it creates gateways between them for exchange of information.

The 12th part of the Bill contains supplementary provisions and deals with ancillary provisions to ensure the functionality of the Bill. It houses the power for the Minister to make orders and regulations and provides for amendment of such and of any of the sections in the Act or in the Schedule. It also provides for the repeal of the Terrorism Act 2005 and for consequential, transitional and savings provisions due to that repeal. A further amendment which I will be proposing at Committee Stage amends the Proceeds of Crime Act to clarify the intelligence functions of the Gibraltar Financial Intelligence Unit connected to this new Act.

Mr Speaker, it is regrettable that we even need to have this legislation, but that is the unfortunate reality of the world in which we live. I am conscious of the fact that I am addressing you as Speaker and you were Chief Minister the first time that unfortunately terrorism struck in Gibraltar, or attempted to strike in Gibraltar, also then in the midst of a general election campaign or with a general election campaign looming.

Our first duty as parliamentarians is to ensure the safety and security of our citizens and this legislation gives our Police the additional powers and the additional tools they need to ensure that the safety and security of our citizens is provided for in respect of potential terrorist activities and updated from the provisions of the 2005 Act.

Mr Speaker, with a heavy heart I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill?

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, we welcome this Bill. Terrorism is a global threat to our way of life, and it is right that our law enforcement agencies are supported and are given enhanced tools to fight this evil. It is right that we modernise and strengthen our law to mitigate attacks on our way of life.

As the Chief Minister has alluded to, terrorism is a complex situation and with improvements in technology we must be vigilant and remain up to date and increase powers available to our law enforcement agencies. It is right that with increased powers come increased responsibility for due process and upholding the rule of law, which it is hoped that this law is balanced against.

270 It our wish that no one will ever have to use these powers and I agree with the Hon. the Chief Minister that it is regrettable that we are all here addressing this House on the question of these powers, but it is what it is. It is certainly a reflection of our society and unfortunately a reflection of the world we live in.

275 It was particularly important that the Chief Minister mentioned Gibraltar as a finance centre and quite clearly we must acknowledge that within the financial centre financial service provision there are possibilities unwittingly and innocently for financial service providers to become mixed up in terrorist financing, so it is important, of course, that we strengthen those powers to deal with that and the forfeiture provisions in particular are to be welcomed.

280 In summary, Mr Speaker, whilst much controversy has occurred in the United Kingdom in relation to the passing of the 2000 and 2005 Acts, particularly in relation to stop and search provisions, we will support this Bill completely.

285 One question that we do have, and hopefully the Chief Minister will be able to clarify, is the level of training and education that will be afforded to our law enforcement agencies. I did not hear the Chief Minister address the House in respect of that matter, but it would be helpful to understand how the Government intends to deploy resources to the RGP insofar as continuing training and professional development in relation to terrorism and counter-terrorism and how this new law impacts on their work.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

290 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I also ask the Chief Minister to just explain by way of clarification a number of provisions that I am attempting to understand?

One of them is section 71. It is the disclosure of information in Part 6, page 415. It basically says:

This section applies to the provisions listed in Schedule 6, so far as they authorise the disclosure of information.

Schedule 6 is blank. I do not know whether he explained that, but it is completely blank, so what precisely is the intention with section 71?

295 I make the point as well because if one looks at Section 71(2):

Each of the provisions to which this section applies shall have effect, in relation to the disclosure of information by or on behalf of a public authority, as if the purposes for which the disclosure of information is authorised by that provision included each of the following-

(a) the purposes of any criminal investigation whatever which is being or may be carried out, whether in Gibraltar or elsewhere;

If we then look at the definition of 'criminal investigation' at clause 74, we see:

'criminal investigation' means an investigation of any criminal conduct, including an investigation of alleged or suspected criminal conduct and an investigation of whether criminal conduct has taken place;

300 That does not appear to me to be limited to criminal conduct relating to terrorism and I would ask whether that is the intention or whether it is limited to terrorist criminal investigations. Of course, if it is wider than that then it may raise issues as to whether these provisions, which appear on the face of them to be wide... Indeed, they apply to any public authority, so for example the FSC may have in its possession some information that might be relevant to a criminal investigation outside of Gibraltar but those criminal authorities outside of Gibraltar would normally make an application in order to obtain that information through very well-known channels in terms of mutual legal assistance etc. What I am concerned about with 305 this is that these provisions are not being used to circumvent the protections that are afforded to those under criminal investigations in our laws and in our statutes elsewhere.

310 Finally, and no doubt the answer is going to be in the affirmative, but definition of terrorism does take into account recent cases, does it not, that have been decided in the United Kingdom?
I am thinking in particular of the Miranda case in 2016 which involved a journalist being stopped at one of the airports and information that was confiscated from the journalist. The court there took the view that the definition of terrorism does not include information that a journalist may have acquired that of course may well be relevant to the investigating authorities but there are issues of journalistic confidentiality involved and in the UK it was actually taken out, or there was a decision that basically it does not include this. I just wonder whether the drafters have taken 315 that into account.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

320 I would like to ask for some clarification. My colleagues obviously have dealt with the legal aspects. I was looking at some practical aspects in respects of the freezing orders and perhaps the Chief Minister can clarify. I can see under section 65 that a freezing order ceases to have effect after two years and under section 67 it can be annulled pursuant to a resolution of the Parliament. I would be grateful if the Chief Minister could confirm that effectively that is the only 325 way in which a freezing order can be annulled, i.e. by Parliament; and if so, would the Chief Minister be minded to add, perhaps at the Committee Stage, some wording under section 67(2)?
Where it says 'A freezing order must be laid', I would ask for 'must be laid as soon as practicable before Parliament after being laid'.

330 That are only my questions in terms of clarification. Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute to the debate on the Second Reading of this Bill? Then I will call on the Chief Minister to reply.

335 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I thank all hon. Members for their positive contributions in the context of this Bill. It is a hefty document that we have before us today because, as hon.
Members know, what it is doing is taking existing pieces of legislation, repealing them, adding to them and therefore replacing in our laws the tools available to our law enforcement agents. So, in addressing the points that are being made by hon. Members opposite I am not going to be able to point exactly to areas where we are dealing already with powers that are in our laws, but 340 I will just address the powers before the Parliament today.

I confess that this Bill has been published now for a year. We have not proceeded with it earlier for good reason, because we wanted to ensure that ongoing cases in the United Kingdom when decided did not require us to make changes. The Miranda case I will come to in a minute is already factored in and we now think that the Bill as it is with the amendments proposed will be 345 an avant-garde piece of legislation which works as at today in the context of the developing case law.

In that respect, of course, it is absolutely right that we need to balance increased powers given to law enforcement agents with increased responsibility and accountability of those same law enforcement agents. Hon. Members will have heard what I said about the ability to extend 350 the period of detention. It is not normal in our laws that anybody should be subject to detention for more than 24 hours once they have been subject to an arrest before coming to a court, where they would be dealt with by the judicial branch and then subject to further detention, if required, but not with the law enforcement agencies being the ones who make the determination as to whether detention should be extended. In the context of this Bill there will 355 be a period of up to 17 days of detention and I think there is the best place to see how we have sought to ensure the right balance between the increase in the power to the law enforcement agencies and the increased accountability that will be required. So, every 12 hours there will be an assessment of an individual's detention and a decision whether or not to continue that 360 detention. Just to put that in context, if one is arrested today in respect of any offence, the Police can keep you in for up to 24 hours before taking you in front of a magistrate; and a magistrate, if he then decides that you should be detained and not granted bail, will remand you in custody and you will be coming back to have that custody assessed every seven days. In the context of these offences, although you might be detained for up to 17 days, your detention will be reviewed every 12 hours. So yes, more power, but also more requirement for accountability 365 because it is important that our law enforcement agencies have these powers, but it is important that our law enforcement agencies account for the exercise of those powers. In that what I am doing I think is demonstrating our agreement with the point made by the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition and demonstrating how, in that particular case of a case of detention, that balance is being struck in the context of this Bill.

370 In the context of freezing and forfeiture in financial transactions, of course it is absolutely right that Gibraltar's financial services centre be seen for what it is, absolutely properly regulated subject to the international norms applicable today in the context of the restraint of the use of the financial system for the financing or laundering of the proceeds of terrorism, and this Bill, in addition to the laws that we already have in that respect, adds to the powers 375 available to law enforcement and the obligations incumbent upon professionals in that sector to ensure that they never fall into a trap by not knowing what the tests are when they need to make sure that they are in contact with law enforcement agents about particular transactions.

Dealing finally with the point on training and education which the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition made, absolutely the Royal Gibraltar Police, the Customs and the Borders and 380 Coastguard agents who will be involved in parts of the implementation of this Bill will require further training. There is a lot going on in respect of training. There is an international effort in respect of training, so it is not just training in Gibraltar or in the United Kingdom, it is international training and co-operation, which is relevant, and in the Estimates this year hon.
Members will see, if they care to look at the parts which relate to the vote for the RGP, that 385 there will be elements which relate to training in respect of the obligations incumbent on law enforcement under this Bill.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Member Mr Feetham took us to section 71. It is the intention, as far as I understand it, that at the moment the sixth Schedule should be blank, although it will not be blank for long, as I understand it, but it was intentional that that should be the case and it was 390 the case in the United Kingdom at the time that the similar provisions were introduced that the schedule was blank. Hon. Members I think will know that it was David Anderson who assisted us in the preparation of this Bill, who was the commissioner in the United Kingdom for terrorist matters for some time and who had considerable experience of the operation of the legislation in the United Kingdom. Therefore, for that reason, the provisions in respect of the Miranda case 395 are of course properly factored into here, although they are matters already determined in case law, and so the jurisprudence of the United Kingdom will be fully applicable because we are replicating parts of the statutes in the United Kingdom in part to ensure, as hon. Members know, that we have a good read across in terms of jurisprudence so that determinations made in the United Kingdom courts can help us in the interpretation of our laws.

400 He made an important point in respect of section 74, which I read as being limited to criminal offences which relate to the provisions which this Act is trying to deal with, but I do not think that that is entirely and completely clear beyond peradventure. He may be thinking not just of the Miranda case but of other cases where terrorism laws have been used to act in circumstances where parliaments did not intend those laws to be used. I cannot recall on my 405 feet – he might be able to assist me – whether it was the United Kingdom that subjected a third country to provisions of the Terrorism Acts for the purposes of dealing with something which was clearly not terrorism or whether it was the United Kingdom itself that was made subject to a terrorism provision elsewhere to settle what was in effect a dispute between states. That is not the sort of thing that we would be seeing here but it is true that in other circumstances parties 410 have tried to use terrorism legislation to cure ills which might be ills, but which were not the subject that the parliament that was making those laws was seeking to deal with in the context of that particular legislation.

415 Mr Speaker, I am happy to consider with him, whether here or in the definitions section – because criminal conduct is defined at the beginning of this Act – the addition of some words which might make abundantly clear beyond peradventure that all aspects of this legislation when dealing with criminality are dealing with the criminality that we are seeking to address in this Act, which is the definition of terrorism. I think it needs to be made a little circular. It cannot be left open. If the law enforcement agencies wish to have powers akin to those here in respect of more general criminality, then they need to approach the executive so that we bring those 420 laws to this legislature and we make the decision together that they should have those powers. I am not suggesting that they are, but they should not have those powers in respect of terrorism offences but somehow made open-ended in a way that might apply to other criminal offences. So, if I can just invite him to look with me at an amendment when we get to the Committee Stage then I think we can deal with that issue quite easily.

425 Then the Hon. Mr Clinton asked us to look at issues relating to forfeiture and freezing orders, which are the subject of sections 65 and 67. I believe that such orders can be undone also, of course, by a court, not just by the Parliament, because the court in making the order can put provisions in the order which would enable the court to come back to a consideration of such an order. But in the context of this Parliament, the practice is – and in fact I understand it is 430 invariably so – that as soon as the office of the relevant Minister receives a document which under our statutes is to be laid in Parliament, it is immediately laid in Parliament at the next sitting of the Parliament. So, for example, if I receive a report, any report which must be laid in Parliament – so, the Employment Survey Report – immediately upon the receipt of the report by the ministerial office arrangements are made to lay it on the table in Parliament at the next 435 sitting of the Parliament. And so I think that is already inbuilt in our mechanism and I do not think there is any reason to change this Bill in that respect, because we would have to go back and change every Act that requires something to be laid in Parliament by including the words ‘as soon as reasonably practicable’ after the requirement to lay, when in fact that is already the practice that prevails.

440 Mr Speaker, I do not know whether hon. Members have already had the letter – I think they have already had it, so I think when I spoke to the amendments that I would be circulating they have had the benefit of seeing what those amendments are, so I do not need to give way at this stage.

445 I therefore, once again with a heavy heart but grateful for the understanding of all Members of the House of the need for this legislation, commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision about terrorism offences, to make provision for the proscribing of organisations, to provide for orders for the freezing and forfeiture of terrorist property and funds, to provide for the investigation of 450 terrorist offences and provide investigation measures, to make provision in connection with overseas terrorism, to repeal and replace the Terrorism Act 2005 and for connected purposes be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Terrorism Act 2018.

Terrorism Bill 2018 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

455 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Committee Stage and Third Reading be dealt with later today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Animals in Travelling Circuses Bill 2018 –
First Reading approved

460 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to make provision for offences relating to the use of animals in travelling circuses, and to provide for the enforcement of those offences, and for connected purposes.

The Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

465 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to make provision for offences relating to the use of animals in travelling circuses, and to provide for the enforcement of those offences, and for connected purposes be read a first time.

470 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision for offences relating to the use of animals in travelling circuses, and to provide for the enforcement of those offences, and for connected purposes be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Animals in Travelling Circuses Act 2018.

Animals in Travelling Circuses Bill 2018 –
Second Reading approved

475 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

This is one of a number of items of legislation related to animal welfare that I have brought and will be bringing to this House.

480 The issues of animals in travelling circuses has long been a source of unease to many, with full or partial bans now existing in many European countries both within and outside the European Union. The general public and animal welfare organisations have shown that ongoing concerns involve perceived animal welfare issues, including that circuses have been found to beat, starve and keep animals in unsanitary conditions. Circuses can never meet the needs of an animal in small, mobile accommodation whilst the act travels around. There is also the ethical 485 point of whether it is acceptable in today's society to keep or regularly transport animals in order to make them perform for financial gain and public entertainment. Scotland and Ireland are two examples of countries with bans already in place and the Gibraltar Bill is based on the Scottish model.

490 The Bill makes it an offence for a circus operator to use, or to cause or permit another person to use, an animal in a travelling circus in Gibraltar. An animal is 'used' if it is made to perform or is displayed or exhibited, whether or not payment of money is required to view the performance, exhibition or display. 'Performance' includes tricks or manoeuvres viewed by the public. An 'exhibition' includes any proactive showing of animals to the public. 'Display' includes use in parades or deliberate positioning of animals to facilitate or encourage viewing.

495 In relation to travelling, a key criterion for an offence to have been committed is that the animal is transported, whether regularly or irregularly, from one place to another. A circus is a travelling circus even during periods it is not travelling, for example during a temporary tour stop or during the winter closed season, and the Act further provides the Minister with the power to designate that a particular act is or is not a travelling circus.

500 Only a circus operator can commit the offence. However, this includes circus owners and people who do not own a circus but have overall charge of its operations; or, if no one in those categories is in Gibraltar, any other person present in Gibraltar who has ultimate responsibility for the circus operations. Where an organisation commits the offence, certain persons can be held criminally liable. Those persons referred to in section 6 as responsible individuals must have 505 consented to or connived in the organisation's commission of the offence or have been guilty of neglect resulting in the organisation committing the offence. A person who commits an offence under this Act will be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale.

Sections 7 to 9 confer powers on inspectors appointed under the Act and on police officers to 510 take enforcement action under the Act. It sets out the range and extent of these enforcement powers and creates offences in relation to hampering enforcement. It also provides for the circumstances when an inspector or police officer is authorised to exercise their powers, such as powers of entry and inspection, with or without a warrant.

Entry and search powers include entry into premises other than domestic premises if there 515 are reasonable grounds for believing that an offence has been or is being committed at the premises. Powers are granted to justices of the peace to grant a warrant if there are reasonable grounds to believe that an offence is being or has been committed at particular premises or that evidence relating to the commission of such an offence will be found at premises and either an 520 inspector or police officer has been refused permission to enter the premises, or they are unoccupied. If the delay of obtaining the warrant would frustrate the purpose for which the powers are being exercised, an inspector or police officer may exercise the same powers without a warrant.

An officer in uniform or an inspector accompanied by an officer in uniform may stop and 525 detain a vehicle or vessel. A vehicle or vessel may be detained for so long as is reasonably required to enable the constable or inspector to exercise the power in relation to which the vehicle or vessel has been stopped.

There are other powers – for example, to take additional people, for example a vet, on to any 530 premises they may enter to provide assistance to the inspector or officer in exercising a power. Inspectors or officers may also take any equipment which might be required when entering premises.

It is an offence under the Act to intentionally obstruct an inspector or an officer who is exercising one of the powers and the offence can be prosecuted in summary courts and, as I have said earlier, carry a maximum fine of level 5.

In ending, Mr Speaker, there was one response to this when it was published as a Command 535 Paper and I want to mention it. This comes from Animal Defenders International, which is an international animal protection, non-governmental organisation with over 25 years' experience studying the use of animals in circuses, and they have written a five-page letter supporting and commending the publication of this Bill and supporting the Act.

540 With that, Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill?

The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

545 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much.

The Opposition will be supporting this Bill. Even though here in Gibraltar we do not have and we have not had any circuses for years – in fact, I am 51 years old and I cannot remember whether there has ever been a circus in Gibraltar during that time; probably during the 1980s or possibly the 1970s there might have been but I cannot remember one myself – anything that 550 prohibits that type of activity here in Gibraltar, even though they are not frequent and I cannot remember them, is to be welcomed. Quite frankly, I think that Gibraltar needs to be at the forefront of placing animal welfare and safeguarding the rights of animals and we need to be seen as placing those at the forefront of the political agenda.

Indeed, Mr Speaker, last time the hon. Member brought a Bill in relation to animal cruelty to 555 this House I mentioned the ivory trade and he said to me that the Government is actively considering banning the importation of ivory items. I also think that he was considering ivory items that may be used or may be traded as antiques, which is a significant problem internationally. Often, recent ivory is passed off as antiques and I welcome the fact that the Hon.
Minister the last time round gave that assurance to the House.

560 Something that is very close to my heart and – I know, other Members of the Opposition, but certainly it is very close to my heart – is this question of trophy hunting and the importation of animal parts from trophy hunting. Very recently – I think it was in 2007 – the Netherlands with immediate effect added to the list of species that could no longer be imported to the Netherlands. That included white rhinos, elephants, cheetahs, lions, hippos and polar bears. I do 565 not expect that in Gibraltar there are many people wanting to import parts of polar bears, but quite frankly it is the example that you set internationally. Since the 1970's. We are losing species at an incredible rate. From the 1970s we have lost 60% of wildlife in the world. We are facing extinction of species at a rate that has never been witnessed in modern times – indeed, not even in modern times, since extinctions many thousands of years ago. I think it is incumbent 570 on all of us who really value wildlife, who value animals, who believe that animals have rights and who want our future generations to be able to enjoy seeing elephants in the wild, giraffes in the wild and lions in the wild, it is incumbent upon us to show an example and I am asking the Government ... I hope that he does not think that by my contribution I am lecturing to him by any means – I am not attempting to do so. On the last occasion he was particularly ungenerous 575 when he said, 'Well, I'm glad that we now have an environmentalist on the other side – where were you before 2011 when I was elected to this House?' Whether I have been converted on the road to Damascus late on or not, the fact is that I truly believe that we really ought to be setting an example. I know that the Netherlands have added significant numbers to their list, that France has done so as well, and I would hope that the Minister follows suit. Indeed, I believe 580 that, having looked at the legislation, it does not require any amendments, that what the legislation requires is for the Minister himself – it is within his powers – to add to the list of animal parts that cannot be imported into Gibraltar, and it would be a wonderful Christmas present if he could look at that quite quickly and make the decision that has been made in the Netherlands and in France.

585 Mr Speaker, thank you very much for your indulgence in letting me speak on things that are not in circuses but are related.

Mr Speaker: But we are of equal mind on this position.

Does any other hon. Member wish to ...? The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

590

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I ask the Minister just to clarify – for those of us who do not have as much legal training as many of our colleagues here have – if I look, for example, in section 8(1), it says:

An officer in uniform may stop and detain a vehicle or vessel ...

and in 8(2):

An inspector, if accompanied by an officer in uniform,

595 There is a specific reference there to being in uniform, whereas some pages before that, in section 5, it says the Minister may by regulations ... Sorry, I had made a note. I seem to have lost my own note. In other places it just says that an officer or an inspector has certain powers without prescribing about being in uniform. My interpretation is that, if I can refer him to 600 perhaps any offence happening down the street, if you see a policeman in uniform, by seeing the uniform you automatically recognise that person but it could be possible, and I have seen it happening, for a police officer who is not in uniform simply approaches an individual, shows his warrant and therefore that in itself proves his capacity and anything that the law allows him to do. Why is there a need just in this section to specify he was in uniform? Does it mean that if he is not wearing the uniform he does not have the powers? It could be that I am over-reading it or 605 something, but if we clear it now it eases it for the future.

Mr Speaker: Is there any other contributor?

The Hon. Roy Clinton.

610 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Just a point of clarification from the Minister, because I note that one of the definitions of an animal being used is, under section 4(3)(b), being 'displayed or exhibited', and obviously that is in relation to a circus but I note that there is the Keeping of Wild Animals Act going back to 2002.
I am thinking more of zoos in general and obviously we have an exempted premises in the 615 Botanical Gardens. I was wondering whether the Minister had looked at the interaction of this Bill and this existing legislation in terms of the welfare of animals in the context of exhibition.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Any other person before I call on the mover to reply.?

Yes, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

620 Hon. E J Phillips: Just to reinforce the point made by my hon. Friend, Mr Clinton. He has pointed to the Keeping of Wild Animals Act and there is, I believe, an exemption for the Gibraltar Botanical Gardens in relation to the exhibition of animals. I just wanted to probe the Minister a bit further on what the Government's policy towards the exhibition of animals generally is.

What this piece of legislation I understand does is to prevent that and I think that our 625 community has adopted a position where we would frown upon the exhibition of animals, whilst current legislation – the Keeping of Wild Animals Act 2002, which exempts, as I said, the Gibraltar Botanical Gardens – allows for it. In fact, there is a specific provision which relates to circuses there and I just would like to hear from the Minister, combining the thoughts of Mr Clinton, as to what interaction and what analysis has been done between those two pieces of 630 legislation.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Dr John Cortes.

635 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am of course aware of the other legislation being referred to and the way that the Botanic Gardens is exempted because it fulfils the criteria that allows that exemption, which was done before my time in government.

This refers specifically in the context of an animal in a travelling circus and therefore the policy would be to keep to the 2002 Act in respect of everything other than an animal in a travelling circus. So I do not think that there is a conflict there. Certainly I have been advised that 640 there is not.

On the question of officers in uniform, again this is based on the Scottish Act and I believe that the criterion there has been that to actually stop a vehicle or a vessel would require a uniformed person rather than anybody in civilian clothes trying to stop a vehicle, which there

645 might be resistance to. I think that what is meant there is that the authority of a person in uniform would be more likely to be successful, so I think that is where that comes in.

In reference to the Hon. Mr Feetham's conversion, I hope that I have played at least a small part in that conversion and without being in any way disingenuous to him or unkind I would just like to confirm that I am expecting very early in the New Year to publish the legislation on ivory and pets and that my drafter is looking at how we can incorporate a ban on the importation of hunting trophies. So I am hoping that in the early part of the next calendar year I will be able to take those steps.

Hon. D A Feetham: Will you give way?

655 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, certainly.

Hon. D A Feetham: Because I am quite active on social media with this question of trophy hunting and I am in close contact with a number of organisations dealing with a campaign to ban trophy hunting etc. – there are a number of them – in respect of Gibraltar I asked for the legislation in other countries and I was sent legislation in other countries. Somebody made the point, and I then looked at it myself, that in fact you may not need to legislate in Gibraltar because all the Minister needs to do is, by way of regulation, add to a list of animals that ... trophies from those animals will not be allowed into Gibraltar, and indeed in France and in Holland those are extremely extensive.

665 Of course, if what the Minister is saying is, 'Well, actually, we are going to go further than that because what we are going to do is have a blanket ban on the importation of animal trophies from outside,' and that includes for example deer, which is widespread – those types of trophies are widespread – then it will certainly be welcomed by me and no doubt this side of the of the House. But if he really wanted to just simply deal with the ones that are really problematical, he could do that tomorrow by basically adding to the list.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am aware. This is in connection with the Endangered Species Act, which is one that I was involved in drafting back, I think, in the late 1980s, and has been subsequently amended. So it is possible to do that and that is the advice I am taking as to whether that is the best way to do it or whether we need something wider. But I am confident that we will have that done very soon.

With that further clarification I once again commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision for offences relating to the use of animals in travelling circuses, and to provide for the enforcement of those offences, and for connected purposes be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Animals in Travelling Circuses Act 2018.

Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

685 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken later today, if all hon. Members agree.

690 Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of this Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) Act 2005. The Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) Act 2005 be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) Act 2005 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

695 Clerk: The Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) (Amendment) Act 2018.

Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

700 The maritime industry has seen growing interest in the use of alternative fuels such as LNG, although it must be said that LNG-powered vessels have been around for many years. LNG is seen as a greener technology when compared to oil and petroleum derived fuels and with ever-tightening emissions regulations owners are increasingly looking at LNG propulsion technology, both when considering new orders for ships or the possibility of retrofitting existing ships to LNG. In fact, we have one ship currently being retrofitted to LNG fuel at Gibdock. Gibraltar is one of the most important ports for bunkering in the Mediterranean. As the need for LNG bunkering increases, Gibraltar must be fully prepared to provide this fuel in a safe manner in order not to lose our place in the market.

710 This Bill makes a few simple amendments to the Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) Act 2005 in order to facilitate LNG bunkering, in particular by distinguishing between LNG bunkering and other types of bunkering. The Bill seeks to amend the 2005 Act by changing the definition of 'bunkering' to confine that definition to oil and petroleum derived fuels only and to separately define 'LNG bunkering'. The amendments to this Act are part of a series of measures which will be required in order to have the full framework for LNG bunkering in place. There will be amendments to Port Rules in order to align the rules to the new bunkering definitions introduced by this Bill and to provide for relevant fees in connection with LNG bunkering. In addition, and crucially, there will be a dedicated LNG bunker code of practice which has been developed by the Gibraltar Port Authority incorporating all relevant international safety standards. There will also be new licence conditions that will be particular to LNG bunkering.

720 This Bill also amends the definition of 'port operations' to include several more activities in the port operations. None of these are new operations but they are simply being more specifically defined by this amendment.

Mr Speaker, I commend this Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill?

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

725

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, whilst we will, of course, support the Government on policies and the development of sectors and industries from which our community is to derive real economic benefits, and conscious as we are about increasing concerns about the impact of traditional fuels such as diesel on the environment, and acknowledging, as the Minister has quite rightly said in his contribution, the demand for sustainable fuel, we as Opposition continue to remain concerned about the risks and safety of the development of LNG bunkering in Gibraltar.

730

The Government in their Bill are promoting the issuing of LNG bunkering licences alongside other activities – such as commercial diving, ship chandlery and tug operation to name a few – which were set out in the relevant section referred to by the Minister at section 2. Key questions, in our view, remain unanswered and we on this side of the House remain in the dark over the Government's plans on how LNG will be stored and, importantly, where it will be stored. We remain unconvinced that the Government has reassured the public that it has mitigated all risks to the public and we would ask the Government to disclose all risk assessments that have been conducted in relation to the location and storage of LNG.

735

740

Of course, Mr Speaker, it is open to the Government to actively and constructively engage with Members of this side of the House in creating a form in which we ventilate the concerns in a pragmatic way. The Government, in their usual way, have sought to drive through legislation in a way without the slightest reference to those on this side of the House and the people of this community. Ultimately, the Opposition and the people of our community remain in an information vacuum in relation to the safety of the Government's proposals and therefore we regret that we cannot in this instance support the Government's Bill. In this context the Opposition will be abstaining.

745

It is regrettable that the Minister has not sought to reach out in the way that I have described; and if he had, perhaps we could obtain the assurances that we seek in relation to the serious concerns that many in our community have in relation to the use of LNG and the Government's policy to promote bunkering of LNG in Gibraltar. Take it from me that we welcome the engagement by Mr Costa on most of the Bills that he brings to this House but I find it disappointing that the Minister has not picked up the telephone to speak to one of my colleagues on this side of the House to discuss with them the issues that arise here and the well-known issues that divide us in relation to LNG bunkering in Gibraltar. If the information vacuum, as I have suggested in my contribution, could be filled or at least we had some form of consultation, perhaps we could reassure members of the public who still maintain those concerns and tell us about their concerns in relation to this point.

755

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member ...? The Hon. the Chief Minister.

765

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the world is developing how we deal with the past hundred years of human activity, and in particular humans' release of noxious fumes into the atmosphere, in particular the ability to heat the earth to the extent that we have in the short period since the turn of the 20th century. In doing so, we are adopting new technologies.

770

During the course of the industrial revolution a group known as the Luddites sought to stand in the way of the changes that were then transforming industrial activity in the United Kingdom. The name that they were given is now used as a definition of those who might stand in the way of better, new technology. Hon. Members opposite – not the hon. Lady, who has not yet pronounced herself in this respect; I am addressing only those the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has spoken for – cannot really expect to be defined as anything other than Luddites when it comes to new technologies like LNG. This is the technology that is designed to take us away from burning diesel.

775 Only this week, from an exotic location known best to him and the lady who I understand is his new wife, in respect of which I congratulate Mr Hammond, we have seen a press release issued by the GSD with a photograph of Waterport Power Station emitting black fumes, which arises from the burning of diesel, and it being pointed out to us all how dangerous that is. Well, of course it is clear that on this side of the House we are against burning diesel and therefore we 780 are taking steps to ensure that whether it is vessels that come to Gibraltar or the generation of electricity in Gibraltar it is done, insofar as is possible and as technology advances, without burning diesel – one of the reasons we moved away from their plan to burn diesel in the environ of the Upper Rock. So I congratulate Mr Hammond not just for his nuptials but also for now being a convert to the dangers of burning diesel. I welcome him to the fold of those of us who 785 believe that burning LNG is safer and more environmentally friendly.

The hon. Gentleman has said that we have not persuaded the public, who he purports to speak for, that storing LNG in Gibraltar, in particular in the location where it will be stored and then subsequently burnt in the new power station, is safe – that we have not convinced the public that it is safe. Well, the last time we had a public debate on this was the General Election 790 three years ago, and hon. Members will know and I have often said privately to friends that I thought that the former-former Leader of the Opposition ran a magnificent election campaign at a professional level. In other words, he was ensuring that there was not one minute of the day that we were not – if he will excuse the reference to the trophies that were referred to a moment ago – locking horns at every moment on every issue, in particular LNG, where it was 795 going to be, where it was going to be stored and where it was going to be burned.

Mr Speaker, alongside having defeated Sir Peter Caruana I will consider myself proud all of my life to have been able to defeat him at the last General Election. I will consider myself particularly proud of the margin by which we beat them, which means that by 68% to 32% we were able to persuade the general public that the plan was a safe one. I do not know whether 800 hon. Members have bothered to, wanted to, enjoyed, descended to or otherwise worked out the maths, but it is a huge split. To understand the decision that the public made on the subject which the hon. Member has pointed to, he needs to understand that the difference between 32 and 68 is 36. In other words, by a margin greater than the amount that they saw themselves returned by at the last General Election, the general public decided that we had given them the 805 information necessary in this respect, and we have provided more information since. In fact, there has been an exchange of press releases on the subject.

What we are not going to do – and we all happily get together when it comes to counter-terrorism measures – is to publish a schematic diagram of a plant, to give those who might wish to do Gibraltar's national infrastructure damage the clues, if not the keys, of how to do that 810 damage. And so, Mr Speaker, all of the relevant law enforcement and security agencies of the Government have made a determination that there are some reports that cannot be published about LNG storage in Gibraltar, in the same way they cannot be published about so many other things that we do and so many other things which are critical national infrastructure. That should not mean that something like the provision of LNG bunkering, which relies on that critical 815 national infrastructure, is somehow unsafe because we have made the wise decision for safety's sake not to publish a detailed schematic of the plant, which is what the hon. Members seem to want in order to feel that they have the information necessary. So, I entirely repudiate the suggestion that the Government has somehow failed to publish a report that we should have published so that the public might feel safer. We have made the decision not to publish some 820 details of some reports because to do so would make the public less safe. That is the reality.

