

What has changed?

The law governing registration in the Register of Electors was revised and approved by the Gibraltar Parliament in 2019.

The new legislation implemented several changes to the way people can register to vote. It removed the outdated 'head of household' registration system and places the responsibility of electoral registration in the hands of individuals. It is now up to the individual person to check and, if necessary, include/update his/her details using the new form.

Individual Electoral Registration (IER) will give people more control and ownership over the process and increase the accuracy of the register – with the new system able to verify that everyone on the register is who they say they are. This will ensure that there is greater trust in the legitimacy and fairness of our elections.

Additionally, the Registration Officer is no longer required to compile and publish a new Register of Electors every four years. Under the new legislation the Registration Officer can make amendments to the Register as and when applications are received and to publish those amendments to the 'rolling' Register annually together with consequential amendments in relation thereto.