The hon. Gentleman says therefore that they are being asked to legislate here, in this area, in a vacuum because the hon. Member has not reached out to them to legislate with them in this context. Well, Mr Speaker, given everything they have said and the fact that the hon. Gentleman has said that this, in his view, relates to the safety of this community, I put it to them that, in the 825 same way as I put it to them that having lost the election on the issue of LNG they should not have blithely stood by as we continued with our plans if what they had said during the campaign was true, they should have chained themselves to the North Mole to prevent us from installing the plant if they were serious about it. In the same way, the political hypocrisy of their position is 830 he is genuine about anything he has said he should whip his people to vote against this Bill, not to abstain. If he is genuinely concerned about the safety issue, how could he get up in this House and say, 'and therefore I am going to abstain'?

So they were not genuinely concerned about the LNG storage plant because they did nothing, once they lost the election by that huge margin, to prevent the whole thing going ahead. And 835 they are not seriously concerned about this Bill or LNG bunkering because they have given themselves away. There is a Spanish saying that says that the fish gives himself away by his mouth, or the fish dies by his own mouth. Well, the fish here has died by his own mouth, because to say, on something which you say concerns the safety of this community, that you are going to abstain I think gives the lie to the fact that you do not really feel that there is any safety 840 concern.

But the hon. Gentleman said something else. He said that he was disappointed not to have heard Mr Licudi call him and discuss with him etc. – and I assume him or Mr Hammond, who for very good reason is not here, and I am not saying anything about Mr Hammond's absence other than congratulate him; I do not want him to think that I am doing that, but when he said 'him' I 845 assume him or Mr Hammond. Let me put it this way to the hon. Gentleman in the context of what he has said and why unfortunately his call for co-operation will ring hollow with us on this side of the House. Without going into what has been said privately, just in respect of what has been said publicly, we were told by hon. Members opposite when we told them that we would be giving them copies of the memorandums of understanding entered into in the context of the 850 Withdrawal Agreement ahead of that publication, that they would –

A Member: That is not relevant.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, it is very relevant, Mr Speaker, and if they bother to listen for a 855 moment they will understand why.

They told us, when we told them that we would give them advance copies of those MoUs, that they would call us and ask us questions about any parts which they were concerned about or which they had any doubts about. Did they call us, Mr Speaker? Or did they, seven days later, simply issue press releases which completely misunderstand the structure of the MoUs and 860 completely misinterpret them and try to lead people up the garden path? That is what they did.
That is the value of picking up the phone or giving hon. Members opposite ... some of them, because some of them have behaved completely differently. Some with whom I used to lock horns before have behaved completely differently, but some of them, despite us picking up the phone, despite us trying to co-operate, despite us trying to ventilate the issues with them, 865 despite them telling us that they are going to ring us and not issue public statements, what they go on to do is issue public statements.

So, Mr Speaker, if the Hon. Mr Licudi had asked me whether I thought he should ring them and ask them what they thought of the Bill, I would have said to him, 'What's the point? They'll say that they care about the safety of Gibraltar, they'll say it's all very dangerous and then they'll 870 abstain.' Well, Mr Speaker, I commend to the hon. Members the terms of the Bill as advanced by the Minister and I commend to them seriousness in their approach to the safety in this community and that they should either whip themselves up into a sufficient frenzy that they vote against this Bill or that they whip themselves down completely and support it, but that they should not be that damp squib of politics and simply abstain. (Banging on desks) 875

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I have to say that he has persuaded me to vote against the Bill because – 880 Hon. Chief Minister: A man of principle.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, it's not a man of principle, it is because – (Interjection and laughter) No, he has been given an opportunity to persuade us, and everything that the hon. Gentleman has said really reinforces that actually what we ought to be doing is voting against. (Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely.) The decision is one for the Leader of the Opposition and my colleagues, 885 but quite frankly yes, I do find him very persuasive that we ought to vote against the hon. Gentleman's Bill.

Before I make some substantive points, let me make these two points. First of all, we lost the General Election not because of our arguments in relation to LNG; we lost the General Election 890 because I was the Jeremiad and he was Father Christmas, (A Member: Hear, hear.) and when there is a political battle between a Jeremiad and Father Christmas, Father Christmas always wins hands down.

895 Hon. Chief Minister: Hope always.

Hon. D A Feetham: Absolutely. Hope always trumps the warnings on this side of the House that we were spending too much, that our public debt was far too high, and of course whilst he was offering people jobs I was saying let's watch the culture of entitlement. That is what cost us the General Election, that I was the Jeremiad and he was Father Christmas.

900 In relation to the substance of this Bill, and adding to what the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has said, this is a Bill that allows for the licensing of bunkering in LNG. That is what we are dealing with now. I have always understood that the tanks that are attached to the power station are not going to be large enough in order to undertake bunkering activities in the quantities that are going to make it commercially attractive to anybody, because my 905 understanding is that those tanks will only keep the power station supplied with LNG –

Hon. G H Licudi: Will the hon. Member give way?

910 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, of course.

Hon. G H Licudi: Just so that he does not necessarily go up a different path which this Bill is not about, this Bill is about ship-to-ship bunkering, not bunkering from – 915 A Member: Nothing to do with that.

Hon. G H Licudi: – the power station or the tanks in the power station.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I accept that.

920 Hon. G H Licudi: This is ship-to-ship, power station, nothing to do with those tanks.

Hon. D A Feetham: But I am responding to the points that the Hon. the Chief Minister made. The Hon. the Chief Minister was talking about the tanks and the dangers associated with the LNG in the tanks. That is nothing to do with bunkering, the LNG in the tanks, because the LNG in the tanks ... have never been large enough in order to keep the power station supplied for longer, I think it was, if it is going to be working full pelt, longer than two or three weeks. 925

What does that mean? That means therefore that you have either got to have tanks that are large enough onshore – Hang on a minute. I understand what the Bill is about, but let me

930 explain. If the tanks attached to the power station are not large enough to supply the power station for longer than two or three weeks, the capacity of those tanks, you then need to have large enough tanks onshore or you need to have a ship that stores LNG that can then, of course, supply the power station. What you cannot have is a situation where there are ships coming into Gibraltar in order to supply the tanks associated with the power station every three weeks. It would become uneconomical; it would be an absolute nonsense. So you need to have some kind 935 of storage facility. What the Government has done is it has chosen to have that storage facility on a ship, not onshore, which was the argument that we were having at the last General Election. It has chosen to say, 'Right, okay, what we're going to have is a floating tanker of LNG and from there we might then have bunkering facilities in relation to LNG, much in fact as we have now in relation to diesel,' which is what happens today in relation to diesel.

940 Our view in relation to that is that the Government does not have all its ducks in a row. We do not understand the safety aspects of that. We do not understand how that can be done safely in order for us to then say we are happy supporting legislation that is intended to introduce that type of activity. That is why we have taken the position.

I started with a jest. The reason why the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has taken the 945 position of saying we are going to be abstaining is because he is giving the Government an opportunity to at some stage demonstrate that it can be done safely and in a way that would satisfy us that all the safety aspects have been taken into account and that risks have been minimised to acceptable levels – you are never going to have risk free with this or any other type of activity of this sort. That is why we were abstaining and that is why we have taken the 950 position that we have taken. It is a position based on principle. It is a position that is completely commensurate and consistent with the position that we took at the last General Election.

Mr Speaker, may I finish by saying this. May I congratulate my friend Mr Hammond for even being on top of his brief on his honeymoon with his wife (A Member: Hear, hear.) in India. That shows the commitment of Members on this side of the House to the people of Gibraltar.

955

Hon. Chief Minister: May I ask the hon. Gentleman to give way?

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, of course.

960 Hon. Chief Minister: Just to make clear that that is the position that the Government is taking not in respect of his work but in respect of the fact that he is in India getting married, and that what I am trying to convey is the House's congratulations to him in respect of those nuptials and that he should be spending more time in his briefs than on his briefs at this happy time.
(Laughter and interjections)

965

Mr Speaker: I am wondering whether the amount of pollution in Indian cities might have jogged his mind as regards air quality in Gibraltar.

The Hon. Roy Clinton.

970 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

May I advise the Chief Minister to exercise some care when he uses the term 'Luddites'.
 Especially when in his attempt to denigrate the Opposition, he is also denigrating the Environmental Safety Group, who have expressed concerns about bunkering of this nature in the past, and in fact in the recent past. Their concern was that the ship bunkering would perhaps be 975 coming from the existing tanks, which the Government were very quick to point out that no, that would not be the case. But the environmental safety group obviously have a watching brief as to how LNG bunkering operations will be undertaken in Gibraltar.

As the Chief Minister is very fond of referring back to the General Election, I remember that General Election with fondness too, particularly the debate I had with Sir Joe Bossano in which, 980 when he was discussing the LNG plant in Gibraltar, he was very honest with the public in saying,

'Well, look, Shell wouldn't be here just to supply the power station; Shell is here to do bunkering, of course.' Then what happened was the Government spent the next two weeks saying, 'No, Mr Bossano didn't really mean to say that; no, there won't be any bunkering.'

985 Hon. Chief Minister: That's not what happened.

Hon. R M Clinton: In fact, that was always the intention. What is interesting is that on 26th August 2016 the Government of Gibraltar and the Port Authority signed the Bunker Market Development Agreement with Shell following an earlier agreement for the supply of LNG for use 990 in the power generation in Gibraltar. So, Sir Joe Bossano, as we all know, never lies. (Interjection)
The development of the bunker market, according to the report ... It says:

The joint LNG bunker market development project will be subject to the Government's policy of going through stringent environmental processes and studies, including environmental impacts assessments and control of major accident hazards procedures. Shell has committed to carry out a joint development study by 1st January 2018 which will deal with the regulatory framework, safety and technical standards, without which the project cannot proceed.

So I ask, Mr Speaker: the Government comes to the House with legislation to license and allow LNG bunkering, but we are none the wiser as to the safety and the relevant criteria surrounding such procedures. I would have thought, if Shell has produced such a report, that 995 report should be published and then we in this House would be in a much better informed position upon what view to take on this legislation. And it is important legislation because frankly this is something which is of public interest. And the Environmental Safety Group would like to know how it is that the Government intends to go about doing this and what safety measures will be in place. At the moment, as far as I am aware – I am happy to be corrected –
1000 nothing has been published.

And so, Mr Speaker, we take this very seriously on this side of this House, and I would hope the Government takes their responsibility seriously to provide the information that will no doubt be required from non-governmental organisations such as the Environmental Safety Group, who would like to know how this sort of operation is going to be conducted, in what kind of volumes, 1005 what is the scale of operation. Are we talking about one big LNG tanker, two, three, ten? What is the scale of operation and to what extent is this economically viable? We do not know, but we are being asked in this House to pass legislation completely blind and I do not think that is acceptable, Mr Speaker. And frankly, I may even follow the Chief Minister's advice and vote against, (Hon. Chief Minister: You should.) as Mr Feetham.

1010 And talking about fish, there is a very good Greek saying that when a fish rots it usually rots to the head, and we see that here today, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desk)

Mr Speaker: Is there anybody else who wishes to contribute to the ...? The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.
1015

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I would like to echo the words of the Hon. Mr Clinton, in that I feel like it is our duty on this side of the House to ask the Hon. Ministers opposite whether they have worked alongside environmental groups and stakeholders on environmental matters, whether there have been proper consultation processes undertaken in 1020 the run up to drafting this Bill. Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Finally, then, I call on the mover to reply. The Hon. Gilbert Licudi.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, let me just touch on, briefly, one of the last points that the Hon. Mr Clinton mentioned, which is this issue of no consultation, being asked to do something blind, and the Hon. Mr Phillips, which has in part been answered by the Chief Minister, about not 1025 holding out to them once the Bill was published. Well, the Bill was published on 4th October 2018. That is over two months ago. If the Opposition had any concerns in relation to that Bill, if the Opposition wanted any clarification, if they wanted any assurances, what is wrong with the 1030 Opposition reaching out to us and saying, 'You've published this Bill – can we have these clarifications, these reassurances, so that we can make a better informed decision?' If they wanted information which they did not have, they could certainly have called us.

As far as publishing legislation blind and this process of consultation, which the hon. Lady has also mentioned, the reality is we did not have to be here today. I did not have to make an amendment for LNG bunkering. We have a Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) Act 1035 which provides for bunkering. It does not say you need this type of licence for oil bunkering, this type of licence for gas oil or petroleum-based bunkering, this type of licence for LNG bunkering. It is generic. So there is the power already to provide licensing, codes of practice, conditions for energy bunkering in Gibraltar already. That exists because we have the power under the Act today to give bunkering licence on generic terms and each bunker licence can say, 'We know 1040 that you're applying for a bunkering licence for this type of bunkering – gas oil bunkering, or petroleum-based bunkering, or LNG bunkering – and the conditions which are attached to that type of bunkering are this.'

We could have done that, and yet we have chosen to change the legislation, come to this Parliament, debate this matter in Parliament and give the Opposition the opportunity of airing 1045 their views, which they are quite rightly entitled to. This is not a criticism of the view they are taking, necessarily; this as an explanation of the process that we have undergone and it is precisely because this is a matter of interest generally that we have chosen this particular process, this particular form of coming to the Act with a relatively simple amendment, quite apart from a number of definitions of port operations, which I will come to in a moment, but a 1050 relatively simple amendment which simply seeks to differentiate between the different types of bunkering, a differentiation which we simply did not have to do, but we have done it. In the interests of the public, in the interests of transparency, in the interests of having any concerns aired in public, we have done it.

The reality is that it is not the Government that has decided to introduce LNG bunkering to 1055 ships – or rather LNG propulsion, not energy bunkering. It is not the Government that has decided to introduce LNG propulsion to ships. That is a matter for owners. So what are we to do? Are we just to ignore that? Are we to ignore that that is now becoming a fuel that owners are interested in? Or are we to act responsibly and introduce measures for that type of fuel to be available in Gibraltar alongside other types of fuel which we already do – yes, I will do so in a 1060 minute – and to do so in a regulated and safe environment. I will come to that in a moment, but that is, in my view, the responsible way for us to proceed.

I will give way to the Hon. Mr Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am very grateful to the hon. Gentleman because I know that it is difficult 1065 sometimes giving way when you are in the middle of a reply.

I can understand the argument that fleets are moving slowly but they are moving towards LNG propulsion, but actually the imperative of having LNG bunkering does not come from that and I would just like him to confirm this or comment on this. The imperative for offering LNG bunkering does not come from fleets moving to propulsion. The imperative comes from the fact 1070 that if you do not offer LNG bunkering it is not possible to then have an LNG power station, because the tanks that are supplying the LNG power station only have enough space for two or three weeks. It means that if you wanted to effectively keep those tanks filled with LNG, you would have to have a ship coming into Gibraltar every three weeks, which is nonsense. The cost of that would be prohibitive.

1075 So how do you deal with that? You deal with that by basically offering commercial bunkering of LNG, and that is how it becomes ... So, effectively, it must have been in the Government's plans at the point at which it considered to build a power station that was LNG driven to basically effectively also provide LNG bunkering, because at a very early juncture it must have been clear that it would not be economically viable. Indeed, it was a point that the Hon. the Chief Minister made when we were having a general debate on GBC and this issue came up, and that was an explanation that he himself provided in 2014. Therefore it cannot be right that this is now motivated or moved by the fact that there are fleets that are moving towards LNG. This was pre-planned from the very beginning, because otherwise your LNG power station cannot be run economically.

1085 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, let me just deal with that particular point before we move to the rest of the reply. The hon. Member talks of the imperative of the LNG bunkering essentially being driven by the need for the supply to the power station. Let me say to the hon. Member that LNG bunkering was coming in any event. The fact that we are opening a power station which is powered by LNG fuel may have precipitated or brought forward what we are doing in respect to ship-to-ship bunkering to coincide in terms of timing, but LNG bunkering is coming anyway and is not necessarily driven by that, although clearly that has been a factor in the planning for this particular Bill and to have it ready at this particular time.

1090 The hon. Member says in respect of the tanks and the LNG power station you would need a ship coming every three weeks and that is prohibitive. Well, the ship is actually coming every two weeks in order to supply LNG to that power station, but that power station has tanks which are dedicated, exclusive to the power station. I know the hon. Member accepts that and recognises that that is the case, that there is that distinction, but I am mindful that the Hon. Mr Clinton also mentioned comments made by the Environmental Safety Group recently and those comments were specifically expressing concerns about LNG bunkering taking place from those tanks. We made it clear that that was just based on a misapprehension, was a misunderstanding as to ... I think it arose following an interview I gave to GBC and the impression may have been given, even though I have seen what I said then and I certainly was not alluding to that but it was misunderstood as bunkering will take place from the tanks at the power station, and that was the concern that was expressed by the ESG.

1105 I just want to make it absolutely clear today, as we have already done, that the power station is one thing powered by LNG. That has nothing to do with the ship-to-ship bunkering which this Bill is concerned about. No bunkering to ships will take place from the tanks. There will be supply to those tanks from a ship, obviously, which will come in every couple of weeks, but there will be no supply to other ships on a commercial basis of LNG fuel from those tanks. That is absolutely clear.

1110 I was dealing with the point about LNG propulsion, ships ... I would not say it is becoming the norm, I would not go as far as that; it is becoming more popular. It is going to take time. It has been around for many years as a technology and used by many ships and it will take many years, I expect, before LNG propulsion in ships takes over as a fuel. It will take still a few years.

1115 The question I posed is given that that is happening and owners are taking the decision to introduce LNG propulsion to ships – in two ways, as I mentioned in my speaking notes when I introduced the Bill: firstly by ordering ships which are LNG fuel propelled; or by retrofitting, as we are seeing, and we have already got one of the customers of Gibdock having brought a ferry to Gibraltar in order to carry out that conversion of retrofitting to LNG fuel, so that is coming, that is a reality, that is a fact of life – what should we do in Gibraltar? Should we turn business away, or should we do things properly in order to have a regulated and safe environment for that business to be able to take place in Gibraltar? We have chosen the latter. Hon. Members may have done something different. By abstaining, or perhaps now even voting against, they 1125 may suggest that the business should be turned away from Gibraltar. We believe in business in Gibraltar. We believe in our economy. We believe in the creation of jobs. I hope that the hon. Members do too and find a way of supporting this, because it does have an effect on jobs and our economy.

1130 Gibraltar is a major bunkering port in the Mediterranean with an excellent reputation and what LNG bunkering will do is simply add one more strand in the activities that we carry out, in the services that we provide for the maritime industry. And it is not just bunkering companies that benefit from this. There is a whole range, a whole raft of companies. A whole industry is based around this. Ship agents clearly benefit because every ship has an agent in Gibraltar, every ship that comes into Gibraltar. Ship chandlers benefit. Supplies of provisions to ships benefit. 1135 Those who carry out crew changes benefit. Those who sell lubricating oils to ships – quite apart from fuel – benefit. Why? Because all of that industry revolves around what we do in Gibraltar in relation to bunkering. We do not have a ship, because simply it would not be cost effective for an owner to send a ship to Gibraltar simply to carry out a crew change, or simply to take lubricating oils, or simply to take a few packets of cornflakes. A lot of these ships come to 1140 Gibraltar to carry out bunkering, to take bunkers and then also carry out the crew changes, take supplies, take provisions, take oils.

1145 What does all that do? It creates employment in the industry. It creates economic activity. It would be irresponsible for the Government to look the other way, to turn any of this business away. We have to be aware of what is going on in the world. We have to embrace this. But I absolutely agree it has to be done properly, it has been done safely and it has to be done in a regulated manner, and that is why I said, when I spoke on moving the Bill, that what we are doing today by introducing these amendments ... These are just a part of a series of measures. There will be some amendments to the Port Rules and crucially, as I mentioned, there will be an LNG bunker code of practice – that is what will define the safety standards – and the code of 1150 practice will itself lead to the licence conditions, as to what an LNG bunkering company has to do and the standards that have to be applied.

1155 That code of practice, which will accompany the legislation before an LNG bunker licence is given, clearly has been subject to hazard identification assessments and workshops with a view to enable safe ship-to-ship bunkering in Gibraltar, and what those assessments and those workshops have done is improve the framework with a series of recommendations which have all been accepted and will all be incorporated either through changes in the Port Rules or in the code of practice itself. Ultimately what it leads to is the Captain of the Port and the Government being satisfied that risks are mitigated as far as reasonably practicable so that we can undertake in Gibraltar this line of business in an efficient and safe manner. The Government is certainly 1160 satisfied that that is the case.

Mr Speaker, I just end my response with a comment. I believe it was Mr Phillips who mentioned the other activities – I will give way to Mr Phillips.

1165 Hon. E J Phillips: I am very grateful to the Minister for giving way. He did speak at length to the commercial viability of LNG and how we as a community should be moving towards, as the other jurisdictions are moving towards, LNG as a sustainable fuel. In that context, has the Minister given consideration to the Marple IMO 2020 report, which suggests that very low sulphur fuels, an alternative, is the way forward for the future and how, in that context, if that is 1170 the future there seems to be an overreliance on this question of LNG given the fact that between 3% and 6%, it is suggested, will be on heavy fuels and that there will be a huge sway by the world fleet towards very low sulphur fuels rather than LNG? If that is the case, will the Minister clarify how that resonates with him in terms of the commercial rationale for this?

1175 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I did mention previously that, quite apart from LNG being a greener technology, part of the drive around this from a worldwide basis is what I termed earlier the ever-tightening emissions regulations, and that is happening to shipping generally.

1180 The IMO 2020 reduction in sulphur provision is precisely one of these provisions. Clearly we are very alive and very aware of the provisions of that and ship owners are aware and alive. That is a set of regulations which will be implemented in Gibraltar and adhered to in Gibraltar in any form of bunkering. That is something that we have clearly considered – not in the context of LNG bunkering, because what LNG does is remove, from a green technology point of view, remove many of the damaging particles that are emitted. That is why it is greener technology, but a lot of the particles that are emitted to the environment as part of normal bunkering activities are actually eliminated with LNG, so it is safer, it is a better fuel, but it has to be done safely and that 1185 is what I addressed earlier in terms of the hazard identification assessment and the recommendations which have all been accepted and which will all form part of the the code of practice.

I was going to end by mentioning the list of port operations that are included in this Bill which the Hon. Member Mr Phillips, the Leader of the Opposition, alluded to, which includes 1190 commercial diving, which was not in the previous list. The current Act provides a definition of port operations which says ‘includes engaging in the following activities’ and the current Act has six activities. There are other activities which are not specifically defined but are being carried out in Gibraltar, so what we are doing here is more specifically defining the type of activities that are already occurring in Gibraltar under the existing Act. So nothing is changing; we are just 1195 creating more specificity, or updating the definition, taking advantage of the fact that we are amending the Act in the first place because the definition of ‘port operations’ says it includes all of this and any other industrial or commercial operation etc., which is also part of the existing definition, which is why those other activities are being carried out today. So it is an inclusive and not a definitive definition.

1200 Mr Speaker, with that and everything that has been said today and the satisfaction of the Government in moving forward in this direction, I once again commend the Bill to the House.
(Banging on desks)

1205 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I call a division of the House.

Mr Speaker: Very well – a Bill for an Act to amend the Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) Act 2005 be read a second time.

1210 Will you please call the division.

Clerk: P J Balban. (Hon. P J Balban: Aye.) R M Clinton (Hon. R M Clinton: Abstain.) J E Cortes.
(Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Aye.) D A Feetham.

1215 Hon. D A Feetham: Despite how persuasive the Chief Minister was, I am also going to be abstaining – not to break the habit of the past to disagree with him.

Clerk: J J Garcia. (Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Yes.) M D Hassan Nahon. (Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon:
Yes.) (Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear.) A J Isola. (Hon. A J Isola: Aye.) G H Licudi. (Hon. G H

Reyes: Abstain.)

Clerk: The Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) (Amendment) Act 2018.

Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I beg to move that the Committee Stage of the Bill be taken later today, if all hon. Members agree.

1230

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of this Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Gambling (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Gambling Act 2005. The Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

1235

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that an Act to amend the Gambling Act 2005 be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Gambling Act 2005 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

1240

Clerk: The Gambling (Amendment) Act 2017.

Gambling (Amendment) Bill 2017 –
Second Reading approved

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

This Bill amends the Gambling Act to insert a provision of the industries canvassed which I am happy to accommodate.

1245 Clause 3 of the Bill inserts a new section 23A and achieves two things. In the first instance, it requires that certain payments be made to registered players; and secondly, it requires that a licensee maintains adequate financing to make those payments.

1250 Following a change to the VAT regime in the European Union there is a question mark over the basis on which to apply VAT to online gaming services. The amendment would ensure that it is clear to other tax authorities that there is an explicit statutory requirement to return the winnings to players and thereby helps strengthen the argument that VAT should be applied on a gross gaming revenue basis as opposed to being applied on all stakes.

Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House.

1255 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill? No.

I then put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Gambling Act 2005 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

1260 Clerk: The Gambling (Amendment) Act 2017.

Gambling (Amendment) Act 2017 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading will be taken later today, if all hon. Members agree.

1265 Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

1270 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should now dissolve itself into Committee to consider the following Bills clause by clause: the Terrorism Bill 2018, the Animals in Travelling Circuses Bill 2018, the Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) (Amendment) Bill 2018, the Gambling (Amendment) Bill 2017, the Mutual Legal Assistance (Council of Europe) Bill 2018 and the Extradition Bill 2018.

Mr Speaker: Before we proceed with the Terrorism Bill, there was an indication during the Second Reading of the Bill of a possible amendment to section 71.

1275 Hon. Chief Minister: We are not in Committee yet, so I will stand up, Mr Speaker. Yes, I have got something to propose to the hon. and learned Gentlemen opposite. I do not know whether Mr Speaker would want to recess –

Mr Speaker: A 10-minute recess?

1280 Hon. Chief Minister: – for 15 minutes for an opportunity for us to discuss that. (Mr Speaker: Yes.) Before we go into Committee or after we go into Committee? Whatever the Clerk and you prefer.

1285 Mr Speaker: We will move into Committee and then recess for 10 or 15 minutes.

In Committee of the whole House

1290 Mr Chairman: The Committee will now recess for 10 minutes.

The House recessed at 5.14 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.24 p.m.

Terrorism Bill 2018 –
Clauses considered and approved with amendments

1295 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to make provision about terrorism offences, to make provision for the proscribing of organisations, to provide for orders for the freezing and forfeiture of terrorist property and funds, to provide for the investigation of terrorist offences and provide investigation measures, to make provision in connection with overseas terrorism, to repeal and replace the Terrorism Act 2005 and for connected purposes.

Part 1, clauses 1 and 2.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1300 Clerk: Part 2, clauses 6 and 7.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 8 as amended.

1305

Mr Chairman: There is an amendment that has been circulated by the Chief Minister. Are all hon. Members in favour of inserting that amendment? Carried.

1310 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the letter can be taken as read and accepted by the Opposition, the amendments.

Mr Chairman: So, clause 8 as amended stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 9.

1315

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 10 as amended.

1320 Mr Chairman: Again, an amendment has been circulated. Unless there is any objection, I take it that the Opposition are in favour, are quite happy.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, rather than stop every single time, Mr Speaker can take it that the Opposition has read –

1325

Mr Chairman: Unless hon. Members indicate that –

Hon. D A Feetham: Unless we indicate otherwise.

1330 Mr Chairman: Very well. So, clause 10 as amended stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 11.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1335

Clerk: Part 3, clauses 12 to 16.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1340

1350

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 5, clauses 62 to 70.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1355

Clerk: Part 6, clauses 71 to 73.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 74 as amended.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have circulated a moment ago – in addition to the amendment I had circulated earlier – after a discussion between myself and the Hon. Mr Feetham, the amendment that we propose should be made to section 74, both in subsection (1) and in subsection (2), to limit the types of criminal conduct that would be in scope for the purposes of the application of this Part.

1365 That, I think, is quite clear from what I have circulated. In effect, the definition of criminal conduct is explicitly made clear to be relating to or otherwise connected to terrorism. There are two times when that appears in the definition of ‘criminal investigation’. In fact, what I have 1370 circulated says ‘in the definition of Criminal Conduct’ but it is ‘in the definition of Criminal Investigation’, I see.

And then in 74(2) at the very end also add the words ‘relating to or otherwise connected to terrorism’.

1375 There is one other minor amendment which we discussed, which I have not put in this sheet, which is to include the word ‘such’ also. So, in the definition of ‘criminal investigation’ when you are in the third line, ‘an investigation of whether such criminal conduct has taken place’, so that it is clear that it relates back to the term ‘criminal conduct’ as we have proposed to amend it. Have you got that?

1380 Mr Speaker: I will now put the amendment moved by the Chief Minister to section 74. All those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried. Clause 74 as amended stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 7, clauses 75 to 83.

1385

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 8, clauses 84 to 99.

1390

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 100 as amended.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1395

Clerk: Clauses 106 and 107.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 9, clauses 108 to 133.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1410

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 11, clauses 141 to 151.

1440

Clauses 1 to 11.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

1445

Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Yes?

1450

Hon. R M Clinton: A very minor point: just the heading on clause 8, 'Stopping and' I think it should be 'detaining vehicles' rather than 'detailing vehicles', so a minor typo, which I think I had mentioned to the Hon. Minister some time ago.

1455

Mr Chairman: Yes, there is a typographical error, 'Stopping and detailing vehicles' should be 'Stopping and detaining vehicles'. We take it that it is a typographical error. There is no need to move an amendment.

Have you moved the long title? No.

Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 4, clause 5.

1500 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 5, clause 10.

1505 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Part 6, clauses 11 to 17.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Extradition Bill 2018,
Gambling (Amendment) Bill 2018 and
Port Operations (Registration and Licensing) (Amendment) Bill 2018 –
Third Readings approved: Bills passed

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the Terrorism Bill 2018, the Animals in Travelling Circuses Bill 2018, the Mutual Legal Assistance (Council of Europe) Bill 2018, the Extradition Bill 2018 and the Gambling (Amendment) Bill 2018 have been considered in Committee and agreed to with some amendments, and I now move that they be read a third time and passed.

Mr Speaker: I will now put these five Bills as a package and then we will proceed with the last one.

I now put the question, which is that the Terrorism Bill 2018, the Animals in Travelling Circuses Bill 2018, the Mutual Legal Assistance (Council of Europe) Bill 2018, the Extradition Bill 2018 and the Gambling (Amendment) Bill 2018 be read a third time and passed. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

1545 Hon. Chief Minister: I move that the House divide, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: You do not wish to have ...? There is a Bill ...

Hon. Chief Minister: Sorry, have you put the Port Operations ...?

1550

Mr Speaker: The Port Operations Bill separately – division?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, that is why I moved that the House should divide now when you are going to put it.

1555

Mr Speaker: Very well, yes. A division will now be taken on the Port Operations Bill.

Clerk: P J Balban. (Hon. P J Balban: Aye.) R M Clinton (Hon. R M Clinton: Abstain.) J E Cortes. (Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Aye.) D A Feetham. (Hon. D A Feetham: Abstain.) J J Garcia. 1560

Hon. Chief Minister: I think it is our duty always to decide, Mr Speaker. Aye.

1565

Clerk: E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: I abstain, Mr Speaker.

Voting resulted as follows:

FOR	AGAINST	ABSTAIN	ABSENT
Hon. P J Balban	None	Hon. R M Clinton	Hon. Sir J J Bossano
Hon. Dr J E Cortes		Hon. D A Feetham	Hon. N F Costa
Hon. Dr J J Garcia		Hon. L F Llamas	Hon. T N Hammond
Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon		Hon. E J Phillips	Hon. Miss S J Sacramento
Hon. A J Isola		Hon. E J Reyes
Hon. G H Licudi
Hon. S E Linares
Hon. F R Picardo

1570 Mr Speaker: There are four Members absent, 8 have voted in favour, 5 have voted against. Therefore, the Bill has received a Third Reading and is carried.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, you said they voted against; it was an abstention, no?

1575 Mr Speaker: Did I say that? Let's clarify that. There are 8 votes in favour, five abstentions – my apologies – and four Members are absent, so the Third Reading has been carried by majority and therefore I put that it be read a third time and carried.

Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, having dealt with considerable legislative business today, I move that the House should now adjourn to next Thursday at 10 a.m.

1580 I can tell hon. Members that it is the intention of the Government to then be able to deal with all questions still outstanding. I hope to be able to conclude the session with all questions dealt with by the end of Friday at the latest, so that we can adjourn sine die and start next year afresh, conscious of the fact that we have banned the travelling animals but that we can bring on the clowns next Thursday at 10 a.m.

1585 Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn to next Thursday, 20th December at 10 in the morning, when we shall be going into Question Time.

The House adjourned at 5.51 p.m.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table a Command Paper on a draft Bill to make provision for offences relating to the sale of energy drinks, and to provide for the enforcement of those offences, and for connected purposes.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Questions for Oral Answer

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Q467/2018

Car parks –

Consideration given to building north of runway

30 Acting Clerk: Question 467. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, has Government given any further consideration to building car parks north of the runway in the vicinity of the Frontier?

35 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, yes, the development of the old air terminal site is envisaged to include car parking.

40 Hon. E J Phillips: Just one further question, Mr Speaker: when is it envisaged that those plans will take place or any work will be taking place in relation to that site?

45 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the position is that that site went out to expressions of interest a few years ago. The Government had discussions with interested parties and it was all put on hold because of the relocations we needed to carry out as a result of the 2011 Lands Agreement between the Gibraltar Government and the MoD. That is why that has not progressed. Once those relocations are all in their permanent sites, we will then be able to progress with that development.

50 Hon. E J Phillips: Does the Chief Minister have any view as to how many parking spaces will be provided as a result of such project?

55 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): It is not something I was actually dealing with; it was something that the Deputy Chief Minister was dealing with, Mr Speaker, but I think the expressions of interest provided varied amounts depending on the submission of how many parking spaces were to be provided.

60 I confess, Mr Speaker, I did not quite expect to be pressed in respect of a development project given that hon. Members spend most of their time in press releases telling us that we are doing too much too quickly, but I will assume that this is just the typical say one thing today, do another thing tomorrow.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Acting Clerk: Question 468 –

65 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, we have not had an answer to that specific question that we raised, and we really need an answer after the jibes.

Hon. Chief Minister: To what specific question, Mr Speaker?

70 Hon. E J Phillips: How many spaces are envisaged to be placed at the site in question?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I recommend an ear syringing to the hon. Gentleman. I started by telling him that different numbers of parking spaces were proposed in the different numbers of projects which were submitted. But he has not given notice of that question; and if 75 he did, he would be asking us a question not about anything that we have done but about proposals that have been put to us by third parties, which are not yet Government projects because they have not yet been awarded.

80 It was the first thing I said when I got up to answer him. I do not know whether he just gets so nervous when he sees me get up to answer him that for the first few moments he is not able to hear what I say, but if he calms down and listens he will not have to ask me to stand up again to repeat the same thing.

Q468/2018
Four Corners site –
Date for handover to MoD

Mr Speaker: Question 468.

85 Acting Clerk: The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. E J Phillips: When does Government expect to hand over the Four Corners site currently under construction to the MoD?

90 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the construction of the accommodation units for the MoD at Four Corners will all be completed by February 2019. The handover will, however, be undertaken in three phases, with the first set of blocks having already been handed over in early November 2018 and the second set handed over in late 95 November 2018. The third and final set of blocks, although programmed for completion by February 2019, will be handed over once the MoD infrastructure works within Four Corners are completed in April 2019.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q469/2018
Nuffield pool –
Plans after handover of Four Corners site

100 Acting Clerk: Question 469. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. E J Phillips: Reference the Nuffield pool, in their 2015 manifesto Government say that on completion and handover of the Four Corners site a pool will be open to the public. Will that be the current Nuffield pool or something else?

105

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the policy of the Government remains to provide a pool at the site of the Nuffield pool. No decision has yet been taken on whether it will be the existing pool or a new facility. Expressions of interest have been invited in respect of the current facility to allow us to gauge interest in the operation thereof.

Q470/2018
Parliament building –
Provision of lift

110 Acting Clerk: Question 470. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. E J Phillips: Is Government still intending to provide a lift for the Parliament building; and if so, when is the project likely to proceed?

115 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, yes. The cost of the project is now being updated before it proceeds.

120 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q471/2018
Bayside, St Anne's and St Martin's Schools –
Details of successful developer and premium offered

Acting Clerk: Question 471. The Hon. R M Clinton.

125 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you. Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it has identified a preferred tender for the site of Bayside, St Anne's and St Martin's Schools; and if so, who is the successful developer and what premium has been offered?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

130 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the plot at St Martin's will become an open area. No decision has yet been taken in respect of the plots at St Anne's and Bayside.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer. Can he give the House an indication as to when a decision might be made on the award of any tender in respect of Bayside and St Anne's?

135

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is very difficult to provide an indication as to the timescale. Bear in mind that the schools at St Anne's and Bayside are still under construction, so there is not that degree of urgency at the moment for the Government to arrive at a decision at all on the tender.

140

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, in 2015 in the Government's manifesto the Government had envisaged relocating possibly St Bernadette's or Dr Giraldi Home to the current St Martin's School once it was vacated. Seeing that is going to become an open area, could the Government provide some details as to what their plans are with regard to St Bernadette's and Dr Giraldi, if any?

145

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the Government are looking at a different site for that but I am not in a position to actually say what site that would be.

150

Mr Speaker: Next question.

INFRASTRUCTURE AND PLANNING

Q472/2018

Glacis Road temporary roundabout – Plans to make permanent

Acting Clerk: Question 472. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, considering the so-called temporary roundabout on Glacis Road has been there for three years, when does the Government foresee that it will be made permanent?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the roundabout will be made permanent once Ocean Spa Plaza development is completed, as previously explained to the hon. Member in answer to Question 62/2016.

Q473/2018

Vehicles registered in Gibraltar – Breakdown by fuel type

Acting Clerk: Question 473. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. T N Hammond.

160

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, of all vehicles registered in Gibraltar, how many are petrol, diesel, hybrid and fully electric as of 1st June 2017 and 1st June 2018?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

165 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, 1,957 petrol, 779 diesel, 62 hybrids and six electric vehicles have been registered in Gibraltar between 1st June 2017 and 1st June 2018.

Acting Clerk: Question 474.

170

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, insofar as the answer that we were seeking, of all vehicles registered in Gibraltar how many are petrol, diesel, hybrid and fully electric as of 1st of June, not in relation to those that have just been registered in that year.

175

Mr Speaker: As I read the question the Hon. Minister has not been asked about how many vehicles have been registered between 1st June 2017 and 1st June 2018. That is not the original question. If he does not have the information because it has been misread, I think the answer is to defer the question and it can be answered subsequently.

180

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I think the Government has interpreted this question as meaning in the period, but I can perfectly see why hon. Members think that they asked up to the period and thereafter in the second period. I think even during the course of this session it should be possible ... I do not know whether the Department has that information easily available, but I think during the course of the session we can come back and indicate whether we can give that figure now as the total number registered as at that date.

185

Mr Speaker: The information that is required is how many were of each category as of 1st June 2017, because then if you add the numbers given by the Minister to those figures you arrive at 2018. Okay?

190

Let's move on to the next question.

Q474/2018
MoT testing – Emissions testing

Acting Clerk: Question 474. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. T N Hammond.

195

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, how many vehicles, while undergoing MoT testing, have failed their emissions test since 1st October 2017; and has every vehicle undergoing an MoT test during that same period undergone emissions testing?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

200

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, further to my answer to Question 581/2017, and as already set out in Hansard, the Department has never kept statistics of specific vehicle faults which have led to vehicles failing a roadworthiness test. As already set out, it would be a very laborious task to keep these sorts of statistics, requiring further extra human resources. Hence my reply remains the same.

205

Furthermore, and as previously explained, under the Motor Vehicle Test (Amendment) Regulations 2017 it is compulsory for all vehicles to have their emissions checked when undergoing their roadworthiness tests.

Hon. E J Phillips: Does the Hon. Minister agree with me that we should, and hopefully within the resources we have, be able to monitor those vehicles that are failing emission tests? This 210 Government has a commitment to the environment and I would have thought that it would be easy just to record the number of vehicles being tested and vehicles failing those emission tests.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, no, in fact it is not simple. What happens is when a vehicle fails its roadworthiness test it fails for a number of different reasons. It does not have to necessarily 215 be one reason; it could be a multitude of reasons. It all goes down on a manual form and that is filed per vehicle, and for us to be able to actually ... The whole system is not computerised, whereby it would be easy to just press a button to see exactly how many cars on that date were failed because of x reason, y reason or z reason. It is literally impossible to go through per file to 220 see exactly whether a vehicle has failed exclusively because of emissions or whether it has failed its emissions apart from other reasons. Normally, as cars age there are a number of reasons why they could fail, but there have been also cases where a vehicle has just failed because of their emissions and nothing else.

Hon. E J Phillips: So, am I right in concluding then that the Government, your Department, 225 has no idea, effectively, of the number of cars on our roads that are polluting our air with these harmful emissions?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Yes, Mr Speaker, that is absolutely right. The Department that we inherited from them had absolutely no idea of what emissions there were and it still is 230 not able to provide at the press of a button the information that they appeared not to be interested in when they were in Government and they are seeking now from Opposition.

Hon. E J Phillips: Therefore, Mr Speaker, my question is: given the fact that the Government has no intention of changing what they say we did badly in the first place, they will continue in 235 the same vein of polluting our streets with these dangerous and harmful emissions?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, that is not what we have said. It is not even a logical, fair or clever extrapolation of what I indicated, because what we are talking about is vehicles having to pass their MoT tests in order not to be on our roads.

240 I do not know whether he is just trying to set himself up to be diagnostic in the ability to see vehicles and determine whether they are polluting, because that is apparently what he is suggesting he should be able to do if we were able to give him the answers, but this is not in any way going to assist the environmental objectives. If it did, Mr Speaker, it is very likely that it would have been implemented either by them or by us. This is not a question of, I assume, any 245 of us having a disagreement as to, if something is a worthy measure, not pursuing it. It is just not seen as something which can assist in any material respect.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q475/2018
Electric scooters –
Clarification of legal status

Acting Clerk: Question 475. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. T N Hammond.
250

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, does Government intend to clarify the legal status of electric scooters as may pertain to the Traffic Act 2005 or any other appropriate legislation?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

255 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member may be aware, Government has been working in consultation with the RGP, HM Customs and Gibraltar Law Officers to see how best to deal with these novel means of personal transportation.

I would refer the hon. Member to Press Release No. 763/2018 issued last week, which is self-explanatory.

260 Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman may appreciate, this matter is not one that is unique to Gibraltar. In fact, these novel electric personal transporters have for some time now been increasing in number throughout cities in the UK and other parts of Europe, and therefore we are keeping a watchful eye on how other jurisdictions deal with these with a view to perhaps taking on board their findings and relevant actions.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, whilst I appreciate that the Government is keeping an eye on developments in other jurisdictions in relation to electric scooters, I do receive many comments, sometimes positive ones and others negative, in relation to electric scooters particularly in areas where there is heavy pedestrian traffic and vehicular traffic. The general comment that I get from people who approach me is that they are dangerous insofar as most of the people on these scooters effectively are navigating through quite congested streets. One of the reasons I believe my hon. Friend Mr Hammond asked this question was because of those concerns over public safety on our streets and the volume of pedestrian and vehicular traffic combined with electric scooters.

275 I would be grateful if the Government could clarify when it intends to complete this analysis of other jurisdictions and their use of electric scooters and legislation, to give us a bit more information so we can communicate that to the public.

280 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, it is for this very reason that we have engaged this consultation process with the RGP and other interested parties, for example Customs, as I have mentioned, and the Law Officers.

It is not necessarily the instrument itself, the transporting device and the way it is being used which is the issue. These scooters have come in by storm. They have hit worldwide, they are causing all sorts of problems and they are starting to result even in fatalities in certain areas. The problem is because these scooters are so new the law has not caught up and there is nothing in most laws throughout the world which covers and caters for these instruments. They are not classified as should they be used on the road or should they be used on the pavements.

290 The biggest problem is the differential in speed. If a pedestrian is walking at say 4 km/h and if a scooter were in theory to travel at the same speed, then the conflict would be non-existent in that respect. If the same thing happens on the road, if a scooter travels at only 4 km/h and cars go much faster, then obviously the conflict there is greater. So what we are looking at now is to see exactly how we classify these vehicles, and for that we would need to bring things to Parliament as part of the Traffic Act.

295 In the interim period we are looking at getting rid of the scooters from the pavements initially and seeing whether we can get through regulations. In fact, we have found a mechanism to do that in the interim period until we can see how we proceed. But it is not just the scooter. There is a whole myriad of different things that are coming on to the market, from Segways to hoverboards and scooters. Some of them travel at different speeds, some of them are manufactured to go at 25 km/h, others will do 32 km/h, others, a lot less.

300 Every city is responding differently to these scooters. In cities where there is a big open space, where the pavements are very wide and where they have maybe bicycle lanes, they are considering whether they should be put in a bicycle lane only to be used in a bicycle lane, or they should be allowed an area in the pavement. What is happening is that they are everywhere. Sometimes they are ridden on the road without lights, but they are not captured under the law. This is why it has been such a difficult task to look at, because if you think about it, are they good for the environment? These are electrical vehicles and if it takes someone off a car then there could be some use in them. Having said that, there is the other side of the equation, which says they are made of plastic and they have got a lithium battery – how long will they last? If you 310 knock them down, if they fall and they break, spares will not be available so they will end up being thrown out, and they are literally almost disposable items at the price that they sell.

So there is a whole list of things that need to be considered and this is why this is taking its time – not only in Gibraltar, it is taking its time throughout the world and different cities are grappling to see how they are going to target these things which really do not fall in either one 315 category or another.

Mr Speaker: I suggest to the Hon. Minister while they are about it he might look into the question of the incident at Gatwick Airport this morning, also an incursion, another danger.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, we are even seeing now, in Dubai for example, these motorised police vehicles that fly. We do not know what is coming. Technology is changing so quickly that we do not know what is going to come through the Frontier tomorrow.

Mr Speaker: Yes. Next question.

Q476-477/2018
Upper Town escalator –
Update re unserviceable periods and recent vandalism

Acting Clerk: Question 476. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. T N Hammond.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government say if the Upper Town escalator has been unserviceable since 1st January 2018; and if so, provide figures for the number of occasions and the length of each occasion that the escalator has been unserviceable, by month, since that 330 date?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 477.

Acting Clerk: Question 477. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details on the vandalism inflicted on the escalators to the Upper Town, including (a) the date, (b) the cost of repair and (c) the law enforcement result?
340

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the answers to Questions 476 and 477 are contained in the schedule I will now hand over.

Mr Speaker: Let's go on to Question 478 and come back to the other, if necessary.

Q478/2018
Disabled parking –
Permit for use outside of Gibraltar

Acting Clerk: Question 478. The Hon. L F Llamas.

350 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, will the Government consider the issuing of an additional disability badge, which would not entitle the holder to parking in Gibraltar but would assist persons in accessing services outside Gibraltar in particular, where persons with similar conditions are entitled?

355 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

360 Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, at present the Blue Badge model issued in Gibraltar is a European Communities model that is recognised throughout the whole European Union. As the hon. Member may appreciate, any holder of a Gibraltar Blue Badge can take advantage of any concession afforded in an EU member state by displaying their badge.

365 Mr Speaker: Until 29th March. (Laughter) [Inaudible] the Hansard.
Is there any supplementary arising from that?

Hon. L F Llamas: Yes, I have got one on Question 477.

Hon. E J Phillips: Yes, I have one.

Q479/2018
Official cars –
Use by Ministers

370 Acting Clerk: Question 479. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state for the last 12 months the use by each Minister of official cars?

375 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Infrastructure and Planning.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the information the hon. Member is requesting is available online.

Acting Clerk: Question 480. The Hon. L F Llamas.

380

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details of the contract entered into with Deloitte's in relation to e-services?

Mr Speaker: Is somebody answering on behalf of the Minister for Commerce?

385

Hon. L F Llamas: Shall we go back to Question 477?

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, in relation to Question 477 I have one further question. It appears from 2018 the escalators were out of action over 117 days. Does the Minister agree with me that an out-of-action escalator for 117 days out of a year is completely unacceptable and therefore represents a failure of this particular project? Will he agree with that analysis?

390

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I would not say it is a failure of the project at all. The issue with the failures is predominantly vandalism. What can we do with vandals? A lot of the stoppages unfortunately are because the stop button, which is an essential feature of any escalator, is being abused. They are literally just kicking it or pressing the button and it stops. Every time that happens it can be reset again, but if it keeps happening, after a certain number of times the escalator mechanism software assumes that there is something inherently wrong with it, something seriously wrong with it, and it will shut down completely and then you have to call the technical team in to take a look at that. That is when it can take a day to repair.

395

Because there is constant abuse ... and it is a massive shame because there has been a big investment on something which is extremely positive for the people who live in the Upper Town, which has changed the lives of many people when it is working ... It is very unfortunate that these acts ... Predominantly this is the reason why most of the breakages occur, or the stoppages occur. They should be paying the consequence, the people who are just not looking after the equipment.

405

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, whilst I accept that vandalism is totally unacceptable, what is the Government doing in order to catch these offenders, and what steps are the Police taking to enforce the law in relation to vandalism on this particular site?

410

Clearly the Government is spending a lot of money on this project – a lot of public money has been spent on this escalator, a lot of public money has been spent on maintaining this escalator – and it is out of action for nearly half a year. Therefore, what attempts are being made by the Government or the Police in trying to prevent vandalism at this particular site?

415

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, there are CCTV cameras on site which do look at the escalator, so it is a matter of policing. If the person who does it cannot be seen or cannot be detected by the cameras ... but I think enough measures are being taken as mitigation. We have CCTV cameras. The only other thing we can have is a security guard at the top of the steps and a security guard at the bottom of the steps to ensure that ... This is just an unfortunate thing that happens in the area. People seek fun, so I think it is all down to policing and looking at the CCTV cameras, and I don't think it is a failure in that respect.

420

Mr Speaker: We are going to postpone the questions for the Minister for Commerce. Next question.

425

HEALTH, CARE AND JUSTICE

Q544/2018
PwC review of GHA –

Mr Speaker: We will come back to Question 545, if necessary, arising from the schedule.

Q546/2018
GHA prescription database –
Items removed since December 2011

Acting Clerk: Question 546. The Hon. L F Llamas.

450

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, since December 2011, can the Government provide a list of items removed from the GHA prescription database, detailing: (a) if they have been replaced or not; (b) if replaced, what the saving has been so far; and (c) if not replaced, what the annual cost of supplying the item represented to the taxpayer?

455

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the GHA has had a brand substitution policy since 1999, which results in the removal of brands from the prescribing system if an exact generic alternative is launched which cost less than the brand.

460

The list of items removed from the GHA prescription database detailing (a) if they have been replaced or not, (b) if replaced, what the saving has been so far, and (c) if not replaced, what the annual cost of supplying the item represented to the taxpayer is in the schedule I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman.

Answer to Q546/2018

Drug	Date Removed	Replaced yes or No	If Yes, saving to GHA to date	If No, annual cost
Ibuprofen 600mg tablets	01/02/2018	Yes	*N/A
Voltarol Gel	01/02/2018	Yes	*N/A
Traxam Gel	01/12/2017	Yes	*N/A
Omacor (Omega fish oils)	01/07/2018	No		Saving of £288k per annum
Glucosamine tablets	01/07/2018	No		Saving of £156k per annum

*The items removed were not replaced by one particular item, as a clinician may prescribe a variety of different options, dependant on the case presented. As a result, it is not possible to provide an exact calculation.

Q547/2018

Alzheimer's and dementia patients – Numbers and residential location

465 Acting Clerk: Question 547/2018. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Can the Government provide statistics in relation to the number of members in our community who currently suffer from Alzheimer's or dementia, stating (a) how many are living in the community, (b) how many are living in each ERS facility, and (c) how many are at St Bernard's Hospital?

470

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

475 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, as at the end of October 2018, there were 189 persons diagnosed as living with Alzheimer's or dementia within the community, five within St Bernard's Hospital, and in respect of ERS facilities the information is as follows: Mount Alvernia, 68; John Cochrane Ward, 22; Calpe Ward, 10, Hillside, 48; and John Mackintosh Home, 31.

Q548/2018

Hospital admissions – Excess alcohol and drug overdose diagnoses

480 Acting Clerk: Question 548. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, since January 2017, can the Government provide a schedule of patients admitted into A&E who have been diagnosed with excess alcohol consumption or substance abuse, detailing: (a) the date admitted, (b) the diagnosis, (c) the age, (d) the sex and (e) aftercare provided?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman a schedule of patients admitted into A&E who have been diagnosed with excess alcohol consumption or substance misuse detailing: (a) the date admitted, (b) the diagnosis and (e) aftercare provided.

490

Before I hand over the schedule to the hon. Gentleman, I note to the House that I will provide him with the details relating to the month of admission, diagnosis and the aftercare provided; I will not provide the hon. Gentleman with the date of admission nor the age or sex of the person for fear of inadvertently identifying the patient and therefore, again inadvertently, falling foul of our data protection obligations.

495

Mr Speaker: I am sorry to say that in handing over the schedule we cannot provide the hon. questioner and other Members with magnifying glasses. (Laughter)

500

Hon. L F Llamas: (Laughter) Indeed, Mr Speaker.

Hon. E J Reyes: I understand what the Minister for Health is saying here and I am supportive that we should be cautious so as not to identify particular individuals, but would it be possible perhaps to provide some sort of general guideline in respect of ages, saying how many would be under the age of 25, how many would be age 25-50? At least that gives us a general view of whether we are dealing with people of Dr Cortes's age and mine, who technically are senior citizens, or are we dealing with youngsters like the Hon. Mr Llamas and Mr Costa himself. It does at least bring a certain perspective and the community is able to be aware whether we are dealing with an ageing population that perhaps is the most inclined to cause work for the A&E department.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, it is not a question that I have asked my officials, but I am sure that we will be able to bracket the ages and the sexes so we can say so many women, so many men within the ages of 15-20, 20-25, so we can give the hon. Gentlemen opposite a flavour of the details that they seek.

520 Acting Clerk: Question 549. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one further question in relation to that. I think my hon. Friend asked in (e) what aftercare was provided. I think that the initial care by the service provider is provided in the schedule. Does the Minister know whether patients who present in A&E with particular alcohol/drug dependency issues, or at least overdose issues, are then referred to a secondary programme where they can be reviewed later on? Most of the entries here say 'advised return to dept if further problems'. It does not necessarily refer to a specific counselling team or drug dependency team which would look into any issues relating to these particular individuals. What I am getting at effectively is what secondary care is available to the very long list, sadly, of people being admitted for alcohol overdose or drug overdose.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will know that, I think it was last year or the beginning of this year, the Government announced for the first time the establishment of a clinic of a GP with special interest in substance misuse and alcohol consumption. So we now have a GP who specialises specifically on those conditions.

535 If the hon. Gentleman were to take a further look at the schedule that I provide to him, he will also see that there are references to 'discharged' and 'follow up treatment by GP'. So there are cases where on discharge there is advice that this particular person ought to be seen subsequently by a GP.

540 You will also see, Mr Speaker, that in some cases the person is admitted, which means that at that point other protocols would be in place because of perhaps the acuity of the person presenting or because further help in the manner that he has indicated is required.

I have not made a statistical calculation but I think it may be right to say that the majority of people are basically told to return if there is a further problem, but there is also maybe less than half of people who are advised to attend to a GP for further advice and treatment by the GP. But 545 for those who present with a particularly high acuity and obviously require additional treatment immediately after the A&E presentation, they are admitted into St Bernard's Hospital.

Hon. E J Phillips: [Inaudible]

550 Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, there is only one GP who specialises in substance misuse, so she prioritises those cases because of course there are another 23 GPs who provide either the ordinary day clinic, the evening clinic or the emergency clinic and provide either continuous support and treatment for chronic conditions or for people who just present at A&E. So, so long as the GP is available to provide treatment and support on that particular day for this particular 555 person, then yes of course that person will be prioritised. If, for whatever reason, Dr Taylor's clinic on that particular day is full, which could also happen, the GPs of course also have training in dealing with substance misuse. It is just that this particular doctor has particular further training that allows her to register with a special interest in substance misuse.

560 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I would just like to go back to Question 545, if the Minister would be so kind, in relation to the cost of software maintenance and programming.

565 I appreciate that, the way the question is phrased, this will cover a period since December 2011, so we could be talking about a cumulative period of close to seven years, but I would like to ask three very specific questions.

One is that on the schedule that we have been handed there is an item called EPR E H R systems –

570

Hon. N F Costa: Would the hon. Gentleman give way?

Hon. R M Clinton: Yes, of course.

575 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, only to say that I had not come to the House prepared with any answers on any of the particular maintenance companies because, as he will have seen, the schedule runs into two pages. So, if he has specific questions on any specific contract, I am more than happy to oblige but I would need notice of that question.

580 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Minister's answer and explanation and I accept... I am not going to ask for details of contracts, but this particular item, EPR E H R systems, which is over about £1.5 million over – and I assume it is the seven-year period; I do not know if this is a bolt payment, but it is irrelevant ... I would like to ask the Minister a simple question: what is EPR E H R systems?

585 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the EPR system is a project that was introduced by my hon. colleague Dr John Cortes for primary care. So, when a patient now attends primary care there is a program that is able to produce, for example, repeat prescriptions that people can now attend to the PCC to receive. Where you can have a repeat prescription for a series of say six months, that program is able to produce the repeat prescriptions. It is an electronic software system that 590 allows doctors to be able to provide the better treatment and better quality of treatment that it does because they are able to recover notes quickly, are able to scan notes, especially for patients who have chronic conditions and when they have a very thick file because of all of the attendances that the person may make to the PCC. In this context it bears repeating that almost double the population attends the PCC during the course of one year, so a patient who has a 595 chronic condition may well attend the PCC on many occasions. The EPR system allows the GP to be able to better access and better search electronic records.

Hon. R M Clinton: I am very grateful to the Minister for his answer. Can he advise why there are three different providers listed for the same system? Do they do different things, or is it that 600 the provider has changed over time?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I advised the hon. Gentleman, he will need to give me notice of that question because, as I say, the schedule runs into almost two pages. I provided the information that was requested. If he has particular questions on any particular item in the 605 schedule provided, I would need notice, but if he provides me with notice I will be more than happy to answer his questions.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for his answer.
My second question is in relation to the Morph salaries program. I do not know whether the 610 Minister has the information to hand whether this is an actual maintenance fee or the program licence fee. And would I be correct in stating that the GHA runs its own salaries program rather than using a system that might be available to the Government in general?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I will ask my office and revert. I think the answer is yes, that the 615 GHA does do its own salaries, but I am not confirming that to him; I need to ask the question.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, again I am grateful to the Minister for his answer.
I have just one final question. Unfortunately, there seem to be a lot of abbreviations here.
620 Could the Minister just advise the House: what does P2P stand for?

Hon. N F Costa: Again, Mr Speaker, I am not confirming this to him, I will ask, but Dr Cortes and I both are quite sure it is 'purchase to pay'. Again, I will confirm it for him.

Q549/2018

Ambulance transportation – Payments made to service providers

Acting Clerk: Question 549. The Hon. L F Llamas.

625 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, since December 2011, can the Government provide details for each financial year on the payments made in respect of ambulance transportation, including the amount paid to each service provider?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

630

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, Since December 2011, payments made in respect of ambulance transportation, including the amount paid to each service provider for each financial year, is in the schedule I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman.

Q550/2018
Attempted suicides –
Number since January 2012

635 Acting Clerk: Question 550. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, since January 2012, can the Government provide details per calendar year of how many attempted suicides have been identified by the GHA?

640 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the GHA cannot provide this information, as the GHA does not record whether the accident or emergency being treated occurred as a result of suicidal intent.

645 Following discussions between my Ministry and the Accident and Emergency Consultant, we concluded that it would be very difficult to obtain accurate statistics for the hon. Gentleman, if for no other reason than a genuinely suicidal patient may not reveal his or her intention.

Q551-554/2018
Psychiatric doctors –
Numbers employed; average waiting times; number of patients seen

Acting Clerk: Question 551. The Hon. L F Llamas.

650 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state, since January 2012, how many psychiatric doctors have been employed by the Government, detailing the date employed and the date the doctor ceased being an employee of the Government, if applicable?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

655 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 552 to 554.

Acting Clerk: Question 552. The Hon. L F Llamas.

660 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state, as at 13th September 2018, how many psychiatric doctors are permanently employed by the GHA?

Acting Clerk: Question 553. The Hon. L F Llamas.

665 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what is the average waiting time to see a psychologist?

Acting Clerk: Question 554. The Hon L F Llamas.

670 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide statistics in relation to how many persons are routinely seen by psychiatric doctors and the frequency of their visits, and whether this routine has been compromised in the last three months, whether daily, weekly, monthly, quarterly or yearly?

675 Mr Speaker, obviously this question was filed in September, so I appreciate the answer may be from June to September rather than to date.

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

680 Hon. N F Costa: Actually, Mr Speaker, just to tell the hon. Gentleman that the answer has been updated, so it is as up to date as it can be.

Two consultant psychiatrists have been employed by the GHA since January 2012, one in February 2013 and one in January 2014. The former retired from the service in May of this year.

685 I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman a table setting out the information in relation to the number of mental health nurses and consultant psychiatrists up to and including 1st April 2018.

Answer to Q551/2018

	Mental Health Nurses	Consultant Psychiatrists
As at 1st April 2004	6	1
As at 1st April 2005	7	1
As at 1st April 2006	9	2
As at 1st April 2007	10	2
As at 1st April 2008	15	3
As at 1st April 2009	17	2
As at 1st April 2010	22.5	2
As at 1st April 2011	28	2
As at 1st April 2012	28	2
As at 1st April 2013	28.5	2
As at 1st April 2014	32.5	3.5
As at 1st April 2015	34.5	3.5
As at 1st April 2016	34	3.5
As at 1st April 2017	33	4.5
As at 1st April 2018	31	4.5

As the hon. Gentleman will note, the number of mental health nurses has increased from 28 as at 2011 to 31 and the number of consultant psychiatrist posts from two as at 2011 to 4.5 posts in 2018.

As at 11th December this year, there were 4.5 consultant psychiatrists employed by the GHA.

690 The average waiting time to see a psychologist was eight weeks in September 2018. These waiting times compare favourably with other European countries, where the target is for 90% of people referred for psychological therapy to be seen within 18 weeks. Further, in cases where a referral is classified as urgent, a member of our Community Mental Health team will make contact with the patient within 24 hours of the referral being received.

695 Mr Speaker, it pleases me greatly to report to the House that the average waiting time to see a psychologist has now been reduced from eight weeks to six weeks. This is testament to the Government's unwavering commitment and care towards our Mental Health Services.

700 In addition, we have contracted an additional counsellor to provide extra weekly sessions; further, the current counsellor and chartered counselling psychologist have increased their sessions by an extra day each.

705 July 2017 saw the introduction and development within our community of the mental health team for crisis and outreach services, comprising three mental welfare officers. The new service aims to provide continued support for individuals known to the mental health team when in crisis in order to prevent admissions; or, if admission is required, to support the discharge process. As announced in November of this year, the service has been restructured to comprise four approved mental health professionals.

It is worth noting that an average of 20% of appointments offered to see psychologists are not attended and are not cancelled in advance. This further stretches resources in a field where, unlike with other health professionals, appointments may last for a full hour.

710 Further, I was delighted and proud to announce for the first time in this year's Budget and again in October of this year the introduction of Gibraltar's very first Child and Adolescent Psychology Service, which commences in January of next year.

715 Patients are routinely seen by consultant psychiatrists as follows. An average of 141 patients are seen every month, including an average of 10 new patients. Of these, an average of 136 patients are seen once a month, two patients are seen once a week and three patients are seen fortnightly. The frequency of the visits is determined by the consultant psychiatrists during initial consultation, depending on the individual patient's needs.

720 There was one occasion during the beginning of August 2018 when clinics were compromised, which resulted in some appointments being cancelled. These, however, were rescheduled for the following week.

Q555-558/2018

Pregnancy and child birth –

Under-18 pregnancies; Down's syndrome; neonatal abstinence syndrome

Acting Clerk: Question 555. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state, since January 2012, how many pregnancies confirmed by the GHA were of women under the age of 18?

725

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 556 to 558.

730

Mr Speaker, before I sit, just as a nod and a thanks to my excellent public officials just to confirm that they have already confirmed the answers I gave to the Hon. Mr Clinton. It is, as I told him before, purchase to pay. And as I noted to him, the GHA Finance has its own salary system and therefore does its own salaries.

735

Acting Clerk: Question 556. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state, since January 2012, how many tests on pregnant women for Down's syndrome have come back positive?

740

Acting Clerk: Question 557. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state, since January 2012, how many babies have been born with Down's syndrome?

745

Acting Clerk: Question 558. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, since January 2012, can the Government state per calendar year how many babies have been born with neonatal abstinence syndrome?

750

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, since January 2012 there have been 16 pregnancies confirmed by the GHA of women under the age of 18.

755 Harmony tests were introduced in July 2014 and since then there have been nine tests on women which have returned a positive result on Trisomy 21, also known as Down's syndrome. No data is available prior to this date.

Since January 2012, four babies have been born in St Bernard's Hospital with confirmed Down's syndrome.

760 Mr Speaker, given the real risk of identification, I will not provide the hon. Gentleman with the number of babies which have been born with Neonatal Abstinence Syndrome across the floor of the House. I will, however, be happy to advise him of the number in confidence.

Q559/2018
GHA and ERS premises –
Number of thefts reported

Acting Clerk: Question 559. The Hon. L F Llamas.

765 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state, for each calendar year since January 2012, how many reports in relation to theft of goods or property have been raised by patients, residents or relatives within the GHA or ERS?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

770 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the number of reports in relation to the theft of goods or property which have been raised by patients or relatives within the ERS since January 2012 is as follows: 2012, three; 2013, one; 2014, one; 2015, one; 2016, zero; 2017, six; 2018, seven.

775 In relation to the GHA, thefts were not being logged prior to November 2017. After the introduction of the Datix program in November 2017 a record of such incidents was introduced and they are now recorded electronically. In 2018, the GHA reported 14 incidents of this nature.

Q560/2018
Care Agency employees –
Number of non-resident carers

Acting Clerk: Question 560. The Hon. L F Llamas.

780 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many carers employed by the Care Agency are not resident in Gibraltar, including their date of employment?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

785 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the total number of care workers currently employed by the Care Agency who are not resident in Gibraltar is 29. These carers were employed between January 2000 and December 2011 as follows: 2000, one; 2001, one; 2002, one; 2003, three; 2004, one; 2005, zero; 2006, three; 2007, two; 2008, three; 2009, four; 2010, one; and 2011, nine.

Q561/2018
GHA default judgment –
Reason for failure to respond to doctor

790 Acting Clerk: Q561. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain why the Government failed to respond to the claim from the doctor suing the GHA, resulting in a judgment in default?

795 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman surely knows, this matter arises from facts dating to their time in office, is currently sub judice, and in any event it is not in the interests of the conduct of the litigation for such matters to be discussed publicly.

800

Q562/2018
Multi-Disciplinary Team –
Meetings with Ocean Views patients

Acting Clerk: Question 562. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government state for each patient who was under the care of Ocean Views as at 1st June 2018 until 9th September 2018, the dates on which each patient met with the Multi-Disciplinary Team?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, this information is not kept electronically. To retrieve this data would require an exhaustive manual exercise that would prove a significant demand on the GHA's resources. It is, therefore, not feasible to complete the answer, as this will affect patient care and running of the services.

810

However, Mr Speaker, on average, the Multi-Disciplinary Team review admitted patients on a weekly basis.

815

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, I appreciate that if the information is not kept electronically it may provide some difficulty in providing an answer. However, I am informed by some of the service users, families and relatives who are at Ocean Views that they have actually struggled throughout the summer period. It may be something which has been resolved now, but they did struggle quite heavily during the month of July and in particular in August when these weekly meetings were actually not happening, with an actual span of up to three weeks where some of the service users were not actually met, with a disability.

820

Is the Minister satisfied that that might have occurred and whether they have now put procedures and policies in place so that that does not happen and the Minister is made aware immediately when these systems do fail?

825

830 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I will start with the last part of his question. I am not sure that I am informed immediately when the system fails but I can assure him that I am informed, because if it does not come from the official side, which it almost invariably does because I have to say my officials are very good at telling me if there is a problem, but if the officials do not get 835 to me first then a family member will, and so I will have very good visibility when systems are not working as they should.

I have told the hon. Gentleman in answer to another question that the number of employed psychiatrists has gone from two to 4.5, which means that there is now huge resiliency within the Mental Health Services. In addition, the hon. Gentleman will have read the press release where 840 the Government announced the addition of another psychologist, consultant psychologist, for Ocean Views. So, in addition to there being 2.5 further psychiatrists, we also have an in-house psychologist. So, what happened in August, which I have accepted to him in answer to the previous question did happen, should certainly not happen again.

I do not want the hon. Gentleman, though, to leave the House thinking that it was because of any fault of the GHA, and he can believe me that if it were the fault of the GHA I would also tell 845 him, but sometimes even with the best planning in the world, where we know that somebody is retiring and we start the recruitment process early and we advertise in the UK and locally and the selection boards are held, sometimes the person who comes to that selection board is not suitable, so that sets us back, or even people come to the selection board, they commit themselves to coming and, literally a day or two before, they tell us they are not going to come.
850 You can imagine the stress that that causes when you think you have got a professional coming to your service to be able to deliver that service.

But given that we have 4.5 psychiatrists and we are going to have I think four psychologists – because in addition to Dr Barber, who is in Ocean Views, we have two for the CAMHS service – I really do not think that the week of August that we had where people were unfortunately sick – 855 these things happen – should happen again.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q563/2018
Primary Care Centre –
Telephone appointment system

Acting Clerk: Question 563. The Hon. L F Llamas.

860 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, since the introduction of the telephone appointment system at the Primary Care Centre, can the Government state how many calls have been handled by staff members and how many calls have successfully resulted in appointments via the automated system?

865 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 564.

870 Acting Clerk: Question 564. The Hon. L F Llamas.

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details in relation to the cost for the automated telephone appointment system for the GHA?

875 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, since the introduction of the automated telephone appointment system at the Primary Care Centre, calls handled by staff members and calls that have resulted in appointments are as follows: calls handled by staff, 30,385; calls via MyGHA successfully 880 resulting in appointments, 12,776.

The cost for the automated telephone appointment system for the GHA was £75,000.

Q565/2018
Squadron Medical –
Confirmation of negotiations

Acting Clerk: Question 565. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

885 Can the Government advise whether it or the Gibraltar Health Authority has entered into or is negotiating a supply contract with Squadron Medical?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

890 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Health Authority had made enquiries with Squadron Medical; however, it has not entered into a supply contract with them.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q566/2018
Xanit –
Termination of contractual arrangements

895 Acting Clerk: Question 566. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, further to Questions 656/2017, 68/2018, and 381/2018, is the Minister now in a position to make a full statement to the House in respect to the termination of the contractual arrangements with Xanit?
900

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the position remains the same as per my answer to Question 381/2018.
905

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, whilst I appreciate that there are sensitive discussions with both service providers, the Minister will also appreciate that this question has been outstanding for some time. Can the Minister give any further information that would allay any concerns that we have in relation to patients currently using either one of these service providers, particularly 910 the one in which we have spoken about the termination of the contractual relationship? It does concern citizens who have asked this question to me before.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, first of all to say that the answer is not outstanding. I have given him the answer, which is that the negotiations are still in train.

915 If I recall correctly, the last time he asked me this question I pointed out to him that we were not only seeking to enter into contractual arrangements with two but in fact also a third tertiary centre in Spain that is very much known to Gibraltarians and which specialises in cancer treatment. The importance of a contractual arrangement with a Spanish tertiary centre is extremely important, as I am sure the hon. Gentleman will agree with me, because we want 920 to ensure that our clinical standards, which are taken from the NHS, are adopted by the Spanish tertiary centres. The GHA has, through the appointment of a responsible officer – basically he is an officer who ensures that all our doctors are GMC compliant and they keep up to date with the training and so on. He has visited Spanish tertiary centres and he has told us categorically that the GHA is, beyond a shadow of a doubt, at least 10 years ahead of Spanish tertiary centres
925 in terms of the quality of the care that we provide. The hon. Gentleman knows that in the past two years, following on from the work of the Hon. Dr John Cortes, we have quickened the pace of repatriating as many services as possible, not only because it makes sense for people not to have to travel when they are sick and all the stress that that entails, but also because we want to make sure that we have as much capability within our homeland as possible.

930 So, he is right when he says that these negotiations are sensitive. They are sensitive because we need to make sure that the clinical standards are appropriate and we are happy with them. Let me tell him something else. If I had to choose whether to go to the UK or to Spain, I would always choose to go to the UK for any complex treatment. There is no better place than an NHS university hospital if you have something seriously wrong with you. However, of course if there 935 is an emergency and you really are sick and you cannot fly, then we need to make sure that the care that we provide to our people is the best that we can, and we can only do that by making sure that the tertiary centres agree to those standards.

There is one tertiary centre, and I spoke with my lawyers yesterday on a contract which is about to be signed, so I will not be able to make a statement on that one before Xanit, but I can 940 assure the hon. Gentleman that if we are taking time it is only because we need to get it right, because we are not talking here about a typing pool or any other service, we are talking about the care of our patients, of our community.

Hon. E J Phillips: Whilst that is a very helpful explanation in relation to the tertiary providers that the Government may well contract with in the future, or whether the ink is dry on the document or not, I was referring to obviously the termination arrangements in relation to Xanit 945 itself.

The issues surrounding the termination of Xanit as a tertiary provider, do they relate to a financial issue or is this just in relation to transferring patients from Xanit to have the services 950 provided in some other tertiary hospital? My question was specifically about the termination of Xanit rather than the contractual arrangements that the Government intends to enter into with other tertiary providers.

Hon. N F Costa: In respect of that specifically, Mr Speaker, we are in negotiations as to price, and as the hon. Gentleman should know – I have told him before in the House – we do continue 955 to refer patients to Xanit.

Hon. E J Phillips: So, insofar as the question, without going into too much detail because it is clearly sensitive, we are clearly looking at what has previously been owed to Xanit insofar as 960 their services and how we can continue to work with Xanit in the future in relation to the special services that they provide for our community?

Hon. N F Costa: We are negotiating all aspects of the commercial work. We are negotiating all commercial aspects of the contract.

965 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q567/2018
Medicinal cannabis –
Statement of Government policy

Acting Clerk: Question 567. The Hon. E J Phillips.

970

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state its policy in respect to the use of medicinal cannabis in Gibraltar?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

975

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar and the Gibraltar Health Authority are currently considering its policy as to the use of medicinal cannabis in Gibraltar.

980

Hon. E J Phillips: Will the Minister be laying a Command Paper in respect of this subject?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman, I know, knows that of course I am looking at it strictly from a clinical perspective and we are looking at what he will have read, as I have, the system in the UK, and so we are looking at how we can best benefit our patients for the use of medicinal cannabis products. Once we have clarity and a clear view on how we can benefit our patients, I need to discuss the matter with the Hon. the Chief Minister, as the Minister with responsibility for drugs, and then of course we will have to take that matter to the Drugs Advisory Council. So it is not one area in which it is purely clinical and I can just make a decision. It is, I can assure him, actively looked into and once the GHA is ready we will then refer the matter to the Office of the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. E J Phillips: Obviously the reason why I asked that question is of course that our community had ... I think the hon. learned Lady on that side of the House and I engaged in a debate with the hon. Lady on this side of the House in relation to Sativex. In fact, it was one of the parts of the debate that we had. The Government by regulation introduced Sativex in order to give reassurance to our medical practitioners that Sativex could be administered to patients with specific conditions. So, the Government has shown that propensity to deal with a request from medical professionals in relation to Sativex. Is the Government considering looking at a wide range of medicinal cannabis products that will be licensed and regulated in our jurisdiction to assist others with particular ailments? Or is the scope of medicinal cannabis going to be wider than just specific requests from medical practitioners?

995

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, at this point in time we are taking the widest look at what we can provide and, to answer the first part of the preface to his supplementary, that will require legislative changes.

1005

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q568/2018
HM Prison –
Increase in prison officers

Acting Clerk: Question 568. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

1010 Hon. E J Phillips: Does the Government intend to increase the complement of prison officers at HM Prison?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1015 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, following my Budget speech in July of this year, where I announced the recruitment of five additional prison officers, I am pleased to confirm that since September 2018 these additional resources are now in place.

It bears pointing out to this House that under this Government the number of prison officer posts has increased from 38 in financial year 2012-13 to 50 posts in the current financial year.

1020 Following the outcome of the resources review conducted by the Prison Review Working Group, further recruitment is expected and planned over the next two years.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, in relation to those further resources that the Minister has referred to, from 38 to 50, how many of those specific officers have received training insofar as education and counselling in respect of the inmates?

1025 The reason why I ask this question is of course that traditionally we have imported, effectively, from outside the community into the Prison, resources for teaching and counselling hopefully to deal with inmates and their particular issues. I wonder whether this process has been evolved internally so that we can provide for training and education internally to assist the inmates. That is why one of the questions I had was in relation to resources, because if there is an increase in prison population, of course there is going to be increased pressure on prison officers, but I wondered whether the Government had been looking at it from a different end as well.

1035 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the question asked me specifically about the increase of the complement of prison officers. If he wants to ask me about training, which of course he is perfectly entitled to do, I would ask that he please give me notice of the question because then I can ask the Superintendent to provide me with those details. I do, of course, have an idea but I do not want to even unintentionally mislead him by giving him information that may prove to be incorrect.

1040 Mr Speaker: Next question.

1045

Q569/2018
HM Prison –
Parole qualification time

Acting Clerk: Question 569. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

1050 Hon. E J Phillips: Does the Government intend to increase the time an inmate serves in prison before he or she qualifies for parole, which is currently set by the Prison Act at a third of sentence?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1055 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Law Commission is presently considering whether to amend the required proportion of the sentence to be served prior to a qualification for release on licence.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, does the Minister know when Law Commission last met?

1060 Hon. N F Costa: Actually, we had another meeting pencilled in for today, and of course we have been unable to hold that meeting and so the last meeting was on 21st November.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q570/2018
HM Prison –
Drugs testing of inmates

1065 Acting Clerk: Question 570. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, how many inmates at HM Prison have been subject to (a) mandatory drugs testing and (b) voluntary drugs testing in the last seven years?

1070 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in the last seven years 255 inmates have been subject to voluntary drugs testing.

1075 No inmates have been subject to mandatory drugs testing. However, the mandatory drugs testing implementation process is well under way. The Prison Superintendent is taking the relevant steps to introduce the MDT programme as soon as it is reasonably practical. This includes the drafting of relevant documents, including information leaflets for inmates, information leaflets for staff, authorisation forms and adjudication forms. Information leaflets for inmates will be translated into various languages to cater for non-English speaking individuals. A comprehensive Prison Service Order has also been drafted which will serve as a complete reference on MDT. The commissioning of new IT software and staff training is also required. The Prison now has three qualified sample takers, with more officers to be trained early in the new year.

1080 As a result of representations received, we are also looking at various legal issues raised. Consideration is being given to the level of assistance required by the adjudicating Justices of the Peace in adjudication hearings following a positive result. Further, questions as to legal assistance at adjudications and the process for independent testing of samples by prisoners are also being carefully deliberated.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q571/2018

Europa Point facilities for children –
Nature of facilities

1090 Acting Clerk: Question 571. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, will some of the facilities for children which the Government has intimated in documents filed with the Town Planner, that it proposes to build at Europa Point, be in the nature of a young offender institution, or a secure training centre, or secure children's home?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the documents illustrate plans for a secure children's home. As the hon. Member will be aware, a secure children's home is a place where children and young peoples' liberties are restricted under an order made in court and they serve two main purposes: (a) to protect young people who are placing themselves or others at risk of harm through a range of behaviours, or (b) to provide an alternative venue to a custodial sentence that is not an adult prison.

Hon. E J Phillips: I am not too sure whether the Government's plans have further matured in relation to the secure children's home. I am grateful to the Minister for clarifying that the principal objectives are to protect those young people and also in relation to their attendance as an alternative to custody.
1105

The Minister may not know this at this stage, given the maturity of those plans, but does the Minister know what forms of education will be available in the context of this secure children's home and the availability and access to education and teaching aids?
1110

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman raises some good questions, but they are very far ahead of where we are right now. The hon. Gentleman, though, I think should be comforted in the fact that the secure children's home will be under the aegis of the Care Agency rather than under HM Prison, which means that the central philosophy of the secure children's home will be to be able to educate and take care of young children – or children, not necessarily that young – so that they are able to reintegrate into society, depending of course if it is one under a custodial sentence, then that would be determined by the courts, and also if it is in relation to other behaviour but not through a custodial sentence but through a court order and the time limits will be set therein, but should be able to ensure that once the young person is out into the community the education of that young person has not been stunted or interrupted by being in a secure children's home as opposed to normal education.
1115

Hon. E J Phillips: The difficulty that I have encountered in wearing a different hat, my professional hat – my other professional hat – is that people, when they leave prison, particularly adult inmates, find it difficult to transition back into society, and I am sure the Minister would agree that is more important, of course, with younger children as well who have had issues where custodial sentences have been imposed, that we try to avoid them falling into a pattern of criminality.
1125
1130

The reason for the question is especially important because if there is availability of alternatives and further education that will stop them falling back into criminality... I agree with what he says about that, and obviously the plans are not significantly matured, but I think it is especially important in the context of children that we stop them falling into the cycle of crime. I am sure that the Minister would agree with that.
1135

1140 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, which is, as I said, why we have taken the route, after a lot of deliberation with the Hon. Chief Minister and the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister, about how best we ensure that, when a young person is in a secure children's home we ensure that there is the minimum interruption to that young person's trajectory in life, which obviously pivotally includes receiving an excellent education.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

1145

Q572-577/2018
Convictions and fines –
Dogs; weapons; drugs

Acting Clerk: Question 572. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

1150 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, how many convictions or fines issued have there been in each of the last 10 years for failure to register or licence a dog in Gibraltar?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1155 Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 573 to 577.

Acting Clerk: Question 573. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. D A Feetham.

1160 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, how many convictions or fines issued have there been for dog fouling in each of the last 10 years?

Acting Clerk: Question 576. The Hon. L F Llamas.

1175 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, since December 2011 to date can the Government provide details of illegal drugs recovered by our law enforcement officers in venues where festivals and events took place, including (a) the type of illegal drug, (b) the amount, (c) the date recovered and (d) the associated festival or event?

1180 Acting Clerk: Question 577. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm the classification and amount of drugs seized by law enforcement agencies during National Day?

1185 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Care and Justice.

1190 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I now hand over a schedule to the hon. Gentleman showing: (1) the number of convictions issued or fines issued in respect of the last 10 years for failure to register or license a dog in Gibraltar; (2) the number of convictions or fines issued in each of the last 10 years for dog fouling; (3) the number of convictions in each of the last 10 years for crimes associated with the carrying or injuries caused by the carrying of knives, guns or other offensive weapons in Gibraltar; and (4) the number of convictions in each of the last 10 years in respect of (a) the importation and (b) the supply of cocaine, cannabis and heroin in Gibraltar.

Lathbury barracks –
Surveys undertaken before removal of green area

Acting Clerk: Question 578. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. T N Hammond.

1200

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, what surveys of the green area recently removed at Lathbury Barracks as part of the sports complex construction were undertaken prior to its removal?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

1205

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, surveys and assessments were carried out, as is the norm, to present to the Development and Planning Commission. These refer to environmental impact assessments that included an ecological survey carried out by Wild Life Gibraltar Limited.

1210

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q579/2018

GSLA –
Update re Grade 9 AA post

Acting Clerk: Question 579. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1215

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, further to the answer provided to Question 363/2018, can the Minister for Sport update this House in respect of the Grade 9 (Administrative Assistant) post which was vacant within the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority and being covered temporarily by a supply worker via S&K Recruitment?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

1220

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the S&K worker who was covering the post temporarily decided to explore other avenues and the GSLA is currently working with S&K Recruitment for a suitable replacement to continue to cover the post temporarily.

1225

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, in previous answers relating to this question, the Minister said that this post was on a temporary basis by a recruitment agency because he was reviewing staffing levels and so on. Are there any updates? Having taken someone else on still via a recruitment agency means that (1) there is still an ongoing process in respect to the staffing level, or (2) some other reason that the Minister may enlighten us with.

1230

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, the GSLA is still under review but it is only at this level, i.e. the AA level, as opposed to all the others. As the hon. Member knows, we have done the review from top to bottom and we are at the stage, I think, that it is going to be decided very soon whether we do keep that post or we actually do not need that post for the GSLA. That is why they are using a temporary cover, to see if there is enough work or enough for that person to be doing. Like I said, they are still using S&K but it will get to a point where they will decide we do not need this post or we then have a permanent one.

1235

1240 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q580/2018
Sports Performance Director –
Details of post

Acting Clerk: Question 580. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1245 Hon. E J Reyes: Can Government provide details of the duties assigned to the Sports Performance Director's post, indicating within which Department this post holder is based and what relevant qualifications does the individual possess?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

1250 Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the post of Sports Performance Director was removed from the approved establishment pages for the financial year 2017-18, and I can therefore confirm that this post no longer exists.

1255 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, thank you, Mr Speaker, I had noticed that the estimates of 2016-17 had one post catering for Sports Performance Director and then in 2017-18 it went to zero, which is why I asked him the question where is the post holder based.

Is the Minister confirming that there is no current post holder? And, therefore, if there was one before, what has happened to that individual?

1260 Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, there was –

Mr Speaker: You do not have to answer the second part, what would he do; just confirm whether there is a post holder or not.

1265 Hon. S E Linares: Thank you, Mr Speaker.
Basically, we put that post in the book, nobody had covered it, so there is no reason why ... what they were going to do anyway, but the post was there because at the time during the review that the hon. Member and I have explained before, we envisaged that we were going to have a Sports Performance Director. Now, with the review and all the things that have happened within the GSLA, it is not necessary to have that post.

1270 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q581/2018

Victoria Stadium –

Moneys outstanding from sale of lease

Acting Clerk: Question 583. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1305

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports indicate when does Government expect to receive the balance, which is £6.5 million, still outstanding for the sale of the lease of Victoria Stadium?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

1310

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, it is expected for the Gibraltar Football Association to pay HM Government the outstanding balance of £6.5 million during this financial year.

1315

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q584/2018

Gibraltar National Dance Organisation – Breakdown of grant awarded

Acting Clerk: Question 584. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1320 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, further to the answer provided to Q368/2018, can the Minister for Culture now provide a detailed breakdown of the £11,700 granted to the Gibraltar National Dance Organisation?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

1325 Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, further to the answer provided to Q368/2018, the £11,700 grant to the Gibraltar National Dance Organisation was awarded and used for their participation in the IDO Commonwealth Dance Games held in South Africa and at the IDO World Show Dance Championships held in Riesa, Germany. The grant also went towards the IDO affiliated membership fee.

1330 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, very similar to what I was told last time, and in the schedule we have a grand total of £11,700, which was to do with the IDO affiliation dance workshops, and I had requested how much was the affiliation fee. That was the one that mainly concerned me. The Minister did not have the information at that moment. He said he would try and chase it up. I never wrote to him and he obviously did not do that, which is why I posed the question, but if 1335 the staff who help to prepare the answer for the Minister had followed it up from Hansard he would really find out that what we were trying to establish was is the affiliation fee simply £700, for example, and therefore £11,000 was the actual participation, or what? One has no idea, especially when looking at schedules of how much is given in grants to other people, and so on. That was the main purpose, which can easily be derived from looking at Hansard from the 1340 previous occasion. So maybe the accounting staff would have been able to provide the Minister with information more so in respect of the affiliation fees.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I will give the hon. Member, by the end of business today, exactly the amount of money that the IDO paid for their affiliated membership fee.

1350

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, no money has been paid in compensation to any catering establishment conducting business at the Victoria Stadium.

Q586/2018
Lathbury Barracks Sports Complex –
Parking spaces

Acting Clerk: Question 586. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1355 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how many parking spaces are to be built at the Lathbury Barracks Sports Complex and how many are envisaged to be sold commercially and for what value?

Acting Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, an announcement will be made shortly with details of the number of parking spaces available for sale and value.

1365 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I appreciate that the Government may wish to make an announcement. I am actually asking him now: can he provide that information to the House?

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker.

1370 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I have asked a specific question to which I would like an answer. Either the Minister has the information available and can provide the answer to that question, or he is just plain blank refusing to provide that information to this House because it does not suit his timetable.

1375 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, it is neither of the two.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

1400 May I, though, qualify that by saying that one deputy head post was announced this week and there are several other teaching posts which have been interviewed and the results are expected shortly. Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, while the schedule is being handed over, I have a very short supplementary in respect of the answer given in the schedule to Question 484. Would it be convenient for me to pose that now?

1430 The first entry is 'Qualified Teacher TLR 1B' at Westside School, which is a Science Co-ordinator, and it says '(Ring-fenced)'. Could I have a little bit of clarification of what is meant by ring-fenced in respect of this particular post?

1435 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I will have to enquire as to exactly what that would mean. I assume that it is possibly personal to the holder in relation to certain conditions, but I would need to get that information.

1440 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I would be grateful for that, in fact my first reaction was very similar to the Minister's – could it be something personal to the holder – but because it is vacant, it should not be personal to holder; personal to holder is when someone occupies something personally. I will wait for the Minister to get information as and when he can.

Q487/2018
Notre Dame School –
Cost

Acting Clerk: Question 487. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1445 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Education say what was the original contracted cost in respect of construction of the new Notre Dame School and what the final cost has been?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1450 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, in view of the fact that we will shortly be inviting proposals for similar schools, this information cannot yet be made public.

Q488/2018
St Martin's and Notre Dame Schools –
Outreach programme

Acting Clerk: Question 488. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1455 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Education provide details of any delays or variations in respect of the outreach programme hereto enjoyed by pupils of St Martin's School due to the pending transfer of Notre Dame School into a new site?

1460 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there was no significant impact.

Q489/2018
St Martin's School –
Kusuma Trust

Acting Clerk: Question 489. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1465

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Education provide details of the monetary value of donations made by the Kusuma Trust in 2013 in favour of St Martin's School and what is envisaged will happen to these upon the eventual transfer of St Martin's School to new premises?

1470

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
1475 Mr Speaker, the monetary value of donations made by the Kusuma Trust in 2013 amounted to £310,823.42.

This money went towards building extensions which therefore cannot be transferred to the new school.

Q490/2018
TLRs –
Equalisation between lower and upper primary schools

Acting Clerk: Question 490. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1480

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Education provide an update in respect of any progress made towards the equalisation of TLRs between lower and upper primary schools?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and 1485 Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, this has been agreed and the matter settled.

1490

Mr Speaker: And it was the subject of a very recent press release. Couldn't the Minister have held it up until today?

1495

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): No, Mr Speaker, for a very good reason. The question has come from three months ago and there are press releases which have been backing up because we try and keep to that convention, but the business of Government and in particular the business of Government informing citizens is not one that can be indefinitely held up, although Question Time has been unfortunately held up by the need for us to be dealing with Brexit matters. I am sure it is neither in the interests of hon. Members or ours to be, in the last 48 working hours of the year, dealing with matters which relate principally to questions posed in 1500 September of this year, although that used to be the case when I was elected and Members opposite used to run the Government; but it has not been our practice and it will not be our practice, I hope, in the next calendar year.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q491/2018

GCSEs –

Details of classes with more than 25 pupils

1505 Acting Clerk: Question 491. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Education provide details in respect of how many GCSE classes are currently being taught with more than 25 pupils per class, indicating the subject area and the establishments concerned?

1510

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1515 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there are currently six GCSE classes being taught with more than 25 pupils per class. Three of these are in Westside. They correspond to two Spanish classes and one history class. The other three correspond to Bayside, with one Spanish class, one sociology class and one English class being over 25 pupils.

1520 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Given that there is some sort of agreement or understanding with the Teachers' Association in respect of class sizes, one presumes that there must be exceptional cases why these classes are bigger than 25. Can the Minister confirm is it because there is a shortage of a specialist teacher in that subject area, or is it a question of shortage of available rooms to be able to provide two classes, or for some other valid reason?

1530 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, the average still remains well within. For example, for history classes the average is 23, for Spanish year 10 the average is 22 and for Spanish year 11 in year 11 the average is 20 in Westside. In Bayside the average is 20, 23 and 18 for Spanish, sociology and English.

The fact is that they are over 25 by very little. Four of the six have 26 in the class and the other two have 28 in the class, so it is a question of ... You cannot really have a whole new class just for one or two, so the additional ones are spread out in order to make them very close to 25 and therefore with no significant negative impact on teaching. That is the reason. It is not that we are well over; it is just the odd individual students that are fitted in, in order to not have to provide a full new class for very few students.

Q492/2018

Portakabin classrooms –

Details of use

Acting Clerk: Question 492. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1540 Hon. E J Reyes: Can Government provide details of how many classrooms are currently being conducted in portakabins and the schools they relate to for this academic year?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1545 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, the number of classes currently being conducted in portakabins – and fine portakabins most of them are too – and the schools they relate to are as follows: two in the Gibraltar College, three in St Martin’s and four in Bishop Fitzgerald.

Q493/2018

Casais contract re Bayside/Westside School – Government company signatory to contract

Acting Clerk: Question 493. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1550

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise which Government company signed the contract with Casais for the construction of the new Bayside/Westside school?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1555

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, the company is GEP Ltd.

Q494/2018

New comprehensive school –
Cost of ICT, fixtures, fittings and equipment

Acting Clerk: Question 494. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1560

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise what is the anticipated cost of ICT and fixtures, fittings and equipment for the new comprehensive school?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1565

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, the procurement process for the new comprehensive school’s ICT, fixtures, fittings and equipment is currently underway, so it is not possible to advise on the anticipated costs.

Q495 and Q499-500/2018

St Martin’s, Governor’s Meadow and Bishop Fitzgerald Schools – Expected completion date and cost re Westside site; logistics re walking route; engagement with parents

1570 Acting Clerk: Question 495. Hon. R M Clinton.

1575 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that it is now its intention to demolish the existing Westside School once vacated and build new schools for St Martin's, Bishop Fitzgerald and Governor's Meadow on that site; and if so, what is the expected completion date and cost?

1580 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 499 and 500.

1585 Acting Clerk: Question 499. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1590 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: In connection with the interim arrangements for Governor's Meadow and Bishop Fitzgerald Schools, has Government decided on how the logistics, ranging from lunch areas and pick-up and drop-off points, to the walking route, given the extended journey for many within the catchment area, will work?

Acting Clerk: Question 500. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1595 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: With regard to Governor's Meadow and Bishop Fitzgerald Schools, is Government satisfied that it has engaged sufficiently with parents in connection with the new interim arrangements while the new school is built?

1600 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, in answer to Question 495, no, sir, St Martin's will be built on the area currently taken up by the Westside playing fields. Governor's Meadow and Bishop Fitzgerald will be built on their current sites.

1605 In relation to Question 499, the design process, which is underway, will take account of all of these considerations.

In answer to Question 500, this will of course happen as soon as it is appropriate.

1610 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the hon. Gentleman ... Parents have reported that they feel that there is a lack of communication and they have actually been hearing about arrangements through the kids from the teachers. So, if I may ask the Hon. Minister, would he be willing to enhance communication methods with the parents to give them some comfort and information for future arrangements?

1615 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, not only would I be willing, as I have said, it is a part of the process, but it is just too soon for that. They will be consulted, as has been the case throughout. In fact, the St Martin's School, which is the one that is commencing imminently, there has been discussion with the parents and in fact parents were invited to the presentation which the Chief Minister and I gave in No. 6 a couple of weeks ago. So, at the appropriate time, absolutely they will be allowed to form part of the process.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

1625

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1630 I am grateful to the Minister for his answer. Could he perhaps elaborate on his answer as to what he has in his mind in terms of the planning and logistics for building the new Bishop Fitzgerald, Governor's Meadow and St Martin's? Is it the Government's intention to first have decanted Westside into a new comprehensive before building on the playing field or the sports ground at the back of Westside? And, is it also the Government's intention, where will they decant the pupils in Bishop Fitzgerald and Governor's Meadow while construction is occurring on that footprint?

1635 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this was actually stated in our press call just a couple of weeks ago. (Interjection) It may not have been in the press release, Mr Speaker, but it was mentioned.

1640 The construction of St Martin's will be starting very soon and that will not be awaiting the decanting of Westside School. Arrangements will be made so that there will be no need to pass through Westside School as part of the construction process during school hours.

Bishop Fitzgerald and Governor's Meadow will be decanted into schools that are going to be vacated next summer with the building of new ones. The detail of which exactly is going where is being assessed with the headteachers, but that is the plan.

1645 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer. Can he give the House a categorical assurance that there will be no use of portakabins for decanting?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, sir.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q496/2018

Excluded and suspended students – Numbers in last 12 months

1650 Acting Clerk: Question 496. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many students have been excluded or suspended from our schools in the last 12 months?

1655 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1660 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, from September 2017 to December 2018 – the question came in September but I have been generous and added a couple of months more, so it is more than 12 months; it is from September last year to the current date, or as recently as we have been able to get the information – 37 students have been suspended or excluded from school, a total of 48 suspensions, given that some students have been excluded more than once.

1670 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just to make a point, I am grateful for the hon. Gentleman giving us a further two months, given the fact that we have not had Questions since September.

1675 Although I take the point that the Chief Minister made, that the business as usual for Government should take place and PRs need to be issued, clearly the Chief Minister has used a mechanism within this Chamber to prevent us from asking further questions as from September by listing one of the Bills for First Reading, and therefore we have not been in a position to ask those further questions. I am grateful. I understand the difficulties that the Chief Minister has been in, in relation to the negotiations on Brexit, and that takes priority obviously, but we have been unable to continue asking questions during this period of time because of a mechanism that has been deployed to prevent us from doing so. But I am grateful that the Minister has seen some way to giving us further information related to the question.

1680

Mr Speaker: Next question.

1685 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, the only mechanism that I think is relevant here is the Constitution, which provides that there shall be three meetings for questions in any calendar year, and two meetings for questions in any year where there might be an election. Given that hon. Members thought that there was going to be an election during the course of this year and have said so on a number of occasions and are on record as having estimated that that was going to be the case, they might have been surprised to see that we are not taking advantage of that part of the Constitution.

1690 The part of the Constitution that is relevant is that there should be three meetings for questions. I think this is the sixth meeting for questions that we have had this year, double the number set out in the Constitution, and indeed I believe double, if not almost double, the number of meetings that hon. Members held for questions when they were in government in all the time that they were in Government. So I am satisfied that we have not used any device, as 1695 the hon. Gentleman suggests, to avoid them being able to carry out their constitutional functions or the right that they have to ask questions; but, as he rightly says, we have had to be engaged in respect of other matters, so if he accepts that, I would have thought he cannot then move himself into a position where he is purporting to make a complaint that we have not been able to proceed with questions. We are now dealing with the questions.

1700 It is true that in some instances the questions have been overtaken by events. We fully understand that. It is not our practice not to respect the covenant or the undertaking that we have all to this House not to pre-empt the answers to questions, but in this particular instance it has been impossible. Hon. Members would not have wanted us, I am sure, not to announce the new schools when we were about to get the process of construction, etc. going, simply because 1705 we had a question pending from them, because I do not think that is either politically something that they would be able to defend or indeed something that, in their heart of hearts as Gibraltarians, they would have wished to see.

1710 So, in those circumstances, could I suggest, Mr Speaker, that we use the time available to ask and answer questions?

Mr Speaker: Next question.

1715 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, may I try to ask the Minister – he may just happen to have the information. In respect of his answer to Question 496, where he referred to the suspension or exclusion of 37 students covering 48 separate instances, does he happen to know if all these are within the secondary schools sector or some are in the primary sector? I know we may be conscious of trying not to identify the pupils in particular, but at least by sector.

1720 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes Mr Speaker, I am going from memory rather than from any figures that I have; I do not have the breakdown and will be happy to share it privately with the hon. Member. The majority are in the secondary sector, but I believe there are some that are in the primary sector and, I would have thought, the middle school sector. I would be happy to share that with him if he reminds me later.

1725 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker, and I accept the Minister will share it with me privately as and when he can.

1730

Q497/2018
PGCE programmes –
Number of students in United Kingdom

Acting Clerk: Question 497. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many students are currently pursuing PGCE programmes in the United Kingdom?

1735

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, we currently have 27 students pursuing PGCE programmes in the United Kingdom.

1740

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, one of the reasons why I have brought this question is that from the numbers of student teachers that have approached us it would appear that we would tend to have an oversupply of our students going to study for these further professional examinations. What plans does the Government have to attempt to ensure that the people that we have sent out and the people who are studying these particular courses have a job when they return home?

1745

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, we –

1750

Mr Speaker: May I suggest that the Hon. Minister may answer this particular supplementary after the next question, because the matter is related?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: If that is all right with – 1755

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q498/2018
Teaching supply list –
Number of teachers on list

Acting Clerk: Question 498. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many teachers are on the supply list?

1760

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1765 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there are 118 teachers on the supply list and I am happy to go straight into that supplementary.

I suppose you could say the same of any profession. We have students out there – dare I mention lawyers – who then come back and they cannot be guaranteed a job, but the 1770 Government policy for decades has been that we support young people following the career of their choice, whether or not we can then offer them a job. Actually, of the 118 teachers on the supply list, many of them are called in very regularly, particularly... obviously when there are vacancies that, as you can see, we are making efforts to fill on a regular basis ... Also maternity leave. Many teachers are young women, who obviously have children at this time in their career.
1775 So, a lot of them are used on a fairly regular basis, but it is something that goes with any profession if you are going to support students who want to further their career in their chosen path and not have any limitations, and it has not been the policy of this Government now, or previous Governments, to curtail that.

1780 Hon. E J Phillips: Whilst I agree entirely with what the Chief Minister says in relation to allowing choice for every one of our students to take a subject that is in their interest and in the interest of our community as young ambassadors going out to university and studying specific courses, would the Minister agree though that we should sort of, undertake advanced career management and planning and also manage our students' expectations of a job properly?
1785 Because if we do have an oversupply, or many of our students are going out to do a particular course – say in teaching and we have an oversupply and very few jobs to fill in respect of teaching – don't you think we should be managing those expectations more appropriately and preparing them for future careers and advanced career management?

1790 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Yes, Mr Speaker, that is already done, but I think in particular we should also make clear to the hon. Members opposite that although there is going to be an election next year I do not anticipate there being any vacancies for Government.

1795 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if I may just confirm, at the time of a student going to the Department of Education to discuss their scholarship and so on, they are given this advice. Certainly some students will come to me and I always tell them that they cannot have an expectation, but I always encourage them to follow the career of their choice because things do usually tend to work out. This kind of advice is already provided and we are hoping to enhance that even further in the future.

1800 Mr Speaker: Yes. The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1805 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in relation to the 118 teachers on the supply list, does the Minister have the statistics as to how many of those have been working as supply teachers for more than 12 months?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, I do not have that information. It is not a part of the Question.

1810 In many cases, or in some cases at least, somebody may be covering one person's maternity leave and then another one goes and it moves over, but I do not have that kind of information here; I would have to request it.

1815 Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Hon. Minister have this information: how many of those 118 are actually covering a vacancy, for example? The Hon. Minister mentioned vacancies in his previous answer?

1820 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it cannot be more than the number that I gave in answer to Question 484, which listed the vacancies. So it is not more than 15 or 20 and the vacancies are regularly being filled. In fact, there are some posts that have been announced this week, some that are due to be announced shortly, and more vacancies have actually been advertised this week – which, if I may, Mr Speaker, is one of the reasons why this press release had to go at the time. The vacancies were being held back because this equalisation meant that the pay was changing and, therefore, the pool of interested teachers would have been interested in knowing what the new pay grade was going to be, and therefore, in order not to delay this further we had to make an announcement so the advert could go out.

1825 The vacancies are being filled regularly, I am happy to say, and so it will not be more than that number. I think that other absences like long-term sickness or maternity are two of the major reasons that one would find for the use of supplies.

1830 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, could I ask the Hon. Minister how it is that six or seven years ago when the Government came into administration they proudly wiped off the supply list with the 40-odd or 50-odd and now we see ourselves with triple that amount? How does this discrepancy pan out?

1835 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is very different. The others were permanent supplies taking up posts, or posts that had cropped up and were being filled without any regularisation. This is different. This is covering for absences, so it is a very different situation.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q501/2018
The Mount –
Listing under Heritage and Antiquities Act

1840 Acting Clerk: Question 501. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it intends to list the Mount buildings under the Heritage and Antiquities Act; and if not, why not?

1845 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1850 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Mount is one of the sites that will be assessed by the new Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council, which will then make recommendations to me as to whether they consider that it should be added to the schedule.

1855 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, the Minister will recall having attended the Heritage Trust AGM recently and he did intimate he would be making an announcement shortly in relation to the Mount. Can he give this House some indication as to what would have been the nature of that announcement? Is that in terms of the sale of the Mount or the use of the Mount; or is it in fact, as he just mentioned, some deliberation as to whether it should be listed?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is in relation to a number of issues but we are not yet ready to make that Statement.

1860

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Minister give any kind of assurance to the House today that there is no intention to demolish any of the buildings on the Mount?

1865

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, sir. I have to qualify that, because there may be some buildings in the Mount which are old, ramshackle and not part of the historical building. There is, for example, an old electricity substation which may at one stage be demolished. My confirmation does not extend to that sort of thing.

1870

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for his answer and I appreciate he may not have the answer to this question, but has the Mount, to his knowledge, been sold or is it in the process of being sold?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, sir. (Interjections)

1875

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): I am quite happy to speak on behalf of the whole Government – I think once again, Mr Speaker, because I think we have been asked this before – to say that the Mount has not been sold. But I recommend to the hon. Gentlemen that he put the question every six months – or every month, if he likes, and we can give him the answer every month.

1880

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Hon. R M Clinton: No, Mr Speaker, if I may – 1885

Mr Speaker: I do not want any unnecessary controversy. We move on.

Q502/2018
Governor's Parade – Refurbishment

Acting Clerk: Question 502. The Hon. L F Llamas.

1890

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, when does the Government envisage refurbishing Governor's Parade?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1895

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, plans are being considered.

1900

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, whilst plans are being considered, would the Hon. Minister take note and perhaps implement some sort of maintenance programme, because it is looking rather poor at the moment and shoddy? Whilst plans are considered – and years and months may pass – the place is looking rather grim, so could the Minister assure us whether they would implement some sort of maintenance programme in the area?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. I am reminded that it is looking a lot better than when it had a big hole next to it. At least you can look across at the beautiful trees in the park.

1905 The reason why we are seriously considering plans to improve the area is precisely because we realise that the area needs improving, and it will be improved when we are ready to do so.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

1910

Q503/2018

New Harbours industrial estate – Agreement re solar panels

Acting Clerk: Question 503. The Hon. L F Llamas.

1915 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a copy of the agreement entered into for the installation of solar panels on the roof of New Harbours industrial estate?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1920 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there is a power purchase agreement in place with regard to the installation of solar panels on the roof of New Harbours industrial estate. This is the standard template which is being used in all renewable projects. It is commercially sensitive, Mr Speaker, and therefore a copy cannot be provided.

1930 Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, given that the Government allowed this commercial project to happen without a proper tender process or a fair and transparent process whereby other providers could have provided the Government with equal or at least a competitive bid, why has this now become a, sort of, commercially sensitive agreement whereby the Opposition and the community are not able to scrutinise the details that the Government has entered into – and now the Government, in September, have actually gone out for tender for different projects, which are similar and perhaps even actually smaller than this one?

1935 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this particular project dates back quite a number of years. It was at a time when this Government, for the first time in decades, there was a Government here seriously looking at renewable energy – or looking at renewable energy at all – and a number of different parties came forward making proposals. They were all spoken to and they were all entertained and this is the only one that was able to deliver. Therefore, it was not that there was any preference given to that; this was the only one that was able to deliver. Precisely in order to encourage others and more at this time when people were seeing that this was actually happening and there was more interest being generated, we have gone out and we are now considering a number of different companies to be able to carry on our solar projects for the future.

1945 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q504/2018

Third-party puppy and kitten sales –
Intention to ban

Acting Clerk: Question 504. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1950 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Government intend to consider the banning of third-party puppy and kitten sales in Gibraltar, as is proposed in the UK following the Lucy's Law campaign?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1955 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

1960 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, will the Government, as part of legislating in this area, also consider imposing an extra territorial ban on the importation of puppies and kittens from effectively puppy farms in Spain? Because of course, here in Gibraltar we do not have any puppy farms; we had one pet shop, but really the problem is going to be importation from Spain.

1965 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, this is why I say we are considering it. We are looking at how we can apply the principles of Lucy's Law in Gibraltar, where we do not have these commercial institutions. So this is being drafted into the Pet Animals Act and the hon. Member will be able to see that draft very soon, and I would be very happy to share it with him in advance of publication given his interest in the matter.

1970 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful to the hon. Gentleman; and indeed if the hon. Gentleman thinks that it might be useful to him, if he can send me the legislation on ivory and also the importation of trophies from animals, I will give him my views in advance.
Thank you very much.

Q505-6 and Q515-16/2018

Dogs –
Numbers registered; DNA testing re fouling

Acting Clerk: Question 505. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1975 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can this Government please state how many dogs were registered in Gibraltar under the Animals and Birds Rules 2004 as at the end of 2008, 2012 and 2017; or, if those statistics are not available, please provide any reliable statistics to show the increases or decreases in the number of dogs lawfully in Gibraltar over the last 10 years?

1980 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 506, 515 and 516.

1985 Acting Clerk: Question 506. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in relation to any convictions and/or fines for dog fouling, how many have resulted from the Government's DNA testing initiative?

Acting Clerk: Question 515. The Hon. D A Feetham on behalf of the Hon. T N Hammond.

1990

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many DNA samples of dog faeces have been tested since 1st January 2018 and how many fines have resulted from that testing?

Acting Clerk: Question 516. The Hon. D A Feetham.

1995

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many checks for unregistered dogs have been made since 1st January 2018 and how many fines have been issued?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

2000

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the schedule I now hand over lists the number of registered dogs under the Animals and Birds Rules.

Answer to Q505/2018

Number of registered dogs:

YEAR	Number of Dogs
2008	1569 Dogs
2012	1665 Dogs
2017	3012 Dogs

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: In relation to Question 506, all of these have resulted from the Government's DNA testing initiative.

2005

At the time of drafting the question – this is probably a couple of months old; this is one of the ones I do not think has been updated to the current date – 146 samples have been taken and have been sent for analysis. As a result of the DNA testing, eight fixed penalty notices have been issued, five have been paid and three are pending court proceedings.

2010

Since 1st January 2018, 220 dog owners have been checked. Four fines have been placed by the Environmental Protection and Research Unit for non-registration of dogs.

Mr Speaker: Supplementary, the Hon. Daniel Feetham.

2015

Hon. D A Feetham: In answer to a question that I lodged and my learned Friend the Leader of the Opposition, Mr Phillips, asked earlier on – how many convictions or fines had there been for dog fouling in each of the last 10 years – for 2016-17 there were two, and for 2017-18 there were nil. That is the answer that was provided by Minister Costa.

2020

As I understand it now, the answer to the question that has been posed to the Hon. Minister is that 146 samples had been sent for analysis and eight fixed penalty notices had been issued. I do not understand what the discrepancy – it may not be a discrepancy – between the two answers is. Can he just explain that for our purposes, please?

2025

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, fixed penalty notices are issued there on the spot or sent by post and would not have gone through the courts and therefore they would not appear in my hon. Friend's statistics. They would not have been the subject of court proceedings because they would have been settled, except for three which were pending at the time and, not knowing 2030 exactly whether we are talking about the same timeframe, these three may or may not have been captured in my hon. Friend's reply. But the fixed penalty notices are different if they have been paid; if they have not been paid, then that would trigger off the court proceedings.

2035 Minister for Tourism, Employment, Commercial Aviation and the Port (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, can I just add that fixed penalty notices are not convictions and therefore one thing is an answer in relation to convictions, another thing is an answer in relation to fixed penalty notices. They are, as the Hon. Minister has said, different things. Fixed penalty notices are not convictions. It is not just a different procedure and therefore differently recorded; fixed penalty notices are not convictions.

2040 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, it is not controversial, but the question that I asked of Minister Costa was how many convictions or fines had been issued. A fine – (Interjection) Of course, a fine can be issued pursuant to a fixed penalty notice. You choose to pay the fine and therefore the process does not go any further.

2045 Hon. N F Costa: A fixed penalty notice is different to a fine.

Hon. D A Feetham: My understanding is a fixed penalty notice gives rise to a fine.

Hon. N F Costa: No. It is an administrative penalty.

2050 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, a fine generally arises from a conviction. A fixed penalty notice is not a conviction and therefore not a fine; it is just a fixed penalty notice, as defined by law.

Hon. D A Feetham: We are, with respect –

2055 Mr Speaker: May I suggest that the legal practitioners should suspend these discussions for another time outside this Chamber.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Hear, hear.

2060 Hon. N F Costa: And the best in Chairman in history, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Indeed, Mr Speaker, because we are really splitting hairs in relation to this.

2065 Of the eight fixed penalty notices, those eight have been this year – or were they in 2017? Does he have a split in relation to those eight, at all?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, Question 515 actually defines the answer to that supplementary because it asks 'since 1st January 2018'. So therefore yes, this year.

2070 Mr Speaker: Any other supplementary? Okay, we then go to –

Hon. D A Feetham: No, Mr Speaker, please. (Mr Speaker: Yes.) I have been asking questions on my own behalf and on behalf of Mr Hammond. (Mr Speaker: I know.) My questions are phrased slightly differently from Mr Hammond's.

2075 In terms of the number of dogs, in 2008 there were 1,569 dogs legally registered in Gibraltar; While in 2017 there were 3,012 dogs registered in Gibraltar, so that is almost double the number of dogs. Does he have any kind of explanation for what is a very significant increase in the number of dogs in Gibraltar?

2080 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I do not think this is reflecting an increase in the number of dogs; I think it is reflecting an increase in the number of dogs that actually are getting registered. When we introduced new legislation requiring them to be microchipped and DNA 2085 and tested, there was a big response from dog owners wanting to comply with the law. Obviously we also increased the fine for non-registration to £1,000 and clearly this has had the desired effect and therefore we have seen an increase in dogs being registered, rather than in the number of dogs in Gibraltar. That is what my team advise me and I actually believe that is correct.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I have to say, as a dog owner myself, as an owner of four dogs, obviously I am ... But I am not the worst culprit on this side of the House, I can tell you – there 2090 are people who own more than four dogs.

One of the comments that is often made to me about the state of our streets, for example, and dog fouling, is 'Well, because there are far more dogs today than there were 10 years ago.'
That is the reason why I asked this, because I wanted to see whether that was correct or it was not correct. So what the Hon. Minister is saying is effectively if there is an increase in dog fouling 2095 and our streets are worse because of fouling by dogs, this has nothing to do really with the number of dogs; this has got to do with habits by the owners of dogs, and indeed potentially also it has to follow with the way that our streets are cleaned by whoever it is that is tasked with cleaning our streets.

2100 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the dog fouling in the streets is the responsibility of the dog owners and therefore, if they do not clean up, this would ... If there were an increase it would be a reflection of the number of irresponsible dog owners or the number of times an irresponsible dog owner takes their dog for a walk. You cannot have any convincing statistics on this, but I do not agree that dog fouling is worse. Any dog fouling is more dog fouling than any of us would 2105 want to see, but I am told by those who enforce the law that it has got more difficult to find dog fouling in certain areas which have been targeted. We have still got a lot of work to do, but I think that slowly we are beginning to win the battle.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, thank you very much and that is a very helpful answer, as 2110 somebody who owns dogs and who does not want dogs to be used as a scapegoat for the state of our streets. So, that is very welcome, certainly to my ears.

Mr Speaker, when I asked the supplementary about the eight fixed penalty notices and I was told to refer back to Mr Hammond's question – Mr Hammond's question was 1st January 2018, as from that date – my own question related to any convictions and/or fines for dog fouling and 2115 how many have resulted from the Government's DNA testing initiative. That was my question. It was not time limited at all. Does he have any statistics pre 1st January 2018 in terms of fixed penalty notices? Let's put it that way to avoid any further controversy. Does he have any statistics of that pre 1st January 2018?

2120 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Not here, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess until four this afternoon.

Standing Order 7(1) suspended to proceed with Government Statement

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

5 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move, under Standing Order 7(3), to suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with a Government Statement.

Mr Speaker: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

State Aid Decision, No-deal planning and Joint sovereignty – Statement by the Chief Minister

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

10

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, there are three European matters I would like to address in this Statement to the House. The first will be the State Aid Decision of yesterday; also, aspects of no-deal planning; and finally, some repeated remarks I hear in the Spanish political system about matters relating to joint sovereignty in the context of our departure from the European Union.

15

Turning first to the issue of state aid, a press release was issued by the European Commission yesterday announcing that it had adopted a final Decision closing its state aid investigation into Gibraltar's Income Tax Act 2010. It is an important Decision in that it concludes an investigation, that has lasted over six years, into the entirety of our corporate tax system, and I wish to give the House some element of background in respect of this matter.

20

The Income Tax Act 2010 was presented to the Parliament by the former administration. It entered into force on 1st January 2011. The former administration decided not to notify this new measure to the EU Commission at the time that it was adopted. Six months after coming into office, on 1st June 2012, I was informed that the Spanish government had filed a complaint with the European Commission claiming that the Income Tax Act 2010 as a whole constituted unlawful state aid. In particular, the Spanish government considered that the aim of the Income Tax Act 2010 was to maintain what it called the 'offshore tax regime' that the Gibraltar Government had put an end to when it abolished the legislation on exempt and qualifying companies. The Spanish government was also using this complaint to revive the spectre of their 30 earlier complaints on regional selectivity. Hon. Members will recall earlier cases before DG competition on regional and material selectivity.

After examining the numerous allegations made by Spain and after hearing extensive submissions from the Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar, on 16th October 2013 the Commission opened a formal investigation. However, it did so only in relation to two discreet 35 aspects of the Income Tax Act 2010, namely, a tax exemption given to certain interest and royalty income. The Commission's concerns with respect to these two matters were addressed, on a without prejudice basis, by the Gibraltar Government through amendments made to the Income Tax Act back in July 2013, then dealing with interest, and in January 2014 dealing with royalty payments.

40 In parallel to the above, the European Commission also asked questions on the practice of tax rulings by the then Income Tax Office in Gibraltar. In the view of Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar, the Commission's questions were mistakenly influenced by the inquiries it was making into certain tax rulings given in other European tax jurisdictions in wholly different cases concerning individual companies. Hon. Members will remember the publicity given to cases 45 involving companies such as Starbucks, Apple and Microsoft and the Commission's subsequent policy to investigate the practice of tax rulings throughout the whole of the European Union.

Notwithstanding the Gibraltar Government's submissions, on 1st October 2014 the Commission decided to extend its investigation to the practice of tax rulings by the Income Tax Office in Gibraltar. The decision was taken by the Spanish Commissioner, Sr Almunia, who at that 50 time was responsible for state aid whilst discussions regarding a large number of tax rulings were still ongoing. Sr Almunia had, in other cases, been suspected of national partiality, I think it is fair to say. He took the decision to commence the investigation in haste, just weeks before the end of his term as Competition Commissioner. The decision contained a number of palpable errors. In fact, Mr Speaker, I feel I should inform the House today that the information reaching 55 the Government of Gibraltar at the time was that Sr Almunia had been persuaded that there was no good reason to pursue the investigation, but he nonetheless took the formal decision to commence the investigation. The decision, as I say, contained a number of palpable errors. It triggered a series of events, including direct communications between myself and the then new President of the European Commission and the then new Competition Commissioner, 60 Mme Vestager. Those errors were, to a large extent, acknowledged by the Commission.

Hon. Members will see that this explains why the decision into opening an investigation into the practice of tax rulings in Gibraltar was not published until 7th October 2016 – that is to say almost two years after it had been taken. It was immediately challenged by my Government before the General Court of the European Union and that case is currently still pending.

65 At the same time as bringing the legal challenge, we remained fully engaged with the Commission in its investigation of the tax rulings practices in Gibraltar. During that time, extensive exchanges have taken place and numerous meetings have been attended to by the Gibraltar team in Brussels. I have attended some of the higher-level meetings on this subject myself. In that process, we have been able to persuade the Commission that there was no
70 systematic problem with the practice of tax rulings in Gibraltar, as the Commission had been led to believe that there was. We have also demonstrated that, in its tax rulings, the Income Tax Office simply provided an expression of the law applicable to a particular case and based on the facts submitted to it.

It is vitally important that the House should bear in mind that in yesterday's Decision the Commission has accepted Gibraltar's arguments that the tax ruling practice, as a whole, under 75 the Income Tax Act 2010 does not constitute State Aid.

I would like to thank and congratulate the excellent team at the Income Tax Office, past and present, for this finding. They have come under severe criticism and suspicion by the European Commission that they simply did not apply rigour or seriousness to how they went about 80 performing their important functions. Nothing could have been further from the truth, as is now established beyond any reasonable dispute.

Mr Frank Carreras, in particular, when he was Commissioner of Income Tax, was subjected to severe and unjustified and unfair cross-examination by the Commission on more than one occasion. He has come out of this process with flying colours and with his reputation vindicated and enhanced, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

85

I would also like to thank the current Commissioner, John Lester, who joins me in the House today, and Terence Rocca, Crown Counsel at the Income Tax Office, also in the House today, for the tremendous work they have done in producing the material that was necessary to dispel the wholly unjustified suspicion that there was a systematic non-compliance of the law by the Income Tax Office in Gibraltar.

90

In the discussions with the Commission, the Government has agreed to introduce legislation regulating the practice on tax rulings in order to place it on a legislative footing, as well as providing some guidance notes in respect of those rulings. Those notes include references on the interpretation of the territorial principle of taxation. These were published by Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar in October 2018. Isaac Levy of Hassans International Law Firm, of which I declare I am a partner on a sabbatical, was a key part of the Government team also. He is the practitioner instructed to draft the regulations on tax rulings and all the guidance notes and he joins me in Parliament today.

95

The Government's approach has been fully vindicated in yesterday's Decision, which allows us to continue with the practice of tax rulings even whilst we remain members of the European Union. Furthermore, of the 165 rulings that the Commission has been investigating it has found errors only in relation to five of them, all of which concern transactions involving Dutch Ltd partnerships, which have also been controversial in other EU jurisdictions. None of the five in Gibraltar present any serious problems or issues. I think it is worth setting out that this represents just 3% of the rulings initially concerned; or to put it another way, the fact is that the Commission investigation instigated by Commissioner Almunia was found to be groundless in 97% of the cases it investigated.

100

Last night I was provided with a copy of the Commission Decision to be adopted. As a party to the Decision, we are currently examining it in relation to matters relating to confidentiality or for manifest errors before confirming to the Commission that we agree to its publication. It is quite a detailed Decision, which will be made public shortly.

110

There are other important findings in the Commission's reasoning for the Decision which we have been able to make submissions on during the time that the investigation has been open. Most importantly, the Commission has vigorously rejected Spain's attempt to reopen the regional selectivity issue and has found that Gibraltar, and Gibraltar alone, constitutes the reference framework for analysing any tax measure adopted by the Gibraltar Government. This is of great value and importance. It would, of course, have set us up magnificently well for operations in the European Single Market. The result of the 2016 referendum, however, will now likely see us leave membership of the Single Market in 99 days' time, on 29th March next year. If there is a Withdrawal Agreement, we may enjoy access for another two years, although I note that Members not opposite do not see any value to the Withdrawal Agreement.

115

Returning to the Decision, Mr Speaker, the Commission also recalls that Gibraltar has full internal self-governance, in particular with respect to tax matters.

In the forthcoming days I will be examining with the team the order for recovery made by the Commission. Our first reaction on initial reading is that the Commission has greatly exaggerated the level of the recovery and that the order is nowhere near as high as the Commission's press release indicates.

125

I am therefore absolutely delighted by yesterday's ruling. Although it is termed a negative Decision, it is in effect a minor Decision in the context of what is negative for Gibraltar whilst at the same time it vindicates our view that there is nothing fundamentally unlawful or wrong with our Income Tax Act 2010. Indeed, considering that the entirety of the Act was under examination by the European Commission, the result of the investigation, which in total has taken over six years, is a remarkable success for Gibraltar and a massive blow for all those who seek to denigrate Gibraltar as a tax jurisdiction.

135 The propaganda war against us will, no doubt, not end here; but every time that we are challenged in future we will, as a jurisdiction, be able to point to this seminal important Decision. We will be able to point to the fact that our Income Tax Act has survived challenge on the grounds of state aid. We will be able to point to the fact that 97% of the rulings investigated by the Commission survived full and detailed inquiry. I doubt we will hear much of that excellent 140 record in the propaganda war.

The entire investigation has required us to only make minor amendments to the Act, on interest and royalties, and to place on a legislative footing the practice of tax rulings in Gibraltar. The net result of this investigation is that the Income Tax Act now enjoys a full, clean bill of health from the Commission. This is great, great news indeed. In fact, Mr Speaker, whether we 145 are in the EU or out of the EU, this is an important feather in our cap as a jurisdiction.

In the forthcoming days, I will be studying further the Decision with the team and shall make any further announcements that may emerge from that analysis. In particular, we will consider whether we should now withdraw the pending court case.

For many years Gibraltar's tax system has been a constant subject of examination by the European Commission, whether under state aid rules or by the Code of Conduct Group on 150 Business Taxation. On each occasion, these investigations have been at the suit of the government of the Kingdom of Spain. Even though we may now be leaving the European Union, it is with a measure of great satisfaction that we will be doing so with a corporate tax regime that has been found to be fully compliant with EU rules. I have no doubt that this will stand us in 155 good stead, whatever the future may bring.

During all these years of investigation and court cases, which have spanned close to 18 years and covered both my administration and the previous administration, the Gibraltar negotiating and legal team has been led by the Government's Chief Legal Adviser and now Attorney General, Michael Llamas QC. I would like to express my sincerest thanks and gratitude to him for all his 160 work and commitment to this matter on behalf of my Government and the former administration also. Mr Llamas's legal skills have thwarted the underlying Spanish complainants or objectors in all fields where they have sought to damage Gibraltar: from voting in European parliamentary elections to admission in UEFA and FIFA, from the Code Group to the European Commission and from the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg to the Court of Justice
165 of the European Union, Michael Llamas has been the legal scourge of those who unfairly seek to taint our nation's practices in every field. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) And so, Mr Speaker, as we prepare to leave the European Union, with the further challenges that this will likely entail, Gibraltar could have no better senior law officer, no better Attorney General.

170 During all this time, he has been ably flanked by two leading practitioners in this field, Mr Asger Petersen and Mr John Temple Lang. These two gentlemen are one Danish and the other Irish. Both have long worked alongside Michael Llamas during his time in Brussels, and although neither is a Gibraltarian they have done an absolutely excellent job in defending Gibraltar. Although they are unknown to almost everyone in Gibraltar, I would like to express my 175 deep gratitude to both of them on behalf of the Government and on behalf of the people of Gibraltar.

And for some years now, the team has also been composed of the Financial Secretary, Mr Albert Mena, who has brought his financial and fiscal expertise to the team and to whom I also extend my sincerest thanks and gratitude. He has spent many hours supporting the 180 Attorney General in respect of this matter and has been a hugely important part of the team that has delivered this result for Gibraltar. (Banging on desks) I brought them here, Mr Speaker, on the basis that they needed to help me to answer questions, not because they thought they were going to be thanked and embarrassed with banging on the table. (Laughter)

185 Mr Speaker, the second matter I would like to address is the Communication published yesterday by the European Commission on its Contingency Action Plan ahead of a no-deal Brexit. This is Commission Communication 890/2018. In that Communication the Commission states:

By virtue of Article 355(3) of the Treaty on the functioning of the European Union TFEU and to the extent provided for in the 1972 Act of Accession of the United Kingdom to the European Communities, Union law applies to Gibraltar as a European territory for whose external relations a Member State is responsible. Article 355(3) TFEU will no longer apply to Gibraltar when the United Kingdom is no longer a Member State. As a consequence, contingency measures will not apply to Gibraltar.

190 Mr Speaker, that statement has not taken me or anyone in the Government's Brexit team by surprise, as you can imagine. In fact, it has served to strengthen my conviction that, in the context of the United Kingdom leaving the European Union, the best and safest outcome for Gibraltar in the Brexit negotiations is that the Withdrawal Agreement is approved by the House of Commons and the European Parliament. That is how Gibraltar's interests will be best safeguarded, because the statement made by the Commission in the Communication yesterday gives us a good taste of the prospect of what may lie ahead for us in a no-deal scenario.

195 In that context I also want to clearly reflect that our position is that the Memoranda of Understanding that have been agreed by us with Spain are agreed in the context of the existence of the Withdrawal Agreement. They are agreements designed to implement commitments set out in the Protocol on Gibraltar in the Withdrawal Agreement. Without a Withdrawal Agreement there is no Protocol on Gibraltar. Without a Protocol on Gibraltar, there are no effective memoranda hanging off it.

200 But that is not to say that in a no-deal context we would not wish to consider with Spanish colleagues how to adapt arrangements to ensure we work to soften the blow of no deal for our respective citizens and continue to seek co-operation on the terms of the MoUs in those important policy areas. We will start consideration of such matters in early January in meetings in London with UK and Spanish colleagues. But we do not consider that it is accurate to say that the MoUs can automatically be considered to be in effect if there is no withdrawal agreement. The opposite is our legal view.

205 Now, as we are 99 days short of leaving the European Union, let us be clear, Mr Speaker: the position of Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar is that the best course for Gibraltar is to remain in the European Union. I have detected attempts by not Members opposite to suggest that we prefer the Withdrawal Agreement to remaining in the EU. Utter nonsense, Mr Speaker. Our preferred course is for this Brexit nightmare to end. The best way to end it is for the Article 50 notice to be revoked, as the Court of Justice of the European Union has now agreed is possible at any time before 29th March. An alternative might be a new referendum in the United Kingdom, as I set out in July 2016.

215 Hon. Members will have different assessments of the likelihood of any of those eventualities becoming a reality. The fact, however, is that if we are leaving on 29th March, then there is enormous value in leaving on the basis of an agreement for that purpose. The notice from the European Union yesterday shows the types of issues we may face with the remaining 27 if we leave without a deal. And therefore, when I am criticised by some not opposite, who with compulsive blindness still do not appear to understand the importance of my Government's achievements in ensuring that Gibraltar forms part of the Withdrawal Agreement and the transition period, I tell them to look at statements of the type issued yesterday by the EU Commission and I take it as an indicator of what may well lie ahead of us and what we can avoid with the agreement we have ensured will apply to Gibraltar if it is brought into effect.

225 I have already made my position clear on the various scenarios that may emerge with Brexit in the next 99 days and I will not repeat them now. In any event, as you know, the Deputy Chief Minister and I returned from London yesterday, from meetings precisely on contingency planning. The people of Gibraltar should be in no doubt that we are keeping every eventuality in mind and planning for each one of them. We are also now ramping up implementation for a no-

230 deal scenario. We will be ready for the morning of 30th March, but we will unashamedly look out for the interests of our citizens and residents above all else in such circumstances and those who might think it wise or clever to seek to exclude Gibraltar from some EU mitigation measures in the event of a no-deal Brexit need to know one thing: a careful analysis will actually show that 235 the Gibraltarians and the residents of Gibraltar will not be the ones to be most affected by such steps. Additionally, a hugely important measure in respect of freedom of movement has been stated by the EU Commission to be applicable to Gibraltar residents, namely the freedom to access the Schengen Area without a visa.

Mr Speaker, I have designated the Deputy Chief Minister to deal with all logistical aspects of a potential no-deal exit from the EU. I have no doubt that his cool and calm efficiency will assist 240 me in harnessing all the power of the Civil Service and the public sector for the challenges to come.

We should also not lose sight of the fact that we are now able to boast of two things which can provide security for our people as we move into the festive season. The first is that we are able to boast about our arrangements with the UK in order to see continued access to the UK 245 market in financial services, gaming, etc. The value of this cannot be underestimated. Matters also relating to education, health, etc., which are going to become bilateral between Gibraltar and the UK but which have until now been underpinned by EU rules, are going to continue seamlessly also as a result of the work we have done with colleagues in the United Kingdom.
This is of huge value and only some individuals not opposite have seen fit to try to denigrate the 250 value of that. Indeed, I fully expect that the temporal period of those arrangements will, in any event, be open to extension beyond 2020, if necessary.

The second matter of great value, which some not opposite have chosen to denigrate, is the Gibraltar parts of the Withdrawal Agreement presented by the Prime Minister and agreed with the EU. Slowly I think it will dawn on many that if we are to leave – which we do not want to 255 do – it is better to leave on the basis of the Agreement and not without it, and what should not be allowed to fly is the ‘unicorn’ that we should be directing our energies to trying to bring about remaining in the European Union at this stage. If there is a further referendum, we will back remain. If there is no deal after the UK Parliament votes on Mrs May’s deal, we will back a recision of the Article 50 notification before an extension. But we have a duty as a reasonable 260 and a responsible Government to be ready for eventualities. We do not have the freedom to be irresponsible and simply ignore reality. We have to work on the basis of the realities that are before us and which we are dealing with in our relationship with the UK government, and we have to work on the basis of the work that has already been carefully done – the heat maps and the understanding of the matters that will arise in a no-deal scenario. In that way, with great 265 effort and energy, we will ensure that, if necessary, we will be ready on the morning of 30th March to welcome a dawn that will rise as optimistic and positive for our people as the morning of 1st January 1973. Let no one think that preparing for a no-deal Brexit will be easy or comfortable, but prepare we will and prepared we will be for that morning of our new future as a people.

270 Additionally, Mr Speaker, I must also, I feel, address directly the question of the motion of the Spanish Senate urging the government of the Kingdom of Spain to put the issue of joint sovereignty to the United Kingdom now.

I think it is important that we put on record the unanimous position of the people, Parliament and Government of Gibraltar, first of all, that it is nonsense to suggest that matters relating to 275 the sovereignty of Gibraltar should be raised with the United Kingdom, given the clear and unequivocal position of the UK in respect of the double lock – and the people, Parliament and Government of Gibraltar are not going to unlock the double lock.

But secondly, and more seriously, Mr Speaker, I think it is important that we should send a clear and unequivocal message together to anyone in Spain who thinks that there is any chance 280 that any proposal for Spanish sovereignty over Gibraltar will ever prosper. In particular, given the return to influence of the not missed Mr Margallo and his ideas, let us be very clear:

Gibraltar will not waiver. We will not soften. We will not ripen. That message unfortunately appears to have to be delivered in a way that is inordinately clear; otherwise it does not appear to get through. So, I was clear that Jose Manuel Garcia Margallo should wake up and smell the coffee, because Gibraltar is never going to be Spanish. When he pressed, I told him clearly that the answer was 'no way, Jose'.

Now we see a resurgence, in particular but not exclusively from the Spanish right wing, of the idea of joint sovereignty. I think that there is no depth of understanding in any political party in Spain of how foolish this notion is. Gibraltarians are not going to change their minds. We are not going to be bribed with access to the EU market. We are not going to be bribed with any sweet or reward. We are not going to be cajoled by any threat or by any action. Can they, please, get it into their heads in all of the political factions in Spain? Can they, please, just forget it?

As the current Spanish Minister for Europe, Sr Marco Aguiriano, recently said in one of his interventions before one of the select committees in Madrid, the fact is that they know that if the question of sovereignty or joint sovereignty is put to us, we will not have the discussion; we will close our files and leave the room. That is what Sr Aguiriano told the parliament would happen. There will be no discussion to be had. I commend Sr Aguiriano's understanding to all of his parliamentary colleagues because our 96% vote to remain in the European Union should never be misinterpreted by anyone to be a vote to choose Europe over Britain. That would never be our position.

Thank you very much, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister for the Statement, which he kindly gave me as soon as he rose to his feet so that we can fully consider his Statement. We will, of course, study the Statement that he has provided this House and reply publicly in due course.

In relation to the first point he made in relation to state aid, we welcome that particular Statement by the Chief Minister. We will, of course, ourselves study the Decision itself and we congratulate all of those who are sitting behind the Chief Minister and beyond this House who have contributed to protecting Gibraltar's position.

In respect of the Chief Minister's jibe on our position on the Withdrawal Agreement, we maintain that position, Mr Speaker. It is not a debate for now; it is certainly a debate that we may have in due course, depending on the position in the Westminster Parliament in January.

In respect of the Chief Minister's comments on a no-deal Brexit, we will of course consider the notice that has been referred to this House and the position that has been clearly articulated.

In respect of the Chief Minister's comments and the part of his contribution in relation to joint sovereignty, we of course join the Chief Minister in his challenge set out in his Statement, and, of course, Mr Speaker, our community has faced more than 14 sieges, both economic and otherwise, and certainly will face this challenge together, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

How remarkable that a Leader of the Opposition decides that on the main issue of the day, which is what is going to happen in 99 days, he tells me that he just wants to think about what I have said and does not want to ask me any particular questions about that. I am surprised, because given I have been very careful to say that my criticism is not of Members opposite but of individuals not opposite, I would have thought he might have had something to say.

It is not a jibe to respond to criticism that has been put of the Government's approach to the Withdrawal Agreement. It is not a jibe; it is to respond on probably the most serious issue facing our community and to respond in the place where one should perhaps respond, which is in the 335 Parliament. Hon. Members this morning were getting upset at the fact that we had said something in a press release about a school rather than saying it in answer to one of their questions here, and yet this matter, which goes to the core of our community's future, is termed a jibe because it is something I refer to in the context of a Statement. It is a matter entirely for them, but what I must tell them, Mr Speaker, is that with 99 days left for us to leave the European Union there is no time for us to engage in jibe and counter-jibe, and that is why hon.

340 Members need to understand that the die is cast.

There are a number of different options available. If the British people decide through their representatives in the British Parliament to go with the Withdrawal Agreement, what we have done is ensure that Gibraltar is protected in that context.

345 I have a lot of respect for the work that the Hon. Mr Feetham has done in identifying himself with the people's vote. It is not something that we are against on this side of the House. A people's vote is potentially, unfortunately, another roll of the dice and could go to leave instead of to remain, but I think everybody recognises, Mr Speaker, that if there is a stalemate in Parliament then of course the decision has to somehow be shaken out of the United Kingdom as a nation and the only way to do that is likely to be with a referendum.

350 But it is one thing to say that we would like there to be another referendum, which is what Mr Feetham has rightly pointed to as his wish and desire. Intergovernmental relationships are with governments and the hon. Members, in their criticisms – which you could also term jibes against the Government – need to understand that. The only issue that the British government is putting on the table is that it has done a Withdrawal Agreement and that is its option for leaving 355 the European Union on 29th March, and hon. Members would do well, in the context of their corporate view – not their individual views of whether or not there should be a people's vote, but in their corporate view – they should understand that if they were ever to be on this side of the House in similar circumstances they would be bound to deal on an intergovernmental basis with the position put by the British government, not with the factions in the British Parliament.

360 Mr Speaker, I am grateful that the hon. Gentleman has said that they welcome my Statement in respect of joint sovereignty. It has not always been the case in the context of the last 60 years of the political history of the people of Gibraltar that this House has been firmly united on the issue of a particular approach to a particular agreement, but it is true that we have always been united on the issue of sovereignty, joint or in any other way affected by an attempt by Spain to 365 take any part of it. I think it is important that we reflect that unanimity in the way that the world hears the message from Gibraltar and that is why I wanted to say in the context of the issue of joint sovereignty that I was clear that the message was from the people of Gibraltar, from the Parliament of Gibraltar and from the Government of Gibraltar, all three as distinct but united and unanimous entities on this subject.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I want to thank the Government for their work with regard to the EU's final Decision on the state aid investigation into Gibraltar's Income Tax 375 Act 2010. I want to thank the Government and their team for their hard work and take this opportunity to ask them if maybe next year we will see a lowering of taxes, given that it is election year and we might have the scope for it after all.

380 Never has it been truer to say that hon. Members can rise on a point of clarification when responding to ministerial statements, because in these times there are umpteen points on the Brexit situation that one would want to raise for clarification here and in the UK. But if I may, I would specifically like to ask the Chief Minister if he could explain further the relationship between the Memoranda of Understanding and the Withdrawal Agreement and how it is that he and his Government expect exactly the latter to come into effect in the eventuality of a no-deal scenario.

385 I would also request from the Chief Minister an update on how advanced contingency planning mechanisms are at the present moment and what structures are in place to enhance these very necessary steps in every key sector which is likely to be affected by a no-deal Brexit.

Also, Mr Speaker, I would like to ask the Chief Minister how he intends to seek UK support to ensure that the courtesy that the EU has extended to the UK in allowing for special measures to be taken in the event of a no-deal Brexit will also be extended to Gibraltar.

390 In addition, I ask Government – or the Deputy Chief Minister, given that he has pointed out that the Deputy Chief Minister will be dealing with logistics – if they are aware of EU Directive 97/78/EC, which relates to checks on food products entering the EU from third countries. La Linea does not have a border inspection point capable of issuing and reading health transit electronic paperwork. Spanish customs and health authorities have confirmed that foodstuffs would be unable to be exported into Gibraltar via the land border. Is Government aware of this and that it applies, deal or no-deal? And what steps have been taken to ensure that we can effectively eat?

400 Lastly, Mr Speaker, I would like to ask Government whether it has indeed communicated our preference of revocation of Article 50 officially to the UK government?

Mr Speaker, they say in Westminster how parliamentarians are behaving as if they are in a pantomime, and I have to say I am sorry to report that things do not look too different here at the moment. At a time when Gibraltar faces one of its biggest challenges in our modern political history, our local political leaders are throwing words at each other like ‘skirt-chaser’, ‘cheerleader’, ‘poodle’, ‘ridiculous’, ‘reckless’, ‘political shapeshifter’, ‘ineffective’, ‘wedded to Theresa May’s skirt’, ‘soft’, ‘unreliable’, ‘collective amnesia’, ‘immature’, ‘amateur’ and ‘simplistic’. What is simplistic is not realising that we are all aligned in this crisis and we all have to sail in the same direction for the best outcome because none of us are immune to the potential effects of post 29th March 2019.

410 I call on this House to take this matter seriously and confront it with a united front, where we are more interested in pooling our skills and resources to make the best of the situation than using it as a soapbox to grandstand and try to seek political points, because we all need to come out of this stronger rather than fractured, battered and bruised by each other and to date it has been sad to note the lack of collaboration between parties on this serious matter. I pray that the new year will bring some sense, maturity and spirit of collaboration on this grave matter that none of us wanted to be a part of.

Mr Speaker: Chief Minister.

420 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I thank the hon. Lady for her thanks to the team that has delivered the result on the state aid matters relating to the Income Tax Act. Of course, that is entirely unrelated to the level of taxation in Gibraltar, as I assume she knows; therefore, I find it difficult to see how she can connect that to any concept that there might be a lowering of taxes at the next General Election.

425 In fact, if I can just start there by telling the hon. Lady that ... I am not prone to give advice to members opposite, because I do not want them to succeed in their politics. I think that the parties on this side of the House deserve to be returned after a General Election next year and I am not going to give her any advice on how she could advance her position to get to this side of the House. But advice I would give to all hon. Members and anybody not here who is thinking of contesting the next General Election is that, if we are going to be responsible, we should all avoid the next General Election becoming another auction. If we all say that we understand what the seriousness of the situation is, then what we need to avoid is an auction, a race to the bottom, at the next General Election.

435 If that is the case, infecting the debate even before we have started with suggestions of lowering taxation is not, frankly, the right way to approach a mature process in an election, as indeed it is not to suggest that we could have a race to the bottom on house prices – something that I also detect manifesting itself when the Government is trying to ensure that when we produce affordable housing we do so on the basis of not losing money and ensuring that we only pass construction costs and the cost of infrastructure to purchasers. So, my sincere advice to the hon. Lady is that sustainability comes from not taking the low road on taxation and on costs of affordable housing etc.

She asked a more serious point when she drove me to the issue of the memoranda and how they would or would not be legally effective in the context of the absence of a withdrawal agreement. Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady has seen the memoranda, and in fact so has the whole of the community – they are on our website – and she will see that, for example, the first memorandum, which is the memorandum on citizens’ rights, is really just the creation of a committee for the administration, in the context of Gibraltar, of the rights contained in the Withdrawal Agreement. So all you are doing in the first memorandum, on citizens’ rights, is dealing with the day after departure from the European Union with a withdrawal agreement in place, because all of the rights that you are administering are the rights continued under the main agreement. Therefore, it is impossible to see that there is in existence a memorandum on citizens’ rights if there is not a withdrawal agreement in place. And so she will agree with me that although that is likely to be a good starting point for the basis of where we would all wish to see co-operation go, it cannot legally be what occurs or what comes into effect on 30th March. It is in fact a legal nonsense to suggest that were the case, and I think that is what she was rightly hinting at in the way that she asked her question.

The memorandum, for example, on environmental matters talks specifically about the implementation of the regime in the Protocol. In fact, I have just got here the first paragraph that says:

In order to deliver the enhanced cooperation on environmental protection and in accordance with article 4 of the Protocol ...

So, the whole creation of the memorandum and the committees there is to deliver what is provided for in the Protocol. No Protocol, nothing to deliver on. Indeed, the whole basis of the memorandum is that the European Union’s directives and other rules on environmental matters continue in effect by dint of the Withdrawal Agreement for the transitional period, and therefore this committee deals with the issues that arise in that context.

All of the memoranda refer to committees that report upwards to a specialised committee and upwards to a joint committee as the dispute resolution mechanism which is contained in the Withdrawal Agreement. And so, Mr Speaker, no withdrawal agreement, no joint committee; no specialised committee, nowhere for the committees to go in the context of the new dispute resolution mechanism, which eventually takes you all the way up to arbitration and not to the Court of Justice of the European Union.

So, I think she is right to ask for the architecture of the logic that I was sharing. I hope that I have said enough about that and therefore she will understand why I say, and I hope she agrees, that in the absence of a withdrawal agreement here is the basis for co-operation – in this and other areas, because these memoranda flesh out four areas but the Withdrawal Agreement continues co-operation in all areas for the whole of the period of transition – between us and the European Union and, in particular, our neighbours.

Finally, Mr Speaker, she asked about contingency planning. I think we have to be clear, when we are talking about what happens on 29th March if there is no agreement, that of course there are issues that will be difficult and challenging, but we know that we are going to eat. We know that. That is not an issue and it ill behoves a Member of this Parliament to suggest that we might not be able to eat, because all that can do is create in some the thought that they have to worry about how they are going to feed their families. Nothing could be further from the truth. None of that is a concern.

485 First of all, the directive that she points to is adopted under the Common Agricultural Policy; it is not a policy that has applied to Gibraltar. The Government is fully aware of these issues. We have been aware, not now, we have been aware for a number of years now, since we did our heat mapping and we analysed what the issues might be in the event of a no-deal Brexit. There are a number of solutions already prepared for, the implementation of which will start in January, as I have already indicated will be the case, to ensure that these are zero issues by the time we get to the end of the first quarter of next year.

490 She needs to be careful with how she asks questions about how effectively are we going to eat. Mr Speaker, we are going to eat and that is not going to be an issue at all, and I can give the community that comfort as we go into this festive season, that that is a zero issue going forward.

495 Mr Speaker, she has asked me whether we have indicated to the British government that our preference is a revocation. We have indeed given that indication and we have given it because of the dangers that an extension might provide for. A revocation is a unilateral act of the United Kingdom before 29th March next year which does not require either qualified majority or unanimity on the part of the member states. All it requires is a single act of the United Kingdom, therefore holding no part of the United Kingdom, or the wider British family hostage to the views of any member state or any institution.

500 Then, Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady, perhaps teasing out the Prime Minister yesterday in Prime Minister's Question Time, talked about things becoming a pantomime and went through a litany of things said in the context of press releases outside of this House by Members – or rather by individuals not opposite, Mr Speaker – and she said two things which we have said in our press releases: 'amateur' and 'simplistic', which I think are not insulting terms; they are terms which have a common meaning in the English language.

510 She also referred to much more figurative language which has been used in the context of the debate and I agree with her that it is entirely unnecessary language, but I fully disagree with her when she says that there has been a lack of collaboration on this sensitive matter. In fact, I have repeatedly thanked her and I have thanked Mr Feetham and other members of the GSD's Brexit committee, or the GSD Members on the Brexit Select Committee, for the way that we have worked constructively over the past two years, and I am not going to be moved from that position or from that view by the irate statements that I have read in the press in the past 14 days by those who appear to want to remind us that they exist and want to have their voice heard and their name bandied about.

515 She should not fall into the trap of thinking that we do not appreciate the work that she has been doing with us, and hon. GSD Members in the Select Committee have been doing with us, in the context of the past two years. I think it is an excellent display of the co-operation that is possible between hon. Members on a serious issue such as the issue of Brexit inasmuch as it relates to a deal or a no-deal Brexit, and I am not going to be drawn into giving any opinion other than she has been, with other hon. Members, a helpful part of that. Even from a sedentary position I will not mouth any words which might be misinterpreted as being in any way derogatory of her, as happened at the end of the other pantomime that she might have been referring to in the context of PMQs yesterday.

525 Going forward, Mr Speaker, I think it is hugely important that we continue that collaboration, that we are not just seen to work together but that we do work together in the context of what is coming and that we always bear in mind, in the context of the planning that needs to be done for 29th March 2019, that we already to a very great extent in this nation operate as an island economy. The effect of the siege between 1969 and 1982 is that we operate as an island economy. We have not got to gear up to operate as an island economy; we already operate as an island economy. The key issues – the lights, the Hospital, the water, all of those things – are island-economy driven already, and therefore in the context of the planning that we have to do we are much more advanced than anybody else might have been. That is something to keep in mind, something to ensure that people feel secure about, and with the continued business links to the United Kingdom, which are already secured, there will be very little that will change on the morning of 30th March. Unfortunately, Mr Speaker, although I hope to have regained my discipline, it will be possible for me to eat and eat and eat on 30th March; I just have to make sure that I stop at the first eat, because eating will not be an issue.

540 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much.

Three questions. The first is I welcome the statement that the Hon. Chief Minister has made about a change of attitudes at political level. He has said that the next election should not be an 545 auction, and I absolutely agree with that. I think that we can trace some of the problems that we may be facing in the future to the election in 2011, where there was an auction on both sides; they won it and they were able to effectively deliver. Certainly, what Gibraltar cannot afford is every four years for there to be an auction of who offers more to people, because that really is going to lead to the road to ruin, if not a hugely difficult road up ahead. But does he not agree
550 with me that in fact ... and again, I think I accept my part of the responsibility, but as politicians we all ought to accept some responsibility for also fuelling what is a culture in Gibraltar of entitlement, of expectation, of not understanding and realising how blessed we are in this community in the things that we have and that we take for granted in everyday life, and that really we ought to, all of us, understand and appreciate what we have and change our collective 555 chip, not only at a political level but at a popular level as well? Always when I talk about this, and think about this, the words of J F Kennedy come to mind: 'Think not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country.' Every Gibraltarian, I think, ought to think about that in the months and in the years ahead, because there are potentially some very difficult years ahead. I would like him to comment in relation to that.

560 Secondly, in relation to the Withdrawal Agreement, leaving aside the political cut and thrust, the exchanges that we have had as a collective – and in my words today I do not resile at all, let it be known for the avoidance of doubt, from anything that has been said collectively as a party, but there are three things that the Withdrawal Agreement, I think, does positively. It prevents a hard Brexit in circumstances where the United Kingdom would have had a cushioned 565 withdrawal, which would have been a disaster for Gibraltar, and that is accepted on this side of the House; it also gives the Government of the day 21 months within which to reposition the economy. I hear what the Government has said over the last few years, that most of our business is done with the UK, but there is always going to be an element of repositioning of the economy and 21 months is a time that the Government can use in order to reposition the 570 economy. Does he not agree with me that unless Spain changes its own chip and accepts that Gibraltar will never pay the price of joint sovereignty, the realpolitik of the situation is that you are going to have a situation, whatever is said in the Withdrawal Agreement, where 26 member states are going to support the 27th member state, Spain; and if Spain says joint sovereignty is the price for a good permanent relationship, ultimately Gibraltar is effectively going to be out of 575 the European Union? I would like for him to comment. He has already said Gibraltar is not prepared to pay the price, and obviously he is supported from this side of the House. How optimistic is the Hon. the Chief Minister that Spain will change its chip and that within those 21 months Gibraltar will be able to negotiate a permanent relationship that does not involve the payment of that price?

580 Thirdly, I detect from the way that the hon. Gentleman has put things today – and nobody here is naïve; we all know that every incumbent Government in Gibraltar has got to support the UK government to a lesser or greater extent and at least has got to be careful what it says not to alienate the incumbent government in the United Kingdom. But from what he was telling me, really, is this, his preference is not the Withdrawal Agreement; his preference is to remain. His 585 second preference is a second referendum, so-called people's vote; and thirdly is obviously the Withdrawal Agreement, because nobody wants a hard Brexit. Can he explain why it was that he went that extra mile – I feel too much of an extra mile, and we have certainly criticised from this side of the House – to support Mrs May’s deal when we do not know where we are at in terms of whether that deal is going to be accepted or is not going to be accepted? I fully recognise that the Government has been at the heart of those negotiations. It is has got to defend its position – it defends the Withdrawal and it defends its MoUs and it defends the Protocol; that is what the Government has to do. But there is a difference between that and effectively really canvassing MPs in the United Kingdom to vote in favour of the Withdrawal Agreement, and I would like to give him an opportunity to comment on that.

Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Chief Minister: What kindness, Mr Speaker! Well, let me start by telling the hon. Gentleman that I think it is positive to hear him agree with me that we should not have an auction at the next election. I do not agree with him, however, that the first auction was the 2011 auction and that we just happened to win it, because I remember sitting in the John Mackintosh Hall in the 2003 election hearing cheering members of his party saying that Gibraltar would neither buy itself or sell itself, in the Spanish language, and the 2007 election became the buy-sell auction to end all auctions, which they won by 400 votes.

We would fall into the hon. Lady’s trap of saying yah boo sucks to each other at pantomime season if all we were to do now is to say, ‘No, it was you,’ ‘No, it was me,’ ‘No, it was you,’ ‘No, it was me.’ They have banned Punch and Judy and he and I have also moved on beyond our Punch and Judy days – (Applause) thank you – so I do not think it behoves us well to just go down that road. But he did say again, and I have heard him say before, ‘because otherwise this is the road to rack and ruin’. When he was in a different position, slightly more to the centre of the semi-circle, he would sometimes say that, until it was finally teased out of him that actually, in his view, Gibraltar is not going to go bankrupt, that this allegation of bankruptcy – as I think I demonstrated in the Budget speech two years ago, Mr Speaker, going back to your first exchanges with Mr Bossano in 1972 – the allegation of purported or near bankruptcy has been one thrown from the Opposition benches, whoever might have been the incumbent, to those on this side of the House, whoever might have been the incumbent, without even the shame of waiting for a year when people had changed chairs. So, I think we should leave this concept of the road to rack and ruin where the hon. Gentleman rightly parked it as he purported to depart stage left – and I choose each of those words very carefully, Mr Speaker.

I do agree with him that the quote from John F Kennedy – not written by J F Kennedy but which J F Kennedy had the privilege of speaking to in the context of his inauguration – about what one can do for one’s nation is an important one to bear in mind, in particular in a place as blessed as Gibraltar, where each of our citizens, even those who might feel that they do not have as much as they want, have more than most citizens in most places. I loved that quote when I was a teenager and I thought that it had been so overused that it was not helpful to fall back on it. But I do agree with the hon. Gentleman that in Gibraltar it has come time that people do realise that.

There was an article in yesterday’s Panorama which was highly complimentary of the Government and which I therefore enjoyed reading, but not for that reason, because actually it was a very careful analysis of how calm and how well Gibraltar is today compared to some other European nations which are going through social or political turmoil. It comes from something I said during the course of my media party to journalists this year when I said that 90 days before I became Chief Minister ... The hon. Gentleman will recall whooping in support of the then incumbent of my post when I was said to be unfit to govern. I do not know whether he recalls that or whether he was in such apoplexy and ecstasy at the attack that was directed towards me that he missed it, but the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana said that I was unfit to govern, all as a result of a now famous video message on social media which has not been viewed ... is the most viewed Gibraltar podcast in history. (A Member: Grubby podcast) That was 90 days before I became Chief Minister, winning by half a whisker the amount of votes that Sir Peter had won at the first election. What I said to journalists was that seven years later I have the confidence – and I think 640 this is good for all sides – have the confidence of being able to say I run the most stable Government in the European Union. Put in that context, Gibraltar today is in a very good place.

I wish Gibraltar stable government, whoever is in government, like I wish the United Kingdom, Spain and every other nation stable government. Stable coalitions are things that we might give people lessons on, Mr Speaker, in the context of Gibraltar. There is no road to rack 645 and ruin. We have a very stable Government. People do not have to wonder whether we are going to be able to eat on 30th March, and actually things are going very well in Gibraltar. That is an important thing for people to realise in the context, as the hon. Gentleman says, of the Kennedy remarks. People need to think a little bit more about what they can give to continue to stabilise the ship, to continue to keep it on an even keel and to ask less. But we must all be in it 650 together. We must be co-conspirators that we should not encourage those who come to us to ask for more. Gibraltar is fairly transparent in that respect. If people come to me and say, ‘I want x% pay rise, I want this allowance and’ – I will just use his name facetiously for once, Mr Speaker – ‘Danny has told me if he gets elected he will give it to me,’ either Danny has told them if he gets elected he will give it to them, or they will say that anyway: ‘A N Other will give it 655 to me.’ So we have to be complicit in understanding that if things are actually unfair we will fix them, but that people should not simply be looking or thinking or idling away their time thinking of things they can ask for to get more out of the cow.

The hon. Gentleman then asked me to look at the Withdrawal Agreement and said that there are three things that the Withdrawal Agreement did which were good for Gibraltar, and I am 660 grateful that he does that because I think that is absolutely the right position. The Withdrawal Agreement is not perfect, it is not our choice; our choice, as he indicated, and expressed very clearly, is to remain in the European Union if we can, and I think I have said that in my Statement quite explicitly this afternoon, as I have said it before in other public statements. But if we are leaving, then this is a safer route than leaving without an agreement, and the Agreement does a 665 number of things.

I must say to the hon. Gentleman he has been consistent in his position for some time now. I remember in 2016, when I was talking about another referendum, he told me that I should not be saying those things, that I might upset the Brexiteers and that we had to ensure we did not alienate our friends in Parliament who happened to be Brexiteers and had succeeded in the 670 referendum. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) I am sure he cannot remember, Mr Speaker, but as he will recall from our battles when we were at each other’s throats, El Chibatito – also known as Hansard – will serve to remind him of it, if necessary. But I do not want to take him there. I just want to say that there are still people in what I will call loosely ‘his executive committee’ who behave as if they were Brexiteers wishing upon us a no-deal Brexit. I fully 675 respect his position that he would rather, than any exit, another chance to vote to try and remain, and I think he feels a lot of sympathy with our position that we would rather actually not even that, just a straightforward revocation and forget this nightmare, but I think jointly we would say that those who might, from the executive committee of the party opposite, advocate for a Brexit without a deal – that is to say no referendum, no revocation, no Withdrawal 680 Agreement, just a straight out hard-Brexit, pulling out as hard as you pushed in – well, those people do not have Gibraltar’s best interests at heart and they need to understand that. He might be embarrassed that I say this, but I think it is right that I should say that his position is much more favourable from the point of view of the Government than those who are taking this very hard Brexit stance.

In all of that he says Spain needs to understand that there is a price Gibraltar is never going to pay. He and I started in politics with black hair; we now have, he more than I, some white hair. (Interjections and laughter) That is the one thing he knows I envy him, and he should not be throwing it in my face this close to Christmas, Mr Speaker! I do not know what Mr Clinton is laughing about, though! (Laughter) But in all the time that we have had black hair, and now 690 some white hair, we have been consistent in our position, as every politician almost to a man and woman has been in this House. But Spain just does not seem to do a deep enough analysis.

They spend so much in trying to understand the Gibraltar and analyse us politically and they do not see that there is no price we will pay. This is the one issue on which we are 100% united. We want co-operation, we want friendship, we want to work with them. We want all of that, but we will not pay a sovereignty price. And we want to continue to be part of the European dream and project and ideal, but we will not pay a sovereignty price. I think he was rightly pointing to this concept of the statements in the Spanish press, and by some senior Spanish politicians who seem blind to this issue, that the fact that we voted 96% to remain in the European Union means that we must now be ready to pay a price in order to stay in the EU. In fact, recently, the Spanish Partido Popular has set out the key measures they would offer us, with joint citizenship, a special economic zone with Ceuta, etc; and access to the single market – all of this which is designed to be a panacea that is offered to us as if it were a price worth paying. Well, we are not shopping. We are not in the market. We are not going to buy. This is not what the issue is for us. They need to understand that and he is absolutely right that they need to understand that. I think I said that clearly in the context of my opening Statement too.

He asked me whether I was optimistic that Spain would change. I can never be optimistic that Spain will change. I can be hopeful that Spain will change and I think it would be a real pity if we were not all hopeful that Spain might actually finally change, because then we would have been as jaded in our approach to them as they are to us. We will always try to work for more co-operation, for more neighbourly relations, but always with a cynical and sceptical eye because history has taught us too many lessons about how all Spaniards – unfortunately, I have to say with a heavy heart, of all political complexions – have acted in relation to Gibraltar, even some who are purportedly modern, progressive and internationalist in their approach. So I am not optimistic but I am hopeful that we may one day find the opportunity for that co-operation.

Mr Speaker, then the hon. Gentleman ended with his kind offer of opportunity for me to explain why it was that I might have taken a step further than he might have considered advisable in proposing to Members of the House of Commons in the United Kingdom that they should support the Prime Minister's Withdrawal Agreement. I make absolutely no apology for that, Mr Speaker. We have to be very clear of what it is that is in play here. This is the point I was making to the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition. When you are in government, one deals with intergovernmental relations. The intergovernmental position between the Government of Gibraltar and the government of the United Kingdom is that we have reached a Withdrawal Agreement. The Government of Gibraltar has been allowed to negotiate the parts that relate to Gibraltar in respect of that Withdrawal Agreement, much to the chagrin of others who have not been able to negotiate their parts or indeed did not expect us to be the ones negotiating our part. So, it is our work product.

I saw that the Hon. Mr Clinton purportedly said that I had no mandate to support the Withdrawal Agreement because Gibraltar had voted 96% to remain, so all I could do was to advocate remain. Well, I have come to learn what little Mr Clinton knows of politics, because if he thinks that one spends 12 months negotiating an agreement – in particular, 12 months negotiating an agreement, going back to a Brexit Select Committee, reporting to them on it, showing them drafts, etc. – and then one does not have a mandate to defend that Withdrawal Agreement, one would have thought that the obvious thing was to have said to me, 'You don't have a mandate to negotiate a withdrawal agreement,' not 'You don't have a mandate to defend the Withdrawal Agreement that you have negotiated.' The lack of logic is really quite remarkable.

So, because we negotiated it, because it is our work product and because the only issue on the table, as far as the United Kingdom government is concerned, in the Commons today, whatever we might read of rumours of what is happening in Cabinet or not, is that there is the Withdrawal Agreement or withdrawal on 29th March without an agreement, the right position at an intergovernmental level is to say we therefore endorse this Agreement.

The hon. Gentleman must also bear in mind that there is a piece now of primary English law, the Withdrawal Act, which says the United Kingdom leaves the European Union at 11 p.m. on 29th March 2019. That is the position in law in the United Kingdom, and therefore I do not think 745 that his advocacy for a people's vote is a unicorn, but to suggest that there is anything on the table other than that, to support or not support, would be to try and take us down the route of what is not on the table, and the Government of Gibraltar has to defend what is on the table and what we have negotiated, but always with the caveat – and he can go back and look at all of our press releases – always with the caveat, that what we prefer to do is to remain in the European 750 Union, not just because there was a 96% vote for it, but because we think that that is the safest thing to do, and we would think it was the safest thing to do if there had only been a 48% vote in Gibraltar to leave the European Union. The hon. Gentleman will know that representatives of the Democratic Unionist Party insist that the best thing to do is leave the European Union without the Northern Irish backstop, even though the majority of people in Northern Ireland 755 voted to remain in the European Union. So that, I hope, goes some way to explaining to the hon.

Gentleman what my position has been.

Hon. D A Feetham: Will he give way?

760 Hon. Chief Minister: I would not usually, but in this new world that we inhabit ...

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, given that I am no longer a threat to the hon. Gentleman, in those circumstances I can see that he gives way.

Does he not agree with me there is a difference here? This is where I myself have been very 765 critical of that last tactic of the Government, which is there is a difference between defending a withdrawal agreement ... As I said during the course of my questioning earlier, you have negotiated the Protocol, you have negotiated the MoUs. You have got to defend it and what you are not going to do is resile from the overall Withdrawal Agreement. But bearing in mind that actually your preference really is not the Withdrawal Agreement, your preference is to remain 770 and your preference is, as a second option, a people's vote, do you not think that you overstepped the mark in the letter to The Times asking MPs to support the Withdrawal Agreement? And is there not a danger, in that in effectively also alienating others that perhaps do not share the hon. Gentleman and Mrs May's view, that at the moment appears to be everybody and his dog in the United Kingdom, and that if she is defeated, then of course it could 775 count against the Government of Gibraltar because it could have been interpreted as descending into the UK political arena?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, every time I thought he was a threat I wanted him to say 780 more, not less. (Laughter) But now that I consider him as much of a threat as I ever have, I am happy to give way to hear what he has to say because of his current position.

Of course, I do not share his analysis, because otherwise I would not have done it. I do not think that there is a risk of alienating Members of Parliament, because at the same time as I was writing not a letter but a 'Thunderer' column in The Times – he wrote a letter; I wrote a
'Thunderer' column in The Times – I was also being very clear with all members of the All-Party 785 Group of Gibraltar what our preferences were, which were actually as set out in the 'Thunderer'.
The issue is what is before the Parliament: the only issue before the Parliament – and this is well ventilated – is the Withdrawal Agreement. That is all there is, so the choice on the 14th is not this notion of an indicative vote whether there is a majority in Parliament for anything; it is just this or leave on 29th March without a deal. That is where I think he and I are totally against 790 those in his executive who would be in favour of a hard Brexit, and we will look at any of the other permutations before we look at those issues. I think people should realise that he and I are long enough in the tooth that if we manage to find something that we agree on, they should listen and they should listen hard.

I hope that has helped to deal with the points that he helpfully raised.

795 Finally, just on the issue of the auction, when he said two years ago, 'I'm going, going, gone,' I am the only one who really heard, 'I'm coming, I'm coming, I'm coming,' and I am sure,
Mr Speaker, the second coming is coming.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

800

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I have two questions, but first of all I would like to start by repeating the comments of the Leader of the Opposition in congratulating the Government and its tax and legal team in finally slaying the state aid demon which has been stalking us for far too long. Certainly going back to 805 my days sitting on the Finance Sector Council it has always been an issue and I am glad to see that this has now, to all intents and purposes, been resolved; although it is, as the Chief Minister has noted, with supreme irony that we are now facing the Brexit scenario that we are.

On that subject, in terms of the state aid ruling and the large numbers that are being bandied around in the press, my understanding is that that is not a threat to our exchequer and I would 810 be grateful if the Chief Minister would indicate that my understanding is correct. There are some people not understanding the process, thinking that this is something that would damage us and be a drain on our exchequer, which I do not believe it is.

Secondly, Mr Speaker, we have spoken about the MoUs, but as yet we have heard nothing about the tax agreement that was due to be concluded as a package with the MoUs, and I would 815 be grateful if the Chief Minister would give the House an update as to where we are on the legal polishing of that agreement, or indeed if there is going to be such an agreement.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on the issue of the state aid finding, the reason that I said 820 to the House that it is going to stand us in good stead whether we are in or out of the European Union after 29th March is because hon. Members will know that there is a move to create a blacklist of territories. There is an EU blacklist of territories. Gibraltar is not on that blacklist and indeed neither are any of the other Overseas Territories, because the United Kingdom was able to point out that it was to be a blacklist of third countries and this could not include a member 825 state or the territories of a member state. Some in Spain you could see chomping at the bit once the Brexit decision was announced, on the basis that after 29th March Gibraltar would therefore immediately be put on the list of blacklisted territories. There are many ways that you can design a criterion to put a territory on a blacklist. We have just deprived, with this decision, those who are staying behind of a criterion that they might have used to try and distinguish us as 830 a jurisdiction that might go on a blacklist. So this is a hugely important advantage in that context, although unrestrained it is possible to find a way of singling out a jurisdiction and putting it on a blacklist in a way that is totally spurious and could still be applied to us.

But, of course, if we have a tax agreement with our usual antagonist, then that too might be harder, and what I can tell the hon. Gentleman in that respect is that the text is still in legal 835 stabilisation. This is a much more complex agreement than an MoU. This is an international tax treaty and therefore it is subject to a level of scrutiny quite unlike anything that we might have seen politically in the context of agreements in the past or now. Therefore, we are not able to publish it. I do look forward to publishing it because there has been foolish speculation – not from the hon. Gentleman, I would suggest for one moment – that this might be an agreement 840 that might allow Spain to set our tax rate and other nonsense of the sort. Of course it is not, and the sooner people see the black upon white of it, the sooner they will be able to see it is the sort of arrangement that you would expect between neighbours with the sort of mobility issues that there are between these neighbours in the context of the relationship that we have. So I very much look forward to being told that we have a final stabilised text and to being able to publish 845 that.

Of course, Mr Speaker, it is absolutely wrong for anyone to think that the numbers incorrectly bandied about by the Commission – and I have already indicated that we think they are grossly exaggerated – would in any event have any repercussion on our exchequer. This is about recovery against third parties; in other words, taxpayers who are alleged to have had an unfair advantage and need to repay to that exchequer the amount put. So, to take another example, hon. Members will know that I alluded to the litigation on state aid involving large companies in other jurisdictions, like Apple. I think in the context of Apple it was many billions of pounds which were alleged to have been evaded from the Irish exchequer. The Irish disagreed with the decision of the European Commission but were duty-bound to go and recover that tax for Ireland. So it was not money that was then paid to the Commission as a fine; it is actually three billion or thirty billion, or something really quite horrendous like that, which Ireland was required by the Decision to obtain from Apple and bank for itself and not allowed in any way to give back to Apple by any back door. So, if anything, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will be accusing me of flattering the Government's accounts with moneys that might come in as a result of this Decision if we were to enforce it in the way that is provided for by any amount that would have been paid into the exchequer by these third parties who might have taken the advantage of the state aid, not that the exchequer itself has to put its hand in its pocket to pay it as a fine to the Commission. That would be the wrong way to understand what the Decision entails.

I think I have dealt with all the points he raised.

Mr Speaker: Any other question or clarification before we move on to Questions? No.

Questions for Oral Answer

Q473, Q484 and Q584/2018 – Further information

Mr Speaker: I have had an indication from at least two Ministers that there were matters that arose this morning on which they undertook to provide information later in the day. I think the Hon. Steven Linares has some information; also the Hon. Paul Balban.

870

Minister for Culture, the Media, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Member opposite wanted clarification as to the amount of money that was paid for the membership fee of the GNDO towards the INDO and I can confirm that the amount of money passed for that specifically was £1,200, so now the hon. Member has the full answer which he requested.

875

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Paul Balban.

Minister for Infrastructure and Planning (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, thank you. With reference Question 473/2018 this morning, if I may add, to complete the question, the reply should have been, if we had read the question in the way that it had been intended: 30,614 petrol, 7,339 diesel, 162 hybrids and 28 electric vehicles have been registered in Gibraltar as at 1st June 2017; and as at 1st June 2018 there were 32,520 petrol, 7,978 diesel, 225 hybrids and 33 electric vehicles registered.

Mr Speaker: Is there any other matter?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, just for clarity, it was Question 584, the one I answered – for the Hansard.

890

Mr Speaker: Question 507, then. The Hon. Danny Feetham.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): If I may, Mr Speaker, I had to clarify –

895

Mr Speaker: You had also something left over, did you?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. I have already exchanged with the Hon. Edwin Reyes the question of pupils excluded from school. We agreed that that would not be stated here for fear of perhaps identifying the pupils in question, but I have already given that information.

900

The other question, which I am happy to share here, is in relation to Question 484, the explanation of ‘ring-fenced’ next to the science co-ordinator. Mr Speaker, I can now confirm that it is ring-fenced because the only teachers who are eligible for this are the heads of the three sciences – biology, physics or chemistry – because the science co-ordinator role goes together with one of those three. So, the head of physics, chemistry or biology will be the science co-ordinator and therefore it is ring-fenced within those posts. I also shared that with the hon. Member, but this is something that, because it was raised here, I am very happy to state across the House.

905

ENVIRONMENT, ENERGY, CLIMATE CHANGE AND EDUCATION

Q507/2018

Electricity Authority – Number of vacancies

Mr Speaker: Question 507, then. The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

910

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many vacancies are there within the Electricity Authority?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

915

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, 17.

Hon. D A Feetham: When does the Government intend to fill those vacancies, or at least advertise for those vacancies?

920

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is the intention to do this as soon as possible.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the concept of ‘as soon as possible’ is pretty elastic. Can he be more specific than that?

925

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this is a time of change in the energy sector. We are moving to a new power station and we also will be closing down certain other power stations which are run either by private concerns or by a Government-owned company and therefore there could 935 be an element of redeployment in order to guarantee posts in those that may be closed down. So we are going through an exercise now to ascertain which of those posts can be filled in what way. Also, with the new power station there will be a certain need for different skills, particularly in relation to software, so this is a time when we have to analyse all this and there are ongoing discussions in order to ascertain how best to fill these posts.

940 Hon. D A Feetham: So, we have vacancies and what we have is an exercise by the Government to see what kind of diversification in employment skills, if I can call it that, is necessary within the new power station. That may involve some of these 17 being deployed as specialists in software or more IT-orientated posts. I understand that, but the Government surely must have a backstop, longstop date by when it envisages this ought to be sorted out.

945 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that is part of the explanation I gave. The other part of the explanation is the fact that we will be closing down other power stations with personnel and we are assessing whether some of those personnel could in fact apply for some of those vacancies and where the skills are. So it is a bit of a pot at the moment in order to analyse and make sure that we get this absolutely right.

950 Hon. D A Feetham: But is there a longstop date by when he envisages that this exercise ought to be completed?

955 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, some of those posts sooner than others, and obviously it is related also to exactly when the other power stations are going to be closed down. That is an exercise that we will see in the coming months but no more than a few months.

960 Hon. D A Feetham: So is the answer to the longstop question a couple of months? I cannot believe that that is the answer. The specific question that I have asked is can he give me a longstop by when he believes that this exercise will be completed, and I am talking about the entirety of the exercise. He must know when the two old generators are going to be decommissioned, so he must have somewhere a timetable which he can then, even if he adds another six months, say 'Well, look, by this particular date we think that we will have completed this exercise.'

965 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Very difficult to say, Mr Speaker. I visited the new power station and the old one yesterday and we are confident that all will go well. It is working extremely well, but in these things you never know exactly what the detail might be, so it would be dangerous for me to commit to that. Certainly as soon as possible, and this is a responsible way of dealing with this, Mr Speaker.

970 Hon. D A Feetham: And in relation to the supplementary answer that he has provided, which is that there are two generators that need to be decommissioned and that is going to then lead to some of those posts going – obviously, because they are no longer necessary – how many jobs does he envisage are going to be lost, as a consequence of that, that may then transfer over?

975 I understand, as with all of these things, that some of those jobs will be ... people will retire, receive early retirement, but he must have an idea of the number of jobs that may be relocated into the electricity department, or the pool of jobs, the number that might be available for that purpose.

980 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that is exactly the subject of the exercise we are undergoing at the moment and it would not be correct for me to speculate.

Q508/2018

Shore-supplied power to ships under repair –
Progress re provision by Gibdock

Acting Clerk: Question 508. The Hon. T N Hammond, replied by the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government say what progress has been made regarding the requirement for Gibdock to provide shore-supplied power to ships under repair and when there might be an outcome to those negotiations?
985

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

990 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, negotiations are ongoing with the involvement of the Gibraltar Electricity Authority.

A potential supplier paid a second visit to Gibraltar during the first week of October. They have requested further information from Gibdock Ltd insofar as their electrical system is concerned, with a view to proposing a more detailed solution regarding the provision of shore power supplied to ships under repair.

Acting Clerk: Question 509. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, how many unlawful incursions by Spanish fishing vessels, by month, have occurred since 1st January 2017?
1000

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1005 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 510.

Acting Clerk: Question 510. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1010 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, how many vessels have been boarded by the Royal Gibraltar Police, the Port Authority or any other agency, for compliance checks with the marine protection regulations, by month and nationality, since 1st January 2017?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.
1015

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member in Question 509 is in the schedule I now hand over.

Answer to Q509/2018

Month	2017	2018
January	12	1
February	3	1

1020 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: In answer to Question 510, the RGP has boarded three vessels during this period: two Spanish vessels were boarded in September 2017 and one Spanish vessel was boarded in July 2018. In addition, the Environmental Protection and Research Unit boarded one Spanish vessel.

Q511/2018
Upper Rock Nature Reserve –
CCTV cameras

Acting Clerk: Question 511. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1025 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, of the 57 CCTV cameras on the Upper Rock, can the Minister provide records of their serviceability, by month, since 1st January 2017?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1030 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, all CCTV cameras within the Upper Rock Nature Reserve are maintained and serviced on a monthly basis.

Q512/2018
Windsor Suspension Bridge –
Security arrangements

Acting Clerk: Question 512. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1035 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, what are the current security arrangements for the Windsor Suspension Bridge?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1040

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, routine checks are carried out by the Upper Rock supervisors on a regular basis.

1045 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, what is meant by 'a regular basis'? Does the Hon. Minister have any information?

1050 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the supervisors, who include staff of the Department and security contractors, patrol areas of the Upper Rock and they patrol the bridge, as well as other areas, at least twice a day – when they commence at the start of the day and at nightfall before the gates close – and then they may also attend at other times during the day, depending on what other duties they have.

1055 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the clarification as to what is determined as 'regular'. I am grateful for the answer to that question.

1060 Just going back to Question 509/2018, in respect of Spanish fishing vessels, insofar as what I noted from the statistics that have been given in the useful schedule to the answer it would appear that there has been a 231% increase in incursions by Spanish fishing vessels into our waters. Does the Minister have any idea as to the very significant increase in Spanish fishing vessels into our waters over the last year? Quite clearly there has been, it seems to me, a further attempt at further incursions into our waters, and does the Minister have any information as to why there has been a very significant increase in Spanish fishing vessels into British Territorial Waters?

1065 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. There was an increase from fairly low numbers last year and the first half of this year up to June. There was a significant increase in July. This may have coincided with a period of time when one of the Environment's vessels was under repair. There has also been reference to the possibility of deliberate provocation at a time when perhaps those who have an influence on some of the Spanish fishermen may have thought they were sensitive times because of Brexit negotiations, but that is just speculation.

1070 But I am glad to say that the Environment Department, with the support of the Royal Gibraltar Police, has stepped up its challenging of vessels over the last few weeks and I can report that the figures for December up to today – that is about three weeks' worth of December – is that there have been three incursions reported, so it seems that after a rather active period the figures are going down again, and we are hoping that sustained effort on the part of the Environment and the RGP will ensure that this continues as it had been for a year and a half before July this year.

1080 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one further question in relation to that: there has clearly been a growing trend over the last six months of increased incursions into the waters by Spanish fishermen. This month, I do not have the information [Inaudible] but I do have it now that there were three. In November it peaked at 22 in a month, which the Minister has alluded to Brexit reactions, potentially, to increased Spanish fishing vessels in the waters, but is the Minister confident that we have sufficient resources to deal with, next month, another 20 or 30 incursions potentially?

1085 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, we must remember that I am responsible for the Environment vessels, and the Environmental Protection Unit has a certain limit as to its powers. We do have the support of the RGP, who have their resources. I do not answer here for them, and indeed the Government has very often stated that the RGP does have its own priorities, but I think that we have shown, certainly in the last three weeks, that we are at least ensuring that there has been a decrease, and we can only see how it goes.

1090

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q513/2018
Upper Rock Nature Reserve –
Use of chlorination at watering points

Acting Clerk: Question 513. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1095

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, is any chlorination being used for the Upper Rock Nature Reserve watering points?

1100

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, no, sir.

Q514/2018
Macaque Management Plan –
Date for publication

Acting Clerk: Question 514. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1105

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, when does Government intend to publish the Macaque Management Plan?

1110

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1115

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, as I have stated before, many of the measures in the plan have already been implemented. We are, however, reviewing the management of our natural areas with a view to introducing improvements. This will include a further review of macaque management.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the clarification, but if many of the measures have been implemented what is the reason for not publishing it?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, we want to get it even better. Some of the measures we have implemented: the increase in the size of feeding areas, the provision of water in all the sites, better facilities for food storage and preparation.

1125

I suppose the answer to that is that there is no sinister reason for not publishing it other than we want to tighten it a bit more and we are reviewing a lot of aspects of how we manage our national areas, which I will be able to share quite soon.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q517/2018
Bluefin tuna –
2018 season catch

Acting Clerk: Question 517. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1130 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, what tonnage of bluefin tuna was caught this past season?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1135 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the tonnage of bluefin tuna caught in the 2018 season was 14,603 kg.

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1145

Q519-520/2018

Environmental Noise Steering Group – Number of meetings and nature of discussions

Acting Clerk: Question 519. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1150 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, how often has the Environmental Noise Steering Group met in 2018 and what has been discussed?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1155 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 520.

Acting Clerk: Question 520. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1160 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, has the Environmental Noise Steering Group made any recommendations to Government since 1st January 2017, and what have those recommendations been?

1165 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1170 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Noise Core Steering Group's function is to advise on the preparation of the Noise Action Plan as required by the EU Directive on Environmental Noise in Relation to Traffic. This work was completed in 2016. Management of noise and dealing with complaints is not dealt with by this group but by the Environmental Agency. The group has now been reconvened to discuss the next action plan, which runs from 2018 – sorry, Mr Speaker, I think that should read 2019; there is an error there in my prepared answer – and has already met once.

1175 In answer to Question 520, the measures recommended in the current Noise Action Plan for priority areas, most of them have been implemented not only in priority areas but throughout Gibraltar. A lot of these, incidentally, are part of the Sustainable Traffic and Transport Plan. They include: promoting public transport usage; a transport policy initiative; controlling noise at 1180 source from vehicles by means of enforcement, such as speed-calming measures; driver behaviour awareness, like smooth driving, keeping music to an acceptable level and limiting the use of horns; increasing awareness of noise insulation measures, such as double glazing and sound-attenuated ventilation; noise barriers; and changes and enforcement of the speed limit.

Hon. E J Phillis: Mr Speaker, just one supplementary in relation to that question. In relation 1185 to the breakdown in Question 518, which I think leads on to Question 520, the schedule refers to construction works as being particularly prevalent and consistent during that particular year. I was wondering whether the Hon. Minister would have a view as to what steps should be taken to reduce construction work noise and what his Department is doing.

1190 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, construction can be noisy and measures include, as far as is possible, particularly restricting certain activities to daylight hours, but undoubtedly for certain periods of construction works more than others ... for example, driving piles into the ground is going to be noisy. Some of the measures that are recommended have been included. For example, regarding double glazing, the new Notre Dame School has superb noise insulation. If 1195 you shut the window, you cannot hear anything outside, and that has helped a lot in dealing with the pile driving next door. But it is clear that construction works do produce noise.

Q521/2018

Environment (Control of Dust) Regulations 2010 – Details of proceedings and fines issued

Acting Clerk: Question 521. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1200 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, have any proceedings been issued for breaches of the Environment (Control of Dust) Regulations 2010 since 1st January 2017; and if so, how many resulted in fines, who was fined and how much?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1205 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes):
Mr Speaker, three cases have been through the courts for breaches of the Environment (Control of Dust) Regulations 2010.

1210 When my answer was prepared, the cases had not yet been heard. I believe they have now been heard, so as to who it was and the result of the fines will now be in the public domain but I need to check that information and I will be happy to share that at a future date. At the time, because they had not yet been heard, it was not appropriate to give the names of the entities involved.

Q522/2018
North end of town –
Real-time air-quality monitoring

1215 Acting Clerk: Question 522. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, does Government intent to provide real-time air-quality monitoring in the north end of town as per its manifesto commitment; and if so, when is it likely to happen?

1220

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1225 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, yes, sir, the equipment has been purchased and installed and is currently being tested.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q523-524/2018
Sewage treatment plant –
Date for commencement of works; plans for power production from waste

1230 Acting Clerk: Question 523. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, when does Government foresee works commencing on the sewage treatment plant?

1235 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 524.

1240 Acting Clerk: Question 524. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, will the project for the sewage treatment plant include any plans for power production from waste?

1245 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Preparation works, including initial site preparation and environmental assessments, are ongoing with construction works expected to commence early in 2019.

1250 There are no plans at present to include power generation from waste, although this might be possible in the future.

Q525/2018
North Mole LNG terminal –
Safety reports

Acting Clerk: Question 525. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1255 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, in answer to Written Questions 45 and 46/2017 the Government stated that the North Mole LNG safety reports were with the Competent Authority and that these would be published 'in accordance with the requirements of PHA sections 95M and Schedule 10A'. This being so, what did the Government make available to the public in October of 2015, which it described at the time as safety reports and which it led the public to believe were the definitive safety reports for the North Mole LNG terminal?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1265 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, in October 2015 the Government published the assessment by the HSE on the proposed viability of the future LNG project. The assessment gave what is known as a 'hazardous substance consent' for the project to proceed to the next stage.

Q529/2018
Midtown car park –
Dustbins on first floor

Acting Clerk: Question 529. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1295

Hon. E J Phillips: Will the Government consider placing dustbins on the first floor of the Midtown car park, where tourist buses currently operate from?

1300

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there are a total of three wall-mounted litter bins and five standalone bins on the ground. The number of bins in all areas is under constant review.

Q530/2018
Litter Committee –
Number of meetings and recommendations made

1305

Acting Clerk: Question 530. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, how many meetings of the Litter Committee have occurred since 1st January 2017 and what recommendations have been made to the Government?

1310

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, a total of six Litter Committee meetings have been held.

1315

Recommendations include reduction in use of single-use plastics, extra monitoring of hotspot areas, refuse collection review, increase in awareness of litter, review of litter fining system, letters to housing estates to ensure proper use of bins, review of CCTV litter areas, signage, recycling points, increases in fines for littering and improvement of litter laws. All of these issues have been or are being taken up by the Department of the Environment, sometimes in conjunction with other Government Departments and agencies.

1320

Q531-532/2018
Littering –
Number of fines issued

Acting Clerk: Question 531. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, how many fines for littering on the Upper Rock have been issued since 1st January 2017?

1325

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 532.

1330

Acting Clerk: Question 532. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, how many fines for littering have been issued since 1st October 2017?

1335

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, we cannot determine how many fines have been issued in the Upper Rock specifically, as the fining system does not specify areas.

Forty-three fixed penalty notices for littering have been issued since October 2017. Of these, 21 have been paid and 11 have been passed for prosecution. Clearly the difference are still in the process of awaiting payment and considering passing for prosecution.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, in relation to Question 531, given the fact that fining, insofar as littering is concerned, is a paper exercise, one would have thought that there would have been a record of a particular fixed penalty fine or a fine itself, so I am at a loss to understand why there is no administrative trace of this type of fine.

I do not want to get into a legal debate as to fixed penalty or fining here, but I would have thought, given the fact it is a document management issue, potentially ... why the Hon. Minister cannot give me that information.

1350

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I share that view and I have asked that in future that information should be available.

1355

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q533/2018
New cleaning contract –
Annual value

Acting Clerk: Question 533. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, what is the annual value of the new cleaning contract?

1360

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the annual value of the new cleaning contract awarded to Britannia Premium Cleaning Ltd is £5,602,750 per contract year.

1365

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q534-543/2018

Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners Ltd – Management structure and vacancies; running costs;
refuse collectors and vehicle drivers: numbers, vacancies, average gross pay and annual earnings, duties and responsibilities;
number of refuse vehicles owned and used; Gibraltar Fair

1370 Acting Clerk: Question 534. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm who are the persons in post as part of the management structure of Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners Ltd (GIC) and whether there are currently any vacancies in the management structure?

1375

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1380 Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 535-543.

Acting Clerk: Question –

1385 Mr Speaker: I think, for the sake of better progress, the Hansard should show that Questions 535 to 543 are all going to be asked by the Hon. Elliot Phillips and they are all going to be answered by the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education and we do not need to specify in each case; all we have to do is to ask the Hon. Elliot Phillips to ask them. Thank you.

1390 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, of course the hon. Lady on this side of the House will have a number of questions in relation to Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners, but I suppose at that point we can distinguish those questions.

Acting Clerk: Question 535.

1395

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, what was the average gross pay, including overtime, of drivers and refuse collectors employed by Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners in financial years 2016-17 and 2017-18?

1400 Acting Clerk: Question 536.

Hon. E J Phillips: What is the complement of refuse collectors and drivers at GIC?

Acting Clerk: Question 537.

1405

Hon. E J Phillips: Are there any current vacancies for drivers or collectors within GIC?

Acting Clerk: Question 538.

1410 Hon. E J Phillips: How many refuse vehicles does GIC own and are all used when collecting refuse around Gibraltar?

Acting Clerk: Question 539. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1415 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What are the duties and responsibilities of (1) the refuse collectors and (2) the drivers working for Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners?

Acting Clerk: Question 540. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1420 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What are the average annual earnings of a Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners (1) driver and (2) refuse collector?

Acting Clerk: Question 541. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1425 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What are the running costs of Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners per annum?

Acting Clerk: Question 542. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1430 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Who is currently running Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners?

Acting Clerk: Question 543. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1435 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: How much has it cost the taxpayer to fund the collection of the nine refuse bins at this year's Gibraltar Fair?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, Energy, Climate Change and Education.

1440 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I will run through them in sequence.

The Government does not share the names of public sector workers in Parliament.

There are currently three posts in the management structure. These are the Assistant Managing Director, the Managing Director and the CEO of the Department of the Environment, Heritage and Climate Change. The post of Managing Director is currently vacant.

1445 All payroll costs for 2016-17 and 2017-18 can be found within the Approved Government of Gibraltar Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure books. The average gross pay, including overtime, in 2016-17 was £55,979.64 for a refuse collector and £64,544.70 for a refuse driver. The figures for 2017-18 are £55,763.72 for a refuse collector and £64,110.12 for a refuse driver.

The overall running cost for 2017-18 was £3,090,000, including wages and general expenses.

There are currently 34 refuse collectors and nine drivers.

1450 There are two vacant driver positions at present.

GIC does not own any vehicles.

1455 The duties of the refuse collectors are to collect refuse from specific areas around Gibraltar and load refuse onto the collection vehicle. The duties of the refuse driver are to drive and be responsible for their refuse vehicle. This includes carrying out vehicle checks, washing the vehicles after each use and completing any paperwork in relation to vehicular faults, etc.

The collection of refuse from the Gibraltar Fair is part of GIC's yearly programme and forms part of the overall running costs, which can be found, as I said earlier, in the Approved Estimates of Expenditure, but the cost of collection of refuse for the fair was £23,000.

At present, the post of Managing Director is covered from elsewhere in the public sector.

1460 Mr Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? Yes, the Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, is it true to say that since the director was removed from his position there has been (1) no permanent new director and (2) management

1465 and admin staff at the GIC have been moved out of the GIC premises due to conflicts between refuse collectors and refuse drivers against management?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the post of Managing Director is covered either from elsewhere in the public sector or in an acting capacity. The overall responsibility, of course, is 1470 with the CEO of the Department of the Environment.

I am not aware of necessarily any conflict. I know this is honing into detail that was not asked initially; there were no questions on the admin staff and so on. I know that the admin staff do spend some time in the headquarters of the Department of Environment, where they obviously liaise with the people there; but I do not have a specific question on the admin staff, so I do not 1475 have that answer available.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I have been led to believe that at present Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners is being run by a Unite shop steward than an appointed representative of Government. Is this the case?
1480

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there is a person currently acting in the role. Whether or not he is a Unite shop steward I do not think is relevant. No, in fact he is not the Unite shop steward.
No, that is actually the case: he is not the Unite shop steward.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, given that there is some sort of controversy or conflict going on, has the Chief Minister or the Minister for the Environment – yourself – spoken with the admin staff to clarify the situation that is going on over there?
1485

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the administrative staff regularly have interaction with the Department and I am sure that on some occasions I will have spoken to them, but I have not 1490 personally been involved in dealing with any issues of conflict.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I have been made to understand that the cost to the taxpayer for an average of three and a half hours – 30 minutes a day over seven days – 1495 during the fair came to £5,000. Can the Minister ascertain whether these ... you could say microcosts, but costs that obviously compound and affect the budget, have been looked at or managed or analysed in order to keep costs down in future?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, again, that is going into details of the day-to-day 1500 management of the budget, which I am not involved in personally. I am sure that there are people in the Department who do look at this on a regular basis with a view to keeping costs down, but it is not something that I do myself.

Mr Speaker: Any other supplementary?
1505 I think this would be a convenient point to give the Speaker a break until 6.30 p.m.

Chief Minister: Hear, hear.

The House recessed at 6.14 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 6.30 p.m.

HOUSING AND EQUALITY

Q457-458/2018
Government flats –
Unlawful occupation

Acting Clerk: Question 457. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1510 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm how many cases of unlawful occupation of Government flats are currently being investigated by the relevant authorities?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

1515 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 458.

Acting Clerk: Question 458. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1520 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm how many cases of unlawful occupation of Government flats are currently proceeding through our courts?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Minister for Housing and Equality.

1525 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, in relation to Question 457 the number is six, and for Question 458 the number is one.

1530 Hon. E J Phillips: Insofar as Question 457 is concerned, does the Minister have information in front of her insofar as at what stage the unlawful occupation is in terms of warning letters? I am not too sure how the Department deals with warning letters and then final written warning and institution of proceedings, but can the Minister give any information as to what stage those six in particular are at?

1535 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the different cases are at various stages. As the hon. Gentleman knows, litigation and resorting to court is always the last resort. Everyone will have received letters in this case; either that, or they are at the initial stages where we are still receiving legal advice as to options. But certainly we write to all individuals and subsequently serve them the legal notices, as the Department is required by law.

Laguna Estate –
Health and safety standards re refurbishment

Acting Clerk: Question 459. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1540 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that all health and safety standards and relevant regulations are being met/adhered to by those responsible for refurbishment works at Laguna Estate?

1545 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, not only are all health and safety standards and relevant regulations being met at Laguna Estate, they are met on all Government refurbishment projects.

1550 Both GJBS and the Housing Works Agency are working closely together to deliver an unprecedented refurbishment project, the first of its kind in Gibraltar. Considering it is a live site, it is being delivered as safely as possible.

1555 Hon. E J Phillips: Whilst I appreciate that. I would have expected an answer like that from the Minister for Housing, it has been given a number of times. Opposition Members here have been allowed to walk around some of the housing estates that are undergoing maintenance works and often we have found what can only be described as gaping holes without covers and without warning signs at these sites. Although I take the point that of course the Government will say that regulations are being adhered to, we do still have very strong concerns about some of these sites in terms of the health and safety of people walking past them, for instance. Some 1560 of them, for example at Devil's Tower Road, adjoin the pavements, where scaffolding is laid on the ground and some of the scaffolding that is put in place does not have protective material around it if children and parents are walking up and down that particular road. So I wonder whether the Minister could assure me that those concerns have been dealt with.

1565 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, of course health and safety concerns are paramount for everyone – the Government as the commissioner of these works, as well as the subcontractor and the subcontractor's subcontractor and anyone else involved. I know that everybody is always conscious of ensuring that we meet health and safety standards, and 1570 invariably it is a live site, so all the more reason for that. Not everything is actually technically a breach of health and safety and these things needs to be taken account of. From time to time there are things which look like they could be done better and as soon as it is alerted either to myself or anyone in the Department we immediately refer it on and action is taken to safeguard whatever position, because we want to ensure that everything is as safe as possible.

1575 Hon. E J Phillips: In this House sometimes we can have sterile debates about health and safety, but obviously it is in our interests on both sides of the House to ensure that our housing estates, in terms of works being conducted, are as safe as possible, and of course what I would do, actually ... If the Minister is willing to accept an invitation for her and I to go round the 1580 housing estates to look for ourselves and to satisfy both ourselves that the health and safety regulations are being met, I am quite happy to walk with her round many of our housing estates to have a look ourselves and satisfy ourselves of the issues there.

1585 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as much as I enjoy the hon. Gentleman's company, it is not necessary for us to visit any estate together; I frequently visit all the estates myself. Thank you.

Q460/2018
Housing estate residents –
Complaints

Acting Clerk: Question 460. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1590 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm the number of complaints it has received by the residents of each of our housing estates in relation to (1) refurbishment works, (2) antisocial behaviour and (3) maintenance of communal areas over the last 12 months?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

1595 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, it is very difficult to quantify the number of complaints in relation to each of the three points, especially as most of them are not reported officially or through proper channels. However, the main contractors in relation to the refurbishment – GJBS, the Housing Works Agency and the Housing Department – have been working tirelessly with tenants and all the relevant estate tenants' associations to immediately address all concerns in relation to the refurbishment and maintenance works taking place. Insofar as complaints of antisocial behaviour, there have been 21 complaints to the 1600 Housing Department.

1605 Hon. E J Phillips: So I have this clear in my mind, in relation to (1) refurbishment works and (2) maintenance of communal areas, it is difficult for the Government to ascertain what the levels of discontent there were in terms of residents of these housing estates. Obviously, clearly if a resident sends an email to GJBS saying, 'I've got a problem with my window,' or 'I've got a problem with damp,' or 'I've got a problem with my communal area – someone's letting their dog foul in my communal area,' those things will be recorded by the fact that they sent an email. I can understand that sometimes things are picked up very easily just by walking around and someone informs them of a complaint and therefore you cannot record it; but insofar as 1610 complaints are received, nowadays people send emails – right? – and there are other forms of messaging, and therefore the Minister must have some idea as to the level of complaints in terms of numbers.

1615 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, this question has three parts to it and I would like to distinguish the third part from the first two because the third part, the one which relates to antisocial behaviour, people tend to report that in a different way and there is a different system and that is logged.

1620 In relation to complaints on the refurbishment work, I am afraid that it is not as simple as the hon. Gentleman seems to think, because of the way that the reporting system works. If someone has a problem with their window, it is not for them to report to the agent/subcontractor/GJBS; they should report it to the Housing Department's reporting office and that would then trigger a procedure. Those kinds of reports, as the hon. Gentleman can imagine, when we are talking about the three biggest estates that we have in Gibraltar, are numerous and it is not necessarily ... The way that we do not record it is whether the complaint 1625 is attributable to general maintenance that is required or as a result of the refurbishment works.

1630 That is the first issue, but the bigger issue is that people do not send the email at all. People may go to the hon. Gentleman, as they are perfectly entitled to, who would then properly refer that matter to me, which would then be logged. But more frequently people post images on Facebook, hoping or wishing that someone is checking Facebook, and they think that that is the normal way to properly report matters, and it is not. I certainly am not checking Facebook all the time. From time to time people may see a comment on Facebook and may send me a screenshot, in which case of course I refer it. Unfortunately, we are caught up in this world where people think that Facebook and posting things on Facebook is the be-all and end-all of 1635 doing things and communicating things. In fact, the Hon. Mr Reyes, the Member opposite, quite frequently sends me things that he sees on Facebook which look to him to be irregular, and it is very helpful that he checks Facebook more than I do because he gives me the heads up and I can follow it up, and I always do. But, unfortunately, not that many people actually report things in the proper way to the proper Department, (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) and when we do receive the reports they are actioned as reports for repairs and are not necessarily distinguished 1640 as to whether they are necessarily as a result of wear and tear or as a result of the refurbishment works.

1645 Hon. E J Phillips: Would the Hon. Minister agree with me, therefore, that people's complaints about housing are serious – they are serious complaints that affect their day-to-day lives and therefore it is right that if people are resorting to social media in order to pursue their complaints there must be something wrong with the complaints procedure? You would have thought that there was something in place that would allow people to air those complaints properly. And therefore would the hon. Lady agree with me that we should put in place further education in terms of notices to estates on how complaints can be dealt with in a proper way?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am afraid I cannot agree with the hon. Gentleman that there is something wrong with the system, because the system is very clearly marked. Everybody who is a tenant will be given information upon receipt of their tenancy of how things work at the Housing Department, and if you are having a problem that is to be reported there is a specific number for the reporting office, but if they report it to any other number, whether it is another section in the Housing Department or indeed my office or anywhere else, they will be directed to the proper section within the Department.

1655

And insofar as notices, Mr Speaker, I do not know what else I have to do to try and encourage people to report things officially through the proper channels. There are notices throughout the estates, so there are communications. We try and educate people through the tenants of estates associations as well. I do not think the problem is with the system; I think the problem is worldwide, the way that people just expect things to happen because things are put on social media.

1660

1665 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, the Minister provided the figures in respect of the antisocial behaviour and I believe she was quantifying that by saying those were reports given to her Ministry, as such. Am I correct in assuming that does not include any reports that may have been made directly to the RGP? I know sometimes some tenants ... I happen to live in an estate, and although it is not a Government rental estate I know especially late in the evenings you cannot get hold of anyone from the management company of the estate where I live and reports tend to be made to the RGP.

Alongside that – what I am trying to do is work together as far as possible, like the Minister has acknowledged – what advice shall we give to tenants who feel there is antisocial behaviour? Is it best to report the matter to the RGP, or to report it to her Department, or to do both if that does not already exist under a co-ordinated system?

1675

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is very right in the question that he asks and it is a very relevant question. The answer to that is it depends what the incident is. We have a policy within the Housing Department where the treatment of a complaint of antisocial behaviour will, of course, depend on the nature of the complaint. Sometimes there can be antisocial behaviour which is not of an acute nature and it is just maybe a neighbour putting a plant pot in front of the door of the other neighbour, in which case the Housing Department, as landlord, addresses it with the tenants. However, if cases are more serious and they escalate, they are often referred to the Police or Social Services, or indeed both, or sometimes even other Departments; and when cases are particularly serious, upon receipt of a report the Housing Department may call a multi-agency meeting between various agencies, including the Police, Social Services, Mental Health or the Environmental Department, as required. What we tend to do is we may run both procedures in tandem.

1680

Of course, if there is antisocial behaviour which is of a violent nature in the middle of the night, then of course we advise that people call the Police immediately. What will usually happen is that the Police will inform the Housing Department because we have established an excellent working relationship with the Royal Gibraltar Police and, in particular, their Community

1695 Policing section. Both departments meet on a regular basis, so it is either referred to immediately or referred to in the context of an interdepartmental meeting, and that of course depends on the nature of the incident.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q461/2018

Government housing estates –
Management of maintenance post completion of works

1700 Acting Clerk: Question 461. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm it intends to manage the maintenance of our housing estates when all works have been completed?

1705 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Government is looking at different options to ensure that the maintenance of the estates is continued once the refurbishment is complete, so that our estates no longer fall into the desperate state of disrepair into which they plummeted as a result of the reckless abandon to which they were subjected during the time that Members opposite were in power.

A Member: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

1715 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, as part of those options ... I am going to ignore the usual replies that I get from the hon. Lady on the 'forgotten' estates, where she forgets, of course, the forgotten people – she is now forgetting to answer letters – who write to her on a regular basis. I am still waiting six months for a letter of reply from the hon. Lady. (Hon D A Feetham: Shame! Shame!)

1720 But anyway, Mr Speaker, in relation to the management of maintenance after the works have been completed, is the Government considering outsourcing that work? The hon. Lady talked about various options, but is the Minister considering outsourcing that type of work?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I will ignore the jibe from the hon. Member opposite because I do not think anybody will ever believe –

Minister for Health, Care and Justice (Hon. N F Costa): Don't. Don't ignore it.

1730 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: – that anyone from that side of the benches will give more importance to people from our housing estates than we do. Yes, really, Mr Speaker, because all we have to do is compare track records: 16 years of neglect; seven years of tremendous investment in buildings, because it is an investment in people – we are the party in government who actually care about people in Gibraltar.

1735 Insofar as the maintenance, it is something that we are considering. We are considering all options. I cannot say either way until I have looked at the best solution for the maintenance of the estates.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, bearing in mind that the Government has now been in office, or the parties opposite have been in administration now for eight years – (Interjection by 1740 Mr Speaker) Seven years, Mr Speaker, I stand corrected. Mr Speaker has stepped in and has corrected me, yet again; it is seven years, (Laughter) not eight.

Mr Speaker: Seven this month.

1745 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker keeps a tab on these things.

Hon. E J Reyes: Once a maths teacher, always a maths teacher!

1750 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, well, exactly. That glorious day seven years ago when they were elected! (Interjections and banging on desks) But bearing in mind that we have had seven years since the New Dawn, what she is suggesting with her jibe about how we maintained those estates seven years ago is that, today, the estates are just as badly managed as they were seven years ago. What is the relevance to my hon. Gentleman's question to the hon. Lady of what happened seven years ago? (Hon. Chief Minister: Context.) What we want to know is what is the 1755 Government doing now about maintenance and what does the Government intend to do in the future.

The Hon. the Chief Minister says from a sedentary position that it provides context, but it cannot provide context ad infinitum. This is seven years ago. At some point the shine just rubs off. We have got to continue and do the job that people are electing us to do, which is to get on 1760 with it and do the job properly.

A Member: Hear, hear.

1765 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, alas, it is that time of the day when we have to plummet into theatrics – and the Hon. Mr Feetham has been very quiet for a long time. Unfortunately, we have all been trying to avoid the pantomime but it seems that pantomime season is commencing.

A Member: Oh, no, it hasn't! (Laughter)

1770 A Member: Oh, yes it has. Yes

1775 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Unfortunately, Mr Speaker, at this time of day we just cannot control the Members opposite, can we, and they just love to make statements that are completely irrelevant.

Let me just explain the relevance of the comment that I made. It is because we have to set the refurbishment in context. The context is important because the estates had to undergo major refurbishment on account of the long-term neglect before we took office. Now that our refurbishment programme is coming to an end we are planning the maintenance programme, 1780 which is what will continue from the refurbishment programme to ensure that our housing estates do not fall into the level of disrepair as we inherited from the Members opposite.

1785 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, thank you very much to the hon. Lady for that clarification, but bearing in mind that the refurbishment has taken seven, not eight, years, Mr Speaker, can she at the very least guarantee that having proper maintenance in place is not going to take another eight years?

1790 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, two issues. If the hon. Member is going to criticise us about the length of the refurbishment works in these estates, may I remind him that they are the three largest estates in Gibraltar, and may I also remind the hon. Member that it was he who encouraged us to slow down the refurbishment works on the estates on account of the expenditure that resulted from it? That is point number one.

1795 Insofar as the maintenance, Mr Speaker, I just do not understand the point that he is making. The point of maintenance is not that we are going to have maintenance for eight years; it is that we will have a maintenance programme that will continue forever. Maintenance is not something that you do as a one-off, like a refurbishment; maintenance is something that we will do on a continuous basis so that these estates do not fall into disrepair. The refurbishment of the estates are almost complete and by the time they are complete we will be ready with our programme of maintenance that we will take on thereafter. Of course, in the meantime we continue with the day-to-day maintenance in the way that we undertake and in the way that they actually never undertook when they were in government.

1800 Mr Speaker, I do not have the statistics to hand, but the number of pending maintenance and repair works that we inherited when we took office was absolutely shameful and disgraceful, and thankfully – 1805 Mr Speaker: I am sorry, that is totally irrelevant even to the answer that you have given to the question, and it is out of order.

Any other supplementary question? The Hon. Roy Clinton.

1810 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Can the Hon. Minister confirm to the House that it is indeed part of the agreement under which these estates were mortgaged by the Government for £300 million, that it is Government's responsibility to maintain these estates?

1815 I also recall the Chief Minister announcing on a Viewpoint programme that he was about to announce an exciting new programme to do with the maintenance, but to date we have heard nothing. Can the Hon. Minister enlighten us as to what the Chief Minister was alluding to? And can she confirm that indeed the maintenance of those mortgaged estates is the responsibility of the Government?

1820 Mr Speaker: You do not have to answer as to what the Chief Minister was alluding to, because you cannot possibly be expected today to remember what it was all about. But you can answer the second part of the supplementary.

1825 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, and I will start with the hon. Gentleman's comment that he says that the Chief Minister said that it is now the Government's responsibility to maintain these estates. Well, Mr Speaker, it has always been –

Hon. R M Clinton: I am saying under the mortgage agreement.

1830 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, whether it is as a result of an agreement or not, I would say that it is always a responsibility of the Government to maintain the estates that belong to the Government, regardless, and that is exactly what we are doing.

Hon. R M Clinton: Will you give way? I thank the hon. Lady.

1835 Just a point of clarification: the Government technically no longer owns the estates, which is why I was asking the question about the responsibility for maintenance.

1840 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I really do not know how it is that the hon. Gentleman wants to frame this set of questions. Let's be very clear. The Government, before the investment into Gibraltar which is secured on these estates, had an obligation to maintain the estates. When we were elected we found that they had not been maintained to a standard. We therefore invested a very large amount of money in the upgrading and maintenance of the 1845 estates. When that upgrading and maintenance has been finished, we are going to continue the process of those estates being maintained to the same standard, which is what I was alluding to on television, as part of what we think should be the case going forward. And the hon.

Gentleman is right: that is recorded as one of the obligations under the documents securing this investment.

1850 What is it that he does not understand about the fact that we found neglect in the estates, we invested in those estates, we upgraded them, and we maintained them and have delivered them now to a new standard and will keep them to that standard? Does he think that that is not the right thing to do, Mr Speaker?

1855 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I guess I heard a question there, but my question to him would be: does he accept the fact that although he no longer owns the estates, although he is no longer the beneficiary of the rental from those estates, he has a financial obligation to maintain those estates?

1860 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I were to accept for one moment the definition that the hon. Gentleman wants to insist on, which is a definition of mortgage, then it would be clear that it is always incumbent upon the mortgagee to maintain the property although legal title is held by the mortgagor. The hon. Gentleman needs to understand that in the context of mortgages, as the balance shifts and the equity of redemption becomes shifted in the context of repayment, ultimate beneficial ownership may not always be where the hon. Gentleman suggests it is, which is where legal ownership is. So, I do not know what it is that he is trying to suggest.

1865 Yes, he did hear from me a rhetorical question, because at the end of the day we are here in Parliament not to debate the niceties of mortgage law or of investment law; we are here to debate how we maintain estates for our citizens. I do detect a reticence on his behalf to see us spend money on maintenance of our estates. He will not detect that reticence on our part. We believe that our estates should be properly maintained, all of them, whether they are subject to 1870 legal security documents or not. That we have demonstrated in the time we have been here, that is what we are going to do for the rest of the time that we are here, and that is why I think we are going to be returned to here by people at the next General Election.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q462/2018
Rent-controlled tenancies –
Government position

1875 Acting Clerk: Question 462. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state its position on rent-controlled tenancies?

1880 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Government's position on rent-controlled tenancies is that outlined in Part II of the Housing Act 2007, which came into operation on 1st June 2008.

1885 Acting Clerk: Question 463. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can we go back?

1890 Mr Speaker: Do you wish to revert to the previous question?

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, just to the last one.

1895 We are all aware – well, certainly some of us are aware – of what the Act says in relation to rent control. Are there any plans by the Government to amend those rent-control provisions within the Act?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the matter is under consideration, as are various other parts of the Act.

1900 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q463/2018
Rent control –
Number of dwellings affected

Acting Clerk: Question 463. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1905 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government state the number of dwellings that are subject to rent control?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

1910 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there is no central register of dwellings that are subject to rent control and therefore an exercise would need to be conducted to ascertain this. The information requested is too voluminous and therefore too onerous to be obtained right now.

Q464/2018
Bayview, Cumberland and Beach View Terraces, Nelson's View and Mons Calpe Mews –
Details re properties resold by original purchasers

Acting Clerk: Question 464. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1915 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government confirm how many homes have been resold by original purchasers of the properties at Bayview Terraces, Cumberland Terraces, Nelson's View, Beach View Terraces and Mons Calpe Mews, and the total amounts received by the Government under the terms of the arrangements between the vendors and the Government?

1920 Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

1925 Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the numbers of resales by original purchasers at the mentioned estates are as follows: Waterport Terraces, 43; Cumberland Terraces, 22; Bayview Terraces, 11; and Nelson's View, 18. There has been one permitted assignment at Mons Calpe Mews, where the property owner passed away and there was no premium payable. There have been no resales at Beach View Terraces.

The total amounts received by Government from original purchasers under the terms of their respective underleases for these resales is just short of £1 million, broken down as follows:

Waterport Terraces, £562,071.71; Cumberland Terraces, £151,809.15; Bayview Terraces, £76,645.53; and Nelson's View, £162,352.59.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q465/2018

Bishop Canilla House scaffolding – Parking arrangements

Acting Clerk: Question 465. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1935

Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government set out what temporary or alternative parking arrangements have been put in place in respect of those parking spaces which have been lost as a result of the erection of scaffolding at Bishop Canilla House?

1940

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and Equality.

Minister for Housing and Equality (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, due to the much-needed major repair works at Bishop Canilla House, scaffolding has been erected on the external faces of the building.

1945

Tenants were clamouring for these works to be done, and because of this parking spaces have had to be relocated temporarily. These have been relocated within the vicinity of the ball-playing area north of Bishop Canilla House, where visitors parking used to be located, and to the east of Bishop Canilla House parallel to the site fence/scaffolding. These arrangements are more than enough to accommodate Bishop Canilla residents who are in possession of parking permits. The visitors parking will now be temporarily relocated to the west of Bishop Canilla House. As a result, no parking spaces have been lost as a result of the erection of scaffolding referred to by the hon. Gentleman.

1950

In fact, Mr Speaker, as an aside, I have been to Morrisons quite a lot in the last few days and I have noticed – (Laughter) I have been in the area of Europort a lot in the last few days and there are a lot of empty spaces on the area that is parallel to the scaffolding, and that leads me to believe that there is no issue with parking if these spaces are continually empty.

Q480-481/2018

E-services –
Details of contract with Deloitte; 2012 road map

Acting Clerk: Question 480. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. L F Llamas.

1960

Hon. L F Llamas: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details of the contract entered into with Deloitte in relation to e-services?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

1965

Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 481.

Acting Clerk: Question 481. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1970 Hon. E J Phillips: Can the Government provide a copy of the road map prepared by the ITLD back in 2012 for the preparation and timeline for e-government, digital services, and the associated costing requirements?

Acting Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

1975 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the road map referred to in the question was in part agreed and the work to deliver this was progressed by ITLD. I am not aware that the original road map was costed. I now hand the member a copy of the road map.

Answer to Q481/2018

1980 Hon. A J Isola: What we are now doing is a far more comprehensive delivery of these services, as I have previously advised the hon. Member. The Government has carried out an independent audit of all of our systems, networks and infrastructure. The original strategy has been varied by the introduction of back-office administrative systems and a more accessible front-facing interface with users.

1985 Mr Speaker, Deloitte MCS (Deloitte) has been contracted to assist the Government to achieve this vision. We have assessed the state of Government's IT infrastructure and the software applications that are used to drive Government systems. We have rolled out a number of platforms, which have allowed new and more efficient ways of working with the use of e-procurement and e-purchasing systems. Our security policy has been rewritten in view of new technology and work has already begun on a data classification policy and corporate governance model which will allow the use and flow of data to be more dynamic.

1990 As the hon. Member will appreciate, systems and security issues have radically changed since 2012. Most processes and transactions in the Government are manually driven and controlled. This way of working is highly inefficient and, quite frankly, difficult to sustain. After an extensive procurement process, Deloitte and system providers were identified by a steering committee, leading to the purchase of an ERP system. Significant work is going into its implementation. In simple terms, an ERP system integrates government accounts, HR and payroll into one software platform. ERP software will allow the Government to transform from manual processes to digital ways of working, and this change is likely to be the most significant change to the public service in a generation. Deloitte's role in this area is not only to assist the Government with the technical implementation, which involves design and build, but also to guide and support Government employees in adopting to the new ways of working. The Deloitte engagement is for 12 months at a fee of £792,000, covering all of these services.

2000 The other major project we are working on is digital services. This project intends to modernise the way in which the Government delivers its public service. Digital services is about analysing core business processes and automating functions, removing manual effort and inefficiency where possible. At the moment, we are working with three Government organisations: the Gibraltar Health Authority, the Department of Employment and the Income Tax Office, with specific focus on 32 services identified as viable candidates for online solutions. Digital users will be able to interact with Government departments in a meaningful way 24 hours a day, and by that I mean citizens, businesses and Government officials performing activities when it is convenient for them. With the new online Government service portal, users – subject to important identity-verification mechanisms – will be able to register and interact with online applications to actually carry out work which currently would require an appointment with an official or attending a Government counter. By automating tasks and providing access to digital information, Government officials will spend less time inputting and managing data or dealing with low-level queries. By introducing online profiles, we intend to enable users – people and businesses – to manage their online information and keep these records up to date. This is aimed at reducing the volume of work being done by our staff, especially across our counters, enabling them to focus on other tasks that deliver more value to the Government as a whole. This work will lead, on a gradual basis, to all Departments intelligently communicating with each other. The Deloitte engagement for these services is for 12 months at a fee of £1.356 million, covering all of these services.

2025 Hon. E J Phillips: I am sure, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Member will return to this House to ask another question at the next session in relation to this [Inaudible]. How will this now extend to the fact that this is a 2012 plan? How does the Minister see it, sort of, moving into the future, in terms of... I take the point that technology has moved on and, therefore, it hasn't been formulated, can the Minister give any further information as to how [inaudible] and produce to this House, maybe, a further chart showing 2025, so to speak?

2030 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I think the difficulty with that question is that the chart does not reflect what we are doing today. For example, you will not see on that chart the Ministry of Employment ETB, which is one of the ones that we are working on first. There is no reference there to security. That was a different mode of putting things online. What we are doing is 2035 actually putting in place the back office to automate the systems in the back office to enable the interface with users to be genuinely online by transporting forms into processes. And so there has been a material shift in the thinking behind what we are doing, which will produce very different results. That was very much paperwork being done digitally, and what we are doing is very different to that.

2040 Hon. E J Phillips: Is the Government giving serious consideration to the use of distributive ledger technology insofar as incorporating that? Is that one of the plans, given the fact that we have made such progress – or your Ministry in particular has made progress in relation to that area?

2045 Hon. A J Isola: We are studying the introduction of a part of the process using blockchain in the area of identity, where it is extremely strong.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

2050 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

As my hon. colleague has mentioned, this is obviously an out-of-date plan now, but in terms of this original plan, just on basic percentage terms, what proportion of this was actually achieved, in the Minister's opinion?

2055 Hon. A J Isola: I think the plan has got different lights on it – red, yellow, and green – and that is self-explanatory as to what was done at the time it was introduced.

As I have said already, the way that we are approaching it is very different to what was envisaged at the time; so, in the manner that was envisaged then, you are comparing apples and pears – it is completely different.

Hon. R M Clinton: No, I appreciate that, but what I am saying in terms of the original plan is did the Minister achieve 10% of his original plan, or 20%; or is he just saying forget this plan, we are going to start with a brand new one which has different deliverables and different key stages and different projects? I would understand that, but I am just trying to understand – and I ask 2065 this question in the context of Sir Joe Bossano's commentary in his Budget speech that he was disappointed with the e-government delivery for the money that have been spent on it – in terms of what was spent in the past on this, how much would the Minister think had been delivered for what had been spent? Or is it just not possible to arrive at that kind of determination?

2070

Hon. A J Isola: Two things: I do not think the Minister, my colleague Sir Joe Bossano, said that he was disappointed with the e-government in delivering efficiencies, because it obviously has not started yet in terms of delivering those efficiencies in terms of the project that we are doing now.

2075 In terms of what we originally did, as I mentioned before, it is impossible to compare because what we did then was put services online, so you would have to download the form, sign it and then hand it in. That is not what we are doing now. We are now converting paper forms into processes, so it is a completely different kettle of fish and it would be wrong of me to try to determine more than as done with the traffic lights system they have put on the road map as to 2080 what we have done or have not done from this map, because it has changed. This is a proposal; what we have done is really quite different. And I have to say we have done it obviously with ITLD, with the GHA IT department and with the Treasury IT department, all three units working together in delivering these services.

2085 Mr Speaker: Next question. Question 482.

Q482/2018

Key legislation affecting business and commerce –
Feedback from consultation paper

Acting Clerk: Question 482. The Hon. R M Clinton.

2090 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can Government advise the feedback received on its June 2018 consultation paper on key legislation affecting business and commerce?

Acting Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Commerce.

2095 Minister for Commerce (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, consultation covering key legislation affecting planning, business and commerce was issued on 22nd June 2018 and responses were received by 17th August 2018.

We have received 27 responses, including from the business associations, and these are all currently being reviewed and considered.

2100 This consultation has been developed jointly by the Ministry of Infrastructure and Planning and the Ministry of Commerce.

Hon. R M Clinton: I am grateful to the Minister for his answer. Did the Minister detect any particular theme that came out in terms of the feedback received so far? And if so, does the Minister envisage any changes to legislation from the feedback received so far?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I am very pleased to say that the feedback we got was excellent. We are spending some time with my colleague Minister Balban and officials from both Departments going through in some detail the quality of the feedback that we have received and it will lead to changes in a number of different areas, yes, absolutely.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Thank you, Mr Speaker.

2115 I move that the House should now adjourn to tomorrow at 4 p.m., when I hope that we will be able to finish questions.

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn to tomorrow afternoon at four.

Condolences to Hon. Chief Minister and his family

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, on behalf of the Government and I 5 am sure of both sides of the House, I would like to express our most sincere condolences to our friend and colleague the Chief Minister and to his family on the sad passing away of his mother, Magda.

I had the pleasure of knowing Magda for many years, initially through mutual business connections. In this way I have actually known her for longer than I have known the Chief 10 Minister himself. She was a lovely woman, a wonderful person and a loving mother, was very proud both of her family and also of the achievements of her son. One of the last occasions on which I saw Magda was before she took a turn for the worse – precisely, in Convent Place one morning, looking for the exit. She told me then, once again, how unreal it felt to see us there:
‘Parece mentira,’ she said.

15 The passing of a loved one is hard at the best of times. The timing today, as we enter the Christmas period, makes it particularly difficult. The Chief Minister and his family will be comforted to know that they are in our thoughts and in our prayers. May Magda rest in peace.

Christmas and New Year wishes

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, given the circumstances, I am grateful to the hon. Members opposite for taking written answers to questions instead of oral 20 answers, because this has been a challenging year. It has been dominated by the departure of the United Kingdom and Gibraltar from the European Union and we are confident that whatever the New Year may bring – whether there is a deal or no deal, whether or not there is another referendum, whether we leave the European Union or whether we remain – whatever may happen, Gibraltar will win through in the end.

25 That same spirit which saw us through the evacuation of the civilian population during World War II, which resisted the dictator next door, which withstood the closure of the land Frontier, which adapted from the closure of the naval dockyard, which battled shared sovereignty every inch of the way, that same spirit will see us face the challenges posed by Brexit and overcome.

I take the opportunity on behalf of the Chief Minister and of the Government to wish 30 everyone a very happy and peaceful Christmas and all the very best for the New Year. Whatever 2019 may bring, we will rise to the challenge together.

Mr Speaker, before I move to adjourn the House, I understand the Hon. Leader of the Opposition and the hon. Lady would also like to say a few words. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, we echo the comments by the Deputy Chief Minister and, on behalf of Her Majesty's Opposition and the GSD, we offer our deep condolences to the Chief Minister and his extended family.

40 Mr Speaker, anyone who has lost a parent will know the deep pain and suffering as a result of the passing, but I think in this case and the moving service at St Theresa's Church today, it is clear that the late Mrs Picardo was extremely proud of her son the Chief Minister and indeed very proud of her family. Anyone who has ever lost a parent is always told by people that their mother or father would have been proud of them, and I think it is right to say that the late
45 Mrs Picardo must have been very proud of her son, a man, a father and a Chief Minister of our community. Our deep condolences go to the extended family and indeed, of course, to Members opposite.

In relation to the Deputy Chief Minister's comments in relation to the challenges that we face this coming year, one of the comments by his Lordship the Bishop today was in relation to solidarity in this community in respect of the family, and clearly there are challenges ahead, 50 curves ahead, for this entire community. I am sure that all of us, not only in this room but in the wider community, will stand in solidarity in relation to the challenges that we will face. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, from this corner of the House I too echo the sentiments of the Deputy Chief Minister and the Leader of the Opposition and extend my deep and sincere condolences to the Chief Minister and his family on the passing of his dear mother at this very difficult time when one should be looking forward to the holiday season and being with 60 one's loved ones. But I do hope that the Chief Minister will find consolation in how much his mother was loved and respected, as we saw in a packed funeral this morning, full of watery eyes and genuine sorrow for this wonderful lady who has just passed away. I take this opportunity to wish the Chief Minister strength, faith and inner peace to get through this difficult time and reassure him that in this House – I am sure I can say from all of us – we are with him at this 65 present time.

Regarding Brexit, Mr Speaker, of course there are challenges, as we all know and as we all deal with all the time and speculate all the time, but I have to say that I have no doubt that in the spirit of the Gibraltar history, as we have always seen, we will prosper, reinvent ourselves and sail through to better moments.

70 Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I call on the Hon. Dr Joseph Garcia to move the adjournment of the House, may I associate myself with the condolences that have been expressed to the Chief Minister, which my wife and I dearly share.

75 I would also like to express my admiration for hon. Members in that here we were coming for a very short session to adjourn Parliament; it was only necessary for seven Members to attend, and yet everyone who has been able to attend has done so as a mark of generosity.

Finally, I wish to express the hope that you will have a very happy Christmas and I wish you God's blessing for next year. Thank you. (Banging on desks)

80 The Hon. Dr Joseph Garcia.

Questions for Written Answer

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, first I have the honour to table the answers to Written Questions 27-31/2018 inclusive.

Adjournment

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): And now I have the honour to move that this House do now adjourn sine die.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that the House do now adjourn sine die. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.
The House will now adjourn sine die.

The House adjourned sine die at 4.09 p.m.
